"Our constitution provides, that no person shall 'hold more than one lucrative office at the same time', with some exceptions, not embracing the case at bar; and it specifies two classes of offices that shall not be regarded as lucrative, namely, offices in the militia to which no salary is attached, and the office of deputy postmaster, where the compensation does not exceed ninety dollars per year. On general principles, the office of colonel of volunteers, as now existing, is lucrative, and so is that of reporter of the supreme court. Mr. Harrison cannot hold them both, therefore, unless the office of colonel of volunteers is an office in the militia, within the meaning of the constitution, and if he cannot hold them both, his acceptance of the colonelcy, being the later office, vacated that of reporter."

The court held that he was a colonel in the United States army and not a colonel of the militia, and hence could not hold both offices.

The only apparent distinction between the above case and the one under consideration here, is that the constitution of Indiana provided that no person could hold two lucrative offices, while our constitution holds that no judge of the court of common pleas shall hold any other office of profit or trust, under the authority of this state or the United States. While there is some little difference in the wording of the constitutions of the two states, yet the principle to be applied in reference to the matter under consideration would be the same under both constitutions.

In Mohringer et al. v. State ex rel., 20 Ind. 103, the court set forth the following principle of law in the syllabus:

"The acceptance of the office of major of volunteers in the military service of the United States, by the incumbent of the office of auditor of a county, vacates the latter office."

In view of the natural and logical construction of which the two above constitutional provisions are susceptible, and in view of the authorities cited in support of each of these constitutional provisions, to what conclusion must we come?

1. It is my opinion that the enlisting in the officers' reserve corps, which will require your being out of the county for ninety days, would not be in violation of either of said constitutional provisions. While you would not be strictly residing in your county during the time you are at Fort Benjamin Harrison, yet it would be an absence merely for temporary purposes; and, of course, it would not be in violation of the second constitutional provision cited herein, because you would neither be holding office nor drawing a salary.

2. But suppose you accept a commission in the United States army and thus leave your county for an indefinite period of time, and so place yourself that it will be impossible for you to return at any given time, even though you should desire to do so. In view of said constitutional provisions and the decisions cited above, what will be the result?

You will no longer actually and personally be residing within the district. It is true you will maintain a legal and constructive residence therein, but in view of all the above this would not be sufficient. You would not be complying with the provisions of section 12 of article IV of the constitution, by accepting a commission in the United States army. Further, you would, by accepting a commission in the United States army, be holding an office of profit and trust in the army of the United States. Therefore, you would not be complying with the provisions of section 14 of article IV of the constitution of the state of Ohio.

In view of all the above, it is my opinion that you cannot hold the position of common pleas judge in your county, and at the same time hold a commission in the army of the United States.

It would seem that the hard and fast principles of law might be released in cases of this kind; that a person, desiring to leave the peaceful pursuits of a judicial officer, to assume the burdens and dangers incident to army life, ought not to be in any way discouraged. Yet, much as I might desire to look at this question from such a viewpoint, I find no ruling or precedent warranting my so doing. There seems to be no exception made for cases of this kind. The provisions of the constitution fall upon all alike, whether they are leaving their county and the duties of their office for some pleasure trip abroad for an indefinite period, or whether they are leaving at the call of their country, to fight on the battle fields of a foreign nation until they shall have been honorably discharged by the country that called them.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

NATIONAL GUARD—NOT MUSTERED OUT OR DISBANDED—WHEN MUSTERED INTO FEDERAL SERVICE.

When various organizations of the national guard were mustered into federal service, same were not mustered out of national guard or disbanded.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1917.

HON. GEORGE H. WOOD, Adjutant General, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 24th wherein you state as follows:

> "I am herewith forwarding to you claim made by the Hon. George S. Marshall, Columbus, Ohio, on behalf of Mrs. Minnie D. Curtis, of this city.
> "The facts stated in this communication are said to make a claim against the state. Upon receipt of an opinion from you I will take the matter up further with Mr. Marshall.
> "If you want any records of the armory board in this matter, I would be very glad to furnish same, upon request."

The enclosure to which you refer is as follows:

"Claim for rent and for damages by Minnie D. Curtis against the State of Ohio

"To the Adjutant General of Ohio.

"SIR:—I hereby present the following claims on behalf of Mrs. Minnie D. Curtis, of 18 W. Frambes avenue, Columbus, Ohio:

"First. The state of Ohio, through the adjutant general of Ohio and the commanding officer of Company 'G,' O. N. G., leased a house known as number 18 W. Frambes avenue, Columbus, Ohio, of Mrs. Minnie D. Curtis, for the term of one year for the sum of $400.00, payable in quarterly installments. Said Company 'G,' O. N. G., vacated the armory and the state paid the rent to September 30, 1916.

"The state has refused to pay the balance due to March 1, 1917, of $166.67, claiming that the state is no longer obligated to pay the balance for the reason that the company was mustered into the federal service and thereby said lease became null and void. The question involves the proper construction of the following language:

" 'It is understood and agreed that in the event of the muster out or disbanding of the military organization occupying the premises herein described, under the terms and conditions of this lease, this lease and agreement shall then and there terminate and be void.'

"On behalf of Mrs. Curtis we contend that Company 'G,' O. N. G., has never been mustered out or disbanded. Said company at all times during the times covered by this lease has been one of the units of the Ohio National Guard, and it so appears on the records of the state of Ohio, in the adjutant general's department. Under the federal law this unit of the Ohio National Guard took orders from and was under the command of the federal army. In the federal service this unit was always known as Company 'G,' O. N. G. We invite an opinion on this question by the attorney general of Ohio, if your department or the state armory board are not satisfied with our construction of the lease.

"Second. Mrs. Curtis also presents the following claim for injury to property known as 18 W. Frambes avenue, by the tenants.

"One provision of said lease was that:

" 'At the end of said term it would deliver up said premises in as good order and condition as they now are, or may be put by said lessor, reasonable use and ordinary wear and tear thereof, and damage by fire and other unavoidable casualty excepted.'

"One lamp and one table taken from house	$10 00
Globe from porch lamp	1 00
Window ropes broken	5 00
Window glass broken	1 00
Papering necessitated by marking on walls	50 00
Bowl in bathroom broken	8 50
Knobs off of doors	2 00
Damage to doors by cutting the same	10 00

Window blinds destroyed	10 00
Damage to plumbing	30 00
Paint and varnish necessitated by scratching and marring woodwork	50 00
	$177 50

"The foregoing conditions we submit did not result from ordinary wear and tear, and Mrs. Curtis should be paid $177.50 as damages and for property taken away.

"First claim	$166 67
Second claim	177 50
Total	$344 17"

I have carefully examined the lease on file in your office and find that the provision thereof set out in the above statement by Hon. George S. Marshall is accurate.

If I understand the facts correctly, the contention made by Mr. Marshall is sound to the effect that when the Ohio National Guard was mustered into federal service, it did not lose its separate identity as units of the Ohio National Guard, nor was it in any way mustered out or disbanded. My opinion is that when the troops were mustered out of federal service, it was not necessary to again muster them into the national guard. Such being the facts, I agree with Mr. Marshall's contention that under the strict terms of the lease the rent is still payable after the organizaion referred to was mustered into federal service.

So far as the second contention is concerned, to wit: In regard to paying for certain damage, that is a matter more of fact than of law. If all or any part of the damages claimed were occasioned by ordinary wear and tear, the claim, or so much thereof as was due to that effect, should be disallowed, but as to that part of the claim for damages which was not due to ordinary wear and tear, the same should be allowed.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDING FOR BOND ISSUE BY BOARD OF EDUCATION OF BRILLIANT VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT, JEFFERSON COUNTY—PROCEEDINGS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION AT SPECIAL MEETING—FOR BOND ISSUE—INVALID WHEN NOTICE NOT GIVEN AS REQUIRED BY SECTION 4751, G. C.

Where action pertaining to bond issue by board of education is taken at special meeting where one of the members is absent and no notice of the meeting served in accordance with section 4751, proceeding invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"Re:—Bonds of Brilliant village school district in the sum of $9,000.00 for the purpose of purchasing a site for and the erection of school buildings in said school district—18 bonds of $500 each."

I am herewith enclosing, without approval, transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Brilliant village school district, Jefferson county, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue. The issue of these bonds is provided for by the board of education under the assumed authority of sections 7625 et seq. of the General Code, which provide for the issue of bonds by the board of education of a school district on a vote of the electors thereof.

From the transcript it appears that the meeting of the board of education under date of November 20, 1916, at which the resolution was adopted providing for the submission of the question of issuing these bonds to the electors, was a special meeting called by the secertary "on request." There is nothing in the transcript, however, to show that in calling this meeting the secretary complied with the provisions of section 4751 General Code, which prescribes the manner in which special meetings of a board of education must be called. On the contrary, inasmuch as the members and officers of the board have failed to comply with a request of this department that a statement be made in the transcript as to the particular manner in which this meeting was called, I am convinced that the provisions of this section were not as a matter of fact complied with.

Relating to this question sections 4750 and 4751 General Code provide as follows:

"Sec. 4750. The board of education shall make such rules and regulations as it deems necessary for its government and the government of its employes and the pupils of the schools. No meeting of a board of education, not provided for by its rules or by law, shall be legal, unless all the members thereof have been notified, as provided in the next section.

"Sec. 4751. A special meeting of a board of education may be called by the president or clerk thereof or by any two members, by serving a written notice of the time and place of such meeting upon each member of the board, either personally or at his residence or usual place of business. Such notice must be signed by the official or members calling the meeting."

The transcript shows that one of the members of the board was absent from this meeting, and this being so I am compelled to hold that this meeting of the board of education was illegal, and the proceedings taken by the board at such meeting are wholly unauthorized so far as this issue of bonds is concerned. The case of Kattman v. Board of Education of New Knoxville, 15 C. C. N. S., 232, is exactly in point. In this case it was held by the court in sustaining an injunction against the issue of bonds by a board of education that proceedings of a school board providing for an issue of bonds are invalid where the action pertaining thereto was taken at a special meeting where one of the members was absent and no written notice of the meeting had been served on each member of the board, either personally or at his residence or usual place of business.

It is with some regret that I have reached the conclusion as to the invalidity of this proposed bond issue, and this for the reason that I am convinced that the board of education could, and, indeed, would meet the payment of principal and interest on these bonds if the same were issued and sold. However, inasmuch as this proposed issue was purchased by your board conditional on their issue being in accordance with the laws of the state of Ohio governing the issue of the same, I have no discretion other than to advise you that these bonds have not been issued in accordance with such laws.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ADJUTANT GENERAL—ASSISTANT ADJUTANT GENERAL—ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER GENERAL—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION UNDER SECTION 5190 IN LIEU OF SALARY UNDER 2249—UPON DECLARATION OF STATE OF WAR BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND GERMANY.

By virtue of the declaration that the United States was in a state of war with Germany, the adjutant general, assistant adjutant general and assistant quartermaster general are entitled to compensation under section 5190 in lieu of salary under section 2249, said section 5190 being in full force and effect at the time the said officers were appointed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—We are in receipt of your letter of May 4th wherein you inquire as follows:

> "I desire an early opinion on the following question:
> "Section 5190 (O. L. 105-106) provides as follows:
> " 'In time of war or insurrection each of said officers (adjutant general, assistant adjutant general and assistant quartermaster general) shall receive the pay and allowance of their rank according to those at the time prescribed for the armies of the United States, which said pay and allowance shall be in lieu of the salary of each of said officers provided in section two thousand two hundred and forty-nine of the General Code, until the conclusion of peace or the repression of the insurrection.'

"The adjutant general, assistant adjutant general and quartermaster general are presenting vouchers to this department for the compensation provided in section 5190, of the General Code, in lieu of their regular salary provided in the appropriation act. So far as we know they are performing only their regular duties, payment for which is provided in the appropriation bill. Are they entitled to such allowance at this time? If you desire any further information we will be glad to talk to you concerning this matter."

Section 79 G. C. (106 O. L. 470) provides that the staff of the governor shall consist of an adjutant general, upon whom shall devolve the duties of quartermaster general, an assistant adjutant general and twelve aides-de-camp, who shall hold office during the pleasure of the governor or for the term for which he was elected.

Section 81 G. C. provides that the commissions of the staff officers shall expire with the term of office for which the governor was elected.

Section 84 G. C. provides that the adjutant general shall have an assistant quartermaster general, appointed and commissioned by the governor.

Section 5190 G. C. referred to in your letter, was passed on May 27, 1915, approved June 2, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 4, 1915.

It will, therefore, be seen that all the above legislation was passed and in full force and effect before the 8th day of January, 1917, being the date on which the present adjutant general, assistant adjutant general and assistant quartermaster general were appointed.

Section 2249 G. C. (106 O. L. 28) provides the annual salaries of the adjutant general, assistant adjutant general and assistant quartermaster general. Said act was passed March 8, 1915, approved March 8, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state March 9, 1915.

Section 5190, referred to in your letter, provides that in time of war the said officers mentioned shall receive pay and allowance according to rank "which said pay and allowance shall be in lieu of the salary of each of said officers," until the conclusion of peace.

The United States formally declared on the 6th day of April, 1917, that a state of war with Germany existed, and since that time the United States has been in a state of war with Germany.

Article II, section 20, provides :

"The general assembly in cases not provided for in this constitution shall fix the term of office and compensation of all officers; and no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished."

Whether or not the above provision of the constitution would apply to other than civil officers, it is not necessary in this matter to decide for the reason that when the officers mentioned assumed their duties both section 2249 and section 5190 were in full force and effect, and while the compensation of the officers mentioned would by reason of the declaration of a state of war with Germany increase, it was solely because of the fact that the compensation was by reason of such declaration to be paid under a different provision of the statutes than during times of peace. It is not a question as to whether or not there was an increase in the duties pertaining to the office, but whether or not a status of peace or war was in existence.

I would therefore advise you that the adjutant general, the assistant adjutant general and the assistant quartermaster general are, since the 6th day of April, 1917, and will until the conclusion of peace, be entitled to receive compensation under the provisions of section 5190.

This case is different from the case of State ex rel. Bryant v. Dohaney, Auditor, for the reason that, first, as we view the matter the United States was not at war with Mexico; and, secondly, section 5190 was amended by the legislature to read in its present form after Colonel Bryant had assumed office as assistant adjutant general.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

INMATES OF PRIVATE CHILDREN'S HOME—BETWEEN AGE OF SIX AND TWENTY-ONE—ENTITLED TO BE ADMITTED TO SCHOOLS FREE—IN DISTRICT IN WHICH HOME LOCATED—REGARDLESS OF WHETHER OR NOT PARENTS RESIDE IN SAID DISTRICT—SECTIONS 7676 AND 7678 DO NOT APPLY.

Children between the age of six and twenty-one years, inmates of a private children's home, are entitled to be admitted free to the schools of the district in which such home is located, under the provisions of section 7681, G. C.

The fact that the parents or guardian of such children are not actual residents of such district does not change the rule.

The provisions of General Code, sections 7676 and 7678, apply to only children's homes which are provided by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1917.

HON. ROY R. CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 7, 1917, is as follows:

> "Located in the Smithfield rural school district in Smithfield township, Jefferson county, there is a private children's home known as the 'Smithfield Bethel', supported and maintained by private contributions. In this Bethel there are seventy-seven pupils of school age. Most of them are from without Smithfield rural school district, coming from different parts of the county; different parts of the state and even from outside of the state. Very few of these children have parents or guardians actual residents of this district.
> "First: Would section 7678 apply to this particular children's home, or does this statute exclude an institution of this kind, which is in no way maintained by public funds?
> "Second: Would the matter of providing schools for this institution be governed by section 7681 G. C.? If so, would only those children, inmates of this institution, whose parents or guardians were actual residents of the district, have the right to free tuition in the schools of the district? Would the county commissioners be required to pay the tuition of all the pupils of this home whose parents or guardians were not actual residents of the district?

"If the public schools, as now located in this district, are not reasonably accessible to the pupils in this home, what board or body should make provision for the school facilities of the pupils living in this home and how?"

The answer to your several inquiries involves the consideration of those sections of the General Code which refer to the inmates of private children's homes who are between six and twenty-one years of age.

General Code, section 7681, provides in part:

> "The schools of each district shall be free to all youth between six and twenty-one years of age, who are children, wards or apprentices of actual residents of the district, including children of proper age who are inmates of a county or district or of any public or private children's home or orphans' asylum located in such a school district. * * * * * The board of education in any district in which * * * private children's home * * * is located, when requested by the governing body thereof, shall admit the children of school age of such home * * * to the public schools of the school district. The county commissioners shall pay the tuition of such pupils to the school or schools maintained by the board of education at a per capita rate which shall be ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvement and repairs, by the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district, such amount to be computed by the month. * * * * The distributive share of school funds from the state for the children of such home or asylum shall then be paid to the county commissioners. But all youth of school age living apart from their parents or guardians and who work to support themselves by their own labor, shall be entitled to attend school free in the district in which they are employed."

It is noted that by the provisions of the above section all youth between six and twenty-one years of age, who are inmates of a private children's home, are entitled to attend the schools of the district in which such private children's home is located.

This department held on February 14, 1917, in Opinion No. 33, and in a matter very similar to that mentioned in your statement of facts, that the children who live in private children's homes are entitled to the advantages permitted under section 7681 of the General Code, above quoted, and that the governing body of said home may request the board of education of a school district to admit the children of school age who live in such home into the schools of the district in which such home is located.

But just how far do the rights of such pupils go? That is, what does the language of section 7681, which says the schools shall be free to the youth, mean? Does it mean that all provisions for school facilities shall be made, or does it simply mean that the tuition shall be paid?

It would be necessary to look not only to section 7681, G. C., if all provisions for school facilities shall be made, for in said section 7681 it is provided that the county commissioners shall pay the tuition of such pupils, thus indicating that it is not that all provisions for such facilities shall be made, but only that the tuition shall be paid. So that, when section 7681 provides that the schools shall be free to all youth of private children's homes, it is meant that the tuition to such schools shall be paid.

General Code, section 7676, provides in part:

> "The board of education in any district in which a children's home * * * is established by law, when requested by the board of trustees of such children's home * * * when no public school is situated reasonably near such home * * * shall establish a separate school in such home * * * so as to afford to the children therein, as far as practicable, the advantages and privileges of a common school education. * * *"

This section clearly applies to only those children of school age who are inmates of a children's home, which home is "established by law"; that is, which home is established under part first, title 10, division 4, chapter 3, of the General Code, headed "children's homes". So that the "Smithfield Bethel" not having been established, as provided by law, that is, by the law of this state, the board of education of the district in which it is located is not required to establish a separate school in such institution. The fact, however, that the board of education is not required to establish a school in such institution will not prevent the children of such institution from receiving the advantages provided for by the above noted section 7681, as above referred to.

Looking also to the provisions of section 7678 G. C.,

> "In the establishment of such schools the commissioners of the county in which such children's home * * * is established shall provide the necessary school room or rooms, furniture, fuel, apparatus and books, the cost of which for such schools must be paid out of the funds provided for such institution. The board of education shall incur no expense in supporting such schools."

just to what class of schools did the legislature refer when it used the words "such schools" in the above quoted section? Manifestly, only to those schools which are established in homes, which homes in turn are established as provided by law, and clearly said language does not refer to homes established other than as provided by law; that is, does not refer to private homes. If, then, the advantages provided by the provisions of sections 7676 and 7678 are limited only to homes established as provided by law, the advantages provided by section 7681 are those only which can be claimed by children of private children's homes; that is to say, the tuition only of pupils from such private children's homes can be made a matter of public charge, to wit, a charge against the commissioners of the county in which such private children's home is located.

Answering your questions, then, I advise you:

First: Section 7676 G. C. applies only to children's homes established by law, and the provisions thereof would not apply to the Smithfield Bethel private children's home.

Second: The matter of providing schools for the Smithfield Bethel institution would be limited to the provisions of section 7681 G. C., that is, to the tuition of the pupils and such tuition would be paid for the children of school age therein, whether the parents or guardians are actual residents of the district or not.

Third: If the public schools, as now located in the district, are not reasonably accessible, no provision of law seems to have been made for school facilities except that the pupils have a right to attend the public schools of the district under the tuition arrangement above noted. Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—LEASE OF CANAL LANDS IN CITY OF HAMILTON, BUTLER COUNTY, TO CLAUDE E. FREEMAN AND ETHYL WELLER.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1917.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I received your communication of March 22d in which you ask my approval of a certain lease of canal lands located in the city of Hamilton, Butler county, Ohio, to Claude E. Freeman and Mrs. Ethyl Weller.

I have examined the said lease carefully and find that the provisions of the same are in harmony with our statutes upon the subject, and that the same is correct in form.

I am therefore sending the same this day with my approval endorsed thereon to the governor for his approval. Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ACCEPTANCE BY PUBLISHER OF MAXIMUM PRICE FIXED BY SCHOOL BOOK COMMISSION—CONSTITUTES CONTRACT FOR PERIOD OF FIVE YEARS—CONTRACT MAY BE MODIFIED WITH CONSENT OF BOTH PARTIES — SUBJECT TO RESTRICTION THAT PRICE CANNOT BE RAISED—REVISED EDITION OF TEXT BOOK DEFINED.

After a maximum price has been fixed for a text book by the school book commission, under the provisions of section 7710 General Code, it is not illegal to file such book again within five years. The fixing of such maximum price by the commission and acceptance by the publisher constitute a contract for five years. This may be abandoned or modified within said period but subject to the restriction that such price cannot be raised during such period.

A revised edition of a text book is a new edition containing any substantial change in the text.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1917.

HONORABLE F. B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication to this office of April 12th, 1917, is as follows:

"One of the book companies wrote the following letter:

" 'We have this day received the opinion of the attorney-general in regard to the five-year period. In accordance with this opinion we note that we are not allowed to file books except for the five-year period. Consequently, all the books which were originally filed between the years 1910 and 1915 were illegally refiled in 1915. Therefore, that filing no longer has any standing in the law. We should suppose, also, that all books filed between 1905 and 1910, which were refiled in 1910, also lost their standing, and consequently there could be at the present time no legal filing in the state except for books filed during the year 1916. A book published in 1911 and filed at that time, which was refiled in 1915 clearly has no standing, for the 1915 filing was illegal, according to the attorney-general's opinion, and as it was not refiled in 1916, it has been sold illegally this year and will be until it is refiled.

"'We note that a very large proportion and probably all of the books on the list which we have asked you to file come under this list of illegal filings, or else are new books or are revised editions. We are going to ask you, therefore, to take immediate action on this list, in connection with the new interpretation of the law. As our list was filed in January, more than three months ago, we think that we are entitled to the benefit of the law requiring immediate action.

"'As the first filing under this law was in 1896 or 1897, is it not true that all subsequent filings have been illegal, as the even five-year period from that time would be filed in 1916 or 1917?'

"What shall we do with this?

"What is a revised edition of a text book?"

Your two questions are stated above. The first thing to note in reference to both of them is that neither of them presents any question of law either directly or by inference, but both may be answered with no inconvenience.

As to your first inquiry: "What shall we do with this?" It is sufficient to say that the consternation expressed by your correspondent in the communication you quote finds no warrant in the opinion referred to. There is no statement in the said opinion that any filing of books is illegal, but what is plainly expressed is that when the publishing house accepts the price fixed by the school book commission, the action of the said commission, together with such acceptance, constitutes a contract for the period of five years. The terms of this contract are that the books will be furnished for five years at that price to all boards of education who may desire to adopt or use the same.

Being a contract, however, it is liable to change, but only by mutual consent of the parties and in so far as such change may not be illegal or against public policy. From this it follows that the parties might abandon it at any time and make a new contract of the same kind and in the same manner. That, however, would be subject to this important restriction—that the school book commission could not in that manner in any five-year period permit the price of any such book to be raised.

From this it follows that any filing and adoption of such book in accordance with the section quoted in said opinion, which does not so raise the price of any text book is not illegal, but just as valid and binding as though no prior filing had ever taken place. This would seem to be sufficient indication of what you might do in reference to the communication you quoted.

Your second question is: "What is a revised edition of a text book?" This, as stated, is not a question of law, at least not purely so. As applied to the matter in hand the question is purely academic, as you will never be in any situation in which you have any doubt. A satisfactory definition, however, in reference to the situation under this statute, might be:

A revised edition of a text book is a new edition containing a change of text.

The statistician from your office has inquired verbally, with reference to this question, whether a change of a single word would constitute a revised edition. There appears to be no necessity for answering this question, but it may with safety be asserted that there would have to be some substantial change of the text. A very little change might constitute such revision. The change, however, to accomplish the practical purpose in the contemplation of this statute, would be a change of text, not a mere change in the appearance of the book.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL — FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN GEAUGA, HANCOCK, VINTON, WARREN AND WAYNE COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 4, 1917, enclosing certain final resolutions in reference to which you ask my approval. The resolutions enclosed have to do with the improvement of the following inter-county highways:

Geauga County—Hambden-Andover, I. C. H. No. 475, Sec. "B".

Geauga County—Cleveland-Meadville, I. C. H. No. 15, Sec. "K-1".

Hancock County—Lima-Sandusky, I. C. H. No. 22, Sec. "G" (in duplicate).

Vinton County—McArthur-Logan, I. C. H. No. 397, Sec. "H".

Warren County—Morrow-Lebanon, I. C. H. No. 252, Sec. "b" (Twp. road).

Wayne County—Akron-Wooster, I. C. H. No. 96, Sec. "O".

I have examined said final resolutions carefully and find them correct in form and legal with one exception, namely, I. C. H. No. 397, Vinton county, which has not been signed by the chief clerk of the highway department. But I am returning all these final resolutions with my endorsement placed thereon, with the request that the chief clerk sign the one final resolution upon its return to your department.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL — FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN GUERNSEY, MADISON AND GALLIA COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of May 7 and 8, 1917, in which you enclose certain final resolutions and ask my approval of the same. The final resolutions enclosed in your communications are as follows:

Guernsey County—Sec. "A" Cambridge-Barnesville road, Pet. No. 1550, I. C. H. No. 107.

Madison County—Sec. "E" Urbana-London road, Pet. No. 2635, I. C. H. No. 194.

Gallia County—Sec. "E" Gallipolis-Jackson road, Pet. No. 2370, I. C. H. No. 399.

I have carefully examined said final resolutions and find them correct in form and legal. I am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

CONTRACT—BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS INVOLVING EXPENDITURE OF MONEY—VOID UNLESS COUNTY AUDITOR FIRST FILES CERTIFICATE STATING THAT MONEY IS IN TREASURY TO THE CREDIT OF FUND FROM WHICH OBLIGATION IS TO BE PAID—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER CANNOT ENTER INTO VALID CONTRACT FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT UNTIL COUNTY COMMISSIONERS HAVE ENTERED INTO CONTRACT TO PAY THEIR PORTION OF THE COST—IF CONTRACT BETWEEN HIGHWAY COMMISSIONERS AND BIDDER IS NOT VALID—CONTRACTOR CANNOT BE HELD TO TERMS OF HIS CONTRACT.

1. Under the provisions of section 5660 G. C., a contract or agreement entered into by the county commissioners, involving the expenditure of money, is void, unless, before the contract or agreement is entered into, the county auditor files his certificate with the county commissioners, stating that the money required to carry out the terms of the contract is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which the obligation must be paid.

2. Under the provisions of section 1218 G. C., the state highway commissioner cannot enter into a valid contract for the improvement of a highway, until the county commissioners have entered into a valid contract with him, that they will pay the part of the cost and expense of the improvement over and above that part to be borne by the state.

3. In the event that the contract entered into by and between the state highway commissioner and the lowest and best bidder, for the improvement of the highway, is not valid, then the contractor cannot be held to the performance of the terms of the contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1917.

State Highway Department, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This department has a communication dated March 19, 1917, received through the state highway department, from Rinehart Brothers, in which communication certain information is requested, which communication from the department and from Rinehart Brothers reads as follows:

> "I quote below a letter received by me from Messrs. Rinehart Brothers with whom this department has an agreement for the construction and completion of section 'Q' of the Cleveland-East Liverpool road, intercounty highway No. 12, main market road No. 3, in Columbiana county.
> " 'Hon. Clinton Cowen, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.
> " 'Dear Sir:—Referring to the matter of the improvement of section 'Q' of the Cleveland-East Liverpool road, I. C. H. No. 12, petition No. 2193, in St. Clair township, Columbiana county, I desire to call your attention to the following considerations:
> " '1. The date of the letting on this road was April 7, 1916. We were the low bidders, and not receiving any notice that we had been awarded the contract, we wrote you on April 19, 1916, inquiring whether we were to receive the contract. You stated, under date of April 21, 1916, that the bonds of the county had not been sold, and the date for the sale of the same had not been definitely fixed, and that the contract could not be officially awarded until the auditor's certificate of funds was on file with you. On April 29, 1916, we wrote you that we were anxious to begin work immediately, that the county commissioners would not be able to finance their portion of the improvement before June 1, and asking that we be given the contract and allowed to start the work and be paid out of the state funds, until the county had sold its bonds. You replied under date of May 1, 1916, that this could not be done. At the time we bid on this work we were in shape to, and desired to begin work promptly and push same to completion.

"'2. On July 31, 1916, you wrote us that we had been awarded the contract and sent us a copy of the same, your letter and copy of the contract being received on August 1, 1916, the very day set for the completion of the work.

"'3. We were required to sign a contract and bond at the time we filed our bid, and to file the contract and bond with your department, although there was no assurance at that time that we would be awarded the contract. We were not willing on August 1, 1916, to undertake the construction of this road for the sum bid on the 7th day of April of that year. This position on our part was due to labor conditions, and to the great increase, in the meantime, in the cost of labor and some materials. We think that both legally and morally our bid on April 7th, was conditioned on our being allowed to start the work within a reasonable time thereafter, and that our bid or offer, to be binding on us, should have been accepted within a reasonable time after April 7th, and was not a valid and subsisting bid which you could accept on July 31, 1916. We have no desire to escape from any legal liability, but cannot see our way to build a road under changed conditions, and several months after the date of our bid, when to do so would involve us in a loss of several thousands of dollars.

"'We wish to make it particularly clear that we are not in any way criticising you or your department, either for the way this matter was originally handled, or for your present attitude in the matter. We understand fully that the delay was due to the inability of the county authorities to finance their portion of the work, and was not due in any way to your department. We also understand fully that, under circumstances such as these, you may not care to take the responsibility of doing what we think to be the only fair thing to do, to wit: Cancel the entire arrangement and readvertise the work.

"'There are legal questions involved which we have not assumed to pass on, but which we have referred to our counsel, and while, of course, we would be very glad if you could see your way clear to take the initiative in this matter and cancel the entire arrangement to date, yet if, as we apprehend, you do not care to take this responsibility, we do desire to request of you that you submit the entire matter to the attorney-general of the state, who—as we were informed by you—is your legal adviser, with a request that he give you an opinion as to the right to hold us upon any alleged contract for the construction of this road.

"'We regret the situation which this matter has reached, but cannot see where we are in fault. We are quite sure you will not criticise us for taking such steps as we deem necessary to protect our own interests, and we would be very grateful to you, and would feel that you had treated us with every possible consideration, if you would comply with the request contained in this communication, and refer the entire matter to your legal adviser for an opinion, as to whether we are liable on the alleged contract and can be held either to do this work, or to pay the difference between the contract price and the cost of completing the work by you—either on another contract or on force account arrangement.

"'Our Columbus counsel is Mr. C. H. Duncan, and if you can see your way clear to submit this matter to the attorney-general, Mr. Duncan desires to submit a brief to that official covering the legal questions involved. Very truly yours,

"'(Signed) RINEHART BROS.,

"'Per Jas. S. Rinehart.'

"You will note the contractors have not commenced work upon the above improvement and question their liability under the above contract. I am desirous of commencing work on the above improvement as soon as possible and would, therefore, appreciate your advising me as to whether or not our agreement with the above named firm constitutes a binding obligation on them.

"Our files in regard to this entire matter are available for your examination at any time."

In considering the communication addressed to this department and in looking over the files in your office, I find the following to be the facts in reference to the matter upon which you ask my opinion:

On April 7, 1916, you opened the bids filed with you for the construction of the highway in question.

At the same time that bids were filed for the construction of this work, Rinehart Brothers, together with other bidders, filed their contract, duly signed on their part, together with a bond for the faithful performance of their duties under the contract.

On April 24, 1916, the county commissioners of Columbiana county adopted a resolution in which they agreed to assume their share of the cost and expense of the improvement of the said highway.

On July 14, 1916, the county auditor certified to the county commissioners that the money to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of the improvement was in the treasury, to the credit of the fund from which the county's share of the cost and expense must be paid.

Shortly after this date, you signed the contract on behalf of the state and forwarded the same, completely executed, to Rinehart Brothers. They received the contract on July 31, 1916, just one day before the work provided for in the contract should be completed, the contract providing that the work should be completed by August 1, 1916.

No work has been done by Rinehart Brothers under said contract, and they refuse to proceed with the same.

In view of all the above, your question is as to whether said Rinehart Brothers can be held to the terms of the contract entered into by them, or whether they should be released from the contract.

First, I desire to consider a purely legal proposition based upon the following facts:

The resolution of the county commissioners, agreeing to assume their share of the cost and expense of the improvement, was adopted April 24, 1916. The certificate of the county auditor, to the effect that the money to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of said improvement was in the treasury, to the credit of the proper fund, was not filed with the county commissioners until July 14, 1916, almost three months after the county commissioners entered into the contract with the state highway department. This delay was due to the fact that the necessary steps had not been taken by the county commissioners, enabling the county auditor to make said certificate. The contract was not fully entered into between Rinehart Brothers and the state until some time after July 14, 1916, as you did not sign for the state until after the certificate had been made by the county auditor. Let us consider these facts in the light of the law.

Section 5660 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

It will be noted by the provisions of this section that the commissioners of a county cannot enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money unless the auditor first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation is in the treasury, to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn.

What conclusion must we necessarily draw from the facts as above set forth, in view of the provisions of this section? The agreement of the county commissioners was entered into on April 24, 1916, and the certificate of the county auditor was not filed until July 14, 1916. The courts of our state are practically unanimous to the effect that the failure to comply with the provisions of sections such as section 5660 G. C., renders contracts entered into by officials void. From some of these decisions I shall quote later on.

Let us go one step further in reference to this matter. Section 1218 G. C. provides as follows:

> "* * * No contract shall be let by the state highway commissioner in a case where the county commissioners * * * are to contribute a part of the cost of said improvement, unless the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement is located shall have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance that part of the cost and expense of said improvement over and above the amount to be paid by the state. * * *."

From this provision it is readily seen that the state highway commissioner cannot enter into a contract for the improvement of highways until the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement is located shall first enter into a written agreement to assume their share of the cost and expense of the improvement.

In the case under consideration, the county commissioners entered into a contract in form, but in reality the contract was void, due to the failure of the county auditor first to certify that the money was in the treasury, necessary to enable the county commissioners to carry out the contract.

Could it be said that the state highway commissioner would have jurisdiction to proceed under the provisions of section 1218 G. C., under such conditions? If the contract of the county commissioners is void, the fact that the state highway commissioner acted upon it and entered into the contract with Rinehart Brothers could not make it valid.

It is plainly evident that the provisions of section 5660 G. C. were enacted by the legislature for the protection of the taxpayer; were enacted that the taxpayer might have a remedy against the careless and sometimes corrupt tax spender, and that he might have the right to ask the courts to protect his rights by way of enjoining the indiscriminate and profligate expenditure of money. That this was the purpose of the legislature in enacting said section, is quite evident from a careful consideration of the same. The courts are unanimous in holding that this was the evident intention and purpose of the legislature in enacting the above section.

In view of this intention of the legislature, suppose we should hold that if the state highway commissioner proceeds to enter into a contract for the improvement of a highway, based upon a void contract of the county commissioners, the void contract is rendered valid and the proceedings from there on are legal and regular, how could the taxpayer assert his rights under the provisions of section 5660? He could not so do, for if the contract entered into with Rinehart Brothers is a legal one, the county commissioners would be compelled to pay their share of the cost and expense of the improvement, and the taxpayer would have no right to an injunction to prevent the payment of the county's share.

Supposing, however, we should hold that a taxpayer would have the right, under the contract entered into by Rinehart Brothers, to enjoin the county officials from paying the county's share of the cost and expense of the improvement. What would be the result? We would first hold that Rinehart Brothers are compelled to proceed with the work to be performed under and by virtue of the contract, and then run the risk that some taxpayer of Columbiana county might enjoin the county officials from paying them for the work done, in so far as that part of the pay that is to come from said county is concerned.

Hence, looking at the question from any angle we may, we are driven to the same conclusion, namely, that not only is the contract between the county commissioners and the state highway department void, on account of the failure of the county auditor to first file the said certificate, but also the action of the state highway commissioner, in entering into the contract with Rinehart Brothers, based upon this void contract, is also void and illegal. If it be void and illegal, neither Rinehart Brothers nor the state can be held to the terms and provisions of the same. As said before, the courts of our state are fairly unanimous in reference to the proposition that a certificate must first be filed.

In the case of Caldwell, a taxpayer, v. Marvin et al., 8 N. P. (N. S.) 387, it is stated in the syllabus:

> "But where no certificate of the clerk, that the funds requisite for the payment of such a claim were in the treasury and unappropriated, was filed prior to the adoption of the resolution authorizing payment, as required by section 2834b, the resolution is without effect and an injunction will lie against such payment."

In the opinion the court say (p. 390):

> "It has been repeatedly decided, and defendants admit, that the absence of the prior certificate as to funds when required by the above section or similar sections invalidates the resolution so that in an action at law no recovery could be had against the board upon such resolution; nor could an action in quantum meruit be maintained for the value of any services rendered under any such resolution. (Citing cases reported in 58 O. S. 558; 60 O. S. 406; 65 O. S. 219; 79 O. S. 323-346)."

The court further says (p. 392):

"Nevertheless, in making such payments it must proceed in the manner prescribed by law, and before the present clerk could draw an order for the payment of money and before the treasurer could pay such order, a resolution by the board of education was necessary. Before such resolution had any force and effect under section 2834b, a certificate of the clerk was necessary as to funds being in the treasury. There was no such certificate made or filed prior to the resolution of April 22, 1909, and no reason is given for such omission. The payment of any money, therefore, under such resolution should be enjoined."

In Guy S. North v. Commissioners of Huron County, 10 O. C. C. (N. S.) 462, it is stated in the syllabus:

"A contract between county commissioners and one who undertakes to pike a county highway is invalid, where no record of the meeting of the commissioners was made, and no auditor's certificate was filed or recorded as required by section 2834b, Revised Statutes; such a contract cannot be enforced against the county; nor can an equitable accounting be granted for the labor and materials expended in improving the road."

In State of Ohio ex rel. M. A. Fanning v. The Board of County Commissioners, etc., 19 O. C. C. 627, the syllabus reads as follows:

"Sec. 2834b R. S. is mandatory and is made condition precedent to be complied with before the board of county commissioners can make a lawful contract, and the certificate is as much a condition precedent as is the fact that the funds are provided.

"A failure of the petition in a suit on such a contract, to aver that the proper certificate was first obtained, is fatal to the action."

In City of Lancaster v. Miller, 58 O. S. 558, the second and third branches of the syllabus read as follows:

"2. Nor will such contract impose on the corporation a valid obligagation even if bids were advertised for pursuant to said section 2303, unless the auditor, or clerk, of the corporation, as the case may be, 'shall first certify that the money required for' that purpose 'is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn,' etc., as required by section 2702, Revised Statutes.

"3. Where either of such requirements has been omitted the municipality will not by the act of its officers be estopped to set up such omission as a defense to an action brought against it on such contract."

I desire also, in this connection, to call attention to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, on April 3, 1916, to Hon. Clinton Cowen, state highway commissioner, Vol. I, p. 602, Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916. While the facts in the case upon which Mr. Turner rendered his opinion are somewhat different from the facts upon which I am basing this opinion, yet the reasoning of Mr. Turner and the conclusion to which he comes throw some light upon the case before me, and I approve the conclusion arrived at in said opinion.

While the above is decisive of the case, yet I mention one other matter in passing. When you accepted the bids to be opened on April 7, 1916, those who bid upon the work had the right to assume that, within a reasonable time thereafter, taking into consideration the time at which the work was to be completed as well as other matters incident to the letting of the contract, the contract would be fully entered into. It could hardly be said that July 31, 1916, would be a reasonable date for the complete execution of the contract, when the contract itself provided that the work under the contract was to be completed on August 1, 1916.

The cost of labor and material varies so much from time to time that a contractor has the right to assume he will be able to enter upon the performance of the work within a reasonable time after he is adjudged to be the lowest and best bidder; but, as said before, it is not necessary to decide the case submitted by you upon this question, inasmuch as you have not jurisdiction to proceed under the provision of section 1218 G. C., due to the fact that the county commissioners had not entered into a valid contract with the state, to bear their share of the cost and expense of the improvement.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that Rinehart Brothers cannot be held under their bid and the contract entered into by and between them and the state of Ohio, and therefore they should be released from the contract.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

LOANS—ON SECURITIES ENUMERATED IN PARAGRAPHS b, c and d OF SECTION 9758 G. C.—SUBJECT TO RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS UNDER SECTION 9754 G. C.

Loans made on securities enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section 9758 G. C., are subject to the limitations and restrictions prescribed by section 9754 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1917.

HON. PHILLIP C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On April 24, 1917, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "Please advise as to whether or not loans made on the securities enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section No. 9758 are subject to the limitations and restrictions prescribed by section No. 9754."

I refer you to an opinion rendered by Hon. T. S. Hogan, attorney-general, to H. F. C. Baxter, superintendent of banks, on October 31, 1911 (Opinions of Attorney-General, 1911-1912, Vol. I, page 788). This opinion is upon the same question now asked by you and I fully concur in it.

I may add, in addition, that section 9754 is so clear upon the question of limitations on loans, as to need no interpretation. This section is as follows:

"A bank doing business as a commercial bank, shall not lend, including overdrafts, to any one person, firm or corporation, more than twenty per cent. of its paid in capital and surplus, unless such loan be secured by first mortgage upon improved farm property in a sum not to exceed sixty per cent. of its value. The total liabilities, including overdrafts, of a person, company, corporation, or firm to any bank, either as principal debtor or as security or indorser for others, for money borrowed, at no time shall exceed twenty per cent. of its paid-in capital stock and surplus. But the discount of bills of exchange drawn against actually existing values, and the discount of commercial or business paper actually owned by the person, company, corporation or firm negotiating it, shall not be considered as money borrowed."

You will note that the section is general and covers all transactions of commercial banks; that it makes one exception as to loans, which may be made in excess of 20% of the paid-in capital and surplus of the bank, that exception is a loan secured by first mortgage upon improved farm property, in a sum not to exceed 60% of its value. There is no other exception as to loans. The section not only forbids a loan of more than 20% of its paid-in capital and surplus by a commercial bank to any one person, firm or corporation, but also prohibits a bank from allowing any person, company, corporation or firm to become liable to it in an amount in excess of 20% of its paid-in capital stock and surplus, by direct loan, by overdrafts, or as security or indorser for others, for money borrowed.

There is no question but that as to loans, section 9758 is governed by section 9754. Section 9758 specifies certain securities in which commercial banks may invest their capital and surplus, or upon which they may loan the same; it has no bearing whatever, upon the limitation of the amount of the loan, that is governed by section 9754.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WHERE ADJOINING SCHOOL DISTRICTS MAINTAIN SAME GRADE HIGH SCHOOLS—A PUPIL ATTENDS IN DISTRICT OTHER THAN RESIDENCE DISTRICT—ALTHOUGH SCHOOL IN HIS OWN DISTRICT NEARER TO HIS HOME—HIS RESIDENCE DISTRICT NOT LIABLE FOR TUITION—TUITION MAY BE COLLECTED FROM PUPIL OR PARENT—WHEN NECESSARY TO ASCERTAIN DISTANCE PUPIL LIVES FROM HIGH SCHOOL—DISTANCE SHOULD BE MEASURED BY MOST DIRECT PUBLIC HIGHWAY FROM SCHOOL TO PUPIL'S HOME.

Adjoining school districts "A" and "B" each maintain third grade high schools. A high school pupil resides in district "A," more than four miles from school, although nearer to it than to the school he attends in district "B." District "A" is not liable for the tuition of said pupil to district "B."

Where any question arises as to the distance a pupil lives from a high school and it is necessary to ascertain same, such distance is measured "by the most direct public highway from the school to the nearest part of the curtilage surrounding the home of the pupil."

Where a high school pupil attends school in a district other than in the district of his residence and where his district is not legally bound to pay his tuition, such tuition may be recovered from the parent or guardian of the pupil, or the pupil, depending on the circumstances.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1917.

HON. CHARLES H. JONES, Prosecuting Attorney, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Complying with your request of March 24, 1917, I hereby submit my opinion on the following proposition.

"Township A is this year maintaining a third grade high school, as is also a neighboring township B. 'X,' a Boxwell graduate of township A, who resides more than four miles away from the high school maintained by his board of education, but nearer to it than to the high school maintained by township B, has been attending the high school in township B, and the latter has presented a claim to the board of education of township A for his tuition.

"QUERY: Is the board of education of township A liable for the tuition? If not, can township B recover from 'X?'

"Also 'Y,' a resident of township A, about whose distance from the school so maintained there is some question, has been attending a first grade high school in a neighboring township C.

"QUERY: Is the board of education of township A liable for the tuition of 'Y?' If not, can township C recover same from 'Y?'

"Township A has made the maximum levy permitted by law, and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of its schools. In fact, the amount so raised is and has been insufficient, so that township A has been meeting the deficit through state aid.

"In the foregoing statement the term 'township' is to be understood as meaning 'township rural school district.'"

Your inquiry calls for a consideration of the language of section 7748 G. C., which said section reads in part as follows:

> "A board of education providing a third grade high school, as defined by law, shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year. Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school, the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years, and a first grade high school for one year * * *, except that, a board maintaining a * * * third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years; except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants who have complied with the further provisions thereof residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel from the high school provided by the board when such applicants attend a nearer high school, or in lieu of paying such tuition the board of education maintaining a high school may pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from the said high school maintained by said board of education to said high school * * *"

Two portions of the above quoted part section seem to be in their terms contradictory, and it is to those two portions that my attention will be particularly directed.

The first portion reads as follows:

> "A board maintaining * * * a third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district."

The second portion reads:

> "Except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the further provisions thereof, residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel, from the high school provided by the board, when such applicants attend a nearer high school."

In order to determine the legislative intent some light will be found by noting the history of said legislation. Tuition was first provided for high school pupils in 1892 when section 3 of house bill No. 14 was passed March 22, 1892, and found in 89 Ohio Laws 124. Said section read as follows:

> "The tuition of such graduates as may attend any village or city high school of the county may be paid by the board of education of the special or township district in which such pupils reside."

The said house bill was an act to provide for the graduation of pupils from the common schools of subdistricts and led up to what was later termed the Boxwell and the Boxwell-Patterson laws. Said above mentioned section 3 of house bill No. 14 was amended on March 28, 1902, 95 O. L. 72. The portion of said amended section necessary for our purpose reads as follows:

> "The tuition of pupils holding diplomas and residing in township special or joint districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month and an attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month; but a board of education maintaining a high school shall charge no more tuition than it charges for other non-resident pupils, and no board of education shall be required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years; provided the board of education shall be required to pay the tuition of all successful applicants who have complied with the provisions of this act, residing more than three miles from the high school provided by said board, when said applicants attend a nearer high school."

A marked change is noted between the original and the amended section last quoted. Only the tuition of pupils who hold diplomas and reside in school districts in which no high school was maintained was permitted to be paid by the board and because it will be referred to later it is noticeable here that the provisions with reference to distance from school first appears and the distance fixed at three miles beyond which all pupils resident thereof shall be entitled to tuition provided such pupils attend a nearer high school. Said section was again amended March 23, 1909, as found in 100 O. L. 74. It reads in part as follows:

> "The tuition of pupils holding diplomas and residing in township, special, or joint subdistricts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month and an attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month; but a board of education maintaining a high school shall charge no more tuition than it charges for other non-resident pupils. A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from said school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year and a first grade high school for one year. * * * provided, however, any such board of education maintaining a * * * third grade high school shall not be required to pay any such tuition after the rate of taxation permitted by law for such district shall have been reached and all the funds so raised are required for the support of the schools of said district. No board of education shall be required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years; provided the board of education shall be required to pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the provisions of this act, residing more than three miles from the high school provided by said board, when said applicants attend a nearer high school. * * *"

For the first time in the above quoted portion of said amended section appears the language of General Code section 7748 with reference to a board of education, which provides only a third grade high school, being required to pay the tuition of pupils who attend a second or first grade high school. That is to say, if a board of education of a district provides only a third grade high school and instead of attending such third grade high school such pupils, resident thereof, desire the schooling provided in the advanced high schools, to wit, a second or first grade high school, then the board of education which maintained only a third grade high school shall be required to pay the tuition of pupils who attended the first grade high school for a period of two years, or was required to pay the tuition of such pupils at a second grade high school for one year and a first grade high school for one year, and it is further noted that the distance of three miles residence provided for is by said last amended section changed to four. That is to say, a high school pupil who lived more than four miles from the high school provided by the board and who attended a nearer high school, was entitled to have the tuition at such nearer high school paid by the board of the district of the residence of such pupils. Said section was again amended in 101 O. L. 296, to read in part as follows:

> "A board of education providing a third grade high school, as defined by law, shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years or at a second grade high school for one year, and a first grade high school for one year. * * * Except that a board maintaining a * * * third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when a levy of twelve mills permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four years; except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the further provisions thereof, residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel from the high school provided by the board, when such applicants attend a nearer high school or in lieu of paying such tuition the board of education maintaining a high school may pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from said high school maintained by said board of education to said high school. * * *"

The same provisions with reference to the tuition of pupils who have graduated from the primary schools in a district in which a third grade high school is maintained are imposed in the last quoted amendment and also the same provision with reference to a board not being required to pay when the maximum levy is reached, which in the last quoted amendment is designated as twelve mills, and the same provision with reference to the four mile limitation as was provided by the former legislation and an added provision that the board of education might pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from the high school to the high school maintained by the board in lieu of paying tuition to any nearer high school which might be attended by the pupils. Said section, as above quoted, was carried into the new school code, 104 O. L. 126, to read as is now provided in General Code section 7748 G. C., above noted.

The above history, then, reveals that the latter portion of said section 7748 G. C., referred to at the outset as being in apparent contradiction to a former portion, was the first to be enacted as a portion of the school laws of this state and said provision has remained a part of the school laws ever since its original enactment, the only change therein being that of distance, from three to four miles; and when the provision was enacted with reference to the paying of tuition at first and second grade high schools by a board which maintained only a third grade high school, it was enacted in said section which contained the provision with reference to distance above mentioned and was placed in the former part of said section, thus permitting the provision with reference to distance to stand in the section and to stand as a latter provision therein.

Several reasons then occur to me why both of said seemingly contradictory statements shall be given effect. In the first place when the maximum levy permitted by law has been reached and all of the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of the district, the law provides that the board is not required to pay such tuition. That is, a particular tuition, the tuition to the first grade high school for two years or the first grade high school for one year and the second grade high school for one year. Another reason is that the language with reference to distance was permitted to remain as a part of said section, in its original mandatory form, and refers to a different class of tuition, i. e., tuition in lieu of transportation, and the third reason is the fact that said language with reference to distance was contained in the latter portion of the section, thereby controlling whatever might precede.

It is also worthy of being mentioned that an exception is made to the general provisions for the payment of tuition in favor of those pupils who reside more than four miles from such high school and who attend a nearer high school. Exceptions in statutes have the effect of modifying the general rule.

It is held in Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, volume 2, section 352, that:

> "The exception of a particular thing from the operation of the general words of a statute shows that in the opinion of the law maker the thing excepted would be within the general words had not the exception been made."

Consequently, then, the general rule that the board was not required to pay the tuition when the limits of taxation had been reached and the funds so raised were necessary for the support of the schools was modified by the exception that said general rule should not prevail if the pupil resided more than four miles from the high school provided by the board and could attend a nearer high school. The above section No. 7748 G. C. was formerly Revised Statutes 4029-3 and construction was placed thereon by Allread, J., in New Madison School District Board of Education v. Harrison Township Board of Education, 14 O. D. 62, as follows:

> "Does section 3 of that act, section 4029-3 Rev. Stat., require a township board of education maintaining a high school within the township to pay the tuition of resident pupils within the township but more than three miles from the township high school and who attend a nearer high school? * * * It was the purpose, undoubtedly, of this act to give every pupil of a township having the necessary diploma the benefit of a high school at the expense of the township. This diploma admits the pupil to any high school in the state, but before the tuition can be charged to the township the case must be brought within the scope of section 3 of the act, section 4029-3 Rev. Stat. * * *
> "Where a high school is maintained by the township board of education * * * no liability can be created against such township board of education by any resident pupil attending another high school in the state, except where such pupil resides more than three (now four) miles from such township high school * * * and nearer another high school. * * *
> "Where a high school is maintained by the township board of education in a township * * * any high school pupil residing more than three miles from such township high school * * * may attend a nearer high school, *and in such case the township board of education of the district in which the pupil resides is required to pay the tuition of such pupil in such nearer high school * * ."

From all the above, then, I must conclude and advise you that the high school pupil who resides more than four miles from the high school of his district must attend a nearer high school before the board of education of the district in which he resides is required to pay his tuition, and since this was not done in your case, township "A" is not liable to township "B" for said tuition.

Coming now to your second question, that is, "Y," a resident of township "A," about whose distance from the school so maintained there is some question, has been attending a first grade high school in a neighboring township "C"; is the board of education of township "A" liable for the tuition of "Y?" From my answer to your first question you will note it is impossible to answer your second without being advised definitely as to the distance the pupil "Y" lives from school. The rule for measuring distance in the transportation of pupils is as follows:

> "By the most direct public highway from the school to the nearest part of the curtilage of its residence. (58 O. S. 390.)"

Not knowing how far the pupil lives from his own school, it is impossible for me to determine whether or not he is entitled to either class of tuition, i. e., whether or not he is entitled to tuition in lieu of transportation or tuition at a first grade high school when he lives in a district which maintains only a third grade high school.

In answer to your third question, I advise you that if the board of education of the district of the residence of a pupil is not liable for such pupil's tuition, the parent or guardian of the pupil, or the pupil, depending on circumstances, would be liable therefor.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPRAISEMENT—WHEN SAME BECOMES NECESSARY—IN EXAMINATION OF A BANK—TO DETERMINE AMOUNT OF REAL ESTATE OWNED BY BANK—EXPENSE SHOULD BE PAID BY BANKING DEPARTMENT—EXPENSE OF SPECIAL EXAMINATION—AT REQUEST OF BANK—SHOULD BE PAID BY BANK.

1. When, in the course of a regular examination of a bank, it becomes necessary to have an appraisement in order to determine the value of real estate owned by a bank, the expense of such appraisement should be paid by the banking department.

2. When a special examination is made of a bank, at the request of the bank, all the expense of such examination is to be paid by the bank.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1917.

HON. PHIL. C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On March 19, 1917, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "In making an examination of a bank, a wide difference of opinion exists between one examiner and the owners of the bank as to the value of the real estate owned by the bank. The existence and continued operation of the bank depended upon the value of the real estate.

"This department chose an appraiser, the bank chose one; the two thus chosen selected a third and the property was appraised by them.

"Should the bank or should this department pay for the services thus rendered?"

There is no provision of law authorizing this method of determining the value of real estate owned by a bank when there is a difference of opinion between the bank and the examiner as to the value of such real estate, but I suppose that the examiner is justified in following the method which will enable him to place a proper valuation upon such real estate, and if in the instance you give an appraisement of this character was necessary in order that the examiner, and yourself, might be certain as to the value of the real estate, then it seems to me the expense was properly incurred in the examination of the bank.

Under section 736 of the General Code, the banks of Ohio subject to inspection and examination by the superintendent of banks, are compelled to pay fees for the purpose of maintaining the department of banks and the payment of all expenses incident thereto, including the expenses of inspection and examination; so that the banks themselves pay all the expenses of that department and the same is maintained without any assistance from the state.

The first paragraph of section 736 G. C., which shows the purpose for which these fees are assessed, is as follows:

"That for the purpose of maintaining the department of the superintendent of banks and the payment of expenses incident thereto, and especially the expenses of inspection and examination, the following fees shall be paid to the superintendent of banks of Ohio: * * *"

It would seem, therefore, that if you or your examiner considered an appraisement of this character necessary, in arriving at the value of the real estate of the bank being examined, then such expense should be paid by your department.

When special examinations are made at the request of a bank, by virtue of sections 720, 721 and 735, General Code, the expenses are to be paid by the bank, but I presume the question which you submit arose during the regular examination of the bank; therefore, it seems to me that the expense of the same should be paid by your department.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BANK—MAY NOT OPERATE A BRANCH BANK OUTSIDE THE LIMITS OF THE CITY, VILLAGE OR TOWNSHIP—NAMED IN ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

A bank may not operate a branch bank outside the limits of the particular city, village or township named in its articles of incorporation. A bank, located in one village, may not operate as a branch a bank located in another village, although both villages are in the same township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1917.

HON. PHIL. C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On April 24, 1917, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "Please advise whether or not a person owning two banks in different villages of the same township, and desiring to incorporate both, it will be necessary to incorporate each or can one be established as the principal institution and the other as a branch."

There is no authority under the laws of Ohio for a bank establishing a branch outside the limits of the particular city, village or township, named in the articles of incorporation. Therefore, one of the banks to which you refer could not operate the other as a branch, but being located in different villages they should incorporate separately.

Upon the subject of branch banks under the Ohio law I refer you to the opinion of Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, attorney-general, rendered to Hon. Emory Lattanner, superintendent of banks, on May 28, 1914. (See Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1914, Vol. I, page 727.) The reference in said opinion of May 28th to a former opinion of June 16, 1913, is erroneous. The reference should be to an opinion rendered May 13, 1913. (See Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1913, Vol. I, page 806.)

I concur in this opinion and suggest that you be guided by it whenever application is made to you for your consent to the establishment of branch banks; and also that the same be applied to banks which are now operating branches, that is, the branch must be operated as an integral part of the corporation, and the books of the corporation must at all times show its financial condition in such manner as to make it unnecessary for an examiner to make a separate examination of the branch or branches.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE CITY OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds issued by the city of Cleveland, Ohio, and purchased by the Industrial Commission, in the sum of $684,000.00, the same being bonds issued by said city in anticipation of the collection of assessments for improvement by paving of certain streets in said city."

This department has carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the city of Cleveland relating to the above bond issue, and supplementing the examination of the transcript furnished to this department by the director of finance of said city, this department caused a personal investigation to be made into the legislation and other proceedings relating to the issue of the said bonds.

As a result of said examination I advise you that said proceedings have been taken with respect to each improvement covered by this bond issue in strict conformity to the provisions of the charter of the city of Cleveland relating to the matter of local improvements and the assessments therefor. The charter of the city of Cleveland does not cover the matter of issuing bonds in anticipation of the collection of assessments for the improvement of streets provided for in the charter and the issue of the above bonds has been provided for according to the sections of the General Code of Ohio relating to the subject matter, and such proceedings with respect to this bond issue have been in all respects as required by law.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the bonds of the city of Cleveland provided for in said proceedings according to the bond form submitted will, when signed by the proper officers of the said city and delivered to you, be valid and subsisting obligations of the city of Cleveland.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

OFFICIAL COURT STENOGRAPHER—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION —FOR TRANSCRIPT OF TESTIMONY OF WITNESSES BEFORE GRAND JURY—PAID FROM COUNTY TREASURY.

The official stenographer is entitled, under section 1553 G. C., to compensation for transcript of testimony of witnesses taken before the grand jury, to be paid from the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have called our attention to the syllabus prepared by this department on opinion No. 105 rendered to Hon. Dean E. Stanley, prosecuting attorney of Warren county, under date of March 13, 1917, which syllabus is to the effect that the prosecuting attorney is not authorized to expend the funds received by him under section 3004 G. C. for the payment of compensation to an official stenographer for services in transcribing testimony taken before a grand jury.

The syllabus stated that the work so done was included in the official duties of the stenographer. The conclusion stated in opinion No. 105, hereinbefore referred to, is as follows:

> "* * * in direct answer to your two inquiries it is my opinion that county commissioners are not authorized to pay for services rendered by a stenographer in taking testimony at a coroner's inquest, and that the prosecuting attorney is not authorized to expend a part of the money drawn by him under section 3004 G. C. for the payment of extra compensation to the official stenographer for services rendered in transcribing testimony taken by him before the grand jury."

The syllabus prepared for such opinion went beyond the holding of the opinion, and consequently the confusion has arisen.

Coming now to determine whether or not the official stenographer is entitled to receive compensation, not for the taking of notes, but for the transcribing of the testimony taken before the grand jury, I would call your attention to the provisions of section 3004 G. C.

Section 3004 allows annually to the prosecuting attorney, in addition to his salary, an amount equal to one-half the official salary "to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties, and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for."

Section 1553 of the General Code, referring to the official stenographer, provides at the end thereof:

> "When the testimony of witnesses is taken before the grand jury by such stenographers, as provided by law, they shall receive for such transcript as may be ordered by the prosecuting attorney, the same compensation per folio and be paid therefor in the manner herein provided."

It is apparent, therefore, that it was the intention of the legislature in the enactment of section 1553 G. C. to provide for compensation for the official stenographer for transcripts of testimony before the grand jury. Consequently, it is otherwise provided for and cannot be paid under section 3004 G. C.

In the request for opinion No. 105, hereinbefore referred to, it was asked whether there was any provision of law by which such stenographer's services may be paid. I assume by the form of the question that the prosecuting attorney was asking whether or not the transcript of the testimony taken before the grand jury could be paid for, if not paid under section 3004 G. C.

Section 1553 G. C., providing for compensation, was included in an act passed in 97 O. L., page 178, being a part of section 5 thereof. Section 1552 was likewise a part of said section 5, and provides in part:—

> "* * * The compensation for transcripts made in criminal cases, by request of the prosecuting attorney or the defendant, and transcripts ordered by the court in either civil or criminal cases, shall be paid from the county treasury, and taxed and collected as other costs."

It appears, therefore, that there is a provision for transcripts in criminal cases to be paid from the county treasury, and in view of the provisions of section 1553, hereinbefore quoted, I am of the opinion that the court stenographer is entitled to payment for transcripts of the testimony of witnesses taken before the grand jury, when ordered by the prosecuting attorney, from the county treasury, but is not entitled to pay therefor from the fund created by section 3004 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CONTRACTOR—WHO HAS BEEN AWARDED CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF HIGHWAY—CANNOT BE HELD TO THE PROVISIONS OF HIS CONTRACT—WHERE THERE HAS BEEN UNREASONABLE DELAY IN BEGINNING WORK—DUE TO NO FAULT OF HIS.

A contractor who bids for the construction of highways has a right to assume that, if awarded the contract under his bid, he will within a reasonable time be permitted to begin the work and to carry it to a completion, without undue delays and hindrances over which he has no control. A delay of two years, due to no fault of the contractor, is unreasonable.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of April 6, 1917, was duly received, in which you ask my advice as to certain matters therein contained. Your communication reads as follows:

> "On September 26, 1914, the state highway commissioner awarded to A. W. McDonald & Co. of Steubenville, Ohio, the contract for improveing section "F" of the Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7, in Jefferson county. Contract price, $20,500.00. The improvement was to be made of brick. Length 0.97 miles. Width 16 feet.
> "A signed copy of the contract for this work was delivered to A. W. McDonald & Co. on November 28, 1914. Within a very few days thereafter, work was begun by Mr. McDonald.
> "Work of excavating, building bridges and culverts continued until about July 1, 1915, at which time the contractor was forced to abandon the work on account of not having the proper right of way. From this date to the present time no work has been done on the improvement and now A. W. McDonald & Co. ask to be released from all obligations under their contract and that the state and county pay to them certain claims, which you will find itemized in this communication.
> "The state highway commissioner desires your opinion in this matter, as to whether the state shall hold A. W. McDonald & Co. to the terms of their contract or shall release this company and settle upon some agreed basis."

To your communication you attach certain lengthy correspondence had between you and the contractors, in reference to the matters set out in your communication. This correspondence has helped me materially in arriving at the advice herein given, but it is too lengthy to set out in full, so that I shall merely give the substance of the different communications which passed between your department and A. W. McDonald & Company in reference to the matter in question.

On September 26, 1914, the contract was awarded to A. W. McDonald & Co.

On November 28, 1914, a copy of the contract duly executed by your department was delivered to said contractors. Work was begun by the contractors on December 1, 1914, and continued until July 1, 1915, the work then ceasing, due to the fact that a right of way had not been secured by the county commissioners.

On April 27, 1915, a supplemental contract was let to A. W. McDonald & Co., in reference to the construction of the same work.

On May 25, 1915, the contractor wrote your department, protesting on account of the delay in the completion of the work, due to the fact that the extra right of way had not been secured. In this communication he stated that he would demand extra compensation, due to said delay, over which he had no control.

On June 3, 1915, you answered the letter of May 25, 1915, admitting that the right of way had not been secured, and stated that it was the duty of the county commissioners to secure the additional right of way.

On June 25, 1915, the contractors wrote they were compelled to quit the work under the contract and move their plant to another piece of work, although they did not desire it to be considered that they were abandoning work to be performed under said contract with your department.

On April 25, 1916, the contractors wrote you, urging that matters be so arranged that they might proceed with the work, stating they were ready at all times to go ahead and complete the work, and further stating that conditions had materially changed in reference to the cost of labor and material, over which they had no control.

On April 27, 1916, your department replied to this communication, stating that you were doing your best to enable the contractors to proceed, and that you understood the county commissioners were about ready with the matter of securing the right of way to enable them to proceed.

On July 18, 1916, the county commissioners notified you that the right of way had been finally secured and that they had notified the contractors to proceed with the work.

On July 25, 1916, you wrote to the contractors, advising and urging them to proceed with the work, in view of the fact that the right of way had been secured.

On August 5, 1916, the contractors wrote your department, denying that the right of way had been secured so as to enable them to proceed with the work.

You then state that your Mr. Richards investigated the matter as to the right of way and found that the statement of the contractors was true, and that the necessary right of way had not been secured, and your department asked the county commissioners to proceed in the matter of securing the necessary right of way.

On August 12, 1916, the county auditor wrote you that the necessary right of way had been secured.

On August 22, 1916, your department wrote the county commissioners, stating that as soon as you received a written statement from them that the necessary right of way had been secured, you would order the contractors to proceed with the construction of said highway, the right of way not yet having been fully secured.

On March 12, 1917, the county commissioners wrote you that the necessary right of way had been finally secured and that matters were in such a condition that the contractors could proceed with the work.

On March 15, 1917, you wrote the contractors to this effect and asked them to proceed with the work.

On March 22, 1917, the contractors wrote your department that they would begin the completion of the work as soon as an agreement could be entered into between your department and them, satisfactorily adjusting the differences due to the fact that material and labor had greatly increased in price since the time of letting the contract, and that the delay was not due to any fault or negligence upon the part of the contractor.

You state in your communication, after all this lengthy correspondence, that:

> "The highway department has every reason to believe that A. W. McDonald & Co. was ready at all times with sufficient force and equipment to proceed with the work according to the provisions of the contract after July 1, 1915, providing that obstructions were removed and right of way secured."

On December 26, 1916, the contractors wrote to your department, stating that they "are still on the job and ready to proceed with the work of the above contract," but that they were unable to do so on account of the condition of affairs in reference to right of way, etc. In this communication they sent you a statement showing the amounts due them under and by virtue of the contract, and for which they made a claim against the highway department, the amount of the claims being $3,756.19.

After some negotiations in reference to the matter of adjusting the differences, the contractors sent an itemized statement, agreeing to take $1,846.75 in full of their claims against the state, agreeing to accept this amount and give up the contract, and allow your department to proceed with the same in whatever manner you might decide.

Under all the above, the question is as to whether it would be legal for you to adjust these differences with A. W. McDonald & Co. and release them from their contract, or whether you should attempt to hold said contractors to the contract and either compel them to finish the contract or you take it over and complete it under force account and hold the contractors and their bondsmen for the difference between the contract price and the amount that will be expended by you in completing the same under force account.

It will be seen that there is no contention as to the facts; your department and the contractors agreeing as to the facts. Even the amount suggested by the contractors as a basis of settlement seems fair and just to you.

The question is, what ought to be done? It is hardly necessary to say that there are no statutory provisions controlling in matters of this kind. Hence we look to the principles of the common law in order to ascertain what ought to be done. The question immediately arises in my mind as to what would be right between man and man, under similar circumstances. If we were to apply the rule of all rules which ought to lie at the basis of all our dealings, namely, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," to what conclusion ought we to come in this matter? It is my opinion that the state ought to deal as fairly with its citizens as it expects its citizens to deal with each other. It ought not to take advantage of the fact that it is sovereign.

In the case under consideration it is admitted that the contractors entered in good faith upon the work almost immediately upon being awarded the contract; that they continued the work until forced to quit because the right of way had not been secured by the county commissioners; that they have been prevented from prosecuting the work to a finish for many months, due to no fault of theirs; that at all times the contractors have been ready, willing and able to proceed with the work and complete the same according to contract; that they gave notice time after time of the damage they were suffering, due to increase in price of labor and material, and that during the time said work has been delayed the price of labor and material has greatly increased.

Now, applying the fundamental principles above set out, which ought to control in dealings between man and man, to the admitted state of facts in this matter, to what conclusion ought we to come? Yes, to what conclusion must we come? In good conscience and morals these contractors ought not to be held to the provisions of their contract with the state. Not only ought they not to be held, but it is my opinion that they cannot be held under the law, if they should decide to assert their rights under it. And it follows, if your department decides to complete the work under force account, that you could not hold the contractors, nor their bondsmen, for the difference between the contract price and the price at which you would be able to complete the work.

So answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that if the contractors will settle on a basis which is fair to the state, you ought to settle the differences and release them from their contract. So far as the law controlling in the case is concerned, I advise you that you have authority to settle. The terms upon which you settle is a matter for you to decide. To be sure, you will be careful that the rights of the state are conserved, if settlement be made.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PROVISION—IN PROPOSAL FOR HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION—THAT NO PART OF BID WILL BE BINDING—UNLESS TOTAL BID IS ACCEPTED—IS PROPER AND LEGAL.

A provision in a proposal for the construction of highways, in which separate bids are made upon different items of labor and material, to the effect that no part of the bid will be binding unless the total bid is accepted, is proper and legal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

HON. HARRY CORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In an oral communication of recent date you asked my opinion as to the legality of proposal for construction of highways used in your county, a copy of which proposal you then submitted to me. This proposal reads as follows:

"PROPOSAL FOR CONSTRUCTION OF

located in_____township, Putnam county, Ohio.

"TO THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND ENGINEER OF THE COUNTY OF PUTNAM, STATE OF OHIO:

"Gentlemen:—The undersigned hereby declare that he has carefully examined the specifications and drawings in connection with this improvement, and will provide all necessary machinery, tools, apparatus and other means of construction, and do all the work and furnish all the material called for by said specifications for this improvement, and to the acceptance of the county commissioners and engineer of said county, for the following prices, to wit:

"Total bid $_____
"The above bid to be binding only on condition that total bid be accepted.
* * *"

The question in the minds of your county commissioners is as to whether the following stipulation attached to the bid is a legal one, or not:

> "The above bid to be binding only on condition that total bid be accepted."

The effect of this stipulation is to require that but one contract be let for any given piece of road and that contracts cannot be let for different items entering into the improvement, such as labor, material, etc. That is, a bidder upon a certain piece of work cannot ask that he be given the contract for furnishing the labor, because his bid upon this item is lowest, and another bidder ask that he be given the contract for furnishing the material, or certain parts of it, because his bid upon this item is lowest. But the contract must be let upon the basis of the total bid. This, I think, is what the statutes contemplate, and seems evident from a construction of the statutes providing for the receiving of bids by county commissioners.

Section 6945 G. C. provides for the advertising for bids for the improvement of highways, and the latter part of said section reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners may let the work as a whole or in convenient sections as may be determined. They shall award the contract to the lowest and best bidder."

From this language it will be seen that, while the work may be divided up into different sections and a contract let for the work upon each section, yet there is no provision made for the letting of the contract for different items entering into the work or any section of the same. Further, the contract shall be awarded to the lowest and best bidder; that is, the lowest and best bidder for the work as a whole.

Section 6946 G. C. provides that if no bids are made within the estimate, the county commissioners may amend the estimate and again proceed to advertise for bids. The language here also infers that the bids must be made within the total estimate, and not within estimates placed upon different items entering into the work.

The same conclusion must be drawn also from the provisions of section 6947 G. C., which section provides for the bond to be given by the contractor.

So that it is my opinion that the said clause attached to the bid is entirely legal and is in conformity to the evident meaning of the statutes in reference to bids.

We might with more propriety ask the question as to whether it is legal for the county commissioners to compel bidders to bid separately on different items entering into the work as set out in the form of bid submitted; but I can see nothing whatever improper or illegal in such a requirement. It might be of assistance to the county commissioners in arriving at the conclusion as to who is the lowest and best bidder.

On May 13, 1915, my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, passed upon a question similar to this, which opinion is found in Vol. I of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, p. 724. In discussing the proposition he used the following language:

> "I learn by inquiry that certain regulations have been adopted by your department, and among these regulations are provisions to the effect that contractors in bidding upon intercounty highway improvements must use a blank form of proposal prescribed by the highway department; that the highway commissioner may, when in his judgment it is proper, require separate bids on separate items; and that the amount of a contractor's bid must be written out in the bid in words and also set forth in figures, and that this must be done in ink. The requirement that ink must be used is printed upon the blank form of proposal furnished by the highway department. I am unable to say that any of these requirements are unreasonable or that under the provision of section 1202 G. C. above quoted, the highway commissioner is without authority to make any of the regulations in question."

I am of the opinion that the reasoning of Mr. Turner is correct.

I am aware that section 1202 G. C., which Mr. Turner was construing, provides that the bids > "shall conform to such other regulations as the state highway commissioner may direct;"

while the section controlling the county commissioners in this matter has no such a provision; but the general powers given to the county commissioners under these sections would give them the implied power to provide such a form for bidders.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that a provision in a proposal, for the construction of any highway, in which separate bids are made upon different items of labor and material, to the effect that no part of the bid will be binding unless the total bid is accepted, is proper and legal.

The form submitted also contains certain provisions in reference to the matter of extras furnished in the completion of the improvement. I am not asked to pass upon this part of the proposal and hence am not expressing any opinion in reference to its legality.

In rendering the within opinion I am not unmindful of the provisions of section 2362 which reads as follows:

> "An officer, board or other authority of the state, a county, township, city, village, school or road district or of any public institution belonging thereto, authorized to contract for the erection, repair, alteration or rebuilding of a public building, institution, bridge, culvert, or improvement and required by law to advertise and receive proposals for furnishing of materials and doing the work necessary for the erection thereof, shall require separate and distinct proposals to be made for furnishing such materials or doing such work or both, in their discretion, for each separate and distinct trade or kind of mechanical labor, employment or business entering into the improvement."

I do not believe, however, that the provisions of this section were meant to apply to the matter of repairing, improving or constructing highways, and this for three reasons:

1. It will be noted that this section is found in title IX, the subject of which is "Building Regulations." This title is subdivided into (a) State Buildings; (b) County Buildings and Bridges; (c) General Provisions. Thus the whole title deals with buildings and bridges which would not properly include public highways.

2. A careful reading of the section will disclose that it was not likely intended to apply to public highways. The language is "authorized to contract for the erection, repair, alteration or rebuilding." None of these terms could apply to public highways, other than the word "repair." The language further is "of a public building, institution, bridge, culvert or improvement." None of these terms could apply to a public highway with the possible exception of "improvement." But as it is a general term used in connection with specific terms, it would include only matters similar to those expressed in the specific terms. The language further is "for the erection thereof." "Erection thereof" applies to all matters enumerated herein, but these words could not, with propriety, be made to apply to public highways.

3. The Cass highway act is a full, complete and comprehensive act, embodying within itself every provision necessary to do the work it was intended to provide for. It is not in any wise dependent upon other acts to give it force and vitality.

From all of the above it is my opinion that the provisions of section 2362 G. C. do not apply to the question submitted by you.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BANK—MAY NOT INVEST MORE THAN SIXTY PER CENT. OF ITS PAID-IN CAPITAL STOCK AND SURPLUS IN BANKING BUILDING AND REAL ESTATE ON WHICH SAME IS SITUATED—WHERE INVESTMENT IN EXCESS OF LIMITATION AND COMPANY TAKES OVER BUILDING AND REAL ESTATE—BANK MAY NOT INVEST IN STOCK—UNTIL SAME HAS PAID DIVIDENDS FOR FIVE CONSECUTIVE YEARS—MAY PURCHASE BONDS OF SAID COMPANY—SUBJECT TO APPROVAL OF SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS—SUCH INVESTMENT LIMITED TO TWENTY PER CENT OF CAPITAL AND SURPLUS.

A bank, possessing the powers of a commercial bank, savings bank, trust company and safe deposit company, may not invest more than 60 per cent. of its paid-in capital stock and surplus in a banking building and real estate whereon the same is located. In case such limitation is exceeded and a building company is formed to take over the building and real estate of the bank; held:

(1) The bank cannot invest in the stock of such building company until such company has paid dividends for five years next prior to the investment.

(2) If such building company legally issues bonds, the bank may invest in such bonds if authorized by the affirmative vote of the majority of the board of directors or by the executive committee. Such investment would be limited to 20 per cent. of the capital and surplus of the bank. It would also be subject to the approval of the superintendent of banks and he could at any time order such bonds sold within six months.

(3) The bank could lease the building on said real estate subject to the provisions of section 10210 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

HON. PHIL. C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On February 10, 1917, you asked my opinion upon the following facts:

> A certain bank, under your supervisioon, had for about twelve years owned a lot upon which was situated an old two-story brick building in which the bank transacted its business until last April. At that time the bank finding that it needed better quarters decided to wreck the old building and erect a new one for the use of the bank; the new building to have offices for rental purposes in addition to the space to be occupied by the bank.
> The estmiate on the cost of the new building, made in 1915, was approximately $150,000.00. The bank entered into contracts on this basis providing for the wrecking of the old building and the construction of the new. It moved out of the old building and turned the same over to the contractors who immediately wrecked the old building and began the construction of the new.
> In May, 1916, the contractors informed the bank that owing to the increased cost of labor and material the cost of the new building would be much higher than the estimate. At that time the foundations were laid and much of the material was on the ground. The building is now nearing completion, and the quarters of the bank will probably be completed by June 1st.
> The cost of the building will be over $200,000.00. The capital of the bank is $125,000.00, and the surplus $140,000.00. The amount of the investment will, therefore, be over the maximum allowed by statute. The superintendent of banks has suggested that in order for the bank to keep within the law a new company should be formed to take over the building when it is completed. The bank desires, in case such a company is formed, that it may take and hold such an amount of stock in the new company as will be within the percentage limit provided by statute, and your request is as to whether this can be done.

The bank possesses commercial, savings, trust and safe deposit powers, and the limit which it may invest in real estate, together with the buildings thereon, for banking purposes is 60 per cent. Section 9753 of the General Code is as follows:

"A commercial bank may purchase, lease, hold and convey real estate only as follows:

"(a) Real estate whereon is erected or may be erected a building or buildings useful for the convenient transaction of its business, and from portions of which, not required for its use, a revenue may be derived; but the cost of such building or buildings and the real estate whereon they are erected, in no case shall exceed sixty per cent. of its paid-in capital and surplus;

"(b) Such as is mortgaged or conveyed to it in good faith by way of security for loans made by or money due to such corporation;

"(c) Such as has been purchased by it at sales upon the foreclosure of mortgages owned by it, or on judgments or decrees obtained or rendered for debts due to it, or in settlements effected to secure such debts. All real property referred to in this paragraph shall be sold by such corporation within five years after it vested therein, unless upon application by the board of directors, the superintendent of banks extend the time within which such sales shall be made;

"(d) Such corporation also shall have power by lease to acquire a suitable building for the convenient transaction of its business, and from portions of which, not needed for its own use, a revenue may be derived."

This limitation of 60 per cent. fixed for commercial banks applies also to savings banks and trust companies. The limitation for safe deposit companies is 50 per cent., but I take it the provision as to commercial banks would undoubtedly govern.

As the capital of the bank is $125,000.00 and its surplus $140,000.00, the limit which it could invest in such real estate would be $159,000.00; and as the cost of the building which it is now erecting will be more than $200,000.00, this investment is prohibited by statute.

As to the suggestion that a "new holding company be formed to take over the building when it is completed," I presume such a company could be formed, and could acquire the real estate of the bank by virtue of section 10210 G. C., which is as follows:

"A corporation organized for the purpose of constructing and maintaining buildings to be used for hotels, storerooms, offices, warehouses, and factories, may acquire by purchase or lease, and hold, use, mortgage and lease all such real estate or personal property as is necessary, for such purpose. But no such corporation shall acquire or mortgage any real or lease-hold estate, or lease it for a period exceeding, with all privileges of renewal, the term of five years, without the consent of the holders of two-thirds of the stock, obtained at a meeting called for that purpose, written notice of which was given to each stockholder, either personally, or deposited in the postoffice, properly addressed and duly stamped, not less than ten days before the day fixed for such meeting. Nothing herein shall authorize corporations to buy and sell, or to deal in real estate for profit."

In case such a building company is formed to take over the real estate of the bank, including the building when completed, the bank could not take stock in such company for the reason that the only authority for the investment by a bank in stocks of a corporation is found in section 9765 G. C., relating to savings banks, and section 9781, relating to trust companies, and in both cases the investment is limited to "stocks which have paid dividends for five consecutive years next prior to the investment."

The stock of this building company would not be a proper investment for the bank until it paid dividends for the prescribed time.

Under paragraph (b) of section 9765, if the new company issued bonds, in the manner provided by law, then the bank could properly invest in such bonds, if such investment were authorized by the affirmative vote of the majority of the board of directors or by the executive committee. This investment would be subject to the approval of the superintendent of banks and he could order any such bonds sold within six months. This investment in bonds, in case it were made, would also be subject to the 20 per cent. limitation provided by section 9790 G. C., which is as follows:

"Not more than twenty per cent. of the capital and surplus of a corporation doing business under this chapter shall be invested in any one stock security or loan unless it be in bonds or other interest bearing obligations enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section ninety-seven hundred and fifty-eight, or in a building and vaults."

The 60 per cent. limitation provided by section 9753 for direct investment in real estate would not apply.

In case the building company is formed to take over the building the bank could lease the same under paragraph (d) of section 9753 G. C.

To summarize:—Upon the facts as stated by you the investment by the bank in this real estate and building located thereon exceeds the limitation provided by statute and should not be allowed. In case a new building company is formed to take over the building and real estate, the bank cannot invest in any of such stock.

If the new building company issues bonds the bank may invest in the same subject to the 20 per cent. limitation, and also subject to the approval of the superintendent of banks.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

NEWSPAPER—PUBLISHING DELINQUENT TAX LIST—SHOULD BE PAID FOR LIST AS IT IS FIRST PUBLISHED—ALTHOUGH PART STRICKEN OUT BETWEEN FIRST AND SECOND PUBLICATION—NOT ENTITLED TO PAY FOR SETTING UP DESCRIPTIONS STRICKEN OUT BEFORE FIRST PUBLICATION.

1. When delinquent tax list is published under section 5704 of the General Code, and the newspaper, upon the request of the county auditor, strikes out certain names from the list between the first and second publication, the newspaper should be paid for the publication of the list upon the basis of the first publication.

2. The newspaper is not entitled to pay for setting up descriptions of tracts, etc., in connection with names of delinquents stricken out from the list before the first publication.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 3, 1917, as follows:

"Section 5704 G. C. provides for the publication of the list of delinquent lands weekly for two weeks between the twentieth day of December and the second Tuesday of February, next ensuing, etc.

"Section 5706 G. C. provides for the fees of publication of the delinquent land list.

"In most counties of the state, between the first and second publication of this notice, many people pay their taxes and have their names removed from the published list.

"Question 1. In paying for the publication of this list, should the county auditor make his calculation upon the first or the last issue of this publication?

"Question 2. Is the county, in paying for the publication of delinquent lists, required to pay for descriptions set up by the printer but removed before the first publication of the list because of the payment of the tax?"

Sections 5704, 5705 and 5706 General Code read:

"Sec. 5704. Each county auditor shall cause the lists of delinquent lands in his county to be published weekly for two weeks between the twentieth day of December, and the second Tuesday in February next ensuing in one newspaper in the English language, printed and of general circulation in the county, and one newspaper of the German language if there is such newspaper printed, published and of general circulation therein. There shall be attached to the list a notice that the delinquent lands will be sold by the county treasurer, as provided by law.

"Sec. 5705: Such notice shall be in substance as follows:

"DELINQUENT TAX SALE.

"The lands, lots and parts of lots returned delinquent by the treasurer of ---------- county, with the taxes and penalty charged thereon, agreeably to law, are contained and described in the following list, viz.: (here insert the list with the name or names of the owner or owners of the said respective tracts of land, or town lots, as designated on the duplicate.) And notice is hereby given that the whole of such several tracts, lots or parts of lots, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the taxes and penalty charged thereon, will be sold by the county treasurer at the court house in such county on the second Tuesday of February, _____, unless the taxes and penalty are paid before that time, and that the sale will be continued from day to day, until the several tracts, lots and parts of lots, have been sold or offered for sale.

"Sec. 5706. The publishers of newspapers, for advertising the delinquent and forfeited list of the several counties, and the notice of sale shall be entitled to receive a sum not exceeding the following rates: For the notice of sale, ten dollars; for designating the several school districts, townships, villages and cities, and the several wards in a city, fifty cents each; and for each tract of land, city or town lot, or part of lot, contained in each of such lists, thirty cents. A greater sum than one-half of the taxes and penalties, due on any tract, lot, or part of lot shall not be allowed for advertising such tract, lot, or part of lot. Such property shall not be published in a list, as delinquent, if the taxes and penalty thereon had been paid on or before the twentieth day of December."

These sections contemplate that the county auditor will furnish to the newspapers a list of the delinquent tax lands and owners of the same sometime shortly after the 20th day of December, and that this list shall be "published weekly for two weeks between the 20th day of December and the 2nd Tuesday of February next ensuing." The fees fixed by section 5706 General Code are for "advertising the delinquent and forfeited list of the several counties and the notice of sale." This means that the fees enumerated in that section are to be paid to the newspaper when it has published the list according to law, viz., weekly for two weeks. The law in fixing the rate assumes that the entire list, as first published, will be published a second time, and the fees allowed a newspaper are for publishing the list twice. It is not possible, under the statute, to allow half of these fees for the first publication and half for the second. The statute simply allows the payment of the fee to the newspaper when the lists are published, according to law, which means after the list has appeared in such paper the second time.

The fact that some of the taxes listed have been paid does not make it necessary to strike them from the list after the first publication, for the law recognizes that many of the lands listed may be redeemed before the day of the sale.

Section 5705 provides in part that the notice of sale shall state that the lands listed will be sold on a certain day "unless the taxes and penalty are paid before that time." Section 5706 G. C. lays down but one prohibition in regard to the publication of tracts and names, and that is "that such property shall not be published in a list as delinquent if the taxes and penalty thereon had been paid on or before the 20th day of December."

From these provisions it is clear that the legislature recognized the fact that many delinquent in the list published might redeem their properties before the day of sale. I do not believe, therefore, that the county auditor has any authority in law to order the newspaper to strike out the names and property descriptions relating to taxes paid since the first publication. However, the question is, if he does so and the newspaper strikes these names out before the second publication, is it to receive its pay for the publishing of this list according to the first or second publication. Ordinarily the newspaper could receive money for only the names and tracts published twice, since this is the only complete publication. In that event they would receive their pay according to the second publication, this being the only list twice published. It seems to me, however, in the case referred to, this strict application of the law would be both improper and unjust. The only reason the newspaper does not publish some of the names a second time is that the first publication has accomplished the purpose of the advertisement. The taxes have been paid into the county treasury and the county auditor, as a favor to these parties paying, asks the newspaper to strike out their names in the second publication. There is no warrant in law for the auditor doing this. He simply makes the request as a matter of accommodation to the taxpayers affected who wish to be relieved of further embarrassment. The newspaper is not compelled to heed the auditor's request since it has already entered into the contract and proceeded with it to the extent of publishing the list the first time. However, the newspaper, as a matter of accommodation to the auditor, and to the parties who have paid their taxes since the first publication, strikes these names from the list before the second publication. Under these circumstances it seems to me that the county would be estopped from claiming that the names stricken out of the list before the second publication were not legally published, and it is my opinion that the newspaper should be paid for the publication of the delinquent list on the basis of the first advertisement.

Answering your second question: After the county auditor has furnished the newspaper with the delinquent tax list and the newspaper has begun preparation for the publication of the same, I do not believe the county auditor has any right to order it to strike out any names. The contract is already entered into, and it is my belief that if the newspapers should refuse to strike out the names and publish the entire list as given to it by the county auditor originally, it would be entitled to receive pay for the entire publication. However, in the case you refer to the newspaper saw fit to accede to the request of the county auditor and strike out certain names prior to the first publication. Inasmuch as the newspaper accepted this revised list from the county auditor and did not, in fact, publish the names and tracts stricken out by the auditor before the first publication, it is my opinion that such newspaper cannot receive pay for any descriptions set up by the printer or any work done in connection with any of the names or tracts stricken out by the auditor and not in fact published by the paper.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PRISONER—SENTENCED FOR LIFE FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER—SHOULD BE CONVEYED TO PENITENTIARY WITHIN FIVE DAYS AFTER SENTENCE—SECTION 13695 G. C. DOES NOT APPLY.

When the court sentences a prisoner to a life term in the Ohio penitentiary for murder in the first degree, such prisoner should be conveyed to the penitentiary within five days after such sentence, according to the provisions of section 13720 General Code.

The one hundred day provision of section 13695 General Code has no application to such cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

HON. HECTOR S. YOUNG, Prosecuting Attorney, Marion, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 11, 1917, as follows:

"I beg leave to submit to your office for an opinion thereon the following inquiry:

"(a) A party is convicted of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation of mercy. What period of time must intervene between the day of sentence and the day appointed for the execution thereof?

"Permit me to call your attention to sections 12399 and 13695 of the General Code of Ohio. You will note that section 12399 reads in part as follows:

"'Murder in the first degree, as defined in this chapter, shall continue to be a capital offense within the meaning of the constitution * * *.'

"Section 13695 reads in part as follows:

"'In conviction of a capital offense, at least one hundred days shall intervene between the day of sentence, and the day appointed for the execution thereof.'

"I will say to you that on May 7th last, a prisoner was sentenced in Marion county, under conviction of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation of mercy, and I will greatly appreciate an early reply to this inquiry."

Section 12399 General Code, to which you refer, reads:

"Murder in the first degree, as defined in this chapter, shall continue to be a capital offense within the meaning of the constitution, and no person convicted thereof shall be recommended for pardon by the board of pardons or for parole by the board of managers of the penitentiary, except upon proof of innocence established beyond a reasonable doubt."

Sections 12400, 13695 and 13720 G. C. read:

"Sec. 12400. Whoever purposely, and either of deliberate and premeditated malice, or by means of poison, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate rape, arson, robbery, or burglary, kills another is guilty of murder in the first degree and shall be punished by death unless the jury trying the accused recommend mercy, in which case the punishment shall be imprisonment in the penitentiary during life."

"Sec. 13695. If the defendant has nothing to say, or if he shows no sufficient cause why judgment should not be pronounced, the court shall pronounce the judgment provided by law. In convictions of a capital offense at least one hundred days shall intervene between the day of sentence and the day appointed for the execution thereof."

"Sec. 13720. A person sentenced to the penitentiary, or Ohio state reformatory, unless the execution thereof is suspended, shall be conveyed to the penitentiary or Ohio state reformatory by the sheriff of the county in which the conviction was had, within five days after such sentence, and delivered into the custody of the warden of the penitentiary, or superintendent of the Ohio state reformatory, with a copy of such sentence there to be kept until the term of his imprisonment expires, or he is pardoned. If the execution of such sentence is suspended, and the judgment be afterward affirmed, he shall be conveyed to the penitentiary or Ohio state reformatory within five days after the court directs the execution of sentence; provided, however, that the trial judge, or any judge of said court in said subdivision may, in his discretion, and for good cause shown, extend the time of such conveyance."

I take it from your request what you have in mind is that the provision of section 12399 General Code that "murder in the first degree, as defined in this chapter, shall continue to be a capital offense within the meaning of the constitution," makes this crime a "capital offense" within the meaning of section 13695 G. C., which provides in part that:

> "In convictions of a capital offense at least one hundred days shall intervene between the day of sentence and the day appointed for the execution thereof," and that therefore the execution of the sentence in a first degree murder case, even when the jury has recommended mercy, and punishment is life imprisonment, must be postponed for one hundred days.

Section 12399 General Code, quoted above, provides that murder in the first degree, as defined in that chapter, shall continue to be a capital offense within the meaning of the constitution. The only constitutional provision of which I am aware in regard to a capital offense is article I, section 9 of the Constitution, which provides:

> "All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses where the proof is evident, or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required; nor excessive fines imposed; nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted."

The evident intent of section 12399 General Code is to bring all persons convicted of the statutory crime of murder in the first degree within the provisions of article I, section 9 of the Constitution relating to bail, since without this specific provision in section 12399 General Code it might be argued that the constitutional provision applies only to murder in the first degree, as known to and defined by the common law.

Section 13695 General Code provides in part:

> "In convictions of a capital offense at least one hundred days shall intervene between the day of sentence and the day appointed for the execution thereof."

It might be contended that since the crime of murder in the first degree is a capital offense, section 13695 applies to prisoners convicted of murder in the first degree, even when the jury recommends mercy and the court sentences the defendant to life imprisonment. However, I do not think this argument could long be maintained.

It will be noted from a reading of the statute that it provides "one hundred days shall intervene between the day of sentence and the day appointed for the execution thereof." Now when the court imposes upon a prisoner a sentence for life there is no day "appointed for the execution thereof." The execution of this sentence continues during the remainder of the prisoner's life, unless the sentence is terminated sooner by pardon or otherwise. The words "the day appointed for the execution thereof" clearly show that the legislature had in mind the execution of such sentence for a capital offense as could be executed on a day appointed, which could only refer to the execution of the sentence of death. That this view is correct is made clear from a glimpse of section 13695. This section was originally section 172 of an act passed January 5, 1871, volume 88, page 3, and entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'an act to establish a code of criminal procedure for the state of Ohio,' passed May 6, 1869 (O. L., Vol. 66, p. 287)." Section 172 of this act read:

"When a person shall be convicted of an offense, and shall give notice to the court of his intention to apply for a writ of error, the court may, in its discretion, on application of the person so convicted, suspend the execution of the sentence or judgment against him until the next term of the court, or for such period, not beyond the session of the court, as will give the person so convicted a reasonable time to apply for such writ; provided, when any such conviction is of an offense the punishment whereof is capital, at least one hundred days shall intervene between the date of such sentence and judgment, and the day appointed for the execution thereof."

The words "when any such conviction is of an offense the punishment whereof is capital," clearly demonstrates that the one hundred day provision of the act applied only to the death sentence. For this reason it is my view that the one hundred day provision of section 13695 has no application to a sentence for murder in the first degree when the jury has recommended mercy and the sentence of the court is life imprisonment.

Section 13720 General Code, referring to the time in which a prisoner sentenced to the penitentiary or reformatory must be conveyed to such institution, and set out in full above, operates upon all prisoners sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary and Ohio state reformatory, regardless of the crime for which they are sentenced.

In the case you refer to the prisoner has been sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for life for the crime of murder in the first degree, and because of the above considerations it is my opinion that this prisoner should have been conveyed to the penitentiary within five days after his sentence. This five day period having expired on May 12th, the sheriff should immediately convey this prisoner to the Ohio penitentiary.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—AFTER BIDS RECEIVED—CANNOT CHANGE SPECIFICATIONS, ETC.—BY ELIMINATING PART OF THE WORK—WITHOUT POWER TO ACCEPT BID ON REMAINDER—CONTRACT CANNOT BE AWARDED WHERE BID IN EXCESS OF AMOUNT APPROPRIATED FOR THAT PURPOSE—NONE BUT LOWEST BID CAN BE ACCEPTED—ALL BIDS MAY BE REJECTED.

A board of education is without power to change the plans and specifications for a school house after bids have been received by striking out the lathing, plastering, blackboards, painting, finishing work, roofing, sheet metal work and electrical wiring and without power to accept the bid on only the remainder of such plans and specifications.

A contract cannot be awarded where the total amount of the lowest bid is in excess of the amount of money in the treasury appropriated for that purpose.

None but the lowest bid shall be accepted but the board may reject all bids.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On April 24, 1917, I received a letter from Mr. G. W. Adams, city solicitor at Wellsville, Ohio, and the proposition he submits for my opinion seems to me to be of such general interest that I am therefore directing my answer to you. The question reads as follows:

> "The board of education of the Wellsville school district in 1916 issued bonds in the amount of $95,000.00 for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting and constructing thereon a school house and furnishing the same, and after proper advertisement for bids for the erection of said school house, the lowest bid for general construction (copy of which is herewith enclosed) was $86,980.00. The fund after purchase of site and payment to architect was $76,122.68. The board awarded to the lowest bidder the general construction, eliminating lathing and plastering, blackboards, painting and finishing work, roofing and sheet metal work and electrical wiring at the price of $69,760.00. The contractor refused to accept the part of the contract awarded to him under the proposal for the reason he bid on the contract in an entirety.
> "The question now arises can the board accept the next lowest bid under said proposal for that portion of the work awarded to the lowest bidder and by him refused.
> "As the board of education has not sufficient money to complete the erecting and furnishing of said school house in accordance with the plans and specifications adopted and under which proposals for bids were asked, it is their intention to erect so much of said building as can be done with the funds in their hands, that is, complete said building to the second story and place thereon a temporary roof. This will give the board of education sixteen additional class rooms which are greatly needed. Can this be done without first advertising in accordance with the statute proposals for bids for just such work as the board intends to complete?"

> "When a board of education determines to build, repair, enlarge or furnish a school house or school houses, or make any improvement or repair provided for in this chapter, the cost of which will exceed in city districts, fifteen hundred dollars, and in other districts five hundred dollars, except in cases of urgent necessity, or for the security and protection of school property, it must proceed as follows:
> "1. For the period of four weeks, the board shall advertise for bids in some newspaper of general circulation in the district and two such papers, if there are so many. If no newspaper has a general circulation therein, then by posting such advertisement in three public places therein. Such advertisement shall be entered in full by the clerk, on the record of the proceedings of the board.
> "2. The bids, duly sealed up, must be filed with the clerk by twelve o'clock, noon, of the last day stated in the advertisement.
> "3. The bids shall be opened at the next meeting of the board, be publicly read by the clerk, and entered in full on the records of the board.
> "4. Each bid must contain the name of every person interested therein, and shall be accompanied by a sufficient guarantee of some disinterested person, that if the bid be accepted, a contract will be entered into, and the performance of it properly secured.
> "5. When both labor and materials are embraced in the work bid for, each must be separately stated in the bid, with the price thereof.

"6. None but the lowest bid shall be accepted. The board in its discretion may reject all the bids, or accept any bid for both labor and material for such improvement or repair, which is the lowest in the aggregate.

"7. Any part of a bid which is lower than the same part of any other bid, shall be accepted, whether the residue of the bid is higher or not; and if it is higher, such residue must be rejected.

"8. The contract must be between the board of education and the bidder. The board shall pay the contract price for the work, when it is completed, in cash, and may pay monthly estimates as the work progresses.

"9. When two or more bids are equal, in the whole, or in any part thereof, and are lower than any others, either may be accepted, but in no case shall the work be divided between such bidders.

"10. When there is reason to believe that there is collusion or combination among the bidders, or any number of them, the bids of those concerned therein shall be rejected."

That none but the lowest responsible bid can be accepted is clear.

In State ex rel. Ross v. Board of Education, 42 O. S., 374, the relator brought suit in mandamus to compel the board of education to award him a contract for the construction and completion of a high school building. Relator demanded "all or none" of the contract. The court held that the board could let the contract only to the lowest responsible bidder unless all bids were rejected as a whole, at which time subdivision 7 of said section 7623 would attach. In your case, however, the board of education attempted to change the bid and only allow a portion of the work. This, surely, the board had no right to do. The contractors who bid upon contracts have a right to know the extent of the contract to be let. To say that bids would be received on an entire contract and accepted on a part would be manifestly unfair to any bidder. If the very parts which your board excluded from the lowest bid had been excluded from the proposition to be let or advertised to be let, the bids upon what remained of the contract to be let might have been decidedly different. This question was considered in McAlexander et al., v. Haviland Village School District et al., 7 O. N. P. (n. s.) 590, in which the court held that a contract for the building of a school house awarded to a contractor who has been permitted to change his bid by omitting various items and thus reducing the aggregate cost to the amount realized from the sale of bonds is a contract made without notice or competition and is illegal and void under section 7623 G. C. Nor can a bid be amended after it is once in the hands of the board.

In McGreevy v. Board of Education, 20 O. C. C., 114, in an action brought to recover the balance upon a contract for the excavation for a high school building, wherein the defense was that the contract entered into was illegal, null and void, for the reason that it was not made according to the statutes of this state covering contracts of that kind, in that the plaintiff was permitted after he made his bid for the work to change the amount of his bid, and it being claimed that that was done without authority of law and that the contract which the board of education entered into under such amended bid was void and no recovery could be had upon the contract, the court held:

"A contract between the board of education and the lowest bidder for the excavation for a school house, based upon a bid which the contractor was allowed to amend on account of an alleged mistake which did not appear on the face of the original bid, is void under section 3988 of the Revised Statutes (7623 G. C.) providing the manner in which such contracts shall be awarded, although the bid as amended was still the lowest bid received. Such contract being void there can be no recovery thereon for the value of the work and labor performed thereunder."

My predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in Opinion No. 268, Annual Report of the Attorney-General for the year 1912, page 1249, held:

"It is not lawful for a board of education to permit a bidder, though he be the lowest responsible bidder on the entire work, to change his bid in any way after its submission, nor to change the plans and specifications after opening bids so as to eliminate some feature of the work or add new ones. In case the plans or specifications are changed so as to eliminate a part of the work, no bid can be accepted, but new bids must be invited."

So that I must conclude that the board had no right to change the plans after the bids were received and eliminate certain portions of the contract upon which its bid had been filed.

There is another and stronger reason why in your case the board could not accept either of the bids received. Your entire fund was $76,122.68, and whatever contract was let must be let within that amount. The provisions of section 5660 apply specifically to a matter of this kind. Said section reads, in part:

"* * * The board of education of a school district shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money unless the * * * clerk thereof * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. Money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be redeemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the * * * board of education is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

The decisions holding the language of the above section to be mandatory are numerous and have held without exception that before a building contract can be let by a board of education the money from which payment is to be made covering said contract must be in the treasury and certificate of the clerk must be on file before said contract is let.

If, then, the bids were more than the amount of money in the treasury, and if the board of education or the bidder has no power to change such bids after the same have been opened, then the board of education was entirely without authority to award said contract to said Charles A. Vorhes and the bids should all be rejected by the board, and the only way the statute provides for the board to proceed further is by advertising for new bids.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF BLADENSBURG RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, KNOX COUNTY, OHIO—BOND ISSUE—INVALID WHEN RESOLUTION SUBMITTED AT SPECIAL MEETING—WITHOUT WRITTEN NOTICE HAVING BEEN SERVED ON MEMBERS.

Under sections 4750 and 4751 G. C. a bond issue is invalid when the resolution for same was submitted at a special meeting of the board, without written notice having been served on the members.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:

"RE:—Bond issue by the board of education of Bladensburg rural school district, Knox county, Ohio, in the sum of $10,000.00 for the purpose of building and equipping a new school building in said school district."

I am herewith returning to you, without approval, transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Bladensburg rural school district relating to the above bond issue.

The issue of these bonds has been provided for under the assumed authority of sections 7625 et seq. General Code, which provides for the issue of bonds for said purpose on a vote of the electors of the school district.

The meeting of February 16, 1917, at which the resolution submitting the proposition of this bond issue to the vote of the electors of the school district was a special meeting from which one member of the board was absent, and there is nothing in the transcript to show that this meeting was called in such manner as to make the same a legal meeting in the manner provided by section 4751 General Code.

In response to a request of this department for additional information as to the manner in which this meeting and the special meeting of January 9, 1917, were called, the clerk of the board of education, in letter under date of May 10, 1917, says:

"In reply to yours of the 7th in regard to our special meetings of January 9, and February 16; by our rules and by-laws the president notifies each member in person orally if possible, if not then by writing. The two meetings in which you referred to, each member was seen in person and notified when and where the meetings would be held."

It is obvious that this procedure was not in compliance with the provisions of section 4751 with reference to the manner in which special meetings are called.

Section 4750 of the General Code provides that no meeting of a board of education not provided by its rules or by-laws shall be legal unless all the members thereof have been notified as provided in section 4751. Section 4751 G. C. provides as follows:

"A special meeting of a board of education may be called by the president or clerk thereof or by any two members by serving a written notice of the time and place of such meeting upon each member of the board either personally or at his residence or usual place of business. Such notice must be signed by the official or members calling the meeting."

Under section 4750 the board of education may, by rule carried into its record, provide for regular meetings to be held at stated periods, but I am clearly of the opinion that a rule or by-law of the board providing for the calling of meetings by the president of the board at his discretion by either written or oral notice to the members or both does not make such meetings regular meetings or a meeting provided for by rule under section 4750 of the General Code. The meeting was a special meeting in every sense of the word, and inasmuch as in the matter of calling this meeting section 4751 was not complied with, it follows that such meeting was not one of a legal nature, and the business transacted at such meeting was unauthorized.

It is always a matter of regret to be compelled to report adversely upon a bond issue where the ground of the invalidity is such as is here mentioned and where it is obvious that the meeting was one called in good faith and where the action of the board was such as would have been taken by the board had the meeting been called in strict conformity to law. However, as has been decided by the court in the case of Kattman v. Board of Education, 15 C. C. N. S., 232, the provisions of this section are mandatory. In that case it was specifically held that the proceedings of a board of education providing for an issue of bonds are invalid where the action pertaining thereto was taken at a special meeting from which one member was absent and no written notice of the meeting had been served on each member of the board either personally or at his residence or usual place of business.

Inasmuch as your purchase of these bonds was conditional upon the proceedings relating to this bond issue being in conformity to the laws of this state relating to the subject matter, and finding, as I am compelled to do, that the meeting at which the question of this bond issue was submitted to the electors of the school district was not a legal meeting, I have no discretion but to hold the bond issue invalid and to advise you not to purchase the same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

FINES—NO AUTHORITY TO PAY SAME INTO FIRE MARSHAL'S DEPARTMENT—FOR VIOLATION OF RULES OF SAID DEPARTMENT.

There is no authority in law for the payment into the fire marshal's department of fines collected in prosecutions under section 837 of the General Code for violations of the rules of the fire marshal's department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

HON. T. ALFRED FLEMING, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 17, 1917, as follows:

"The department of state fire marshal prosecuted G. V. Kern, of Adamsville, Ohio, before Justice of the Peace J. B. Carson, Zanesville, for non-compliance of an order of the department issued under the Ohio

Fire Marshal Law. An affidavit was filed by J. C. Brister, assistant fire marshal, and the case heard on March 15, 1917. Mr. Kern was fined ten dollars.

"On the 22nd we received a check for $10 from Justice Carson, with accompanying note reading as follows:

"'Enclosed find check for ten dollars, fine imposed and collected, "The State of Ohio v. G. V. Kern of Adamsville, Ohio."'

"Under date of March 27th Hon. Bert B. Buckley, my predecessor in this office, addressed the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, asking whether or not this fine should have been turned in to our department and whether we should treat the same as a revenue voucher.

"The bureau replied, directing that this matter be taken up with your office. Kindly refer to section 837 General Code, and give us a ruling on this point at your convenience."

Section 837 of the General Code, to which you refer, reads:

"Any person or persons, being the owner, occupant, lessee or agent of buildings or premises who wilfully fails, neglects or refuses to comply with any order of any officer named in the last four preceding sections, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than fifty dollars nor less than ten dollars for each day's neglect."

No provision is made here as to where the fines should be paid and to secure this information you must look to other sections of the General Code.

Section 12378 General Code reads:

"Unless otherwise required by law, an officer who collects a fine, shall pay it into the treasury of the county in which such fine was assessed, to the credit of the county general fund within twenty days after the receipt thereof, take the treasurer's duplicate receipts therefor and forthwith deposit one of them with the county auditor."

General Code section 13429 reads

"Fines collected by a justice of the peace shall be paid into the general fund of the county where the offense was committed within thirty days after collection unless otherwise provided by law."

A careful examination of the statutes discloses that the legislature has, in a number of instances, made provision for the payment of fines in a manner different from that laid down in section 12378. For instance, section 977 General Code, a part of the mine inspection act, provides:

"All fines collected by reason of prosecutions begun under the provisions of this act, shall be paid to the chief inspector of mines, and by him paid into the state treasury."

Section 1460 General Code provides for the payment of fines imposed under the fish and game laws into the state treasury. Similar provisions are found concerning fines imposed under laws relating to the practice of medicine, pharmacy, etc. Many other instances could be cited wherein the law provides that the fines imposed should be disposed of in a manner different than that laid down in section 12378 General Code, but as to fines imposed for violations of the rules of the fire marshal's department, no such special provision has been made. This being so, they should be paid into the county treasury.

Cleveland v. Jewett, 39 O. S., 27.
Mt. Vernon v. Mochart, 75 O. S., 529.

From these considerations I am of the opinion that the fine of $10.00 imposed under section 837 General Code should not have been turned over to your department and that the check for the same should now be returned to the justice of the peace referred to so that he may dispose of it according to law.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNCIL OF THE VILLAGE OF BAY, CUYAHOGA COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds in the sum of $5,000.00 issued by the village of Bay, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, covering the village's share of the cost and expense of improving Dover Center road through said village upon agreement with the county commissioners of Cuyahoga county."

I have carefully examined the transcript of proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Bay, Ohio, relating to the above issue of bonds, said proceedings and transcript thereof having heretofore been corrected to meet the requirements of this department.

As a result of my examination of these proceedings I find the same to be in accordance with the provisions of the General Code relating to the subject matter, and I am of the opinion that when properly prepared the bonds of said village will, when signed by the proper officers thereof, be valid and binding obligations of said municipality.

The officials of the village, acting under the assumption that you would prepare and print the bonds at their expense, did not comply with the request of this department to furnish bond and coupon form. I am, however, this day directing the clerk of the village to forward to me printer's proof copy of said bond and coupon form to the end that if necessary I may be able to correct the same so as to comply with legal requirements before said bonds go to print.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

FIRE MARSHAL—INVESTIGATIONS BY SAID OFFICIAL MAY BE KEPT PRIVATE—DISCRETIONARY WHETHER HE WILL PERMIT AFFIDAVIT ON FILE IN HIS OFFICE TO BE SEEN.

Since under section 832 G. C. investigation by fire marshal may in his discretion be private, and under section 838 G. C. testimony given upon investigation is not public record, it is discretionary with fire marshal whether he will permit affidavit on file in his office to be seen.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1917.

HON. T. A. FLEMING, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 14th Hon. John A. Alburn, one of the investigating committee of the bar association of Cleveland, wrote me a letter advising that said committee was to present charges against a Cleveland attorney before the trial committee of said bar association at a private hearing, beginning on Monday, May 14th. He further advised me that you have informed said committee that you are willing to present before the trial committee an affidavit and other papers relating to the Haas-McClure case, which you have among your files, if this department will approve your legal right to present such data from the fire marshal's office.

Section 832 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Investigation by or under the direction of the state fire marshal may in his discretion be private. He may exclude from the place where such investigation is held all persons other than those required to be present, and witnesses may be kept separate from each other and not allowed to communicate with each other until they have been examined."

Section 838 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal shall keep in his office a record of all fires occurring in the state, the origin of such fires and all facts, statistics and circumstances relating thereto which have been determined by investigations under the provisions of this chapter. Except the testimony given upon an investigation, such record shall be open at all times to public inspection and such portions thereof as the superintendent of insurance deems necessary shall be transcribed and forwarded to him within fifteen days from the first of January each year."

Under the provisions of section 838 it is your duty to keep a record of all fires occurring in the state and other statistics relating thereto, as the same have been determined by investigation. Such records "except the testimony given upon an investigation" shall be public documents, open to inspection. However, under the provisions of section 832, the testimony taken upon an investigation may be kept private if the state fire marshal in his discretion deems that such should be kept private. An affidavit taken during an investigation would undoubtedly be testimony, although ex parte.

I can only inform you therefore in regard to the matter contained in Mr. Alburn's letter that it is entirely within your discretion as to whether or not the affidavits on file in the case in question should be kept private.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

ELECTIONS—JUDGES AND CLERKS SHOULD FOLLOW SECTIONS 5081 AND 5088 IN MAKING RETURNS—BLANK AND UNINTELLIGIBLE BALLOTS NOT TO BE CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING WHETHER TWO-THIRDS OF VOTERS VOTING AT MUNICIPAL ELECTION FOR BOND ISSUE VOTED IN FAVOR THEREOF.

1. In all elections, judges and clerks should follow the provisions of sections 5081 and 5088 G. C. in making up the returns of said election.

2. Where the question of issuing bonds by a municipality under sections 3939 et seq. is submitted to the electors at a special or general election, in ascertaining whether two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing bonds have voted in favor thereof, blank ballots or unintelligible ballots are not to be considered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1917.

HON. W. D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted, with request for an opinion upon same, a letter from the board of deputy state supervisors of elections for Clinton county, which reads in part as follows:

> "In a municipal election for the issue of bonds, held under section 3947 of the election laws, should the judges and clerks of the election return as the total vote cast the number of names of voters voting as shown by the poll books, or should the number of votes returned as cast be calculated from the number of ballots counted exclusive of those improperly marked or the county of which was not agreed upon by the judges of election? In other words, in the meaning of the statute has a voter voted if his ballot is not properly marked?"

Section 3947 G. C. provides:

> "If two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing the bonds vote in favor thereof, the bonds shall be issued. Those who vote in favor of the proposition shall have written or printed on their ballots, 'For the issue of bonds;' and those who vote against it shall have written or printed on their ballots, 'Against the issue of bonds.'"

Section 3945 G. C. provides:

> "The election shall be held at the regular place or places of voting in the municipality, and be conducted, canvassed and certified in like manner, except as otherwise provided by law, as regular elections in the municipal corporation for the election of officers thereof."

Section 5081 G. C. provides:

> "Immediately upon the close of the polls, the number of electors entered and shown on the poll books as having voted shall be first certified therein and signed by the board of judges and clerks. Before any other or further proceedings, the president or chairman of the board shall make proclamation in a loud voice outside of the polling room, stating the number of voters so shown and certified on the poll books. Thereupon the judges, in the presence of the clerks and inspectors above provided for, shall destroy the ballots remaining unvoted."

Section 5088 G. C. provides :

"The clerks shall enter in separate columns by tallies under or opposite the names of the persons voted for, and the answers to the questions that may have been submitted as provided in the form of tally sheets, all votes thus read by the judges. After the examination of the ballots has been completed, the number of votes for each person and for the respective answers to each question submitted, shall be enumerated under the inspection of the judges and set down, as provided in the form of the tally sheets."

Section 5093 G. C. provides for the making and transmission of returns.

Section 5114 G. C. provides for the abstract of vote for municipal officers and which would govern an election for the issue of bonds in a municipality.

From a reading of the above sections of the election laws it is apparent that the election for the issue of bonds is conducted in all respects in the same manner as an election for municipal officers. It is not the function of the election officers to decide questions that might possibly be pertinent in a contest. Their duties are laid down specifically in the election sections above quoted.

Under section 5081 supra, immediately after the close of the polls the number of electors entered and shown on the poll books as having voted shall be first certified therein and signed by the board of judges and clerks.

Under section 5088 supra, the clerks shall enter in separate columns by tallies under or opposite the names of the persons voted for, and the answers to the questions that may have been submitted as provided in the form of tally sheets, all votes thus read by the judges. After the examination of the ballots has been completed, the number of votes for each person and for the respective answers to each question submitted, shall be enumerated under the inspection of the judges and set down, as provided in the form of the tally sheets.

It is the poll book and the tally sheet that under section 5093 G. C. are deposited with the clerk or auditor of a municipal corporation. There is no provision of law for the judges and clerks of the election making any other or different returns than the statute specifically prescribes. The question assumes that the judges and clerks make some sort of a calculation, determinative upon whether they count or exclude certain ballots. The sole duty of the judges in reference to the ballots is to count them as the law provides. For the same reason their sole duty in reference to determining the number of votes is to follow the directions of the statutes as found in section 5081 G. C.

From the question submitted it would look as if the board of election was concerned in having the election officers interpret that part of section 3947 G. C. which provides:

"If two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing the bonds vote in favor thereof, etc."

The meaning of these words is of no concern to the election officers as such. Their duties are purely statutory and are fully performed when they follow the specific provisions of the statute.

But it is further asked:

"In the meaning of the statute, has a voter voted if his ballot is not properly marked?"

Section 5075 G. C. provides :

> "When a person has received an official ballot from one of the election officers, and has delivered it to the election officer having charge of the ballot box at the time, and when such ballot has been deposited in the ballot box, such person shall be deemed to have voted."

This section is plain and needs no construction. When the ballot has been deposited in the ballot box, the person shall be deemed to have voted. Under the law, just prior or contemporaneous with the depositing of the ballot in the ballot box, the clerk transcribes the name of the voter upon the poll book.

So answering specifically the inquiry of April 27, 1917, it makes no difference whether the ballot is marked properly, intelligently, or not at all. When the ballot is deposited in the ballot box, the person is deemed to have voted.

Since writing the above, I am in receipt of a further communication under date of May 5, 1917, in reference to the same matter as inquired about under date of April 27. The communication states that a difference of opinion has arisen between the authorities as to what constitutes "two-thirds of the voters voting at such election" under the provision of section 3947 G. C. The inquiry probably refers to a construction of that part of section 3947 G. C. which reads:

> "If two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing the bonds vote in favor thereof, etc."

This very question was presented to the supreme court in the case of the City of Wellsville et al. v. Connor, 91 O. S. 28, and the court distinguishes sections 5122 and 3947 G. C. Under section 5122, or any other section which requires that a majority or any certain proportion of the "votes cast at the election" should be in favor of a proposition, in order that it should carry, all the votes cast at the election, including blank and unintelligent votes, must be considered. But in an election under the provisions of section 3947 G. C., the language is not "voters voting at such election," but it is "voters voting at such election upon the question," etc.

The decision of the court, as found in the first syllabus of the City of Wellsville et al. v. Connor, supra, reads as follows:

> "1. Where the question of issuing bonds by a municipality pursuant to section 3939 et seq., General Code, is submitted to the electors at a special or general election, in ascertaining whether two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing the bonds have voted in favor thereof, as required by section 3947, blank ballots or unintelligible ballots are not to be considered."

It appears, therefore, that in the election of which you speak, while this case has no control over the character of return or abstract that should be made by the election officers, which should follow the statute as hereinbefore set out, the question submitted is to be decided according to the number of voters voting on the proposition.

Trusting this answers your inquiry, I am,

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SECTION 3660—REFERRED TO IN S. B. No. 232, EIGHTY-SECOND GENERAL ASSEMBLY—SHOULD BE READ 5660.

In S. B. 232, Eighty-Second General Assembly, the reference to section 3660 in section 6, paragraph 1 should be read 5660.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1917.

HON. SUMNER E. WALTERS, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of May 3, 1917, to the following effect:

> "Having examined Senate Bill No. 232, passed by the last legislature, with a view of acting under its provisions for the benefit of some municipalities in this county, I cannot reconcile section 6, paragraph 1, in this respect:
> "'Whether in contracting such obligations the provisions of section 3806 or 3660 of the General Code were complied with or not,' as it appears to me that 3660 mentioned is not applicable and is evidently a mistake in print.
> "If that be true, would you advise what section was intended by the legislature instead of 3660?"

The paragraph quoted in your letter refers to sections 3806 and 3660 of the General Code. Section 3806 G. C. reads as follows

> "No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, first certifies to council or to the proper board, as the case may be, that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay such appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose, which certificate shall be filed and immediately recorded. The sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the corporation is discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the ordinance, resolution or order is in force."

Section 3660 of the General Code, reads as follows:

> "To suppress and restrain disorderly houses and houses of ill-fame, and to provide for the punishment of all lewd and lascivious behavior in the streets and other public places."

It is evident that these sections have no relation one to the other and that the latter section, 3660, has no relation whatever to the subject matter of the act in question and that therefore the reference to section 3660 of the General Code is a mistake.

The act in which the section and paragraph are found is entitled, "An act to authorize municipal corporations and school districts to adjust their fiscal operations to the limitations on tax levies by funding existing deficiencies, and to amend section 3940 of the General Code so as to reduce to one-half of one per cent. of the tax duplicate the amount of the total indebtedness which may be created in any one fiscal year by the council of a municipal corporation under the authority of section 3939 of the General Code.

In the preamble thereof it states that in many municipal corporations and school districts in the state deficiencies exist, or will exist; that a law has been enacted which will assess the real and personal property in municipal corporations and school districts at their true value in money and that when ample duplicates exist the said municipal corporations and school districts will be able to accumulate adequate sinking funds and meet existing deficiencies, if the same be funded, to be distributed over a series of years, and the act therefore grants authority to municipal corporations and board of education to submit to the electors the question of issuing bonds for the purpose of funding existing deficiencies of municipal corporations and school districts, and proceeds to set forth the method by which such deficiencies may be taken care of.

Section 6 of said act is a definitive section and contains the language concerning which you inquire. Section 3806, hereinbefore quoted, is the section of the General Code requiring the auditor of a city or the clerk of a village to certify that there is money in the respective treasuries to pay obligations before a contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money is entered into. Section 5660 is the corresponding section relative to counties, townships and school districts, and it is perfectly clear that the legislature intended in section 6 of the act referred to, paragraph 1, to provide

> "All obligations of the municipal corporation or school district, outstanding on July 1, 1917, and due on or before said date, or to become due thereafter during the then current fiscal year, whether in contracting such obligations the provisions of sections 3806 or 5660 of the General Code were complied with or not, for the payment of which sufficient funds are not in the treasury on July 1st, 1917."

In other words, section 3806 relative to municipal corporations, and section 5660 relative to school districts, are in pari materia. The question therefore arises as to whether or not a court would be justified in reading "3660" as "5660" in the paragraph in question.

The case of State ex rel. v. Archibald, Sheriff, 52 O. S. 1, was one involving the question as to the interpretation of an act establishing a court of insolvency. It was an action in mandamus to compel the sheriff to issue his proclamation for the election of a judge of said court on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1894, the sheriff claiming that the election for such judge was to be held on the first Tuesday after the second Monday. The act provided that the first election for such judge should be held on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in November, 1894. It was contended, however, that it was the intention of the legislature that the election should be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday, as provided by general law. The court held that the language of the act prevailed.

In the opinion the court uses language which has been followed in other cases as the correct statement of the law in this state. I desire to call attention to the language of the court on page 9, which is as follows :

> "If there is no error or mistake in this statute, it must be construed and enforced according to its letter. If there is such error or mistake, and the intention of the legislature can be ascertained, the error or mistake should be corrected by the court.

"That courts have power to correct errors and mistakes in statutes, cannot be doubted; but such errors and mistakes must be manifest beyond doubt, either on the face of the act, or when read in connection with other statutes in pari materia.

"When it thus appears beyond doubt that a statute, when read literally as printed, is impossible of execution, or will defeat the plain object of its enactment, or is senseless, or leads to absurd results or consequences, a court is authorized to regard such defects as the result of error or mistake, and to put such construction upon the statute as will correct the error or mistake, by carrying out the clear purpose and manifest intention of the legislature. The error or mistake, as well as the proper correction, must appear beyond doubt from the face of the act, or when read in connection with other acts in pari materia.

"The supreme court of Pennsylvania states the rule in these words: 'The power is undoubted, but it can only be exercised when the error is so manifest, upon an inspection of the act, as to preclude all manner of doubt, and when the correction will relieve the sense of the statute from actual absurdity, and carry out the clear purpose of the legislature.' Lancaster Co. v. Frey, 128 Pa. St., 593.

"An eminent text writer states the rule thus: 'The power to make such corrections is well established, but it is exercised only where the error is so manifest as to leave no doubt of the judicial mind as to the actual intent of the legislature.' 23 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 422."

The court then cites various cases.

There is no doubt in the instant matter that there is a manifest error occurring in the statute and by reference to the provisions of section 3806, and recognizing the related statute 5660, that the court would correct the error in order to carry out the manifest intention of the legislature.

There are numerous authorities which could be cited on the proposition above stated as, for example,

State ex rel. v. Board of Education, 16 O. C. C. 1;
Cohen v. Cleveland, 43 O. S., 193.

"So reference to other sections or statutes incorrectly made will be corrected where the context or other particulars identify the statutes or provisions intended and enable the court to follow the reference with certainty."

Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction (2nd Ed.), Sec. 410, page 796.

"Where it is manifest upon the face of the act that an error has been made in the use of words, the court may correct the error and read the statute as corrected, in order to give effect to the obvious intention of the legislature."

26 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law (2nd Ed.), page 655 (3).

"Mere verbal inaccuracies, or clerical errors in statutes in the use of words, or numbers, or in grammar, spelling or punctuation, will be corrected by the court whenever necessary to carry out the intention of the legislature as gathered from the entire act."

36 Cyc. 1126.

Answering your question, therefore, it is clear that the legislature intended to refer to section 5660 instead of 3660, and I am of the opinion that the courts would correct the error in proper proceedings.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PRISONERS—CONFINED IN WORKHOUSE AND PERFORMING LABOR AS INCIDENT TO THEIR IMPRISONMENT—NOT WITHIN PROVISIONS OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW.

Prisoners confined in a city workhouse and performing service as an incident to their imprisonment, although allowed a certain portion of their earnings while employed at work by the city under the provisions of section 2227-1 et seq. are not in the service of the city under an appointment or contract of hire and hence are not within the provisions of the workmen's compensation act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 30, 1917, you submitted for my opinion the following request:

> "Are prisoners confined in the workhouse of a city within the provisions of the workmen's compensation act?"

Section 14 of the workmen's compensation act (now section 1465-61 G. C.) reads as follows:

> "The terms 'employe,' 'workman' and 'operative' as used in this act, shall be construed to mean:
> "1. Every person in the service of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein, including regular members of lawfully constituted police and fire departments of cities and villages, under any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written, except any official of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein. Provided that nothing in this act shall apply to policemen or firemen in cities where policemen's and firemen's pension funds are now or hereafter may be established and maintained by municipal authority under existing laws."

As a general proposition the above section provides in effect that every person in the service of the state or of one of its political subdivisions therein contained in pursuance of an appointment or of an express or implied contract of hire, excepting officials thereof and in some cases policemen and firemen, shall be within the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. The exceptions contained in said section have no application to the question in hand and hence no further consideration will be given them.

In answering your request, then, it is only necessary to consider whether or not a prisoner in a city workhouse is in the service of the city under an appointment or an express or implied contract of hire. Primarily an inmate of a municipal workhouse is not in the service of the city having same, but he is in the custody of said municipality by reason of the sentence of some court. As an incident to his imprisonment a city prisoner in its workhouse may be employed in its service under the following provisions of the General Code:

> "Sec. 2227-1. The labor or time of any person confined in any workhouse or jail in this state shall not hereafter be let, farmed out, given, sold or contracted to any person, firm, corporation or association.
> "Sec. 2227-2. Such persons so confined may be employed in the manufacture of articles used by any department or public institution belonging to or controlled by the political subdivision or subdivisions supporting or contributing to the support of any such workhouse or jail or to any political subdivision of the state.
> "Sec. 2227-5. The board, officer or officers, in charge of any such workhouse or jail shall place to the credit of each prisoner such amount of his earnings as the board, officer or officers deems equitable and just, taking into consideration the character of the prisoner, the nature of the crime for which he was imprisoned and his general deportment. The board, officer or officers for violation of the rules, want of propriety or other misconduct, may cancel such portion of such credit as is deemed proper.
> Sec. 2227-6. When any such earnings are credited to any such person as provided by the preceding section and such person has a child or children under the age of sixteen or a wife, the board, officer or officers, in control of such workhouse or jail shall pay such earnings weekly to the person having custody of such child or children or to any incorporated humane society that will serve as trustees for such child or children without compensation or to such wife as such board, officer or officers may determine; but when such person has no such child, children or wife, such earnings shall be paid to him upon his discharge."

However, I am convinced that the service or employment mentioned in the preceding sections of the General Code is not the kind of service meant when the term is used in the workmen's compensation act since the service therein referred to is voluntary in character and is rendered in pursuance of an appointment or under the terms of a contract, while the service performed by a workhouse prisoner is involuntary on his part and his employment is not under an appointment or contract of hire but is required of him as a matter of law. It is true that certain provisions are made in the above quoted sections of the General Code for a credit to be given a prisoner of some portion of his earnings. Still, I feel that this allowance to him is merely a matter of gratuity under the state law and does not change his status from one of custody to one of service under the terms of the workmen's compensation act. To my mind it was never considered by the legislature that the benefits and protection of the workmen's compensation law should be extended to those who by their own acts have violated the law and made necessary their confinement in some penal institution where service might be required of them as an incident of their imprisonment.

A similar question was considered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, in reference to the application of the workmen's compensation act to a convict in the Ohio penitentiary, in Opinion No. 383, found in Vol I of the Opinions of the Attorney-General of Ohio for the year 1915, page 782, in which he held that a convict was not within the provisions of said law.

Answering your question specifically, then, I am of the opinion that prisoners confined in the workhouse of a city are not within the provisions of the workmen's compensation act.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

LIBRARY—EARNINGS AND FINES THEREOF—IN CITIES UNDER 30,000—SHOULD BE TURNED OVER TO TREASURER AND KEPT SEPARATE—SPENT ONLY BY TRUSTEES OF LIBRARY FOR LIBRARY PURPOSES—MONEY RAISED BY TAXATION FOR MAINTENANCE THEREOF CANNOT BE TRANSFERRED TO LIBRARY IN ANOTHER TAXING DISTRICT.

1. In cities under 30,000 population the library earnings, fines, etc., should be turned over to the city treasurer and kept separate and apart from other money by such treasurer, to be expended only by the board of directors of the library for library purposes.

2. No part of the money raised by taxation for the maintenance of a library in such taxing district may be transferred to another taxing district for the purpose of maintaining a library in that taxing district, which library is altogether a different institution from the one located in the taxing district in which the money has been raised.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1917.

HON. C. B. GALBREATH, Secretary and State Librarian, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 21, 1917, is as follows:

"In view of the fact that numerous queries come to us relative to the following subjects, we would be pleased to have the opinion of the attorney-general regarding them:

"1. We have experienced some difficulty in regard to the library funds in the cities of Lancaster and Defiance, and would like your opinion on the following questions concerning them:

"Should not the earnings of the library be exclusively expended for library purposes? The law requires specifically, I believe, that sums of money collected by the library from fines and other sources shall be deposited with the public treasurer. Are not libraries justified, however, in demanding that these amounts be credited to the library fund and subject only to the order of the governing board of the library? In some instances libraries have deposited such sums with the treasurer, but they have been turned over to the general fund and the library receives no benefit from them.

"2. Can part of the money raised by taxation in a certain taxing district be divided and partially refunded? For instance, a village within a certain township which maintains a township library wishes to establish its own library and demand its share of the township library funds raised by taxation within its limit. A similar example is to be met with in a case of a city within a county maintaining a county library. A certain city maintains a Carnegie free library and wishes the funds raised for county library purposes to be devoted to its own use rather than expended for general county library service."

Referring to your first question, sections 15061, 15062 and 15063 of the General Code read:

"Sec. 15061. The common council of every city not exceeding in population thirty thousand inhabitants, and of every incorporated village shall have power to establish and maintain a public library and reading room and for such purpose may annually levy and cause to be collected, as other general taxes are, a tax not exceeding one mill on each dollar of the taxable property of such city or village, to constitute the library fund, which shall be kept by the treasurer separate and apart from other money of the city or village, and be used exclusively for the purchase of books, periodicals, necessary furniture and fixtures and whatever is required for the proper maintenance of such library and reading room.

"Sec. 15062. For the government of such library and reading room there shall be a board of six directors, appointed by the council of such city or village from among the citizens thereof at large, and not more than one member of the council of such city or village shall at any one time be a member of said board. Such directors shall hold their office for three years from the date of appointment, and until their successors are appointed, but upon their first appointment they shall divide themselves at their first meeting by lot into three classes, one-third for one year, one-third for two years, and one-third for three years, and their terms shall expire accordingly. All vacancies shall be immediately reported by the directors to the proper council and be filled by appointment in like manner; and if an unexpired term, for the residue of the term only. No compensation whatever shall be paid or allowed to any director.

"Sec. 15063. Said directors shall, immediately after their appointment, meet and organize by the election of one of their number president, and by the election of such other officers as they may deem necessary. They shall make and adopt such by-laws, rules and regulations for their own guidance, and for the government of the library and reading room, as may be expedient. They shall have the exclusive control of the expenditures of all moneys collected for the library fund, and the supervision, care and custody of the rooms or buildings constructed, leased or set apart for that purpose, and such money shall be drawn from the treasury by the proper officers, upon the properly authenticated voucher of the board of directors, without otherwise being audited. They may, with the approval of the common council, lease and occupy, or purchase, or erect on purchased ground, an appropriate building, provided that no more than half the income in any one year can be set apart in said year for such purchase or building. They may appoint a librarian and assistants, and prescribe rules for their conduct."

It will be noted that the directors, under section 15063 G. C. "shall have the exclusive control of the expenditures of all moneys collected for the library fund * * * and such money shall be drawn from the treasury by the proper officers upon the proper authenticated voucher of the board of directors without otherwise being audited." From the provisions of the above sections it is clear that the city treasurer is made the custodian of all library funds, but that the expenditure of such funds is a matter over which the board alone has control, and in direct answer to your first question, therefore, I am of the opinion that all moneys coming to the library board from fines, etc., and turned over to the city treasurer, are to be kept separate and apart from other money by such treasurer and expended only by the board of directors of the library for library purposes.

Answering your second question: Article 12, section 5 of the Constitution of 1851 reads:

> "No tax shall be levied except in pursuance of law; and every law imposing a tax shall state distinctly the object of the same, to which only it shall be applied."

In the case of State ex rel v. Pohling, 1 O. C. C. 486, 1 O. C. D. 271, it was held that funds which are raised by a tax for the purpose of improving county roads, cannot, by special statute, be applied to the purposes of a municipal corporation in such county. The constitutional provision, above quoted, would make it unlawful, to my mind, to use the township, village, city or county library funds, or any part of them, for any other purpose than that for which they have been raised. See Lima v. McBride, 34 O. S., 338.

In direct answer to your second question, therefore, I am of the opinion that no part of the money raised by taxation in certain taxing district for library purposes may be transferred to another taxing district for the purpose of maintaining a library in that taxing district, which library is altogether a different institution from the one located in the taxing district in which the money has been raised.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO—DISAPPROVAL—BOND FORM.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

> "RE:—Bonds issued in thesum of $17,500 by the county commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, covering the shares of said county, and of Newton, Muskingum and Falls townships in said county, and the shares of abutting property owners in the improvement of certain sections of intercounty highways No. 10 and No. 344."

I have made a careful examination of the transcript of the proceedings of the county commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, and of the other officers, relating to said bond issue, said proceedings and the transcript thereof having been corrected to meet the requirements of this department.

As a result of said examination I find said proceedings to be in compliance with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio relating to the subject matter under investigation, and I am of the opinion that proper bonds covering said issue will, when signed by the proper officers, be valid and binding obligations of said county.

I find myself unable to approve the bond form submitted with the transcript of proceedings, and I have this day prepared a bond form for use in the preparation of the bonds covering this issue, and have forwarded the same to the county commissioners of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF CLERMONT COUNTY, OHIO—BOND FORM NOT SUBMITTED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bond issue of Clermont county, Ohio, in the sum of $14,300.00 for the purpose of paying the shares of said county, Ohio and Pearce townships, and abutting property owners in the cost and expense of improving section 1, intercounty highway No. 7."

I have carefully examined the transcript of proceedings of the county commissioners of Clermont county, Ohio, and other officers relating to the above bond issue after said proceedings and the transcript thereof had been corrected to meet the requirements of this department. As a result of such examination, I am of the opinion that bonds covering this issue, prepared in proper form and signed by the proper officers, will be valid and binding obligations of the county of Clermont.

No bond and coupon form was submitted with the transcript, as required by this department, but we have this day requested the county commissioners of said county to request the printer of said bonds to submit printer's proof copy of the bond and coupon form to this office before said bonds go to print, to the end that we make such corrections therein as may be necessary.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF CLEVELAND—EXPENDITURES FOR MAINTENANCE UNDER DISCRETION OF CLERK AND JUDGES—COST OF PUBLICATION OF COURT CALENDAR MAY BE TAXED AS COSTS IN EACH CASE—NOTARY FEES FOR VERIFYING PLEADINGS MAY BE TAXED AS COSTS—BAILIFF—NO AUTHORITY TO PAY OVER MONEY MADE ON EXECUTION TO PERSON NOT PARTY TO SUIT —JUDGES OF CRIMINAL BRANCH MAY SENTENCE VIOLATORS OF CITY ORDINANCES TO COUNTY JAIL WHEN CITY NOT PROVIDED WITH WORKHOUSE.

1. Expenditures for maintaining the municipal court of Cleveland are under the discretion of the clerk and judges of the municipal court, subject to appropriations to be made by council.

2. A charge for publication of the calendar of the municipal court, as provided in sections 1695, 1696 and 1697 G. C., may be taxed and collected as part of the costs in each case in the manner provided by said sections.

3. Notary fees for verifying pleadings and other papers requiring verification, may be taxed as costs in an action.

4. There is no authority for a bailiff of the municipal court paying over money made on execution to a person not a party to the suit. Money made on execution should be paid to the party entitled thereto, or paid into court, or held by the officer until the person entitled thereto establishes his claim as provided by law.

5. Judges of the criminal branch of the municipal court may commit persons who have been accused of or convicted of violation of the city ordinances, to the county jail if the city is not provided with a workhouse or other jail.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1917.

HON. W. H. MCGANNON, Chief Justice Municipal Court of Cleveland, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me several questions with reference to the municipal court of Cleveland, which I will answer in the following order:

> "Question 1. Do the provisions of the charter cover the expenditures in the municipal court, or does the state law give the clerk of the court unlimited control over the expenses of the court?"

Section 1579-48 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The council of the city of Cleveland shall provide suitable accommodations for the municipal court and its officers including a private room for each judge and sufficient jury room. The council shall also provide for the use of the court complete sets of the reports of the supreme and inferior courts of Ohio and such other authorities as are deemed necessary, and shall provide for each court room the latest edition of the General Code of Ohio, and necessary supplies including telephone, stationery, furniture, heat and light. The expense of maintaining the court shall be paid out of the treasury of the city of Cleveland."

From this section it is clear that the expenses of the court must be paid out of the treasury of the city of Cleveland. The question, as I understand it, is whether the clerk can make purchases, direct, of supplies, etc., out of an appropriation made, or to be made by council for the maintenance of the court; or must all supplies, etc., be purchased through the city purchasing agent.

The charter of the city of Cleveland, sections 41 to 45 inclusive, provide for appropriations by council for conducting the affairs of the city. Section 41 is in part as follows

"The fiscal year of the city shall begin on the first day of January. On or before the 15th day of November in each year the mayor shall prepare an estimate of the expense of conducting the affairs of the city for the following year. This estimate shall be compiled from detailed information obtained from the various departments on uniform blanks prepared by the director of finance, and shall set forth:

"(a) An itemized estimate of the expense of conducting each department. * * *"

Section 43 is as follows:

"The council may at any time transfer money appropriated for the use of one department, division, or purpose to any other department, division or purpose; but no such transfer shall be made of revenues or earnings of any non-tax supported public utility to any other purpose."

Section 45 provides that no money shall be drawn from the treasury of the city, nor any obligation for the expenditure of money incurred, except pursuant to appropriations made by council.

Section 78 creates six different departments, with subdivisions of five of said departments so created. There is no department or division which attempts to or does in any way include the municipal court. Division "d" of the department of finance is designated as "Division of purchase and supplies."

The department of finance is under the general supervision of the director of finance.

Section 111 of the charter, as to his duties, provides in part that,

"The duties of the director of finance shall include the keeping and supervision of all accounts and the custody of all public money of the city; the purchase, storage and distribution of supplies needed by the various departments; * * *"

Sections 118 and 119 as to the "Division of Purchases and Supplies" are as follows:

"Section 118. The commissioner of purchases and supplies shall make all purchases for the city in the manner provided by ordinance, and shall, under such regulations as may be provided by ordinance, and by direction of the board of control, sell all property, real and personal, of the city not needed for public use or that may have become unsuitable for use or that may have been condemned as useless by the director of a department. He shall have charge of such store rooms and warehouses of the city as the council may by ordinance provide.

"Section 119. Before making any purchase or sale, the commissioner of purchases and supplies shall give opportunity for competition, under such rules and regulations as the council shall establish. Supplies required by any department may be furnished upon requisition from the stores under the control of the commissioner of purchases and supplies, and whenever so furnished therewith by warrant made payable to the credit of the stores' account of the department of purchases and supplies. The commissioner of purchases and supplies shall not furnish any supplies to any department unless there be to the credit of such department an available appropriation balance in excess of all unpaid obligations sufficient to pay for such supplies."

From the above quoted provisions of the charter of the city of Cleveland, it seems clear that the commissioner of purchases and supplies is to purchase and issue supplies only to the various departments of the city. No other authority is given him by the charter. The municipal court is not a department of the city of Cleveland nor does it come under any department; in fact, the municipal court is not mentioned in the charter of the city except in section 86, which provides in one part that the director of law shall be the prosecuting attorney of the municipal court.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Frank T. Andrews, et al., decided February 12, 1917, by the court of appeals of Cuyahoga county, it was directly held that the municipal court of Cleveland is a state court, the decision being based upon the well known principle that the legislature alone can establish courts in Ohio. The court in this case said:

"Being thus a state tribunal in creation, it must be equally so in all the inferior details of its organization and administration, which the legislature must be competent to prescribe, equally with its power of bringing the court into being."

Therefore, as section 1579-48, first quoted, provides for the expense of maintaining the court being paid out of the treasury of the city of Cleveland; and as pointed out, the charter of the city in no way deals with this court, nor does it come under the head of any department for which the commissioner of purchases and supplies is authorized to act, it would seem that the matter would be under the discretion of the clerk and the judges of the municipal court, subject to appropriations to be made by council.

Your second question is as follows:

"The calendar of the court and other information pertaining to cases in the civil division is published in the Legal News and a uniform charge of 15c for each case is made and the same is taxed by the clerk as a part of the cost and collected together with other costs. Is this action on the part of the clerk legal?"

Section 1579-47, as to the municipal court of Cleveland, provides as follows:

"Except as otherwise provided for in this act, in actions and proceedings wherein the said municipal court has jurisdiction concurrent with a court of a justice of the peace, the fees and costs may be the same and taxed in the same manner as is now, or may hereafter be provided for actions and proceedings heard and determined in a court of a justice of the peace. In other actions and proceedings the fees and costs may be the same, and taxed in the same manner, as is now, or may hereafter be, provided for actions and proceedings heard and determined in the court of common pleas. In criminal proceedings all fees and costs may be the same as now fixed in the police court of said city. Provided, however, that the municipal court, in lieu of the aforesaid methods of taxing costs, by rule of court may establish a schedule of fees and costs to be taxed in all actions and proceedings, in no case to exceed fees and costs provided for like actions and proceedings by general law."

Sections 1695, 1696 and 1697 G. C. are as follows:

"Section 1695 (103 O. L. 418) In the counties of Hamilton, Cuyahoga, Franklin and Lucas, the judges of the courts of record, other than court of appeals, shall jointly designate a daily law journal published in the county, wherein shall be published all calendars of the courts of record in such county, which shall contain the numbers and titles of causes, and names of attorneys appearing therein, together with the motion dockets and such particulars and notices respecting causes, as may be specified by the judges, and each notice required to be published by any of such judges

"Section 1696. In all cases, proceedings, administrations of estates, assignments and matters pending in any of the courts of record of such counties wherein legal notices or advertisements are required by law to be published, such law journal shall once a week and on the same day of the week, publish an abstract of each such legal advertisement, but the jurisdiction over, or irregularity of a proceeding, trial or judgment, shall not be affected by anything therein.

"Section 1697. For the publication of such calendars, motion dockets and notices, the fees for which are not fixed by law, the publisher of the paper shall receive a sum to be fixed by the judges, not exceeding thirty-five cents for each case brought, to be paid by the party filing the petition, or transcripts for appeal or lien, and to be taxed in the costs and collected as other costs, and for the publishing of abstracts of legal advertising, a sum to be fixed by the judges, not exceeding one dollar for each case, proceeding or matter, in which such advertising is had, to be taxed as a part of the costs thereof."

"Sec. 1579-1. That there shall be, and hereby is, established in and for the city of Cleveland, a municipal court, which shall be a court of record and shall be styled 'the municipal court of Cleveland,' hereinafter designated and referred to as the municipal court."

Therefore, under the above quoted sections, the charge for publication of the court calendar, etc., of the municipal court of Cleveland may be taxed and collected as other costs, if the judges of the courts of record of Cuyahoga county have designated the daily law journal in which publication is to be made and have fixed the amount of the charge.

Your third question is as follows:

> "In many cases the notary's fee is taxed as a part of the case and collected by the clerk, and the same is paid to the notary, usually a lawyer in charge of the case or someone in his office. Is this legal?"

I suppose the notary fee referred to is the fee taxed for verifying pleadings filed by litigants. These pleadings must be verified, and the cost of doing so is a proper charge; the clerk is specifically allowed to charge for the same; and as the verification may be made before a notary, I think that if the notary has not been paid, his fee may properly be taxed and paid to him whether he be an attorney in a case or not; or if the party verifying the pleading has paid the notary, then he can recover the fee so paid as part of his costs.

Your fourth question is as follows:

> "In many instances the bailiff without order from the court pays claims of parties, other than litigants, out of moneys received on executions for alleged liens on the property incurred before the property was seized by the bailiff. In some cases he has paid out all the money received on such executions to such claimant and made no payment on the judgment. Has he authority to do this?"
> "Should not a person who claims a lien on chattel property which has been taken on execution, establish his lien in court before the bailiff can legally recognize it, and has the bailiff the authority to pay out any money received on executions except upon the order of the court?"

The bailiff, for the purposes of this question, must be regarded in the same manner as a constable or sheriff.

Section 3343 G. C. provides as follows:

> "Constables shall pay over to the party entitled thereto all moneys received by them in their official capacity, if demand be made by such party, his agent, or attorney, at any time before he returns the writ upon which he has received it. If not paid over by that time, he shall pay it to the justice when he returns the writ."

I take it that the words "the party entitled thereto," as used in this section, mean the party to the action who is entitled to the money made on the execution. The constable is authorized to pay the money to him at any time before the return of the writ.

Section 11686, General Code, is practically an analagous section as to sheriffs. It is as follows:

> "If the sheriff collects any part of a judgment by virtue of an execution without the sale of real estate, he shall pay it to the judgment creditor, or his attorney, upon demand made therefor at his office. If the execution be fully satisfied, he shall return it within three days after he collected the money thereon."

If the officer pays to any one else, it seems to me he does so at his peril. There is no provision that I know of that would authorize either a constable or sheriff, or any other officer to pay money which he had made on execution, to a person not a party to the proceeding, merely upon the claim of such person. The money should either be turned over to the party entitled thereto, or paid to the justice as provided by law, or held by the officer, and any person claiming the right to the same or any part thereof should establish his claim as provided by law.

What has been said as to the duty of constables and justices would apply to bailiffs of the municipal court.

Your fifth question is as follows:

> "Have the judges in the criminal branch the right to send persons to the county jail who have been accused or convicted of the violation of city ordinances?"

Section 4564, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Imprisonment under the ordinances of a municipal corporation shall be in the workhouse or other jail thereof, if the corporation is provided with such workhouse or jail. Any corporation not provided with a workhouse, or other jail, shall be allowed, for the purpose of imprisonment, the use of the jail of the county, at the expense of the corporation, until it is provided with a prison, house of correction, or workhouse. Persons, so imprisoned in the county jail shall be under the charge of the sheriff of the county, who shall receive and hold such persons in the manner prescribed by the ordinances of the corporation, until discharged by due course of law."

It seems to me this section would undoubtedly apply to Cleveland, and that if the city does not have a workhouse or other jail, imprisonment under the ordinances of the city may be made in the county jail at the expense of the city. This statute seems to authorize commitment to the county jail under ordinances of a municipal corporation only when the corporation has no workhouse or jail; under section 4565, the commissioners, upon giving ninety days' written notice, may prohibit the use of the county jail for this purpose. If such use is prohibited, then under section 4566 the corporation may still continue the use of the jail if it immediately takes steps for the erection of a prison or workhouse. It would seem, however, from the first sentence of section 4564 that if the city has either a workhouse or jail, imprisonment under ordinances of the city must be in it.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

SINKING FUND COMMISSIONERS—EXERCISE CONTROL OVER MONEY IN SINKING FUND THROUGH OFFICERS OF SCHOOL BOARD—MONEY MUST REMAIN IN CUSTODY OF BOARD AND ITS TREASURER—COMMISSIONERS MAY WITHDRAW FUNDS BY REQUISITION TO BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Money in the sinking fund of a school district must remain in the custody of the school board and its treasurer, and the sinking fund commissioners exercise control of such money only through the officers of the school board. The sinking fund commission may withdraw funds for its own purpose only by requisition directed to the board of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1917.

HON. CHARLES L. FLORY, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You ask a statement of my opinion upon the following:

> "On May 14, 1913, Attorney-General Hogan rendered an opinion, Opinions of Attorney-General 1913, volume 1, page 260, to the effect that the money in the sinking fund of a school district must remain in the custody of the school board and its treasurer, and that the sinking fund commission exercises control of such money only through the officers of the school board, and that the commission of the sinking fund may withdraw for its own purpose from such funds only by requisition directed to the board of education.
> "I am frank to say that the various sections of the General Code, quoted in the opinion mentioned, seem to place the money in the sinking fund so completely within the control of the sinking fund commissioners, that I have the temerity to doubt the correctness of the holding. The question has now arisen in connection with the affairs of the Hanover township rural school district in Licking county."

I have considered opinion No. 288 of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, found in the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1913, volume 1, page 260, very carefully and advise you that I agree with the conclusion reached therein, that is, that:

> "Under section 7604, General Code, and the following statutes which provide for the deposit of all moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer of the board of education of a school district and the following statutes which provide the mode of procedure for deposit of funds; and under section 4768, which provides that no money shall be withdrawn from depositories except upon an order signed by the treasurer and by the president or vice-president, and countersigned by the clerk of the board of education; and under section 7613, and related sections, which require the board of education to set aside and appropriate funds for the use of the sinking fund commission, the custody of such funds must reside with the board and its treasurer, whilst the control of the same is vested in the sinking fund commission.
> "The commission of the sinking fund may withdraw for its own purpose from such funds, therefore, only by requisition directed to the board."

It seems clear to me that the reasons set forth in said opinion are irresistible and for me to give my reasons upon the subject would be to simply recapitulate what is set forth in said opinion.

I am enclosing you herewith copy of said opinion with my advice to you that I agree therewith.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR'S REPORT UNDER SECTION 2787 G. C. TO COMMISSIONERS SHOULD INCLUDE ONLY SUCH ASSISTANTS WHO RECEIVE THEIR PAY FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND—REPORT OF TOTAL COMPENSATION SHOULD NOT CONTAIN COMPENSATION NOT DRAWN FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND.

The report made by the county surveyor to the county commissioners, under the provisions of section 2878 G. C., should not include those deputies and assistants who do not receive their pay from the general county fund. Neither should the total compensation reported to the county commissioners include compensation not drawn from the general county fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1917.

HON. HECTOR S. YOUNG, Prosecuting Attorney, Marion, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of April 14, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to certain matters therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "Below is my interpretation of section 2787, concerning which I spoke to you yesterday. Please give me an opinion as to whether or not it is correct.
> "'Section 2787 of the Cass act provides that on or before the first Monday in June the county surveyor shall file with the county commissioners a statement of the number of assistants, draftsmen, clerks, etc., and the total amount of their compensation for the year beginning the following September.
> "'It is my understanding that this estimate of salary is to cover the salaries of assistants who are engaged on strictly county work such as the making of surveys and plans for construction and repair of county and township roads, county bridges, tax maps, miscellaneous surveys and maps for county purposes, general office expense, etc. Also inspection on county roads and bridges.
> "'BUT that the above salary estimate is not to include the compensation of employes when engaged on either state-aid road work or on ditch work. Because the engineering expense on these two kinds of work becomes a part of the cost of the work, to be paid from special funds created for these purposes and not out of the general county fund.'"

The question embodied in your communication is as to whether the report made by the county surveyor to the county commissioners, under the provisions of section 2787 G. C., should include only those deputies and assistants who draw their compensation from the general county fund, or whether it should include also those deputies and assistants who receive their compensation from the particular fund created to take care of the cost and expense of the work in and about which such deputies and assistants may be employed.

It is your opinion that the former is correct, that is, that the report should include only those deputies and assistants who draw their compensation from the general county fund. I believe that your construction placed upon this statute is correct.

What is the object of the statute? The report of the county surveyor is to enable the county commissioners to fix a sum beyond which the county surveyor cannot go in the employment of helpers. If the county surveyor should report all deputies and assistants, irrespective as to whether they draw their compensation from the general county fund or a special fund, the report would be misleading to the county commissioners. They would fix an aggregate amount beyond which the county surveyor could not go in the employment of assistants, basing it upon the report of the county surveyor. But the report of the county surveyor would embrace deputies and assistants who do not draw their compensation from the general county fund. The result of such a proceeding would be that the county commissioners would allow a greater sum to the county surveyor than they otherwise would have allowed for deputy hire.

It must be remembered that the object of this report made by the county surveyor is not to give the county commissioners authority to fix the number and kind of helpers, neither to fix the amount which any one helper shall receive, but merely to fix the aggregate amount beyond which the county surveyor cannot go in the employment of deputies and assistants.

Hence, what the county commissioners desire to know is as to what deputies and assistants the county surveyor may be compelled to employ in his opinion during the coming year, beginning with September 1st, and the amounts which in his opinion he will be compelled to pay out of the general county fund for such deputies and assistants. The county commissioners then can use his report as a basis upon which to arrive at the amount which they feel ought to be allowed the county surveyor for deputies and assistants. Said section 2787 G. C. reads as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday of June of each year the county surveyor shall file with the commissioners of such county a statement of the number of all necessary assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes in his office for the year beginning September 1st next succeeding and their aggregate compensation. The county commissioners shall examine such statement and, after making such alterations therein as are just and reasonable, fix an aggregate compensation to be expended therefor for such year."

From the above it is my opinion that you are correct in the construction you place upon this statute, and that the report of the county surveyor to the county commissioners should not include deputies and assistants, who draw their compensation from some special fund and not from the general county fund.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

WHEN COUNTY HAS NO WORKHOUSE—COMMISSIONERS MAY CONTRACT WITH AUTHORITY OF ANOTHER COUNTY HAVING CONTROL OF WORKHOUSE—FOR MAINTENANCE OF PRISONERS CONVICTED OF MISDEMEANORS—WHEN PRISONERS CONVICTED OF VIOLATION OF ORDINANCE—COST OF MAINTENANCE MUST BE PAID BY CITY—WHEN COUNTY PAYS IN LATTER CASE—FINDING MAY BE MADE AGAINST CITY CONTAINING WORKHOUSE.

Under section 12384 General Code the commissioners of a county or the council of a municipality, wherein there is no workhouse, may agree with the city council or other authority having control of the workhouse of a city in any other county, or with the board of district workhouses having a workhouse, upon what terms and conditions persons convicted of misdemeanors or of the violation of ordinances may be received into such workhouse. When such prisoners are sentenced for such violation of ordinances, the cost of maintenance must be paid by the city and not the county, and when in such cases such expenses have been paid by the county commissioners, a finding should be returned against the city containing the workhouse for the amount paid to the workhouse authorities by the county commissioners covering the expense of maintenance of prisoners in such cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 6, 1917, as follows:

"Section 12384 G. C. provides for contracts by the county commissioners and councils of municipalities for boarding prisoners at workhouses. It further provides that the county commissioners shall pay for boarding prisoners committed for the violation of state laws, and the councils of municipalities to pay for boarding prisoners committed for the violation of ordinances.

"The charter of the city of Middletown, Ohio, created a municipal court. The constitutionality of this charter was attacked on several grounds, one being the creation of a municipal court by charter and giving it jurisdiction in the state cases. The court of appeals of Butler county, Ohio, in the case of Jacob Heer v. Wendell Butterfield, touching the existence of this court, held:

"'The consideration of these several sections, especially section 15 of Art. IV, leads us to the opinion that it is beyond the power of a municipality by means of its charter to establish a court having jurisdiction in state cases of crimes or misdemeanors, and so far as that jurisdiction is included, the municipal court provided for in the charter of the city of Middletown, would appear to be unauthorized by law. There might be, however, under the broad provisions for local self-government, power in such a charter to provide a city court having only jurisdiction of all offenses under the ordinances of the city, and to that extent only it is possible that this municipal court could be upheld.'

"The examiners of this department find that the commissioners of Butler county have been paying the authorities of the workhouse of the city of Cincinnati for boarding prisoners committed to said work house by the municipal court of the city of Middletown, Ohio.

"How shall recovery of these payments be made from the Cincinnati workhouse or from the city of Middletown, Ohio, if such recovery can be made at all? And how far back shall our examiners go in making such findings, to the date of the creation of the court, or to the date of the decision of the court of appeals, which was February 2, 1915?"

I am also informed that at the time the decision of the court of appeals referred to was announced the city solicitor at Middletown arranged to have all state cases tried in the justice of the peace court instead of the municipal court and that since that time no state cases have been tried in the municipal court.

Section 12384 General Code reads:

"The commissioners of a county, or the council of a municipality, wherein there is no workhouse, may agree with the city council, or other authority having control of the workhouse of a city in any other county, or with the board of district workhouses having a workhouse, upon what terms and conditions persons convicted of misdemeanors or of the violation of an ordinance of such municipality having no workhouse, may be received into such workhouse under sentence thereto. The county commissioners, or the council of a municipality, are authorized to pay the expenses incurred under such agreement out of the general fund of the county or municipality, upon the certificate of the proper officer of such workhouse."

Since prisoners convicted of violations of state laws have not been sentenced to the Cincinnati workhouse from the municipal court of Middletown since July, 1915, it follows, of course, that the bills the county commissioners have been paying for prisoners sentenced from that court to the workhouse at Cincinnati have been for the expense of boarding prisoners sentenced for the violation of municipal ordinances.

From a reading of section 12384 General Code it is clear that the county commissioners have no authority to pay such expenses. These bills should have been paid by the city of Middletown.

Can this money so illegally expended by the county commissioners now be recovered?

Section 2921 G. C. provides:

"Upon being satisfied that funds of the county, or public moneys in the hands of the county treasurer or belonging to the county, are about to be or have been, misapplied, or that any such public moneys have been illegally drawn, or withheld from, the county treasury, or that a contract in contravention of law has been, or is about to be entered into, or has been or is being executed, or that a contract was procured by fraud or corruption, or that any property, real or personal, belonging to the county, is being illegally used or occupied, or is being used or occupied in violation of contract, or that the terms of a contract made by or on behalf of the county are being or have been violated, or that money is due the county, the prosecuting attorneys of the several counties of the state may apply, by civil action in the name of the state, to a court of competent jurisdiction, to restrain such contemplated misapplication of funds, or the completion of such illegal contract not fully completed, or to recover, for the use of the county all public moneys so misapplied or illegally drawn or withheld from the county treasury, or to recover, for the benefit of the county damages resulting from the execution of such illegal contract, or to recover, for the benefit of the county, such real or personal property so used or occupied, or to recover, for the benefit of the county, damages resulting from the non-performance of the terms of such contract, or to otherwise enforce it, or to recover such money due the county."

In the case of Printing Company v. State, 68 O. S. 362, it was held:

"1. Where the number of publications of a sheriff's election proclamation or other public notice, is fixed by statute, there is no authority in the board of county commissioners, or other county officer, to contract for publications in excess of the number directed by statute. The board is also without authority to allow a claim for such excessive publications, and the allowance of such claim does not bind the county. Nor is authority to adjudicate and allow such claim given by the fact that with the charge for unauthorized publications there is, on the same paper, a charge for a publication which is authorized by statute. * * *

"3. The act of April 25, 1898 (93 O. L. 408), clothes the prosecuting attorney with power to recover back money so illegally drawn from the treasury on and after the date of its passage."

In this case the court, referring to the act of April 25, 1898, 93 O. L. 408, of which the above section 2921 G. C. is a part, said at page 372:

"Manifestly it is the purpose of this statute to reimburse the treasury for unauthorized payments from it not otherwise provided for. It is in one sense a remedial statute, and yet it gives a right of action which before its enactment did not exist."

This case is clearly authority for the holding that in the case referred to in your communication the money illegally paid the Cincinnati authorities may be recovered back from them by the prosecuting attorney of Butler county.

Neither is such holding in conflict with the case of State v. Fronizer, 77 O. S., p. 7. The conclusion in that case, whether right or wrong, was founded partly upon the fact that the county had acquired possession of the property and enjoyed the possession of the same. In the case you refer to the county of Butler received nothing whatever for the money expended, since the only party benefited by the boarding of the prisoners in Cincinnati was the city of Middletown, the duty of maintaining these prisoners resting solely upon it.

In view of the above it is my opinion that a finding should be made against the city of Cincinnati for the money paid the Cincinnati workhouse by the county commissioners for the expense of boarding prisoners at such workhouse, sentenced by the municipal court at Middletown for violation of municipal ordinances. The examiners in making these findings should go as far back as the illegal practice dates. Recovery can then be had under section 286 G. C.

While the court of appeals in the decision above referred to held that the municipal court at Middletown was without jurisdiction in state cases, yet inasmuch as the authorities at Middletown arranged to have these cases heard in a justice court after that date, I do not believe that any question should be raised now as to the legality of payments of the county commissioners for the expense of boarding state prisoners sentenced by the municipal court of Middletown prior to that decision.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—NO AUTHORITY TO VACATE INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY OR MAIN MARKET ROAD—LEGISLATURE—ONLY BODY WITH POWER TO SURRENDER EASEMENT OF PUBLIC IN SUCH ROADS.

1. There seems to be no provision made whereby the county commissioners have power to vacate all or any part of an inter-county highway or main market road.

2. The legislature is the only body which has power to grant relief in the way of giving up or surrendering the easement of the public in all or any part of an inter-county highway or main market road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. JAMES F. FLYNN, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 5, 1917, supplementing your oral communication with a member of this department, in reference to which you ask my opinion. Your communication reads as follows:

"I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. John F. Kramer, special counsel, with reference to a matter I submitted to him regarding the vacation of a strip of land along the Main Market Road No. 13, in which he had expected to give me merely his own personal opinion, but since then it has developed that the question is one which your department feels as though an opinion in due form should be rendered. Mr. Kramer in his letter asks for certain additional information.

"The so-called upper Huron road ran parallel to and adjoining the right of way of the New York Central Railroad Company and this road was prior to January 1st, 1915, designated as Main Market Road No. 13. About this time it was decided to improve No. 13 by concreting the road and the New York Central, which was four-tracking its system between Cleveland and Sandusky and had not secured the right of way along this portion of No. 13, suggested to the commissioners that if they would shift No. 13 twenty feet from its present right of way, they would buy an additional twenty feet from the property owners abutting the highway upon the opposite side of the road and the commissioners could vacate the twenty feet adjoining the railroad right of way. This was agreed. About this time it was necessary to redesignate No. 13, as the entrance into Sandusky had been changed. Under this redesignation, the highway department prepared plats and profiles, which show the right of way of this portion of the road in question as twenty feet north of its original lines (as first designated) and away from the railroad right of way. Thereupon in the spring of 1915 the commissioners and the state highway department proceeded with the improvement of No. 13 and improved the twenty feet purchased by the railroad under its agreement. The twenty feet which were to revert to the company and not included in the redesignation, were left in the same situation they were, and the roadway as now traveled and improved does not include these twenty feet. The twenty feet that were to go to the county commissioners were purchased in the name of one of the agents of the railroad company and were to be by him deeded to the commissioners. The matter was delayed for no accountable reason and the commissioners failed to take any action with reference to vacating the twenty feet that the railroad company desired, up until about seven weeks ago, when the railroad company brought in their deeds for the land to be given to the commissioners, and in turn requested the commissioners to pass a resolution vacating the twenty-foot strip between the present right of way and right of way as now improved of No. 13. With the additional twenty feet which was improved, the road would be eighty feet in width or twenty feet wider than the law provides for a market road. I am enclosing herewith a sketch of the situation and also a letter setting forth the position of the railroad with regard to the vacation resolution.

"Certain questions are asked in Mr. Kramer's letter as follows:

"First. The vacating of the twenty feet and the purchase of the additional twenty feet are due to a road improvement, the commissioners desiring to build a concrete road.

"Second. Said improvement has been begun and completed.

"Third. The highway was established first.

"Fourth. We have been unable to ascertain whether the railroad company has the fee to its right of way or simply an easement. But at the time of the agreement the railroad company obtained deeds of any right, title or interest from the abutting property owners who purchased the land adjoining the railroad and who would be entitled to any right in the public highway if the same was ever vacated by the commissioners, that is, they obtained a deed from the said abutting property owners to the twenty feet contemplated by the railroad company and the commissioners to be vacated and which was to revert to the railroad company.

"I believe I have fully answered your letter of May 3, and if you need any further reference, I should be glad to give the same. The Cass law having gone into effect in September, 1915, provides no vacation proceedings for county commissioners. Can the commissioners pass such a resolution as is desired by the railroad company, or is there any way whereby the twenty feet may be vacated?"

From the time you had your personal interview with a member of this department, I have given your matter considerable attention and study, and I am now compelled to write you that I find no satisfactory way out of the difficulty in which you find yourself placed. It seems that every way one turns he runs across an obstacle. While I am not able to solve the problem satisfactorily, yet I am going to make a few observations in reference to the matter under consideration.

You suggest in your letter that the railroad company has secured from property owners the fee to said twenty-foot strip of ground. Hence, the only other interest remaining is the easement which the public has in said strip for travel and matters incident thereto.

It will help us, in the consideration of this question, if we remember that section 7464 G. C. classifies the highways of the state as state roads, county roads and township roads, and defines state roads as follows:

"(a) State roads shall include such part or parts of the inter-county highways and main market roads as have been or may hereafter be constructed by the state, or which have been or may hereafter be taken over by the state as provided in this act, and such roads shall be maintained by the state highway department."

The next question that presents itself is as to the jurisdiction of the county commissioners over state highways and the improvement of the same.

Section 1201 G. C. provides that the county commissioners or township trustees must secure whatever additional right of way may be required in the improvement of an inter-county highway or main market road. This has been done by your county commissioners, inasmuch as the twenty-foot strip necessary for the change in the highway has been secured. But here the jurisdiction of the county commissioners seems to end.

Section 6860 G. C. provides as follows:

> "The county commissioners shall have power to locate, establish, alter, widen, straighten, vacate or change the direction of roads as hereinafter provided. This power extends to all roads within the county, except the inter-county and main market roads."

It is doubtful whether the provisions of this section were meant to apply to such a vacation as we have under consideration. While it might be so construed as to apply to matters such as that under consideration, yet the provisions can in no case apply to inter-county highways and main market roads. Neither can I find any other provision of the statutes giving the county commissioners any authority to vacate all or any part of an inter-county highway or main market road.

Hence we are driven to the provisions of the law having to do with state highways (sections 1178-1231-3 G. C.). Here we look in vain for a method by which any part or all of an inter-county highway or main market road may be vacated. There is no method prescribed or outlined, nor even suggested.

I know it might be held that, inasmuch as the public will not use the twenty feet lying next to the railroad company's right of way, it is at least constructively vacated. But our courts have always held that the mere fact that the public does not use a certain part of the highway cannot work a forfeiture of its rights to the same. This principle holds even though some one else might use the part not used by the public for a period of twenty-one years, unless the part thus vacated and used by some one else was necessary to a complete enjoyment of the highway. So that I do not believe that the mere fact that the public will not use said twenty feet would inure to the benefit of the railroad company.

I note that the attorneys of the railroad company interested in this matter, in a letter written to you, state they are not able to suggest a way out of the difficulty. They suggest, however, that a resolution adopted by the county commissioners, vacating the same, would not be out of place. This is true and possibly under the circumstances would be altogether proper. But under the provisions of our statutes, as they now exist, I do not believe it would avail much, so far as vacating the easement of the public in said twenty feet is concerned.

The attorneys also suggest that proceedings might be had under the law as it stood prior to the enactment of the Cass highway law; this by virtue of the saving provisions of section 302 of said act. I do not believe, however, that the provisions of this section would save such a matter as the one under consideration, and therefore that a proceeding under the law repealed by the Cass highway law would have but little effect in the matter of vacating the easement of the public in said twenty foot strip.

In view of all the above, I want to suggest this, that the railroad company for the present take possession of said strip of twenty feet, subject to the easement of the public in same, which in this case is possibly merely nominal. Then at the next session of the general assembly endeavor to bring about the passage of an act granting to the railroad company the right of the state in and to said twenty-foot strip. And if it is thought best, the county commissioners can adopt a resolution vacating the said strip, so far as the county is concerned. If this works no good, it can work no ill.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that there is no provision of the statutes whereby the county commissioners may vacate all or any part of an inter-county highway or main market road.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TEACHERS—CANNOT BE PAID FOR ATTENDING MEETINGS—CALLED UNDER SECTIONS 7706-1 AND 7871 G. C.

There is no provision of law for the payment of teachers who attend teachers' meetings which are called as provided by G. C. sections 7706-1 and 7871.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of February 2, 1917, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Section 7870 G. C. specifically covers the compensation of teachers in attendance at the county institutes. Section 7868-1 G. C. allows compensation for teachers in rural districts for attending a recognized summer school for training of teachers in counties having no teachers' institute. We are holding that there is no authority of law for the payment of compensation to teachers attending a city institute, as provided in sections 7871 and 7872 G. C. Under the opinion of the attorney-general, Annual Report 1915, page 567, we are holding that there is no authority of law for paying teachers compensation for attending teachers' meetings as provided under authority of section 7706-1 G. C., held outside of school hours, and when such meetings are held within school hours the teachers are entitled only to their regular salary without deduction.
> "Question: Are we correct in these holdings, and is there any authority for payment of compensations to teachers attending meetings, or reimbursement for any expenses connected therewith over and above the compensation provided under sections 7870 and 7868-1 General Code?"

General Code section 7690 provides that each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character are located in the school district and that such a board has the power to fix the salaries of all teachers, which such salaries may be increased but not diminished during the term for which the appointment of such teachers are made, and provides also that teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity.

In the fixing of such salaries of teachers by boards of education, General Code section 7595 provides that no person shall be employed to teach in any of the public schools of Ohio for less than forty (after July 1st, 1917, fifty) dollars a month, and under the provisions of General Code section 7691 no person shall be appointed for a term of less than one year nor for a longer term than four years, except to fill an unexpired term, and that teachers in the actual employ of the board shall be considered in the rehiring of teachers before new teachers are chosen in their stead. In rural and village districts, however, under General Code section 7750 the boards of education shall not employ teachers for a term longer than three years, and in each case the employment to begin within four months of the day of appointment. Thus the scheme of law is provided that a term certain shall exist and a minimum price named and will control unless, as decided in Layne v. Board of Education, 83 O. S., 474, it is especially waived by the teacher for whose benefit such statute was made. The salary being determined upon and fixed for the years by the board of education, although it may be payable monthly, it is only fair, it seems to me, to hold that whatever is necessary to be done under our laws or by the rules of the board by the teacher and which comes within his line of duties, must be done and performed without further compensation than that named in the contract of employment. Among the things which the statutes require to be done is, as provided by General Code section 7706-1, that the district superintendent shall, as often as advisable, assemble the teachers of his district for the purpose of conferring with them on certain matters such as the course of study, the discipline and school management, and other school work of any nature and for the promotion of the general good of all the schools of the district. It is also provided that the county superintendent shall co-operate, as much as possible, with the district superintendent in such meetings, and by General Code section 7871 that the board of education of each city school district may provide for holding an institute for the improvement of the teachers and that general meetings of the teachers of the city district held upon not less than four days may constitute such institute. Nothing is said in said sections or in the acts of which said sections are a part, nor in any other statute contained in our school code, that any pay shall be received for said service.

The conclusion that no pay outside of his regular salary shall be allowed a person who is employed in the performance of services for the public, is strengthened by the line of reasoning set forth in certain cases similar to Somerset v. Edmund, 76 O. S., 396, wherein the court held that public policy and sound morals alike forbid that a person employed by the public shall demand or receive, for services performed by him, any other or further remuneration or reward than that prescribed by law. The board of education had a right to know the exact amount of money it would be required to pay for its teachers when the contracts with such teachers were entered into, and whether with the funds on hand it would be compelled to hire at the minimum salaries and probably for the minimum term, or whether it had sufficient funds that it would be permitted to pay more than the minimum wage scale or would be permitted to have more than the minimum amount of school. It had a right also to expect that whatever was necessary for a teacher to do in the proper performance of his duty, as required by law, was taken into consideration by such teacher when the price for such employment was fixed and such board should not be compelled to face a deficit in the treasury which might be brought about by numerous meetings held or expenses incurred by superintendents and teachers. That such salary or compensation cannot be enlarged by implication beyond the terms of the statute, is settled. See 66 O. S., 113; 7 O. S., 237; 58 O. S., 107. The fact, too, that provision is particularly made for the payment of teachers at summer schools, as provided by General Code section 7868-1, and for the attendance at teachers' institutes, as provided by section 7870 G. C., would lead me to the conclusion that if the legislature had intended that teachers should be paid for attending teachers' meetings, as provided by sections 7871 and 7706-1 G. C., it would have said so just as it did in providing pay for institutes and summer schools, under the provisions of the sections above referred to.

Holding these views, then, I must advise you that you are right in holding that there is no authority for the payment of compensation to teachers for attending teachers' meetings which are called under the provisions of sections 7871 and 7706-1 G. C.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE FIRE MARSHAL—DEPUTIES AND ASSISTANTS—MAY COMPEL ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES AT INVESTIGATIONS—MAY ARREST A PERSON WHOM THEY BELIEVE GUILTY—CANNOT HOLD A PERSON FOR INVESTIGATION—WITHOUT OBTAINING WARRANT.

The state fire marshal, his deputies and assistants, have the right to investigate fires and in doing so may subpoena witnesses and compel their attendance. If they find a felony has been committed, they may arrest any person whom they have reasonable cause to believe is guilty of the offense and detain him until a warrant can be obtained.

It is not within the power of the state fire marshal, his deputies and assistants, to arrest and hold a person for investigation without securing a warrant therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. T. ALFRED FLEMING, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In a letter dated May 14, 1917, Mr. Tom Doreen, our chief inspector, directed a letter to this office in which he submitted the following for my official opinion:

"The following is quoted from a handbook on Ohio Fire Marshal Law:

"HOLDING FOR INVESTIGATION.

"Where circumstances are such as to direct suspicion towards a particular person and it is likewise probable that the person may leave the vicinity or community, he may be arrested and held for investigation even though there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the filing of an affidavit.

"Authorities generally refuse to so hold a suspect longer than twenty-four hours without some kind of a charge being filed.

"HABEAS CORPUS.

"Where a person is confined without a charge of some nature being filed against him he may be released on a writ of habeas corpus, and if the arrest and confinement be found not to have been justified, the person or persons responsible may be held liable in damages.

"Kindly advise us more definitely and also what jurisdiction we have in the matter."

The state fire marshal, or a deputy state fire marshal, or an assistant fire marshal has power to investigate and report the cause of any fire which occurs in this state.

General Code section 828 provides:

"If the state fire marshal, or a deputy or assistant fire marshal, is of the opinion that there is evidence sufficient to charge a person with arson or a similar crime, he shall arrest him or cause him to be arrested and charged with such offense. He shall furnish the prosecuting attorney such evidence, with the names of witnesses, and a copy of material testimony taken in the case."

Thus the state fire marshal or a deputy or an assistant has power under the above section to make an arrest, yet an arresting officer can make an arrest and hold an accused only until a warrant can be secured.

General Code section 13493 provides in part:

"When a felony has been committed, any person without warrant, may arrest another whom he has reasonable cause to believe is guilty of the offense, and detain him until a warrant can be obtained. * * * *"

The detention of such person without a warrant can only be for such time as is necessary to secure one. No particular time is mentioned in our statute, it being presumed that the person making the arrest will act promptly, and if he does not so act, he may become liable for false imprisonment. This does not mean that the person so arrested must have an immediate hearing, for General Code section 13507 provides:

"If it is necessary, for just cause, to adjourn the examination of the accused, the magistrate may order such adjournment and commit him to the jail of the county, until such cause of delay is removed, but the entire time of such confinement in jail shall not exceed four days. The officer having custody of such person, by the written order of the magistrate may detain him in custody in a secure and convenient place other than the jail, to be designated by such magistrate in his order, not exceeding four days. The officer in whose custody any person is detained shall provide for the sustenance of such prisoner while in custody."

What section 13493 does mean is that a person who is arrested has a right to know, by or through proper papers and proceedings, with what he is charged, and if he is held without a warrant or without a hearing, the officers so holding him act at their peril.

It is held in Leger et al v. Warren, 62 O. S., 500, that,

"A person who has been arrested without a warrant cannot lawfully be held in custody for any longer period than is reasonably necessary to obtain a legal warrant for his detention. Where he is held for a longer period without such writ or other authority from a competent court, he has a right of action for false imprisonment against the officer or person who made the arrest and those by whom he has been unlawfully held in custody."

So that I advise you that when a person is arrested without a warrant, he can only be held until a warant can be obtained.

An investigation into the cause of a fire can be made and often is made to determine if the fire was the result of carelessness or of design. And if of design, then such investigation can be continued without any suspect being first arrested. In fact, the investigation is very frequently entirely completed before sufficient evidence is secured upon which to base an affidavit for arrest.

Certain language quoted from your "Handbook" is misleading when it says "he may be arrested and held for investigation," for only one of two things contained therein could be meant, that is, if he is arrested then he is held for examination and he is not held for investigation, but is simply under subpoena and is not under arrest.

Answering your inquiry, then, I advise you that the state fire marshal, his deputies and assistants, have the right to investigate fires and to subpoena witnesses and compel attendance for such investigation, and if while so doing they find that a felony has been committed, they may arrest any person whom they have reasonable cause to believe is guilty of the offense and detain him until a warrant can be obtained. But it is not within their power to arrest and hold a person for investigation without securing a warrant therefor.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

NOTICE—REQUIRED BY THE INTERSTATE COUNTY DITCH LAW—NOT REQUIRED UNTIL PROCEEDINGS HAVE BEEN DETERMINED FOR LOCATION AND CONSTRUCTION OF IMPROVEMENT—INCLUDING ENGINEER'S REPORT—SUCH NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN BY PERSONAL SERVICE—TO ALL LAND OWNERS AFFECTED.

The chapter on interstate county ditches contains no requirement for an initial notice. The first requirement of notice in said statute is found in General Code section 6586, and such notice is not required until after all proceedings have been determined for the location and construction of the improvement down to and including the engineer's report containing an apportionment of the estimated cost of the construction, and such notice is only expressly required as to such interested land owners as have been theretofore overlooked and are then brought in; but this requirement for notice must be construed as requiring notice for all affected land owners against whom any assessment is made, and is to be a notice of the fact and amount of such assessment. There is no method provided by law for giving such notice otherwise than by personal service.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. G. F. CRAWFORD, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On March 31, 1917, you addressed the following inquiry to this department:

"A petition for the deepening, widening and straightening of Mississinawa River, known as the Mississinawa River improvement, in interstate ditch, has been filed with the commissioners of Darke county and acted upon by the joint boards of county commissioners of Darke county, Ohio, and Randolph county, Indiana.

"A question has arisen in this matter before the board county commissioners and the auditor of this county, as to the proper manner of notice to be given to the land owners assessed on an interstate ditch, for the apportionment of the assessment.

"The law of interstate ditches does not provide any method of notice to the property owners before view, for the improvement. Section 6586 of the General Code, provides that after certain preliminary matters between the joint boards of the county from this state and the adjoining state have completed their work as a joint board, the proceedings of the commissioners from this county shall be in conformity with the laws for the location of a county or joint county ditch, except that the owners of said lands shall have due notice thereof. The statute does not provide the manner of notice. 105-106 O. L., on page 136, on joint county ditches, provides:

" 'If, however, the petition prays for the improvement of the channel of a river, creek or run or part thereof, in more than one county and more than two hundred free-holders will be affected, if said improvement is granted as prayed for, all persons, firms and corporations except steam railway companies having an agent located in the county, which shall be notified as hereinbefore provided, may be given notice by publication, whether they are resident or non-resident of any or all the counties through which the improvement will pass, and no other notice will be required.'

"There are about 1,500 land owners interested and the cost of personal service would be very expensive, and if legal notice can be given under the law just quoted, it would be a great saving to the property owners, but of more importance is that the notice be legal and that the improvement cannot be enjoined for want of proper service.

"As this involves a public improvement I trust you will give this matter your very earliest attention."

As you suggest one statutory method of giving notice, the consideration of your inquiry may properly first dispose of this. The provision copied in your inquiry appears in Page and Adams Supplement as section 6449 General Code, which is a part of the chapter on single county ditches. It might be thought to have application to interstate county ditches by reason of the phrase "in more than one county," and its application to cases where there are more than two hundred free-holders to be affected. That it cannot have application, however, to the chapter under which you are proceeding appears as follows: There may be only one county in Ohio involved in a proceeding under this chapter, and the language "in more than one county" cannot be held to apply to cases where there is only one county in Ohio, as our statutes have no power whatever over the subject of notice in other states. The language, "in more than one county" therefore should be considered as restricted in its application to the chapter providing inter-county ditches, as the manner of giving notice in interstate county ditch proceedings would not be held to depend upon accident as to whether more than one county in Ohio were involved. There would be no uniformity in the application of the section to proceedings under the chapter generally, but it would be haphazard as to how it would turn out as to whether one county or more than one in Ohio were concerned, whereby applying it to the chapter on inter-county ditches you have a uniform and consistent application of it. This conclusion will also be further enforced when we come to the only section in the interstate county ditch chapter referring to notice.

Taking up, then, this last named chapter, under which you are proceeding, we find that the first twenty-two sections—6564-6585, contain provisions under which the proceeding is conducted to the point where the improvement is found for, engineers' report ordered and made. The point is arrived at where the apportionment of the cost and construction is to be made among the benefited landholders, and so far in the chapter there is no reference whatever to the subject of notice to landholders. Section 6586 General Code is as follows:

> "The further proceedings of the joint board shall be in conformity with the laws for the location of county or joint county ditches taken at this stage of the proceedings. The county commissioners, at their hearing on the apportionment made, may assess any other lands not mentioned in the first report of the engineers, which they deem to be benefited thereby. The owners of said lands shall have due notice thereof."

And here at the end of this section is the first provision for notice. It is not, however, a notice to all the parties affected, but only a notice to those left out in the first instance, or it would appear so from the reading of this and the preceding sections. The sentence is "The owners of said lands shall have due notice thereof." The land referred to is "said lands" or those mentioned above in the section, and are found in the phrase "and may assess any other lands not mentioned in the first report of the engineers, which they deem shall be benefited thereby." So that, to extend this provision for notice to all the land and the land owners affected by the proceedings is really extending the meaning of the section beyond what any construction of its language permits.

Let us now leave this question until we have considered that of the necessity of notice in such proceedings. That such notice is not necessary down to this point was held by our supreme court in 1885, in Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 O. S., 463. It is decided in this case that the power exercised by commissioners is political and not judicial, and that therefore the law is not unconstitutional for not providing notice. The first section of the syllabus is as follows:

> "Section 4452 (Rev. Stats.) which authorizes the county commissioners to view the line of a proposed ditch, and determine, by actual view of the premises along and adjacent thereto, whether the ditch is necessary, or will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare, invests the commissioners with political and not judicial powers; and notice of such proceedings to the owners of lands crossed by the ditch is not essential to the validity of such enactment or of such proceedings thereunder."
> To the same effect—Commissioners v. Gates, 83 O. S., 20.

Since Zimmerman v. Canfield notice has been provided for in single county ditch proceedings and is found in section 6449 G. C., originally enacted in 1894. This is extended to joint county ditch proceedings by virtue of section 6536, General Code, in which it is provided that such joint county ditches may be located and constructed as provided for in single county ditches. In the opinion in the case of Zimmerman v. Canfield, supra, however, it is indicated that notice is required upon the question of taking the land of a person for the construction of a ditch. Owen, J., in the opinion, at page 471, says:

> "It is not upon the question of the appropriation of lands for public use, but upon that of compensation for lands so appropriated, that the owner is entitled, of right, to a hearing in court and the verdict of a jury.

"What remedies the courts afford for the perversion or abuse of this power of appropriation we are not now called upon to inquire."

However, this would apply only to those persons through whose land the improvement extends and not to those whose lands are called upon to bear the proportion of the cost of the location and construction, their remedy is adequate and plain by resorting to a court of equity for an abuse of discretion.

The same year the supreme court held that a personal tax could not be imposed upon a railroad company for the construction of a ditch improvement where no notice had been given. This was in the case of Railroad Company v. Wagner, Treasurer, 43 O. S., 75, the syllabus of which is as follows:

"Where county commissioners have caused to be placed on the duplicate a personal tax to be collected against a resident owner of land as part of the cost of a county ditch affecting his land, under a proceeding of which such land owner had neither notice nor knowledge, such tax is illegal, and its collection may be perpetually enjoined. The remedial provisions of sections 4490 and 4491 (Rev. Stats.) do not apply to such a case. Miller v. Graham, 17 Ohio St., 1, distinguished."

And in the opinion a distinction is made between a proceeding in rem to charge land of a non-resident with constructive notice and the attempt to make a personal charge against such owner.

We have, then, down to section 6586 General Code a statutory scheme for the construction of these improvements with no provision for notifying the landholders affected, and in that connection the law is settled by the supreme court that such notice down to that point is not necessary. That section, however, in the last line thereof, as above quoted and discussed, plainly indicates the legislative intent that such notice be given, and demonstrates that it was an oversight (as it is all one act) that such notice is not provided for, and we have the requirement that if new parties are brought in they must have due notice.

If effect be given to this law as it is written we have the proceeding carried clear through with notice absolutely required as to those who are overlooked in the first place, and no notice whatever as to those who are originally included. This would be a discrimination which the legislature could not have intended, and it might be questioned whether it would not be violative of the constitution to so discriminate between different persons in the same proceeding.

The wisdom therefore of giving notice to all interested parties is apparent. One of such cases is presented where a legislative intent is indicated beyond what is expressed and where, in order to carry out that intent and to give effect to the legislation at all, it is necessary to add something to what has been enacted. The notice can safely and properly be omitted until this stage of the proceedings is arrived at. Your inquiry is as to the manner and form of such notice.

The only requirement of the statute is that due notice that lands are assessed, where notice is to be given, and no other means or method are provided. Express notice in writing is, or at least may be, required, and you will be safe if it be given in that manner.

It should be noted that you are clear past the stage of proceedings in the single county ditch and the joint county ditch cases that provide for notice. The notices in those cases is a notice in advance of the first meeting of the commissioners in viewing the site of the improvement, and the custom is for all parties who desire, to attend and follow the commissioners about in their wanderings in making the view, as far as each individual may desire with reference to his own interest. This notice, as has been shown, is not required by the constitution, and is not provided for in the law in question. What is required by express statement as to the exceptional cases and by inference as to ordinary cases that notice be given each land owner that the assessment is placed upon his land? Unfortunately the provisions of section 6586 as to the proceedings of the commissioners are prospective and do not look back to see when notice is given in other cases, and the notice therefore can only look to the situation at the stage at which the proceeding has arrived and is a notice to each landowner that his land is assessed and the amount that is so apportioned against it.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF CENSORS—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO MAKE EXAMINATION OF FILM EXCHANGE BOOKING SHEETS.

There is no statutory provision authorizing the board of censors to make an examination of film exchange booking sheets.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Department of Film Censorship, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 7th I received from the department of film censorship the following communication:

> "It has been brought to our notice by persons connected with the motion picture business that some of the exchanges are not submitting all of their copies or duplicates of films to this office for censorship but are showing these pictures and evading the law by cutting our stamp of approval into several parts and affixing a portion to these duplicates and putting them out as though they had been censored. It has been suggested to us that the state is possibly being defrauded out of a revenue amounting to from three to ten thousand dollars a year.
> "Looking at the matter from another view-point if this is taking place it is a direct violation of the law and as we have no inspectors it is quite possible that this is true. We have decided in view of the above to attempt inspection ourselves and would respectfully ask your advice as to our rights to make an examination of the film exchange booking sheets if it is your opinion that we can rightfully do so."

The statutes relative to the board of censors of picture films are found in sections 871-46 to 871-53 of the General Code.

Section 871-46 provides for the board. Section 871-47 provides for the office organization and salary. Section 871-48 provides for the submission of films to the board and the price to be charged therefor. Section 871-49 provides in part that:

> "When a film is passed and approved by the board of censors such film shall be given an approval number which shall be shown on the certificate issued by such board of censors to the party submitting the film. * * * For each film so approved there shall also be issued by the board of censors an official leader or stamp of approval of not less than five feet in length * * * Before any motion picture film shall be publicly exhibited all eliminations ordered by the board shall have been made by the person or persons loaning, renting or leasing such film or films to the exhibitor for exhibition, and there shall be projected upon the screen the design of the official leader or stamp of approval of not less than three feet in length, issued by the board for such film."

Section 871-50 provides that the board may work in conjunction with other like boards. Section 871-51 provides that no film shall be publicly exhibited, unless passed and approved, ninety days after the act takes effect.

Section 871-52 provides as follows:

"Any person, firm or corporation who shall publicly exhibit or show any motion picture within the state of Ohio unless it shall have been passed and approved by the Ohio board of censors or the congress of censors shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both, for each offense. Any person, firm or corporation who shall loan, rent or lease any film or films to any exhibitor or other person for public exhibition within the state of Ohio before such film or films shall have been passed and approved by the Ohio board of censors or congress of censors, shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both for each offense. Any person, firm or corporation who shall loan, rent or lease any film or films to any exhibitor or other person for public exhibition in the state of Ohio before the eliminations ordered by the Ohio board of censors or congress of censors have been made, shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both for each offense. Any person, firm or corporation who shall publicly exhibit or show any motion picture within the state of Ohio without having first projected upon the screen the design of the official leader or stamp of approval of not less than three feet in length, assigned to such film as shown on the certificate issued by the board of censors shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both for each offense. Any person, firm or corporation who shall publicly exhibit or show any motion picture within the state of Ohio that contains parts or sections that have been ordered eliminated by the Ohio board of censors or congress of censors, or shall add any part or parts to any motion picture after the same has been censored and approved by the Ohio board of censors or congress of censors, and shall rent or lease such motion picture for public exhibition, or shall publicly exhibit any motion picture containing any part or parts added after such motion picture has been censored and approved by the Ohio board of censors or congress of censors, shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both for each offense."

There is nothing in the act, as an examination thereof will disclose, which grants to the board of censors any authority whatever to make an examination of the film exchange booking sheets and there being no statutory authority therefor, the board is without authority so to do.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE JUDGE—NO AUTHORITY TO CONTRACT FOR MEDICAL ATTENTION OR HOSPITAL TREATMENT—FOR PAUPER WARD OF COURT.

The juvenile judge has no authority to contract with physicians for medical attention to be rendered a pauper ward of the court nor any authority to contract with a hospital for treatment or care of such patient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 31, 1917, as follows:

> "We are enclosing herewith correspondence had between the auditor of Columbiana county and this bureau, touching a bill that has been presented to the board of county commissioners of Columbiana county for surgical services and care of a ward of the juvenile court of said county, and we would respectfully request your written opinion as to whether or not said bill is payable from the county treasury."

Judge Farr's letter of March 29, 1917, to the county auditor, sets out the facts in this case as follows:

> "Referring to our recent conversation concerning the case of Estella Klink, a neglected juvenile dependent, of about sixteen years of age, permit me to explain more fully.
> "About last September, while serving as probate judge of this county, I was notified from Leetonia that Estella was very ill of appendicitis in a home where she was temporarily placed and working. The lady who had her in charge, a Mrs. Andler, stated to me that the doctor had just informed her that the only way to save the girl's life was to take her immediately to the hospital at Salem for an operation. I, of course, gave my consent, and she was taken, I believe, on the next car, operated upon, but did not rapidly recover, so that it became necessary to keep her in the hospital for a considerable length of time. It was also necessary to perform some five or eight different operations, and she finally developed a case of double pneumonia. However, she survived it all, and a bill has been presented by the Salem hospital, where she was placed as a patient in a charity ward, but for which, I believe, they charged probably nine dollars per week. I never had any question about the right, or the authority of the juvenile court, to commit a child to a hospital under such circumstances. As you are of course aware, this county does not have such an institution, nor could she be sent to the county infirmary under such circumstances, as I understand that the law does not permit it.

"I am sure that my view of the right of the juvenile court to have a child cared for under such circumstances, is shared by other juvenile judges of the state, some of whom are quite prominent, such as Judge Addams, of Cleveland, whom I believe entertains this same view."

The physicians have now presented a bill for $125.00 for six major operations and the Salem hospital has presented a bill for $250.00 for board and care of the patient.

Section 1653 G. C. provides:

"When a minor under the age of eighteen years, or any ward of the court under this chapter, is found to be dependent or neglected, the judge may make an order committing such child to the care of the children's home if there be one in the county where such court is held, if not, to such a home in another county, if willing to receive such child, for which the county commissioners of the county in which it has a settlement, shall pay reasonable board; or he may commit such child to the board of state charities or to some suitable state or county institution, or to the care of some reputable citizen of good moral character, or to the care of some training school or an industrial school, as provided by law, or to the care of some association willing to receive it, which embraces within its objects the purposes of caring for or obtaining homes for dependent, neglected or delinquent children or any of them, and which has been approved by the board of state charities as provided by law. When the health or condition of the child shall require it the judge may cause the child to be placed in a public hospital or institution for treatment or special care, or in a private hospital or institution which will receive it for like purposes without charge. The court may make an examination regarding the income of the parents or guardian of a minor committed as provided by this section and may then order that such parent or guardian pay the institution or board to which the minor has been committed reasonable board for such minor, which order, if disobeyed, may be enforced by attachment as for contempt."

It is clear from a reading of this section that the hospital in which the judge is authorized to place the child for treatment is one which will not make a charge for such treatment. No authority is given him to contract as was done in the case referred to nor can I find any other statute allowing the juvenile judge to contract for medical services to be rendered a ward of the juvenile court.

It has been suggested that even in the absence of statutory authority, the court might have inherent power to do what it did in this case. We are foreclosed, however, from taking this view, I think, because of the language of section 1653, just quoted, which is sufficient, I think, to divest the court of any such inherent power with respect to this matter, if it did at any time possess the same.

Sections 2546, 3490 and 3480 G. C. provide:

"Sec. 2546. County commissioners may contract with one or more competent physicians, to furnish medical relief and medicines necessary for the persons of their respective townships to come under their charge, but no contract shall extend beyond one year. Such contract shall be given to the lowest competent bidder, the county commissioners reserving the right to reject any or all bids. The physicians shall report quarterly to the county commissioners on blanks furnished by the commissioners, the names of all persons to whom they have furnished medical relief or medicines, the number of visits made in attending such persons, the character of the disease, and such other information as may be required by the commissioners. The commissioners may discharge any such physician for proper cause."

"Sec. 3490. The trustees of a township, or the proper officers of a municipal corporation in any county, may contract with one or more competent physicians to furnish medical relief and medicines necessary for the persons who come under their charge under the poor laws, but no contract shall extend beyond one year. Such physician shall report quarterly to the clerk of the township or municipality, on blanks furnished him for that purpose, the names of all persons to whom he has furnished medical relief or medicines, the number of visits made in attending such person, the character of the disease, and such other information as may be required by such trustees or officers."

"Section 3480. When a person in a township or municipal corporation requires public relief, or the services of a physician or surgeon, complaint thereof shall be forthwith made by a person having knowledge of the fact to the township trustees, or proper municipal officer. If medical services are required, and no physician or surgeon is regularly employed by contract to furnish medical attendance to such poor, the physician called or attending shall immediately notify such trustees or officer, in writing, that he is attending such person, and thereupon the township or municipal corporation shall be liable for relief and services thereafter rendered such person, in such amount as such trustees or proper officers determine to be just and reasonable. If such notice be not given within three days after such relief is afforded or services begin, the township or municipal corporation shall be liable only for relief or services rendered after notice has been given. Such trustees or officer, at any time may order the discontinuance of such services, and shall not be liable for services or relief thereafter rendered."

These are the only statutes to my knowledge authorizing the employment of physicians for medical relief of the poor.

Former Attorney-General Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion dated June 22, 1912, volume 2, page 1384, said of these sections:

"Section 3480, supra, provides that if 'no physician or surgeon is regularly employed by contract to furnish medical attendance,' relief may be given in the manner therein provided. This section contemplates that a physician or surgeon may be employed by contract. Section 3490, General Code, authorizes a contract with a physician for medical relief. There is no other statute authorizing the township trustees to contract for the services of a physician. Section 2546, General Code, authorizes a contract with a physician for medical relief by the infirmary directors. These are the only provisions of the statute authorizing a contract with a physician for medical relief of the poor.

"The provision of section 3480, supra, as to a contract with a physician or surgeon, refers to the authority granted in said sections 3490 and 2546, General Code. It is therefore evident that the term physician as used in said sections, will include a surgeon and that the term 'medical relief' will include 'surgical relief.' * * *

"The provision of section 3480, General Code, applying when no physician or surgeon is regularly employed to furnish medical attendance to the poor, who are a public charge. * * * *

"The authority to pay for such services is prescribed by the statutes, and the provisions thereof must be complied with."

From a consideration of these statutes it is clear that when medical relief is necessary for the poor, it must be furnished in one of three ways: (1) Through physicians regularly employed under contract by the county commissioners; (2) by physicians regularly employed under contract by the trustees of a township or the proper officers of a municipal corporation; or, (3) if no such physicians are regularly employed, then through physicians temporarily employed by the township trustees or proper municipal officer under section 3480 General Code.

These provisions of the statute having been adopted by the legislature and section 1653 General Code restricting the authority of the juvenile judge to offer medical relief to pauper wards of the court, I am of the opinion that if any medical relief is to be furnished to a pauper ward of the juvenile court which will involve the employment of a physician, use of a hospital and expenditure of money, such medical relief will have to be furnished as above indicated, and that the juvenile judge is without authority in law to contract for the same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT—IS PUBLIC OFFICER—HIS SALARY HOWEVER MAY BE CHANGED DURING HIS TERM OF OFFICE.

A county school superintendent, provided for by the "School Code" of 1914 possesses all the indicia necessary to make the position a public office and the incumbent of the position a public officer. He is not such an officer, however, whose salary cannot be changed during his term of office.

Where a county superintendent of school is hired for two years and his salary fixed at $1,500.00 per year, said salary may be increased during his term to $1,800.00 per year, and when paid recovery cannot be had for such increase.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. HARRY RANKIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Washington C. H., Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your statement of facts for my official opinion reads as follows:

"As shown by the minutes of April 27, 1915, Mr. Nelson was elected for a term of two years at a salary of $1,500.00 per year. On August 4, 1915, this salary was increased to $1,800.00 for the first year and on July 28, 1916, his salary was fixed at $1,800.00 for the year beginning August 1, 1916. Mr. Nelson entered upon his duties on August 1, 1915, and has continued to draw his salary at $1,800.00 per year since that time.

"It is claimed by the members present at the time this salary was increased on August 4, 1915, that since the appointment of Mr. Nelson the legislature amended section 4740 of the General Code permitting 'any village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes which maintains the first grade high school and which employes a superintendent,' to apply to the county board of education to be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent, the amendments of G. C. 4740 may be found in volume 105-106 Ohio Laws at pages 398 and 439, passed May 27, 1915.

"On August 14, 1915, the board of education of Wayne township, Fayette county, Ohio, passed a resolution under section 4740 of the General Code, said resolution and the action thereon by the county board of education being found in the minutes of August 31, 1915. It is claimed by the county superintendent that the new duties required of him by reason of this resolution occasioned the increase of his salary on August 4, 1915, and on July 28, 1916; that although the resolution was not passed by the board of education of Wayne township until after the first raise in salary was made, that it was understood and agreed by both boards of education that the Wayne township schools would be placed under the direct supervision of the county superintendent as was later provided in said resolution; and that this understanding was reached some time in the month of May, 1915.

"I would like your opinion regarding the above state of facts as to whether or not the increase in salary could be legally made and whether or not the payments in excess of $1,500.00 per year can be recovered by the prosecuting attorney under section 2921 of the General Code."

Additional facts were secured in the above matter May 7, 1917, to the effect that the certificate required by section 4744-1 was filed with the county auditor of your county in August, 1915, and being filed in lieu of the one which should have been filed on or before August 1st of said year.

The county board of education of any county, at a regular meeting held not later than the 20th day of July in any year, shall appoint a county superintendent of schools for a term not exceeding three years, which term shall begin on the first day of August.

A county superintendent of schools is held in State ex rel. v. Vance et al., 18 O. N. P., (n. s.) 198, to be a public officer. The court on page 204 uses the following language:

"The position of county superintendent under the recent act of the legislature possesses all the indicia necessary to make the position a public office and the incumbent of the position a public officer.

"Counsel for the plaintiff contends that the precise question here presented has been determined favorably to him in the cases of Ward v. Board of Education, 21 C. C. 699, and State ex rel. v. Vickers, 58 O. S. 730, in both of which cases it was held that a superintendent of schools is not an officer. But these decisions are wholly inapplicable to a case of a county superintendent because of the fact that the duties of the officials mentioned are materially different, and especially because of the further fact that in the present case the duties are derived from the law and are performed independently of any other body or official; while in the cases of superintendents of schools, the superintendents were performing duties prescribed by contract and were answerable to an employer. And besides, as the law stood at the time those decisions were made, the management and control of the schools were vested absolutely in the board of education. The board, and not the superintendent, were responsible for the conduct and control of the schools, while under the present law that duty and responsibility is shifted on to the county superintendent. Formerly the superintendent of schools was merely the agent or employe of the board through whom the board discharged their duty to the public to manage and control the schools under their jurisdiction.

"I am constrained to hold that under the school law enacted last February (1914) the county superintendent therein provided for is a public officer."

Being, then, a public officer, the question naturally arises: Can his salary be changed during his term of office?

Section 20 of article II of the Constitution of Ohio provides:

"The general assembly, in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers; but no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term unless the office be abolished."

If the last sentence of the above quoted section could apply to a case of this nature, then no change in said salary could be made, but no provision is found anywhere in the school laws prohibiting a change in compensation of an officer during his term of office. In fact General Code section 7690 specifically provides that salaries may be increased but not diminished during the term for which the appointment of teachers is made, and, passing upon a case of similar nature the court in State ex rel. v. Board of Education, 21 O. C. C. 785, held:

"The claim of counsel for the relator is that the board of education having, in pursuance of the requirement of the statute, fixed the compensation or salary of the members of the board of examiners, had no right during the continuance of his term to lower same and we understand that a claim (in part at least) is founded on the provisions of section 20, article 2 of the Constitution, which is as follows:

" 'The general assembly, in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers, but no change therein shall effect any officer during his existing term unless the office is abolished.'

"We are of the opinion that this section does not apply to a case like his; that the office and officers spoken of therein do not refer to such officers as a member of a board of examiners or to the officers of a municipal corporation, for instance, mayor, marshal, clerk, treasurer, etc., but to those created by the general assembly, and whose salary is to be fixed by that body. That this is the true meaning of this section and the legislative construction placed upon it, we think is shown by sections 1716 and 1717 R. S., which provide that the councils of municipal corporations shall prescribe what fees or compensation officers of municipal corporations shall receive for their services, which shall in no case be increased or diminished during the term for which the officer was elected or appointed. If such officers came within the provisions of article II, section 20, such legislation would be unnecessary. Nor does a member of a board of examiners come within the designation of officers of municipal corporations. They are provided for in part second, title III, under the head 'schools' and not under part one, title XII, regulating 'municipal corporations.' And we see no provision in the school laws prohibiting a change in the compensation of an officer during his term of office."

Holding, then, as I must, that the county superintendent of schools is a public officer and that he is not such a public officer as comes within the constitutional provisions which prevent a change of salary during his official term, I cannot escape the conclusion that the board of education had a right to change the salary as indicated in your statement of facts and that no recovery can be had therefor.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DITCH SUPERINTENDENT—NOT COUNTY OFFICER—SECTION 6726-1 IS CONSTITUTIONAL—WARRANTS PROVIDED FOR IN SECTION 6726-3—SHOULD BE PAID FROM COUNTY FUND—WHERE THERE IS NO DITCH FUND—COUNTY REIMBURSED BY ASSESSMENTS AGAINST BENEFITED PROPERTY—HOW APPORTIONMENT OF COST FOR CLEANING DITCH SHOULD BE MADE—WHEN SUPERINTENDENT SHOULD BE APPOINTED.

The ditch superintendent provided for by G. C. 6726-1 is not a county officer and said section is not unconstitutional by reason of providing for his appointment by the county commissioners instead of his election by the voters of the county.

Under section 6726-3 the warrants therein provided for may be paid out of the county fund and, where there is no ditch fund, must be paid out of the county fund.

Where such payment is made out of the county fund, the county should be reimbursed out of the assessments against benefited property.

Where there has been no proceeding for the cleaning out of such ditch, in which there has been an apportionment of the cost thereof, such apportionment of the cost of such cleaning out thereof should be made upon the basis of the apportionment for the original construction.

The requirement that such superintendent be appointed at the regular meeting in January is directory, and, if such appointment be omitted then it may be made afterwards.

The county commissioners have four regular sessions each year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In a communication by you to this office under date of February 15, 1917, you make the following inquiry:

> "I desire to inquire further whether or not the principle laid down in the decision by which the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law was held unconstitutional would make unconstitutional section 6726-1 and the succeeding sections on the same subject of the General Code as amended in 103 Ohio Laws at page 185. That is to say, is the county ditch superintendent provided for in that section a county officer who must be elected by a vote under the terms of that decision? If that act is constitutional, does section 6726-3 authorize the warrants provided for in that section to be drawn from the county fund when the county has no general ditch fund and may the assessments provided in the succeeding sections be made to reimburse the county for repairs and cleaning of a ditch where no proceedings were had to which the party sought to be assessed was a party before the ditch was cleaned, except such proceedings as were had when the ditch was originally established? If these sections are constitutional and the commissioners of the county have failed to make the appointment at their regular meeting in January, may they make the appointment at a later date? In the strict sense of the term, the board of county commissioners has but four regular meetings a year. Is the term regular so used in this state to be so construed or does it mean the meeting at which it is the custom of the board to hold on a particular day of each week?"

Your first inquiry is whether or not the late decision of the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. Godfrey v. O'Brien holding the Parrett-Whittemore law unconstitutional would have the same effect as to section 6726-1, and whether or not the county ditch superintendent provided for in that section is a county officer. Section 6726-1 is as follows:

"That in addition to the other provisions of law, providing for the cleaning out, keeping in repair and maintaining county and joint county ditches, it is hereby provided as follows:

"The county commissioners of any county in this state within which there is a county or joint county ditch constructed and in operation, may of their own motion, or on the written petition of ten property owners of said county whose lands were assessed for the original construction or when enlargements have or will be made the last enlargement of said ditch, shall, at their first regular meeting in the month of January of each year, or as soon thereafter as possible, appoint a competent superintendent, who shall have charge of said ditch as hereinafter provided, within said county for the term of one year and until his successor is appointed and qualified, and shall fix his compensation. Before entering upon the discharge of his duties as provided for herein, said superintendent shall take an oath of office, and shall execute a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties in such sum and with such surety as said commissioners shall approve."

It will be observed that this section, which is drawn with exceeding looseness, starts out as though it were making provision for the maintenance of all county ditches in the county. By the time you get down to the middle of it, however, it is discovered that the separate provision is contemplated for each county ditch, or rather for each county ditch as to which the county commissioners conclude to make such appointment on their own motion or on the written petition of ten property owners. This functionary so provided for and to be appointed is styled the "superintendent." It would not occur to anyone that such person with limited, casual duties to perform, confined to one particular ditch was a county officer, except for the provision that "he shall take an oath of office and shall execute a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties."

The decision in the case above referred to having application, is found in the third section of the syllabus, which is as follows:

"A provision in an act of the general assembly of this state for the appointment instead of the election of a county or township officer, is in violation of section 1 of article X of the Constitution of Ohio, and void."

A member of the present supreme court, in discussing the effect of syllabi, said:—

> "It must be remembered that every syllabus that is written must be read in view of the facts found in the case decided, for it is not possible for a court to comprehend in every syllabus all of the many phases of the facts that may arise in other litigations touching similar transactions."
> RE Poage, 87 O. S. 72, at the top of page 83.

Whether the superintendent provided for in the section in question is an officer or not is a question of little moment. It does not follow from the mere requirement that he is to give bond and take an oath that he must be elected by all of the electors of the county. The general electors of the county have no concern either with him or with his duties. No one is interested except a few persons affected by the particular ditch, and it would indeed be a strange extension of the authority of the above case to require such person to be elected by all the voters of the county. No doubt exists that such duties with reference to a particular ditch can be done by someone in some manner, chosen for that purpose.

It therefore follows that the legislature has full power to provide for the selection of such person by appointment.

This question is therefore answered in the negative.

Your second question is conditioned upon the answer to the first in the affirmative and might therefore be passed by without answer. The section referred to—section 6726-2—provides that such officer shall file a report with the county auditor showing his expenditures and then proceeds:

> "and said county auditor shall issue his warrant to the county treasurer for the amounts thus allowed by said county commissioners in favor of said ditch superintendent payable out of the general expense or county ditch fund of the county, as directed by the county commissioners * * *"

It would seem, of course, somewhat strange that the expense of cleaning out or repairing a particular ditch for the benefit of particular persons affected should be paid out of the county fund, nevertheless the legislature has clothed the commissioners with power to do so, and the statute requiring it to be paid out of one fund or the other is, in case where only one of such funds happens to be in existence, a binding requirement to pay it out of that fund.

Your third question again depends upon the answer to the last, and that is:

> "if such payment has been made out of the general fund can the county be reimbursed out of the assessments provided for in the succeeding section?"

The answer to this is in the affirmative, as the legislative intent in the enactment of the scheme provided in this particular section is clearly evident that such maintenance and repair is to be paid by the party who receives the benefit.

Your third question, however, involves a fourth as to > "whether such payment so made from the county fund may be assessed back in event that no proceedings for the cleaning of this ditch have taken place and consequently no apportionment therefor has been made except that apportionment made at the original establishment of the ditch."

This case seems to be met by section 4 of the act—section 6726-4 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "There shall be kept in the office of the county auditor a special duplicate on which shall be entered and preserved a description of the lands and lots assessed for the construction of said ditch within said county, together with the names of the owners of same, and the amounts originally or if enlarged last enlargement assessed against each tract or parcel of land and annually when said county auditor is making up his tax duplicate he shall apportion all money expended as aforesaid for the year up to August 31 on the lands and lots aforesaid benefited on the basis of the assessments, as made, shall without delay notify the county commissioners of same; they shall thereupon fix a time for hearing at their office of any complaints by aggrieved parties as to said assessments, not later than ten days from said date, and notice in writing of said hearing shall be given by said county auditor to all parties assessed for said ditch, residing in the county, together with the amount of their respective assessments personally or by leaving same at their residence at least five days before said hearing, and like notice to all non-resident parties also shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in said county at least five days before said day of hearing. At said time of hearing the report of said assessments as made by said county auditor, or as the same may be changed on the complaint of parties as aforesaid, shall be confirmed by said commissioners, and appeal may be had therefrom by any complaining party to the probate court of said county in the usual manner of appeals, if said appeal is filed in the office of said judge within three days thereafter and a bond with surety for same as given by said county to the approval of said probate judge conditioned that if the action of the commissioners is confirmed that appellant shall pay all costs of said appeal. Within five days after perfecting said appeal said probate judge, sitting as in equity, without a jury, shall hear said case, and his decision shall be final. Notice whereof shall be given by him to the county auditor and by which he shall be governed in making said assessments, but in future years unless the ditch is subsequently enlarged no notice of assessments shall be given, and said assessments shall be a lien on said lands and lots to be collected, the same as other taxes by the county treasurer, and as the same is collected shall be placed to the credit of the general expense or other fund of said county from which same was drawn by said treasurer."

This section contains the most startling innovations found in this remarkable law. For one thing it provides an appeal from the amount of an assessment, found nowhere else in the whole system of drainage laws of Ohio. In addition to that it gets upon the subject of the jurisdiction of the court and confers equity jurisdiction upon the probate court. Having gone to that extent all restraint is thrown away and the probate court is made a court of last resort. However, it is perfectly apparent from the provisions of this section that where a new apportionment is made the original apportionment may be used as the basis for assessing the cost of the maintenance and repairs.

Your fifth question again is based on the answer in favor of the constitutionality of the act, and is as to whether the county commissioners, if they fail to make the appointment at the regular meeting in January, may make it at a later date. The statute in question says that they can. The time fixed is > "at the first regular meeting in the month of January of each year, or as soon thereafter as possible."

Without the qualifying phrase, however, the designation of this meeting as the time for the appointment would be held directory and the great purpose of the act would not fail by the neglect of the commissioners to make the appointment at the particular time, but their fault or oversight could be corrected later when the omission became apparent and the exigency pressing.

Your sixth question is as to the meaning of the word "regular" as used in section 6726-1 applying to the meeting at which initial action is taken. Section 2401 is as follows:

> "There shall be four regular sessions of the board of county commissioners each year, at the office of the commissioners at the county seat, commencing, respectively, on the first Monday of March, June, September and December. At each meeting the board shall transact such business as required by law."

From this it appears that there is no regular meeting in January in the proper sense of the word. The legislature, therefore, must have used it in a different sense. While the commissioners hold four regular sessions a year and they are said to be held upon those dates, in actual practice these regular meetings are not completed upon the days in question, but generally, or at least frequently, are continued from week to week and held on Monday, as you suggest. The meaning, therefore, of "first regular meeting in January" would be construed to be the first meeting they had in that month of the adjourned session beginning on the first Monday in December, which would ordinarily come on the first Monday in January. The fact, however, that a statement of this kind is directory is made certain by the phrase immediately following—"or as soon thereafter as possible."

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BANKS—DOING BUSINESS UNDER THOMAS ACT—TO WHAT EXTENT THEY MAY INVEST IN STOCKS, SECURITIES OR LOANS—SECTION 9790 APPLIES—LIMIT OF LOAN TO FIRM, CORPORATION OR PERSON—COLLATERAL SECURITY DEPOSITED TO SECURE LOAN NOT CLASSED AS INVESTMENT.

1. Section 9790 G. C. applies to investments by all banks doing business under the Thomas act and limits such investments in any one stock, security or loan to 20 per cent. of the capital and surplus of the bank making the investment. This limitation may only be exceeded where the investment is made in securities enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section 9758.

2. Any bank doing business under the Thomas act is forbidden to loan to any one person, firm or corporation, more than 20 per cent. of its paid-in capital and surplus, the only exception being loans on real estate.

3. Collateral security deposited with a bank to secure a loan cannot be classed as an investment; and no rule of limitation applies to such collateral. The bank can use its funds only by way of loan or investment, and the limitations above specified apply to both, irrespective of the amount or value of the collateral deposited.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. PHILIP C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On May 2, 1917, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "Please favor us with an opinion as to whether or not under section 9790, which prescribes:
> "'Not more than twenty per cent. of the capital and surplus of a corporation doing business under this chapter shall be invested in any one stock security or loan unless it be in bonds or other interest bearing obligations enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section ninety-seven hundred and fifty-eight, or in a building and vaults.'
> "A bank may loan more than twenty per cent. of its capital and surplus on any one stock or security not enumerated in b, c or d of section 9758.
> "This question arises where several borrowers put up as collateral the same stock or security, the aggregate of which very much exceeds the limit to which a bank may invest its funds in such one stock or security as provided by section 9790."

Section 9790, which you quote in your inquiry was original section 64 of the Thomas act (99 Ohio Laws 269) and has been carried into the General Code under the heading "General Provisions," which general provisions apply to all banks specified in the Thomas act, namely, commercial banks, savings banks, safe deposit companies, trust companies, and combinations of the same.

In answering your inquiry it will be necessary to construe section 9790 in connection with sections 9757, 9758 and 9754. These sections are as follows:

> "Sec. 9757. A commercial bank may receive deposits on which interest may be allowed. All deposits in such banks shall be payable on demand without notice, except when the contract of deposit otherwise provides. A commercial bank also may loan money on personal security, discount, buy, sell or assign promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt, and buy and sell exchange, coin and bullion."

"Sec. 9758. Subject to the provisions of the preceding section commercial banks may invest their capital, surplus and deposits in, or loan them upon:

"a. Personal or collateral securities.

"b. Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States, or those for which the faith of the United States is pledged to provide payment of the interest and principal, including bonds of the district of Columbia; also in bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of any foreign government.

"c. Bonds of interest-bearing obligations of this or any other state of the United States.

"d. The legally issued bonds or interest-bearing obligations of any city, village, county, township school district or other district, or political subdivision of this or any other state or territory of the United States and of Canada.

"e. Mortgage bonds or collateral trust bonds of any regularly incorporated company, which has paid, for at least four years, dividends at the rate of at least four per cent. on their capital stock. Such loan shall not exceed eighty per cent. of the market or actual value of such bonds, the purchase of which first has been authorized by the directors. All such securities having a fixed maturity shall be charged and entered upon the books of the bank at their cost to the bank, or at par, when a premium is paid, and the superintendent of banks shall have the power to require any security to be charged down to such sum as in his judgment represents its value. The superintendent of banks may order that any such securities which he deems undesirable be sold within six months.

"f. Notes secured by mortgage on real estate, where the amount loaned thereon inclusive of prior incumbrances does not exceed forty per cent. of the value of the real estate if unimproved, and if improved sixty per cent. of its value including improvements, which shall be kept adequately insured. Not more than fifty per cent. of the amount of the paid-in capital, surplus and deposits of such bank at any time shall be invested in such real estate securities."

"Sec. 9754. A bank doing business as a commercial bank, shall not lend, including overdrafts, to any one person, firm or corporation, more than twenty per cent of its paid-in capital and surplus, unless such loan be secured by first mortgage upon improved farm property in a sum not to exceed sixty per cent. of its value. The total liabilities, including overdrafts, of a person, company, corporation, or firm to any bank, either as principal debtor or as security or indorser for others, for money borrowed, at no time shall exceed twenty per cent. of its paid-in capital stock and surplus. But the discount of bills of exchange drawn against actually existing values, and the discount of commercial or business paper actually owned by the person, company, corporation or firm negotiating it, shall not be considered as money borrowed."

It is apparent, from an examination of the above sections, that a distinction is made between the power to make loans and the power to make investments. This distinction is present throughout the act; thus, section 9753 provides for investments by a commercial bank in real estate, while section 9756 refers solely to loans by such banks on real estate. (See also the provisions as to savings banks, safe deposit companies and trust companies—sections 9762, 9765, 9771, 9772, 9774, 9781, 9783, 9784, 9785, 9813, 9816, 9821, 9822.)

Bearing in mind this fact, that is, that the power to loan and the power to invest funds of a bank are distinct, and referring again to the sections quoted above, it will be seen that section 9757 gives the power, among other powers, to commercial banks to loan money on personal security, and to invest in promissory notes and other evidences of indebtedness. Section 9758 gives the power to commercial banks to invest their capital, surplus and deposits in, and to loan them upon, certain specified securities, or evidences of indebtedness. Sections 9754 and 9790 provide the limitations upon the exercise of the powers granted by section 9757 and 9758, section 9754 providing the limitation of 20% as to all loans and section 9790 the same limitation of 20% as to all investments, except those mentioned in paragraphs b, c and d of section 9758.

As stated before, section 9790 applies to all banks doing business under the Thomas act, and, therefore, none of such banks can invest more than 20% of its capital and surplus in any one stock, security, or loan, except in bonds or other interest-bearing obligations enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section 9758, supra.

Section 9754 provides the same limitation of 20% on all loans by a commercial bank. Under the law a commercial bank is forbidden to loan to any one person, firm or corporation more than 20% of its paid-in capital and surplus, the only exception being: (a) A loan secured by first mortgage upon improved farm property in a sum not to exceed sixty per cent. of the value of such property; and (b) the bona fide discount of commercial paper. This 20% limitation expressly applies to indebtedness by way of overdrafts, and security or endorsement.

Section 9754, for the purpose of this opinion, may be treated as a general provision, for the same 20% limitation as to loans by commercial banks prescribed by it, is prescribed for trust companies by section 9780 and for savings banks by section 9771.

Section 9790 thus applies strictly to investments and 9754 to loans; and neither has any reference to securities deposited as collateral to secure a loan. Such securities cannot be classed either as a loan or investment. The 20% limitation of section 9754 applies to the amount which the bank can loan to one person or firm, and, of course, the bank should be and is allowed to hold all the collateral of which it can obtain possession to secure the loan. Section 9790 applies only to investments and in no sense can collateral deposited in good faith to secure a loan be classed.

As an investment for a bank, it is true that the value of the loan may depend entirely upon the collateral, but, until, the bank is actually compelled to become the owner of the collateral, it cannot be classed as an investment. There being no statute whatever placing any limitation upon the amount of collateral a bank may take, it is my opinion that any bank, provided the 20% limitation as to the borrower is observed, may take as collateral any amount of stock or other security.

The limitation as to the amount of the loan cannot be affected by the value or amount of the collateral security offered.

My opinion is:

1. Section 9790 applies to investments by all banks doing business under the Thomas act and limits such investments in any one stock, security or loan to 20% of the capital and surplus of the bank making the investment. This limitation may only be exceeded where the investment is made in securities enumerated in paragraphs b, c and d of section 9758.

2. Any bank doing business under the Thomas act is forbidden to loan to any one person, firm or corporation, more than 20% of its paid in capital and surplus. The only exception being loans on real estate.

3. Collateral security deposited with a bank to secure a loan cannot be classed as an investment; and no rule of limitation applies to such collateral. The bank can use its funds only by way of loan or investment and the limitations above specified apply to both, irrespective of the amount or value of the collateral deposited.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO ERECT SCHOOL BUILDING OUTSIDE OF ITS DISTRICT.

A board of education has no authority to erect a school building outside of its district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

HON. C. G. ROETZEL, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—

ATTENTION W. A. SPENCER, ASSISTANT.

In your communication, the receipt of which was previously acknowledged, you ask my opinion upon the following proposition:

> "The board of education of the Hudson Township Rural School District, of this county, are contemplating buying a site and erecting a school building in their district. In their judgment the most convenient location for erecting this building would be in the Hudson Village School District, which is outside of their district. Have they the legal right to erect, own and operate this school building outside of their district and in the Village School District of Hudson?"

A board of education has only those limited powers which are especially granted it by statute. The power to own, control and hold real estate is found in certain sections of the General Code, hereinafter referred to.

General Code section 7620 provides:

> "The board of education of a district may build, enlarge, repair and furnish the necessary school houses, purchase or lease sites therefor, or rights of way thereto, or purchase or lease real estate to be used for playgrounds for children or rent suitable schoolrooms, provide the necessary apparatus and make all other necessary provisions for the schools under its control. It also shall * * * make all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within the subdistricts."

By the provisions of the above section a board of education is empowered to purchase or lease sites upon which it may build any necessary school houses or it may rent suitable school rooms and may make all necessary provisions for the convenience and prosperity of the schools under its control.

Section 4749 provides:

> "The board of education of each school district * * * shall be a body politic and corporate and as such capable of * * * contracting and being contracted with, acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property, and taking and holding trust for the use and benefit of such district any grant or device of land and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property and of exercising such other powers and privileges as are conferred by this title and the law relating to the public schools in this state."

By the provisions of the above quoted section the board of education has the right to acquire, hold and possess real property as and for its corporate use.

The above quoted part sections of the General Code contain the only provisions of law I have been able to find which grant boards of education the power of acquiring and holding real estate, except where territory is transferred to a school district certain other provisions apply which will be hereinafter mentioned.

A distinction should be drawn between the holding and owning of real estate for school purposes and for the levying and collecting of taxes upon property for school purposes. In the former the board of education has a right to acquire, only that real estate which is necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within the district. In the latter board of education has the right for taxation purposes to levy and collect taxes upon all real and personal property within its district not exempt from taxation. I find no specific power given by any statute to a board of education to acquire real estate for the use of the schools, which real estate lies outside of its district.

It is held in Dillon on Municipal Corporations, 5th Edition, Volume 3, section 980:

> "Municipal corporations being created chiefly as governmental agencies and for the attainment of local objects merely, the general rule is that they cannot purchase and hold real estate beyond their territorial limits unless the power is conferred by the legislature. It has been expressly decided that a conveyance to a municipal corporation of lands beyond its boundaries for the purpose of a street is void, though the corporation has, by its charter, power 'to purchase, hold and convey any real property for the public use of the corporation.'"

In this case, as in the case of a municipal corporation, the board of education is created for local objects, and having only such powers as are conferred by the legislature and no specific power having been so conferred to acquire lands beyond its boundaries, it would seem that the above principle of law should be followed.

In General Code section 4690, where territory is annexed to a city or village, the territory thereby becomes a part of the city or village school district, but special provision is made in said section that the legal title to the school property which is located in such territory and which is being used for school purposes, shall remain vested in the board of education of the school district from which such territory was detached until such time as may be agreed upon by the several boards of education when such territory may be transferred by warranty deed.

In Board of Education v. Board of Education, 46 O. S., 595, a township school district built a school house at a certain central place in the district, which school house was to be used for the schools of a higher grade than primary. After said school house was built and in use, the territory surrounding such school house was created into a village school district and the board of education of such village school district attempted to take possession of such school house and use the same for schools of the village school district. The court held that this could not be done, and on page 597 the following language was used:

> "The school house in dispute was built by the township board to be used for teaching a school of higher grade than primary for the benefit of the youth of the whole township. It was, presumably, located at a point most convenient for that purpose, and which happened to fall within the territory afterwards organized into a separate village district, but was not designed for the benefit of that territory alone; * * * * * * The township board never renounced its general control over, or transferred to the defendant its title to, the property; this must have been accomplished, if at all, by operation of law, from the circumstances that it was situated within the territorial limits of the defendant when the territory was organized into a village district. * * * * * * * * * * Can it be reasonably supposed that the legislature contemplated that, after a township board had, perhaps, expended a large sum of money in purchasing a site convenient for the whole township, erected a building in every way suitable and commodious for the youth of the township who might be desirous of higher education, and provided instruments appropriate to the object in view, their hopes could be defeated, and house, grounds and appliances wrested from them, by the inhabitants of the territory in which the building was situated, organizing themselves into a separate school district? * * * * * * * To hold that grounds, buildings and appliances, designed and intended to secure to the youth of the whole township an opportunity for education in the higher branches of learning could be thus transferred, would defeat a legislative purpose clearly discernible upon the face of the law; for township boards could hardly be expected to provide the necessary means to accomplish it, where the requisite property should be held by so uncertain a tenure."

The purpose, then, of section 4690 G. C. is by the above decision made plain; that is, that where a district has acquired property and has placed thereon valuable buildings and apparatus to be used for the schools of such district, such property should not be taken from such board of education without a clear provision of law in relation to the equities applying thereto.

The above permission to hold property outside of the territorial limits of a district is an exception instead of the general rule. Unless otherwise provided by statute, the general rule is that school property must be owned and controlled by the boards of education having jurisdiction over the territory in which such school property is located. 156 Calif., 416; 23 Pick., 62; 109 Ind., 559; 27 Ind., 465; 29 Ky. Law Rep., 391, etc.

The intention of the legislature confirms this view when it provides that a village and a rural school district may join for high school purposes. In that case the district is designated as a joint district and the property may be located in either the village or the rural district, but in either event it would be located in the joint district and be within the territorial limitations of same.

Holding these views, then, I advise you that the board of education of the Hudson Township Rural School District has no authority to erect a school building outside of its district.

Yours very truly,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PETITION TO CITY COUNCIL TO VACATE STREET—NO LAW AUTHORIZING ANY STATE OFFICIAL TO SIGN SAME.

There is no provision of law authorizing any state official to sign a petition praying the council of a municipality to vacate a street or alley. This authority so to act must be given by the legislature, either by general provisions or by special enactment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1917.

HON. GEORGE H. WOOD, Adjutant General of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of the communication addressed to your department by Captain Paul L. Mitchell, Troop "C," First Ohio Cavalry, Cincinnati, Ohio. The communication reads as follows:

> "I enclose plat showing the Cincinnati Cavalry armory property which is shown between parallel red lines and designated 'The Riding Club.'
> "I desire to present to the state the land adjoining the Riding Club property and shown by crossed red ink lines. This additional property to be used at some future date for an armory building suitable for housing the additional troops now authorized for Cincinnati.
> "In order to make this land suitable for such a building, it will be necessary to condemn that part of Cumberland street shown inside the crossed red lines.
> "The council of Cincinnati will vacate said part of Cumberland street if all abutting owners file a petition to that effect.
> "It appears obvious that with the acquisition of the additional land proposed, that the vacation of that part of Cumberland street will add to the property a considerable area and still leave access to that part of Cumberland street not vacated.
> "Kindly advise me whether the state will sign such a petition to vacate Cumberland street and refer me to your legal representative in Cincinnati so that I can take the matter up promptly.
> "All expense incident to acquiring this property and vacating the street to be borne by me."

As shown by the plat enclosed with said communication, the state of Ohio owns certain lands in Cincinnati, abutting upon Cumberland street. Captain Paul L. Mitchell also owns lands abutting upon said Cumberland street.

The council of Cincinnati is willing to vacate a certain part of said Cumberland street. The state of Ohio and Captain Mitchell own all the land abutting upon that part of Cumberland street which the council of Cincinnati is willing to vacate.

The question submitted to this department is as to whether the state of Ohio would join with Captain Mitchell in signing a petition requesting the council of Cincinnati to vacate the part of said street upon which the lands of the state of Ohio and the lands of Captain Mitchell abut.

The proceedings in reference to the vacation of a street or alley are set forth in sections 3725 et seq. G. C. Section 3725 G. C. provides that on petition by a person owning a lot in the corporation praying that a street or alley in the immediate vicinity of such lot may be vacated or narrowed, council may declare, by ordinance, such street or alley vacated.

Section 3727 G. C. provides as follows:

> "Notice of the intention of council to vacate any street, alley, avenue, or part thereof shall, in all cases, be given as provided in the next section, except when there is filed with council written consent to such vacation by the owners of the property abutting the part of the street or alley proposed to be vacated, in which case such notice shall not be required."

Section 3728 G. C. provides for the notice of application to be published, and this publication shall be made in those cases in which all the abutting property owners do not sign a petition praying for the vacation of the street or alley.

I have examined our statutes very carefully and find no provision whatever therein that would authorize any state official to sign such a petition. The power of selling or leasing or surrendering any rights which the state of Ohio has in lands rests with the legislature. It is the only body which has the power to grant authority to officials either to sign deeds or leases or any other instruments conveying its interest in land. As the state of Ohio has an easement in and to said Cumberland street, the state, by signing a petition for the vacation of the same, would be surrendering its rights in and to said street. The legislature has provided no general method by which any state officials may sign such a petition, and of course it has enacted no special legislation for this purpose. Hence, I must conclude that no official of the state would have authority to sign the petition praying for the vacation of said Cumberland street, the legislature being the only body that could give authority to a state official to sign such a petition.

I might suggest, however, that Captain Mitchell could sign a petition praying for the vacation of the street, but in proceeding in such a manner the provisions of section 3728 G. C., in reference to giving notice, would have to be complied with.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF MORGAN COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

> "IN RE: Bond issue of Morgan county, Ohio, in the sum of $64,500, the same being one hundred and twenty-nine bonds of the denomination of $500 each, issued by the commissioners of said county for the purpose of paying the respective shares of said county, certain townships and lands assessed for the improvement of certain sections of inter-county highways Nos. 162 and 393."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of county commissioners of Morgan county, Ohio, and other officers relating to the above bond issue, after said transcript has been corrected in order to comply with the requirements of this department. As a result of this examination I am of the opinion that the issue of said bonds has been provided for in accordance with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio relating to the subject-matter, and that bonds prepared in accordance with bond and coupon form covering said issue will, when signed by the proper officers of Morgan county, Ohio, constitute valid and binding obligations of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNCIL OF VILLAGE OF BEXLEY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bonds of the village of Bexley, Franklin county, Ohio, in the sum of $14,000, issued by said village in anticipation of the collection of assessments for the improvement of Columbia avenue from the south line of South Commonwealth avenue to the south line of Maryland avenue in said village."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Bexley relative to the above bond issue. As a result of such examination I find said proceedings and the transcript thereof to be in accordance with the provisions of the General Code relating to the subject-matter.

I am of the opinion that properly prepared bonds covering said issue, signed and sealed by the proper officers of the village, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said village.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNCIL OF VILLAGE OF BEXLEY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bonds of the village of Bexley, Franklin county, Ohio, in the sum of $25,000, issued by said village in anticipation of the collection of assessments for the improvement of South Drexel avenue from the south line of Dale avenue to the improved roadway of Broad street in said village."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Bexley relative to the above bond issue. As a result of such examination I find said proceedings and the transcript thereof to be in accordance with the provisions of the General Code relating to the subject-matter.

I am of the opinion that properly prepared bonds covering said issue, signed and sealed by the proper officers of the village, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said village.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN FULTON, WYANDOT, MONROE, MAHONING AND WASHINGTON COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:——I have your communication of May 19, 1917, in which you enclose certain final resolutions and asking for my approval of the same. Said final resolutions have to do with the construction of the following named highways:

"Fulton County—Sec. 'A-1,' Liberty-Adrian road, Pet. No. 2359, I. C. H. No. 299.

"Fulton County—Sec. 'k-1,' Toledo-Angola road, Pet. No. 2360, I. C. H. No. 21.

"Wyandot County—Sec. 'A-2,' Kenton-Upper Sandusky road, Pet. No. 3116, I. C. H. No. 229.

"Monroe County—Sec. 'E,' Woodsfield-Sistersville road, Pet. No. 1025, I. C. H. No. 387 (also copy).

"Mahoning County—Sec. 'Y,' Canfield-Poland road, Pet. No. 2645, I. C. H. No. 486.

"Mahoning County—Sec. 'P,' Akron-Youngstown road, Pet. No. 3133, I. C. H. No. 18.

"Washington County—Sec. 'M,' Hockingport-Powhatan road, I. C. H. No. 7, Pet. No. 3059."

Among these final resolutions there are several which are defective in a slight degree, but not, as I view it, vitally so.

The final resolution which has to do with I. C. H. No. 7, Washington county, is defective, in that it is therein stated: "Being $9,330.45 of the total estimated cost;" whereas, it should be: "Being $9,330.45 less than the total estimated cost."

The final resolution having to do with I. C. H. No. 18, Mahoning county, sets forth the fact that the preliminary application of the board to the state highway department was made on the 28th day of December, 1917. This is plainly an error in that 1917 is used in the place of some other year.

The final resolution having to do with I. C. H. No. 387, Monroe county, is defective in the same respect, namely, that the year 1917 is given as the date of the preliminary application of the board, instead of either 1916 or 1915.

However, as I said before, it is my opinion these defects are not material or vital. In other respects I find these final resolutions correct in form and legal and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

304.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN TRUMBULL, PICKAWAY AND MAHONING COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 22, 1917, enclosing certain final resolutions in reference to road improvements, upon which you ask my approval. The resolutions are for the following named highways:

"Trumbull County—Sec. 'H,' Warren-Ravenna road, Pet. No. 2981.
"Trumbull County—Sec. 'C,' Warren-Meadville road, Pet. No. 2985.
"Pickaway County—Sec. 'N,' Cincinnati-Zanesville road, Pet. No. 2805.
"Mahoning County—Sec. 'b,' Youngstown-Lowellville road, Pet. No. 3132."

I have examined said final resolutions carefully and find them legal and correct in form, and am, therefore, returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNCIL OF MUNICIPALITY—MAY ASSESS COUNTY PROPERTY—FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT—ASSESSMENT SHOULD BE PAID OUT OF GENERAL COUNTY FUND.

The council of a municipality, in the matter of making assessments against property abutting upon a street which is being improved, has authority in law to assess a part of the cost and expense of the improvement upon property owned by the county and used by the agricultural society of the county for holding fairs, and abutting upon the street improved. The assessments should be paid out of the general country fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1917.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of April 11, 1917, in which you ask for certain information, was received. Said communication reads as follows:

"Tuscarawas county owns in fee simple a tract of land upon which the Tuscarawas County Agricultural Society holds annual exhibitions.

This land is located wholly within the boundaries of the city of Dover. The city of Dover has paved a street upon which this land abuts, and the council of the city of Dover has assessed this land for its portion of the costs of this street improvement.

"May the county commissioners pay this assessment out of its road improvement fund, or shall the agricultural society pay it out of its funds, or shall the city of Dover pay it out of its street improvement funds?"

Your question in brief is as to whether the agricultural society or the county commissioners or the city of Dover shall be charged with assessments made against property owned by the county commissioners but used by the agricultural society for the holding of fairs, said assessments having been made by reason of a street improvement, upon which street the said lands abut.

Your question involves the liability of three different organizations and I will first proceed by the process of elimination. I think without any question we can hold that the agricultural society is not liable for the payment of the assessments made against this property. It is not the owner of the property. It simply uses the same for the purpose of holding fairs under and by virtue of the provisions of the statutes. In looking over the provisions which control the agricultural board, found in sections 9880 et seq. G. C., I find none that would warrant the society in paying out money for such a purpose.

Section 9906 G. C. provides:

"* * Moneys realized by the society in holding county fairs and derived from renting or leasing the grounds and buildings, or portions thereof, in the conduct of fairs or otherwise, over and above the necessary expenses thereof, shall be paid into the county treasury of the society, to be used as a fund for keeping such grounds and buildings in good order and repair, and in making other improvements from time to time deemed necessary by its directors."

So without further consideration I believe we can safely eliminate the agricultural society. This leaves for consideration the county of Tuscarawas and the city of Dover. When we come to settling this matter as between these two subdivisions, the question is much more difficult. The principle which underlies the settling of the question involves the right or authority of the city of Dover to make assessments against property the fee of which is in the county of Tuscarawas. If the city has the right and authority to make assessments against county property, the county would be under obligation to pay the assessments so made. Hence let us look at the question as to the right or authority of the city of Dover to assess this property which belongs to the county of Tuscarawas.

Upon this question there is no authority in Ohio which is directly in point, and when we go outside of Ohio we find the adjudicated cases to be in direct and irreconcilable conflict, and it is useless to try to harmonize them. There are two general principles laid down by the courts upon this proposition, along the lines of which the courts divide:

1. County property may be assessed by a municipality for local improvements, unless the statutes particularly exempt it from such assessment.

2. County property may not be assessed by a municipality for local improvements unless the statutes particularly give authority for so doing.

Possibly the second rule is followed by the greater number of cases.

The arguments used in favor of the first of these two principles are along the following lines: Taxation is the rule and exemption is the exception, and therefore strict construction of the statute under which the exemption is claimed is the rule; that the property of the public is benefited and ought as a matter of fairness to bear its share of the cost of the improvement; that the property is not taxed in the strict sense of that term, but is charged simply with the benefits conferred by the improvement; that even though the property could not be sold to satisfy the amount of the assessments, yet courts can under their powers enforce payment of a judgment against the county by mandamus or otherwise; and that even though public property is exempt from taxation by the constitution or by statute, yet this does not exempt it from special taxation of contiguous property.

The arguments used in favor of the second proposition are along the following lines: The property of a state or any subdivisions of a state is one of the instrumentalities by which it performs its functions. Every tax would to a certain extent diminish its capacity and ability along this line. The remedies given to enforce the collection of the assessment could not be applied to public property. Hence it cannot be assumed that the legislature meant to include public property. If so, they would have provided a remedy to enforce the payment of the assessments. A county is one of the political subdivisions of a state, and only such burdens of taxation can be imposed upon its property as are expressly provided by law. It is not a question of exemption, but one of power.

I desire to quote from but a few cases in support of each of these two propositions. I find the following in support of the first proposition:

In Edwards and Walsh v. Jasper County et al., 117 Ia. 365, the court lays down the following proposition in the syllabus:

> "McClain's Code, section 1271, provides that property of the county devoted entirely to the public use and not held for pecuniary profit shall be exempt from taxation. Section 1274 provides that all property except that exempted shall be subject to taxation. Section 630 authorizes cities to pave and otherwise improve streets and levy special assessments therefor on abutting property. Held, that city property owned and used for public purposes by a county was not exempt from special assessments for street improvements."

At p. 380 in the opinion the court say:

> "While authority to levy such assessments is traceable to the taxing power, they are nevertheless assessed on the theory that the property against which they are levied is benefited thereby to the extent of the levy, and the municipality acts merely as agent in collecting the tax."

In County of Adams v. City of Quincy, 130 Ill. 566, the court say:

> "Although a special assessment is in the nature of a tax, and is a branch of the taxing power, yet a general statute exempting certain property does not exempt it from liability for an assessment levied for the improvement of a street upon which it abuts or is contiguous.
> "Property owned by a county for a court house is not exempt from special taxation by a city, levied for the purpose of paving a street upon which the same abuts."

In support of the second proposition we find the court holding in Inhabitants of Worcester County v. The Mayor et al., 116 Mass. 193, as follows:

> "Land of a county used for county purposes is exempt from all taxation, whether imposed for public purposes or for local improvements of a public nature."

In the opinion the court say:

> "The immunity of these estates from taxation depends, however, in our opinion, upon other grounds than that of a statute exemption, and extends to taxation not only for general public purposes, but for local improvements of a public nature * *. The property of the commonwealth is exempt from taxation because as a sovereign power it receives taxation through its officers or through the municipalities it creates, that it may from the means thus furnished discharge the duties and pay the expenses of government. Its property constitutes one of the instrumentalities by which it performs its functions. As every tax would to a certain extent diminish its capacity and ability, we should be unwilling to hold that such property was subject to taxation in any form, unless it were made so by express enactment or by clear implication."

In the City of Big Rapids v. Board of Supervisors of Mecosta County, 99 Mich. 351, the court say in the syllabus:

> "The rule that when the property of private corporations, such as churches, hospitals and cemeteries, is exempted from taxation in a general tax statute, the exemption applies only to the taxes mentioned therein, and not to those of a private and local character, such as assessment for sewers, sidewalks and the like, which are laid according to the benefits conferred, does not apply to public property owned and used by an entire county for public purposes, and whenever the taxing power seeks to impose a tax upon such property, it must be able to point to legislative or constitutional authority."

With the conflict of authority upon the proposition under consideration, as set forth above, in mind, let us now turn to our own state and try to solve the problem, with our own constitution, statutes and decisions in mind.

Section 2 of article XII of the constitution provides as follows, in reference to the matter of taxation:

> "Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule * * all real and personal property according to its true value in money * *; but burying grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public worship, institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes, public property used exclusively for any public purpose * * may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation, etc."

From the above it will be noticed our constitution exempts no property whatever from taxation, but merely provides that certain classes of property may be exempted by general laws from taxation, and among these classes is found public property used exclusively for any public purpose.

With this in mind, let us turn to our statutes and ascertain to what extent the legislature has seen fit to exempt public property. The statutes providing for exemptions are found in part II, title 1, chapter 2. Section 5328 of said chapter provides:

> "All real or personal property in this state, belonging to individuals or corporations, * * shall be subject to taxation, except only such property as may be expressly exempted therefrom."

It will be noted that this section makes no provision as to property which is owned by the state or any political subdivisions of the state; so this section is not as broad and as inclusive as the constitutional provision above quoted.

While there are many exemptions provided for in said chapter, yet I desire to note particularly what exemptions are made in reference to the matter of county property, inasmuch as it is county property that we have under consideration.

Section 5352 G. C. reads as follows:

> "Buildings belonging to counties and used for holding courts, and for jails or county offices, with the ground, not exceeding ten acres in any county, on which such buildings are erected, shall be exempt from taxation."

Section 5353 G. C. provides:

> "Lands, houses and other buildings belonging to a county, * * used exclusively for the accommodation or support of the poor, * * shall be exempt from taxation."

It seems that these two sections embody the only provisions made in reference to county property, and these provisions are limited to jails and court houses, together with ten acres of ground upon which said buildings stand, and also lands used for the accommodation and support of the poor.

Remembering that the constitutional provision does not exempt public property, but merely gives authority to the legislature to exempt it, and remembering that the legislature has seen fit to exempt no county property except as hereinbefore set out, it would seem that it was the intention of the legislature that all other property owned by the county should be taxed. This, of course, would include the property under consideration, which is used for the purpose of holding fairs thereon.

But it must be remembered that these sections exempt property merely from taxation and not from assessment. The courts are uniform in holding that in applying the principle of exemption there must be a distinction made between the term "taxation" and the term "assessment."

In Lima v. Cemetery Assoc., 42 O. S. 128, the court lays down the following principle in the first two branches of the syllabus:

> "1. In a general sense, a tax is an assessment, and an assessment is a tax; but there is a well-recognized distinction between them, an assessment being confined to local impositions upon property for the payment of the cost of public improvements in its immediate vicinity, and levied with reference to special benefits to the property assessed.
> "2. A municipal corporation insisting on the right to impose an assessment, should be able to show that such power has been clearly granted to it by statute; but authority being shown, in general terms, to make the assessment, whoever insists that his property is exempted from the burden will be required to support his claim by a provision equally clear."

The first branch of the syllabus distinguishes between an assessment and a tax. The second branch lays down a most important proposition, as I view it, in connection with the question which we have to solve. The court say that a municipal corporation, insisting on the right to impose an assessment, should be able to show that such power has been clearly granted to it by statute, and after this authority is shown, any one insisting that his property is exempted from the burden will be required to support his claim by a provision equally clear. We feel that the principle stated herein is absolutely sound.

With this proposition in mind, let us note whether the city of Dover can show clearly that it has the power to make assessments against the property owned by the county of Tuscarawas. We must remember that section 2 of article XII, as set out above, makes all property subject to taxation, and then provides that "public property used exclusively for any public purpose" may be exempted by general laws. But as set forth above, the property in question here is not anywhere exempt by our statutes.

Let us now turn to the power of a municipality to make assessments.

Section 3812 G. C. provides:

"Each municipal corporation shall have special power to levy and collect special assessments, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council of any municipal corporation may assess upon the abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lots or lands in the corporation, any part of the entire cost of an expense connected with the improvement of any street, * *."

Section 3837 G. C. provides:

"When the whole or any portion of an improvement authorized by this title passes by or through a public wharf, market space, park, cemetery, structure for the fire department, water works, school building, infirmary, market building, workhouse, hospital, house of refuge, gas works, public prison, or any other public structure or public grounds within and belonging to the corporation, the council may authorize the proper proportion of the estimated costs and expenses of the improvement to be certified by the auditor or clerk of the corporation to the county auditor, and entered upon the tax list of all taxable real and personal property in the corporation, and they shall be collected as other taxes."

This section contains the only exemptions which are to be found in the chapter providing for assessments, and the exemptions are limited merely to certain classes of property which are owned by the municipality itself, and not to any property owned by the county; and furthermore, the provisions of this section merely permit the council to pay the proportion of the estimated cost and expenses which would otherwise be assessed against the property specified in said section.

Let us now analyze the provisions of law upon which we can base our answer to your problem.

1. Article XII, section 2 of the constitution provides that all real property must be taxed. This includes public property used for public purposes.

2. The same section provides that public property used for public purposes may be exempt from taxation under general laws.

3. The legislature, under the above provision of the constitution, has seen fit to exempt court houses and jails, together with not to exceed ten acres of land upon which they stand, and lands used for the accommodation and support of the poor; but no other county property is exempt from taxation.

4. There is a distinction, however, to be made between the principle of exemption, as applied to taxation proper, and as applied to assessments.

5. The court in Lima v. Cemetery Assoc., supra, holds that when the right to impose an assessment is clearly shown, the right to be exempted from the assessment must be shown equally clear.

6. Section 3812 G. C. gives full power to the council of each municipal corporation to assess a part, or the entire cost of an expense connected with the improvement of any street, etc., upon all abutting, adjacent and contiguous lands in the corporation.

7. The only property that is in a way exempt from assessment is that set out in section 3837 G. C.

If we keep in mind now, that it seems to be the aim of our constitution that all property should be taxed, except the property which may be exempted under general laws, and remember that the legislature has not even exempted the property, about which you ask information, from taxation, and further remember that the provisions of the law giving power to municipal corporations to make assessments authorize the council to assess all lands located in the corporation, what is the answer to your question? It seems to me clearly to be that the council of the city of Dover had authority in law to make an assessment, for the cost and expense of the improvemnt of the street, against the property of the county used as set out in your communication and abutting upon the street improved. This being the case, the county would be liable to pay the same.

You ask further whether the county commissioners might pay this assessment out of its road improvement fund. I think not. This expense has nothing to do with the improvement of the roads of the county. This assessment should be paid from the general county fund.

Hence, answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that the city of Dover, in improving one of its streets, upon which certain lands, belonging to the county of Tuscarawas and used by your agricultural society for holding fairs, abut, has authority to assess against said property the proper share of the cost and expense of the improvement, and that the county commissioners would pay the assessment out of the general county fund.

In rendering this opinion I am not unmindful of an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, on April 13, 1916, found in Vol. I of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, p. 663, in which he held:

> "No part of the cost of the improvement of a street on which school property, used exclusively for public school purposes, abuts, can be assessed against such property."

This opinion was based upon statutes which had to do peculiarly with school property, and would not apply to property in reference to which I have rendered the within opinion.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE BY TRUSTEES OF VALLEY TOWNSHIP, GUERNSEY COUNTY, OHIO—BONDS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT MUST BE ISSUED UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTIONS 3298-8 AND 3298-9—SECTIONS 3295 AND 3939 DO NOT APPLY.

Neither section 3295 nor section 3939, General Code, as amended 106 O. L. 536, has any application to the issue of bonds by township trustees for the improvement of designated highways under the provisions of chapter 3 of the Cass road law. Bonds for such purpose must be issued by the township trustees under the provisions of section 3298-8 and 3298-9 General Code, and the proceedings of the township trustees relating to such bond issue must conform to the provisions of said sections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 25, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bonds of Valley township, Guernsey county, Ohio, in sum of $40,000, for the purpose of improving certain highways therein."

I herewith enclose, without my approval, transcript of the proceeding of the township trustees and other officers of Valley township, Guernsey county, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue.

As stated in the transcript, these bonds, which are in the aggregate amount of $40,000, in denominations of $1,000 each and which are payable at the rate of $2,000 principal sum each year, from 1918 to 1936, inclusive, are issued under the assumed authority of sections 3295 and 3939 of the General Code "and other sections of the General Code necessary to carry the same into effect."

Section 3295 General Code, as amended, 106 O. L. 536, among other things, provides that the trustees of any township may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such periods of time and at such rate of interest, not to exceed six per cent., for any of the purposes authorized by law, for the sale of bonds by townships or by municipal corporations for specific purposes, while section 3939 General Code (the same being a part of the Longworth law, so called), provides authority to municipal corporations to issue bonds for certain specific purposes therein designated. On familiar principles, however, though section 3295 General Code grants the township trustees authority to issue bonds for purposes within its terms, such section does not of itself grant authority in the township trustees to do the particular thing or to conduct the particular improvements to borrow money for which power is granted by this section, and in this case, in order to determine the particular power of the trustees of this township to improve the roads to meet the cost and expense for which this bond is provided, we must look to other provisions of the General Code.

The Cass road law (106 O. L. 574) which was enacted by the general assembly "to provide a system of highway laws for the state of Ohio and to repeal all sections of the General Code and acts inconsistent herewith," became operative September 6, 1915, and expressly repealed all township road improvement laws then existing. Since that date, therefore, township trustees have had and can now exercise only such power in constructing, improving and repairing roads within their respective townships as is conferred upon them by the provisions of said act. The only provisions of said act granting authority in township trustees to improve highways in such township, in the manner contemplated by the township trustees, as indicated by the transcript, are those of sections 60 to 74, inclusive, of said act (sections 3298-1 to 3298-15 G. C.).

Section 3298-1 G. C. provides, among other things, that the board of trustees of any township may levy and assess upon the taxable property of such township a tax not exceeding three mills in any one year upon each dollar of taxable property therein for the purpose of improving, dragging, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads or part thereof.

Section 3298-2 G. C. provides that the taxes so authorized to be levied shall be placed by the county auditor upon the tax duplicate against the taxable property of the township and collected by the county treasurer as other taxes, and that when collected such taxes shall be paid to the treasurer of the township from which they are collected and the money so raised shall be under the control of the township trustees of such township for the purpose of improving the roads of said township.

Section 3298-3 provides that the trustees shall designate the road or roads or part thereof in said township to be improved and that after having determined which road or roads or part thereof shall be improved, they shall direct the county highway superintendent to go upon the line of such road or roads and make such survey, plans, profiles, etc., as may be required in the improvement of said road.

Section 3298-8 G. C. provides that if the money raised by the levy above mentioned does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads in said township, the trustees may issue and sell the bonds oof said township to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of such roads, and further provides that such bonds shall be issued at such time and in such amounts as in the judgment of such trustees shall be necessary. This section provides further that said bonds shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually and shall be in denominations of not less than $100.00, and not more than $1,000.00, and shall mature in not more than ten years as may be determined by such trustees.

Section 3298-9 G. C. provides that before such bonds are issued, the question of issuing the same shall be first submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election therefor.

It is thus seen that while sections 3298-1, and following sections of the General Code, provide a comprehensive scheme whereby the trustees of a township may improve highways therein, these provisions likewise provide for the issue of bonds for the purpose of raising money for such improvement. The provisions of section 3298-8 G. C., providing for the issue of bonds for such purposes, are in conflict with the provisions of section 3295 G. C. in at least one material respect, to wit, with respect to the time within which such bonds shall mature and become payable. Section 3298-8 provides that such bonds shall mature in not more than ten years, and section 3295 does not impose any limitation in this respect. Section 3295 G. C., on one hand, is a statute of general authority, while sections 3298-8 and 3298-9 are special in their nature, covering the particular improvements provided for in sections 3298-1 to 3298-15 of the General Code, and on familiar principles of construction must be held to govern in the matter of the issue of bonds for the purpose of raising money for such improvements.

Moreover, with respect to any matter of conflict between the provisions of section 3295 and section 3298-8 General Code, in the issue of bonds by township trustees for the construction or improvement of designated roads, effect should be given to the provisions of section 3298-8 as a later statute. Though section 3295, General Code, was passed by the general assembly and approved by the governor subsequent to the enactment and approval of the Cass highway law, of which section 3298-8 is a part, the question of priority, in so far as any matter of conflict in the terms of these sections is concerned, must be determined with reference to the time they respectively went into effect as laws. As to this it will be noted that both acts were filed in the office of the secretary of state on the same date, to wit, June 5, 1915. Section 3295, as amended by the act of which it is a part, went into effect as a law at the expiration of the ninety day referendum period; while the Cass highway law by its own terms went into effect on September 6, 1915. For this reason, as well as that hereinbefore noted, to wit, that section 3298-8 General Code is one having special application to the matter of issuing bonds for the purpose of constructing road improvements in the manner provided by the sections of the Cass highway law, of which it is a part, I am of the opinion that section 3298-8 General Code must control in the matter of bond issues for said purposes and that section 3295 General Code has no application thereto.

State v. Lathrop, 93 O. S. 79, 86.

Having arrived at the conclusion that the provisions of sections 3298-8 and 3298-9 General Code apply in the matter of issuing bonds in cases of this kind, an examination of the transcript of the proceedings of the township trustees and other officers of Valley township relating to this bond issue fails to show that the issue of such bonds has been provided for according to law. The authority of the township trustees to designate the roads to be improved and to issue bonds for their improvement is predicated upon a levy for such purpose having first been made by the township trustees in the manner provided by section 3298-1 General Code. There is nothing whatever in the transcript to show that such levy was made; and while this defect in the transcript is one which may possibly be corrected on further information, the issue of bonds in question is invalid for the reason that the resolution providing for their issue specifically provides that such bonds shall mature on dates from 1918 to 1937, inclusive, a period of time in excess of the maturity period provided for in section 3298-8 General Code.

I may properly here note that the conclusion reached by me, that section 3295 General Code has no application to the issue of bonds for the purposes indicated by the proceedings set out in the transcript and that the provisions of sections 3298-8 and 3298-9 General Code apply with reference to such bonds, is in accord with an opinion rendered by my predecessor to the Industrial Commission of Ohio under date of April 27, 1916, disapproving certain bonds issued by Norwich township, Huron county, Ohio, for the purpose of improving highways in said township (Opinions of Attorney-General 1916, volume 1, page 739).

For the above reasons I am of the opinion that this issue of bonds is unauthorized and that you should refuse to purchase the same.

In this connection it is but fair to state, however, that so far as I know none of the courts of this state has as yet decided the question as to the application or non-application of section 3295 General Code to bond issues of this kind, and to the end that the township authorities may not be embarrassed in offering these bonds for sale in the open market, if they desire to do so, I feel no hesitancy in recommending that your rescission of your former resolution purchasing these bonds be in general terms rather than on the particular ground of irregularity in proceedings relating to the issue.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE BY TRUSTEES OF LIBERTY TOWNSHIP, TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO—QUESTION OF BOND ISSUE—FOR ERECTION, IMPROVEMENT, ETC., OF TOWN HALL—MUST BE SUBMITTED TO ALL THE ELECTORS OF TOWNSHIP—AND MUST RECEIVE A MAJORITY OF VOTES CAST ON QUESTION.

Before the trustees of a township are authorized to issue bonds under section 3396 General Code for the purpose of erecting, improving or enlarging a town hall the question of such bond issue must be submitted to the qualified electors of the township, including electors in any village in said township, and receive the approval of the majority of the ballots cast at the election on such question; and it is not sufficient to authorize the issue of such bonds that the question be submitted only to the qualified electors in the township outside of such village, even though the majority of the electors so voting on the question vote in favor of such issue.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 25, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bond issue of Liberty township, Trumbull county, Ohio, in the sum of $10,000 for the erection of a town hall.

I am herewith enclosing, without approval, transcript of the proceedings of the township trustees and other officers of Liberty township, Trumbull county, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue.

The proceedings relating to this bond issue have been conducted under the provisions of sections 3395 and 3396 of the General Code.

Section 3260 General Code authorizes the trustees of the township, on the approval of the electors thereof, to levy a tax on all the taxable property of the township in an amount not to exceed $2,000.00 for the purpose of purchasing a site for the erection of a town hall.

By section 3395 General Code it is provided that if in a township it is desired to build a town hall at a greater expense than is authorized by the section above noted, proceedings shall be had as provided in said sections 3395, 3396, 3397 and 3398 General Code.

Said sections 3395 and 3396 General Code read as follows:

"Sec. 3395. If in a township, it is desired to build, remove, improve or enlarge a town hall, at a greater cost than is otherwise authorized by law, the trustees may submit the question to the electors of the township, and shall cause the clerk to give notice thereof and of the estimated cost, by written notices, posted in not less than three public places within the township, at least ten days before election.

"Sec. 3396. At such election the electors in favor of such hall, removal, improvement or enlargement shall place on their ballots, 'Town Hall—Yes,' and those opposed, 'Town Hall—No.' If a majority of all the ballots cast at the election are in the affirmative, the trustees shall levy the necessary tax, but not in any year to exceed four mills on the dollar valuation. Such tax shall not be levied under such vote for more than seven years. In anticipation of the collection of taxes, the trustees may borrow money and issue bonds for the whole or any part therefor, bearing interest not to exceed seven per cent, payable annually."

Section 3397 provides that after an affirmative vote in favor of the proposition, the trustees may make all needful contracts for the purchase of a site for and the erection of a town hall; while section 3398 provides that where necessary the trustees may in such case appropriate land as a site for such town hall.

The transcript shows that the proposition of building the town hall here in question and the issuance of the bonds therefor in the sum stated was submitted to the electors of Liberty township, Trumbull county, Ohio, at the general election held on November 7, 1916; and the transcript further shows that the total vote cast on said proposition was 260, of which 152 votes were in favor of the proposition and 104 against the same. The abstract of the vote of this township on file in the office of the secretary of state shows that the total vote cast at this election in the township outside of the village of Girard was 275, while the total vote of the township, including that cast in four precincts of the village of Girard, was 1341.

As may be inferred from the small number of votes cast on the town-hall proposition compared with the total vote in the township, the electors of the village of Girard did not participate in the election on this proposition, information furnished me by the prosecuting attorney of the county being to the effect that the question was submitted to the electors of the township outside of the village only. The only question to be determined, I take it, is whether or not the electors residing and voting in the village of Girard had a right to vote on the proposition, and whether the same should have been submitted to them likewise..

I am of the opinion that they had such right, and in as much as the proposition was not submitted to all of the electors of the township having a right to vote on the proposition, I am of the opinion that the bond issue provided for by the township trustees pursuant to the election is wholly unauthorized.

A village does not upon its creation cease to be a part of the township wherein it is located, but on the contrary such village forms a part of the township and its citizens take part in electing the trustees and other officers of the township, and are under their jurisdiction in many governmental particulars.

Greek v. Joy, 81 O. S. 315, 328.

Moreover, the question submitted with respect to the proposed town hall in this township was essentially one with respect to the levy of taxes in the amount required for the erection of the same. In the absence of statutory provisions limiting the taxable property in a township upon which the township levy of taxes is to apply, such levy applies to all taxable property in the township including that in villages situated therein, and on this consideration the statutes here in question should be construed as affording to the qualified electors of such village the right to vote on the proposition.

Moreover, section 3395 General Code specifically provides that the trustees may submit the question to and this, to my mind, clearly means all the electors of the township whether residents of the village or otherwise.

In arriving at this conclusion I find myself in accord with that reached by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, in an opinion addressed to Hon. John W. Watts, prosecuting attorney of Hillsboro, Ohio, under date of October 3, 1916 (Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1916, Vol. II, page 1646), and the correctness of this conclusion drawn from the provisions of sections 3295 et seq. is not, in my opinion, affected by the further provisions of sections 3399 to 3402, inclusive, of the General Code, which confer upon the electors of a township in which a village is situated and upon the electors of such village, authority to unite in the erection of a public building on the submission of such question to such electors by the township trustees and the village council, respectively.

The further provision is made that if at such election two-thirds of the electors of the village and of the township voting, vote in favor of such improvement, the trustees of the township and the council of the village shall jointly take such action as is necessary to carry out the improvement. This, to my mind, is an entirely different scheme of improvement from that contemplated by sections 3395 et seq. above considered, and does not in any manner affect the conclusion here reached with respect to the proper construction of the said sections in their application to the particular questions here under consideration.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the resolution of the township trustees providing for the issue of these bonds was unauthorized, and that you should decline to purchase the bonds here in question.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—BOND ISSUE OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF FAIRVIEW VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT, CUYAHOGA COUNTY, OHIO—BOARD OF EDUCATION—CANNOT SUBMIT BOND ISSUE TO ELECTORS—UNLESS IT FINDS THAT FUNDS AT ITS DISPOSAL OR THAT CAN BE RAISED UNDER SECTIONS 7629 AND 7630 ARE INSUFFICIENT—SECTION 5120—IMPOSING DUTY TO CANVASS RESULT OF ELECTION MANDATORY.

Before the board of education of a school district can submit to the electors of such school district the question of issuing bonds of such school district for the purpose of procuring, constructing or improving school property, it is required to affirmatively find that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections 7629 and 7630 General Code are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose, and a recital in the resolution providing for the submission of such question to the electors of the school district that "funds at the disposal of the board of education in the proper amount or that can be raised by the annual levy are not sufficient to meet the cost of said building and that a bond issue is necessary" is not a compliance with the provisions of said section 7625.

Though section 5120 General Code is directory in so far as it prescribes the time at which a board of education must canvass the result of an election on the question of issuing bonds, the provisions of said section imposing the duty of making such canvass is mandatory, and such canvass must be made and the result thereof entered on the records of the board of education before it can act on said election and issue bonds of the school district in pursuance to such election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 25, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bond issue of Fairview village school district, Cuyahoga county, in sum of $20,000 for enlarging school building in said district."

I am enclosing herewith, without my approval, transcript relating to the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Fairview village school district relating to the above bond issue. The issue of these bonds is provided for by a resolution of the board of education of said school district, adopted at a regular meeting of such board under date of April 24, 1917, after the proposition had been voted on by the electors of the school district. The proposition of issuing these bonds was submitted to the electors by a resolution of the board of education, adopted at a meeting under date of March 30, 1917.

In reciting the necessity for this bond issue, this resolution, among other things, recites that "the funds at the disposal of this board of education in the proper amount or that can be raised by the annual levy are not sufficient to meet the cost of said building and that a bond issue is necessary."

Section 7625 General Code provides that before the proposition of a bond issue for procuring, erecting or improving school property can be submitted to the electors of the school district, it must appear that the funds at the disposal of the board, or that can be raised under the provisions of sections 7629 and 7630 G. C. are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary.

Sections 7629 and 7630 General Code authorize a board of education to issue bonds on its own initiative, without a vote of the people, for the purpose of erecting and improving school property, but the amount of such bonds that can be issued in any year is limited to the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills on the tax duplicate valuation of real and personal property in the school district for the preceding year.

The facts that the funds at the disposal of the board of education or that can be raised by a bond issue under section 7629 are not sufficient for the purpose of procuring, erecting, enlarging, repairing or otherwise improving school property, are jurisdictional in their nature and must be affirmatively found by the board of education before it is authorized to submit the proposition of a bond issue for such purposes, to a vote of the electors. In the resolution of the board of education, under date of March 30, 1917, above referred to, the board of education found that the funds at the disposal of the board were not sufficient to meet the cost of the building and thus far it has complied with the provisions of said section 7625. I am unable to agree, however, that the recital in said resolution, that the funds that can be raised by the annual levy are not sufficient to meet the cost of said building, is an equivalent to the finding required by section 7625, that the funds that can be raised by the bond issue provided by sections 7629 and 7630 are not sufficient for the purpose, and in this respect the recital in the resolution is not a compliance with the provisions of said section 7526.

Aside from the recital contained in the resolution of the board of education, under date of April 24, 1917, providing for the issuing of bonds, there is nothing in the transcript of the proceedings showing a compliance by the board of education with the provision of section 5120 General Code, which provides that in school elections the returns shall be made by the judges and clerks of each precinct to the clerk of the board of education of the district not less than five days after the election and that such board shall canvass such returns at a meeting to be held on the second Monday after the election and that the resolution thereof shall be entered upon the records of the board. As a matter of fact, the board of education seems to have relied upon the canvass of the vote cast at the election on the bond issue proposition made by the deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections of Cuyahoga county, and on a certificate issued by the board of elections reciting that the vote on the proposition was thirty-six votes in favor of the bond issue and thirty-five votes against the same. I am inclined to the view that the time designated in section 5120 General Code, at which the board of education shall canvass the returns of the elections and enter the results thereof upon its records, is directory but I am equally convinced that the duty of the board to make such canvass and enter the result of the election upon its records is mandatory and must be complied with before the board is authorized to act upon the result of such election and issue the bonds of the school district.

The transcript is defective in a number of other respects in this that it fails to set out the proceedings of the board of education providing for its organization by the election of officers, fails to set out the tax duplicate valuation of taxable real and personal property in said school district and the existing tax rates for all purposes on the property of said school district. Neither is any statement made therein as to the existing indebtedness of the school district, and in a very general way fails to comply with the provisions of section 2295-3 G. C., which provides as to what should be set out in a transcript relating to a bond issue.

For the above reasons I am of the opinion that you should refuse to purchase the above bond issue, but inasmuch as there may be room for honest differences of opinion with respect to objections which I have here found to be fatally defective, it would probably be no more than fair to the school district that the resolution rescinding your former resolution purchasing this bond issue should be in general terms rather than on the specific ground of irregularity in the proceedings relating to their issue.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

GOVERNOR—MAY APPOINT LOCAL BOARDS OF REGISTRATION—PROVIDED FOR IN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED MAY 18, 1917—ACTS OF SAID BOARD INCONTESTABLE.

1. Under the act of congress approved May 18, 1917, the governor of the state may appoint the local boards of registration under the provisions of the same and carry out his duties thereunder without an unwarranted delegation of authority.

2. The acts done and rights exercised by the local boards of registration under and by virtue of said act and the registration regulations will be as incontestable as the act itself from which they get their authority.

3. I confirm and approve the opinion rendered by the judge advocate general of guard in relation to this act and the regulations of the president of the United States.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1917.

HON. JAMES M. COX, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 21, 1917, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "We are desirous of exercising every possible precaution in every step taken with respect to carrying out the federal law on the subject of selective service. You are probably familiar with the plan of registration and selection within the counties of the state. These officers, while recommended to the governor by community agencies; will have, as a matter of fact, the powers under which they act, delegated to them by the governor.
> "I am extremely anxious to know whether there can be any possible doubt upon these two questions: First, the power of the governor under the president's proclamation, to delegate authority, and second, whether the right exercised by the local boards will be thoroughly incontestable.
> "I submit an opinion rendered by Col. Turney, judge advocate general of the guard, and would respectfully ask for your judgment on the same subject-matter."

Your communication embodies practically three different questions:

1. The power of the governor, under the president's proclamation in reference to the registration, to delegate authority.

2. Whether the right exercised by the local boards, appointed to make such registration, will be thoroughly incontestable?

3. Whether in my judgment the opinion rendered by Col. Turney, judge advocate general of the guard, is correct?

Your questions have to do mainly with power.

In discussing these questions it will be well for us to go to the source of power, in so far as the federal government is concerned, and trace it from its source to its ultimate limits. As we know, the constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land and is the source of all power exercised by congress.

Section 8 of article I of the constitution of the United States provides as follows:

> "The congress shall have power to provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; to raise and support armies; to provide and maintain a navy; to provide for calling forth the militia."

We thus see that congress has full authority to act in the matter of raising an army to provide for the common defense and the general welfare of the United States. In pursuance of these constitutional provisions and the authority given congress under said provisions, congress enacted a law on the 18th day of May, 1917, in reference to the matter of selective conscription of men to serve in the army and navy of the United States. The only part of said act which is vitally connected with the subject under consideration is section 6, which reads as follows:

> "Sec. 6. That the president is hereby authorized to utilize the service of any or all departments and any or all officers or agents of the United States and of the several states, territories, and the District of Columbia, and subdivisions thereof, in the execution of this act, and all officers and agents of the United States and of the several states, territories, and subdivisions thereof, and of the District of Columbia; and all persons designated or appointed under regulations prescribed by the president whether such appointments are made by the president himself or by the governor or other officer of any state or territory to perform any duty in the execution of this act, are hereby required to perform such duty as the president shall order or direct, and all such officers and agents and persons so designated or appointed shall hereby have full authority for all acts done by them in the execution of this act by the direction of the president. Correspondence in the execution of this act may be carried in penalty envelopes bearing the frank of the war department. Any person charged as herein provided with the duty of carrying into effect any of the provisions of this act or the regulations made or directions given thereunder who shall fail or neglect to perform such duty; and any person charged with such duty or having and exercising any authority under said act, regulations, or directions, who shall knowingly make or be a party to the making of any false or incorrect registration, physical examination, exemption, enlistment, enrollment, or muster; and any person who shall make or be a party to the making of any false statement or certificate as to the fitness or liability of himself or any other person for service under the provisions of this act, or regulations made by the president thereunder, or otherwise evades or aids another to evade the requirements of this act or of said regulations, or who, in any manner, shall fail or neglect fully to perform any duty required of him in the execution of this act, shall, if not subject to military law, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year, or, if subject to military law, shall be tried by court-martial and suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct."

It will be noted under the provisions of this section that congress has seen fit to delegate certain powers to the president, in the way of formulating rules and making regulations in the matter of selective conscription. The question might be raised here as to whether congress has the right to delegate to the president of the United States powers which might be held to be legislative in their nature, and, while it is not the province of this department to pass upon the constitutionality of a federal act, yet, in order to make this matter perfectly clear, I am going to cite one decision in support of this proposition.

In re Griner et al., found in 16 Wis. 423, the court had under consideration matters almost, if not altogether, similar to the matters now under consideration. In this case the question was raised as to the constitutionality of an act passed by congress on July 17, 1862, which gave the president certain authority in the matter of making all necessary rules and regulations for the purpose of enrolling the militia of the different states of the Union. The syllabus reads in part as follows:

> "That part of the act of congress of July 17th, 1862, which provides, that 'if by reason of defects in existing laws, or in the execution of them in the several states, or any of them, it shall be found necessary to provide for enrolling the militia and otherwise putting this act in execution, the president is authorized in such cases to make all necessary rules and regulations; and the enrollment of the militia shall, in all cases, include all the able bodied male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, and shall be apportioned among the states according to representative population,' does not confer on the president any new or additional powers; but by this provision, it was intended that the president should, in making a draft, avail himself of the provisions of state laws so far as they were applicable, and where they were not, or there was no state law on the subject, that in such cases he would exert the authority conferred on him by the act of February 28, 1795, and make proper rules and regulations for calling forth and drafting the militia.
> "The making, by the president, of rules and regulations for calling forth and drafting the militia, is not the exercise of a power strictly and exclusively legislative.
> "A distinction exists between those important subjects which must be entirely regulated by congress, and those of less interest, in reference to which a general provision is made and power is given to those who act under it to fill up the details, as incidental to its execution.
> "The act of congress giving the president power to make all necessary rules and regulations to carry into effect the law for calling out the militia, is not a delegation of the legislative power of congress."

From the syllabus we note that the power given to the president to make rules and regulations for calling forth and drafting the militia is not the exercise of the power strictly and exclusively legislative, and that a distinction must be made between those important duties which must be entirely regulated by congress and those of less interest in reference to which a general provision is made and power is given to those who act under it to fill up the details as incidental to its execution.

The act, which the court was construing in this case, provided among other things as follows:

> "If by reason of defects in existing laws, or in the execution of them in the several states, or any of them, it shall be found necessary to provide for enrolling the militia and otherwise putting this act into execution, the president is authorized in such case to make all necessary rules and regulations; and the enrollment of the militia shall in all cases include all able-bodied male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, and shall be apportioned among the states according to representative population."

It was argued before the court that this act was unconstitutional, because it was an attempt on the part of congress to delegate its legislative power, upon the subject of detaching, drafting and calling forth the militia, to the president. It was argued that this was apparent as well from the language of the provision as from its scope and object.

The court in its opinion, on p. 433, uses the following language in reference to said arguments:

> "No one will seriously contend that congress can delegate legislative power to the president. But a distinction must be made of 'those important subjects which must be entirely regulated by the legislature itself, from those of less interest in which a general provision may be made, and power given to those who are to act under such general provision to fill up the detail.' It would seem that the power given to the president to make all rules and regulations to carry into effect the law for calling out the militia, is of the latter character. Congress might have regulated by its legislation the whole details of the draft, if it had thought proper to do so. But having, in the most ample manner, clothed the president with power to call forth the militia, it further provided that he should make all proper rules and regulations for the enforcement of the draft where state laws upon the subject were defective. Where state laws exist, it was undoubtedly intended or supposed that the president would avail himself of their machinery, in bringing into the field the quota of the state."

Upon the authority of this case and others that might be cited, it would seem that we are safe in assuming that congress had the authority to delegate to the president, as it has done in section 6 of the act under consideration, full power and authority to regulate the matter of making the registration and in providing for selective conscription.

With this in mind, let us go one step further in the matter of tracing the authority from the supreme law of the land to its ultimate limits. Said section 6 of said act provides that the president is authorized to utilize the service of any or all departments and any or all officers or agents of the United States and of the several states in the execution of this act. In compliance with the authority given to the president under this section, he has seen fit to call upon the governors of the states to assist him in the matter of providing the machinery to carry into effect this matter of selective conscription.

In the proclamation issued by the president of the United States, he uses the following language:

> "Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, do call upon the governor of each of the several states and territories, the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, and of the counties and municipalities therein, to perform certain duties in the execution of the foregoing law, which duties will be communicated to them directly in regulations of even date herewith."

In this it is noted that he calls upon the governor of each of the several states and all officers and agents of the several states and territories and of the counties and municipalities therein, to perform certain duties in the execution of the said law, which duties will be communicated to said officers directly in regulations of even date with the said proclamation.

So that in the further consideration of this matter we must turn to the rules and regulations prescribed by the president and approved by him on May 18, 1917, entitled "Registration Regulations," and sent out by him to the various officials at the same time he issued his proclamation.

In said "Registration Regulations," on page 5 thereof and in subdivision 9, the president has provided as follows:

> "As far as possible, the execution of the law in each state will be accomplished by state, county and municipal officers and agencies.
> "That the grand subdivisions for administration shall be the states under the direction of the governors.
> "That each state shall be divided into a number of districts corresponding normally to the county, and where there is a county administrative organization, the county unit must be used."

The provision is further made that

> "The execution of the law in each county or similar subdivision shall, in respect of registration, be intrusted to a board of registration consisting of at least three members to be named by the governor and composed of local authorities or other citizens residing in such county or subdivision."

It further provides that

> "Normally the county board or board of similar subdivision should consist of the sheriff, the county clerk, and the county physician. Where it is not practicable so to constitute the board, the governor may name other local authorities, or, in his discretion, other citizens residing in such subdivision."

From this it is seen that if the governor in his discretion feels that it is not practicable to constitute the sheriff, the clerk and the county physician as the board, he may appoint a board from local authorities or other citizens residing in such subdivision, the only limitation being that it must not be made up of fewer than three members.

From these provisions it is seen that the matter is discretionary with the governor as to whether he will appoint a registration board from the local authorities or other citizens residing in the county, or whether the county board shall consist of the sheriff, the clerk and the county physician.

That this construction is correct seems evident also from a provision found on page 15 of the act, which reads as follows:

> "For facility in effecting prompt distribution of blank forms, regulations, and registration cards to the various counties in the United States, these forms will be addressed to the sheriffs. Should the governor constitute local boards which do not include sheriffs, he will request such boards to procure blank forms from the sheriff."

This makes it clearly evident that the matter of the membership of these local registration boards rests in the sound discretion of the governor.

Now your first question is as to the power of the governor under the president's proclamation to delegate authority. From all that has been noted heretofore it is evident that the governor really delegates no power or authority; he is simply the agency through which the president of the United States speaks. The "Registration Regulations" issued by the president set forth clearly the duties of these local registration boards. Further, section 6 of the said act of congress provides that > "All such officers and agents and persons so designated or appointed shall hereby have full authority for all acts done by them in the execution of this act by the direction of the president."

Hence, the local boards need not look particularly to the governor of Ohio for authority to act in the premises, but they can look to the rules and regulations formulated by the president and also to the very act under which they are appointed and which they are to assist in carrying out. Further, said section 6 makes them liable to punishment upon conviction if they fail to perform the duties prescribed by the president of the United States. Thus these local boards of registration virtually become federal agencies, and are answerable to the federal government for their acts or for their failure to act.

Said section further provides:

> "All persons designated or appointed under regulations prescribed by the president, whether such appointments are made by the president himself or by the governor or other officer of any state or territory to perform any duty in the execution of this act, are hereby required to perform such duty as the president shall order or direct, and all such officers and agents and persons so designated and appointed shall hereby have full authority for all acts done by them in the execution of this act by the direction of the president."

Now with all the above in mind, what is the answer to your questions?

First, as to the delegation of authority:

As said above, this delegation of authority is not so much delegated from the governor to the local boards as it is a delegation of authority to the local boards from the president of the United States through the governor of the state, and, as set out above, this delegation of power and authority by congress is warranted in the way of carrying out the provisions of the act itself. So that I am of the opinion that you are fully warranted in carrying out the provisions of the act and the regulations of the president of the United States, and need not be uneasy as to an undue delegation of authority.

In view of the above, what about your second question as to whether the right exercised by the local boards will be thoroughly incontestable? Their acts will be as incontestable as the law itself. They get their power and authority to act from the law, and their method of acting from the president of the United States, who gets his authority to make the rules and regulations from the act itself.

Hence, answering your questions specifically:

(1.) It is my opinion that you will not in the carrying out of the provisions of said act and the rules and regulations of the president of the United States violate the principles of law in the way of delegating authority to the local boards;

(2.) And that the acts and rights exercised by the local boards will be as thoroughly incontestable as the act itself.

I have carefully examined the opinion rendered by Colonel Turney, judge advocate general of the guard, and am of the opinion that he has correctly set out the principles of law which have to do with said act and the execution of same.

I would like to suggest, however, that inasmuch as the president has laid down certain rules and regulations which are to be followed in the matter of this selective conscription, the said board should carry out implicitly the directions therein set out; this for the reason that congress has seen fit to place this matter in the hands of the president, and in accordance with the instruction of congress the president has issued these regulations.

I have said nothing in reference to the rules which should apply in cities over thirty thousand population, for which provision is made in the law and in the regulations of the president, for the reason that this question is not involved in your request for an opinion.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CLERK OF COURTS—NOT AUTHORIZED TO CHARGE FEE—FOR CERTIFYING TO MILITARY REGISTRATION CARDS OF NON-RESIDENTS.

Clerks of courts not authorized to charge fee for certifying to registration cards of non-residents for military registration.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested my opinion as to whether or not clerks of courts are required to charge a fee under section 2901 G. C. for certifying to the registration cards of non-residents for military registration.

Section 6 of the act of congress of May 18, 1917, provides that the president is authorized to utilize the services of any and all departments and any or all officers or agents of the United States and of the several states, etc., and all persons designated or appointed under the regulations prescribed by the president, whether such appointments are made by the president himself or by the governor or other officer of any state or territory, to perform any duty in the execution of the act, are required to perform such duty as the president shall order or direct.

Section 32 of the registration regulations requires the regularly elected county clerk "to certify to the registration cards of such non-residents."

There is no provision in the act or registration regulations fixing the compensation of the clerk for such certificate nor does it appear that it requires the seal of the court.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that clerks of courts are not authorized to demand fees for such certification under section 2901 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

LEGAL RESIDENCE—DEFINED—LEGAL SETTLEMENT IN SECTION 3477 HAS NO APPLICATION TO LEGAL RESIDENCE USED IN SECTION 1352-4 G. C.

1. "Legal residence," as used in section 1352-4 G. C., means "domicile."
2. The provision of section 3477 G. C. as to legal settlement has no application to "legal residence" as used in section 1352-4 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On April 6, 1917, you requested an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "Your advise is requested upon the application of the provisions of section 1352-4 of the General Code, and particularly to that part of said section which states that certain expenses incident to children received in the juvenile court shall be charged by the board of state charities to the county in which the child had a legal residence when received by said board.
> "We now have a case in which the judge of the juvenile court of Franklin county has before him three children who are in a very neglected condition. The judge desires to commit said children to this board. These children and their mother have been in said county for only a few days. There is every reason to believe that this family had resided in another county for one year before coming within Franklin county. The husband is dead.
> "Shall the board and other expenses for the children be charged to Franklin county or to the county in which they had resided previously?
> "Furthermore, do the provisions of section 3477 apply in any manner to the expression 'legal residence' as used in section 1352-4?"

Section 11352-3 G. C. reads in part as follows:

> "The board of state charities shall when able to do so, receive as its wards such dependent or neglected minors as may be committed to it by the juvenile court. County, district, or semi-public children's homes or any institution entitled to receive children from the juvenile court may, with the consent of the board, transfer to it the guardianship of minor wards of such institutions. If such children have been committed to such institutions by the juvenile court that court must first consent to such transfer. * * *"

Section 1352-4 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The actual traveling expenses of such child and that of the agents and visitors of said board in connection with placing such dependent or neglected child shall be paid from funds appropriated to said board, but the amount of board, if any, paid for the care of such child and the expenses for providing suitable clothing and personal necessities and for mental, medical, dental and optical examination and treatment shall be charged by the board of state charities to the county in which the child had a legal residence when received by such board. The treasurer of each county, upon the warrant of the county auditor, shall pay to the treasurer of state the amount so charged for the preceding quarter upon the presentation of a statement thereof. The sum so received shall be credited to the fund appropriated for the purpose of maintaining the child placing work of the board."

Under the authority of the above statutes, when the juvenile court has found that the children in question are dependents, and has sought to commit them to your board, the board, when able to do so, is authorized to receive such dependents as its wards, and the actual traveling expenses, etc., provided in section 1352-4, are payable from funds appropriated to the board of state charities, but the amount of board, if any, paid for the care of such child or children, and the expenses for providing suitable clothing and personal necessities, and for mental, medical, dental and optical examination and treatment shall be charged by the board of state charities to the county in which the child had a legal residence when received by such board.

The only question to be determined is

"Where was the "legal residence" of such children when they were received by your board?"

Your inquiry does not present sufficient facts to determine this question, so I cannot answer same specifically, but will merely consider the law governing the question of legal residence. In the latter part of your inquiry you state:

"Furthermore, do the provisions of section 3477 apply in any manner to the expression 'legal residence' as used in section 11352-4?"

Section 3477 G. C. reads in part as follows:

"Each person shall be considered to have obtained a legal settlement in any county in this state in which he or she has continuously resided and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months, without relief under the provisions of law for the relief of the poor, subject to the following exceptions: * * *"

This section is found in Part I, Title XI, Div. IV, Ch. 1, entitled "Poor," and defines "legal settlement" under the poor laws of Ohio. It is limited to the statutes upon that subject and has no reference to sections here involved. "Legal residence," as used in section 1352-4 G. C., is not defined in the statute and the meaning of the words as used must be looked for elsewhere.

The Standard Dictionary defines "residence" as:

"The place * * * where one resides; domicile; abode; habitation."

"The words domicile and residence are frequently used synonymously by the courts and in statutes, but technically the latter word indicates merely the present place of abode of a person whether temporary or permanent, whereas domicile always means a permanent home. Nelson's Perpetual Encyc. Vol. IV, p. 97.

"LEGAL RESIDENCE, a phrase variously used, as to denote (1) the place where one's home or family is, (2) fixed and permanent abode or domicile, (3) an abode of sufficient length to confer political rights or subject to personal taxation, or (4) permanency of abode more marked than mere lodging or boarding, but not fixed and final."

The Century Dictionary defines "residence" as follows:

"* * * 5. In law: (a) The place where a man's habitation is fixed without any present intention of removing it therefrom; domicile. (b) An established abode, fixed for a considerable time, whether with or without a present intention of ultimate removal."

In C. H. & D. Railroad Co. v. Ives, 3 N. Y. Supp. 395, the court, defining "legal residence," says:

"'Legal residence' is synonymous with domicile and is defined to be a residence at a particular place accompanied with positive or presumptious proof of intention to remain there an unlimited time. It means more than residence, there being a distinction between actual and legal residence."

A minor cannot himself change his domicile. 34 O. S. 535.

After the father's death, the mother becomes the natural guardian of the child, and the child's domicile is then the domicile of the mother.

Jacob's Law of Domicile, Sec. 238;
12 Ohio 194;
5 Ohio 315.

The mother can change the domicile of the child only by changing her own domicile.

112 U. S. 458;

As stated by Washburn, J., in In re Guardianship of Murray, 4 N. P. (N. S.) 233, at p. 238:

"A child's domicile never changes except with the domicile of the father or mother or grandparent or some other person standing in loco parentis or by operation of law as where the surviving parent dies domiciled at a place other than domicile of the grandparent, when if the child goes to live with the grandparent and actually resides with and becomes a member of the family of the latter, its domicile is changed to that of the grandparent. 114 U. S. 218."

In your statement of facts you say:

"These children and their mother have been in said county for only a few days. There is every reason to believe that this family had resided in another county for one year before coming within Franklin county. The husband is dead."

The fact that the family resided in another county a year before coming to Franklin county, has no bearing on this case. The sole question is, was the mother of the minors domiciled in Franklin county when the children were committed to your board? If this question of fact is decided in the affirmative, the legal residence of the minors was in Franklin county. If, on the other hand, the mother had brought the children here for temporary purposes, and had no intention of taking up a domicile in Franklin county, they would not have lost their legal residence in the county where they last were domiciled, and the expense could be charged back to the latter county.

As stated before, on the meager facts in your communication, it is impossible to determine specifically where the legal residence of this family actually was, when the children were committed to your board; but from the above observations I have no doubt your board will have no trouble in determining where the legal residence of these minors was at the time they were so committed.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TEACHER—ENTITLED TO PENSION—PROVIDED SHE HAS TAUGHT TWENTY YEARS—AND BOARD DOES NOT RE-EMPLOY HER, ALTHOUGH TEACHER WILLING TO CONTINUE EMPLOYMENT.

Under the provisions of sections 7875 et seq. G. C., a teacher is entitled to a pension, providing she has taught for a period aggregating twenty years under the conditions set out in section 7882 G. C., and provided further that the board does not re-employ her, she being willing to continue in the employ of the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

HON. F. B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 1, 1917, in which you ask for certain information, was duly received. Your communication reads as follows:

> "Superintendent Wm. B. Guitteau of the Toledo schools has submitted the following statement of facts:
> "'Mrs. B____ was a former principal of a normal training school in Toledo. The school was discontinued in June, 1914, and so Mrs. B____'s services were no longer needed as principal. She was then a contributor to the pension fund, having made her regular payments of $2.00 each month from the inception of the fund. She had over twenty years of experience but not thirty years, either twenty-three or twenty-four years.
> "'Last fall Mrs. B____ applied for a pension but the board of trustees did not grant it believing that her case did not come within the scope of section 7880 for the reason that she was not retired on account of physical or mental disability. The trustees feel that Mrs. B____ should receive the pension if she is entitled to it but desire more light on the question as to whether or not she is eligible to receive this pension.'
> "In view of the above mentioned facts, is Mrs. B____ eligible to receive a teacher's pension?"

The question submitted by you is as to whether Mrs. B____ would be entitled to a teacher's pension upon the following statement of facts:

1. She has been a teacher for twenty-three or twenty-four years.
2. She has contributed to the fund ever since the same was created in the city of Toledo.

3. She discontinued teaching in June, 1914, because of the fact that the school, over which she was principal, was discontinued and she was no longer needed, therefore, as principal. The school in which she last taught was a normal training school in Toledo, this being the school which was discontinued.

Upon further inquiry from your department, I ascertained the fact to be that this normal training school was connected with the public school system of the city of Toledo and maintained at the expense of the taxpayers of said city.

The provisions of the statutes which have to do with teachers' pensions are found in sections 7875 to 7896 inclusive G. C., and in order to answer your question it will be necessary to note the provisions of a number of the sections of this chapter pertaining to teachers' pensions.

Section 7881 G. C. reads as follows:

"The term 'teacher', in this chapter, shall include all teachers regularly employed by either of such boards in the day schools, including the superintendent of schools, all superintendents of instruction, principals, and special teachers, but in estimating years of service, only service in public day schools or day high schools, supported in whole or in part by public taxation, shall be considered."

It will be noted in this section that in estimating years of service, only service in public day schools or day high schools, supported in whole or in part by public taxation, shall be considered. As said before, from information received from your office it is evident that Mrs. B____ would come under the provisions of this section while teaching in the normal training school.

There are several sections which have to do with the necessary conditions to entitle a teacher to pension.

Section 7882 G. C. reads as follows:

"Any teacher may retire and become a beneficiary under this chapter who has taught for a period aggregating thirty years. But one-half of such term of service must have been rendered in the public schools or in the high schools of such school district, or in the public schools or high schools of the county in which the district is located, and the remaining one-half in the public schools of this state or elsewhere."

Mrs. B____ does not come under this section, because she has not taught the required length of time, namely, thirty years, before voluntarily retiring from the profession of teaching.

Section 7880 G. C. reads as follows:

"Such board of education of such school district, and a union, or other separate board, if any, having the control and management of the high schools of such district, may each by a majority vote of all the members composing the board on account of physical or mental disability, retire any teacher under such board who has taught for a period aggregating twenty years. One-half of such period of service must have been rendered by such beneficiary in the public schools or high schools of such school district, or in the public schools or high schools of the county in which they are located, and the remaining one-half in the public schools of this state or elsewhere."

From your letter I note that Mrs. B____ was not retired from her profession on account of physical or mental disability, and hence, although she has taught over twenty years, yet she would not come under the conditions set out in said section.

Section 7891 G. C. reads as follows:

> "A teacher who resigns, upon application within three (3) months after such resignation takes effect, shall be entitled to receive one-half of the total amount paid by such teacher into such fund. If at any time a teacher who is willing to continue in the service of the board of education is not re-employed or is discharged before his term of service aggregates twenty years, then to such teacher shall be paid back at once all the money he or she may have contributed under this law. But if any teacher who has taught for a period aggregating twenty years is not re-employed by the board of education, such failure to re-employ shall be deemed his retiring, and such teacher shall be entitled to a pension according to the provisions of this act."

It will be noted that under the provisions of this section

> "if any teacher who has taught for a period aggregating twenty years is not re-employed by the board of education, such failure to re-employ shall be deemed his retiring, and such teacher shall be entitled to a pension according to the provisions of this act."

It is quite evident that Mrs. B____ might be brought within the provisions of this section, but in order to come under the provisions of this section the following conditions would have to obtain:

1. She must have taught for a period aggregating twenty years.
2. But this service must have been rendered under the conditions set out in section 7882 G. C.; that is, one-half of this term of twenty years of service must have been in the public schools or in the high schools of Toledo or in Lucas county, and the remaining one-half in the public schools of this state or elsewhere.
3. The board of education of Toledo must have failed to re-employ her at the time she ceased being principal in the normal training school, she being willing to continue in the employ of the board.
4. If the normal school in which she was principal ceased operation, she would have been compelled to remain in the employ of the board in some other capacity than principal, provided the board should be willing to employ her in some position in the Toledo public schools, or if she did not, she would not be entitled to a pension under section 7891 G. C. The mere fact that she was no longer needed in the position of principal of the normal school would not entitle her to a pension under said section, unless the board failed to re-employ her and place her in some other position in the public schools.

So that answering your communication specifically, it is my opinion that Mrs. B____ is not entitled to a teacher's pension, unless she comes within the provisions of section 7891 G. C., which conditions are set out and numbered above.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SECTION 614-14—PROHIBITING DISCRIMINATION IN RATES OF PUBLIC UTILITY—DOES NOT APPLY TO COUNTY OR POLITICAL SUBDIVISION—POWER OF COMMISSIONERS TO CONTRACT FOR LIGHT, HEAT, ETC.—WHEN COMMISSIONERS CONTINUE TO PAY CONTRACT PRICE FOR LIGHT, ETC., AFTER ADOPTION OF NEW SCHEDULE—MAY NOT RECOVER EXCESS OF CONTRACT PRICE OVER NEW SCHEDULE.

The provision of section 614-14 G. C., prohibiting discrimination in rates charged for a public utility, is limited by its terms to "any person, firm or corporation," and does not include a county or other political division.

The county commissioners, under section 2435-1, may contract for supplying their buildings with light, heat or power, for ten years at a time. Said section is not repealed or affected by the public utilities act.

The county commissioners having contracted for lighting county buildings at rates set out in the contract, and having continued to pay at the contract rates, after the adoption and approval of a new schedule, cannot recover the excess of such payment over the new schedule rates, and this is true, whether the contract rates were identical with those set out in the former schedule or not.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of February 2, 1917, you addressed the following communication to this office:

"We are transmitting herewith communication from Mr. Edward J. Ott, state examiner in the county division of this department, also schedule of rates of the Ohio Service Company effective September 1, 1913, schedule of rates effective March 15, 1916, together with copy of contract between the Coshocton Light and Heating Company and the Commissioners of Coshocton county, Ohio, under date of September 15, 1913, and we respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:

"(1) Can an electric light company, which has entered into a contract with a consumer for the purpose of furnishing said consumer with electric light service at certain rates set out in its schedule of rates approved by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio and in effect at the time said contract was executed, continue to legally charge the said contract rates after a new schedule of rates issued by the electric light company and approved by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio became effective?

"(2) Should findings for recovery be made for the excess amounts charged to and collected from the county by the Ohio Service Company since March, 1916, for the said electric light service?"

The communication referred to and addressed to you is as follows:

"On September 15, 1913, the Coshocton Light and Heating Company of Coshocton, Ohio, entered into a certain contract, a copy of which is herewith submitted, to furnish current for lighting the several rooms in the court house and the county jail.

"The charges under said contract are based upon commercial lighting rate 'B' of schedule No. 2 issued by the said Coshocton Light and Heating Company, which was approved by the public service commission of Ohio and which became effective September 1, 1913.

"A copy of the schedule of commercial lighting rate 'B' and of the terms and conditions (sheet No. 15) of said schedule No. 2 is also herewith submitted.

"On March 10, 1916, the Ohio Service Company, which had acquired the plant and business of the Coshocton Light and Heating Company issued a new schedule of rates for electric light, heat and power service at Coshocton, Ohio.

"This schedule was issued on less than statutory notice by permission of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, on account of first filing, and became effective on March 15, 1916.

"A copy of the new schedule noted above is also herewith submitted.

"'An examination of the bills rendered to the county by the Oil Service Company since March 15, 1916, the date upon which its new schedule of rates became effective, discloses that said company continued to base its charges for lighting the rooms of the court house and the county jail upon the old schedule of rates which had been cancelled when the new rates became effective on March 15, 1916.

"If the charges for current used since March, 1916, as shown by the bills rendered, had been based upon the rates of the new schedule, there would have been a considerable saving to the county in the cost of lighting the rooms of the court house and the county jail.

"QUESTION:—Can an electric light company, which has entered into a contract with a consumer for the purpose of furnishing said consumer with electric light service at certain rates set out in its schedule of rates approved by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio and in effect at the time said contract was executed, continue to legally charge the said contract rates after a new schedule of rates issued by the electric light company and approved by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio became effective?

"QUESTION:—Should findings for recovery be made for the excess amounts charged to and collected from the county by the Ohio Service Company since March, 1916, for the said electric light service?"

The control by the Public Utilities Commission of the subject of rates charged for service by persons or companies supplying such public utilities is provided in the acts known as the Public Service Commission Act and the Public Utilities Commission Act and amendatory and supplemental legislation thereto.

Sections 614-14, 614-15 and 614-18 G. C. are as follows:

"Sec. 614-14. No public utility shall directly or indirectly, or by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device or method, charge, demand, collect or receive from any person, firm or corporation, a greater or less compensation for any services rendered, or to be rendered, except as provided in this act, than it charges, demands, collects, or receives from any other person, firm, or corporation for doing a like and contemporaneous service under the same, or substantially the same circumstances and conditions. Nor shall free service or service for less than actual cost be furnished for the purpose of destroying competition, and such free service and every such charge is prohibited and declared unlawful.

"Sec. 614-15. No public utility shall make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any person, firm, corporation, or locality, or subject the same to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever.

"Sec. 614-18. No public utility shall charge, demand, exact, receive or collect a different rate, rental, toll or charge for any service rendered, or to be rendered, than that applicable to such service as specified in its schedule filed with the commission and in effect at the time. Nor shall any public utility refund or remit directly or indirectly, any rate, rental, toll or charge so specified, or any part thereof, nor extend to any person, firm or corporation, any rule, regulation, privilege or facility except such as are specified in such schedule and regularly and uniformly extended to all persons, firms and corporations under like circumstances for the like, or substantially similar, service."

It is seen that the operation of this system of laws is restricted to the dealings of such persons and companies with persons, firms and corporations, and does not include the public in its collective capacity, as political subdivisions represented by officials. The schedule of rates, therefore, as fixed by the Public Utilities Commission, does not of its own force apply to the public in that sense.

In so far, however, as the principal of uniformity and equality is made obligatory, these sections are merely declaratory of the common law as evolved by and applied to modern conditions.

It is a universal rule, supported by a vast mass of authority, with no dissent from any jurisdiction, that such public service corporations cannot discriminate among their patrons either as to fact or quality of service or price charged.

Munn v. Illinois, 91 U. S. 113.

The county is no more excluded from the operation of this beneficial rule than any other customer, and if unaffected by statute would indirectly receive the benefit of the rate as fixed, not by virtue of the statutes above quoted, but by the operation of this principle. To restate the proposition—the county would not come under the public service commission law and could receive no relief under any of its provisions nor from any appeal to or act by the Public Service Commission; but the county could under the principle established by the courts refuse to be discriminated against and appeal to their equity jurisdiction to prevent an exaction of payment in excess of other consumers, the effect of which would be to obtain for it the benefit of the exact rate fixed by the commission.

Another consequence of the omission of political divisions from said acts, is that it leaves them free to contract for the same or a different character of service from that provided for in published schedules and for different prices, either higher or lower, than therein set forth.

In addition to the above principles and arguments, there is a section of the statutes that confers power on the commissioners to make such contract, section 2435-1, which is as follows:

"The commissioners of any county may, at any time, either before or after the completion of any county building, invite bids and award contracts for supplying such building with light, heat and power, or any of the same, for any period of time not exceeding ten years; but none of the provisions of section fifty-six hundred and sixty of the General Code shall apply to any such contracts."

While the public utility acts are subsequent to this, there is thereby no repeal by implication because there is no contradiction between the two, and this by reason of the restriction of the public utilities law to persons, firms and corporations. If the term "corporation" were construed as including the public quasi-corporation, the county, then section 2435-1 might be repealed by implication; but such repeals are not favored, and where the language is capable of it, it will always receive such construction as will leave a former law in effect. Even if you gave this broad meaning to "corporation," the repeal by implication would not follow, but the former act would stand as an exception to the latter.

City of Birmingham v. Southern Express Co., 164 Ala. 529;
Board of Education v. Board of Education, 46 O. S. 575-600.

In the instant case there is ambiguity in the contract, which states, in respect to the incandescent lighting, that the rates charged are to be in accordance with the published schedule, and then giving the rates, which in one instance is different from the schedule rate, by being placed under a schedule in which it did not belong. The allusion is to the sheriff's residence which is charged the rate per commercial lighting instead of residence, which was a reduction to the county. The provision for arc lighting is not provided for in the schedules at all, but inasmuch as the contract is severable in this respect, the provisions for the incandescent lighting may be considered alone, and it differs from the schedule, not alone in respect to this one item of price, but also as to the manner of furnishing the service, certain accessories being supplied by the company, which in the schedule are required to be furnished by the purchaser.

So that here you have power to make a contract different from that contemplated in the published schedule, and such different contract actually made. Not only that, but it is fully executed on both sides. The county has voluntarily made payments on it since the new rate went into effect, and now it is sought to recover back the excess payment as illegal. They were not illegal, but only in excess of what the commissioners might have contracted for.

The answer to your first query, in the general form in which you put it, would be in the negative, but the rule thereby affirmed does not govern your concrete case.

Your second question is answered in the negative. No recovery could be had against this company for the excess payments in question.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TREASURER OF STATE—AUTHORIZED TO TRANSFER FUNDS DEPOSITED BY THE CAPITOL TRUST COMPANY—TO THE STATE SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY.

Under facts stated, treasurer authorized to transfer $50,000 of the $100,000 bonds deposited by The Capitol Trust Company to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

HON. CHESTER E. BRYAN, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 23d you wrote me as follows:

"This office is in receipt of the enclosed communication from The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, Columbus, Ohio, relative to a transfer of securities from The Capitol Trust Company, to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, which communication we are referring to you for your advice in the matter."

The enclosure to which you refer is to the following effect:

"There is now on deposit with you bonds of a par value of $155,000.00. One hundred thousand dollars of these bonds standing in the name of The Capitol Trust Company and $55,000.00 in the name of The State Savings Bank and Trust Company security required by the law under which we are incorporated. You will observe from the affidavit filed herewith that the $100,000.00 standing to the credit of The Capitol Trust Company were sold on the 16th day of January, 1911, to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company. The State Savings Bank and Trust Company at that time having acquired the assets and business of The Capitol Trust Company.

"In said affidavit it is set forth that The Capitol Trust Company has divested itself of all trusts with the exception of The Elk Coal Company of Roseville, Ohio, and as receiver for the Fritter estate.

"We also enclose a guarantee executed by The State Savings Bank and Trust Company guaranteeing 'the prompt and due performance of all of the duties and obligations on the part of The Capital Trust Company arising in connection with the aforesaid two trusts.'

"It is our desire that all of the securities now on deposit with you in the name of The Capitol Trust Company be transferred to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company to which company they properly belong.

"We trust you may see your way clear, with the information set before you, to comply with this request."

The affidavit accompanying your letter is dated on the 11th day of May, 1917, and is made by Randolph S. Warner, vice-president of The Capitol Trust Company, and Alexander W. Mackenzie, secretary-treasurer of said company, and recites that The Capitol Trust Co. had on deposit with the treasurer of the state of Ohio, $100,000.00 in approved securities, as required by section 9778 G. C., which section reads as follows:

> "No such corporation either foreign or domestic shall accept trusts which may be vested in, transferred or committed to it by an individual, or court, until its paid in capital is at least one hundred thousand dollars, and until such corporation has deposited with the treasurer of state in cash fifty thousand dollars if its capital is two hundred thousand dollars or less, and one hundred thousand dollars if its capital is more than two hundred thousand dollars, except that, the full amount of such deposit by such corporation may be in bonds of the United States, or of this state, or any municipality or county therein, or in any other state, or in the first mortgage bonds of any railroad corporation that for five years last past paid dividents of at least three per cent on its common stock."

Said affidavit further recites that on the 16th day of January, 1911, The Capitol Trust Company, by resolution of its stockholders, sold the assets of said company to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Columbus, Ohio, among which were the approved securities on deposit with the treasurer of state.

The affidavit further discloses that all of the trusts assumed by The Capitol Trust Company as trustee have been terminated with the exception of a certain mortgage or deed of trust from The Elk Coal Company of Roseville, Ohio, and a certain receivership in which the said The Capitol Trust Company was made receiver in a suit brought by Philbrick, et al., against Fritter, et al.

So far as the trusteeship with The Elk Coal Co. is concerned, it appears that The Capitol Trust Company is not liable for any negligence, omission or wrongdoing on the part of its agents or attorneys if reasonable care has been exercised in their selection; that it has expended no money under such deed of trust, and that there is no obligation thereunder upon it to perform any act or to defend any suit unless first indemnified, and that the trustee is not under any obligation to file or refile the mortgage or deed of trust.

The affidavit discloses further that only $1,750.00 par value of the bonds are in the hands of holders; that $26,000.00 par value are held by the company and used from time to time as collateral for loans, and that $2,250.00 of the bonds have been paid and retired; that the trustee has been called upon to perform no duties in the premises and that no money under the mortgage or deed of trust has been deposited with the trustee.

The affidavit further recites that no situation can develop which will in any way cast upon the trustee a duty for which it could be liable or for which security is necessary for the protection of the holders of the bonds; and that there exists at this time with respect to said trust no claim or liability whatsoever.

It is further recited in the affidavit that unless the co-operation of The Elk Coal Co. bond holders can be secured to the end that The Capitol Trust Co. may divest itself of the trust, it will file an application with the court of common pleas asking for the appointment of a successor.

So far as the Fritter receivership is concerned, the affidavit states that the company merely acts as a real estate agent in the collection of rents and distributes all moneys under the direction of the court.

It is further disclosed by the affidavit that on the 6th day of April, 1917, The Capitol Trust Company reduced its capital stock from $400,000.00 to $2,500.00.

The guarantee referred to in the letter of The Capitol Trust Co. discloses that the board of directors of The State Savings Bank & Trust Co. "guarantee the prompt and due performance of all of the duties and obligations on the part of the said The Capitol Trust Company arising in connection with the aforesaid two trusts, (1) the said mortgage or trust deed from the said The Elk Coal Company and (2) the said receivership in the case of Philbrick v. Fritter, and that it assume and agree to pay any liability arising out of said trusts or either of them against the said The Capitol Trust Company."

From an examination of Opinion No. 1990, rendered to the Tax Commission of Ohio on October 20, 1916, it appears that the assets of The Capitol Trust Co. were sold to The State Savings Bank & Trust Co. in the year 1911 under what is termed a plan of consolidation of the two companies. The opinion referred to discloses the following facts:

> "In the plan of consolidation as agreed upon by the committees of the two companies in question it was agreed that The State Savings Bank and Trust Company should increase its capital stock and that The Capitol Trust Company should go into voluntary liquidation and that thereafter the stockholders of The Capitol Trust Company were permitted to acquire a certain amount of the capital stock of The State Savings Bank and Trust Company and to turn over in payment thereof certain assets of The Capitol Trust Company, the remaining assets to be distributed among the stockholders. The plan of consolidation, as I construe it, clearly shows that the initial step to be taken by The Capitol Trust Company was a voluntary liquidation. That is to say, that the stockholders of The Capitol Trust Company were to take steps to voluntarily dissolve the corporation and thereafter to use the assets of said company in the purchase of the shares of capital stock of The State Savings Bank and Trust Company.
> "From a letter received from Mr. James M. Butler it appears that at the time the stockholders of The Capitol Trust Company had agreed to the plan proposed for the absorption of The Capitol Trust Company by The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, The Capitol Trust Company had on deposit with the treasurer of the state of Ohio bonds aggregating in value one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars, which had been deposited to secure the due performance of its trust; that The Capitol Trust Company desired to surrender the said bonds to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, but that the then attorney-general thought that The Capitol Trust Company should defer this action so that there could be no criticism in the event that some claim arose under a trust which had been assumed by it, and that The Capitol Trust Company agreed thereto. It appears, therefore, that by request of the state authorities The Capitol Trust Company did not at that time go into voluntary liquidation but deferred such action on account of the request made by said state authorities, and it may well be assumed that had no such request been made the stockholders of The Capitol Trust Company would have taken such action as to voluntarily dissolve the said The Capitol Trust Company."

I have learned from Mr. J. M. Butler, the attorney for The State Savings Bank and Trust Co., that his company desires to withdraw $50,000.00 of the deposit so made, the same to be transferred to the name of The State Savings Bank and Trust Co., leaving the balance of $50,000.00 now in the name of The Capitol Trust Company until it can be shown to you that The Elk Coal Company trusteeship and the Fritter receivership have entirely terminated.

In view of the fact that The State Savings Bank and Trust Company is in reality the owner of the bonds now held by you in the name of The Capitol Trust Company, which bonds were deposited under the provisions of section 9778 for the faithful performance of the trusts assumed by such corporation, and in view of the fact that had it not been for the request of the state authorities that the trust company continue and not go into voluntary liquidation said trust company would long since have been dissolved, and in view of the fact that the paid in capital of the company is now below $200,000.00 and therefore under section 9778 was authorized to accept trusts if $50,000.00 were on deposit with the treasurer of state, and in view of the further fact that The State Savings Bank and Trust Company has by action of its board of directors guaranteed the faithful performance of the said remaining trusts of The Capitol Trust Company, I am of the opinion that you are authorized to transfer $50,000.00 of the securities now on deposit with you in the name of The Capitol Trust Company to The State Savings Bank and Trust Company, the remaining $50,000.00 to be held by you until satisfactory proof has been given you that the remaining trusts have ceased and determined.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION—ALIEN ENEMIES—POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION RESPECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW AS TO SUBJECTS AND RESIDENTS OF GERMANY, AUSTRIA-HUNGARY, ETC.

1. With respect to claims for workmen's compensation which may arise on account of injuries to a subject of Germany residing within the United States occurring subsequently to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany, it is the duty of the industrial commission to proceed to hear and determine a claim and to administer the state insurance fund in that behalf as if the war did not exist, if they have been obeying the law and the president's proclamation.

2. With respect to claims, if any, which may arise on account of the death of a resident of the United States, who is a subject of the German empire, occurring subsequently to the declaration of war, when those claiming as dependents reside in Germany, the commission should ascertain whether the injury occurred prior to the declaration of war, or subsequently thereto; (a) If prior, the industrial commission may proceed to hear and determine the claim as in other cases; but any award that may be made should be held in trust by the commission during the war and not paid to the claimants nor to anyone on their behalf until peace is concluded. (b) If the injury occurred subsequently to the declaration of war the commission should receive and file the claim but take no action thereon for the time being, as such claims present questions of grave doubt which cannot be satisfactorily determined until the war is over.

It appears, however, that as a matter of law a resident of an enemy country could not be a "dependent" of a resident of the United States during a state of war; and that where the fact of dependency is to be established as of a day falling within the duration of the war, it is legally impossible to establish it as such.

3. Respecting claims which have arisen or may arise on account of injuries or death occurring prior to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany, where the claimants are residents of the United States, the industrial commission should proceed in the disposition of the claim and the disbursement of the fund on account thereof as if the war did not exist, if they have been obeying the law and the president's proclamation.

4. Respecting claims which have arisen or may arise from injuries or death prior to the declaration of war, when the claimants are residents of Germany, the commission should proceed to hear and determine the claim as in other cases; but any award that may be made should be held in trust by the commission during the war and not paid to the claimants nor to anyone in their behalf until peace is concluded.

5. With respect to making periodical payments on awards made prior to the declaration of war with Germany or thereafter made upon claims arising from accidents occurring prior thereto, when the recipients of the payments, though aliens, reside in the United States, the commission should continue the disbursements as if the war did not exist, though the recipients of the payments be subjects of the German empire (if they have been obeying the law and the president's proclamation).

6. Respecting cases of the last named class, when the recipients reside in Germany, the commission should discontinue making the periodical payments during the existence of the war, but should hold the fund represented by the whole award in trust for proper distribution at the end of the war.

7. (a) Respecting claims filed, or which may be filed, on account of accidents occurring since the war was declared, where the claimants, whether dependents or otherwise, though non-residents of this country, and subjects of Germany, reside in friendly countries, the commission should proceed in all cases as if the war did not exist.

In like manner the commission should ignore the existence of war in the administration of the workmen's compensation law upon claims on account of injuries occurring before the war was declared, and the making of periodical payments under awards made before the war was declared, where the claimants or beneficiaries though subjects of Germany and not residents of this country, live in friendly countries.

8. When the claimant, regardless of citizenship or nationality, actually resides in Germany the commission should be governed as follows:

(a) With respect to claims on account of injuries occurring since the war was declared the commission should take no present action in the premises, but should defer all action on such claims until the conclusion of peace; it being, however, the opinion of the Attorney-General that as a matter of law such claims can never be the foundation of a right to participate in the benefits of the state insurance fund.

(b) In such cases when the injury occurred prior to the declaration of war the commission should proceed to hear and determine the application and make the awards, if the facts so justify, but should hold the money represented by the awards in trust until after the war.

(c) With respect to making periodical payments on awards made to such claimants prior to the declaration of war the commission should discontinue such payments, but should hold the fund represented by the whole award in trust for proper distribution at the end of the war.

9. For the purpose of determining the application of all the foregoing conclusions the meaning of the phrase "residing in Germany" should be understood as embracing the residents of territories which are under well established military occupation by German armies, subject, however, to such exceptions as may be sanctioned by the government of the United States by way of relief measures in Belgium and Poland; and as excluding the inhabitants of territories formerly German, which are under well established occupation by friendly countries.

10. The inhabitants of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, including such portions of such other countries as are under the well established military occupancy of the forces of any of these countries, and excluding such portions of the territory of any of them as may be in the well established military occupancy of the forces of friendly countries, are to be regarded, for all the foregoing purposes, in the same light as the inhabitants of Germany. The status of such persons should be determined irrespective of the date of the cessation of diplomatic relations between Austria-Hungary and the United States, and as commencing in its present aspect with the declaration of war between the United States and Germany.

This course of action is recommended to the commission as the only safe and proper one under the circumstances and as calculated to enable claimants most conveniently to raise the legal questions involved in court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of April 10, 1917, which is as follows:

"This commission desires your opinion as to its duty in the matter of consideration, allowance and payment of claims for compensation under the workmen's compensation act:

"1. In cases of resident alien enemies who are injured in the course of their employment.

"2. In cases of non-resident dependents of resident alien enemies who are killed while in the course of employment.

"We desire this information in order that we may take proper procedure with reference to claims which may arise on account of injury or death occurring subsequent to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany so far as subjects of the German empire and their dependents are concerned, and claims which may arise subsequent to the suspension of diplomatic relations between the United States and Austria-Hungary so far as subjects of the last named empire and their dependents are concerned; also that we may be properly advised as to whether we should continue to make periodical payments on awards made prior to the declaration of war with Germany or the suspension of diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary, and whether we should give any consideration to claims now pending on account of injury or death of subjects of the above mentioned countries."

For my own convenience I have divided the various questions, which you say you have in mind, as follows:

1. What is the duty of the commission respecting claims which may arise on account of injury to a subject of the German empire, resident here, occurring subsequently to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany?

2. What is the duty of the commission respecting claims, if any, which may arise on account of the death of a subject of the German empire, resident here, occurring subsequently to the declaration of war when those claiming as dependents reside in Germany?

3. What is the duty of the commission respecting claims which have arisen or may arise on account of injuries or death occurring prior to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany where the claimants are residents of the United States?

4. What is the duty of the commission respecting claims which have arisen or may arise from injury or death occurring prior to the declaration of war when the claimants are residents of Germany?

5. What is the duty of the commission respecting the making of periodical payments on awards made prior to the declaration of war with Germany, or thereafter made upon claims arising from accidents occurring prior thereto, when the recipients of the payments, though aliens, reside in the United States?

6. What is the duty of the commission respecting cases of the last named class when the recipients of the payments reside in Germany?

7. What is the duty of the commission respecting:

(a) Claims filed, or which may be filed, on account of accidents occurring since the war was declared where the claimants, whether dependents or otherwise, though non-residents of the United States, subjects of Germany, do not reside in Germany, as, for example, in Canada, or in France or in South America?

(b) Claims filed in behalf of such claimants on account of accidents occurring prior to the declaration of war?

(c) Continuance of periodical payments on awards made to such claimants prior to the declaration of war?

8. (Interpolated by myself in order to complete the schedule of possible cases).

What is the duty of the commission respecting its action in the three classes of cases with respect to time last above suggested when the recipient of the award, regardless of citizenship or nationality, actually reside in Germany, i. e., reside there though he or they may be citizens of the United States?

9. What is the duty of the commission respecting the various classes of cases above described in the inquiry concerning Germany and its residents and subjects in the case of subjects or residents of Austria-Hungary after the suspension of diplomatic relations between the United States and that nation?

In the development of the principles by the application of which these various questions must be answered I shall doubtless arrive at conclusions respecting them without regard to the order in which the questions are asked. In stating the questions I have followed the order suggested in your letter.

Nowhere have I found a better statement of the foundation principles, the application of which is invoked by some, if not all, of your questions, than in the judgment of Lord Reading, C. J., in Porter v. Freudenberg, (1915), 1 K. B., 857, (a judgment of the court of appeal of England, delivered January 19, 1915). Because this judgment so admirably and accurately sums up both the historical development of the doctrine and its present statement, I deem it appropriate to quote somewhat liberally therefrom:

"It is necessary at the outset to keep clearly in mind the meaning of the term 'alien enemy' when used in reference to civil rights and liabilities. Its natural meaning indicates a subject of enemy nationality, * * * and would not in any circumstances include a subject of a neutral state or of the British crown, but that is not the sense in which the term is used in reference to civil rights. Ever since the great case of The Hoop, 1 C. Rob. 196, the law has been firmly established as pronounced in the judgment of Lord Stowell (then Sir William Scott) that one of the consequences of war was the absolute interdiction of all commercial intercourse or correspondence by a British subject with the inhabitants of the hostile country except by permission of the Sovereign. * * * This branch of law was again considered as a result of the Crimean war, and Willes, J., in delivering the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in Exposito v. Bowden (1857) (7 E. & B. at p. 779) said: 'It is now fully established that the presumed object of war being as much to cripple the enemy's commerce as to capture his property, a declaration of war imports a prohibition of commercial intercourse and correspondence with the inhabitants of the enemy's country and that such intercourse, except with the license of the Crown, is illegal.' This law was founded in earlier days upon the conception that all subjects owing allegiance to the Crown were at war with subjects of the state at war with the Crown, and later it was grounded upon public policy, which forbids the doing of acts that will be or may be to the advantage of the enemy state by increasing its capacity for prolonging hostilities in adding to the credit, money or goods, or other resources available to individuals in the enemy state. Trading with a British subject or the subject of a neutral state carrying on business in the hostile territory is as much assistance to the alien enemy as if it were with a subject of enemy nationality carrying on business in the enemy state, and, therefore, for the purpose of the enforcement of civil rights, they are equally treated as alien enemies. It is clear law that the test for this purpose is not nationality but the place of carrying on the business. * * * When considering the enforcement of civil rights a person may be treated as the subject of an enemy state, notwithstanding that he is in fact a subject of the British Crown or of a neutral state. Conversely a person may be treated as a subject of the Crown notwithstanding that he is in fact the subject of an enemy state. As Lord Lindley said in Jansen v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, (1902) (A. C. at p. 505): 'When considering questions arising wtih an alien enemy it is not the nationality of a person but his place of business during war that is important. An Englishman carrying on business in an enemy's country is treated as an alien enemy in considering the validity * * * of his commercial contracts. Again the subject of a state at war with this country but who is carrying on business here or in a foreign neutral country is not treated as an alien enemy; the validity of his contracts does not depend on his nationality or even on what is his real domicile but on the place or places in which he carries on his business or businesses.' * * *

"In ascertaining the rights of aliens the first point for consideration is whether they are alien friends or alien enemies. Alien friends have long since been, and are at the present day, treated in reference to civil rigths as if they were British subjects, and are entitled to the enjoyment of all personal rights of a citizen, including the right to sue in the King's courts. Alien enemies have no civil rights or privileges unless they are here under the protection and by permission of the Crown. * * *"

(Lord Reading then goes on to refer historically to the establishment of the doctrine that property of an alien enemy is, theoretically at least, liable to confiscation.)

"* * * The severity of the common law rule was, however, in early days relaxed in favor of those who had the King's permission to come here. So long ago as the year 1454 it would follow from the reported observations of Ashton J., (Year Book, 32 Hen. 6, 23 (b) 5) that if an alien enemy came here under the King's license or a safe conduct he could maintain an action for trespass if any person took his goods from his house. * * *"

(Here Lord Reading traces the development of the theory of special protection to resident alien enemies showing that as a matter of pleading it had become established in England that the burden was upon the alien enemy, as a litigant, to establish that he was within the realm by the license of the King. In this connection he cites Lord Erskine's judgment in the case of Ex Parte Boussmaker (13 Ves. 71), to which I shall hereinafter refer, and comes ultimately to the citation of the recent case of Princess Thurn and Taxis v. Moffit, (1914) (31 T. L. R. 24). Of this case (which, unfortunately is not available in our supreme court law library at the present time), Lord Reading says:

"Sargent J. held that the subject of an enemy state who was registered under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, as an alien and the subject of an enemy state is entitled to sue in the King's court. This decision is in our opinion clearly right. Such an alien is resident here by tacit permission of the Crown. He has by registration informed the executive of his presence in this country, and has been allowed thereafter to remain here. He is 'sub protectione domini regis.' * * *."

The remainder of the opinion is taken up with a discussion of the bearing of certain articles of the Hague convention of 1907, to which I shall hereinafter refer, upon the problem and with the liability of an alien enemy to be sued.

As stated, I am inclined to give great weight to the judgment from which I have quoted, not because it is that of the highest court of England—indeed another important judgment rendered by the same court on the same day has since been reversed by the House of Lords. (See Continental Tyre and Rubber Company v. Daimler Company, 1915, 1 K. B., 893; (1916) 2 A. C., 307, sub nom. Daimler Company v. Continental Tyre and Rubber Company.)

The question in the last cited case was as to the capacity of a company incorporated in England and carrying on some of its business there to sue in the English courts when its capacity was challenged by a plea of alien enemy and it was made to appear that the bulk of its shares were held in Germany by a German holding company and that all the directors were residents of Germany. The court of appeal had deemed itself bound by the decision of Jansen v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, supra, and by decisions like Salomon v. Salomon & Co. (1897) (A. C. 22) to shut its eyes to whatever facts lay behind the fiction of corporate entity. The House of Lords, however, decided that the fiction of corporate entity could and should be disregarded in a case of this kind and that, it being disregarded, the principles of agency come into play and the case was to be decided in accordance with the character, as friends or enemies, of "its agents or persons in de facto control of its affairs, whether authorized or not." (Quoted from the important judgment of Lord Parker of Waddington, page 345.)

A close examination of the various opinions of the law lords delivered seriatim in this important case shows that so far from weakening the authority of the case of Porter v. Freudenberg, supra, decided by the latter court, it tends indeed to strengthen it. I quote the following:

"It is well established that trading with the most loyal British subject, if he be resident in Germany, would, during the present war, amount to trading with the enemy, and be a misdemeanor if carried on without the consent of the Crown; the reason being that the fruits of his action result to a hostile country and so furnish resources against his own country."

"The rule against trading with the enemy is a belligerent's weapon of self-protection. I think that it has to be applied to modern circumstances as we find them, and not limited to the applications of long ago, with as little desire to cut it down on the one hand as to extend it on the other beyond what those circumstances require. Though it has been said by high authority * * * to aim at curtailing the commercial resources of the enemy, it has, according to other and older authorities, the wider object of preventing unregulated intercourse with the enemy altogether. Through the Royal licence, which validates such intercourse and such trade they are brought under necessary control. Without such control they are forbidden. * * * *"

In this connection I wish merely to refer to a passage in the judgment of Lord Shaw of Dunfermline, in which he quotes from the Trading with the Enemy Acts of 1914 (4 and 5 Geo., 5, c. 87) and the royal proclamations issued in conformity therewith. Consistently with what has heretofore been developed with relation to the nature of a special license to trade, he holds that whatever is permitted by royal proclamation is not trading with the enemy. He calls attention to article 5 of the royal proclamation prohibiting all persons resident within the dominion from paying "any sum of money to or for the benefit of an enemy," the word "enemy" being defined generally in the same manner in which other definitions above quoted have expressed the idea.

I think, upon the whole, that although the House of Lords has apparently come no nearer to an adjudication upon the main questions than that embodied in Daimler Company vs. The Continental Tyre and Rubber Company, supra, the principles incidentally applied in that case are quite consistent with those laid down by Lord Reading in Porter v. Freudenberg, supra, so that the authority of the latter decision, though not that of a court of last resort, may be regarded as unshaken.

Summarizing the principles to be drawn from both the cases for present purposes I may state them as follows:

I. During public war it is unlawful, as a matter of common law and regardless of statutes or executive proclamations, to trade with the enemy.

Historically this rule of common law has been put on three distinct grounds:

(1) The ancient idea that all subjects or citizens of one belligerent state were enemies of all subjects or citizens of other belligerent states.

(2) The more modern notion that as a matter of public policy all kinds of commercial intercourse between residents of the belligerent states in time of public war is illegal.

(3) The still more modern notion that the reason of the rule is that the main object of war being to weaken the enemy and force his capitulation by diminishing his material resources as well as by overcoming his arms, such intercourse with residents of the enemy state as may directly or indirectly tend to increase the resources of that state by increasing those of one of its residents is inconsistent with one of the main aims and objects of war.

This last principle, if pressed to its logical conclusion, would not prohibit all intercourse but only that which would tend to bring funds or property into the enemy state and thus to subject them to the control of the enemy government.

As the cases previously cited and quoted from show the first of these three notions has now become obsolete and it is discarded. The other two, however, still persist, and in so far as they may be inconsistent with each other it is impossible to say that the courts of England have clearly chosen between them. For the purpose of your inquiry, however, it will not be necessary to make such a choice.

II. An enemy, commercial intercourse with whom or remittances to whom are forbidden by the above rules of the common law is to be defined as a voluntary resident of the enemy state—a person whose resources are subject to ex-actions by the government of the enemy state to assist that government in sustaining itself during the war, and thereby to enable itself more successfully to prosecute the war.

III. Because of these fundamental rules of common law, and only because of them, in modern days an "alien enemy" may not sue in the court of a belligerent state in times of public war. Therefore the rule of pleading and practice as broadly stated admits of a very important exception in favor of such nationals of the enemy state as are commorant within the dominions of the belligerent state by license and under the protection, express or implied, of the government of that state, and in favor too of such non-resident nationals of the enemy state who do not reside within its borders, or residing there are entitled to the benefits of a license or safe conduct issued by the proper authority of the belligerent state. (Re Duchess of Sutherland (1915) 31 T. L. R., 248; Zachary v. Godfrey, 50 Ill., 186.) On the other hand, the rule itself extends to nationals of belligerent states themselves who have an actual or business domicile in the enemy state.

As a matter of fact it would naturally occur to one that the statement of the rule could be greatly simplified by omitting the word "alien" from the terms employed and substituting for the term "alien enemy" the simple phrase "enemy person." However, it is not true that alien enemies are regarded as persons of normal status in time of war; even though they are commorant within the jurisdiction they are subject to repressive military measures when deemed necessary by the authority of the belligerent state, such as registration, living in prescribed areas, or even imprisonment. It is true, however, for the purpose of the rule hereinbefore discussed that the mere allegiance or nationality of a person is of minor importance, at least, and his actual place of residence becomes more or less decisive.

I have attached importance to the decision of Porter v. Freudenberg, not merely because it stands as the most recent adjudication of the courts of England upon the fundamental questions involved in your inquiry, but also because it accords with such decisions of the courts of this country as are available upon the point.

> See Hanger v. Abbott, 6 Wal., 532,
> Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns., 438,
> Matthews v. McStea, 91 U. S., 7,
> New York Life Ins. Co. v. Statham et al., 93 U. S., 24, > Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass., 561.

The last cited case is spoken of by Professor James Brown Scott, in the notes at page 538 of his Cases on International Law, as the leading American authority. It is true that Mr. Justice Gray treats very exhaustively of the principles now under discussion, citing many cases. The following excerpts from his opinion are in point:

> "An alien enemy residing in this country may contract and sue like citizens."
> 2 Kent's Comm., 63.

> "* * * the law of nations, as judicially declared, prohibits all intercourse between citizens of the two belligerents which is inconsistent with the state of war between their countries; * * * this includes * * * any act or contract which tends to increase his resources; and every kind of trading or commercial dealing or intercourse, whether by transmission of money or goods, or by orders for the delivery of either, between the two countries, directly or indirectly, or through the intervention of third persons or partnerships, or by contracts in any form looking to or involving such transmission, or by insurances upon trade with or by the enemy. Beyond the principle of these cases the prohibition has not been carried by judicial decision. * * *"

In the interesting case of Small's Administrator v. Lumpkin's Executrix et als., 28 Grat., 832 (Virginia 1877), the court, per Burks, J., holding ultimately that payment of an obligation existing before the war of the Rebellion by a debtor within the confederate territory to a son of the creditor's executrix, who was himself a volunteer soldier of the confederate army but whose mother, the executrix, was a citizen and resident of Maryland, was valid as a payment, used the following language:

"When these payments were made, Lumpkin (the debtor) was residing in Virginia, and Mrs. Small, the guardian of her son and representative of her husband's estate, was a resident of Maryland.

"In the light of the authorities before cited, it may be conceded * * * that under the harsh rules of war, the mother and son are to be considered as bearing to each other the unnatural relation of alien enemies; that the occasional correspondence between them, which is proved to have taken place during the conflict of arms then raging, was forbidden and unlawful; and that, pending hostilities, she could confer no valid power upon him, as her agent, to make the collections which he did make. * * *"

The evidence showed that the son made collections and retained the proceeds until after the war and he paid them over to his mother. The court found nothing illegal in the transaction as it actually took place, especially in view of the fact that it was consummated, and the case really amounted to an attempt on the part of the creditors' representatives to secure double payment of the debt.

See also U. S. v. Grossmayer, (1869), 9 Wall., 72.

It would seem that the American cases rather incline to the view that the enrichment of the enemy's resources is the real reason for the rules which have been laid down. However, it will also be seen that the American cases make no qualification whatever as to the right of a resident alien, though an enemy national, to sue in the court of the country where he resides. The English courts speak of the necessity of his pleading "licence" under such circumstances. Perhaps there is no technical difference between the English and the American cases in this respect as both would agree in the common result, namely, that unmolested and peaceful residence in the country of the forum is at least an implied license or safe conduct.

In the present case, however, it is not necessary to inquire whether subjects of Germany residing in this country are to be regarded as "alien friends" and entitled to be treated for civil purposes as citizens according to the unassisted common law; for all authorities agree that whatever be the effect of mere acquiesence on the part of the state of the forum, any direct and express protection which may be extended to such commorant aliens is effectual to give them the the "status" of "alien friends;" and it so happens that such direct protection has been given to the resident subjects of Germany.

Immediately upon signing the joint resolution of congress to the effect that "a state of war between the United States and the Imperial German government which has been thrust upon the United States is hereby formally declared" the president of the United States, acting under and by virtue of authority vested in him by section 4067 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, issued a proclamation to the American people, from which I quote the following:

* * * "WHEREAS, It is provided by section 4067 of the Revised Statutes as follows:

" 'Whenever there is declared a war between the United States and any foreign nation or government * * * and the president makes public proclamation of the event, all native citizens, denizens, or subjects of a hostile nation or government being male of the age of 14 years and upward, who shall be within the United States and not actually naturalized, shall be liable to be apprehended, * * * as alien enemies. The president is authorized in any such event by his proclamation thereof, or other public acts, to direct the conduct to be observed on the part of the United States toward the aliens who become so liable; the manner and degree of the restraint to which they shall be subject and in what cases and upon what security their residence shall be permitted, and to provide for the removal of those who, not being permitted to reside within the United States, refuse or neglect to depart therefrom; * * *'

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim, to all whom it may concern, that a state of war exists between the United States and the Imperial German government. * * *

"And, acting under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution of the United States and the said sections of the Revised Statutes,

"I do hereby further proclaim and direct that the conduct to be observed on the part of the United States toward all natives, citizens, denizens, or subjects of Germany, being male of the age of 14 years and upward, who shall be within the United States and not actually naturalized, who for the purpose of this proclamation and under such sections of the Revised Statutes are termed alien enemies, shall be as follows:

"All alien enemies are enjoined to preserve the peace toward the United States * * * and to refrain from actual hostility or giving information, aid, or comfort to the enemies of the United States and to comply strictly with the regulations which are hereby, or which may be from time to time, promulgated by the president, and so long as they shall conduct themselves in accordance with law they shall be undisturbed in the peaceful pursuit of their lives and occupations, and be accorded the consideration due to all peaceful law-abiding persons, except so far as restrictions may be necessary for their own protection and for the safety of the United States, and toward such alien enemies as conduct themselves in accordance with law all citizens of the United States are enjoined to preserve the peace and to treat them with all such friendliness as may be compatible with loyalty and allegiance to the United States. * * *

"And pursuant to the authority vested in me, I hereby declare and establish the following regulations, which I find necessary in the premises and for the public safety: * * *"

(Here follows an interdiction of possession of certain military property and means of intelligence by alien enemies, etc.)

"6. An alien enemy shall not commit or abet any hostile acts against the United States or give information, aid, or comfort to its enemies;

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"11. If necessary to prevent violation of the regulations, all alien enemies will be obliged to register; * * *"

While the proclamation is limited, in accordance with statute, to males of the age of fourteen years and upward, I think that its effect may by fair intendment be said to be such as to extend the protection of the United States to peaceful, law-abiding subjects of Germany who may remain in the United States during the war. That being the case, it is clear to me that for the purpose of the rule as above developed, such persons are to be regarded as alien friends and not as "alien enemies." Accordingly their civil rights are unimpaired by the existence of the state of war.

This conclusion at once disposes of all of the above submitted questions which involve the duty of the commission respecting claims payable to or for the benefit of residents of the United States whatever their nationality. Therefore an injured workman, though a subject of Germany and though the injury occurred after the outbreak of war, is entitled to file a claim for compensation with the industrial commission, to have an award made for his benefit, and to receive payments from the state insurance fund in pursuance of such award; and dependents of a German workman killed after the outbreak of the war are entitled, if they reside in the United States, to prosecute their claims before the industrial commission and to receive the benefits of such award as may be made to them, or for their benefit by the industrial commission, to the same extent as if they were citizens as well as residents of the United States.

A fortiori, of course, subjects of Austria-Hungary who are inhabitants of the United States are entitled to the benefit of the rule as laid down, and subjects of Germany and Austria-Hungary alike are entitled to prosecute claims and receive benefits on account of injuries occurring before the outbreak of the war or the suspension of diplomatic relations, as the case may be.

In short, where the claimant resides within the United States the commission can proceed as if in time of peace.

Moreover, on the principles above set forth, I am of the opinion that the commission should not in any way modify or alter its course of procedure upon claims, whenever arising, the proceeds of which when awarded by the commission will be payable to subjects of Germany or Austria-Hungary residing in friendly countries.

These eliminations bring me to the consideration of the more difficult questions respecting the duties of the commission as to claims and awards in favor of persons as dependents of killed workmen when such persons reside in Germany.

Although the industrial commission is not a court in the exact sense, I am of the opinion that the disability under which such a person would rest to sue in a court of the United States or one of its states furnishes an analogy at least to the rule which must be applied here: and subsequently I shall support my conclusion on this point by the citation of authorities. At the outset,however, I find myself confronted by a provision of the Hague convention of 1907, the exact effect and application of which gave the English courts considerable concern at the outbreak of the great war. I refer to article 23 (h) of chapter I of section 2 of the Annex, entitled: "Regulations Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land," which, standing by itself, reads as follows:

> "Article 23. In addition to the prohibitions provided by special conventions it is particularly forbidden: * * *
> "(h) To declare abolished, suspended or inadmissible the right of the subjects of the hostile party to institute legal proceedings."

Prior to the outbreak of the present war (which is the first war to occur between or among the signatory powers after the general ratification of this particular convention of 1907 ratified by the senate of the congress of the United States, March 10, 1908, see note on page 229 of Scott's "Texts of Peace Conferences at the Hague.") The exact effect of this provision was discussed by publicists both in the United States and in Great Britain, and it was generally agreed that in view of the context in which it is found, and indeed in view of the nature of the entire annex, it is directed rather to the conduct of war by the armed forces in the field than to modifications of the municipal laws of belligerent nations.

Paragraph (h) occurs in connection with provisions against the use of poison or poisoned weapons, against killing or wounding by treachery, against the use of projectiles or material calculated to cause unnecessary suffering; against the improper use of a flag of truce of the national flag or of the military insignia and uniform of the enemy as well as the distinctive signs of the Geneva convention; and so these writers have agreed that the rule of the common law as a principle of municipal law, internal in its application, was not modified by the provision in question.

The case of Porter v. Freudenberg, supra, constitutes the only available authority respecting the meaning of this provision. Lord Reading, in his judgment, reviews the history of the adoption of article 23 (h); comments upon the views of the publicists, without referring to them by name; directs attention to certain final negotiations between the diplomatic representatives of Germany and England just prior to the outbreak of the war between those countries; and concludes in accordance with what has already been stated, that the paragraph of the Hague convention, above quoted, does not have any effect upon the municipal law of England.

I think, therefore, that we may safely assume that should the question as to the effect of the Hague convention of 1907 upon the municipal law of this country be presented in the courts of this country, it would be resolved in the same way in which the English courts have resolved it.

Having concluded, then, that the common law rule which forbids commercial intercourse with the residents of an enemy state, or at least the transmission to them of movable property or funds, remains in force in this country, I am next led to inquire what may be the effect of that rule upon the activities of the industrial commission for the purpose of the several remaining questions as I have phrased them.

At this point I deem it expedient to turn to the workmen's compensation act itself.

Article II, section 35, of the constitution, as adopted September 3, 1912, constitutes the source of authority to enact the present compulsory workmen's compensation law. It recites that laws of this character may be passed.

> "for the purpose of providing compensation to workmen and their dependents, for death, injury or occupational disease, occasioned in the course of such workmen's employment."

It further provides that the laws which may be passed may determine the terms and conditions upon which payment "shall be made from the state fund," and that the board which may be established thereunder may be empowered to "collect and distribute such fund and to determine all rights of claimants thereto."

Section 1465-61 of the General Code provides, in part, as follows:

> "The terms 'employe,' 'workman' and 'operative' as used in this act, shall be construed to mean:
> "2. Every person in the service of any person, firm or private corporation, including any public service corporation employing five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment under any contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written, including aliens, * * *"

Section 1465-68 General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "* * * Every employe mentioned in subdivision two of section fourteen hereof (G. C. Sec. 1465-61), who is injured, and the dependents of such as are killed in the course of employment, wheresoever such injury has occurred, * * * shall be entitled to receive * * * from the state insurance fund, such compensation for loss sustained on account of such injury or death, and such medical, nurse and hospital services and medicines, and such amount of funeral expenses in case of death as is provided by sections thirty-two to forty inclusive of the act."

Section 1465-70 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

> "Employes who comply with the provisions of the last preceding section shall not be liable to respond in damages at common law or by statute, save as hereinafter provided, for injury or death of any employe * * * during the period covered by such premium. * * *"

Section 1465-72 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"The state liability board of awards shall disburse the state insurance fund to such employes of employers as have paid into said fund the premiums applicable to the classes to which they belong * * * or to their dependents in case death has ensued. * * *

"And such payment or payments to such injured employes, or to their dependents in case death has ensued, shall be in lieu of any and all rights of action whatsoever against the employer of such injured or killed employes."

Section 1465-73 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"Employers mentioned in subdivision two of section thirteen hereof (G. C. 1465-60), who shall fail to comply with the provisions of section twenty-two hereof (G. C. 1465-69), * * * shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injuries sustained in the course of employment caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer, * * * and also to the personal representatives of such employes whose death results from such injuries, and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself or itself of the following common law defenses:

"The defense of the fellow-servant rule, the defense of the assumption of risk or the defense of contributory negligence. * * *"

Section 1465-76 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

* * * "Every employe, or his legal representative in case death results, who makes application for an award, or accepts compensation from an employer * * * waives his right to exercise his option to institute proceedings in any court, except as provided in section forty-three (G. C. 1465-90) hereof. Every employe, or his legal representative in case death results, who exercises his option to institute proceedings in court, as provided in this section, waives his right to any award, or direct payment of compensation from his employer. * * *"

But for their length it would, perhaps, be appropriate to quote some of the provisions of section 1465-79 to section 1465-81, inclusive, General Code, prescribing a schedule of compensation for the various kinds of disabilities, each of them providing that the injured employe, to whom alone they relate, "shall receive" a certain percentage of the average weekly wages for certain specified times, for certain specified injuries or disabilities.

Section 1465-81 in particular provides that:

"In cases of permanent total disability, the award * * * shall continue until the death of such person so totally disabled, * *"

Section 1465-82 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"In case the injury causes death within the period of two years, the benefits shall be in the amounts and to the persons following:

"1. If there be no dependents, the disbursements from the state insurance fund shall be limited to the expenses provided for in section forty-two hereof (G. C. 1465-89.) (i. e., medical, nurse and hospital services and medicines, and funeral expenses.)

"2. If there are wholly dependent persons at the time of the death, the payment shall * * * continue for the remainder of the period between the date of the death, and six years after the date of the injury. * * *

"3. If there are partly dependent persons at the time of the death, the payment shall * * * continue for all or such portion of the period of six years after the date of the injury, as the board in each case may determine. * * *

"4. The following persons shall be presumed to be wholly dependent for support upon a deceased employe:

"(A) A wife upon a husband with whom she lives at the time of his death.

"(B) A child or children under the age of sixteen years (or over said age if physically or mentally incapacitated from earning) upon the parent with whom he is living at the time of the death of such parent.

"In all other cases, question of dependency, in whole or in part, shall be determined in accordance with the facts in each particular case existing at the time of the injury resulting in the death of such employe, but no person shall be considered as dependent unless a member of the family of the deceased employe, or bears to him the relation of husband or widow, lineal descendant, ancestor or brother or sister. * * *"

Section 1465-83 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"The benefits in case of death, shall be paid to such one or more of the dependents of the decedent for the benefit of all the dependents as may be determined by the board, which may apportion the benefits among the dependents in such manner as it may deem just and equitable. * * *"

Section 1465-86 General Code provides:

"The powers and jurisdiction of the board over each case shall be continuing, and it may from time to time make such modification or change with respect to former findings or orders with respect thereto, as, in its opinion may be justified."

Section 1465-90 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"* * * In case the final action of such board denies the right of the claimant to participate at all in such fund on the ground that the injury was self-inflicted * * * or upon * * * any of the grounds going to the basis of the claimant's right, then the claimant, within thirty (30) days after the notice of the final action of such board, may, by filing his appeal in the common pleas court of the county wherein the injury was inflicted, be entitled to a trial in the ordinary way, and be entitled to a jury if he demands it. * * *" (The section goes on to provide in detail procedure in case of such appeal which, in effect, constitutes a judicial review of any determination by the board of awards against a claimant upon a ground "going to the basis of the claimant's right."

Section 1465-93 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"A minor working at an age legally permitted under the laws of this state, shall be deemed sui juris for the purposes of this act, * * * but in the event of the award of a lump sum of compensation to such minor employe, such sum shall be paid only to the legally appointed guardian of such minor."

The foregoing liberal quotations from the workmen's compensation law of this state have been made with a view to determining the nature or character of the "compensation" and the proceedings for its award and disbursement so far as regards the application of the principles of international and municipal common law heretofore discussed.

In connection with the sections themselves it is proper, I think, to refer to the decision of the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. Munding vs. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 92 O. S. 434, the syllabus of the case being as follows:

"An award of compensation from the state insurance fund, under Section 35 of the workmen's compensation act (103 O. L. 72), to a wholly dependent person vests in the dependent when the award is made; so that, in case of the death of such dependent, his or her personal representative is entitled to the balance, if any, remaining unpaid."

I quote the following from the opinion of Nichols, C. J., at page 447 et seq. of the report:

"The precise question involved in this case has been before the courts of England, and it is the holding there, not only that an award of compensation to a dependent vests on allowance, but that the right to claim an award vests in the dependent at the time of death of the employe, and if dependent dies before presenting such claim the personal representative of a dependent may make the claim and recover upon it. While the English acts are different from ours in many respects, an examination of the cases to which we now refer and to the statutes will show that the same question was before the English courts as is presented by the instant case, and that practically the same reasons were advanced in opposition to the theory which the court adopted as are now advanced by counsel for the state.

"In the case of The United Collieries v. Simpson, Appeal Cases (1909), 383, the House of Lords held that where a workman has been killed by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, and his dependent dies without making a claim, the dependent's legal personal representative is entitled to compensation under the workmen's compensation act of 1906.

"At page 389, Lord Loreburn says: 'The eighth paragraph also contemplates payment to a dependent. And though the ninth (similar to section 39 of the Ohio act as to apportionment of benefits) reserves a power to vary the apportionment, neither it nor any other paragraph proceeds upon any other view than that there is a definite right on the part of dependents as a class to the money, subject to a parental power of the court in dividing and applying it for their advantage.' The dissenting opinion of Lord Dunedin is interesting because it shows that the court had before it the objection that payments to a personal representative were not authorized because the law provides only for payment to dependents. This case approves the case of Darlington v. Roscoe & Sons,

1 K. B. (1907), 219, where it was held that if a notice of claim under the workmen's compensation act of 1897 has been given by a sole dependent, who dies before a request for arbitration is made or other proceedings are taken, the right to claim survives to such dependent's legal personal representative and the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona does not apply.

"The only case we have been able to find advancing a contrary view is that of In re O'Donovan & Cameron, Swan & Co., 2 Ir. R. (1901), 633, where it was held: 'The sole total dependent of a workman, who was killed by an accident arising out of his employment, died before she had filed or served a claim for compensation under the workmen's compensation act, 1897. Had she lived ,and taken the necessary steps to recover it, she would have been entitled to £150 compensation. The personal representative of the deceased workman subsequently took proceedings * * * to recover compensation, to be applied for the benefit of the dependent, and in payment of her debts: HELD, that neither her personal representative nor the personal representative of the deceased workman was entitled to recover the amount.'

"This case was distinctly disapproved by the House of Lords in The United Collieries v. Simpson, supra.

"Thus in England the authority is all in favor of the view that the right to compensation vests in the dependent at the time of the death of the employe and is transmitted to his personal representative even though the dependent has died without having made a claim for compensation. And this is a much more doubtful question than that before us, where the claim has been filed, compensation awarded and part payment made before death of dependent.

"The English cases emphasize the fact that a fixed sum is provided by the act and no provision made for a refund of any part of the award, and that in the case of a dependent dying before the compensation is exhausted the absence of such a provision shows that when once the compensation is fixed there is to be no refund.

"The question here, by the application of the most elementary rule of statutory construction, is settled by the statute. It speaks for itself and there is no ambiguity. It is also settled by all the adjudicated cases on the subject. * * *"

(Chief Justice Nichols thereupon traces the history of the enactment of the workmen's compensation laws in Ohio, and concludes thus:)

"The only fair inference to be drawn is that the legislature intended that compensation, under paragraph 2 of section 35, should be vested in the dependent when awarded. Again, this law was passed not in a spirit of 'charity,' but only simple justice. The fund it provides is called, and is in fact, an 'insurance' fund, from which payments are to be made, and it is in no sense a pension fund, and never, so far as we are aware, has it been contended that injured employes and their dependents were not entitled to compensation as a matter of right.

"The right to be compensated for an injury has no element of bounty or charity about it. No part of the fund (except such part as it pays for the protection of its own employes) is contributed by the state.

"As we have before stated, the theory is that when an employe is injured or killed in course of his employment, a sum fixed by law is set off from the fund to compensate him for his injuries, or his dependents for his death, to compensate for taking away the man's right to earn a livelihood, which, but for the accident, he would have earned. A fixed sum goes out from the fund to compensate for the loss which has occurred.

"In case of death with no dependents, there is no loss to anyone except the employe other than the expenses provided for by the statute, which would otherwise fall on society. In case of dependents, the sum is likewise fixed by law and ordered paid to the dependent. There is nothing to indicate that this loss is to be compensated in part by the death of dependents and the part thus compensated to be returned to the state. On the contrary, the only situation considered is that existing at the date of death. At that time the amount is fixed, not by the board but by the statute; it is set apart from the general fund, may be paid in lump sums and there is no provision whatever for rebate.

"Thus, the payments being fixed in amount, ordered paid from a certain fund and awarded to a definite person, every element of a vested right is present and no element or suggestion of a pension that is to cease at the death of the pensioner.

"We hold that when the award is once made to a sole dependent the right to the compensation vests, and once vested there can be no condition attached except as to the time of payment, and it is equally immaterial whether the dependent subsequently dies or becomes independent.

"As to the argument that unless a rebate or refund is allowed in case of death of dependent a great wrong is done the injured and dependents of killed employes, it is perhaps sufficient to say that the assumption upon which this argument is based is utterly opposed to the theory on which the fund is established, maintained and administered. It is so plain as to be beyond all argument that the fund is provided to compensate in the manner and amount fixed by law for all losses which it covers; that it was never intended that the fund should be enhanced by lapses; that there is no conception of profit in the plan, and no one entitled to an award can have his right affected at all, either as to the amount or in any other manner, by the allowance or denial of the claim of any other person to compensation. A study of the act will show that it is the duty of the board to provide an adequate fund to pay all the compensation provided by the act. What amount will be necessary is calculated by the board, the theory being that all losses will be and must be paid in full; the methods of establishing the fund and the sources from which the money is to come are specified, and nowhere, even by inference, is the board authorized to speculate that a greater or less sum will be needed on account of unpaid or partly unpaid awards.

"Both the letter and spirit of the law show that the right to compensation vests when the same is awarded under paragraph 2 of section 30. * * *"

For present purposes the foregoing quotation and citations will be sufficient to disclose the general scope of the workmen's compensation law in relation to the question now under consideration. Later on in this opinion I shall have occasion to go into greater detail with respect to certain features thereof.

I call attention to the following significant facts:

1. The right of an injured employe is essentially a chose in action; indeed, it is expressly stated to be "in lieu" of a possible right of action against his employer. Likewise, the right of dependents is in lieu of and therefore analagous to the statutory cause of action in favor of personal representatives for wrongful death.

2. Employers who do not contribute to the insurance fund, and hence are subject to be sued, are deprived of certain enumerated common law defenses, but they are not deprived, at least expressly, of the common law right to interpose the plea of alien enemy.

3. Should the commission in its administration of the state insurance fund find against the claim of either an injured workman or a dependent of a killed workman on a ground going to the foundation of the applicant's claim, such applicant must prosecute his right in the courts. When thus resorting to the courts there is at least no express provision removing such disability to sue in the courts as might rest upon him as an "alien enemy."

4. While the class of "workmen," or "operatives" or "employes" to whom the act applies is expressly made to include "aliens," yet this provision standing by itself is indicative of no other purpose than to make it clear that under ordinary circumstances, i. e., in time of peace, aliens as such shall be entitled to the benefits of the law. I think that it is true that some workmen's compensation laws not containing this express provision have been interpretated as not applicable to alien employes and dependents. Perhaps this phrase was put into the law to avoid the possibility of such an interpretation. At any rate, as I have shown, the disability to sue under the common law, as modified by the custom of the implied license to resident aliens is not one that results from alienage, nor even from alienage coupled with enemy nationality, but in the last analysis depends upon residence in the enemy country. There is, therefore, no inconsistency between the declaration of the statute to the effect that a person shall be considered a workman or operative for its purpose though he be an alien, and the common law rule that an "alien enemy" as the term must be properly construed is disabled from prosecuting judicial proceedings for his own benefit.

5. While the act commands the industrial commission to disburse the state insurance fund in a certain way under certain circumstances, and further enacts that certain persons under such circumstances "shall receive" compensation as therein prescribed, there is nothing by way of expression, at least, relaxing the common law rule against commercial intercourse with or sending funds to residents of an enemy country. In short, it would be a rather forced interpretation of the law to say that because of its admitted beneficial purposes the legislature must be deemed to have intended that war should have no effect upon its administration. On the contrary, the legislature has in the law specified certain common law rules which shall not have such effect, such as the rule of interpretation respecting alienage generally, and the rule with respect to the capacity of an infant to sue. These instances of solicitude on the part of the legislature to modify common law rules otherwise applicable to the administration of the law in connection with those elsewhere referred to respecting the deprivation of certain common law defenses otherwise available to an employer where he is subject to suit make it impossible for me to hold that the common law, in so far as it would otherwise be applicable, is abrogated by the workmen's compensation act in any respect other than those expressly mentioned.

The general rule of course is that a remedial statute of this kind is to be liberally interpreted to the end that the evil to be remedied shall be obviated; but that otherwise it is to be construed and administered in accordance with the settled principles of the common law. Obviously the evil to be remedied by the workmen's compensation law, as disclosed by the history of its enactment briefly referred to in the opinion of Chief Justice Nichols in the case last cited but not quoted herein, is to substitute certain compensation for uncertain rights of action in cases of industrial accidents.

I cannot say that the policy of the law, as a whole, goes further than this, nor that the legislature intended to overturn the fundamental public policy, vital, as has been remarked, to the welfare of the nation, against enhancing the resources of an enemy in time of war.

6. While the right of a dependent is held in the Munding case, supra, to become vested, at least upon a ward, in the sense that it is not extinguished by death of such dependent after the award is made, the decision does not go to the extent of holding that such right is in the nature of a right of succession, like inheritance to property. On the contrary, it is very clear that such right is vested only in the sense in which the right of the personal representative to recover in an action for wrongful death under the statute in such case provided is vested. The question before the court in the Munding case required a choice between such a holding and a holding to the general effect that the award is a mere pension.

On the whole, then, I am of the opinion that generally in the administration of the workmen's compensation law the industrial commission is bound to follow and be governed by the fundamental common law rule against intercourse with a resident of an enemy country.

My conclusion in this respect is fortified by such analagous cases as I have been able to discover.

"An alien enemy may at the common law take and hold real property by devise until office found."

> Fairfax v. Hunter, 7 Cranch 603;
> Craig v. Radford, 3 Wheat 594.
> (Of course this rule is probably modified by statute in Ohio. See section 8589 General Code, which, however, does not refer to "alien enemy.")

A bequest of personal property to an alien emeny is not void, but may be recovered after the cessation of hostilities.

> Attorney-General v. Weeden, Parker 267.

On the other hand it seems to have been held by the majority of the court in the case of Bradwell v. Weeks, 13 Johns 1, that an alien enemy at common law may not take personal property by succession even where he seeks to recover it after the cessation of hostilities.

In Dangler v. Hollinger Gold Mines (Ontario supreme court (1915) 23 D. L. R. 384, the decision as described in the head note, is that:

> "An action under the fatal accidents act, R. S. O. 1914, ch. 151, brought by the administrator of the estate of a deceased person, cannot be maintained if brought for the benefit of alien enemies of the king."

This decision is mainly predicated upon the cases of Porter v. Freudenberg, supra, and Continental Tyre and Rubber Company v. Daimler Co., supra (although the last case had not then been reversed by the House of Lords.) However, the following quotation from the opinion of Sutherland, J., may be of service:

"This action is for the benefit of the father and mother of the deceased, who are undoubtedly alien enemies.

"In Dumenko v. Swift Canadian Co., Limited (1914), 32 O. L. R. 87, it was held * * * 'in an action commenced before the war was declared, that the plaintiffs, who were Austrians and entitled to bring the action during peace, became disentitled after a declaration of war in consequence of which they became alien enemies.' * * * It was held: 'As to the defendant's motion, it is quite clear upon the authorities that the plaintiffs, having become alien enemies, ought to be barred from further having and maintaining this action. See LeBret v. Papillon (1804), 4 East 502; Brandon v. Nesbit (1794), 6 T. R. 23; Mew's Digest, vol. 8, pp. 210, 211. The plaintiffs' action is, therefore, on this ground also, dismissed with costs. This dismissal is not necessarily—and I do not mean it to be—a bar to a subsequent action in respect to the same matter after peace shall have been declared.* * *'

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

"It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the right of action is clearly given under the fatal accidents act to an executor or administrator, and that it is an administrator duly appointed by a competent surrogate court of the province who has brought the action. It is argued that, as a company incorporated in Great Britain, even though its directors and shareholders are alien enemies, has a right to bring an action for the recovery of a debt due the company, even so an administrator, duly appointed by a surrogate court of this province to represent the estate of the deceased person, is legally entitled to bring an action for a claim such as is involved in this action, even though the benefit accrue to alien enemies.

"It is also contended that in any event, even if an order were made to stay the action, there should be no order to dismiss it. It is furthermore pointed out that even to stay the action may result in hardship and damage to the plaintiff, inasmuch as in actions of this character, the witnesses being in many cases miners and people who float about from place to place, the evidence necessary to establish a claim may be lost.

"If it were an action by the administrator to assert a claim for a debt due the estate of the deceased person, I would be disposed to think there might possibly be some analogy between this case and the Continental Tire and Rubber Company case. But, where the action is brought under an act by which it is expressly provided that it shall be for the benefit of the parents, etc., and such parents are, as here, unquestionably alien enemies, a different view should, I think, be taken, and it should be held that the plaintiff has no right of action.* * *"

(Of course if the Canadian court had had before it the decision of the House of Lords in the Continental Tyre and Rubber Company case the argument on this point would not have been necessary, and the court's conclusion would have been sustained on additional grounds.)

"In Blake v. Midland R. W. Co. (1852), 18 Q. B. 93, an action by the administratrix of a deceased person under 9 and 10 Vict. ch. 93, it was held that the jury, in estimating damages, could not 'take into consideration mental suffering or loss of society, but must give compensation for pecuniary loss only.' Coleridge, J., at p. 109, says: 'The title of this act may be some guide to its meaning; and it is "An act compensating the families of persons killed;" not for solacing their wounded feelings. Reliance was placed upon the first section, which states in what cases the newly given action may be maintained although death has ensued; the argument being that the party injured, if he had recovered, would have been entitled to a solatium, and therefore so shall his representatives on his death. But it will be evident that this act does not transfer his right of action to his representatives, but gives to the representative a totally new right of action, on different principles.' At p. 110: 'The measure of damage is not the loss or suffering of the deceased, but the injury resulting from his death to his family. This language seems more appropriate to a loss of which some estimate may be made than to an indefinite sum, independent of all pecuniary estimate, to soothe the feelings; and the division of the amount strongly leads to the same conclusion; "and the amount so recovered" shall be divided amongst the before mentioned parties in such shares as the jury by their verdict shall find and direct.'

"And in Pym v. Great Northern R. W. Co. (1863), 4 B. & S. 396, at p. 407, Erle, C. J., says: 'The remedy however given by the statute is not given to a class but to individuals, for by sec. 2 "the jury may give such damages as they may think proportioned to the injury resulting from such death to the parties respectively for whom and for whose benefit such action shall be brought." '

"In Seward v. The 'Vera Cruz' (1884), 10 App. Cas. 59, at p. 67, the Earl of Selbourne, L. C., says: 'Lord Campbell's act gives a new cause of action clearly, and does not merely remove the operation of the maxim, "actio personalis moritur cum persona," because the action is given in substance not to the person representing in point of estate the deceased man, who would naturally represent him as to all his own rights of action which could survive, but to his wife and children, no doubt suing in point of form in the name of his executor.'

"See also Town of Walkerton v. Erdman (1894), S. C. R. 352, at p. 366, where King, J., says: 'If indeed the admisibility of the evidence were to depend upon the causes of action being the same the respondent could not hope to succeed, because it is conclusively established that the cause of action given by the statute is different from that which the deceased had in his lifetime.'

"The administrator can, I think, have no higher right than those for whom he has brought the action. If he had failed for six months to do so, the parents of the deceased man would themselves have had the right to institute the action; but, if they had done so, they would have been met with what would be a fatal defence, the plea that they were alien enemies. This would have disentitled them to succeed.

"If I could see my way to do so, I would prefer to make an order staying the action, for the reason that, if it is dismissed, the statutory period may possibly run and so put an end to the action.

"I think, however, I must hold that the action must be dismissed with costs."

The same principle was applied in the case of Crawford et al. v. The "William Penn," Federal Case No. 3,372, holding that an alien enemy cannot bring suit in the name of a citizen trustee, as the public policy which forbids the property sued for to be carried out of the country to enrich the enemy would be as effectively violated in the one way as in the other. The test in such cases is not a technical one of parties; for the fact that one of the plaintiffs who is merely a nominal party and cannot control the suit and collect the judgment is a public enemy is no ground for dismissing the petition of the beneficial plaintiff who is not an enemy.

On the other hand, however, it was held in the leading decision of Lord Erskine in ex parte Boussmaker, 13 Vesey Jun. 71, above referred to, that inasmuch as the right to recover a debt is merely suspended and not extinguished by a war, an alien enemy may make a claim in a bankruptcy proceeding though dividends thereon will be withheld until the conclusion of peace. The corollary of this principle, however, is that an alien enemy resident in the enemy country, though he may file a claim in bankruptcy proceedings cannot be heard in court to object to or complain of the rejection of his claim against the bankrupt's estate.

Re Wilson (1915) 84 L. J. K. B. N. S. 1893.

I have referred somewhat loosely in this opinion to the defense of "alien enemy." As a matter of fact, the rules of public policy which I have been discussing appear on principle, and to some extent at least on authority to be more than merely available to a defendant by way of defense; rather, when coming to the attention of the court in any way they are disabilities which cannot be waived by the adversary party.

See Jansen v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, supra, dictum of Davey, J.
Bassi v. Sullivan (1914), 32 Ont. L. Rep. 14.
Robinson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1915), 1 K. B. 155.
Dorsey v. Kyle (1869), 30 Md. 512.
Brooke v. Filer (1871), 35 Ind. 402.
Stephens v. Brown (1884), 24 W. Va. 234.

All of the foregoing cases bear some analogy at least to the problems before me. All of them adhere to the great underlying principle that whatever be the effect of the disability of an alien enemy, it at least prevents him from being the recipient of direct pecuniary benefits, or securing control for himself or his agents of the direct means of reaping pecuniary benefits during the existence of the war. All are likewise consistent with the principle that where by valid contract made in time of peace or by devolution of property rights, whether in time of peace or in time of war, a right has vested in an alien he can only be divested of it during war by confiscation. Of course, though confiscation may be supported as a military measure, it is no part of the civil law, and it may be accepted as unquestioned that whatever civil rights an alien enemy may have cannot be taken away from him on account of his enemy character.

In short, then, the existence of a war does not defeat the rights of an alien enemy resident in the enemy country, but it does prevent him from enforcing those rights during the continuance of the war; and it prevents, moreover, any citizen of the belligerent country from enforcing them on his behalf or from transmitting to him the beneficial fruits thereof.

At the very least, the industrial commission may be likened to a court; at the very most the commission, in the administration of the law, may be likened to a resident trustee for a nonresident alien enemy—and this undoubtedly is the character of the commission when it has made an award during time of peace and its order for payment of compensation to an alien enemy resident in the enemy country is still operative when war breaks out.

These things being true then, I am of the opinion that during the continuance of the war with Germany it is the duty of the industrial commission to withhold all payments to persons now resident in the German empire, whether such persons be workmen who were injured here and have returned to Germany since the injury, or dependents of killed employes who are residents of Germany, regardless of their nationality and citizenship.

As to claims for compensation on account of injuries occurring prior to the declaration of war with Germany and pending with the commission undisposed of at the date of such declaration, I am of the opinion that the commission may lawfully proceed to make an award; but that it may not under such award lawfully pay to any attorney in fact the compensation awarded to a resident of the German empire so long as the war continues. The same principle applies where the application for compensation was not made until after the declaration of war, but the injury occurred prior thereto.

The last two conclusions expressed involve as liberal an interpretation of the workmen's compensation law, in the light of the common law principles which underlie my whole discussion, as I am able to make.

As the commission will observe, some of the decisions cited would tend to support a conclusion to the effect that the commission might not lawfully even proceed with respect to these last two classes of claims; and if the commission were a court in the exact sense, I would feel obliged to hold in accordance with what seems to be the weight of authority (although there are decisions contra—see Luczyzki v. Spanish River Co. (1915), 34 O. L. R. 547, disapproving the dicta in Dumenko v. Swift Canadian Co., Limited, quoted in the opinion of Dangler v. Hollinger Gold Mines, supra) would have to suspend all proceedings beneficial to persons residing in Germany during the continuance of the war. But the commission is not a court, and in this respect I think it sufficient to hold, that while the commission is bound by the underlying principles of the common law rule it is not bound by the technical application of such principles to the forensic administration of justice. Rather, in this respect it should govern itself as Lord Erskine held that a court of bankruptcy should be governed—receiving claims not in themselves affected by the war and allowing them when in its judgment they should be allowed, but holding the proceeds of the awards as trustee for the benefit of the non-resident alien claimants until the cessation of hostilities may make it possible and lawful for the commission to transmit them to persons in whose favor the awards were made.

In this connection, however, I think the other side of the rule applicable to bankruptcy proceedings must necessarily apply under the workmen's compensation law, namely, that if the commission should decide adversely on a given claim the non-resident alien claimants would be powerless to secure a review of the commission's decision in the common pleas court in the manner provided by statute.

I come now to what appeals to me as the most difficult question raised by the general situation, namely, as to the duty of the commission respecting any claims that have been or may be filed with it by persons residing in Germany and claiming as dependents of killed workmen injured after the outbreak of the war.

As has been observed, the war does not affect the rights of subjects of Germany resident in the United States from claiming compensation as injured employes; and presumably there will be no cases in which a workman injured after the outbreak of the war will succeed in returning to Germany during the continuance of the war and before filing application for compensation under the act; so that the class of cases now under consideration is limited to those of dependents.

The statute, save in two cases which obviously can have no present application under any imaginable circumstances, makes dependency a question of fact (section 1465-82 G. C., supra). The commission has had occasion in the past to pass upon numerous cases in which the sufficiency of facts as establishing dependency in the case of persons residing in a foreign country has been considered. The position which the commission has taken is that the "real practical matter is whether assistance has been given or could reasonably have been expected from the victim of the accident."

> (Quoted from Orrell Colliery Co. v. Schofield, 2 B. W. C. C. 294, in the commission's decision In Re Kilmer, No. 139141, decided June 14, 1916.)

Therefore the commission has apparently, and I think correctly, in the light of numerous English cases such as New-Monckton Collieries, Limited, v. Keeling (1911), A. C. 648; and Turner v. Miller, 3 B. W. C. C., 305; considered that proof of more or less frequent remittances of money to members of a family in the "old country," coupled with at least the absence of any showing to the effect that the disposition of the workman with respect to making future remittances had been changed, would sufficiently establish dependency.

In the interesting case of In Re Mickolich, No. 57044, decided on November 16, 1915, the commission held, upon what I think are absolutely correct principles, that where the workman had been in the habit of remitting money from time to time to members of his family in Europe by mail and the outbreak of the great war in Europe had so interrupted the mail service with the central powers as to make it practically impossible for him to continue this practice, but the workman had made repeated attempts to send money by mail as before, thus confirming his continuing disposition to support his family, a case of dependency was made out. That is to say, dependency in fact may exist in spite of the practical impossibility of transmitting funds to the dependents.

But there is, in my opinion, a wide distinction between such a case and one in which the transmission of funds to members of one's family has become because of the outbreak of the war between this country and Germany not merely impracticable but also illegal.

The nice question is therefore presented as to whether dependency in fact, under the workmen's compensation law, can exist when the acts required to establish such dependency would be illegal. Of course dependency looks to the future. Though past acts are the only possible evidence of probable future conduct, yet the very fundamental idea of compensation is that of providing a substitute for the support which a deceased workman would have afforded to his family if he had lived. Therefore, the problem which now arises is conditioned for its solution upon the question as to whether the commission can lawfully conclude that particular persons would have received support from a given workman in the face of the principle that he could not lawfully have given them support.

No new cases are necessary to establish the conclusion that continued remittances by a workman in this country to his family in Germany during the war, whether practically possible or not, would be illegal. Therefore, I pass to the consideration of certain arguments that have suggested themselves to me as possibly available in support of the conclusion that in spite of the legal principles last above referred to the commission may lawfully take some favorable action at least with respect to the class of claims now under consideration.

In the first place it might be argued that inasmuch as war suspends civil rights and does not confiscate property, the rule applicable to the class of cases now under consideration should go no farther than laid down with respect to the two classes last above discussed; that is to say, that the commission in cases now being considered may ascertain who the present dependents are, make its award and hold the proceeds thereof in trust for the beneficiaries during the existence of the war.

The difficulties in the way of yielding to this argument may be summed up as follows:

In the first place dependency is a question of fact with a future implication; in the second place the class of dependents becomes absolutely fixed at the time of the injury resulting in the death of the employe; that is to say, the statute requires that the commission shall ascertain what persons were at the time of the injury actually receiving support from the injured workman and reasonably certain to continue to receive such support. Where, at the time of such injury, a given workman was prohibited by law from contributing to the support of a particular person now claiming as a dependent seems clear to me that such person could not in fact be a dependent. The mere fact that if the workman had lived he might have resumed his contributions to the support of such person after the cessation of hostilities assuming that hostilities will cease within a "reasonable time" does not help the case of such alleged dependent, because his right must be determined as of the date of the injury, and because, further, it is within the bounds of probability that such particular alleged dependent might cease to be dependent from other causes, such as death, or the acquisition of earning capacity, after said date and during the continuance of the war. In other words, the Munding case and the statutes—both being equally plain in this particular—make it clear that all rights of dependents are fixed as of a day certain and vested also as of a day certain. On such certain day or days such rights either exist or they do not exist. Subsequent developments, both possible and actual, can have no modifying effect upon them.

It is because dependency is a question of fact that this result is reached. This circumstance renders inapplicable, I think, the decisions respecting the right of alien enemies to succeed to the title of real, and possibly personal, property by inheritance, succession, devise or bequest during war. It brings into close analogy at least the decision in Dangler v. Hollinger Gold Mines Ltd., supra, case; in connection with this decision, which arose under the statutes of Ontario giving a cause of action for wrongful death, I note the interesting reasoning of an English authority under the English workmen's compensation law with respect to the right of aliens to share in its benefits, the statute not containing an express provision in favor of aliens such as our own statute.

> "The general issue that emerges is whether aliens out of the jurisdiction can avail themselves of rights granted in general terms by English municipal law.
> "Such authority as exists in regard to the matter goes to show that the inquiry must be in the direction of ascertaining the intention of the particular statute. It was the earlier view that it was a principal of English law 'that acts of parliament do not apply to aliens, at least if they be not even temporarily resident in this country, unless the language of the statute expressly refers to them.' * * * This was the view taken by the House of Lords in Jeffreys v. Boosey (1854), 4 H. L. Cas. 815. * * *

"The application of the doctrine came up for consideration in 1901 before a court consisting of Kennedy and Phillimore, JJ., in the case of Davidsson v. Hill (1901), 2 K. B. 606. * * * The widow of the deceased, a foreigner, resident in Norway, brought an action against the owners of the British ship under Lord Campbell's act, * * * in respect of the defendant's negligence and the resulting death of her husband. The question was whether she, a foreigner resident outside the jurisdiction, could maintain an action. * * *

"* * * In deciding in favour of the right of action, Kennedy, J., said (at page 614): 'It appears to me * * * more reasonable to hold that parliament did intend to confer the benefits of this legislation upon foreigners as well as upon subjects, and certainly, that as against an English wrongdoer, the foreigner has a right to maintain his action under the statute in question. * * *"

The learned author then goes on to argue on this decision under Lord Campbell's act, that workman's compensation acts should be likewise construed for the following reasons:

"A dependent may elect to proceed under Lord Campbell's act. It has been seen that an alien resident abroad can sue under that act. * * * It would be a strange anomaly if, given alternative remedies, a person declared to be entitled to pursue one remedy were to be debarred from pursuing the alternative remedy should he prefer to proceed thereunder."

(In this connection see Krzus v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited (1912), A. C. 590.)

I have quoted from the text last referred to because of the argument which the author makes to the effect that where alternative remedies are available the principles applicable to one remedy should be deemed to govern the availability of the other remedy. While under our workmen's compensation law the election of remedies is limited, yet to the extent that it exists, it at least throws light upon the right to receive compensation. Accordingly it seems to me that if but for the workmen's compensation law (or in a case in which election of remedies is open under that act) an action could not be brought under the statutes providing for action for wrongful death in behalf of a particular class of alien enemies, such persons ought not to be considered to be dependents for the purpose of the workmen's compensation law.

Section 10772 of the General Code provides for the measure of damages in actions for wrongful death, and is as follows:

"Such actions shall be for the exclusive benefit of the wife, or husband, and children, or if there be neither of them, then of the parents and next of kin of the person whose death was so caused:

"It must be brought in the name of the personal representative of the deceased person and the jury may give such damages as it may think proportioned to the pecuniary injury resulting from such death, to the persons, respectively, for whose benefit the action was brought. Every such action must be commenced within two years after the death of such deceased person, except as provided in section 10773-1 of the General Code. Such personal representative, if he was appointed in this state, with the consent of the court making such appointment, may, at any time, before or after the commencement of the suit, settle with the defendent the amount to be paid. The amount received by such personal representative, whether by settlement, or otherwise, shall be apportioned among the beneficiaries, unless adjusted between themselves, by the court making the appointment, in such manner as shall be fair and equitable, having reference to the age and condition of such beneficiaries and the laws of descent and distribution of personal estates left by persons dying in this state."

It is very clear from the statute and from decisions like the one cited, which is but one example of a line of authorities that might be multiplied in number, that the amount of recovery is limited to the pecuniary loss, nothing being allowed for mental suffering or punitive damages. The statute is exactly like the one commented upon in the Dangler case, supra.

It would seem to follow, therefore, that at the very least an action for wrongful death could not be maintained by resident administrators where the beneficiary of the judgment is a non-resident alien enemy. Of course, the Canadian decision does not go to the extent of deciding whether or not such an action would lie after the termination of the war and whether or not, if an affirmative answer be given to this question, the interest of various beneficiaries would be determined by relation back as of the date when in the absence of war a right of action would have accrued.

It is true also that under our statute providing for an action for wrongful death a cause of action may technically exist in behalf of the estate of the decedent without the necessity of showing by special allegations the extent of the pecuniary injury to the "next of kin," but in this particular the statute, as has been seen, differs from the workmen's compensation law under which "next of kin" have, as such, no standing, and under which too the question of pecuniary damage is the all-controlling criterion of the right to participate in the benefits of the fund.

On the whole, however, there appear to me to be insuperable difficulties in the way of holding that the commission is at liberty to entertain applications on behalf of alleged "dependents" arising out of injuries occurring after the declaration of war with Germany when the applicants are residents of Germany. The right of any persons claiming as dependents does not vest unless the fact of dependency be established, and in this case I cannot bring myself clearly to the conclusion that such fact can be established.

It is true that it might be argued that because war suspends the obligations of contracts and merely interrupts temporarily the commercial intercourse of private citizens the fact that dependency might be predicated upon the sending of money by the deceased workman to his family in Germany as long as it was possible for him to do so, and the absence of any evidence negativing his intention to continue to do so when circumstances might make it possible for him again to do so in the future should be sufficient; that is to say, it might be argued that inasmuch as the state of war has a suspending effect it should be regarded as suspending the necessity of actual contribution to the support of dependents as requisite proof of dependency in fact.

I have already stated the difficulty which lies in the way of an unreserved acceptance of this argument on my part when referring to the circumstances that dependency is a fact to be ascertained as of a given date.

I am very reluctant to reach the conclusion that any class of beneficiaries under the workmen's compensation law are for all time cut off from the benefits of its operation by the occurrence of war, though the legal principles which the facts of the situation bring into play have seemed to inexorably point me to that conclusion.

Inasmuch as the commission could not in any event take final and complete action in such cases—that is, not only make an award, but disburse the fund to such claimants—I am of the opinion that the safest course to pursue is to receive such claims as may have been, or may be, filed in behalf of non-resident alien enemies, persons claiming as dependents on account of an injury received after the declaration of war, and to hold such claims in abeyance without action thereon, in the hope that the question may be passed upon in the meantime by some of the English or Canadian courts, and with a view to submitting it ultimately to the decisive decision of our own courts, in the absence of such intervening decision, when the cessation of hostilities shall have made it possible to litigate the question to a satisfactory conclusion.

The commission will observe that in discussing the question of dependency I have made the date of the injury and the date of the declaration of war the decisive points of time. The first choice is suggested by the statute which has been quoted, and irrespective of the question of "vested rights" as mooted in the opinion of Chief Justice Nichols in the Munding case, supra, I am satisfied that the class concerning which the conclusion last above expressed was drawn, is to be determined "in accordance with the facts in each particular case existing at the time of the injury resulting in the death of such employe." (Section 1465-82.)

The second date is chosen because, although war may exist without any formal declaration thereof, and although, indeed, the declaration of war against the Imperial German government by the joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives of the congress of the United States recites the existence of war as an established fact (See U. S. v. Cooke, 3 Wall. 258; Hall "International Law," pages 385, 390 and 393) yet under the peculiar circumstances under which we went to war with Germany I am satisfied that the safer rule, so far as the operation of municipal law is concerned, is to date the state of war from the declaration thereof.

The foregoing discussion disposes of all the cases submitted by you in so far as the interests of the subjects and residents of Germany are concerned. I come now to the consideration of the questions respecting residents of Austria-Hungary as "alien enemies."

Before discussing this question, however, I wish to consider whether or not some qualification ought not to be made with respect to the rules that have already been laid down. I have stated repeatedly that the true test by which the action of the commission in a given case may be determined is the residence of the person for whose benefit the given action of the commission may be taken. Hereinbefore I have referred to the persons for whose benefit the commission may not lawfully act as residents of the enemy country—Germany. Is that principle strictly limited to those who reside within the territorial jurisdiction of the German empire and its possessions?

From the practical viewpoint, and in the face of existing conditions, the answer to this question ought to be in the negative. For example, certain districts of Russia, including among others practically all of Russian Poland, and the Baltic provinces of Kovno and Courland, have for a long time been held firmly within the German lines, and Germany, according to current reports, has set up a military government therein to which the inhabitants of that conquered territory are bound to give actual allegiance. So, also, on the western front from the very earliest days of the war the German army has been in possession of the entire territory of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg and practically the entire territory of the kingdom of Belgium. In these districts military governments have been set up, and the government of the United States has had actual dealings with the military governments so set up under the authority of the German empire.

Is commercial intercourse with the inhabitants of these territories illegal? Very little authority is extant upon this exact subject, yet for the purpose of the cognate questions as to the application of prize laws authority is not wanting.

It was held in this country in the early case of Thirty Hogsheads of Sugar, 9 Cranch 195 (per Marshall, J.) that the former Danish possession of Santa Cruz captured by the British during the time when the United States was at war with Great Britain became thereupon British territory so that the fruits of its soil were subject to capture on the high seas as enemy property by the naval forces of the United States. This decision was followed in the case of United States v. Rice, 4 Wheat 246 (per Story, J.), holding that that portion of Castine which was originally and subsequently within the territory of the United States was for a time during the War of 1812, within which it was in the undisputed occupation of the enemy, British territory, for the purpose of the customs laws.

The rule thus established does not seem to have been acted upon with perfect consistency when the circumstances are reversed and the question is as to the status of the territory captured from the enemy and in the occupation of the military forces of the government of the forum. (See The Circassian, 2 Wall. 135, in which case, however, compensation for wrongful capture was subsequently awarded by the mixed commission on British and American claims. See Hall "International Law, 509, note.)

Cases arising out of the Civil war on this branch of the question may possibly be distinguished on the ground that they go no further than to hold that under the acts of congress then in force, trading with the inhabitants of territory captured from the enemy and held in military occupancy of the federal forces was subject to licensure by the president. (See Shaw v. Carlile, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 594; Butler v. Maples, 9 Wall. 766; United States v. Alleghany, Federal Case No. 14429.)

The Civil war cases are really not inconsistent with the principle of the cases decided under opposite facts; for though it may not be perfectly lawful to trade with the inhabitants of territory in the military possession of the military forces of one's own country, it does not therefore follow that it is lawful to trade with the inhabitants of territory in the military occupancy of the enemies of one's country. On the other hand, military occupancy in and of itself tends to give greater opportunity for exaction on the part of the enemy government and to afford more direct benefits to its military power than its civil jurisdiction over its own territory might afford.

For these reasons, then, I am of the opinion that, except as modified by whatever arrangement the government of the United States may have made for the transmission and distribution of relief to the inhabitants of Belgium and Poland, the principles above outlined as applicable to the different classes of cases discussed apply to such action of the commission as may be beneficial to the inhabitants of those territories which are under military occupation by the German army.

I have dealt with the problem just discussed as preliminary to the discussion of the question which you raise respecting the subjects and residents of Austria-Hungary because I deem it necessary to determine before approaching the discussion of the latter question whether the rules, the application of which has been worked out hereinbefore in this opinion are limited to the interests of persons residing within the technical boundaries of Germany. I have arrived at the conclusion that they are not so limited; and by way of parenthetical statement may say, that for the same reasons a resident of the German colonial possessions, such as German West Africa, is to be regarded, for the purposes of the rule, as a "friend," as is a resident of that small portion of Alsace, which from the early days of the war has been in possession of the French army.

The application of the rule being thus qualified I find it unnecessary to determine whether or not an actual state of war now exists or has for any particular time existed between the government of the United States and the government of Austria-Hungary. It is true, as established by numerous authorities which I have cited, among them Matthews v. McStea, supra, that as a matter of international law a state of war may exist without a formal declaration thereof. This is particularly true in modern times when the ancient formality of announcing war by sending heralds, etc., has become obsolete; it is also true that technically it is the actual state of war and not the formal declaration thereof which brings into play the rules respecting the relation of nationals and residents of the enemy state. It is also true that this principle was to a certain extent, though not perfectly so, acted upon by the courts of this country in cases growing out of the Civil war, which was never formally "declared;" and also in the case of the Mexican war, which was not declared until after certain decisive battles thereof had been fought and until the military forces of the United States had invaded the territorial dominions of Mexico; yet the circumstances of the present situation are far different from those involved in the instances mentioned.

On the one hand, so far as I am informed, no actual clash between the military and naval forces of the United States and those of Austria-Hungary has taken place. Diplomatic representatives have been recalled, and while this step, as a matter of historical experience, is very frequently an inevitable forerunner of actual war, it is not tantamount to a state of war. The principles which I have been endeavoring to apply arise only in actual war. The existence or nonexistence of full diplomatic relations are in themselves irrelevant facts so far as their application is concerned.

On the other hand it is equally true that the military alliance between Germany and Austria-Hungary is exceedingly close. It has been currently reported that from the early days of the war Austria's troops have been officered by Germans and that Austrian munitions of war have been used by the German army. It is undeniably true that German armies have passed through Austria-Hungary and have engaged the forces of Roumania, which lies beyond Austria-Hungary with relation to Germany. At the present writing representatives of the Italian government are in this country conferring with officers of the federal government with a view to promoting effective co-operation in what seems to be regarded as a common enterprise; whereas Italian belligerent activities have been almost exclusively directed against Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, very little, if any, opportunity having been afforded for her military forces to come into contact with those of Germany proper. As a matter of fact all Europe is divided into two armed camps with one of which the United States has cast its lot. One would have to shut his eyes to the stern facts of the situation to enable himself to draw a line between the state of international relations existing between the United States and some of the powers in the other armed camp on the one hand, and such relation respecting the other powers in the same coalition on the other hand, yet for the lack of specific data upon which to base my conclusion as to the outbreak of actual hostilities between the United States and Austria-Hungary I find myself unable to say that Austria-Hungary should be considered as a separate belligerent with respect to the United States. Rather the status of our relation to that country must be considered as appurtenant to that with respect to our relations with Germany. In other words, if we are at war with Austria-Hungary it is not because of any independent clash between the United States and that country, but because and as a result of the fact that we are at war with Germany. Accordingly whatever conclusion is arrived at with respect to Austria-Hungary, the state of affairs which now exists must be dated not from the interruption of diplomatic relations between this country and that empire, but rather from the declaration of war against Germany.

Under the present circumstances it would seem to be sound good sense to hold that war with Germany is war with its allies. Certainly the countries allied with Germany cannot be regarded as "neutral" or "friendly" in respect of their relation to the United States during the present war, and so, though the question is absolutely one of first impression as here are no cases so far as I have been able to find involving a situation where a country has been formally at war with one only of several other closely allied countries, I find myself strongly impelled to advise the commission that the allies of the enemy country must be regarded as enemies also; and that the inhabitants resident within their boundaries or dominions are to be regarded as alien enemies equally with the inhabitants of the country with which the belligerent country is formally at war under such circumstances.

As stated, the question last discussed is one of first impression. However, when the reasons for the rules which have been discussed are properly appreciated, I think the conclusion necessarily follows. As was well said by Lord Parker of Waddington in his opinion in the case of Daimler v. Continental Tyre and Rubber Company, supra:

> "The rule against trading with the enemy is a belligerent's weapon of self-protection. I think it has to be applied to modern circumstances as we find them, and not limited to the application of long ago, with as little desire to cut it down on the one hand as to extend it on the other beyond what the circumstances require."

While I have no desire to extend the somewhat harsh rule against commercial intercourse with an alien enemy beyond what modern circumstances—the terrible circumstances of the present world war—require, yet I think that upon the postulate that the rule is one of national self-defense, the present circumstances do require its extension to cover the present case. Because of the absence of authority, however, I have thought proper to refer in this connection, as well as for other purposes, to what I deem to be the rule respecting trading with persons who are inhabitants of the territory in the military occupancy of the enemy. Though Austria-Hungary is not in any sense in the military occupancy of Germany, yet the mlitary control of the entire territory of what are known as the "Central Powers" is apparently so highly centralized, and has acquired such tremendous ascendency therein over the civil governments of the respective countries—at last so far as external appearances indicate—that the analogy is, at least a fair one.

For these two reasons, then—first that on principle the allies of an enemy country ought to be treated as enemies themselves, and, second, that under the present circumstances the territory of Austria-Hungary may fairly be compared with territory under military occupation by German armies, for the purpose of the application of the rule, I advise that not only the inhabitants of Austria-Hungary, but also those of Bulgaria and Turkey be regarded for all purposes as in the same light as the inhabitants of Germany with respect to the various questions hereinbefore discussed in relation to the latter.

A line must be drawn, I think, between actually neutral or openly friendly countries, and those which are not so. It would be carrying the principle too far to hold that such commercial intercourse and trading with aliens or residents of alien countries as might indirectly benefit the military interests of the enemy are interdicted by the rule. Thus trade with Holland or Switzerland or the Scandinavian countries has undoubtedly been of benefit to Germany; England has acted on this theory in many instances, particularly in the operation of her assumed blockade of the North Sea. To what extent a belligerent nation may interfere with commerce to neutral countries or to countries allied with the enemy which may tend to enhance the enemy's resources, is a question of the law of nations; but when we return to the scope of the principles of municipal law we find no warrant for holding that private citizens or subjects of a state at war are prohibited by common law from dealing with any class of persons other than those who have acquired the technical status of alien enemies, as that status has been hereinbefore defined.

Therefore, it is my opinion that with respect to claims asserted by residents of Austria-Hungary the commission should continue for the time being to proceed without regard to the international situation.

Summarizing, the following are my answers to the nine distinct questions into which I have taken the liberty to resolve your more general questions:

1. With respect to claims for compensation which may arise on account of injuries to a subject of Germany residing within the United States occurring subsequently to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany, it is the duty of the commission to proceed to hear and determine a claim and to administer the state insurance fund in that behalf as if the war did not exist.

2. With respect to claims, if any, which may arise on account of the death of a resident of the United States, who is a subject of the German empire, occurring subsequently to the declaration of war, when those claiming as dependents reside in Germany, the commission should ascertain whether the injury occurred prior to the declaration of war or subsequently thereto. (a) If prior, the commission may proceed to hear and determine the claim as in other cases; but any award that may be made should be held in trust by the commission during the war and not paid to the claimants nor to any one on their behalf until peace is concluded. (b) If the injury occurred subsequently to the declaration of war the commission should receive and file the claim, but take no action thereon for the time being, as such claims present questions of grave doubt which cannot be satisfactorily determined until the war is over.

3. Respecting claims which have arisen or may arise on account of injuries or death occurring prior to the declaration of war between the United States and Germany, where the claimants are residents of the United States the commission should proceed in the disposition of the claim and the disbursement of the fund on account thereof as if the war did not exist.

4. Respecting claims which have arisen or may arise from injuries or death prior to the declaration of war, when the claimants are residents of Germany, the commission should proceed as above indicated in dealing with the first half of the second specific case supposed.

5. With respect to making periodical payments on awards made prior to the declaration of war with Germany or thereafter made upon claims arising from accidents occurring prior thereto, when the recipients of the payments, though aliens, reside in the United States, the commission should continue the disbursements as if the war did not exist, though the recipients of the payments be subjects of the German empire.

6. Respecting cases of the last named class, when the recipients reside in Germany, the commission should discontinue making the periodical payments during the existence of the war, but should hold the fund represented by the whole award in trust for proper distribution at the end of the war.

7. (a) Respecting claims filed, or which may be filed, on account of accidents occurring since the war was declared, where the claimants, whether dependents or otherwise, though nonresidents of this country, and subjects of Germany, reside in friendly countries, the commission should proceed in all cases as if the war did not exist.

The same answer applies to 7 (b) and to 7 (c).

8. With respect to the action of the commission in the three classes of cases with respect to time suggested in question 7 when the claimant, regardless of citizenship or nationality, actually resides in Germany, the commission should be governed as follows:

(a) With respect to claims filed, or which may be filed, on account of injury occurring since the war was declared, the commission should proceed as above suggested in dealing with the corresponding portion of the second hypothetical statement of fact. That is to say, the commission should take no present action in the premises but should defer all action on such claims until the conclusion of peace.

(b) In such cases when the injury occurred prior to the declaration of war, the commission should proceed as likewise indicated in corresponding subdivision of the second hypothetical statement of fact. That is to say, the commission may proceed to hear and determine the applications and make the awards, if the facts so justify, but should hold the money represented by the awards in trust until after the war.

9. For the purpose of determining the application of all the foregoing conclusions the meaning of the phrase "residing in Germany" should be understood as embracing the residents of territories which are under well established military occupation by German armies, subject, however, to such exceptions as may be sanctioned by the government of the United States by way of relief measures in Belgium and Poland; and as excluding the inhabitants of territories formerly German, which are under well established occupation by friendly countries.

10. The inhabitants of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, including such portions of such other countries as are under the well established military occupancy of the forces of any of these countries, and excluding such portions of the territory of any of them as may be in the well established military occupancy of the forces of friendly countries, are to be regarded, for all the foregoing purposes, in the same light as the inhabitants of Germany. The status of such persons should be determined irrespective of the date of the cessation of diplomatic relations between Austria-Hungary and the United States, and as commencing in its present aspect with the declaration of war between the United States and Germany.

In this last connection I am mindful of the fact that the government of the United States still outwardly recognizes the existence of a state of peace as between this country and Turkey, for example, the embassador not even having been recalled. The whole situation with respect to the members of the group of nations known as the "Central Powers," other than Germany, is so equivocal that I find myself unable to express any opinion in the premises with assurance. I feel bound, however, to advise the commission to act in the manner above stated with respect to such cases so that the important questions involved may come properly before the courts for final adjudication. Should the action taken by the commission be objected to by a subject of Austria-Hungary resident in his own country and he should endeavor to bring suit in a court of competent jurisdiction to obtain the relief claimed by him, the questions would be properly raised. In the meantime, however, it is, as I see it, the duty of the commission to take the attitude above outlined and adhere to it unless it should be judicially determined that the allies of Germany are our "friends."

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY BORROW MONEY TO PAY INDEBTEDNESS FOR TEACHERS' SALARIES—WHEN BONDS ISSUED TO COVER SUCH INDEBTEDNESS—HOW SAME ARE REDEEMED.

1. Under section 5656 of the General Code a board of education may borrow money to pay an indebtedness due for salaries of teachers.

2. If bonds are sold covering such indebtedness, an amount sufficient to redeem said bonds and the interest thereon shall be placed in the annual budget by the board of education and levied for the sinking fund for that purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1917.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 4, 1917, you ask my opinion upon the following statement:

> "Under section 5656 of the General Code the board of education of Brush Creek township has a deficit of $810.00 (approximately) due the teachers. Can we borrow this money under this section or shall we sell bonds to meet that deficit? If we sell bonds can the bonds be redeemed from the state aid fund? I see that the last legislature amended section 7596-1, which reads as follows:
> "'Whenever a school district receives state aid as is provided for in section 7595-1 of the General Code the board of education of such school district may refund any tuition indebtedness by issuing bonds as is provided by section 5656 of the General Code. When such bonds are due, the amount and interest of the bonds shall be a part of the deficit for the current year, and shall be paid as state aid by the auditor of state as is provided by section 7596 of the General Code.'
> "In case this school district should issue bonds and sell them, will they be redeemed at maturity by the auditor of state from the state aid fund?"

General Code section 5656 provides in part:

> "* * * The board of education of a school district * * * for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof so as to change, but not increase, the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

Section 5658 G. C. provides in part:

"No indebtedness of a * * * school district * * * shall be funded, refunded or extended unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such * * * school district * * * by a formal resolution of the * * * board of education * * *. Such resolution shall state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, refunded or extended, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of their maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear and the place of payment of principal and interest."

From the above sections, then, when a board of education of a school district determines that there exists a valid and binding obligation of such school district, and that from the limits of taxation such district is unable to pay the same at maturity, such school district may, under the conditions set forth in said quoted sections, borrow money or issue the bonds of the district so that the time of payment of said indebtedness may be extended. The amount of the indebtedness, however, shall not be increased. In your case you mention that the deficit has occurred in the tuition fund, that is, for the payment of teachers' salaries, and you ask if the board of education may borrow money to extend the time of payment of said indebtedness.

On March 27, 1915, you asked the attorney-general a similar question and the answer thereto is found in opinion No. 178, Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, page 328, as follows:

"A board of education may borrow money under section 5656 G. C. for the purpose of paying unpaid installments of teachers' salaries."

I agree with the above-mentioned opinion and advise you that your board can borrow money under the sections above mentioned to extend the time of payment of the said indebtedness.

Your second question is:

"If we sell the bonds, can the bonds be redeemed from the state aid fund?"

No such bonds can be redeemed from the state aid fund unless such redemption occurs under the provisions of General Code section 7596-1, as amended March 21, 1917, and filed in the office of the secretary of state April 2, 1917, and which will become effective July 1, 1917. If the bonds are issued, however, prior to the time of the filing of the annual budget of your board of education, I know of no way for you to escape the provisions of the constitution, article XII, section 11, and General Code section 7614.

Article XII, section 11, reads as follows:

"No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

General Code section 7614 provides in part:

"The board of education of every district shall provide a sinking fund for the extinguishment of all bonded indebtedness * * *."

Said section 11 of article XII, above quoted, was considered at length by our supreme court in the recent case of Link v. Karb, 89 O. S., 326. On page 338 the court said:

"This amendment to the constitution was framed and adopted for the purpose of requiring not only the legislature of the state but the taxing authority of any political subdivision of the state proposing to issue bonds to include in the law, resolution or ordinance, under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, the provision for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest and retire the bonds, otherwise the only effect of this amendment would be to carry into the organic law of the state the existing statutory provisions. In many instances this is a wise and proper thing to do, for it at once removes an important public policy from the realms of uncertainty and no longer permits it to become the battledore and shuttlecock of legislative fancy. However, that may be, this provision of the constitution must be held to serve some substantial purpose, and to the end that the will of the people may not be defeated by too narrow an interpretation of its terms, we have reached the conclusion that, in obedience to this amendment to the constitution the taxing officials of any political subdivision of the state must provide in the resolution or ordinance authorizing such issue, or in a resolution or ordinance in relation to the same subject-matter passed prior to the issuing of such bonds, for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest thereon and provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity. This, of course, does not require the immediate levying of a tax certain, either in amount or rate, for the provision of this amendment is that this tax shall be levied annually and collected annually, but it does mean that, at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, the taxing authorities proposing to issue such bonds shall provide that a levy shall be made each year thereafter during the term of the bonds in an amount sufficient to pay the interest thereon and retire the bonds, and such provision, so made at the time the bonds are authorized, shall be binding and obligatory upon these taxing officers of that political subdivision and their successors in office until the purpose of such levy shall have been fully accomplished by the retirement of the bonds so issued. Such a provision fills the full purpose of this amendment to the constitution and is not subject to the objection that it is impossible at the time of issue to determine either the amount that must be raised for that purpose or the rate that must be levied to raise such an amount. That amount may be determined from year to year, and levied annually, for that is the command of the amendment itself; but having declared at the time of the issue of such bonds that a levy shall be made in an amount sufficient, there then remains for the taxing officials the mere matter of calculation as to the amount. The levy must be made at all events in pursuance to the original provisions therefor, and subsequent taxing authorities must make such annual levy, regardless of what exigencies may arise in the future."

So that at the time you issue such bonds, it is necessary to make provision for the payment thereof by levying an annual tax in an amount sufficient to pay the interest and principal upon said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for the extinguishment of said bonds when the same become due and payable.

Inasmuch as said section 7596-1 G. C. will not become effective until July 1, 1917, I am of the opinion that any bonds issued prior thereto cannot be brought within its terms.

In direct answer to your questions, then, I advise you:

(1) Under section 5656 of the General Code a board of education may borrow money to pay an indebtedness due for salaries of teachers.

(2) If bonds are sold covering such indebtedness, an amount sufficient to redeem said bonds and the interest thereon shall be placed in the annual budget by your board of education and levied for the sinking fund for that purpose, and such bonds being issued prior to the going into effect of section 7596-1 G. C., as amended, they will not be redeemed at maturity by the auditor of state from the state aid fund.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—MAY MAKE RULES GOVERNING ITS PROCEDURE—NOT IN CONFLICT WITH THE STATUTORY OR COMMON LAW PRINCIPLES OF PROCEDURE.

All state boards are amenable to the statutes of the state, but the state dental board may make necessary rules covering its procedure which cannot be in derogation of statutory or common law principles of procedure.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1917.

HON. HOLSTON BARTILSON, Member State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have yours of May 15, 1917, as follows:

"Can the state dental board, under section 1315, make a rule whereby resolutions can be submitted to members of the said board while the board is in adjournment, and a vote be cast on the said resolutions by mail?

"Are not all state boards amenable to the statutes of the state and parliamentary usages?"

General Code section 1314 provides in part:

"The governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint a state dental board consisting of five persons * * *. One member shall be appointed each year as the respective terms of the present incumbents expire, and shall serve for the term of five years and until his successor is appointed and qualified. * * *"

General Code section 1315 provides:

"The state dental board shall organize by the election from its members of a president and a secretary. It shall hold a meeting on the fourth Monday in June and October of each year, and other meetings as it deems necessary at such times and places as the board designates. The October meeting shall be held in the city of Columbus; the June meeting may be held at such place as the board designates. A majority of the members of the board shall constitute a quorum, but a less number may adjourn from time to time. The board shall make such reasonable rules and regulations as it deems necessary; provided, however, that it shall require the concurrence of a majority of the members of the board to grant, to refuse or to revoke a license."

General Code section 1318 provides in part:

"The state dental board shall * * * keep a record of its proceedings * * *."

The word "board" is defined by "Century" as:

"A number of persons having the management, direction or superintendence of some public or private office or trust; as a board of directors; a board of trade; the board of health; or a school board."

The state dental board, then, is a body composed of the number of five persons, three of whom are necessary to constitute a quorum to do business, although, as noted above, a less number may adjourn from time to time. That a board must act as a unit and not as individuals has been frequently held. It is made the duty of the board to hold regular meetings at certain specified times and places for the transaction of any business which may be necessary in relation to the enforcement of the dental laws of this state. The board may also hold other meetings as it deems necessary and at such times and places as the board may designate. The member of the board who is elected president shall preside at such meetings, if present, or not otherwise disqualified, and the secretary who is also a member shall keep a record of the proceedings of the board. The public, for whom they act, have the right to their best judgment after free and full discussion and consultation among themselves of and upon the public matters entrusted to them to act upon. Such deliberation, consultation and discussion is lacking when they attempt to act separately. In re Ex parte John Walker, Habeas Corpus, 8 Bulletin, 198, the petitioner asked for a writ of habeas corpus, charging that the board of directors of the Cincinnati workhouse illegally restrained him of his liberty. He produced in court a paper signed by three of the directors authorizing his discharge, but the court held that the discharge was not valid "for the reason that it was not the result of the joint deliberation of these members or of the other members of the board and simply amounted to the individual act of each member; and that it was not a valid act." The court further held on page 200:

"Where a duty is devolved upon them by the legislature to discharge as a board, and a quorum may do an act, it is contemplated that each member is entitled to the opinion and judgment of his fellows; and that where any matter is brought before the board, requiring action, that there should be action only after a joint consideration of the question * * * that they may act advisedly, and that each one may know what his fellow member's opinion is, and thus be able to act advisedly."

If, then, the act when performed would not be a valid act, the board is without power to make a rule whereby resolutions can be submitted to members of the said board to be acted upon by them individually, and when the board is not in session.

Your second question is, Are not all state boards amenable to the statutes of the state and parliamentary usages? You will understand that any board which is the creature of statute can do only those things which are specifically granted or in certain cases those incidental things necessary to carry out the powers specifically granted.

General Code section 1315 provides that the board shall make such reasonable rules and regulations as it deems necessary. This provision means that it may make such necessary rules of procedure as will properly permit the board to transact its business in an orderly and legal manner. It does not mean that the board can make any rule, in derogation of law, but it does mean that the board can make necessary rules governing its procedure, in the absence of which the usual parliamentary rules governing such bodies will govern.

Answering your questions specifically, then, I advise you:

First: The state dental board has no right to make a rule whereby resolutions can be submitted to the members of said board and be acted upon by them separately.

Second: Such boards are amenable to the statutes of the state and may make necessary rules governing its procedure which are not in derogation to statutes or common law principles of procedure.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOND ISSUE—FOR ERECTION OF SCHOOLHOUSE—MAJORITY OF BOARD OF EDUCATION MAY PASS RESOLUTION PROVIDED FOR IN SECTION 7626 G. C.

In issuing bonds under the provisions of sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, the provisions of section 7629 G. C. do not apply and a majority of the board of education may pass a resolution as provided in section 7626 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 30, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Through your department I am answering a communication received from Hon. Harry S. Commager, Director of Law, Toledo, Ohio, as I consider the matter of sufficient importance to demand an answer. The communication from said Harry S. Commager reads as follows:

> "The director of schools of the city school district of the city of Toledo has requested this department to submit to you for an opinion the following: A bond issue for the acquiring of land and the erecting of a high school was submitted at a general election to the electors of the city school district, under section 7625 of the General Code of Ohio, and a majority of the electors voted in favor of the issuance of said bonds for said purpose. Thereafter, and in conformity to section 7626 of the General Code of Ohio, a resolution providing for the issue and sale of said bonds was presented to the board of education, all members being present. The vote on said resolution being three yeas and two nays. Query: Did said resolution pass? This involves a construction of sections 7627 and 7629 of the General Code."

The question submitted by the director of law of Toledo has to do with the construction of sections 7625 to 7629 G. C., inclusive. These sections are too lengthy to quote in full, but an understanding of the question involved makes it necessary to quote sections 7625, 7626 and 7629.

Sections 7625 and 7626 G. C. read as follows:

> "Sec. 7625. When the board of education of any school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a schoolhouse or houses, to complete a partially built schoolhouse, to enlarge, repair or furnish a schoolhouse, or to purchase real estate for playground for children, or to do any or all of such things, that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-six hundred and thirty, are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall make an estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose or purposes and at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections.''
> "Section 7626. If a majority of the electors, voting on the proposition to issue bonds, vote in favor thereof, the board thereby shall be authorized to issue bonds for the amount indicated by the vote. The issue and sale thereof shall be provided for by a resolution fixing the amount of each bond, the length of time they shall run, the rate of interest they shall bear, and the time of sale. Such bonds shall be sold in the manner provided by law."

Section 7627 G. C. makes provision for the conditions and limitations under which the bonds authorized by a vote of the people are to be sold, and section 7628 G. C. provides for the making of a levy to provide for the redemption of the said bonds at maturity and interest.

Section 7629 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The board of education of any school district may issue bonds to obtain or improve public school property, and in anticipation of income from taxes, for such purposes, levied or to be levied, from time to time, as occasion requires, may issue and sell bonds, under the restrictions and bearing a rate of interest specified in sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven. The board shall pay such bonds and the interest thereon when due, but provide that no greater amount of bonds be issued in any year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills, for the year next preceding such issue. The order to issue bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal."

In the communication of the director of law he states that an election was held under the provisions of section 7625 G. C., a majority of the electors voting for a bond issue. That the board of education by a vote of three to two, all members being present, voted to issue bonds under the provisions of section 7626 G. C., a majority of the board thus voting for the issuing of bonds. The question now is as to whether the provisions of section 7629 G. C. requiring that "the order to issue bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal" apply to the action of the board of education taken under section 7626 G. C. If said provisions do apply, the resolution failed to pass. If the provisions of section 7629 G. C. do not apply, the resolution passed.

Upon examination of these sections, one will readily see that they provide for the issuing of bonds under two different authorities and two different conditions. Section 7629 G. C. provides for the issuing of bonds by the board of education of any school district without any reference to a vote of the people, while sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, provide for the issuing of bonds by a board of education of any school district, authority having been received for the issuing of the bonds by a favorable vote of the people in the district. Upon a careful comparison of these two provisions, it will be evident that the method for issuing bonds under the authority of the people in no wise refers to the provisions of section 7629 G. C., either directly or indirectly, which section provides for issuing bonds upon the authority of the board of education alone. It is true section 7629 G. C. provides that the bonds issued under the authority of said section shall be issued under the restrictions and bearing a rate of interest specified in sections 7626 and 7627, but this simply places a restriction upon the bonds issued and not upon the method by which the resolution to issue the bonds shall be passed, and sections 7626 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, do not in any way make reference to the provisions of section 7629. Hence, one would immediately conclude that sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, furnish a complete, comprehensive and all-inclusive plan for issuing bonds, and that the conditions and limitations therein set out are in no wise related to or modified by the provisions of section 7629 G. C.

But there is another thing that is also fairly apparent upon the face of these statutes and that is that they are not logically arranged. A logical arrangement would require that section 7629 G. C. should stand before sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, for the reason that section 7629 provides for the issuing of bonds by the board of education of any district without a vote of the people and sections 7625 to 7628 G. C. provide that, if the board of education cannot secure sufficient funds for buying sites and erecting schoolhouses under the provisions of section 7629, then in that event they may submit the proposition to the voters of the district asking permission to make a greater issue of bonds than the board is permitted to make without a vote of the people.

It will be very instructive if we look into the origin and the history of these statutes and trace them very briefly down to the present time. These statutes were first enacted in the year 1873 and they form a part of an act "for the re-organization and maintenance of common schools" found in 70 O. L., page 195, these particular statutes being found on page 211. The general purport and intent of these statutes were the same when they were first enacted as they are now, but what is now section 7629 stood first in the original enactment and what are now 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, followed, thus making the arrangement of these sections logical.

It will not be necessary for us to note the different provisions of these statutes nor to trace the changes as they were made from time to time but it will suffice to say, as said before, that the provisions of these statutes have been from the beginning practically the same. But I desire to note particularly the history of the last sentence of section 7629 G. C. which is the matter that is particularly in question in the communication from the director of law. This sentence has been carried through as a part of the section from the beginning. When this statute was first enacted the said provision read as follows: "Provided, that the order of such board to issue such bonds, be made only at a regular meeting thereof, and by a vote of a majority of all the members of such board taken by yeas and nays entered on the journal of the board." From this reading it is quite evident that this provision was not intended to apply to any other bonds excepting those issued under the provisions of the section in which it is found.

In 95 O. L. 530, this particular provision was modified to read as follows:

> "But the order to issue such bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of not less than three-fourths of all the members thereof, taken by yeas and nays and entered on the journal of the board."

The same observation can be made in reference to the provision as amended as was made in reference to the provision before it was amended, namely, that it is clear that it was not intended to apply to the issuing of any other bonds excepting those provided for in this particular section.

In 97 O. L. 357 this particular provision was again amended and made to read as it is now found in the General Code. But throughout the entire history of these two statutes this particular provision with all its changes was always made specifically and definitely a part of what is now section 7629 G. C., and this section as a whole in all its changes never made any reference whatever to the other statute which provides for the issuing of bonds under the authority of a vote of the people. And, further, the statute which provides for issuing bonds under the authority of a vote of the people throughout its entire history never made any reference, either directly or indirectly, to the provisions of section 7629 G. C. It provided throughout its history merely that the board of education shall be authorized to do so and so if a majority of the qualified electors vote for levying taxes or for issuing bonds for the purpose of purchasing a site or erecting a building. It is a fundamental principle applying to all boards, committees or commissions that unless other provisions are made a majority of the board, committee or commission may transact business along any line, and it seems to me quite evident that it was the intention of the legislature under the provisions of sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, that this principle should apply to the board of education in issuing bonds under the authority of a vote of the people and that it requires but a majority of the board to enact the necessary legislation in order to carry out the mandates of the people as expressed at the polls. This conclusion would also seem to be in harmony with the natural and logical view of the situation. We know that the people generally demand that more restrictions and limitations be thrown around the actions of their servants when said servants act without any authority from the people than they demand when their servants act in merely carrying out the wishes or mandates of the people as expressed directly at the polls. We also note that the legislature is wont, in view of this, to place greater restrictions and greater limitations upon officers and boards who act without any authority directly from the people than they place upon officers and boards who get their authority to act directly from the people.

The above construction of these statutes is in harmony with this general principle. Hence, in view of the manifest intention as set forth in the said statutes as they now exist, and in view of the light that is thrown upon them by tracing their history from their first enactment, and in view of the general principle which controls the legislature in matters of this kind, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 7629 G. C. do not in any way limit or modify the provisions of sections 7625 to 7628 G. C., inclusive, and that a majority of the board of education may pass a resolution to carry out the mandates and wishes of the people as expressed at the polls.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—NOT COMPELLED TO ISSUE WARRANT FOR MATERIAL PURCHASED BY COMMISSIONERS—WHERE CONTRACT NOT LET IN COMPLIANCE WITH SECTION 2445 G. C.

In those cases in which the county commissioners, in entering into contracts for material for the use of the county, fail to comply with the provisions of section 2445 G. C., the county auditor is not compelled to issue his warrant in payment of the material so furnished, even though the county commissioners pass favorably upon the bills and order the county auditor to issue his warrants in payment of the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

HON. GEORGE F. CRAWFORD, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of April 13, 1917, was received, which communication reads as follows:

> "The auditor of Darke county has asked me for an opinion on issuing warrants on bills allowed by the county commissioners, the contracts for which were not awarded in accordance with section 2445 of the General Code.
> "I prepared an opinion for the auditor, but on account of the unpleasantness that is sure to arise, and on account of the sum involved in the various bills, approximating perhaps $6,000.00, I have some hesitancy in handing down this decision to the county auditor without a review of the matter by the attorney general.

"In my opinion, which is herewith enclosed, I have set out the authorities on which I based the conclusion reached. Unless there is some later decision than that in the 60th O. S., referred to in the enclosed opinion, and which section of the statute was, with others, considered in that opinion, I am unable to see why the auditor would be compelled to issue the warrants."

Your communication says nothing whatever about the nature of the contracts in reference to which the county commissioners have allowed the bills and ordered the county auditor to issue his warrant for the payment of the same. But from your letter I am assuming that the contracts, in reference to which the bills were incurred, were contracts which the county commissioners are authorized to make under the law; that the material was furnished at the instance and request of the county commissioners; that the material was furnished in good faith and was placed on the public roads of your county; that the material so furnished and placed upon the public highways cannot be returned to those furnishing same and thus be put in statu quo; that no fraud was practiced, either by the county commissioners or the persons who furnished the material, at the instance of the county commissioners; that there was no record made by the county commissioners of their transactions in the matter of the purchase of said material, as provided for under the provisions of section 2445 G. C.; and that the county commissioners have allowed the bills claimed due for material furnished and have ordered the county auditor to issue his warrant in payment of the same.

Now, the question is as to whether the county auditor is compelled to honor the orders of the county commissioners and issue his warrants thereunder.

Section 2445 G. C. reads as follows:

"No contract entered into by the county commissioners, or order made by them, shall be valid unless it has been assented to at a regular or special session thereof, and entered in the minutes of their proceedings by the auditor."

Your communication states that the provisions of said section have not been complied with, on the part of the county commissioners.

Under the law as applied to the facts, what is the answer to your question?

As there is considerable money involved and as material has been furnished by the parties in good faith and the county is getting the benefit from the same, and is in no position to return it, and the county commissioners have allowed the bills claimed due for the material furnished, your question is entitled to careful consideration. This I shall attempt to give it.

The statute says:

"No contract entered into by the county commissioners * * * shall be valid unless it has been assented to at a regular or special session thereof, and entered in the minutes of their proceedings * * *."

The provisions of this section seem to be plain. Unless certain conditions therein set out are complied with, it says no contract shall be valid. If the contract is not valid, no rights could be predicated thereupon. Further, those having claims against the county for material so furnished under contracts, in which the county commissioners have not complied with the terms of the statute, would be compelled to base their right of action against the county, in case of a suit upon these contracts so entered into. But as the contracts are not valid, but void, the claimants could not predicate a cause of action upon them.

It follows that if those having claims against the county cannot predicate them upon said invalid contracts, the county auditor could not be compelled to issue his warrant in payment of the claims. This would seem to be the natural conclusion to be drawn.

The county commissioners had no right to make an order allowing the bills. If one were to hold otherwise, what use would such statutes as the above serve? The provisions of this statute and other statutes which place restrictions upon the right of public officials to contract were enacted with a view to restrain officials from entering into contracts in a promiscuous way, and were intended to protect the rights of the public in the matter of the expenditure of money derived from taxation.

The question of good faith cannot enter into the consideration of such a statute. There is no such a question contemplated in its terms. Supposing the rule of "good faith" should be adopted. How is anyone going to show "bad faith?" So that from a mere reading of the statute and from the drawing of a natural conclusion from the language of the same, one must conclude that the county auditor is not bound to issue his warrant for the payment of said claims; nor have the persons furnishing material any right to recover for the same against the county.

But what have the courts of our state held in reference to this statute and other statutes containing restrictive provisions in reference to the right of public officials to contract? There is an abundance of authority upon this proposition and it cannot be said that it is all harmonious. But when the cases are studied carefully, it will be found that in the main the courts of our state agree on the construction that should be placed upon said statutes and obligations and rights arising thereunder. There is obiter dictum in a number of decisions which would seem to be at variance with the general line of authority, but outside of this the decisions of our courts are harmonious.

I desire to note a number of cases upon this point.

In 58 O. S. 558 there is a case styled City of Lancaster v. Miller. While this case did not have under consideration the direct question involved in your inquiry, yet the court was construing in said case one of these restrictive statutes. The second and third branches of the syllabus in said case read as follows:

> "2. Nor will such contract impose on the corporation a valid obligation even if bids were advertised for pursuant to said section 2303, unless the auditor, or clerk, of the corporation, as the case may be, 'shall first certify that the money required for' that purpose 'is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn,' etc., as required by section 2702, Revised Statutes.
> "3. Where either of such requirements has been omitted the municipality will not by the acts of its officers be estopped to set up such omission as a defense to an action brought against it on such contract."

On pages 575-6 of the opinion, the court uses the following language:

> "The corporation should not be estopped by the acts of its officers to set up these statutes in defense to contracts made in disregard of them. It would be idle to enact those statutes, and afterward permit their practical abrogation by neglect or other misconduct of the officers of the municipality. If such effect should be given to such acts of municipal officers it would defeat the operation of the statutes. The strict enforcement of these provisions may occasionally cause instances of injustice; it is possible that municipal bodies may secure benefits under a contract thus declared void and refuse to make satisfaction. In the nature of things, however, these instances will be rare. Those who deal with public agencies entrusted with the management of municipal affairs, usually experience liberal treatment. Such agencies are not stimulated to acts of injustice by cupidity. Self-interest, that great motive to over-reaching, is absent. If, however, cases of hardship occur, they should be attributed to the folly of him who entered into the invalid contract. The gateways of municipal prodigality should not be left wide open, because an attempt to narrow them may cause an occasional instance of seeming hardship."

In Buchanan Bridge Co. v. Campbell et al., Com'rs., 60 O. S. 406, there are facts as nearly similar to the facts involved in your question as it would be possible to get. The syllabus of this case reads as follows:

"A contract made by county commissioners for the purchase and erection of a bridge in violation or disregard of the statutes on that subject, is void, and no recovery can be had against the county for the value of such bridge. Courts will leave the parties to such unlawful transaction where they have placed themselves, and will refuse to grant relief to either party."

It will be noticed in the statement of facts set out in said cause that the commissioners never caused any memorandum or minute, concerning the purchase or order for the bridge material in question, to be entered on the county commissioners' journal; that the plaintiff furnished the material in good faith; that the material was used by the county commissioners in the construction of the bridge in question; and that the county commissioners, at the request of the plaintiff, signed and delivered to it two certain warrants or orders directing the auditor to issue or draw his warrant or warrants on the treasurer of said county for the payment of the same. At this particular juncture proceedings in injunction were begun by the prosecuting attorney against the county officials, seeking to enjoin the payment of the money claimed due the plaintiff from the board of county commissioners.

The court on p. 419 used the following language:

"Whatever the rule may be elsewhere, in this state the public policy, as indicated by our constitution, statutes and decided cases, is, that to bind the state, a county or city for supplies of any kind, the purchase must be substantially in conformity to the statute on that subject, and that contracts made in violation or disregard of such statutes are void, not merely voidable, and that courts will not lend their aid to enforce such a contract directly or indirectly, but will leave the parties where they have placed themselves. If the contract is executory, no action can be maintained to enforce it, and if executed on one side, no recovery can be had against the party of the other side.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"In line with the spirit of this section, statutes have been passed providing for the public letting of contracts after advertisement by municipalities and providing that contracts not so let shall be void; and this court has construed those statutes as absolving municipalities from all obligations as to contracts made, work done, or supplies furnished in violation or disregard of such statutes."

On p. 425 the court says:

"These omissions are fatal to the validity of the contract, and by force of the above cited sections of the statute, the contract is totally void and imposed no obligation on either party to it.

"The statutes are notice to the world as to the extent of the powers of the commissioners, and the bridge company is bound by that notice. It knew, and was bound to know, that the commissioners had no power to thus enter into a contract, and that a contract thus attempted to be entered into would be null and void and would not bind either party.

"It is necessary to so construe the statutes, in order to prevent the evils which induced the enactment of them. If such statutes could be evaded, there would always be found some public servants who would be ready and willing to join in transactions detrimental to the public, but favorable to themselves or some favored friend; and if public officers should be ever so honest, some persistent agent or salesman would impose upon them, and obtain more out of the public treasury than is justly due. When the provisions of the statute are followed, and all is done openly and publicly, the public interests are best conserved, and even then there is often complaint to the effect that some one has been favored."

In this case it will be further noticed that the court held not only that the express contract was void and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to recover under the contract, but that the plaintiff could not recover as upon an implied contract. This case would seem to be decisive of the question asked by you, but I will note very briefly a few other cases.

In the case of The City of Wellston v. Morgan, 65 O. S. 219, the court held in the syllabus as follows:

"While there is implied municipal liability at common law, the statutes of this state provide the manner in which contracts, agreements, obligations and appropriations shall be made and entered into by municipalities, and they cannot be entered into otherwise than as provided by statute.

"There has been no implied municipal liability in matters ex contractu in this state since the passage of the act of April 8, 1876 (73 O. L. 125), part of which now forms section 1693 Revised Statutes.

"To state a good cause of action against a municipality in matters ex contractu the petition must declare upon a contract, agreement, obligation or appropriation made and entered into according to statute. A petition on an account merely, or quantum meruit, in such cases, is not sufficient.

"Persons dealing with officers of municipalities must ascertain for themselves and at their own peril that the provisions of the statutes applicable to the making of the contract, agreement, obligation or appropriation have been complied with."

In the opinion of the court a review is made of previous cases decided in reference to restrictive statutes, and the conclusion of law set out in the syllabus was drawn from the same.

Possibly the last expression of our supreme court upon matters of this kind is to be found in the case of The Village of Carthage v. Diekmeier, 79 O. S. 323. While this case had to do with the provisions of our statutes requiring the certificate of the proper officer, that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund, before a contract can be entered into or order made for the expenditure of money, yet the reasoning by which the court arrived at its conclusion in said case is in point in this case. It reviewed a great many former decisions rendered by the same court and affirmed the findings made in said causes.

> "It is there held, not only that the terms of a statute regulating the execution of a contract whereby public money will be expended, must be followed, but where the statutory requirements have been omitted, the corporation will not by the acts of its officers be estopped to set up such omissions as a defense to an action brought against it on such contract. The strictness of the rule is justified in the opinion of the court on page 575. Among other things, it is there said: 'Contracts made in violation of these statutes should be held to impose no corporate liability. Persons who deal with municipal bodies for their own profit should be required at their peril to take notice of limitations upon the powers of those bodies which these statutes impose.' The next paragraph of the opinion is also in point here, but space is not ours for its present quotation."

The question might be raised as to whether the fact that the county commissioners allowed these claims and ordered the county auditor to issue his warrant in payment of the same, might not have some effect upon the conclusion to be drawn; and whether a suit in mandamus might not lie against a county auditor to compel him to issue his warrants, the orders for which having been made by the county commissioners. We find this question to have been cited in State ex rel. Baen v. Yeatman, Auditor, 22 O. S. 546, in which the court held, in the third branch of the syllabus, as follows:

> "Where such contract is made, in disregard of the provisions of that section, a mandamus will not be awarded to compel the auditor of the county to draw a warrant on the treasurer for the payment of the sum allowed by the commissioners as the amount due on the contract."

This same question was also answered in Printing Co. v. State, 68 O. S. 362.

Upon this question I desire also to cite an interesting case, found in 114 Fed. Rep. 745, styled Lee v. County Com'rs. In this case the county commissioners entered into a contract with the Canton Bridge Company, for the furnishing of materials for bridges, and failed to comply with the provisions of the statutes in reference to the making of said contract. In this case the bridges were furnished, the bills for the same were allowed by the county commissioners, and the county auditor ordered to issue his warrant in payment for the same.

The county auditor issued his warrant and the county treasurer practically accepted the warrant by endorsing thereon: "Not paid for want of funds." At this juncture, the county officials were enjoined, the court holding that they had no authority to pay out the money, because the whole matter rested on an illegal contract. This was conceded by the court and by the counsel in this said case.

As said before, there are a few cases which at first sight do not seem to be in harmony with the foregoing conclusion. One of these cases is Emmert v. City of Elyria, 74 O. S. 185. In the opinion rendered in this case, on p. 194, we find the following language:

> "But, because a municipality is not legally liable to pay for a public improvement, it does not follow that it is not under a moral obligation to do so or that a court because it will not enforce payment will enjoin it. The contract for paving this street is not ultra vires. If invalid it is so merely because the contract was made before the bonds to provide the money to pay for it were sold. Now that the work has been done in accordance with the contract and the bonds have been sold and the money to pay for it is in the treasury, it is right that it should be paid for and a court of equity ought not, unless its failure to do so would defeat the purpose of the law, prevent the municipality from doing what equity and fair dealing would exact from an individual."

But it must be remembered that this case was dealing with the question as to whether public officials could be enjoined from paying money due under a contract, when the provisions of our statutes have not been complied with in entering into the contract, and not with the question as to whether the party who entered into the contract with the county commissioners could recover in a suit against the county. But the decision in this case finds no fault with the general proposition of law above laid down, as will be seen in the following language used by the court on p. 194:

> "Applying these provisions, it has been held that in a suit on a contract against a municipality an averment of an observance of them is essential to the statement of a cause of action, that in the absence of the strict observance of them no liability is incurred by the municipality, that an implied liability on the municipality cannot be created by its receiving or retaining the benefit of performance of such a contract by the other party and that it is not estopped by the acts of its agents or officers, for the reason that these provisions are intended for the protection of the citizen, and that persons dealing with its officers are presumed to know the extent of their authority."

Another case which might seem to be at variance with the conclusion arrived at in answering your question, is found in 77 O. S. 7, styled State ex rel. v. Fronizer et al. The facts in this case were entirely different from the facts set out in the case under consideration, in that the court was passing upon the question as to whether the county could recover money which had been paid out under a contract illegally entered into on the part of the county commissioners. The court was not passing upon the question as to whether a recovery could be had against the county under a contract illegally entered into on the part of the county commissioners. So that the holding in this case would not control nor even modify the holding in the case under consideration.

There is also an opinion rendered by Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, one of my predecessors, found in Vol. I, p. 808 of Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1914, that might at first sight seem to be at variance with the question under consideration. But the question upon which Mr. Hogan passed was as to whether the county commissioners might pay for certain printed matter which they had purchased under a contract, in which the provisions of the statutes were not complied with; not whether they could be compelled to pay, but whether they would be allowed to pay. Mr. Hogan held that while the contract was void, yet the county commissioners, if they desired to do so, could pay what would be a reasonable amount for said printed matter. So that the facts in the case passed upon by him were different from the facts in the case under consideration, and to say the very least, Mr. Hogan went the limit in arriving at the conclusion which he reached in said matter.

I desire to say that I noted the suggestions made by you in your communication and gave the same the consideration to which they were entitled.

So that in view of all the above, answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that your county auditor cannot be compelled to issue his warrants in payment for the amount claimed due for material furnished your county under said contracts; neither could those persons furnishing said material recover from the county the value of the material so furnished.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION—POWER TO HEAR COMPLAINTS AGAINST AND REVISE VALUE OF REAL PROPERTY—COUNTY AUDITOR—POWER TO REVALUE AND ASSESS REAL ESTATE.

If the county auditor and the county commissioners, proceeding under the provisions of section 5548 General Code, as amended Senate Bill 177, find that the real property in any tax assessment district is assessed for taxation at its true value in money as the same now appears on the tax duplicate, and as a consequence of such findings the 1916 valuation of such real property is entered upon the tax list for the year 1917, the county board of revision provided for in said act has no power under the provisions of section 5605 of the General Code, as in said act amended, to revise the values of such real property.

Neither has such county board of revision any power under sections 5597 and 5609 General Code to hear complaints filed against real property valuations in such tax assessment district.

Section 5548-1, as amended in Senate Bill 177, authorizing the county auditor to revalue and assess any part of the real estate contained in a tax assessment district or subdivision which has been assessed by him in the manner provided for by section 5548 General Code, has no application to real property in a tax assessment district or subdivision which by action of the county auditor and the county commissioners under the first part of said section 5548 has been carried into the 1917 tax list at the 1916 valuations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your favor of March 31, 1917, in which you ask for my opinion as follows:

"If the county auditor and the county commissioners, proceeding under the provisions of section 5548 G. C., find that the real property in any township, village, ward or assessment district is assessed for taxation at its true value in money as the same now appears on the tax duplicate, and as a consequence of such finding the 1916 valuation of real estate is entered upon the tax list and duplicate for the year 1917, has the board of revision any power under the provisions of section 5605 of the General Code to revise the values of such real property and may complaints be filed against such valuations under the provisions of section 5609 G. C. and be heard by the board under the provisions of section 5597 G. C.?

"Is the determination by the county auditor and county commissioners such an assessment as will authorize the county auditor under the provisions of section 5548-1 to thereafter at any time revalue and assess any part of the real estate contained in such subdivision where he finds that the same has changed in value or is not on the duplicate at its true value in money upon notice to the owner of such real estate?"

The first question in your communication is whether or not the board of revision provided for in Senate Bill No. 177 has any power under the provisions of section 5605 General Code to revise the values of real property in a tax assessment district or subdivision, the real property valuations of which are carried into the 1917 tax duplicate by the action of the county auditor and the board of county commissioners at the 1916 valuation. This question calls for a consideration of sections 5548, 5580, 5598 and 5605 General Code, which sections, so far as material to the question at hand, provide as follows:

"Sec. 5548. Each county is made the unit for assessing real estate for taxation purposes. The county auditor in addition to his other duties, shall be the assessor for all the real estate in his county for purposes of taxation, provided that nothing herein shall affect the power conferred upon the tax commission of Ohio in the matter of the valuation and assessment of the property of any public utility. Upon the taking effect of this act, on or before the second Monday in April, 1917, and annually thereafter between the first day of January and the first day of February, the county auditor shall ascertain whether the real property in each township, village, ward, or assessment district, as provided in section 3349 of the General Code, is assessed for taxation at its true value in money, as the same then appears on the tax duplicate. If he finds that it is assessed at its true value in money, in any such township, village, ward, or assessment district, he shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter made, enter such valuation upon the tax list and duplicate for the current year. In such event, and unless he finds that such property is not assessed at its true value in money, in each such subdivision, such assessments shall constitute the valuation for taxation for the current year, subject to the provisions hereinafter made. Said county auditor shall submit his findings concerning the valuation of such real estate to the board of county commissioners of his county, and said board shall, at a hearing fixed within not less than ten nor more than twenty days thereafter, confirm, modify, or set aside the same by order entered on the journal of said board. Notice of such hearing shall be given by publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the county. If by such order it is determined that the real estate in any such subdivision is not on the duplicate at its true value in money, then such county auditor shall proceed to assess such real estate in such subdivision or subdivisions. Such assessment shall also be made by him in any such subdivision upon the filing of a petition therefor with the county auditor signed by not less than twenty-five freeholders in such subdivision, or by the board of trustees in any such township, or by the council of any such village. Such petition may be filed at any time after January first of any year, but not later than the fourth Monday in April, 1917, and the first Monday in March annually thereafter. * * *"

"Sec. 5580. The county treasurer, county auditor and the president of the board of county commissioners of each county shall constitute a county board of revision."

"Sec. 5598. The county board of revision shall have power to investigate all assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed, in which real or personal property has been assessed or listed for taxation for the current year, but not assessments, additions or corrections hereafter made by the tax commission of Ohio."

"Sec. 5605. * * * On the first Monday of July, annually, the county auditor shall lay before the county board of revision the returns of his assessment of any real property for the current year, and such board shall forthwith proceed to revise the assessment and returns of such real property. If the board finds that any tract, lot or parcel of land or any buildings, structures or improvements thereon, or any minerals therein, or rights thereto have been improperly listed, either in the name of the owner, the description or quantity thereof, or have been incorrectly valued, or have been omitted and not yet valued, it shall make the necessary corrections and shall give to each such tract, lot or parcel of land, or any buildings, structures or improvements thereon or any minerals therein or rights thereto, incorrectly valued or omitted, the true value in money thereof. The county auditor shall not make up his tax list and duplicate, nor advertise as provided in section 5606 of the General Code, until the board of revision has completed its work under this section and has returned to the auditor all the statements and returns laid before it with the revisions and corrections thereof, as made by it."

Without attempting any extensive analysis of the provisions of section 5548 General Code, it is sufficient for the purpose of this opinion to note that this section authorizes the county auditor, with the approval of the board of county commissioners, to carry real property in any tax assessment district or subdivision into the new or current duplicate at the existing duplicate valuation, if he finds such real property to be there assessed at its true valuation in money; and an "assessment" by the county auditor of real property within any such tax assessment district or subdivision is authorized only when required by the order of the board of county commissioners made on a consideration of the findings of the county auditor, or when such assessment is petitioned for by not less than twenty-five freeholders in such tax assessment district or subdivision.

It is clear from the provisions of section 5548 General Code that the "assessment" by the county auditor therein provided for as to real property within a tax assessment district or subdivision does not mean the action taken by the county auditor with the approval of the board of county commissioners carrying real property in such tax assessment district or subdivision into the new or current duplicate at the old duplicate valuation, but that the term has reference only to the actual assessment made of such real property by the county auditor on the order of the board of county commissioners finding that such real property is not assessed at its true value in money or on the petition of twenty-five or more freeholders of such tax assessment district or subdivision.

It is an established rule of statutory construction that where the same word or phrase is used more than once in the same act in relation to the same subject matter and looking to the same general purpose, if in one connection its meaning is clear and in another it is doubtful or obscure, it is in the latter case to receive the same construction as in the former, unless there is something in connection with which it is employed plainly calling for a different construction.

Applying this rule of construction to the further provisions of section 5605 General Code, above quoted, the term "assessment" as therein employed is to be given the same meaning that the term carries in section 5548, and this being so, the conclusion is compelled, in answer to your first question, that inasmuch as under section 5605 General Code, in so far as real property is concerned, there is laid before the county board of revision for action only the county auditor's returns of his "assessment" of real property for the current year, said county board of revision has no power to revise the valuation of real property in a tax assessment district or subdivision which is carried into the 1917 duplicate at the 1916 valuation by the action of the county auditor and the board of county commissioners under the first part of section 5548.

In this connection it will be observed, however, that under the general power given to the county board of revision by section 5598 to investigate all assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed, as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed, in which real or personal property has been assessed or listed for taxation for the current year, as well as under the more specific authority given to the county board of revision by the provisions of section 5604, such county board of revision may investigate all real (and personal) property on the tax list, and if it finds that the same has escaped taxation or has been listed at less than its true value in money, it shall report to the county auditor all facts and information in its possession relating to such case; whereupon the county auditor shall make such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized and required by law to make in other cases in which real (and personal) property has escaped taxation, or has been improperly listed or valued for taxation.

Your second question is whether or not under such circumstances complaint may be filed against the valuation of real property in a tax assessment district or subdivision carried into the 1917 duplicate at the 1916 valuation under the provisions of the first part of section 5548 G. C. This section requires the further consideration of the provisions of sections 2583, 5597 and 5609 General Code, as amended in Senate Bill 177. Section 2583 General Code provides, in part, as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday of August annually, the county auditor shall compile and make up, in tabular form and alphabetical order, separate lists of the names of the several persons, companies, firms, partnerships, associations and corporations in whose names real or personal property has been listed in each township, city, village, special district, or separate school district in his county, placing separately, in appropriate columns opposite each name, the description of each tract, lot or parcel of real estate, the value of each tract, lot or parcel and the value of the improvements thereon, if any, and in a separate list the aggregate value of the personal property as listed therein and revised by him, or the county board of revision, as the case may be, and the number of dogs, and the value, if given by the owner. If the name of the owner of any tract, lot or parcel of real estate or of any item of personal property is unknown, the word 'unknown' shall be entered in the column of names opposite said tract, lot, parcel or item. Such lists shall be prepared in duplicate. * * *"

Said section further provides as follows:

* * * "On or before the first Monday of September in each year, the county auditor shall correct such lists in accordance with the additions and deductions ordered by the tax commission of Ohio, and by the county board of revision, and shall certify and on the first day of October deliver one copy thereof to the county treasurer. The copies prepared by the county auditor shall constitute the auditor's tax list and treasurer's duplicate of real and personal property for the current year. In making up such tax lists, the county auditor may place each town lot in its numerical order, and each separate parcel of land in each township according to the numerical order of the section."

Section 5597 General Code reads:

"It shall be the duty of the board of revision to hear complaints relating to the assessment made during the current year of both real and personal property laid before it by the county auditor and it shall investigate all such complaints and may increase or decrease any such valuation or correct any assessment complained of, or it may order a reassessment by the original assessing officer. Such board of revision shall also hear and determine complaints pending from the preceding year."

Section 5609 General Code provides as follows:

"Complaint against any valuation or assessment made within a current year, may be filed on or before the time limited for payment of taxes for the first half year. Any taxpayer may file such complaint as to the valuation or assessment of his own or another's property, and the county commissioners, the prosecuting attorney, county treasurer, or any board of township trustees, any board of education, mayor or council of any municipal corporation, in the county shall have the right to file such complaint. The county auditor shall lay before the county board of revision all complaints filed with him. The determination of any such complaint shall relate back to the date of such valuation or assessment, and liability for taxes, and for any penalty for non-payment thereof within the time required by law, shall be based upon the valuation or assessment as finally determined. Each complaint shall state the amount of overvaluation, or undervaluation, or illegal valuation, complained of; and the treasurer may accept any amount tendered as taxes upon property concerning which a complaint is then pending, and if such tender is not accepted no penalty shall be assessed because of the non-payment thereof. The acceptance of such tender, however, shall be without prejudice to the claim for taxes upon the balance of the valuation or assessment. A like tender may be made, with like effect, in case of the pendency of any proceeding in court based upon an alleged excessive or illegal valuation."

Reading the provisions of sections 5597 and 5609 together, I am inclined to the view that the conjunction "or" between the words "valuation" and "assessment," in the first line of section 5609, is to be considered as having an equivalent rather than a disjunctive sense, and that the word "valuation" as used in section 5609 means "assessment." This being true, the considerations leading to the answer given above to your first question likewise lead to the conclusion that the board of revision has authority to hear and determine complaints as to assessments actually made in the current year, and that it has no power to hear complaints as to valuations of real property in a particular tax assessment district or subdivision which the county auditor and the board of county commissioners have carried into the 1917 tax list at the 1916 valuation.

Your third question is with reference to the power of the county auditor to revalue real property under the provisions of section 5548-1 General Code, as amended in Senate Bill 177.

From an examination of the provisions of this section it would appear that the duty of the county auditor to revalue real estate under the provisions of this section is limited to subdivisions in which real estate has been assessed by the county auditor under section 5548 General Code; and inasmuch as has been before observed, the only assessment made by the county auditor under section 5548 is that made by him in particular taxing districts or subdivisions on order of the board of county commissioners or on petition of the freeholders therein, it follows that the duty of the county auditor with reference to the matter of revaluation under section 5548-1 extends only to real estate which has been so assessed by him under the provisions of section 5548 General Code, whether such assessment is made on an order of the county commissioners finding such real property of such tax assessment district or subdivision not to be taxed at its true value in money, or is made by the county auditor on the petition of twenty-five freeholders of such tax assessment district or subdivision; and that the duty of the county auditor prescribed by section 5548-1 General Code does not extend to real property in any such tax assessment district or subdivision which has been carried into the new tax list at the old duplicate valuation.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MEMBERS OF BOARD OF REGISTRATION MUST SERVE—PRESIDENT OR GOVERNOR MAY ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF MEMBER—ARE NOT OFFICERS IN STRICT SENSE—MAY MAINTAIN AT SAME TIME MEMBERSHIP IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

1. Persons selected by the governor to serve as members of boards of registration must, under the penalties of the law, perform the duties which devolve upon them by virtue of said appointment, but the president or governor may remove them or might accept their resignations when the best interests of the nation demand it.

2. Members of the boards of registration are not officers in the strict sense of that term, and therefore persons may hold positions on boards of registration and at the same time maintain their membership in the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

HON. JAMES M. COX, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your oral request asking me to render an opinion upon two separate and distinct questions which are as follows:

> "1. Is a person, appointed by the governor as a member of a registration board, under obligation to serve as such member, or may he resign and another be appointed in his place?
> "2. Is there any provision of law or of the constitution, by virtue of which it would be illegal for a member of the general assembly to act as a member of a registration board and at the same time hold his office as a member of the general assembly?"

1. To answer this question it will be necessary for us to note the provisions of:

> "An act to authorize the president to increase temporarily the military establishment of the United States."

Section 6 of said act reads in part as follows:

> "That the president is hereby authorized to utilize the service of any or all departments and any or all officers or agents of the United States and of the several states, territories, and the District of Columbia, and subdivisions thereof, in the execution of this act, and all officers and agents of the United States and of the several states, territories, and subdivisions thereof, and of the District of Columbia, and all persons designated or appointed under regulations prescribed by the president, whether such appointments are made by the president himself or by the governor or other officer of any state or territory to perform any duty in the execution of this act, are hereby required to perform such duty as the president shall order or direct, * * *. Any person charged as herein provided with the duty of carrying into effect any of the provisions of this act or the regulations made or directions given thereunder who shall fail or neglect to perform such duty * * *, or who, in any manner, shall fail or neglect to perform any duty required of him in the execution of this act, shall, if not subject to military law, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year, or, if subject to military law, shall be tried by court-martial and suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct."

Having noted the provisions of the act of congress, let us turn to the registration regulations issued with the approval of the president of the United States and under and by the authority of the act of congress, and ascertain what their provisions are in reference to the matter under consideration. The provisions therein are found on pages 5 and 6 of said registration regulations. They read as follows:

"The execution of the law in each county or similar subdivision shall, in respect of registration, be intrusted to a board of registration consisting of at least three members to be named by the governor and composed of local authorities or other citizens residing in such county or other subdivision. * * *

"The president or governor may remove any person from registration boards while such boards are acting as registration boards and may substitute another in his place whenever it is found that the interests of the nation demand it. After such registration boards are appointed as the local boards to execute the selective draft, the governor or mayor should recommend such removal to the president when such removal is deemed to be in the public interest."

When we consider the provisions of the act of congress itself and the provisions of the registration regulations issued by the president and under and by authority of said act, we readily see that there is no provision whatever made whereby a person appointed to a registration board may resign and thus be relieved from the performance of his duties under the act and under the said registration regulations.

On the other hand, section 6 of said act specifically provides that any person who fails to perform the duties required of him under and by virtue of the provisions of said act shall, upon conviction in the district courts of the United States, be imprisoned for a period not to exceed one year.

The duties of these boards of registration seem to partake somewhat of the nature of military duties, and something of the strictness of military rules and regulations seems to be thrown about the men selected for the various duties. When a man is called to serve his country under the said act, as a member of the board of registration, he is compelled to perform his duties just as an enlisted soldier would be. Of course the president or governor may remove any person from registration boards and substitute another in his place, or either would have power to accept a resignation whenever it is found that the interests of the nation demand it. Provision is made for this in the registration regulations approved by the president.

2. In answering this question it will be necessary for us to note the provisions of our statutes in reference to this matter and also the provisions of the constitution relative to the same.

Section 15 G. C. reads as follows:

"No member of either house of the general assembly except in compliance with the provisions of this act shall:

"1. Be appointed as trustee or manager of a benevolent, educational, penal or reformatory institution of the state, supported in whole or in part by funds from the state treasury;

"2. Serve on any committee or commission authorized or created by the general assembly, which provides other compensation than actual and necessary expenses;

"3. Accept any appointment, employment or office from any committee or commission authorized or created by the general assembly, or from any executive, or administrative branch or department of the state, which provides other compensations than actual and necessary expenses.

* * * *."

This section contains the only provisions of the statutes in reference to the matter under consideration and it is readily seen that they do not apply to positions such as that under consideration.

The constitutional provision which has to do with this matter is found in section 4 of article II of the constitution, which section reads as follows:

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States, or any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in, the general assembly; but this provision shall not extend to township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public, or officers of the militia."

The question that arises under this constitutional provision is as to whether a member of the board of registration holds a lucrative office under the authority of this state, or holds an office under the authority of the United States. It is quite clear that he does not hold a lucrative office under the authority of the state, as he is not acting under and by virtue of any authority which he gets from state laws.

The question which then remains is as to whether a member of the board of registration would be holding an office under the authority of the United States. This makes it necessary for us to ascertain what the meaning of "office" is as interpreted by the courts.

In State ex rel. v. Brennan, 49 O. S. 33, the court, in discussing the question as to the meaning of the term "office," used the following language in the opinion on page 38:

> "It is not important to define with exactness all the characteristics of a public office, but it is safely within bounds to say that where, by virtue of law, a person is clothed, not as an incidental or transient authority, but for such time as denotes duration and continuance, with independent power to control the property of the public, or with public functions to be exercised in the supposed interest of the people, the service to be compensated by a stated yearly salary, and the occupant having a designation or title, the position so created is a public office. And where such duties are wholly performed within the limits of a county, and for the people of that county, the salary to be paid by the disbursing officer of the county, from the funds of the county, the office is a county office, and, as one who is lawfully invested with an office is an officer, the person lawfully filling such place is necessarily a county officer."

In State v. Kendle, 52 O. S. 346, the court was also discussing the question as to the meaning of the term "office," and in the opinion on p. 356 uses the following language:

> "The power of the legislature to provide for the appointment of persons to act as assistants in an office filled by election has not, and cannot well be questioned. It is on this principle that the appointment of deputy clerks, deputy sheriffs, and so forth, are made and recognized, each of whom perform many, and in some cases all, the duties of the office in which he acts as deputy. So as to these jury commissioners: They are appointed by the common pleas judges to assist in the administration of justice, as are master commissioners and court constables. They are but handmaids of the court in the selection of judicious and discreet persons to serve on such juries as are required in the trial of causes, and the presentment of indictments."

State ex rel. Allen v. Mason, etc., 61 O. S. 62, is a case somewhat similar to the one under consideration. In this case a member of the general assembly had been appointed as a clerk in the United States pension office at Columbus, Ohio, for a period not to exceed three months, and it was contended that in view of this appointment he was not eligible to membership in the general assembly, because of the provisions of section 4, article II of the Ohio constitution. But the court held this contention was not well taken and that the position of clerk in the United States pension office is not an office in the true sense of that term.

In the opinion on p. 72 the court says:

"Since the relator performs no duties except such as by law are charged upon his superior, the pension agent, his position is not an office but merely an employment."

In the syllabus the court lays down the following principle of law:

"A clerk in the United States pension agency, serving by appointment for a period not exceeding three months, and compensated with money of the United States appropriated for that purpose by congress, having no duties defined by law nor discretion to act independently of the direction of the pension agent, is not 'holding an office under the authority of the United States' within the meaning of section 4 of article 2 of the constitution of the state which renders persons so holding office ineligible to membership in the general assembly."

In Commissioners of Wood County et al. v. Robt. Pargillis, 10 C. C. 376, the court, in the opinion p. 392, was discussing the matter of public officers, the particular matter under consideration being as to whether the members of a public building committee, appointed to act with the county commissioners, would be considered as officers. In discussing this question the court says:

"While they exercise powers that are exercised by public officers, they do not have that continuity of office which it seems to us is necessary to constitute and make them public officers. They are appointed for a definite purpose and when that purpose is carried out and that duty performed, their rights and duties terminate. * * * They are not a body which is required to continue in office with succession; to hold their offices until their successors are elected and qualified, or to continue on from time to time for the purpose of carrying out the general governmental duties of the county, and a majority of the court think they do not come within the class enumerated in section 1, of article 10 of the constitution."

The courts of other states do not seem to be uniform in their holding as to what constitutes an office or an officer, but the courts of our own state, as illustrated in the cases above cited, are fairly uniform upon the question as to what constitutes an office or an officer.

Possibly Commissioners v. Pargillis, supra, sums up as nearly as any other case the things which go to make up an office or officer. This case was affirmed without report in 53 O. S. 680. So that we can consider this case to be the judgment of the highest court in the state. In this case the court had under consideration the persons holding positions very similar to the positions we have under consideration. In said cause the appointees exercised the same duties in respect to the purpose of their appointment as did the county commissioners with whom they acted; that is, they exercised some of the sovereign powers of the state. But they had no continuity of office. They were appointed merely for a definite and specific purpose. When that purpose was carried out, their rights and duties terminated. They were not a body which was required to continue in office with succession. There was no provision that they should serve until their successors were appointed and qualified. These were propositions with which the court dealt in rendering its opinion, and all these propositions apply to the positions under consideration, just as they did to the positions considered by the court.

Further, the act, by virtue of which the board of registration is appointed, was enacted to take care of an emergency. This fact is shown in the title and throughout the entire act itself. As soon as the emergency ends, the provisions of the act will no longer be needed, nor will the persons appointed to positions thereunder longer hold their office. So that I feel that they are holding their positions merely for some definite and specific purpose, and when this purpose is fulfilled their duties are at an end. Therefore, under the decisions of the courts of our state, they could not be considered as officers in the strict sense of the term.

It might be well for us to note what powers and duties are placed upon the boards of registration by the act of congress itself.

When we examine section 4 of the act above mentioned, we note that the members of the boards of registration have some duties prescribed in the act and exercise a part of the sovereign powers of the government. They have > "jurisdiction to hear and determine, subject to review as hereinafter provided, all questions of exemption under this act, and all questions of or claims for including or discharging individuals or classes of individuals from the selective draft."

While these members do exercise certain functions provided for in the act itself, yet, under the principles set forth in the Ohio cases above cited, I do not believe the members of the boards of registrations would be held by the courts of our state to be officers, and therefore they would not come within the provisions of section 4 of article II of the constitution of Ohio.

As said before, however, in other states there is a great variety of opinion in reference to what the word "office" or "officer" really should include. For this reason it might be well, if you should think best, to accept the resignations of any members of the general assembly who have been appointed members of the boards of registration, and appoint other persons to fill their places. However, as I said above, I am of the opinion that members of the boards of registration are not strictly within the term "officers," and that a person could hold a position on a board of registration and at the same time be a member of the general assembly.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—POWER TO BORROW MONEY TO DEFRAY EXPENSE OF CHILDREN'S HOME.

There is no provision of law by virtue of which county commissioners may borrow money to defray bills already incurred in the running of a children's home and to pay contingent expenses thereafter to be incurred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

HON. G. B. FINDLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 15, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a certain matter therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "The board of commissioners of Lorain county find that the money available for the support and maintenance of the county children's home has been exhausted. A small overdraft exists and numerous additional bills have been contracted. The county commissioners desire to have your opinion upon their legal authority to borrow money for the operation of the home. They desire to make some temporary provision until the next levy is available."

In answer to your communication I will say that I have noted the difficulty in which your county commissioners find themselves placed and therefore have given careful consideration to the matter therein set out in order, if possible, to arrive at some conclusion which will enable them to get relief.

In the first place, I would like to suggest that I do not understand just how your county commissioners have gotten themselves into the difficulty suggested by you, this in view of the provisions of section 5660 G. C., which provides, among other things, that:

> "The commissioners of a county * * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; * * *"

The only exceptions to be found to the provisions of this section are those set forth in section 5661, and none of the exceptions set out in said section cover the expenditure of money by your county commissioners in the way of running and maintaining your children's home. So I say, in view of the provisions of said section 5660, I do not understand how your county commissioners have made an overdraft upon the fund to be used for the county children's home and in addition to this overdraft have numerous additional bills contracted for and outstanding.

But however this may be, the fact remains that your county commissioners are in a difficult situation on account of the fact that said fund has been overdrawn and that numerous additional bills have been contracted and are outstanding. Let us note the provisions of the statutes in reference to the matter of borrowing money by the county commissioners for the purposes indicated by you in your communication.

Section 3078 G. C., which forms a part of the chapter having to do with the matters in reference to children's homes, provides that the county commissioners shall provide for the support of children's homes by means of taxation. Section 3079 G. C. provides that in anticipation of the collection of taxes levied or to be levied, for the purchase of a site and erection of a building, the commissioners may issue notes or bonds of the county. But there is no provision in these two sections for issuing notes or bonds of the county in anticipation of the collection of taxes to pay for the support of the children's home, neither is there any other provision made for borrowing money in the chapter having to do with the matter of children's homes. We must, therefore, look elsewhere for relief, if there is relief to be had.

Section 5656 G. C. provides:

> "* * * The commissioners of a county, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * county is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts. * * *"

My predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, under date of April 17, 1915, in an opinion found on page 477 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, volume 1, held, in placing a construction upon this section, that none of the boards mentioned in said section could use the provisions thereof to fund indebtedness consisting of unpaid bills for contingent expenses. I believe Mr. Turner was correct in his opinion so rendered and therefore concur in the same. Therefore, your county commissioners can get no relief under the provisions of this section.

I have looked over the situation very carefully and am of the opinion that there is no provision made whereby your county commissioners can borrow money to meet the expenses so incurred, neither are there any provisions made whereby they may fund this indebtedness for any length of time, so we must look in another direction for relief.

As stated before, section 3079 G. C. provides that the county commissioners shall levy a tax to provide for the support of the children's home and they are supposed to levy a tax sufficient to take care of the expenses of the home year after year. As there is a levy made for the support of the home, there is a fund created which must be used for this purpose alone. This suggests the only remedy that might assist you in the circumstances suggested in your communication. That remedy is to be found in section 2296 G. C., with which you are no doubt familiar.

Taking the provisions of section 2296 and the provisions of section 2300 together, you may have a remedy, that is, providing all the different funds of your county are not in a depleted condition. Your common pleas court could make an order transferring to the fund for the children's home certain moneys out of some other fund or funds and make an order under the provisions of section 2300 G. C. that the funds out of which the money is to be taken should be reimbursed from moneys that shall hereafter be realized from taxation for children's home fund.

I feel certain that I am making a suggestion herein with which you are already familiar, but it is, in my opinion, the only method that your county commissioners can adopt to relieve the situation under which they find themselves placed.

I might make suggestions as to matters which possibly would assist in the future, such as the exercising of care in receiving children into the children's home, and collecting, from those persons who are financially able and who are charged with the support of children in the home, a fair price for said keeping, etc. But your question has not to do with the future, but with matters which are past.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that there is no provision of law which would authorize a board of county commissioners to borrow money in order to pay debts already incurred in the running of a children's home and to pay contingent expenses in the future, but they might get relief under the provisions of sections 2296 et seq. G. C., provided the condition of the other funds of the county is such as would warrant such a proceeding.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOL DISTRICT—WHEN TRANSFERRED TO ADJOINING DISTRICT —PROPERTY AND INDEBTEDNESS PASS TO NEW DISTRICT—LEVY TO PROVIDE FOR INDEBTEDNESS SHOULD BE MADE ON ALL PROPERTY OF NEW DISTRICT.

1. When an entire school district is transferred to an adjoining school district, the bonded indebtedness of the district transferred becomes the debt of the whole district as it exists after the transfer is made.

2. The board of education of the district as it exists after the transfer is made must provide for all indebtedness by making the levy upon all the property in the district as it exists after the transfer is made.

3. Should the district transferred be the owner and holder of any property at the time the transfer is made, the property so held shall pass to the district as it exists after the transfer is made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

HON. S. L. GREGORY, Prosecuting Attorney, Wilmington, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 16, 1917, was received, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "1. When the whole of a school district has been transferred to an adjoining school district by a county school board pursuant to section 4692 G. C., and there is a bonded indebtedness outstanding against the district so transferred, should the district so transferred pay the whole of such indebtedness?
> "2. If so, should the county school board take such action as is necessary (or any action) to charge the same against the property of the district so transferred?
> "3. If not, should the county school board take such action as is necessary (or any action) to charge such indebtedness against the district as enlarged?

"4. Should there be outstanding bonded indebtedness against such adjoining school district and a small amount of money in the treasury of both, should the county school board make a division of such indebtedness and cash money as provided in said section 4692?"

In the first place, in answering your communication, I desire to call your attention to an opinion rendered by me on March 27, 1917 (No. 146), a copy of which I am enclosing with this opinion. Said opinion rendered on March 27, 1917, disposes of a part of the matter suggested in your communication and it will be well, therefore, for us in the first instance to look to said opinion in order to ascertain to what extent it answers your communication of 16th instant. Said opinion held:

1. That the debt of a school district, transferred to another school district, becomes the debt of the district enlarged and is a charge upon all the property therein located after the transfer is made:

2. That the provision in section 4692 G. C., that:

"The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

does not apply to cases in which the territory of an entire district is transferred to another district, but only to those cases in which a part of the territory of one district is transferred to another district, but the corporate entity of the two districts is maintained.

3. That the property of the district transferred to another district passes to the district as it is enlarged. This would apply to the money in the treasury of the district transferred, as well as to any other property which might be owned by the district transferred.

With these principles, already established, in mind, let us proceed with the further discussion of the matters suggested in your communication. About the only question that remains unanswered is as to what action, if any, the county school board shall take in reference to the indebtedness of the district transferred to another district. It is my opinion that the county board of education takes no action whatever in reference to this matter, but that the board of education of the district to which the other district is transferred, which board becomes the board of education of the district as enlarged, must take the necessary action to provide for the bonded indebtedness of the district as enlarged. This would include the bonded indebtedness of the district transferred, as well as the bonded indebtedness, if any, of the district as it existed before the transfer was made.

With a view of deciding as to what steps the said board of education must take in reference to said bonded indebtedness, let us note the provisions of section 5649-1 G. C., which reads as follows:

"In any taxing district, the taxing authority shall, within the limitations now prescribed by law, levy a tax sufficient to provide for sinking fund and interest purposes for all bonds issued by any political subdivision, which tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof."

The levy provided for in said section would be made by the board of education upon the property of the entire district as it exists after the transfer is made and the provision for the sinking fund and interest, which must be provided for according to the provisions of said section, would be such as would provide a sinking fund to take care of the bonded indebtedness of the whole district, together with interest; that is, the district as it exists after the transfer is made.

With the provisions of this section in mind, let us note those of section 5649-3a G. C. This section reads in part as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday in June, each year, the county commissioners of each county, the council of each municipal corporation, the trustees of each township, each board of education and all other boards or officers authorized by law to levy taxes within the county, except taxes for state purposes, shall submit or cause to be submitted to the county auditor an annual budget, setting forth in itemized form an estimate stating the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year, and for each month thereof. * * *"

From the provisions of this section as quoted, it will be seen that on or before the first Monday in June next, the board of education of the enlarged district should submit to the county auditor a budget setting forth in itemized form an estimate stating the amount of money that will be needed, among other things, for the creation of a sinking fund to take care of the bonds that will mature during the next year, together with interest that will be due upon said bonds.

I believe that the opinion rendered by me on March 27, 1917, copy of which I am herewith enclosing, together with this opinion, will answer the questions which you submit in your communication, which answers would be as follows:

1. When the whole of a school district has been transferred to an adjoining school district by a county board of education, pursuant to section 4692 G. C., the bonded indebtedness outstanding against the district so transferred becomes the indebtedness of the whole district as it exists after the transfer.

2 and 3. The county board of education takes no action whatever in reference to this indebtedness, but it is a matter which must be provided for by the board of education having jurisdiction over the district as it is formed after the transfer is made.

4. Any money or property belonging to the district transferred to another district becomes the property of the whole district as it exists after the transfer is made.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—RIGHT TO PAY TEACHER WHEN ON LEAVE OF ABSENCE BECAUSE OF SICKNESS, ETC.

A board of education has a right to make a rule granting teachers three days' absence on account of the death and burial of members of their immediate family, or one day for more remote relatives, without deduction of pay. The board can pay a substitute during such absence.

A board of education has a right to establish a rule granting teachers the difference between their salaries and that of substitutes for not to exceed forty days in any one school year when they are absent because of personal illness, and when such illness is certified to by a physician in good standing.

A board of education has a right to make a rule permitting teachers to visit other schools for two days a year without deduction of pay provided such visit is in the furtherance of the means of education and not for the personal benefit of the teacher and the board can pay a substitute to teach in the place of such teacher during such absence.

A board of education has a right to grant a teacher three half days to attend teachers' examination, the above being for the sole benefit of the teacher.

A board of education has no right to grant teachers permission to attend an educational convention or conference and cannot pay a substitute in his absence.

A board of education has the right to assign the superintendent, director or teacher to investigate and report upon methods of work, equipment and results obtained in other school systems.

Such assignment can be made with pay and actual traveling expenses and the board can pay a substitute during such absence.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—My opinion is requested by you upon the following statement of facts:

"We would respectfully refer you to opinion of Attorney-General Edward C. Turner, No. 1200, under date of January 24, 1916, and in view of a communication received this day from the clerk of the board of education of the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a copy of a resolution as follows:

" 'In view of the fact that the opinion of the attorney-general, rendered on January 24, 1916, and the opinion of the city solicitor to the Union board on April 8, 1916, have limited the power of the board of education in granting leaves of absence without loss of pay to teachers for school visiting, attendance on educational conventions, and for professional study; and in view of the fact that the board of education and the city solicitor on April 24, 1916, joined in a request to the chairman, state bureau of accounting, Columbus, Ohio, for a full opinion covering the entire subject of the right of the board of education to grant such leaves of absence as are authorized by the rules of the board, which have been in force for many years and which are in accord with the general practice through the state; and since the board is seriously embarrassed in its administration by conforming to these opinions, while it is currently reported that the boards of education in other communities are not so acting; and since the opinion requested by the board and the city solicitor has not been rendered; now, therefore,

" 'BE IT RESOLVED, that the state bureau of accounting be earnestly requested to render the opinion asked for, and be it further

" 'RESOLVED, that the city solicitor be requested to join the board of education in asking for an early decision upon the points raised, and be it further

"'RESOLVED, that in the absence of such an opinion that the city solicitor be requested to examine the entire subject and to render an opinion upon the points raised, to the end that the board may, in so far as it can legally do so, grant such leaves of absence with pay, as shall enable the schools of this city to receive the benefit which comes from the attendance of teachers upon educational gatherings and from visiting the schools of other cities—all of which makes for the professional growth of the individual teacher and for the progress and development of the schools under their instruction.

"'(Signed) SAMUEL ACH.'

"Passed January 22, 1917.

"We are compelled to resubmit for your written opinion the following questions:

"1. Has the board the right, in accordance with regulation 1(a), to grant teachers three days' absence on account of the death and burial of members of their immediate family, or one day for more remote relatives, without deduction of pay? Can the board pay for substitutes during such absence?

"2. Has the board the right, in accordance with regulation 1(b), to grant teachers the difference between their salaries and that of substitutes for not to exceed 40 days in any one school year when they are absent for personal illness, when such illness is certified to by a physician in good standing?

"3. Has the board, in accordance with regulation 20, of its rules under which the board has acted for many years, the right to grant teachers permission to visit other schools for two days a year without deduction of pay? Can the board pay for substitutes during such absence?

"4. Has the board the right, in accordance with regulation 24, to grant teachers pay for three half days when they are absent on account of re-examination for teachers' certificates? Can the board pay for substitutes during such absence?

"5. Has the board the right to grant teachers permission to attend, without deduction of pay, a limited amount of educational conventions and conferences? Can the board pay for substitutes during such absence?

"6. Has the board the right to assign the superintendent, directors, or teachers to investigate and report upon methods of work, equipment and results obtained in other school systems and obtain such other information as is desired for the development or modification of the work and equipment of the schools under charge?

"7. Has the board the right to make such assignments with pay and with actual traveling expenses allowed? Can the board pay for substitutes employed to fill the vacancies during such absences?"

Your seven questions involve in a large measure the authority of a board of education to make rules for the teachers and employes under its control and I shall take it, for purposes of my answer thereto, that said rules were all promulgated, in force and within both the knowledge of the board and the employes prior to the time any contract of employment was entered into, and were, therefore, subject to any change which might be made therein, a part of the several contracts of employment.

General Code section 7690 provide:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint a superintendent of the public schools, truant officers, and janitors and fix their salaries. If deemed essential for the best interests of the schools of the district, under proper rules and regulations, the board may appoint a superintendent of buildings, and such other employes as it deems necessary, and fix their salaries. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity."

General Code section 4750 provides in part:

"The board of education shall make such rules and regulations as it deems necessary for * * * the government of its employes * * *."

Section 7620 provides in part:

"The board of education of a district may * * * make all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within the subdistricts."

So that the rules and regulations of the board must be those which fall within the provisions of one or more of the above quoted sections. That is to say, a board of education being a quasi corporate body, and having only limited authority, can do only those things which are conferred upon it by law and when they take action outside of the law and against the plain provisions of law, such actions are absolutely void. Keeping the above provision, then, in mind and also the provision that within its powers each board of education is allowed a proper discretion, the principle to be followed in the establishment of its rules and regulations can best be determined by a review of a few of the many decisions of our courts along this line.

In Board of Education v. State, 80 O. S. 133, mandamus was asked to compel the board of education to promote a pupil from one grade to another, the board having made a rule which would not permit such promotion. The court said, on page 150:

"It should be borne in mind, as an obvious and controlling fact, that the statute imposes the duty of the regulation and conduct of all public schools upon the boards of education and not upon the courts and interference by the courts in the discharge of those duties should not be lightly entered upon."

In Sewell v. Board of Education, 29 O. S. 89, the action was to recover damages from the board of education for the wrongfully excluding of plaintiff's son from the schools following the rules and regulations of the board of education in reference to the course to be followed in instruction in rhetoric. The court held that the board of education has the entire control and management of the common schools and may make and enforce all necessary rules and regulations for the government of teachers and pupils therein. The law does not direct how or in what manner the rules and regulations, which the board may adopt for the government of the schools under its care and management, shall be enforced, but leaves the whole subject of the making of such rules and their enforcement to the judgment and sound discretion of the board.

In State v. Board of Education, 76 O. S. 297, the board of education made certain rules and regulations to secure the vaccination of the pupils of the schools. A writ of mandamus was asked to compel the board to admit relator's children, who had not complied with such rule, to the public schools. The court held that whether a rule or regulation adopted by the board of education is a reasonable rule or regulation, is to be judged of, in the first instance, by the board of education, and the courts will not interfere unless it is clearly shown that there has been an abuse of discretion.

In Board of Education v. Minor, 23 O. S. 211, the board of education of the city of Cincinnati passed a resolution prohibiting the reading of a portion of the Bible as an opening exercise. The court held that the legislature having placed the management of the public schools under the control of the boards of education, the courts have no rightful authority to interfere by directing what instruction shall be given or what books shall be read therein.

In Board of Education v. Pulse, 7 N. P. page 58, the board of education passed a resolution prohibiting religious instruction and reading of religious books, including the bible, in the schools of the district. Injunction was asked restraining the board from enforcing said rule. The court held that the members of a board of education are charged with the performance of important public duties. They are bound, under the solemn obligations of an oath, "to perform faithfully the duties of the office." In selecting such officers the electors of the various school districts are presumed to exercise judgment and discretion and the members chosen are presumed to understand the local conditions and the interests of the schools committed to their control and to act with intelligence and fairness in the performance of their duties. If such men are not chosen, the fault lies with the electors and the remedy is the ballot. Whether the rule adopted was wise or unwise, reasonable or unreasonable, is not a question for the court to determine and it was not a question for the teacher to consider. The power to determine such matters has been by law committed to the board of education and to such board of education belongs also the responsibility of such rule. If the rule is pernicious in its effect and obnoxious to the public sentiment of the patrons of the school, the remedy is as above mentioned. "It is to be found where are to be found all remedies for bad government, with the people themselves."

In Nessle v. Hum, 1 Ohio N. P. 140, injunction was sought to prevent the board of education from adopting and enforcing a rule requiring the reading of the bible as a part of the opening exercises of the school. The court held that the legislature having placed the management of the public schools under the exclusive control of boards of education, the courts have no rightful authority to interfere by directing what instruction can be given or what books shall be read therein.

In Youmans v. Board of Education, 13 O. C. C., 209, a teacher hired for two years. He served one year and was about to commence his second year when the board attempted to hire another. Injunction was asked, and the court held:

> "The control and management of the schools of this state are given the boards of education. These boards of education cannot be interfered with in any manner by the court unless there is a gross abuse of the discretionary powers given."

Under the circumstances of the case injunction was refused.

In Frederick v. Owens, 35 Cir. Ct. Rep., 552, the plaintiff brought an action in injunction restraining the board of education from enforcing a rule which in effect would prohibit the teachers from joining labor unions. Injunction was granted in the lower court but in reversing said judgment the court of appeals held in part:

> "It is difficult to conceive of anything that would be more certainly productive of confusion in practical application than the proposition that the courts may state to public officers the various grounds upon which they shall not determine against appointing an applicant for a position under the control of such officers. This doctrine, extended to its logical result, necessarily takes from the public officer very much of the authority given him by law to make the selections in question, and to that extent, and without the slightest warrant of law, passes this power over to the courts. We are very clearly of opinion that nothing exists in the statutes giving the courts any such power. We think it would be quite as justifiable for the courts to undertake to regulate all political appointments in the state by prescribing that different political affiliations should not furnish sufficient ground for denying appointments, and then proceed to punish the public officer who violated the order by denying appointments on political grounds.

"The members of the board of education are elected by the people. If the people make mistakes in their selection of men to fill these important positions, the ballot box, and not the courts, is the place to correct these errors."

In State v. McCann, 21 O. S., 198, mandamus was asked against the board of education to compel it to admit the children of plaintiff to a particular school. Said children were colored and the board of education had established a rule that no colored children should attend the school provided for white children. The court held that the board of education had a right to make such rule, and that colored children residing in either of the districts for white children were not, as of right, entitled to admission into the schools for white children.

In Board of Education v. State, 45 O. S., 555, the action was a proceeding in mandamus to compel the board of education to admit colored children into the white schools. The court held that the power to establish and maintain separate schools for colored children was conferred upon boards of education by specific authority of section 4008, which has been repealed, and therefore the board has no authority to provide separate schools and the writ was granted.

In State ex rel. v. Freed, 10 Ohio C. C., 294, the board of education purchased "Kenedy's Mathematical Blocks" for use in the schools. The court held that boards of education are possessed only of such limited powers as are expressly provided by statute, and persons who deal with such boards are held, and presumed to know, the limits within which they can lawfully transact business, and can secure no rights which are enforceable, by a contract, unless the contract is clearly authorized by law, and the purchase was prohibited.

In Watkins v. Hall, 13 O. C. C., 255, the board of education were taking steps to tear down and remove a certain school house. The court held that while a township board of education has exclusive control within its jurisdiction in the selling of a school house site, and of the size and character of the building to be erected, yet where such board, without any valid reason or necessity therefor, is about to expend the public funds in taking down a suitable and satisfactory building on a central and improved lot, and re-erect it at another place in the district, a court of equity may properly enjoin the same, as an abuse of discretion and authority.

In Moss v. Board of Education, 58 O. S., 354, plaintiff brought an action against the school board to prevent the board from erecting a school house upon a site selected by the board. The law specifically prohibited the board from selecting a site and placed the power of such selection in commissioners appointed by the probate judge. Said commissioners selected a site which the board endeavored to change. The court held that where the board of education attempts to abandon the site so selected by the commissioners and attempts to select and purchase another site, and proceeds to erect a school house thereon, such action is unauthorized and void.

In Board of Education v. Best, 52 O. S., 138, the question was as to whether or not it was necessary to call the roll when a teacher was hired and the court held that the clause "upon a motion * * * to employ a * * * teacher * * *, the clerk of the board shall call, publicly, the roll of all the members composing the board and enter on the records required to be kept the names of those voting aye, and the names of those voting no," is a mandatory provision and must be strictly pursued.

In Weir v. Day, 35 O. S., 143, the board of education attempted to lease the school house for a private or select school. The court held that while all public school houses are vested in boards of education in trust for the use of the public or common schools, any appropriation of them to other use is unauthorized and unlawful, and the injunction was granted.

Many other cases might be cited along the above line but these should be sufficient from which conclusion can be drawn that wherever a matter is prohibited by law a board of education has no power to act in relation to the matter so prohibited and a board of education has only such power as is specifically granted or which may be inferred in order to carry into effect those powers which are specifically granted, and that the complete management and control of the public schools of the state are under the said boards of education and with reference to those matters within their control their actions cannot be interfered with unless the same are grossly abused.

So that, answering your several questions, I am of the opinion:

First. If the board of education establishes a rule or regulation that teachers may be granted three days absence on account of the death and burial of members of their immediate family, or one day for more remote relatives, without deduction of pay, and the board finds that such a rule is necessary for the proper prosperity of the schools, the discretion of such board cannot be interfered with and the board may pay a substitute during such absence.

Second. So likewise, if the board establishes a rule or regulation to grant teachers the difference between their salaries and that of substitutes, for not to exceed forty days in any one school year, when they are absent from personal illness, and such illness is certified to by a physician in good standing, such a rule or regulation would ordinarily be within the power of the board and be valid, but both the answer to this No. 2 question and the answer to No. 1, depend entirely upon the good faith of the board to establish such rule and in applying the same. On April 12, 1912, my predecessor, Hon. T. S. Hogan, in opinion No. 278, held that a teacher who was kept from school on account of illness was rightfully paid his salary which became due during said illness. "A matter of this kind seems to be peculiarly within the legislative control of the board of education."

Third. A rule of the board that teachers are granted permission to visit other schools for two days in a year without deduction of pay would seem to be a reasonable rule, provided the board finds that such visits are made so that the information gathered may be imparted to the pupils upon the return of such teachers from such visits, and that the same is in the furtherance of the means of education, and, following the answer to your first question, the board can pay substitutes for such teachers during such absence.

Fourth. A rule in accordance with your regulation number 24 to grant teachers pay for three half days when they are absent on account of re-examination for teachers' certificates and the paying of substitutes during such absence, is under the above reasoning within the discretion of the board and if it is found that the same is for the proper prosperity of the schools, would be held to be legal.

Fifth. Has the board the right to grant teachers permission to attend, without deduction of pay, a limited amount of educational conventions and conferences? And can the board pay for substitutes during such absence? It has been held by this department that boards of education have no authority to pay expenses of teachers in attendance at conventions and the same reasoning would apply to the granting of pay and hiring of substitutes for teachers while attending conventions and conferences. It surely cannot be said that a teacher can be hired for one thing, that is, to teach, and then be paid for another, that is, to attend conventions, and I therefore advise you that a board of education has no right to grant teachers permission to attend an educational convention or conference, without deduction of pay, and have no right to pay substitutes for such teachers during such absence.

Sixth and Seventh. Your questions No. 6 and No. 7 must be answered together. Whatever the board finds is necessary for the proper education of the youth of the schools and not prohibited by law, and coming within the discretionary rules laid down in the cases above mentioned, may be ordered by the board, and if the board finds that for the proper education of the school youth it would be necessary to assign a superintendent, director or teacher to investigate the methods of work, equipment and results obtained by a certain school system, and report the results of such investigation, it would seem as though the same might be ordered by the board.

Such employment would be aside from the usual school employment and only under the exigencies of each particular case. If expenses are allowed or substitutes paid, the funds therefor would come from the contingent fund of such school district.

It must be understood, however, that each particular case, in a large measure, stands or falls upon its own facts. What might be an abuse of discretion in one case with local conditions and surroundings changed might not be considered such abuse. The only safe rule is to permit expenditures for only those things which are specifically permitted under our laws.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN MEDINA COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 26, 1917, with which you enclose certain final resolutions in reference to the improvement and construction of highways, and ask my approval of the same. The final resolutions are for the following:

"Adams county—Section 'C-2' West Union-Sinking Springs road, I. C. H. No. 124.

"Athens county—Section 'K-1' Logan-Athens road, I. C. H. No. 155.

"Brown county—Section 'b' Ripley-Hillsboro road, I. C. H. No. 177.

"Coshocton county—Section 'D' New Comerstown-Coshocton road, I. C. H. No. 407.

"Fulton county—Section 'L' Toledo-Wauseon road, I. C. H. No. 20. Type 'B.'

"Fulton county—Section 'L' Toledo-Wauseon road, I. C. H. No. 20. Type 'A.'

"Gallia county—Section 'F-1' Gallipolis-Jackson road, petition No. 2370, I. C. H. No. 399.

"Knox county—Section 'K' Mt. Vernon-Coshocton road, I. C. H. No. 339.

"Knox county—Section 'K-2' Mt. Vernon-Coshocton road, I. C. H. No. 339.

"Lorain county—Section 'P' Oberlin-Norwalk road, petition No. 2599, I. C. H. 290. Type 'A.'

"Lorain county—Section 'P' Oberlin-Norwalk road, petition No. 2599, I. C. H. No. 290. Type 'B.'

"Lorain county—Section 'R' Oberlin-Elyria road, petition No. 2598, I. C. H. No. 313.

"Morgan county—Section 'P' McConnelsville-Marietta road, I. C. H. No. 393.

"Medina county—Section 'L-2' Barberton-Greenwich road, I. C. H. No. 97.

"Scioto county—Section 'A-1' Portsmouth-Lucasville road, I. C. H. No. 406. Type 'A.'

"Scioto county—Section 'A-1' Portsmouth Lucasville road, I. C. H. No. 406. Type 'C.'

"Scioto county—Section 'A-1' Portsmouth-Lucasville road, I. C. H. No. 406. Type 'D.'

"Scioto county—Section 'A-1' Portsmouth-Lucasville road, I. C. H. No. 406. Type 'B.'

"Shelby county—Section 'B-1' Piqua-St. Marys road, I. C. H. No. 170 (also duplicate).

"Vinton county—Section 'G' McArthur-Athens road, petition No. 3039, I. C. H. No. 160.

"Washington county—Section 'O' Marietta-McConnelsville road, petition No. 3058, I. C. H. No. 393.

"Scioto county—Section 'A-1' Portsmouth-Lucasville road, I. C. H. No. 406. Type 'E.'

I have examined these final resolutions carefully and find them, with one exception, regular in form and legal, and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

The final resolution of the commissioners of Medina county, having to do with the improvement of I. C. H. No. 97, is defective in a number of respects; first, the date given for the preliminary application is December 13, 1917. This in and of itself undoubtedly not be vital; but the clerk of the board of commissioners certifies that the resolution was adopted on the 13th day of December, 1916, while the resolution itself shows that it was adopted on the 23rd day of May, 1917. This it seems to me ought to be corrected and I am returning said final resolution for correction.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF ALLEN COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE: Bonds of Allen county, Ohio, in the sum of $25,000, for the improvement of Allentown road, commencing at the west corporation line of the city of Lima, Ohio, and extending west in German township to the intersection of the Eastown road in German township, said county."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the county commissioners of Allen county, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue, and find said proceedings to be in substantial conformity to the provisions of the General Code relating to improvements of this kind.

I am of the opinion that bonds properly prepared according to the bond form submitted will, when signed by the proper officers of Allen county, constitute valid and binding legal obligations of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PRINTING COMMISSION—MAY LET CONTRACTS FOR PRINTING TO PERSONS, FIRMS OR CORPORATIONS REGARDLESS OF WHETHER PLACE OF BUSINESS WITHIN STATE OR NOT.

There is no provision of law requiring the printing commission, in receiving bids for printing maps, under the appropriation by the 80th general assembly, to restrict the bidders to persons, firms or corporations, residing or located in the state of Ohio. They may contract with any one, to the best advantage, without regard to the residence or place of business of such contractor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1917.

The Printing Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 15th you addressed the following inquiry to this department:

"I have been directed by the printing commission to ask for your opinion as to their authority to purchase a railroad map of the state of Ohio, on competitive bids from a 'firm not located in the state of Ohio.'

"An opinion at your earliest convenience will be appreciated by the commission."

Let it be assumed that what you desire is to contract for printing the maps in question rather than purchasing them in the market from some one having them already on hand; also that you mean to inquire whether bids may be received from firms or parties located outside the state.

You are advised that maps do not come within the description of any of the five classes mentioned in section 754 G. C. and that the legislature itself so recognized by the terms of section 786, which is as follows:

> "All printing and binding for the state not authorized by the provisions of this chapter, except maps, shall be subject to the provisions thereof so far as practical, and whether provided for by law or resolution of the general assembly the commissioners of public printing shall advertise for proposals and let contracts therefor as herein provided."

This section goes so far as to except maps from all the regulations of the chapter. The only other statutory enactment bearing on the subject is the item in the appropriation bill by the 80th general assembly, and is found in 106 Ohio Laws, page 715, and included in the list of appropriations for your committee the following:

> "F-9 General Plant
> Printing railroad maps.....$9,000.00."

> "General Plant includes things not readily classified under other subheads:" (Section 5, page 826, 106 Ohio Laws).

Competitive bidding is provided for in section 6, on the same page, as follows:

> "The monies appropriated in sections 2 and 3 of this act shall be drawn upon a requisition or voucher presented to the auditor, approved by the head of the department or by the trustees of an institution or by the members of a board of commission, or by an officer or employe of such department, institution, board or commission, specially designated by resolution or order to approve and present such requisition or voucher, a copy of which resolution or order shall be filed with the auditor of state. Such requisitions or vouchers shall set forth in itemized form and specify the classification of the service rendered, material furnished, or expenses incurred, and the date of purchase or time of service, and show that competitive bids were secured unless otherwise provided by law; or unless in the judgment of the board provided in section 4 herein, it is impracticable because of the peculiar nature or location of the work to be done, in which case the above mentioned board may in writing authorize the department affected to proceed to do the work, or that it was an emergency requiring purchase; * * *."

No restriction is found in the statutes confining the letting of this contract to bidders located in Ohio. You are therefore advised that you have full power to make the best contract on behalf of the state that you may be able to secure by receiving bids without regard to the residence or location of the bidder.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—MAY APPOINT EXPERT ASSISTANTS IN CERTAIN CASES.

Expert assistants to the county auditor can be appointed and compensated in the manner provided for by section 5548, General Code, as amended in senate bill 177, only in connection with the assessment by the county auditor of real property in particular tax assessment district or districts when such assessment is ordered by the board of county commissioners or petitioned for by the requisite number of freeholders therein. Said section confers no authority either for the appointment or compensation of expert assistants to the county auditor in the matter of making additions to the tax values of particular parcels of real estate by reason of new buildings or improvements thereon and in assessing allotments under the provisions of sections 5576, 5577, 5568 and 5604 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your favor of May 22, 1917, in which you ask the opinion of this department as follows:

> "In counties where it has been decided to have no reappraisement of real estate, either general or in local taxing districts, may the county auditor employ expert assistants under the provisions of section 5548, as amended in amended senate bill No. 177, or under any other section of law, to value new buildings or new allotments? If so, how are such experts to be paid?
> "In counties where a local district or districts are to be reappraised can experts be employed to value new buildings or new allotments outside of the limits of such district or districts?"

Under section 5548 General Code, as amended in senate bill 177, passed March 21, 1917, and which went into effect on the approval of the governor the same date, each county is made the unit for assessing real estate for taxation purposes, and the county auditor, in addition to his other duties, is the assessor of all real estate in his county for purposes of taxation, other than that of public utilities assessed by the tax commission of Ohio. By this section it is provided that the county auditor, if he ascertains that the real property in any tax assessment district or subdivision is assessed for taxation at its true value in money, shall, with the approval of the board of county commissioners evidenced by order of such board, enter such valuation of real property in such tax assessment district or subdivision upon the tax list and duplicate for the current year.

By this section it is further provided, however, that if by the order of the board of county commissioners it is determined that the real estate in any such tax assessment district or subdivision is not on the duplicate at its true value in money, or if an assessment of the real property in such assessment district be petitioned for by not less than twenty-five freeholders in such subdivision, the county auditor shall proceed to assess such real estate in such subdivision or subdivisions.

With respect to the assessment to be so made this section further provides as follows:

> "The county auditor shall cause to be made the necessary abstracts from books of his office, containing such description of real estate in such subdivisions, together with such plat books and lists of transfers of title to land as the county auditor deems necessary in the performance of his duties in valuing such property for taxation. Such abstracts, plat books and lists, shall be in such form and detail as the tax commission of Ohio may prescribe. The county auditor is empowered to appoint and employ such expert assistants and clerks, or other employes, as he may deem necessary to the performance of his duties as such assessor; the amount to be expended in the payment of their compensation to be fixed and determined by the county commissioners. If, in the opinion of the county auditor, the board of county commissioners shall fail to provide a sufficient amount for their compensation, he may make application to any judge of the common pleas court of his county for an additional allowance, and the additional amount of compensation, allowed by such court, if any, shall be duly certified to the board of county commissioners and the same shall be final. The salaries and compensation of such employes shall be paid, upon the warrant of the auditor, out of the general fund of the county. Such experts and other employes, in addition to their other duties, shall perform such services as the county auditor may direct, in ascertaining such facts, descriptions, location, character, dimensions of buildings and improvements, and such other circumstances reflecting upon the value of such real estate, as will aid the county auditor in fixing its true value in money. Said county auditor may also, if he deems it necessary or advisable, summon and examine any person under oath in respect to any matter pertaining to the value of any real property within the county. If, upon the taking effect of this act there are not sufficient funds in the treasury of any county to provide for the requirements of this section for the year 1917, the county commissioners may borrow the amount so required, and issue certificates of indebtedness therefor, payable not later than three years from the date thereof, together with interest thereon, payable semi-annually, at a rate not in excess of six per cent. per annum."

The statutory authority for additions to the taxable value of real property by reason of new structures or improvements thereon and for the assessment of allotments is granted by the provisions of sections 5576, 5577, 5568 and 5604 General Code as amended in said senate bill 177.

Section 5576 General Code provides that if the county auditor ascertains that a mistake has been made in the value of an improvement or betterment of real property, or that the true value of such improvement or betterment has been omitted, he shall return the correct value thereof, having first given notice to the owner or agent thereof of his intention so to do; while section 5577 General Code provides, with respect to the question at hand, that additions made by the county auditor in conformity to the provisions of section 5576 shall be listed on the grand duplicate of the county and placed in the hands of the county treasurer for collection.

With respect to the assessment of allotments section 5568 General Code provides that when any person lays out a village or city, or any addition thereto, or any subdivision of any lot or tract of land, before the plat thereof is recorded, he shall present such plat to the county auditor, who shall assess and return the true valuation of each lot or parcel of land described in such plat in like manner as new structures are valued and that thereupon such lots or parcels shall be entered on the tax list in lieu of the land included therein.

Section 5604 General Code provides that when the county board of revision provided for in the act of which the sections above noted are a part, discovers or has its attention called to the fact that in a current year, or in any year during the five years next preceding, any taxable land, building, structure or improvement has escaped taxation, or has been listed for taxation at less than its true value in money, the board may investigate the same and report all facts and information in its possession to the county auditor, who is required to make such correction as he is authorized and required by law to make in other cases in which real and personal property has escaped taxation or has been improperly listed or valued for taxation.

In opinion No. 227, addressed to the tax commission of Ohio, under date of May 1, 1917, this department, among other things, held that the fact that the real property in a particular tax assessment district or subdivision was by action of the county auditor and the board of county commissioners carried into the current tax list at the existing duplicate valuation under authority of said section 5548 General Code does not prevent the county auditor from making additions to the taxable value of particular parcels of real property in such tax assessment district or subdivision under the authority of said sections 5576, 5577 and 5604, above noted.

Your first question is whether or not, under the provisions of section 5548 General Code, or other provision of law, the county auditor may employ expert assistants in the matter of making additions to the taxable value of particular parcels of real estate by reason of new structures or improvements thereon, and in assessing allotments, where no assessment of the real property in the tax assessment district or subdivision wherein said parcel is located, is made under the provisions of section 5548, General Code.

I am of the opinion that section 5548 General Code furnishes no authority for the employment by the county auditor of expert assistants other than in the particular case and for the particular purpose therein provided for, viz.: where the real property in subdivisions of the county is assessed by the county auditor under order of the county commissioners or on petition of freeholders therein; and that the provisions of said section authorizing the employment of expert assistants and prescribing the manner in which their compensation shall be paid have no application to cases other than those therein contemplated, to wit, where real property in tax assessment districts or subdivisions of the county is assessed by the county auditor on order of the county commissioners or on petition. In making the assessment of the real property of tax assessment districts or subdivisions of the county on order of the board of county commissioners or on petition of freeholders in such districts or subdivisions, the county auditor acts in his distinct capacity as assessor for all the real estate in his county; and the expert assistants, clerks and other employes that he is authorized to appoint under section 5548 General Code are such as the county auditor may deem necessary to the performance of his duties as such assessor.

The sections of the General Code above noted, applying specifically to the authority and duty of the county auditor to make additions to the taxable values of particular parcels of real estate by reason of new structures or improvements thereon and to assess allotments, make no provision for assistants, expert or otherwise, to the county auditor with respect to such duties. The duties which the county auditor performs under these sections are performed in his capacity as county auditor, and not as assessor of real property in the county.

Under sections 2563 and 2981 General Code the county auditor has authority to appoint such deputies, assistants and clerks as may be necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of his office, and the number of the deputies, assistants and clerks that may be employed by him, and the compensation he is authorized to pay them, are limited only by the amount fixed by the county commissioners under the provisions of section 2980 General Code, as the amount to be expended by the county auditor out of the fee fund of his office for the compensation of such deputies, assistants or clerks, or by the additional allowance or allowances which may be made for such purposes by a judge of the common pleas court upon application of the county auditor made therefor.

In the case you suppose, therefore, where the services of expert assistants are required only for the purpose of assisting the auditor in making additions to the taxable value of particular parcels of real estate by reason of new structures or improvement thereon, or in assessing allotments, I am of the opinion that the only authority for the employment of such assistants is that found in the general provisions of section 2563 and 2981 General Code, and such assistants should be paid out of the county auditor's fee fund; and that if the allowance made by the county commissioners under section 2980 G. C. for the payment of deputies, assistants or clerks is not sufficient to meet the compensation of such expert assistants, application for an increased allowance should be made to a judge of the common pleas court in the manner prescribed by section 2980-1 G. C.

As to your second question, I am of the opinion that expert assistants may be appointed and compensated in the manner provided by section 5548 General Code only in respect to services rendered by such expert assistants in the assessments of real property in tax assessment districts or subdivisions, the assessment of the real property in which has been ordered or petitioned for in the manner designated in said section 5548 General Code. Expert assistants appointed in such cases by the county auditor under the authority of section 5548 General Code may be retained by the county auditor to assist him in making proper additions to the tax values of parcels of real estate in other tax assessment districts or subdivisions on account of new structures or allotments, where no assessment under section 5548 General Code is to be made, but in such case such assistants when so retained should be considered as assistants such as the auditor is authorized to appoint under sections 2563 and 2981 General Code and they should be paid out of the auditor's fee fund, and not otherwise.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATIONS—UNABLE TO FILE REPORT REQUIRED BY SECTIONS 5495, 5496, AND 5497, G. C., UNTIL CERTIFICATE THAT 10% OF CAPITAL STOCK HAS BEEN SUBSCRIBED AND DIRECTORS ELECTED—DATE OF INCORPORATION IS DATE ON WHICH ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION ARE FILED WITH SECRETARY OF STATE.

For want of ability to do so, a corporation organized under the laws of this state is not required to file the report provided for in sections 5495, 5496 and 5497 General Code, until it has filed its certificate that ten per cent. of the capital stock has been subscribed and until directors of the corporation are elected.

Within the meaning of section 5519 G. C., the "date of incorporation" is the date upon which articles of incorporation are filed in the office of the secretary of state, and after filing the certificate that ten per cent. of the capital stock has been subscribed and the directors elected, such corporation is required to file its first annual report in the month of May following the expiration of six months from the date of the filing of its articles of incorporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—As previously acknowledged, I have your favor of March 2, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "If a domestic corporation for profit has filed articles of incorporation, but has not filed a certificate of subscription to ten per cent. of its capital stock, as provided by section 8633, is such corporation liable for the report under section 5495 and for franchise tax?

"What is the 'date of incorporation,' within the meaning of section 5519?

"Your attention is respectfully directed to A. G. R. 1912, volume I, page 530, and 1915, volume II page 1196."

The second of the two opinions of this department referred to in your communication was one by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, addressed to you under date of July 3, 1915, in which he discusses fully the questions here submitted by you and arrives at the conclusion that a corporation is not required to file a report under section 5495 General Code until it has filed a certificate that ten per cent. of its capital stock has been subscribed and the directors of the corporation have been elected, and that within the meaning of section 5519 General Code the date of the incorporation is the date upon which the certificate is filed in the office of the secretary of state showing that ten per cent. of the capital stock of the corporation has been subscribed.

It will be sufficient for me to say in this opinion, after a careful consideration of the questions presented, that I am in full accord with both the reasoning and the conclusion reached by Mr. Turner with respect to the first question presented in your communication.

In this connection I note that the earlier decisions considered by Mr. Turner in support of his conclusion that a corporation is not complete when the articles of incorporation are filed have been followed by the supreme court in the case of Cemetery Association v. Traction Company, 93 O. S. 161, 168. In this case, the court speaking of the provisions of sections 8632 to 8635, inclusive, General Code, which provide that at the time of making subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation ten per cent. on each share subscribed for shall be payable, and that when ten per cent. of the capital is so subscribed the subscribers to the articles of incorporation, or a majority of them, shall so certify in writing to the secretary of state, after which directors of the corporation shall be chosen, says:

"The statutory requirements provided by section 8632 et seq. General Code, for the creation of a corporation are mandatory and must be complied with before the corporation can be in existence."

In its opinion in this case the court says:

"The corporation statutes of Ohio differ from those of many states in reference to the creation of a corporation. Section 8629 General Code, provides that a certified copy of the articles of incorporation shall be prima facie evidence of the existence of the corporation therein named, but the mere filing of the articles in due form does not create the corporation. This is the distinct holding in State ex rel. v. Insurance Co., 49 Ohio St. 440, where it is held: 'The making and filing, for the purpose of profit, of articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state, do not make an incorporated company; such articles are simply authority to do so. No company exists within the meaning of the statute, until the requisite stock has been subscribed and paid in, and the directors chosen."

I am aware that the court in this case, and likewise in the earlier cases cited by Mr. Turner, was looking at the question from a different angle from that at which we are required to view the question in its application to the particular inquiry made by you, and that the franchise tax imposed by section 5495 et seq. General Code is a tax upon the right to be a corporation rather than upon any user that may be made of such franchise by the corporation; nevertheless I am convinced that the only practical solution of the question made by you, if we are to give effect to the provisions of the statute specifying the kind and nature of the report required of corporations, is that reached by Mr. Turner, and for these reasons I agree with his opinion on your first question, although it was a reversal of a former opinion of his predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on the same question.

With respect to your second question I note the provisions of section 5519 General Code as follows:

> "A corporation shall not be required to file its first annual report under sections one hundred and six to one hundred and fifteen (G. C. section 5495 to section 5504) inclusive, of this act, until the proper month, hereinbefore provided, for the filing of such report, next following the expiration of six months from the date of its incorporation or admission to do business in this state."

I am convinced that the words "date of its incorporation," as found in this section, refer to the date of the filing of the articles of incorporation with the secretary of state; and although such corporation does not have, on the filing of its articles of incorporation, the organization necessary to enable it to file the report provided for in sections 5495, 5496 and 5497 General Code, and will not have until it files its certificates that ten per cent. of its capital stock has been subscribed and directors have been chosen, nevertheless upon the filing of such certificate and election of directors the first annual report which said corporation is required to file is that required to be filed in the month of May following the expiration of six months from the date of the filing of its articles of incorporation, if the certificate of stock subscription has been filed and directors elected in the meantime.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SHERIFF—WHEN APPOINTED RECEIVER—IN AID OF EXECUTION IS APPOINTED IN OFFICIAL CAPACITY—IN PARTITION PROCEEDINGS IN PERSONAL CAPACITY.

1. If the sheriff of a county is appointed receiver in aid of execution, he is appointed not as an individual but as sheriff and compensation paid to him for his services as such receiver must be paid into the sheriff's fee fund.

2. When a sheriff is appointed receiver in partition proceedings, he is appointed not as sheriff but as an individual and the fees allowed him by the court may be retained by him personally.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

HON. JOHN C. HOVER, Judge Court of Common Pleas, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 14, 1917, as follows:

> "I wish to obtain your opinion as to the compensation for the sheriff when acting as a receiver.
> "Section 11952 provides, 'in addition to his actual disbursement, the receiver shall be entitled to such commissions as the court allows, not exceeding the sum allowed to executors or administrators, as well as reasonable counsel fees for services rendered him.'

"Section 11782 provides: 'The judge, by order, may appoint the sheriff of the proper county or other suitable person a receiver of the property of the judgment debtor. He also by order may forbid transfer or other disposition of or interference with the property of the judgment debtor, not exempt by law.'

"Section 11783 provides: 'If a sheriff be appointed receiver, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond as such receiver. If another person be appointed, he must take an oath and give bond as in other cases.'

"Section 11787 provides: 'The judge shall allow to clerks, sheriffs, referees, receivers and witnesses such compensation as is allowed for like services in other cases to be taxed as costs in the case, and by order shall enforce the collection from such party or parties as ought to pay them.'

"The question is this: when the sheriff is appointed receiver, in properties where there is partition pending, or where there is a sale pending on execution and the court makes an allowance to cover expenses and compensation, is the compensation the sheriff's personal pay, or does it go into the fee fund to be turned into the treasury with other fees?

"This does not seem to be any part of his official duties, but being altogether outside of the duties imposed upon him by statute. Such compensation has always been turned in to the county treasury in this county, but I am not certain that it should be so."

Sections 11782, 11783, 11787 and 11952 General Code provide:

"Section 11782. The judge by order, may appoint the sheriff of the proper county, or other suitable person, a receiver of the property of the judgment debtor. He also, by order, may forbid a transfer, or other disposition of, or interference with, the property of the judgment debtor not exempt by law.

"Section 11783. If the sheriff be appointed receiver, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond as such receiver. If another person be appointed, he must take an oath and give a bond as in other cases.

"Section 11787. The judge shall allow to clerks, sheriffs, referees, receivers, and witnesses, such compensation as is allowed for like services in other cases, to be taxed as costs in the case, and by order, shall enforce their collection from such party or parties as ought to pay them.

"Section 11952. In addition to his actual disbursements, the receiver shall be entitled to such commissions as the court allows not exceeding the sum allowed to executors or administrators, as well as reasonable counsel fees for services rendered him."

On February 21, 1910, one of my predecessors, Hon. U. G. Denman, rendered an opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, in which it is held that the sheriff must pay fees and compensation into the county treasury in cases in which he is appointed receiver, trustee or master commissioner.

Mr. Denman, in considering this question, said:

"Section 5498 Revised Statutes which regulates the matter of costs in proceedings in aid of execution, provides that,

" 'The judge shall allow to clerks, sheriffs, referees, receivers and witnesses, such compensation as is allowed for like services in other cases to be taxed as costs in cases * * * .'

"Section 5485 provides that:

" 'If the sheriff be appointed receiver, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond as such receiver * * * *.'

"These two sections indicate to me that the sheriff when appointed receiver in proceedings in aid of execution, acts in his official capacity, and that the fees taxed in his name should be paid into the fee fund of his office, and not retained by him for his own personal use."

On April 30, 1915, my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, in an opinion found in the attorney-general's Opinions for 1915, page 601, held:

"Fees paid to sheriff while making a sale as master commissioner are official and payable into the fee fund under section 11692 G. C."

In this opinion Mr. Turner said:

"Under the provisions of section 11691 of the General Code, when there exists some special reason that the sale of real estate shall not be made by the sheriff of the county where the decree or order was made, the court shall make and issue an order to a master commissioner for the sale of such real estate."

"Section 11692 of the General Code provides that 'a sheriff may act as a master commissioner,' and 'on notice and for a reasonable compensation to be paid by the master out of his fee, he shall attend and make the sale for the master, who, by reason of sickness, is unable to attend.'

"We have here the anamalous situation of the master commissioner's being appointed only when the sheriff, for some special reason deemed sufficient by the court, is disqualified to make the sale; and upon the master commissioner's being unable to attend by reason of sickness the statute directs said sheriff so disqualified in the first instance to attend and make the sale for the master. Such is the provision of the statute. The sheriff makes the sale as sheriff, hence the 'reasonable compensation to be paid him' comes to him in his official capacity as a county officer. * * * It therefore follows that this compensation so earned by the sheriff is payable into the sheriff's fee fund."

Viewing section 11782 General Code in the light of these opinions, and with the provision of section 11783 in mind, to the effect that if the sheriff be appointed receiver he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond as such receiver, it seems clear that when a sheriff is appointed receiver in aid of execution, he is appointed not as an individual, but as sheriff and that the compensation paid him is to go to the fee fund and not be retained by him personally.

Your inquiry also has reference to fees paid the sheriff as a receiver in partition proceedings.

I am aware of no statute making special provision for the appointment of a receiver in partition proceedings and if one is appointed it must be under the general authority of the statute on this subject. Neither am I aware of any special statute authorizing the appointment of a sheriff as receiver in such cases, and if a sheriff is appointed, it follows that it must be as an individual and not as sheriff.

In the opinion of Mr. Turner, above referred to, he also held that when the suitable person appointed to make a sale of real estate under section 11927 G. C., is the sheriff of the county, the fee received by such person is personal and not payable into the sheriff's fee fund.

In that opinion Mr. Turner said:

"As to your second inquiry, section 11927 and other sections of the same chapter of the General Code, in pari materia therewith, prescribe the method for the sale of entailed and other estates. If, upon the hearing provided for in said sections, the application of the petitioner is granted, 'the court shall direct a sale to be made, the manner thereof, and appoint some suitable person or persons to make it.'

"Now, if under this authority the court appoints as such 'suitable person or persons' the individual or individuals who are serving as sheriff or other county officers, the compensation allowed for the making of such sale will be payable to such person or persons as individuals and not in their official capacities. Therefore, such compensation is the property of the person or persons making the sale, and is not subject to be paid into the fee fund provided for in said section 2977 of the General Code."

I agree with this reasoning and by the same process conclude that in partition cases the sheriff is not appointed as sheriff, but as an individual, and that the fees allowed him may be retained by him personally.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX ASSESSOR—NOT ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION—FOR OATH ADMINISTERED TO RESIDENT OF ANOTHER COUNTY.

An assessor or assistant assessor, who has administered an oath to a tax return of resident of neighboring county, not entitled to compensation therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of May 11, 1917, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"Under the provisions of section 5366 of senate bill No. 177, the new taxation law—

"'* * * The person making such return for taxation shall subscribe and make oath to the correctness of all matters contained therein, and such oath may be administered by any assessor, assistant assessor, county auditor, deputy county auditor, mayor, justice of the peace, township clerk or notary public, after which the same shall be delivered in person or by mail to the county auditor, on or before the first day of May * * *.'

"QUERY: May any of the assessors or assistant assessors mentioned above, residents and officials of a given county, be paid for administering oaths to tax returns of residents of a neighboring county appearing before them for said purpose, and which county pays the assessor for such services under such circumstances, if they are entitled to pay for such services?

"It has come to the attention of this bureau that since the new tax law went into effect, people of one county, living near a county line, would go over into the next county to find a convenient official to swear them to their returns."

The act referred to in your communication is an act passed March 21, 1917, entitled "An emergency bill to provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation, and to amend sections 2583, 2593, * * *." Section 1 of this act provided that certain sections of the General Code therein enumerated should be amended to read as therein set out. Section 5366 G. C., as amended in such act, reads:

"In order to facilitate the listing of personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, in the subdivisions mentioned in section 3349 of the General Code, each person required by law to list the same shall make a return thereof under oath to the county auditor on the second Monday in April, or within fifteen days thereafter, of any year, the same to be made on the blanks furnished, by order of the state tax commission for such purpose, which the auditor shall have supplied at his office for use of persons required to list such property of any character. The county auditor may mail such blanks prior to the second Monday in April to the persons required to list such property, or may place listing blanks at convenient places in each taxing subdivision, and give notice thereof in one newspaper of general circulation in the county. Each person required by law shall correctly list all such property on such blanks giving the true value thereof in money, and answer all questions correctly, and give all information, asked and required by the printed forms contained on such blanks. The person making such return for taxation shall subscribe and make oath to the correctness of all matters contained therein, and such oath may be administered by any assessor, assistant assessor, county auditor, deputy county auditor, mayor, justice of the peace, township clerk or notary public, after which the same shall be delivered in person or by mail to the county auditor, on or before the first day of May. Any person required by law to list such property for taxation, who fails or neglects to file with the county auditor, as required by this act, a true list and valuation of his property, shall not be entitled to any exemption as provided by section 5360 of the General Code. The county auditor shall examine such returns and after giving notice to the person making oath thereto, may make corrections thereof and may go over the same together with the assessor of the same taxing subdivision and if they believe any property is omitted from any returns, or that the value is incorrect, the assessor shall call upon the person listing such property and upon actual view list and assess such property at its true value in money. The county auditor shall deliver to the assessors of the respective subdivisions at the time of their meeting for instructions, a list of all persons and property so returned for taxation, and may deliver the original returns to such assessor for his use, and such assessor shall inspect the returns made and cause to be listed and returned for taxation as provided in this act, all such property not at that time listed and returned to the county auditor. No assessor or assistant assessor shall be paid any per diem salary for administering an oath as herein provided where returns are being made to the county auditor, but they shall administer all oaths to persons making returns as herein provided to the county auditor, without charge to such person, but shall be paid the sum of ten cents for each person so sworn to his return prior to May first of any year, on the warrant of the county auditor, at the time of payment of his per diem services. Provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to public utilities, banks and bankers, or corporations, the listing and return of the property of which is otherwise provided by law."

Section 5586 G. C. reads:

"Each assessor, assistant assessor and member or chief clerk of a county board of revision, shall have power to administer oaths."

Section 5368 G. C. provides:

"At the direction of the county auditor, the assessor shall examine the lists returned under the provisions of section 5366 of the General Code, and ascertain what property, if any, is omitted therefrom, and what persons, if any, have failed to make returns; and it shall be his duty to list and return at its true value in money, all the personal property required to be listed by persons in his subdivision which has not then been returned. The return of any property which has been improperly valued by the person listing, shall likewise be corrected by the assessor, and such property listed by him at its true value. He shall return all lists taken by him or his assistant to the county auditor, on or before the first Monday in June."

Section 5369 G. C. provides:

"Each person required to list property for taxation shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation that all the statements in such list are true, and that such list contains a full disclosure of all property required by law to be listed for taxation, and the true value in money of all such property; and when any person required by law to list and make return of property to the county auditor, shall wilfully fail or refuse to make such list or return within the time fixed by law, or shall refuse to take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to such list or return, or shall wilfully omit to make a full and complete list and return of taxable property, or shall wilfully fail to give the true value of any property in such list or return, or shall wilfully fail or refuse to answer all questions contained in the blanks for listing such property, the county auditor shall cause all such property to be listed and assessed and shall add to the amount thereof the penalty provided in section 5398 of the General Code; and in case of a false oath to any such list, he shall certify the facts to the prosecuting attorney, who shall proceed as in other cases of perjury. This section shall be printed in plain type upon all blanks for the listing of any property."

Tax assessors have no power generally to administer oaths in this state and we must look, therefore, to the provisions of the act conferring such authority upon them in order to determine the extent of their powers in this respect.

It will be noted from a reading of section 5366 that "no assessor or assistant assessor shall be paid for any per diem salary for administering an oath as herein provided where returns are being made to the county auditor, but they shall administer all oaths to persons making returns as herein provided to the county auditor, without charge to such person, but shall be paid the sum of ten cents for each person so sworn to his return prior to May first of any year, on the warrant of the county auditor, at the time of payment of his per diem services." Under this provision of the act the assessor or assistant assessor must furnish the county auditor with a statement containing all the names of persons sworn by him to the tax returns, and it is the duty of the county auditor to examine such list, and if correct issue his warrant for such services to the assessor or assistant assessors for an amount to be computed at the rate of ten cents per name.

This provision would strongly indicate that the assessor or assistant assessors are to be paid for administering oaths only when they administer them to persons residing within the county, since the county auditor could not well determine whether the assessor or assistant assessors had actually administered these oaths only by reference to the tax list returned by the owner. If the list of owners submitted by the assessor or assistant assessor should include the names of residents of other counties, it is clear that the county auditor could not well apply this test in the verification of the claim of the assessor or assistant assessor. The further provision of section 5366 that the assessor or assistant assessor is to be paid by the county auditor "at the time of payment of his per diem services" and the fact that a county could only be charged with the expense of assessing property within its boundaries, so strengthens this conclusion as to leave no room for doubt.

Now since the provisions of section 5366 furnish the only statutory authority for the payment of assessors or assistant assessors for administering oaths to persons listing their own property, it is my opinion, following the above reasoning, that assessors or assistant assessors can only be paid compensation for their services in administering oaths in such cases when the person or persons to whom they administer the oaths reside within the county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—DISCRETIONARY WITH SAID OFFICIALS WHETHER THEY SHALL PROVIDE OFFICES FOR COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Section 2419 G. C. is the only section relative to providing offices for county officers and said section makes it discretionary with the commissioners in regard thereto.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

HON. DAVID A. WEBSTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 27th wherein you submit three inquiries.

> "1. Is it the duty of the county commissioners to furnish and provide an office for the prosecuting attorney? If it is their duty to provide an office, with what should it be equipped?
> "2. If the county commissioners fail or neglect to furnish and provide an office for the prosecuting attorney, can they pay rent for the prosecutor's office?
> "3. If they are to provide an office, would a desk, filing case and the statutes in a one room office, without a private consultation room, be sufficient to constitute the furnishing and providing an office?"

The only authority of law relative to the matter is that found in section 2419 G. C., which reads as follows:

> "A court house, jail, public comfort station, offices for county officers, and an infirmary, shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, or any of them, are needed. Such buildings and offices shall be of such style, dimensions and expense as the commissioners determine. They shall provide all rooms, fire and burglar proof vaults and safes, and other means of security in the office of the county treasury, necessary for the protection of public moneys and property therein."

Said section provides that the discretion as to whether or not the county commissioners shall furnish any office for the prosecuting attorney rests solely with the said commissioners. The statute is an old statute and must have undoubtedly been passed at a time when it was not deemed necessary that the prosecuting attorney should be provided with an office.

Hon. George K. Nash, former attorney-general of Ohio, in an opinion to Frank P. McGhee, prosecuting attorney of Vinton county, under date of May 20, 1880, referring to section 2419 G. C., then section 859 Revised Statutes, states:

"Section 859 of the Revised Statutes gives authority it seems to me to county commissioners to provide an office for the prosecuting attorney as well as other county officers.

"It leaves the matter discretionary with the commissioners."

Hon. David K. Watson, attorney-general, in an opinion to D. B. Pearson, prosecuting attorney of Brown county, under date of April 15, 1890, ruled as follows:

"Relative to the matter of the county commissioners furnishing the prosecuting attorney an office when there is none in the court house for him, under section 859 R. S., the whole matter I think rests in the judgment of the commissioners. That section says that 'a court house, jail, offices for the county officers and an infirmary shall be provided by the commissioners when in their judgment the same or any of them are needed,' etc.

"If in the judgment of the commissioners an office is not needed for the prosecuting attorney, there being none in the court house, I am of the opinion that they cannot be compelled to furnish one outside. Their discretion in the matter will not be controlled."

Hon. J. M. Sheets, attorney-general, in an opinion to W. H. Bowers, prosecuting attorney of Richland county, under date of September 8, 1902, takes a different view of the statute and is out of line with the later rulings. He says:

"As to the second inquiry, it is very clear that under the provisions of section 859 of the Revised Statutes the commissioners are under obligations to furnish all county officers with acceptable offices. If they are not to be had in the court house they are required to procure them outside."

Hon. W. H. Miller, assistant attorney-general, under date of February 12, 1908, rendered an opinion to William L. David, prosecuting attorney of Hancock county, and referred to section 859 Revised Statutes as follows:

"Under this section I am of the opinion that the county commissioners may, if they think the same is needed, provide an office for the county coroner and pay the rent therefor."

Under various rulings of former attorneys-general it has been determined that the discretion resting with the commissioners would go so far as to permit also the furnishing of the office as well as the providing of the bare office rooms.

Answering your first question, since the matter is discretionary with the county commissioners, I do not believe it can be held that there is any duty on the commissioners to provide an office for the prosecuting attorney.

Answering your second question, there being no duty to provide an office for the prosecuting attorney, if they fail and refuse so to do they can not be compelled to pay rent for an office outside of the court house.

Answering your third question, since there is no duty resting upon the county commissioners to provide an office, if they in their discretion determine to furnish an office they are the sole judges of what will be furnished in the office.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CERTIFICATE OF AUDITOR—THAT MONEY IS IN TREASURY TO CREDIT OF PROPER FUND—UNNECESSARY—WHEN BONDS HAVE BEEN SOLD AND MONEY IS IN TREASURY AND CONTRACT LET.

In cases in which bonds have been sold and the proceeds placed in a special fund to be used for a specific work, and a contract is entered into for the construction of said work, the provisions of section 5660 G. C. that a certificate must first be made by the proper officer, to the effect that the money is in the treasury to the credit of said fund, do not apply. 81 *O. S.*66, 74 O. S. 185; 59 O. S. 446; 20 C. C. (n. S.) 47; however, Village v. Diekmeier, 79 O. S. 323, seems to hold otherwise.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 4, 1917, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication, in so far as the question involved is concerned, reads as follows:

> "I would like to ask your opinion as to whether or not it is necessary for the county auditor to make a certificate that the money required for the payment of the contract price for a county road improvement under the provisions of section 5660 of the General Code of Ohio (is in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund) where the bonds have been sold and the money raised and in the treasury of the county, at the time the contract is signed, to the credit of the road fund.
> "The reason that I ask that a construction be placed on the above statutes (sections 3810 and 5660 G. C.) is due to the fact that we have a very serious situation in this county in four pike road improvements involving very near $100,000.00, where the auditor of the county has failed to place these certificates of record or to have made the same, and by reason of the increased cost of materials the contractors are now about to throw up their contracts and claim the same are illegal and that we can not enforce the completion of the roads under the same nor the obligations of the bondsmen for the reason that the auditor has failed to put said certificate upon record.

And if the contracts and bonds are invalid, it will cost the county possibly $25,000.00 more to build the roads now, than the contract prices originally awarded for said roads."

In answering your question, it will be necessary to note a number of court decisions which have to do not only with section 5660 G. C., which section applies directly to your matter, but which have to do also with sections 3806 and 3810 G. C. On account of this fact I desire to quote not only section 5660 G. C., but also sections 3806 and 3810 G. C. I do this to show that there is no vital difference between the provisions of section 5660 G. C. and sections 3806 and 3810 G. C., and that whatever construction the courts would place upon sections 3806 and 3810 G. C., they would necessarily have to place the same construction upon section 5660 G. C.

Section 5660 G. C. provides as follows:

"The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

Section 3806 G. C. provides:

"No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, first certifies to council or to the proper board, as the case may be, that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay such appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose,which certificate shall be filed and immediately recorded. The sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the corporation is discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the ordinance, resolution or order is in force."

Section 3810 G. C. provides:

"Money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds or notes sold and in process of delivery, shall for the purpose of the certificate that money for the specific purpose is in the treasury, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund."

It might further tend to clearness if we remember that section 3806 G. C. was originally section 1536-205 R. S.; that section 1536-205 R. S. was formerly section 2702 R. S., and that section 3810 G. C. was originally section 1536-205a R. S.

1. Before noting the decisions of our courts which have to do with the question suggested in your communication, I desire to note the reading of the above sections of our statutes, with a view of arriving at a conclusion as to the construction which ought to be placed upon them. Your question has to do with this:

> What effect has the issuing of bonds and the receipt of money derived from the sale of said bonds upon the question of the requirement of a certificate to the effect that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the appropriate fund?

So that it is this part of the sections I shall particularly note.

Section 5660 G. C., in so far as it applies to the bond question, reads as follows:

> "Money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund."

Section 3810 G. C., which has reference to the bond question, reads as above set forth:

It will be noticed that the language used in sections 3810 and 5660 G. C. is practically the same upon this question of the bond issue, and, as said before, the provisions are practically the same which have to do with the requirement of the certificate of the auditor or clerk. Both the statutes provide that no contract, agreement or obligation of a county, township, school board or municipality shall be entered into, involving the expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof respectively first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn. That is, two things must obtain before a contract or obligation involving the expenditure of money can be entered into upon the part of any of said officials, namely:

1. The money must be in the treasury.
2. The auditor or clerk must certify to the fact that it is in the treasury.

Now, if lawfully authorized bonds had been sold and in process of delivery, what effect has this circumstance upon the two above prerequisites to the entering into of a valid contract? Does this circumstance do away with both of said prerequisites? It would not seem so from a careful reading of said sections.

The sections provide that the money to be derived from the bonds shall be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. That is, the one condition is fulfilled. The auditor or clerk may assume that the money is in the treasury, and will be justified in certifying to that fact. But there is nothing in the statute that would seem to indicate that the certificate need not be made, filed and recorded, merely from the fact that bonds have been sold and in process of delivery. Our courts have held that it is not sufficient merely that the money is in the treasury before a contract involving the expenditure of money can be entered into. This fact must be certified to by the proper official.

In City of Findlay v. Pendleton et al., 62 O. S. 80, there is authority for this proposition. The first branch of the syllabus reads as follows:

> "1. A contract made by a municipality with attorneys for legal services is void, unless the auditor or clerk first files and records a certificate, as required by section 2702, Revised Statutes."

On page 88 the court used the following language:

> "The financial statement made each meeting night to the council by the city clerk as to the status of each fund, was not the equivalent of the certificate required by section 2702, Revised Statutes. The presence of the $1,300 in the treasury did not in legal effect dispense with such certificate. The object of that section is not only to show the presence in the treasury of sufficient funds unappropriated to meet the contract, but also to prevent such funds from being taken out of the treasury for any other purpose. * *

"With the financial statement of the clerk, and the presence of the $1,300 in the treasury, there was still nothing to prevent the city authorities from using the money so in the treasury for other purposes, and then be compelled to make a levy on the general tax list to pay those attorneys' fees. The filing of the proper certificate would have tied up the money in the treasury to be used only for the payment of those fees."

In this case the court holds that the certificate of the proper official has two purposes:

"1. To show that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund.

"2. To prevent such funds from being taken out of the treasury for any other purpose."

From all the above it would seem that the only effect of a bond issue to take care of the cost and expense of an improvement would be to do away with the necessity of having the money in the treasury—that is, if the bonds were in process of collection, the money would be assumed to be in the treasury. But it does not seem to do away with the second prerequisite, namely, the issuing of the certificate by the proper official, to the effect that the money is in the treasury. This is the natural conclusion to which one would come by a careful reading of the above sections.

2. But let us turn to the courts of our state, in order to arrive at an answer to the question propounded by you. There have been quite a number of decisions upon this question; in fact so many decisions that it would seem that the proposition of law in reference to your question is well established.

In the City of Akron v. Dobson, 81 O. S. 66, we find the following proposition set forth in the third branch of the syllabus:

"3. Section 1536-205, Revised Statutes, providing that no contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or other order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of the municipal corporation, unless the auditor of the corporation shall first certify to council that the money required for the contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay the appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn and not appropriated for any other purpose, does not apply to an ordinance appropriating the money obtained by council, from a sale of bonds made by it, to the purpose for which the bonds were sold."

On page 78 the court in its opinion uses the following language:

"The supplemental petition avers that the auditor did not so certify. This is denied by the answer in the circuit court, and that court does not make any finding upon that issue. This contract cannot create an obligation against the city in the nature of a debt, to meet which no funds have been provided. The council issued and sold the bonds and appropriated the proceeds to meet the expenditures it authorized, and any obligations incurred by the ordinance under the authority conferred are payable only out of the appropriation, so that the section can have no application to such a case."

It will be noted from this language that the court really was not called upon to decide this particular question, because of the fact that the petition averred that the auditor did not so certify. The answer denied this fact and the circuit court made no finding upon that issue. But the court did pass upon the question in the language found in the syllabus and as found in the opinion.

In Emmert v. City of Elyria, 74 O. S. 185, the following proposition of law is laid down in the second branch of the syllabus:

"2. Sections 45 and 45a of the municipal code (1536-205 and 1536-205a, Revised Statutes, Bates' 5th Ed.), providing in substance that no contract involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into unless the auditor of the corporation shall first certify to council that the money required for the contract is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn and not appropriated for any other purpose and that a contract entered into contrary to such provision shall be void and that the money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds or notes sold and in process of delivery shall be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund, do not apply to contracts for street improvements, when bonds have been authorized by the municipality to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense of the improvement."

On page 197 the court in the opinion uses the following language:

"So that it would seem to follow now that a municipality may issue bonds in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of an improvement and may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law, to pay the bonds issued and sold to pay its part of the cost of the improvement, that sections 45 and 45a do not apply to improvements for which the city has authorized bonds to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense.

"Having found that these sections are not applicable, their interpretation is not necessary."

The last sentence of the above quotation is as follows:

"Having found that these sections are not applicable, their interpretation is not necessary," and throws some little doubt upon the question as to whether the court really placed a construction upon sections 3806 and 3810. But at least the court held that the provisions in said sections did not apply to the case under consideration by the court. In the last part of the second branch of the syllabus the court say that the provisions of said section

"do not apply to contracts for street improvements, when bonds have been authorized by the municipality to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense of the improvement."

In Kerr v. Bellefontaine et al., 59 O. S. 446, the court, in discussing the provisions of the statute in reference to the filing of the certificate of the proper official, to the effect that the money is in the treasury, uses the following language:

> "Not only was this requirement of the statute designed to place a restriction upon the increase of municipal indebtedness, but its terms are inapplicable to a contract of this character. The requirement is that the certificate must show that the money required for the contract is in the treasury to the credit of the fund and not appropriated for any other purpose. The fund from which the plaintiff is entitled to satisfaction of his demand is not raised by taxation. It is derived from the operation of the gas works and made subject to the order of the board whose authority is so limited that they can make valid contracts only for appliances and supplies for the gas works to which the fund is devoted. The fund can be appropriated to no other purpose, and the trustees can contract for no other purpose."

The facts in this case are somewhat different, in that the fund out of which payment was to be made was not raised by taxation, it being a fund created from the operation of the gas works in the city of Bellefontaine. But it was a special fund and one which could only be used for a specific purpose, and hence is in point.

In Lloyd v. Toledo, 20 C. C. (N. S.) 47, the court lays down the following proposition in the fourth branch of the syllabus:

> "4. Where an appropriation for a specific municipal improvement has been made and funds provided by a sale of bonds to pay for the entire cost of such improvement, and thereafter a new contract is entered into modifying some of the terms of the original contract, the failure of the city auditor to certify that the money was in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn does not render the modified contract invalid, and this is true for an additional reason when the modifying contract imposes no increased liability upon the city."

From all the above, the principle seems to be well established that the certificate provided for in sections 5660 and 3806 G. C. is not required when the cost and expense of the work contracted for is to be paid out of some special fund, not being the general fund and not created by taxation, especially when said fund can be used for no purpose other than that provided for in the contract.

The court in Cincinnati v. Waite, 12 N. P. (N. S.) 633, puts the proposition thus in the syllabus:

> "The provision of section 3806, P. & A. Anno. G. C., making it necessary before any contract, agreement or other obligation involving an expenditure of money is entered into by a municipality that the auditor certify the money required to meet the proposed expenditure is in the municipal treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn and not appropriated for any other purpose, is primarily applicable to expenditures derived from the general revenue producing powers of the municipality, and such a certificate is not necessary where a specific power is conferred upon a municipality for a specific purpose with a specific provision for payment of the expenditure involved in the exercise of such power."

Your county commissioners, in anticipation of the levying of taxes, issued bonds under the provisions of section 6929 G. C., the last sentence of the section reading as follows:

> "The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the costs and expenses of the improvement for which they are issued."

That is, the proceeds from the sale of the bonds create a special fund which can be used for no purpose other than the one for which the bonds were sold. In other words, these principles obtain in your proposition:

1. The county had a certain work which it desired to do.
2. The statutes gave it power and authority to do it.
3. The statutes further gave the county a method to create a fund to take care of the cost and expense of the work, namely, by issuing and selling bonds.
4. The proceeds derived from the sale of these bonds can be used for no other purpose than that for which they were issued and sold. That is, it is a special fund.
5. The money derived from the sale of the bonds was in the treasury to the credit of the special fund, against which the contracts were made.

Applying the principles of law set forth in the above cited cases to the facts above set out, it would seem that but one conclusion could be drawn, and that is, that in a case similar to the one you suggest the certificate of the county auditor, to the effect that the money is in the treasury, would not be necessary.

There is another decision of our courts to which I desire to call your attention, and that is Village v. Diekmeier, 79 O. S. 323. In this case the court seems to have arrived at a different conclusion from that arrived at in the above cited cases. The facts in this case are somewhat similar to those set out in your communication. The court herein held that a certificate of the proper official, to the effect that the money is in the treasury, is a prerequisite to the entering into of a contract. In this case the plaintiff was a contractor, attempting to recover on his contract.

In the two supreme court cases cited above, the plaintiff was a taxpayer, seeking an injunction.

In your case the contractors are attempting to evade a contract. So that the court has not passed upon your specific question.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that in your case the certificate of the county auditor is not necessary, and this from the great weight of authority of the courts of our state, although Village v. Diekmeier, supra, seems to be against this holding.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT—SALARY PAID TO SAID OFFICIAL BEFORE BEGINNING OF SCHOOL YEAR FOR WHICH HE WAS HIRED—MAY BE RECOVERED.

Money paid to a district superintendent for services rendered prior to the beginning of school for which he was hired is an illegal payment and should be recovered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1917.

HON. DONALD F. MELHORN, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You request my opinion upon the following statement of facts, to wit:

"On June 19, 1915, the county board of education of Hardin county, wishing to arrange its supervision districts agreeably with the provisions of Code section 4738 G. C., theretofore enacted, but not yet become a law, passed resolutions providing for four supervision districts.

"Sometime thereafter, to wit, between said 19th day of June, 1915, and August 1, 1915, the presidents of the boards of education within the four supervision districts aforesaid, met, as provided by section 4739 G. C., and elected district superintendents in each of the four supervision districts. Each of said district superintendents was elected for the period of one year commencing August 1, 1915.

"The four persons so elected as district superintendents accepted their offices, and fully performed all duties incident thereto, during the entire month of August, 1915, and drew one-twelfth of their year's salary as compensation for that period.

"State examiner Edwin E. Hall on page 40 of the report of his examination of the Hardin county offices, returns findings against each of the four district superintendents for the amount of their August, 1915, salary. Mr. Hall's theory is that inasmuch as section 4738, as amended, did not become operative until September 1, 1915, no compensation could be legally allowed the district superintendents prior to that date, for superintending districts created as aforesaid under this amended section.

"I desire your opinion on the legal soundness of these findings."

In order to arrive at the solution of the above matter it is well that we note the scheme provided in our school code for district supervision.

General Code section 4729, as enacted in 104 O. L. page 136, provides for the election of the members of the county board of education, and General Code section 4732, enacted at the same time, provides for the organization of such county school board. General Code section 4738, as enacted in 104 O. L. 140, provides in part:

"The county board of education shall, within thirty days after organizing divide the county school district into supervision districts. * * *"

The above section was amended May 29, 1915, to read in part as follows:

"The county board of education shall divide the county school district, any year, to take effect the first day of the following September into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. * * * The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the superintendents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts. * * *"

By the above, then, the entire county school district, except that territory which had separate supervision, was divided into supervision districts, and General Code section 4739 provides:

"Each supervision district shall be under the direction of a district superintendent. Such district superintendent shall be elected by the presidents of the village and rural boards of education within such district except that where such supervision district contains three or less rural or village school districts the boards of education of such school districts, in joint session, shall elect such superintendent. * * *"

General Code section 4741 provides:

"The first election of any district superintendent shall be for a term not longer than one year * * *."

General Code section 4743 provides:

> "The compensation of the district superintendent shall be fixed at the same time that the appointment is made and by the same authority which appoints him; such compensation shall be paid out of the county board of education fund on vouchers signed by the presidents of the county board. The salary of any district superintendent shall in no case be less than one thousand dollars per annum, half of which salary not to exceed seven hundred and fifty dollars shall be paid by the state and half by the supervision district. * * * The half paid by the supervision district shall be pro-rated among the village and rural school district in such district in proportion to the number of teachers employed in each district."

General Code section 7698 provides that the school year shall begin on the first day of September of each year and close on the 31st day of August of the succeeding year. So that when the district superintendents were elected for the supervision districts of the county in the year 1914, their terms began on September 1st of said year and ended on the 31st day of August, 1915.

In opinion No. 2069, found in opinions of the attorney-general for 1916 page 1855, it is held that the district superintendent having once had his salary fixed, pursuant to the provisions of section 4743 G. C., his employment is for at least the term certain of one year and that said salary cannot be changed during the year.

Following the reasoning of said opinion, the term, then, of the district superintendents who were elected in 1914 would extend, as above noted, to August 31, 1915. How, then, could any district superintendents receive another or a different salary covering the said period. If the same district superintendents were re-elected, they had already been paid for said time, or at least their contract covered said period. If other district superintendents were elected than those who served in the original supervision districts, they could not receive pay for a school year covered by the term of their predecessors. The various presidents or members of the boards of education who made up the supervision district were without authority to enter into contracts covering a period which was included in the contracts previously entered into and, as above noted, the entire county school district was covered by the several supervision districts, so that in no case was there any territory without a district superintendent. The officers who employed such district superintendents could exercise only such powers as are conferred upon them by law. They had no authority to make a contract overlapping any other contract. The money having been paid thereon, recovery of the same back can be had. Very truly yours,

JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PARK POLICE—AUTHORITY TO ENFORCE FISH AND GAME LAW.

Park police patrolmen appointed by board of public works have authority to enforce the fish and game laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1917.

HON. JOHN C. SPEAKS, Chief Warden, Fish and Game Division, Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 27th you submitted to this department for opinion the following:

"Section 1397 of the General Code provides that sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and other police officers shall enforce the laws for the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game and for this purpose they shall have the power conferred upon the wardens.

"Will you please give an opinion as to whether or not a park policeman appointed by the board of public works and on duty at Portage Lakes, Summit county, has authority to enforce the fish and game laws?"

Section 1397 G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

"Sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and other police officers shall enforce the laws for the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game and for this purpose they shall have the power conferred upon the wardens and receive like fees for similar services. Prosecutions by a warden or other police officer for offenses not committed in his presence shall be instituted only upon the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense is committed or upon the approval of the attorney general."

Section 469 of the General Code provides that the lands therein described, among which is what is known as Portage Lakes, are dedicated and set apart forever for the use of the public as public parks or pleasure resorts.

Section 472 of the General Code provides that the lakes, reservoirs and state lands dedicated and set apart for park or pleasure resort purposes shall be under the control and management of the superintendent of public works, and at the end of such section it is provided as follows:

"The superintendent of public works shall maintain such police regulations and enforce all needed rules for the government of the public parks as may be prescribed by law."

Section 475 G. C. provides that the superintendent of public works may appoint police patrolmen to preserve order and protect the public and prescribe their compensation, and further provides:

"Such police patrolmen shall have the same power and authority as constables in the discharge of their official duties, and their jurisdiction shall be coextensive with the counties touching or including any portion of such public park or pleasure resort."

Section 479 G. C. adopts certain rules for the guidance of the superintendent of public works and police patrolmen. Rule 11 under such section provides:

"It shall be the duty of each patrolman to arrest on view or warrant and bring to justice all disturbers of the peace and violators of the criminal laws of the state, when the offense is commmitted on land or water in or adjacent to state reservoirs and lands that have been set aside or dedicated to the use of the public for park and pleasure resort purposes, and when such patrolman deems it necessary, he may call to his assistance any one within the hearing of his voice to assist in making such arrests."

The latter part of rule 12 provides as follows:

"Police patrolmen shall have the same power and authority as constables, and their jurisdiction shall be coextensive with the counties touching any reservoir park."

In view of the fact that section 1397 provides that the sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and other police officers shall enforce the laws for the protection and preservation of fish and game and shall have the powers conferred upon deputy wardens and the fact that rule 11 of section 479 makes it the duty of each patrolman to arrest violators of the criminal laws of the state (a violation of the fish and game laws being a violation of the criminal laws of the state) I am of the opinion that a park policeman appointed by the superintendent of public works has authority to enforce the fish and game laws.

Section 485 G. C. provides:

> "All lakes, reservoirs and state lands dedicated to the use of the public for park and pleasure resort purposes, with respect to the enforcement of all laws relating to the protection of birds, fish and game, shall be under the supervision and control of the board of agriculture. All laws for the protection of fish in inland rivers and streams of the state, and all laws for the protection of birds, fish and game shall apply to all such state reservoirs and lakes."

While section 485 places the enforcement of the fish and game laws under the supervision and control of the board of agriculture, nevertheless, I am of the opinion that the park policemen have the power on view or warrant to arrest those found violating the fish and game laws of the state on state lands dedicated to the use of the public for park and pleasure resort purposes. This conclusion is somewhat strengthened by an examination of section 479, rule 16, which provides that all patrolmen "shall visit, as often as circumstances warrant, all resorts located on land or water in or around the reservoir to which he is assigned, that are reported to be the rendezvous of thieves, gamblers and other notorious characters and likewise of persons reported as habitually violating the fish and game laws of the state. * * *"

Answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that a park policeman, appointed by the superintendent of public works, on duty at Portage Lakes, Summit county, has authority to enforce the fish and game laws.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN WILLIAMS AND HOLMES COUNTIES.

DISAPPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 1, 1917, with which you enclose certain final resolutions in reference to the construction of highways, upon which you ask my approval. I have examined these final resolutions carefully and find them, with one exception, to be correct in form and legal, and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon, with the exception of the one hereinafter mentioned. These resolutions are as follows:

"Williams county—Section 'C,' Bryan-Edgerton road, Pet. No. 3083, type 'B' (also duplicate).

"Williams county—Section 'C,' Bryan-Edgerton road, Pet. No. 3083, type 'A' (also duplicate).

"Williams county—Section 'C,' Bryan-Edgerton road, Pet. No. 3083, type 'C' (also duplicate).

"Holmes county—Section 'H,' Mansfield-Millersburg road, Pet. No. 2505.

"Hancock county—Section 'b-1,' Findlay-Kenton road, Pet. No. 2428 (also duplicate).

"Medina county—Section 'L-2,' Barberton-Greenwich road, Pet. No. 2668."

There is an error in the final resolution of the commissioners of Hancock county, I. C. H. No. 221, in that they have stated the amount appropriated as being $30,050.00, and it should be $3,050.00. This error also appears on the duplicate. While this might not be vital, yet I am of the opinion that you should have it corrected before I approve the same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN SANDUSKY COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1917, with which you enclose final resolutions as follows:

"Sandusky county—Section '—,' Fremont-Perrysburg road and Fremont-Bellevue road, I. C. H. Nos. 275 and 274.

"Sandusky county—Section 'j-1,' Fremont-Bellevue road, I. C. H. No. 274 (also duplicate)."

I have carefully examined these final resolutions and find them to be correct in form and legal, and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF LOGAN COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

The Industriol Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE: Bonds of Logan county, Ohio, in the sum of $10,000.00, for the purpose of constructing certain bridges and repairing certain other bridges in said county."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of county commissioners of Logan county, Ohio, relative to the above bond issue, and find same to be in accordance with the provisions of the General Code relating thereto.

I am therefore, of the opinion that bonds of said county, properly prepared in accordance with bond form submitted, will, when signed by the proper officers, constitute valid and binding obligations of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN LAWRENCE AND STARK COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1917, with which you enclose final resolutions as follows:

"Lawrence county—Section 'I' Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7.
"Lawrence county—Section 'K' Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7, Type 'A.'
"Lawrence county—Section 'K' Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7, Type 'B.'
"Lawrence county—Section 'K' Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7, Type 'C.'
"Lawrence county—Section 'K' Ohio river road, I. C. H. No. 7, Type 'D'.
"Stark county—Section 'B-2' Canton-New Franklin road, I. C. H. No. 72."

I have carefully examined these final resolutions and find them to be correct in form and legal, and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNCIL—HAS POWER TO DISCONTINUE AN IMPROVEMENT OR EXTENSION OF PUBLIC UTILITY—AND TRANSFER UNEXPENDED BALANCE TO TRUSTEES OF SINKING FUND.

Where bonds have been issued and a fund created for the improvement or extension of a public utility of a village and only a certain portion thereof has been expended, and there are no contracts outstanding or entered into against said bond fund, the village council may, in the exercise of its discretion, legally determine to discontinue any further improvement or extension of said public utility and transfer the unexpended balance to the trustees of the sinking fund under the authority of section 3804 G. C., although the board of trustees of public affairs of said village considers the further extension of said public utility necessary and expedient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 5, 1917, you submitted for my opinion the following request:

> "If bonds have been issued for the improvement or extension of a public utility of a village, in the amount of $25,000.00, and $15,000.00 of this amount has been expended, leaving a balance of $10,000.00 in the fund, if the board of trustees of public affairs considers it necessary, and are desirous of making further extensions and improvements to such public utility, in the event that there are no contracts outstanding or entered into against such bond fund, may the council legally determine to discontinue any further improvement or extension and transfer the balance of $10,000.00 to the trustees of the sinking fund under the authority of section 3804 General Code?"

Section 3804 General Code reads as follows:

> "When any unexpended balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds, the whole or part of which bonds are still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for, is no longer needed for the purpose for which such fund was created, it shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of bonds."

The foregoing section requires the transfer of any unexpended balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds to the sinking fund, when the whole or part of any such bonds are still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for and such balance is no longer needed for the purpose for which said fund was created, and that such balance shall be applied to the payment of said bonds.

I presume, inasmuch as you have cited section 3804, supra, in your request, that the issue of bonds in question is either in whole, or to the extent of $10,000.00 at least, still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for.

Before said transfer is made the section requires that said balance shall no longer be needed for the purpose for which such fund was created.

As stated in your request, there seems to be some difference of opinion between the village council and the board of trustees of public affairs of said village on the question of whether or not the particular public utility should be further extended and improved. Hence it is necessary to determine which particular body or board of the village is vested with the authority to determine whether or not the balance in a particular fund created by a bond issue is needed longer for the purpose for which such fund was originally created.

Section 4215 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The legislative power of each village shall be vested in, and exercised by, a council, * * *."

Section 4240 General Code provides:

> "The council shall have the management and control of the finances and property of the corporation, except as may be otherwise provided, and have such other powers and perform such other duties as may be conferred by law."

It will be noted from the above sections of the General Code that the legislative power in a village is vested in its council, and that the council shall have charge of the management and control of the finances and property of said village.

Section 4361 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The board of trustees of public affairs shall manage, conduct and control the water works, electric light plants, artificial or natural gas plants, or other similar public utilities, furnish supplies of water, electricity or gas, collect all water, electrical and gas rents, and appoint necessary officers, employees and agents. * * * The board of trustees of public affairs shall have the same powers and perform the same duties as are possessed by, and are incumbent upon, the director of public service as provided in sections 3955, 3959, 3960, 3961, 3964, 3965, 3974, 3981, 4328, 4329, 4330, 4331, 4332, 4333 and 4334 of the General Code, and all powers and duties relating to water works in any of these sections shall extend to and include electric light, power and gas plants and such other similar public utilities, and such boards shall have such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinance not inconsistent herewith."

The last mentioned section vests in the board of trustees of public affairs the authority to manage, conduct and control the public utilities of the village. It further provides that the said board shall have the same powers and perform the same duties as are possessed by and incumbent upon the director of public service as provided in certain other sections of the General Code therein stated. Two of these sections are 3960 and 3961 General Code, which provide as follows:

> "Section 3960. Money collected for water works purposes shall be deposited weekly with the treasurer of the corporation. Money so deposited shall be kept as a separate and distinct fund. When appropriated by council it shall be subject to the order of the director of public service. Such director shall sign all orders drawn on the treasurer of the corporation against such fund."
> "Section 3961. Subject to the provisions of this title, the director of public service may make contracts for the building of machinery, water works buildings, reservoirs and the enlargement and repair thereof, the manufacture and laying down of pipe, the furnishing and supplying with connections all necessary fire hydrants for fire department purposes, keeping them in repair, and for all other purposes necessary to the full and efficient management and construction of water works."

Section 3960, supra, in its application to the board of trustees of public affairs of a village under the terms of section 4361, supra, provides in effect that when public utility money is appropriated by council it shall be subject to the order of said board.

Section 3961, supra, being incorporated by reference in section 4361, authorizes the said board of trustees of public affairs to make contracts, among other things for the enlargement and repair of certain public utilities of the village, subject to the provisions of the General Code with reference to the making of contracts by the director of public service of a city.

Section 4328 General Code provides for the making of contracts by the director of public service of a city and is made applicable to the board of trustees of public affairs of a village by section 4361, supra.

Section 4328 General Code reads as follows:

> "The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

The last mentioned section provides in effect that when an expenditure of the board of trustees of public affairs with reference to the management, conduct and control of a public utility of the village exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council, and when so authorized and directed the said board shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after proper advertisement. Hence it is clear that before the said board could enter into a legal contract for the enlargement or extension of a public utility under its charge, the village council must authorize and direct it to do so, and then said board must proceed as provided by law.

You do not state in your communication whether said board of trustees of public affairs has been so authorized and directed by said council to expend the $10,000.00 which still remains in said fund in the making of a contract for the extension and enlargement of said public utility; but you do state that there are no outstanding contracts or obligations against such bond fund as far as third parties are concerned. However, if the board of trustees of public affairs has been authorized by the council of said village to enter into a contract for the extension and enlargement of a public utility thereof, and the money therefor has been appropriated for its use by council, said board would be vested with the authority of advertising for bids for such extension and enlargement, and such authority would continue to exist until the village council had repealed the ordinance which vested such authority in said board.

However, the council, in the exercise of its discretion as to what it might consider to be for the best interests of the village, would have the right, in my opinion, to repeal at any time the ordinance vesting such authority in said board, in the absence of any rights being vested in third parties under contract made in pursuance to such original authorization. As has been noted heretofore, the council is vested with the legislative or law making power of said village, and as such is authorized to pass and ordain legislation with respect to powers vested in it by the legislature.

The power to make a law carries with it the power to repeal said law, and in the absence of some constitutional limitation or limitation placed upon it by the legislature, the council of a municipality has the same right to repeal an ordinance as it has to pass it.

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, 5th Ed., Vol. II, section 584;
Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, section 244;
State ex rel. Attorney-General v. Jennings, 57 O. S., 415.

An examination of the constitution and the General Code does not disclose any provision therein which requires that money in a special fund created for a specific purpose shall be expended for that purpose, if conditions or circumstances arise which would make it expedient to abandon the project, or a part of the project, for the accomplishment of which said fund was created. The very fact that the legislature has provided for the transfer of such unexpended balance in said fund to the sinking fund, when the purpose for which it was created no longer exists, indicates that the legislature had in mind cases in which such a change in plan might be contemplated, and made provision therefor accordingly.

It is apparent that circumstances and conditions as above mentioned will arise at times which will make necessary a determination of the matter as to whether or not a certain project should be carried through to completion or be abandoned. It is necessary that the discretion should be vested in some certain representative or representatives to pass on such a case. It seems to me that the exercise of such discretion and the determination of such a matter is legislative in character and should be, and is, vested in the legislative power of the municipality.

The village council as such legislative body created the fund in question and provided for its expenditure, and hence I think it follows unquestionably that it is for said council to say whether or not such authorization for such expenditure, in whole or in part, is withdrawn, and any funds remaining therein shall be transferred to the sinking fund as provided by law.

Answering your question, then, specifically, I am of the opinion that if bonds have been issued for the improvement or extension of a public utility of a village in the amount of $25,000.00, and $15,000.00 of this amount has been expended, leaving a balance of $10,000.00 in the fund, and there are no contracts outstanding or entered into against said bond fund, the village council may, in the exercise of its discretion, legally determine to discontinue any further improvement or extension of said public utility and transfer the balance of $10,000.00 to the trustees of the sinking fund under the authority of section 3804 General Code, although the board of trustees of public affairs considers it necessary and is desirous of extending and improving said utility further.

A similar conclusion was reached by one of my predecessors, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on an analogous state of facts in an opinion rendered to Hon. Van A. Snyder, city solicitor, Lancaster, Ohio, under date of October 26, 1911, and found in Annual Report of Attorney-General for the years 1911-1912, volume I, page 1588.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—IS NOT AUTOMATICALLY DISSOLVED WHEN TAX VALUATION FALLS BELOW $500,000.00.

A village school district once organized as such, and whose tax valuation falls below $500,000, is not by that act alone dissolved and the board of education of such district will continue to perform the duties thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

HON. JOHN M. MARKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter in which you submit for my official opinion the following proposition:

> "On the first day of December, 1916, the board of education of the Higginsport village school district of Brown county, Ohio, by resolution duly adopted, provided for the issuance of the bonds of said school district in the sum of $1,200, for the purpose of repairing the public school building in said school district; said bonds having been authorized by the electors of said school district at an election held therein on the 7th day of November, 1916.
> "These bonds were offered to the industrial commission of Ohio and were accepted by them and a transcript of the proceedings of the board was duly prepared and submitted to Hon. Edward C. Turner, attorney-general. The proceedings of the board relative to the issuing of these bonds were approved, but as the amount of taxable property within said school district was less than $500,000, the bonds were rejected upon the authority of an opinion rendered by the attorney-general's office to Hon. S. W. Innis, prosecuting attorney, Paulding, Ohio, under date of August 9, 1916.
> "On the 24th day of March, 1917, in conformity to the holdings of said opinion, an election was held in the Higginsport village school district, under the provisions of section 4682, at which election there was submitted to the electors the proposition to organize the territory, heretofore constituting the Higginsport village school district, into a village school district under the provisions of said section.
> "Kindly advise me whether this is an organization of a new district or the continuing of the old district; also whether the old board continues as the board of education of said school district or whether it will be necessary to appoint an entire new board. The board of education desires to issue the bonds, heretofore referred to, and I would like to know if the bonds heretofore provided for can be sold, or whether it will be necessary to call another election and provide for a new issue. The transcript of the proceedings of the board, heretofore referred to, is now on file in your office."

By the above statement I gather that the Higginsport village school district existed as such prior to the amendment of General Code section 4681, which placed the valuation of the territory which constituted a village at $500,000 and over, before such village should constitute a village school district and that the first question for me to determine is: Does such change in the law dissolve the district which had so existed prior thereto, or does such district, once existing, continue until otherwise changed?

If the district was dissolved by operation of law, when said section was amended, then a new school board is necessary for the new district. If said district was not dissolved, then the school board having charge of the district will continue.

A school district is a creature of statute, and when once organized under and by virtue of the law such district will continue, and the school board having control of such district is a quasi corporate body until changed, as provided by law.

A village school district in Ohio is defined by General Code section 4681 as:

> "Each village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than five hundred thousand dollars, shall constitute a village school district."

So that if the village were now to be incorporated, there is no question but that a village school district would not, at the same time, be formed unless the territory of such village for school purposes be valued at $500,000.00 or more. But if a village were now to be incorporated, and the tax valuation were less than $500,000.00, the proposition to organize the territory of such village "thus formed" into a village school district might be submitted to the electors thereof, as provided by General Code section 4682, which reads as follows:

> "A village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than five hundred thousand dollars, shall not constitute a village school district, but the proposition to organize the territory thus formed into a village school district may be submitted by the board of education, and shall be submitted by the board of education upon the presentation to it of a written petition for such purpose signed by 25 per cent. of the electors of the territory thus formed, to a vote of the electors of the territory thus formed at any general or a special election called for that purpose, and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

Should such proposition carry by a majority vote of such electors, then said village may be organized into a village school district, and if such proposition does not carry by a majority vote of such electors, then such village shall not be organized into a village school district.

The history of the above section 4681 throws some light upon the legislative intent in relation thereto.

The first word of our legislature in relation to the matters contained in said section is found in 70 O. L., p. 195, and in an act which provided for the re-organization and maintenance of the common schools. Chapter I of said act classifies school districts and section 4 of said chapter reads as follows:

> "Each incorporated village, including the territory attached to it for school purposes and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes is hereby constituted a school district to be styled a village district."

Said act, of which said section is a part, was passed May 1, 1873, and the above section was amended April 27, 1877, to read as follows:

> "Each incorporated village, including the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits, detached for school purposes, shall be constituted a school district, to be styled a village district, in the following manner, to wit: Written or printed notices, signed by not less than five electors, residents of such village, shall be posted in at least five of the most public places within the limits of said village, requesting the electors of said village to meet for the purpose of voting on the question of establishing a village district, on a day and between specified hours, not less than six, between six o'clock in the forenoon, and six o'clock in the afternoon, and at a place designated in said notices, within the limits of said village, which notices shall be posted not less than ten days prior to the day designated in them for such meeting. The electors so assembled at the time and place designated, shall appoint a chairman and two clerks, who shall be the judges of said election. The electors in favor of the proposed village district shall have written or printed on their ballots the words, 'Village district, yes;' and those opposed thereto, the words, 'Village district, no;' and the votes so cast shall determine the question whether such village district shall be established. If a majority of the votes cast at said election shall be found opposed to establishing such village district, the question of establishing such village district shall not be again submitted to the electors of said village until the succeeding regular annual election for village officers, and then only upon the usual notice being given as above; and if a majority of the votes cast at said election shall be found to be in favor of establishing such village district, the said village may be organized as a village district in the manner provided in sections five and six of an act entitled 'An act supplementary to an act for the re-organization and maintenance of common schools,' passed March 30, 1874."

It will be noted at the outset that when said section 4 was first enacted, as above quoted, it provided that all villages should constitute village school districts, but in the amendment last above mentioned certain limitations are placed upon the organization of villages into village school districts, and no provision is made for the dissolution of any district already created, but all the language speaks in the present or future and even though a village is incorporated and the valuation is that which is required by law, while such village may become, ipso facto, a village school district in name, it is not so for school purposes until a board of education may be elected or appointed. (See Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1913, page 470.) That is to say, something outside of the mere designation of territory is necessary to completely establish the school district for all practical school purposes.

Said section 4 of the original act, above mentioned, was carried into the Revised Statutes as No. 3888, and was amended April 25, 1904, to read as follows:

"Each incorporated village, now existing, or hereafter created, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, shall constitute a village school district."

It is worthy of note, however, that the above amendment is in almost the identical form in which said above mentioned section 4 was enacted, adding, however, "now existing" and "or hereafter created," for it will be remembered that from the time said section was amended in 1887 up until the amendment of 1904, there were again, in all probability, many villages which had not organized into village school districts, and so without disbanding or dissolving any districts, said section 3888 established or created all villages in the village school districts.

But on April 2, 1906, said section 3888 was again amended to read as follows:

"Each incorporated village, now existing or hereafter created, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars shall constitute a village school district, provided that each incorporated village now existing or hereafter created, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than one thousand dollars, shall not constitute a village school district; provided at any general election the proposition to dissolve or organize such village school district be submitted by the board of education to the electors of such village and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

After the last mentioned amendment, a village, whose tax valuation exceeded $100,000, became ipso facto a village school district and a village whose tax valuation was less than $100,000 shall not constitute a village school district. But if a district already existed or if a district with less than $100,000 tax valuation desired to organize, the question of such dissolution or organization could be submitted by the board of education to the electors of such village and be determined by a majority vote of such electors.

In the last above mentioned amendment is the first time provision is made for the dissolution of a village district by the electors thereof. Said section 3888 R. S. was carried into the General Code as No. 4682 and was amended February 28, 1911, to read as follows:

"A village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than $100,000, shall not constitute a village school district, but the proposition to dissolve or organize such village school district shall be submitted by the board of education to the electors of such village at any general or special election called for that purpose and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

The material change in said section, as last amended, is that the question to dissolve or to organize such village district may be submitted at a special election called for that purpose, as well as at a general election, as provided in Revised Statutes 3888. On May 9, 1913, said section 4682 was again amended to read as follows:

"A village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than five hundred thousand dollars, shall not constitute a village school district, but the proposition to organize the territory thus formed into a village school district may be submitted by the board of education, and shall be submitted by the board of education upon the presentation to it of a written petition for such purpose signed by 25 per cent. of the electors of the territory thus formed, to a vote of the electors of the territory thus formed at any general or a special election called for that purpose, and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

In the last above quoted amendment no provision is made for dissolution of a village district, but only for the organization of the territory thus formed into a village school district and the words "thus formed," used in the manner in which they are, can mean but one thing, and that is they must refer to the village which is thus formed; and at the same time the last above quoted section was amended and in which words "to dissolve" were omitted, there was enacted a new section numbered 4682-1, which read as follows:

> "A village school district organized as a village school district at the time of the passage of this act, or that may be hereafter organized, which has a total tax valuation of less than $500,000, shall continue as a village school district, but the proposition to dissolve such village school district may be submitted by a board of education and shall be submitted by the board of education upon the presentation to it of a written petition for such purpose, signed by 25 per cent. of the electors of such village school district, to a vote of the electors of such village school district at any general or special election called for that purpose, and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

That is to say, a village school district which existed at the time of the passage of this act, or a village school district which has a tax valuation of less than $500,000, and that may be hereafter organized, as provided by law, shall continue as a village school district until a proposition to dissolve such village school district may be submitted by a board of education or must be submitted by the board of education upon the presentation of the petition mentioned in said section. To give said last mentioned section any other construction would be to do violence to the entire village school system of the state of Ohio. For if this section, when amended, of itself dissolved all the then existing village school districts, what became of the school property of the villages, particularly in those villages made up from territory taken from two or more townships; what became of the bonded indebtedness of the school district where the village territory had been organized from two or more school districts? These and many other questions would be left by the statute undetermined. But, to give the statute the construction above mentioned, leaves every organized village school district in existence and causes every village, with a tax valuation of $500,000 or more, to constitute village school districts.

In Sutherland on Statutory Construction, section 489, the following language is used:

> "A construction which must necessarily occasion great public and private mischief must never be preferred to a construction which will occasion neither, or not in so great a degree, unless the terms of the instrument absolutely require such preference. Of two constructions, either of which is warranted by the words of the amendment of a public act, that is to be preferred which best harmonizes the amendment with the general tenor and spirit of the act amended. A statute may be construed contrary to its literal meaning, when a literal construction would result in an absurdity or inconsistency, and the words are susceptible of another construction which will carry out the manifest intention. 'When the literal enforcement of a statute would result in great inconvenience and cause great injustice, and lead to consequences which are absurb and which the legislature could not have contemploted, the courts are bound to presume that such consequences are not intended, and adopt a construction which will promote the ends of justice and avoid the absurdity.' "

The same author, in section 490, says:

> "Statutes will be construed in the most beneficial way * * * to favor public convenience, and to oppose all prejudice to public interests."

When the new school code was enacted in 1914, section 4682, last above quoted, was carried into said Code unchanged. But section 4682-1 was repealed and in place thereof there was enacted a section by the same number, which provides when and how village school districts, with a population of less than 1,500, may vote to dissolve and join contiguous rural school districts.

No provision is made, however, for the dissolution of village school districts with a population of over 1,500 and whose tax valuation is less than $500,000, except that the county board of education may transfer such village district to an adjoining village or rural district.

Some light, however, might be had in the construction of these statutes by noting the provisions of the General Code which affect village districts as they advance and become cities. If a village increases in population, that is, if the population therein contained reaches 5,000, then such village is advanced to a city. The constitution of Ohio, article 18, section 1, provides:

> 'Municipal corporations are hereby classified into cities and villages. All such corporations having a population of five thousand or over shall be cities; all others shall be villages. The method of transition from one class to the other shall be regulated by law."

Sections 3497, 3498 and 3499 of the General Code, regulate the method of transition of municipal corporations from one class to the other and are not inconsistent with the constitutional amendment above quoted.

Section 3497 G. C. provides:

> "Municipal corporations, which, at the last federal census, had a population of five thousand or more, shall be cities. All other municipal corporations shall be villages. Cities which, at any future federal census, have a population of less than five thousand shall become villages. Villages which, at any future federal census, have a population of five thousand or more, shall become cities."

Section 3498 G. C. provides:

> "When the result of any future federal census is officially made, known to the secretary of state, he forthwith shall issue a proclamation, stating the names of all municipal corporations having a population of five thousand or more, and the names of all municipal corporations having a population of less than five thousand, together with the population of all such corporations. A copy of the proclamation shall forthwith be sent to the mayor of each municipal corporation, which copy shall be forthwith transmitted to council, read therein and made a part of the records thereof. From and after thirty days after the issuance of such proclamation each municipal corporation shall be a city or village, in accordance with the provisions of this title."

Advancement of a village to a city, therefore, depends upon the proclamation of the secretary of state, making known the result of the federal census. That is to say, some act outside of the mere increase or decrease of population is necessary before such transition is complete.

It was contended in Murray v. State, ex rel., 91 O. S. 220, that article 18, section 1, above quoted, was self executing and when a municipality was shown by a census taken to contain more than 5,000 inhabitants, that fact of itself was sufficient to advance it from a village to a city, but the court held that a municipal corporation which had a population of less than 5,000 at the last federal census did not advance to a city when it was made to appear by a census taken by a municipal corporation subsequent thereto, that it had a population of more than 5,000.

General Code section 4686 provides:

> "When a village is advanced to a city, the village school district shall thereby become a city school district. When a city is reduced to a village, the city school district shall thereby become a village school district. The members of the board of education in village school districts that are advanced to city school districts, and in city school districts that are reduced to village school districts, shall continue in office until succeeded by the members of the board of education of the new district, who shall be elected at the next succeeding annual election for school board members."

From the time a village school district is organized complete statutory provision is made for its continuance, whether it remains a village over $500,000 in valuation or increases to a city, or votes to dissolve if under 1,500 in population, or votes to organize if under $500,000 in tax valuation. But no word is mentioned how dissolution can be had except as provided by section 4682-1, above quoted.

All the territory of the state is in one of four classes of districts; in fact, in one of three classes, as will be hereinafter noted,—either city, county, village or rural. Provision is made by law for the organization of or what shall constitute each of the above districts and the county district being for but a sort of supervisory purpose over rural and certain village districts, all territory of the state must, therefore, be contained in either a city, village or rural school district. If the village district is dissolved automatically, that is, if section 4681 works such dissolution, then whenever a village district falls below $500,000 in tax valuation and dissolution is had, such dissolution must occur through no provision of law. If the village district, as above noted, was made up from two or more rural districts, then the property, upon dissolution, would revert to the original districts. It could not revert to a rural district because rural districts are defined in General Code section 4735 as:

> "The present existing township and special school districts shall constitute rural school districts until changed by the county board of education and all officers and members of boards of education of such existing districts shall continue to hold and exercise their respective offices and powers until their terms expire and until their successors are elected and qualified."

Nothing therein is said about a village district whose tax valuation falls below $500,000. Where, then, could the territory revert to except to districts from whence it came? The school house in the village district might be located in territory from a district the valuation of which is very small or the extent of which territory is very small, and under the above course of reasoning such school house would then revert to the district from which such small portion or valuation came, and the village school-district might have a large amount of indebtedness. Would the indebtedness fall to the district in which the school house is located, and why? How could any indebtedness be divided? No provision is made for an equitable division of indebtedness as in a transfer. If the territory of the village remains such until transferred by operation of law, then the law which would apply would be that law which provides that a county board of education may transfer any or all of a rural or village district to an adjoining rural or village district and at the same time would make an equitable division of the funds and the indebtedness. In other words, the county school board in that case acts in a semi-judicial capacity and determines the rights and the equities which attach. No other plan is provided for distribution of indebtedness.

Let us note a few of the cases upon the dissolution of a district once formed: In School District v. Godding, 24 So. W., 1034, the court held:

"Each organized school district is a body corporate and its territorial form can only be changed in the manner pointed out by statute."

In Bowen v. King, 34 Vt., 156, 165, it is held:

"It has always been understood to be clear that when a union district was once legally formed * * * such district could only be dissolved in the manner provided by the statute."

In Briggs v. Borden, 38 No. W., 712, the statute provided that no district shall be disbanded without a vote of a majority of the resident tax payers. A vote was taken and a majority of those present voted to disband, but said majority was not a majority of all the resident tax payers of the district and the court held that it being necessary to follow the statute strictly, a majority of the tax payers meant a majority over all, and therefore that the statute had not been complied with and the district was not disbanded.

In State v. Henderson, 46 So. W., 1076, a municipal corporation had been incorporated as provided by law, and a school district created therein. The municipal corporation disbanded and the question was whether or not such disbanding of the municipal corporation would also be a disbanding of the school district, but the court held:

"When once organized their (school district) corporate lives are unlimited and remain unchanged until they are changed in the manner prescribed by the legislature."

In School District No. 1 v. School District No. 4, 7 So. W., 285, the court held:

"Each organized school district in the state is a body corporate, whose corporate life is of unlimited duration and no power has been vested by law, either in the voters of such district, or of all the districts in the township, or in the boards of directors of such districts, or in the school commissioner of the county, to deprive them of their corporate existence and in their stead create new districts. The extent of the power of the voters in such organized districts, and the county school commissioner, when his power is called into action, is to form a new district composed of portions of two or more organized districts and to change the boundary lines of organized districts."

In considering the dissolution of school districts, my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, held in opinion No. 1273, Annual Reports of the Attorney-General, 1914, volume II, page 1495:

"While the statute provides a clear method whereby adjoining rural school districts or a rural and a village school district may unite for high school purposes, there is no provision whereby such a district can be dissolved. After forming such union the only thing that can be done is to look to the legislature for a legislative enactment providing for such dissolution."

In Russell v. District, etc., 62 No. W., 661, the question was raised as to the dissolution of a school district by an act of the legislature where such district actually existed prior to such legislative enactment, but was not recognized in such new act. The court held:

> "This section makes no direct provision as to subdistricts then existing. This court held in the Hancock case, supra, and in District Township of Magnolia v. Ind., District of Boyer, 45 N. W., 907, that districts formed from two townships, because of obstacles prior to the enactment of the Code, continue to exist as such until the territory is restored, as provided by law. This subdistrict was legally organized for the convenience of the people. There is nothing in the law expressly dissolving an organization. It is such an organization as the code of 1873 recognizes and we think it must be held to continue as such until it is dissolved by restoration of the territory composing it to the respective townships."

No case, it seems to us, could be more in point in our matter than the above case, for in our case the village school ditrict was legally organized prior to the amendment of General Code 4681, which amended section named an amount of tax duplicate greater than that which existed in the school district when the former amendment was passed and no express language is used in such amended section dissolving those districts which already existed. The rights of the tax payers of the district had already attached. Property rights were existing. A school board was in existence and was a quasi corporate body. As suggested in the above case, it must be held to continue until it is dissolved by law.

In State ex rel. School District, No. 29, v. Huhlin, et al., 2 Ore., 306, the court held:

> "School districts are public corporations and their corporate existence cannot be annulled except as provided by law, and (under the laws of the state of Oregon) the action for that purpose must be directed by the governor of the state."

The test of dissolution of a corporation is whether or not it has lost its capacity to sustain itself by election of new officers. The school district being separate and distinct could continue to elect new officers, whether the tax valuation was below as well as if it were above $500,000.

You call my attention to opinion No. 1847 of my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, page 1388, the syllabus of which reads as follows:

> "When a village district has a tax valuation of less than $500,000, as required by section 4781 G. C., its board of education should submit to its electors the question of reorganizing such district as provided by section 4682 G. C., or of dissolving such district and joining some contiguous territory as provided by section 4682-1 G. C."

In the body of said opinion the following language is used:

> "It is claimed that by reason of the failure of the legislature to make any specific provision for such districts to continue as village districts a strict construction of section 4682 G. C. precludes any further continuation of such districts as village school districts.
> "I am unable to concur in this contention. While the sections aforesaid may be susceptible of different constructions, it is my judgment that when considered together they afford a complete procedure for the disposition of a village district when it falls under the limitation of $500,000 tax valuation, as provided in section 4682 G. C. aforesaid. In other words, I am of the opinion that the provisions of said section 4682 aforesaid must be given a prospective operation in that their provisions mean that when a village district ceases to have a tax valuation of $500,000, it shall not continue as a village district under its former right as provided by section 4681 G. C., but that in the happening of such contingency it may proceed by vote, under the provisions of its board of education, either to organize as a village district and so continue as such as provided by said section 4682, or by a vote, under the supervision of its board of education after the approval of the county board, determine to dissolve itself and join some contiguous rural district as provided by section 4682-1 aforesaid."

I cannot agree with the above, for, as pointed out heretofore, in this opinion section 4682-1 formerly provided that a village school district, which has a total tax valuation of less than $500,000, may submit the proposition to dissolve the village school district to a vote of the electors of such village school district, and said provision was repealed and in its place was enacted said section 4682-1, as above quoted. It surely cannot be said that the repeal of said section which contained said language would have the effect of permitting it again to be read into the law as now enacted, but that is exactly what would have to occur if said section is given the construction contended for it. What also would occur if the position taken in said last mentioned opinion were followed and a vote were submitted to dissolve a district with a tax valuation of less than $500,000 and join some contiguous territory and such vote failed, or, if a vote were submitted to organize a district with less than $500,000 valuation into a village district and the proposition failed? Would it then, ipso facto, be dissolved? And why any more after either of such elections had failed to carry than before, for there is nothing in the statute which provides for any such dissolution after such vote or after such election failed to carry?

From all the above I must conclude that a village school district which once existed and whose tax valuation falls below $500,000 is not by that act alone dissolved, and when your school district of the Higginsport village fell below $500,000, the district was not dissolved. A new school board would not be necessary. The old school board would exist and your bonds would, therefore, be permitted to be issued by the old board.

This conclusion causes me to reverse my former ruling found in opinion No. 145 of this department, rendered under date of March 27, 1917, in which I held, following the reasoning of opinion No. 1847 of my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, that the bonds aforesaid were invalid.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—CAN ORDER ONLY ONE INSTITUTE HELD IN COUNTY DURING ANY ONE YEAR—WHEN SAME MUST BE HELD.

The county board of education is authorized to order but one institute held in the county during any one year and such institute must be held during some one certain week. If other institutes are held the expense thereof cannot be paid from the county board of education fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of April 7, 1917, you request my opinion as follows:

"Section 7869 G. C. provides that the county board of education shall decide the length of time county institutes may remain in session, but in no case for a longer period than five days.

"Does this provision fix the maximum of days that a county institute may be held, and must these days be continuous, or may the institute be held on five separate days of the year?

"After the five days' institute has been held, if so ordered by the board, may an adjourned session be held and the expenses of same paid from the county board of education fund? If you decide that such adjourned session may be held, may teachers be paid for attending said adjourned sessions?"

General Code section 7869 provides in part:

"* * * The county board of education shall decide the length of time county institutes may remain in session, in no case for a longer period than five days. At least one day of such session shall be under the immediate direction of the county superintendent, who shall arrange the program for such day."

The above part section can mean but one of probably three things as to the length of time and when institutes may be held under the jurisdiction of the county board of education. It might mean that the county board of education can hold or cause to be held, several institutes during the school year, no one of which shall be for a longer period than five days; it might mean that said institutes may be held at various times during the year as a regular and as an adjourned session, the aggregate of which shall not be longer than five days; or, it might mean that the county board of education has power to order but one institute held and that such institute can last for no longer than five days. It will be necessary, therefore, to look to other provisions of the General Code that we may determine just what is the true meaning of the language of said above quoted part section.

Section 7868 G. C. provides:

"The teachers' institutes of each county shall be under the supervision of the county boards of education. Such boards shall decide by formal resolution at any regular or special meeting held prior to February 1st of each year whether a county institute shall be held in the county during the current year.

The words "a county institute," used in the above section, mean one institute.

They designate a single thing and would, therefore, indicate that the board is limited to the calling of but one institute, and the proposition that several institutes may be held, no one of which is for a longer period than five days, must fall.

If, now, but a single institute can be held, then we must determine whether such single institute can be held as a regular session on one day or days and adjourned sessions on other days during the year, the extent of which regular and adjourned sessions do not in the aggregate cover more than five days, or, if such single institute must be held, covering said five days, that said five days must be during any particular time.

The chapter of our school laws which refers to county teachers' institutes was first enacted as a part of the school laws of this state May 1, 1873, 70 O. L. 226, and in said chapter it was provided, among other things, that "any teacher in any public school is hereby authorized to dismiss the school under his or her charge for the week in which is held the county teachers' institute," and said chapter further provides that such teachers should receive pay for such week. Thus it is plainly set forth that originally the institute was to be held during a single week and it was also provided that such institute should continue for "not less than four days." Said section was carried into the Revised Statutes as section 4019 and provides that "all teachers of the public schools within any county in which a county teachers' institute is held may dismiss their schools for one week for the purpose of such institute." Said section further provides that teachers should receive the regular salary "for the week" they attend such institute. Some light is also gathered from section 7870 G. C., which provides as follows:

> "When a teachers' institute has been authorized by the county board of education, the boards of education of a school district shall pay the teachers and superintendents of their respective districts their regular salary for the week they attend the institute * * *", thus indicating that a single institute is contemplated and that the same is to be held during but one week. It is also provided in section 7870 that if the institute is held when the schools are not in session, such teachers or superintendents shall be paid $2.00 a day for actual daily attendance for not more than five days, but in no place in the statutes is it provided that the teachers shall be paid for attending institutes both while the schools are in session and while the schools are not in session.

I must therefore hold and advise you that the county board of education is authorized to order but one institute held in the county during any one year and that such institute shall be held during some one certain week, either while the schools are or while the schools are not in session, and that if other institutes are held at other times during the year the expenses thereof cannot be paid from the county board of education fund.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TREASURER—NOT ENTITLED TO FEES FOR DISBURSING TOWNSHIP'S SHARE OF CEMETERY IMPROVEMENT FUND.

Where a union cemetery has been created and a board of cemetery trustees elected under section 4193-1 G. C., and the township trustees provided, as their proportion, the sum of $7,000.00, which was set apart in a bank under the control of the township treasurer, and said fund was disbursed on the order of the clerk of the cemetery trustees, which was countersigned by the township treasurer, the payment of such fund is not paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury by the treasurer upon the order of the township trustees, and the township treasurer is not entitled to any fees thereon, under section 3318 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

HON. CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 14, 1917, and the additional communication with further facts under date of April 2, 1917, wherein you ask for an opinion upon the following state of facts:

> A union cemetery has been created under sections 4183 et seq. G. C., whereby the council of the city of Niles and the trustees of the township of Weathersfield jointly control the Niles Union Cemetery. Cemetery trustees were selected under section 4193-1 G. C.
> In the providing of funds for certain improvements, the township trustees, as their proportion, voted the sum of $7,000.00. This sum was set apart in the bank under the control of the township treasurer, and was paid out in various sums, on the order of the clerk of the cemetery trustees, which was countersigned by the township treasurer.
> Is the treasurer entitled to his fees under section 3318 G. C., for receiving, safekeeping, and paying out money belonging to the township treasurer upon the order of the township trustees?

Section 4193-1 G. C. reads as follows:

> "At any such joint meeting or at the joint meeting provided for by section 4192 of the General Code, by a majority vote of all present counting council members and trustees, such meeting may elect a board of cemetery trustees consisting of three members, of which one or more must be a member of each of the separate boards of township trustees and municipal councils comprised in the union cemetery association represented by such joint meeting. Such board of cemetery trustees so elected shall have all the powers and perform all the duties exercised and performed by directors of public service of municipalities under sections 4161 and 4168 inclusive, of the General Code. At the first election of such board of cemetery trustees, one shall be chosen for one year, one for two years and one for three years, together with such part of a year as may intervene between the time of such election and the first day of January next thereafter. Yearly thereafter at the joint meeting held in May one trustee shall be chosen for three years commencing on the first day of January next thereafter. Any regular or regularly called joint meeting of the township trustees and municipal council may fill vacancies occurring on the board of cemetery trustees by a majority vote of the members present, such election to be for the unexpired term.
> "Any member of such board of county trustees may be removed by such joint meeting on a two-thirds vote of all members entitled to sit in such joint meeting, for misfeasance or malfeasance in office, any gross neglect of duty or gross immorality, but no member shall be so removed until he shall have had at least ten days' notice in writing, together with a copy of the charges against him, and shall have had opportunity to appear and defend himself either in person or by counsel."

It will be noted that the board of cemetery trustees elected under the above section shall have all the powers and perform all the duties exercised and performed by directors of public service of municipalities under sections 4161 et seq. G. C. These last mentioned sections among other things give the director of public service possession, charge and entire management, control and regulation of cemeteries, subject to ordinances of council. Subject to the approval of council, he appoints and determines the amount of compensation of the necessary superintendents and employes, etc.

Under section 4164 G. C. he performs such other duties as council by ordinance prescribes.

Under section 4167 G. C. he has entire charge and control of receipts from the sale of lots and the laying off and embellishing of the grounds. He is authorized to sell lots, receive payment therefor, direct the improvements and make the expenditures under such rules and orders as he prescribes, and invest, manage and control property received by donations and surplus funds in his hands from any source whatsoever.

Prior to the enactment of supplemental section 4193-1 G. C., and where the provisions of said section have not been taken advantage of by virtue of section 4189 G. C., this character of union cemetery shall be under the control and management of the trustees of the township and the council of the municipality, and their duties in relation thereto shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation.

In an opinion found in the annual report of the attorney-general for 1914, Vol. I, p. 164, under date of February 5, 1914, it was held that the trustees of townships and councils of municipalities, acting as a joint board in the control of union cemeteries, have the same powers and duties for managing and controlling such cemeteries that a city or village has when controlling its own cemetery, and at p. 165 the opinion reads:

"Under favor of this section (referring to section 4193 G. C.), and in virtue of the power granted in section 4189, as amended, all joint boards may create a superintendent, manager, board of trustees, or such other officer or officers as it deems best and proper for the government of the cemetery and the application of all moneys belonging to such cemetery, and including the selection of a treasurer, provision for his bond, and the loaning, investment, reinvestment of moneys belonging thereto."

Since the rendering of this opinion, the supplemental section 4193-1 G. C. has been passed, expressly granting the power to elect a board of cemetery trustees in the manner therein provided.

From your question I understand that the joint board has elected a board of cemetery trustees under this section. Your inquiry does not contain facts sufficiently detailing whether this board of trustees has organized, other than the facts stated that the money referred to in the inquiry was paid out on the order of "the clerk of the cemetery trustees." I take it, then, that the newly elected board of cemetery trustees has selected a clerk, but your question does not disclose whether or not they have selected a treasurer.

You say the sum of $7,000.00 was set apart in the bank under the control of the township treasurer and payments were made out of that fund, on the order of the clerk of the cemetery trustees, countersigned by the township treasurer. But the question is, would the township treasurer under such a state of facts be entitled to fees under section 3318 G. C.?

Section 3318 G. C. provides:

> "The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent. of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees."

This section authorizes a fee of 2 per cent. of all moneys paid out by the township treasurer upon the order of the township trustees as an allowance for "safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury." So before the treasurer would be entitled to fees under this section the money which was paid out should belong to the township treasurer and the payments out of this fund should be paid out upon the order of the township trustees. It is well settled that unless there is express statutory authority, an officer is not entitled to the particular fee.

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1916, volume I, page 760, under date of May 3, 1916, one of the questions involved was whether or not a township treasurer was entitled to fees for receiving and disbursing funds under the provisions of sections 7035 and 7051 G. C. (these sections have since been repealed).

At page 761 reference is made to a case litigated in the common pleas court of Medina county, S. E. Forney, plaintiff, v. Jacob Nolt et al., as the Board of Trustees of Homer township, Medina county, Ohio, defendants, which was decided on October 9, 1915, by said court. In the opinion in said case the court said:

> "Counsel upon both sides agree that there is no express statutory authority imposing a duty upon the township treasurer to receive said funds. But the question is not as to the proper custody of the fund, but as to whether compensation can be allowed for the service. And even though there were an express provision of the statute, designating the township treasurer as the custodian of the funds of the township road district, in the absence of any provision, other than section 3318 G. C., fixing his compensation for the service, the court would still be constrained to hold under the authority of cases herein cited, that the treasurer would not be entitled to receive compensation for receiving and distributing said road funds."

It is evident that the reasons for the above decision, as well as the other decisions in said opinion referred to, are not only that there was no express authority in the statute authorizing the particular fee, but since reference had to be made to section 3318 G. C., compensation was denied because the particular fund in question belonged to some other jurisdiction than the township treasury.

So in this case, the funds belonging to the joint or union district are not funds belonging to the township treasury, and while it does not appear how the township treasurer holds this fund, according to the facts stated, it is not paid out, under section 3318 G. C., "upon the order of the township trustees," but it is paid out, as stated in your inquiry, "on the order of the clerk of the cemetery trustees."

In view of all the foregoing, my answer to your question is that the township treasurer is not entitled to the fees provided for in section 3318 G. C., for paying out the money of the union cemetery referred to,upon the order of the clerk of the cemetery trustees, countersigned by himself.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF PERRY COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 6, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Perry county, Ohio, in the sum of $60,000, for the purpose of funding and extending the time of payment of certain indebtedness of said county, which from its limits of taxation it is unable to pay at maturity.

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the county commissioners of Perry county, Ohio, relative to the above bond issue, and find said proceedings to be in conformity to the provisions of the General Code relating thereto.

I am of the opinion that properly prepared bonds covering said issue, signed and sealed by the proper officers of Perry county, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PUPIL—WHEN ENTITLED TO ATTEND HIGH SCHOOL AND HAVE TUITION PAID.

1. A pupil holding a diploma under the provisions of section 7744 G. C. (now repealed) is entitled to the advantages of a high school education as provided in sections 7747 and 7748 G. C.

2. But he must use these advantages under the limitations set out in section 7748 G. C., and whenever the board of education of the township or district in which he resides establishes a first grade high school within four miles of his residence, he must attend the same; or if he attend another, the said board will not be liable for his tuition.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. ADDISON P. MINSHALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of May 1, 1917, was received, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "Under date of November 15, 1916, I submitted a question to Hon. Edward C. Turner, attorney-general, and on November 28, 1916, the question was answered. The question at that time did not contain all the facts and I am desirous of having your opinion upon the following proposition:
> "Under the Boxwell law a pupil passed a satisfactory examination and took part in the commencement exercises as provided for by law. Under the new school law the pupil has been promoted to high school as provided for by law. Does this entitle such pupil to attend any high school and have his tuition paid if, since that time, the township board of education has established a township high school in the township wherein this pupil lives which is less than four miles distant from the home of said pupil and who will be transported by said township to said township high school?"

In your communication you suggest that my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, rendered an opinion in reference to this same matter, but that the question upon which he passed did not contain the statement upon which you now ask my opinion.

In order to understand the matter fully, it will be necessary for me to notice the opinion rendered by Mr. Turner, which is in Vol. II of the opinions of the attorney-general for 1916, p. 1853, bearing date November 28, 1916. His opinion was rendered in reference to the following question:

> "Under the Boxwell law a pupil passed a satisfactory examination and took part in the commencement exercises as provided by law. Does this entitle him to attend a high school and have his tuition paid for the number of years he would have been entitled to attend the high school if the Boxwell law had not been repealed?"

Mr. Turner did not directly answer this question but he held as follows, in the syllabus:

> "A pupil who held a diploma under the provisions of section 7744 G. C. at the time of its repeal, and is now of lawful school age, and has not completed the high school work, is entitled to all the rights and privileges conferred by sections 7747 and 7748 G. C., 104 O. L. 125, subject to the provisions of section 7750 G. C."

That is, Mr. Turner held that the pupil who held the diploma under the old law would be entitled to enter high school and have all the rights and privileges conferred under the new law. Thus he virtually answered that the old law did not control in the matter of high school advantages, but that the new law controls, the sections of which, having to do with high school advantages, being sections 7747 and 7748 G. C. With this opinion I concur. The law does not guarantee to a pupil that he shall have the high school advantages that may be in force at any particular time, but his high school advantages are to be ascertained from the law as it exists from time to time.

With the opinion rendered by Mr. Turner in mind, let us consider the new facts submitted to this department, which in short is this, that since the graduation of the said pupil under the old Boxwell law, your board of education has established and organized a high school in the township of which this pupil is a resident, and that this high school is located within four miles of the home of this said pupil, and further, that the pupil will be transported by said township to said township high school. Upon this statement of fact you ask whether the said pupil may "attend any high school and have his tuition paid" by the board of education of the township in which he resides.

Mr. Turner held that he was entitled to the advantages of the new law, that is, the advantages set forth in sections 7747 and 7748 G. C. If he is entitled to the advantages set forth in said two sections, I think it is clear that he must take these advantages with the conditions and limitations set out in the same sections. In order to understand the limitations set forth in these sections, let us note what his advantages would have been under the law as it stood when he secured his diploma.

Section 7744 G. C., then in force, provided:

> "Such diploma shall entitle its holder to enter any high school in the state."

But this does not mean that he could enter any high school he might choose and have his tuition paid, for section 7747 as it stood before it was amended provided:

> "The tuition of pupils holding diplomas and residing in township or special districts in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence."

Thus under the old law, if there was a high school located in the township or special district where the pupil resided, no difference how far distant from his home he could not attend another high school outside the township or district and have his tuition paid by the board of education of the township or district in which he resided.

Inasmuch as your board of education had no high school at the time the pupil received his diploma, he would have been entitled to have entered any high school in the state, and his own board of education would have been compelled to have paid his tuition. This has been modified under the provisions of section 7748 G. C., which provides among other things:

> "No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years; except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the further provisions hereof, residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel, from the high school provided by the board, when such applicants attend a nearer high school, or in lieu of paying such tuition the board of education maintaining a high school may pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from the said high school maintained by the said board of education to said high school."

Under the old law the said pupil would have been compelled to have attended his own high school, no matter how far he lived from the same; but under the law as it now stands he is not compelled to attend his own high school if he lives more than four miles from the said high school and can attend another high school that is nearer than four miles.

Your communication, as I understand it, virtually raises this question: Suppose that a board of education, during the year 1916-1917, maintained no high school within the boundaries of the township, and suppose that a pupil enters a high school without the township and attends there during said school year, and attends said high school say for two years; but in the meantime the board of education established and maintained a high school, having it ready for school for the year 1918-1919, it being located within four miles of the residence of said pupil. Then could said pupil still attend the high school which he had been attending for two years, and ask that the board of education, in the township where he resides, pay his tuition for the remaining two years? I think not.

The policy of the law seems to be that every pupil should receive the advantages of a high school education for a term of four years, but there is no indication in the statutes and no reason can be given why this education should all be furnished in the same high school. Hence, whenever a board of education furnishes high school advantages coming within the conditions and limitations set forth in section 7748, G. C., the pupil can not attend a high school in another township and ask the board of education of his own township to pay the tuition.

I am answering this question on the theory that the board of education in the case suggested has established and is maintaining a first grade high school. If it is maintaining a second or third grade high school, the provisions of the first part of section 7748 G. C. would control.

Hence, answering your question specifically, a pupil who received a diploma under the Boxwell law, at a time when the board of education of the township in which he resided maintained no high school, but afterwards establishes and maintains a high school, must attend said high school after it has been established, provided it is within four miles of his residence; or if he does not attend said high school, and attends some other, the board of education of the township or district in which he resides will not be liable for his tuition.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

LIBERTY LOAN BONDS—ARE GOVERNMENT BONDS.

"Liberty Loan Bonds" are "Government Bonds" in every sense of the term, and may be accepted as such by the state treasurer for all purposes authorized by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. CHESTER E. BRYAN, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor addressed to me under date of May 12, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "This office would like to have your opinion as to whether the new liberty loan bonds can be accepted as security on the same basis as other government bonds.
> "We are having inquiries as to the above and for that reason we have written you so that we may intelligently answer these inquiries."

The "Liberty Loan Bonds," so called, mentioned in your communication are bonds issued by the government of the United States pursuant to an act of congress approved April 24, 1917, enacted by that body under its constitutional power "to borrow money on the credit of the United States." Section 1 of said act, wherein the issue of said bonds is authorized and provided for, reads as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the secretary of the treasury, with the approval of the President, is hereby authorized to borrow, from time to time, on the credit of the United States for the purposes of this act, and to meet expenditures authorized for the national security and defense and other public purposes authorized by law not exceeding in the aggregate $5,000,000,000, exclusive of the sums authorized by section four of this act, and to issue therefor bonds of the United States.
> "The bonds herein authorized shall be in such form and subject to such terms and conditions of issue, conversion, redemption, maturities, payment, and rate and time of payment of interest, not exceeding three and one-half per centum per annum, as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe. The principal and interest thereof shall be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value and shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation, except estate or inheritance taxes, imposed by authority of the United States, or its possessions, or by any state or local taxing authority; but such bonds shall not bear the circulation privilege.
> "The bonds herein authorized shall first be offered at not less than par as a popular loan, under such regulations prescribed by the secretary of the treasury as will give all citizens of the United States an equal opportunity to participate therein; and any portion of the bonds so offered and not subscribed for may be otherwise disposed of at not less than par by the secretary of the treasury; but no commissions shall be allowed or paid on any bonds issued under authority of this act."

There is nothing in this section or the act of which it is a part, or elsewhere in the legislation of congress, which indicates that these bonds are not to be considered

"Government Bonds" in all that that term implies; and, answering your inquiry, I advise you that you are authorized to accept said bonds as security for deposits, or otherwise, on the same basis as other government bonds.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PROBATE JUDGE—MUST CHARGE PHYSICIAN FEE FOR CERTIFIED COPY OF CERTIFICATE TO PRACTICE MEDICINE.

Probate judge is without authority to furnish free of charge to a physician a certified copy of his certificate to practice medicine, but such judge must charge for such service the fee provided for in section 1280 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. W. J. BISSMAN, Probate Judge, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 28, 1917, as follows:

"Some days ago I wrote you asking your opinion in regard to this office making medical certificates to the doctors, who intend to use them in making application for the medical service in the army.

"This question was brought about because certain doctors became indignant when told of the fee to this office.

"The sections I refer to are as follows:

"Section 1279. Upon application the probate judge shall make a certified copy of a certificate and the indorsement thereon, which certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of the matter and facts therein contained.

"Section 1280. For services under the provisions of this chapter the probate judge shall receive from the holder of a certificate the following fees: For recording and indexing each certificate, fifty cents; for certified copies, the same fees as are allowed by law for copies of record kept by him.

"The law is very specific and really needs no construction, but what I should like to have your opinion on and for which I wrote several days ago, is, would I be permitted to issue these certificates free gratis?"

Sections 1278, 1279 and 1280 G. C. read:

"Section 1278. Each person who receives a certificate to practice medicine or surgery, before beginning practice, must deposit his certificate with the probate judge of the county in which he resides. The probate judge shall record it in a book kept for that purpose and indorse on the margin of the record and on the certificate the time when he received it for record, and make an index to all certificates by him recorded. The probate judge shall also note the revocation of a certificate, or the death or change of location of the owner of a certificate in the margin of the record. If the owner of a certificate changes his place of residence, he must have such certificate recorded by the probate judge of the county into which he removes.

"Section 1279. Upon application the probate judge shall make a certified copy of a certificate and the indorsements thereon, which certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of the matters and facts therein contained.

"Section 1280. For services under the provisions of this chapter, the probate judge shall receive from the holder of a certificate the following fees: For recording and indexing each certificate, fifty cents; for certified copies, the same fees as are allowed by law for copies of records kept by him."

Sections 1601 and 1602 General Code provide for fees of the probate judge, but make no provision for fees for furnishing copies of records. However, section 1603 General Code provides as follows:

"For other services for which compensation is not otherwise provided by law, the probate judge shall be allowed the same fees as are allowed the clerk of the court of common pleas for similar services."

Section 2901 General Code, relating to the fees of the clerk of the common pleas court, provides in part:

"* * * for making copies of pleadings, process, record or files, including certificate and seal, ten cents per hundred words; * * *"

The question you ask is whether or not the probate judge must charge for copies of physicians' certificates or whether, if he chooses, he may make and furnish same free.

The fees provided to be paid the probate judge for his services are to be paid by him into the county treasury and the fee charged is, therefore, charged for the benefit of the county. This being so, the probate judge cannot waive the charge provided for by the statute and it is therefore my opinion that in the case you refer to he is without authority to furnish a copy of the certificate free of charge.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE FAIRPORT FIRST HUNGARIAN YOUNG MEN'S CLUB AND SICK BENEFIT ASSOCIATION —DOES NOT COMPLY WITH SECTION 9427—SUCH ASSOCIATION SHOULD CLAIM AND PROVIDE FOR RIGHT OF ASSESSING MEMBERS TO INSURE PAYMENT OF BENEFITS.

Articles of incorporation which are tendered for the incorporation of an association under the provisions of section 9427 of the General Code, which, among other things, provides that said association is incorporated for the purpose "of receiving contributions and in case of the death of the contributors to pay the beneficiary certain designated funeral benefits" does not in this respect comply with section 9427, which provides, among other things, that such associations may be incorporated "for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the families, heirs, executors, administrators or assigns of the deceased members of such association, as the member may direct."

An association incorporated under the provisions of section 9427, General Code, should in its articles of incorporation claim and provide for the right of making assessments on its members for the purpose of insuring the payment of the benefits therein provided for.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. WILLIAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of May 18, 1917, submitting for my approval or rejection articles of incorporation of the Fairport First Hungarian Young Men's Club and Sick Benefit Association, a proposed corporation not for profit, together with check in the sum of $25.00 covering the filing fee of said articles of incorporation.

I know of no statutory provision which requires my official approval of these articles, but treating your communication as one requesting my opinion with respect to the legality of the articles of incorporation of this proposed corporation, I beg to note some objections apparent on an inspection of said articles.

The purpose clause of the articles of the proposed corporation reads as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of promoting friendly social intercourse and to encourage education and investigation in matters of public convenience and welfare; of providing social entertainment and amusement for its members and their friends and of providing a meeting place for its members; of receiving contributions from and extending relief to its contributors and members in case of sickness or injury by paying them certain designated sums of money per week, as sick and accident benefits; of receiving contributions and in case of the death of the contributors to pay the beneficiary certain designated funeral benefits; of holding real estate; of investing its funds in mortgages, bonds or other interest bearing securities; of making by-laws, rules and regulations for the government of its stockholders, members and contributors; and generally of doing every other act or thing not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state or of the United States which may be necessary to promote the objects and purposes for which the said association was incorporated."

The social and educational features noted in the purpose clause above quoted might well be covered by incorporation not for profit under the general incorporation laws of the state. Other provisions of the purpose clause, however, indicate a purpose on the part of the proposed corporation to conduct the business of insurance, and this purpose must be covered by incorporation under statutory provisions relating specifically to the incorporation of insurance companies; for it is certain that a corporation can not be incorporated under the general incorporation laws of the state for the purpose of carrying on an insurance business.

State v. Pioneer Livestock Co., 38 O. S. 347;
See Sec. 665 General Code.

Authority to incorporate for the insurance purposes set out in the purpose clause of these articles must be found, if at all, in the provisions of section 9427, General Code which reads as follows:

> "A company or association may be organized to transact the business of life or accident or life and accident insurance on the assessment plan, for the purpose of mutual protection and relief of its members, and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the families, heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns of the deceased members of such company or association, as the members may direct, in the manner provided in the by-laws. The company also may receive money either by voluntary donation or contribution, or collect it by assessments on its members, and may accumulate, invest, distribute and appropriate such money in such manner as it deems proper. All accumulations and accretions thereon shall be held and used as the property of the members and in the interest of the members, and not be loaned to, used, appropriated, or invested for the benefit of any officer or manager of such company or association. No company or association shall issue a certificate for a greater amount than it is able to pay from the proceeds of one assessment. Such company or association shall be subject to the provisions of this chapter," and the fact that a filing fee of $25.00 is tendered with the articles of incorporation evidences an intent on the part of the incorporators to incorporate under this section. (See 176 G. C., Sub. 4).

Applying the provisions of section 9427 General Code, to those found in the purpose clause of the articles, I note that the articles provide, among other things, that said corporation is formed for the purpose "of receiving contributions and in case of the death of the contributors to pay to the beneficiary certain designated funeral benefits." It is manifest that this provision is not a compliance with section 9427 of the General Code, which provides that a company or association may be organized, among other purposes, "for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the families, heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns of the deceased members of such company or association, as the member may direct."

That the clause in these articles providing for the payment to the beneficiary of certain designated funeral benefits is a species of insurance seems to be recognized by section 666 of the General Code. It is certain, however, that there is nothing in the provisions of section 9427 General Code, which authorizes insurance of this kind.

As a second objection to the articles of association of this proposed corporation, it will be noted that there is nothing in the provisions of the purpose clause of said articles conferring upon the association the right to make assessments on its members for the purpose of securing the payment of the benefits therein provided for. The question of the necessity of such provision is placed in some doubt in construing the provisions of section 9427 General Code, in the light of the history of its enactment in its present form.

What is now section 9427 General Code was originally enacted April 20, 1872 (60 Ohio Laws, page 82.) Section 1 of this act provided as follows:

> "Any number of persons, not less than five, may associate themselves together as provided in the first section of the act entitled 'An act to provide for the creation and regulation of incorporated companies in the State of Ohio,' passed May 1, 1852, for the purpose of mutual protection and relief of its members, and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the familes or heirs of the deceased members of such associations."

This act was carried into the Revised Statutes as section 3630 thereof, and later the same was amended by acts found in 83 Ohio Laws, page 61, and 88 Ohio Laws, page 251. By these amendments the phrase "to transact the business of life or accident, or life and accident insurance on the assessment plan" and the words "executors, administrators or assigns" were, among other things, added to original section 3630 Revised Statutes, which is now section 9427 of the General Code.

The question presented is whether or not the legislature in inserting at the beginiing of section 3630 Revised Statutes, the phrase "to transact the business of life or accident or life and accident insurance on the assessment plan" had in mind a description of a different class of corporations from that described in the section as first enacted, viz.: for the purpose of the mutual protection and relief of its members.

Notwithstanding the manner in which the provisions of section 9427 General Code were enacted, I am inclined to the view that with respect to the question here suggested the said provisions should be read and construed as a whole. So reading the section I am convinced that the provision therein, that no company or association shall issue a certificate for a greater amount than it is able to pay from the proceeds of one assessment, has reference and application to all companies or associations organized under section 9427; and giving effect to this particular provision of the section, and construing the whole in the light of a recognized public policy which looks to certainty in the payment of the benefits provided for, I am inclined to the view that all companies or associations organized under the provisions of this section should, in their articles of incorporation, specifically claim and provide for the right of making assessments on its members for the purpose of securing the mutual protection and relief of its members and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to those who in case of the death of a member are entitled to receive such payment.

Though I do not think that an association of this kind is required to incorporate for all the purposes authorized by section 9427 of the General Code, and though under the specific provisions of section 9427 such association may receive donations and contributions, I do not think that the payment of the benefits provided for in the section should be compelled to depend upon such voluntary contributions, but that the association should claim and have the right to make assessments to carry out the prime purpose of the association, which is that of protection and relief of its members while living and the payment of certain stipulated sums to the families, heirs, executors, administrators or assigns of members who may die.

For the reasons above noted, I am of the opinion that the articles of incorporation do not conform to the statutory provisions relating to the incorporation of such association and that you should not file the same.

I am returning herewith the articles of incorporation and check for $25.00 submitted by you.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PROBATE JUDGE—BOND—APPROVAL BY COMMISSIONERS RELATES BACK TO TIME SAME WAS FILED WITH THEIR SECRETARY—WHEN JUDGE ENTERS UPON DISCHARGE OF DUTIES—PRIOR TO FILING BOND—DOES NOT FORFEIT OFFICE.

When a probate judge gave his bond to the county auditor as secretary of the board of county commissioners, on the 9th day of February, 1917, and the commissioners at a later date approved same, the approval relates back to the date of the filing with the secretary of the board.

Where a probate judge enters upon the discharge of his duties on the first day of his term, prior to the filing of his bond, for approval, with the secretary of the board of county commissioners on the same day, and the county commissioners later approve said bond, there is no ipso facto forfeiture of said office, nor is a vacancy created which should be fil ed by the governor.

Whether such facts are grounds for a judicial determination of the status of such officer, by a proceeding in quo warranto, query.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. JAMES M. COX, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Some time ago you received an inquiry as to whether or not a vacancy exists in the office of probate judge of Guernsey county, with the request that the matter be submitted to me for an opinion, and said request was forwarded to this department for attention.

The facts regarding the situation, as I have gathered them, are as follows:

At the November election, 1916, Mr. Dyson was elected as probate judge of Guernsey county, for the term beginning February 9, 1917. He was then the incumbent of that office and was re-elected to succeed himself. It appears that he did not attempt to file the bond required by law until some time in the afternoon of November 9, 1916, at which time, the county commissioners not then being in session, he tendered the bond to the county auditor, who marked thereon the date of receiving it.

On Februray 10, 1917, Mr. Dyson withdrew the bond from the hands of the auditor and took it to two of the county commissioners at their respective residences and had these commissioners, respectively, approve said bond, and then presented the bond to the county treasurer, who under objection took same, placed it in the vault, but made no record of said bond.

On February 12, 1917, two of the county commissioners, being the same two commissioners who had theretofore approved the bond, again approved said bond, and then it was refiled with the county treasurer.

It is further represented that on February 20, 1917, there was a meeting of the board of county commissioners and the minutes of the special meeting held on February 12, 1917, were approved.

There is no question made, as I understand it, as to the form or sufficiency of the bond presented and approved.

It further appears that prior to the filing of the bond with the auditor on November 9, 1916, said Dyson performed sceral acts as probate judge of Guernsey county, and the claim is therefore made that he entered upon the discharge of his duties as probate judge before giving the bond required by law.

In the discussion of the questions involved, it will be necessary to consider the following sections of the constitution and General Code, to wit:

Article IV, section 7' constitution:

"There shall be established in each county, a probate court, which shall be a court of record, open at all times, and holden by one judge, elected by the electors of the county, who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and shall receive such compensation, payable out of the county treasury, as shall be provided by law. Whenever ten per centum of the number of the electors voting for governor at the next preceding election in any county having less than sixty thousand population as determined by the next preceding federal census, shall petition the judge of the court of common pleas of any such county not less than ninety days before any general election for county officers, the judge of the court of common pleas shall submit to the electors of such county the question of combining the probate court with the court of common pleas, and such courts shall be combined and shall be known as the court of common pleas in case a majority of the electors voting upon such question vote in favor of such combination. Notice of such election shall be given in the same manner as for the election of county officers. Elections may be had in the same manner for the separation of such courts, when once combined."

Section 7 of the General Code:

"A person elected or appointed to an office who is required by law to give a bond or security previous to the performance of the duties imposed on him by his office, who refuses or neglects to give such bond or furnish such security, within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, and in all respects to qualify himself for the performance of such duties, shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office to which he was elected or appointed, and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law."

Section 1580 General Code:

"Quadrennially, one probate judge shall be elected in each county, who shall hold his office for a term of four years, commencing on the ninth day of February next following his election."

Section 1581 General Code:

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, the probate judge shall give a bond to the state in a sum not less than five thousand dollars, with sufficient surety, approved by the board of county commissioners or by the auditor and recorder, in the absence from the county of two of the commissioners, and conditioned that he will faithfully and impartially perform all the duties of his office. Such bond, with the oath of office indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the county treasurer and kept in his office. From time to time, as the state of business in his office renders necessary, the county commissioners may require the probate judge to give additional bond."

Section 2566 General Code:

"By virtue of his office, the county auditor shall be the secretary of the county commissioners, except as otherwise provided by law. When so requested, he shall aid them in the performance of their duties. He shall keep an accurate record of their proceedings, and carefully preserve all documents, books, records, maps and papers required to be deposited and kept in his office."

The question then is, whether under the facts stated and under the constitution and statutes above quoted, a vacancy exists in the office of the judge of the probate court of Guernsey county. The constitution fixes and limits the term of office of probate judge. There is no holding over and, unless Mr. Dyson is legally the probate judge under the election of November 16, 1916, the office is vacant.

State v. Brewster, 44 O. S. 589.

The duties performed by Mr. Dyson on February 9, 1917, prior to any attempt on his part to qualify for the new term by the filing of a proper bond, were performed as probate judge under the new term, and if there is any default by reason of which he would be liable on his bond, the bond for the new term would have to be looked to, and there would be no liability upon the sureties for the old term.

This brings us to a consideration of the provisions of section 7 G. C. supra, because section 1581 G. C. supra provides: and under section 7 G. C., supra, one who refuses or neglects to give the bond required by law to be given previous to the performance of the duties imposed on him by his office,

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, the probate judge shall give a bond to the state", &c.,

"within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, and in all respects to qualify himself for the performance of such duties, shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office to which he was elected or appointed, and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law."

The statutory requirements, that a bond must be executed within a required time, and providing for vacancy for failure so to do, are found in the laws of nearly all the states, and, as stated in Throop on Public Officers, section 173, the weight of authority supports the doctrine that the provision respecting the time is directory, rather than mandatory.

Our supreme court, in State ex rel. v. Commissioners, 61 O. S. 506, had before it a case of a sheriff failing to give a bond before the first Monday in January, after his election, which at first blush appears to be in point in the instant case, and lays down what seems to be a very strict and harsh rule on the question of filing a bond within the time prescribed by law. The statute in that case provided that sheriffs' bonds shall be given within ten days after receiving their commissions and before the first Monday of January next after their election. The sheriff, not finding the board of county commissioners in session on the first day of January, presented his bond to them on the second day of January, when they were in session, but the board, although satisfied with the form and sufficiency of the bond, refused to approve the same because it had not been tendered prior to the first Monday in January, as required by law.

The commissioners thereupon declared the office of sheriff vacated and proceeded to make an appointment to fill it. The sheriff filed a petition in mandamus to require the commissioners to approve the bond.

In a per curiam opinion found on p. 511, the court quotes section 19 R. S., which is now section 7 G. C., and further quotes sections 1203 and 1205 R. S. and then concludes the opinion with the following language:

> "The case before us presents no justification for the failure of the relator to comply with the requirements of the law, nor is the court able to relieve him from the consequences which the statute in plain terms affixes to his failure."

A reading of section 1205 R. S. shows that if the sheriff failed to give the bond within the time specified, then the commissioners "shall declare the office vacant and said office shall thereupon be filled as provided by law."

In the statutes bearing upon the present case, we find no such specific declaration. Section 1581 G. C., referring to the bond of the probate judge, does not contain a provision such as was contained in section 1205 R. S. That section imposes a duty upon the commissioners to declare the office vacant. They were the tribunal that found the facts sufficient for such declaration.

In the present case we are relegated to the words of section 7 G. C., that upon failure to give the bond within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, such action shall be deemed to be a refusal to accept the office "and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law." The words "shall be considered" have a definite, legal meaning.

So while the 61st Ohio State case above quoted may have some bearing, it is not at all conclusive of the question at issue, and may be fairly distinguished. The question before us is not whether a mandamus would lie, to compel the commissioners to approve the bond of Mr. Dyson. There is no need of such a procedure. The commissioners have approved his bond. They have not refused to do so, as in the 61st O. S. case, nor was there any specific statutory authority given them, as in that case, upon a refusal, to declare the office vacant and make a new appointment therefor.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Nash, 65 O. S. 549, if we look at the syllabus alone, we might infer that the mandatory rule is laid down in Ohio, as far as infirmary directors are concerned. In this case Hill was elected to the office of infirmary director, received his commission on the first Monday of January, 1912, but failed and neglected to give a bond upon that date or any date prior thereto. It appears further that said Hill on the 7th day of January, 1902, executed his bond and presented the same to the prosecutor, who refused to approve it, that this bond was filed in the auditor's office on January 7, and on the 15th day of the same month it was presented to the county commissioners for their approval, who refused to approve the same because it was not executed until the 7th of January, and because it was not approved by the prosecutor as required by law. The board of county commissioners proceeded to declare the office of infirmary director vacant for he reasons aforesaid, and appointed one, Witham, to fill said vacancy. The facts were all set forth in a petition for mandamus filed in the supreme court by Witham,who, as above stated, was appointed by the board of county commissioners to fill the supposed vacancy, and upon a demurrer thereto the court in a per curiam decision held:

> "An infirmary director must give bond 'before entering on the discharge of his duties.' Revised statutes, section 960. In this respect the law differs from that governing the bond of a sheriff, which prescribes that a sheriff shall give bond 'within ten days after receiving his commission and before the first Monday of January.' State ex rel. Poorman v. Commissioners, 61 O. S. 506. * * *."

The petition does not show that he performed any official duty prior to the signing of the bond on January 7, 1902, which was the day after the first Monday in January; but it does show that the board of county commissioners refused to approve Hill's bond solely because it appeared from the bond that it was not executed nor filed in the office of the board until the 7th day of January, 1902,

> "and that the prosecuting attorney had not certified the sufficiency of the bond for the same reason. This was not enough to authorize the commissioners to consider the office vacant, under Revised Statutes, section 19, and to proceed to fill the vacancy, under Revised Statutes, section 959. The demurrer is therefore sustained and the petition dismissed."

It will be noted that the provision for the giving of the bond by the infirmary director under section 960 R. S. was almost identical with the provision requiring the giving of a bond by judge of a probate court, to wit, "before entering upon the discharge of his duties."

In this case in 65 O. S., the court distinguishes the sheriff's case as found in State ex rel. v. Commissioners, 61 O. S. 506, by calling attention to the fact that in the sheriff's case the requirement for the giving of a bond is that it be given "within ten days after receiving his commission and before the first Monday of January."

But what was the court called upon to decide in the infirmary directors' case, supra, and what did it really decide? Reading the syllabus in the light of the facts as presented, it manifestly appears that the court held that the mere showing that a board of county commissioners had refused to approve Hill's bond, and this solely because it appeared from the bond that it was not executed nor filed in the office of the board until the 7th of January, 1902, and further that the prosecuting attorney had not certified the sufficiency of the bond for the same reason, did not constitute sufficient ground for the commissioners to > "consider the office vacant under Revised Statutes, section 19, and to proceed to fill the vacancy under Revised Statutes, section 959."

In other words, as it seems to me, the court found that the matters referred to were not sufficient grounds upon which to base a decision that the office was vacant. In that case the commissioners under the statute were the officials to determine whether or not grounds existed for the declaring of the office to be vacant, and they also were the appointing power. But they had no arbitrary power to declare the office vacant, nor was their decision final as to whether the grounds were sufficient or not. At least this would appear from the action of the supreme court, for in the face of the fact that the commissioners had considered the office vacant and appointed Witham to fill the vacancy, the court refused the writ of mandamus asked.

In the case of Davies, Auditor, v. State ex rel. Scherer, 11 C. C. (N. S.) 209, the court was called upon to pass upon the question as to whether or not the failure of an assessor in a municipality to qualify within the period after election prescribed by law, would be deemed a refusal to accept the office and create a vacancy.

Section 1536-999 R. S. provided that:

> "The council may declare vacant the office of any person elected or appointed to an office who shall fail to take the oath required in section 1737 or to give any bond required of him within ten days after he has been notified of his appointment or election or obligation to give a new or additional bond, as the case may be."

The court held that such failure was deemed a refusal to accept the office, which became ipso facto vacant. The court considered the provisions of section 19 R. S., now section 7 G. C., and says at p. 213 that this section should be read in connection with section 1518 R. S., referring specifically to the office of assessor, and concludes that the vacancy is not dependent upon the declaration by the council, but that the office becomes ipso facto vacant upon the failure to file the bond within the period prescribed by law.

The court in this case seems to have been governed particularly by the decision of the Nebraska supreme court in State ex rel. v. Lansing, 64 N. W. 1104. It is well to remember that the statute of Nebraska contains the phrase "shall thereupon ipso facto become vacant," for the authorities seem to give extra significance to the use of the term ipso facto as being self-executing, where the omission of such words is held to render the statute not self-executing.

Irvine, J., in the Nebraska case, 46 Neb. 524, at p. 528, uses the following language:

> "Were the statute much less distinct in its terms and were we to follow the general current of authorities elsewhere, we would be obliged to hold that such a condition precedent did attach; but evidently, for the purpose of permitting no room for doubt upon the question, the legislature has adopted language which, as strongly as any language could, conveys that the bond must be filed within the time limited or the person elected loses all right to the office. The language of the statute is that a neglect to have the bond approved and filed within the time limited shall ipso facto vacate the office. If possible in construing a statute every word thereof must be given effect, and if we give the term ipso facto any effect, it must be in the way indicated."

Attention may be called to the fact that even with such strong and positive language, Norval, C. J., and Ragan, C., dissented, holding under the authority of State v. Ruff, 29 Pac. Rep. (Wash.) 999, Commissioners of Knox County v. Johnson, 24 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 148 and Atchafalaya Bank v. Dawson, 13 La. 497, that the provisions as to vacancy are not self-executing; that the execution and filing of an official bond was not a condition precedent to his right to enter upon and discharge the duties of the office; that the holding of the office was by a defeasible title from the time of his neglect to execute and file his official bond—that is, he held the office by a title capable of being divested at any time by the proper legal authorities; and that the execution and filing of his official bond by respondent, coupled with the neglect and failure of the proper authorities to declare the office vacant or to take any steps to that end prior to the time that respondent did execute and file his bond, saved the forfeiture incurred.

It might be well at this point to consider the case reported in 7 Richardson's Law Rep. (S. C.) at pages 216 et seq. This was an action on a bond given by a master in equity, the defense being that the bond was not filed in proper time, and the master had not taken, subscribed and caused to be endorsed the proper oaths of office. At page 226 the court uses the following language:

> "The first question here is, the effect of Laurens's failure to sue out his commission within the time required by law, and to take and endorse thereon the prescribed oaths of office. By the 3rd section of the act of 1840 (11 Stat. 109), every master-in-equity, is required within three weeks after his election, or appointment, to tender his bond to the proper officers for approval, and immediately after the same has been approved, to deposit the same with the treasurer, and sue out his commission; 'and upon his neglect or failure to do so within the said time, his office shall be deemed absolutely vacant, and shall be filled by election or appointment, as heretofore provided.'"

At page 230 the following language is used:

"While the right of the lawful incumbent in office to resist the entry of his successor until the official title of the latter is perfected, is fully conceded, it is clear, however, that such right can only be practically enforced where the incumbent and the successor are different persons, and that such right, too, can only exist so long as the title of the latter is in complete; but the moment such title is actually perfected, no matter what may have been the laches or delay that retarded its completion, by a full compliance with all the provisions of the law, the incumbent's right to resist the entry of his successor is eo instanti at an end; and this period, whenever it does happen, will form the terminating point of the old tenure, and the commencement of the new.

* * * * * * * * * *

"In that condition of things, and being out of office, as we have supposed, the lawful incumbent might rightfully have resisted his entry, and the state might also have declared his office vacant, and ordered the vacancy to be filled, either by election or appointment, pursuant to the provisions of the act. But the moment he was permitted to file his bond in the treasurer's office, and to sue out his commission, these several delinquencies became completely cured, and his title de facto was rendered as perfect as if there had been a literal compliance with all the provisions of the act."

The court held that because the bond was not approved and deposited with the treasurer within the time prescribed by the act of 1840, paragraph three, was no defense to the action; that the provisions requiring the master to tender his bond for approval, deposit it with the treasurer, sue out his commission and take, endorse upon the commission and subscribe certain oaths within a given time, are merely directory, and that the failure or neglect to comply is a cause of forfeiture.

The last paragraph of the syllabus reads as follows:

"It is the duty of the officer elect to perfect his title by complying with the directions of the law. His failure to do so is his own wrongful neglect, and is no defense to an action against his sureties on his official bond."

In a Pennsylvania case, found in 64 Atl. 443, In re Supervisor of Nether Providence Township, the first paragraph of the syllabus reads as follows:

"1. Officers—Failure to File Bond—Effect.

"Act March 16, 1860 (P. L. 174), providing that certain offices shall be declared vacant on the failure of the official to file a bond within a month after his election, held not mandatory; the word 'shall' in the act meaning 'may.' "

Mitchell, C. J., at p. 444, quotes Sharswood, J., in Pittsburgh v. Coursin, 74 Pa. 400:

"Where the words are affirmative and relate to the manner in which power or jurisdiction vested in a public officer or body is to be exercised, and not to the limits of the power or jurisdiction itself, they will in general be so construed."

The court continues:

"The intent of the present act is not to defeat the will of the electors by ousting newly elected officers, nor to make an opportunity for the other officials of the township to do so, but to secure the proper safeguards of the public funds before the new officials begin to handle them. In that interest it is important also that the interval should be brief between the termination of the security under the old officers and the attaching of the security under the new. What the statute intends to provide against is not a temporary omission, irrespective of all circumstances, to enter the prescribed security, but a default on the part of the officer, an omission not legally excused."

In State ex rel. v. Carroll (Wash.), 106 Pac. Rep. 748, the third paragraph of the syllabus reads:

"The failure of one duly appointed to a public office to give the required bond does not prevent him from being a de jure officer, holding by a defeasible title; the giving of the bond being a ministerial act for the security of the government, and not a condition precedent to the officer's authority to act unless specially made so by statute."

At p. 750 the court uses this language:

"So, also, the failure to give a bond does not render an officer duly elected or appointed a de facto officer. He is a de jure officer, holding by a defeasible title. Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399. The giving of a bond is a mere ministerial act for the security of the government, and not a condition precedent to the officer's authority to act unless especially made so by statute. Glavey v. United States, 182 U. S. 595. * * * The courts generally hold that, even though the statute expressly provides that, upon a failure to give a bond within the time prescribed, the office shall be deemed vacant, and may be filled by appointment, the default is a ground for forfeiture only, not forfeiture ipso facto, and that if, notwithstanding such default, the state or other power sees fit to excuse the delinquency by granting the officer his commission, the defects of his title are cured, and it is a title de jure, having relation back to the time of his election or appointment. People ex rel. Bennett v. Benfield, 80 Mich 265, 45 N. W. 135."

The Illinois supreme court in 95 Ill., 593, City of Chicago v. Gage, was called upon to construe a similar provision to the one found in section 7 G. C. The charter of the city provided that when official bonds are not filed with the city clerk within fifteen days after the official canvassing of the votes,

"the person so in default shall be deemed to have refused said office and the same shall be filled by appointment, as in other cases."

There is a further provision in the charter that makes it the duty of the clerk,

"to notify all persons elected * * * to office of their election * * *, and unless such persons shall respectively qualify within fifteen days thereter, the offices shall become vacant."

It was held these provisions, in respect to the time within which the official bonds were required to be filed, were not mandatory, but merely directory. The municipal uthorities were empowered in their discretion to declare a vacancy or to waive the default as to the mere time of filing bond, and to accept and approve it when afterwards filed. The mere default in that regard would not of itself operate to vacate the office.

The court, at p. 621, adopting what it terms the reasonable construction of the charter provisions, holds that if an officer files his bond strictly in time, his right and title to the office are indefeasible. If he files it afterwards and it be accepted and approved, his right and title thereupon become equally indefeasible.

The court further says:

> "The law does not favor forfeitures, and 'in enforcing forfeitures courts should never search for that construction of language which must produce a forfeiture, when it will bear another reasonable construction.' Hartford Insurance Company v. Walsh, 54 Ill., 168."

A page 622 the court says:

> " 'There is a known distinction,' says Lord Mansfield, 'between circumstances which are of the essence of a thing required to be done by an act of parliament, and clauses merely directory. The precise time, in many cases, is not of the essence.' Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 447. It seems reasonable that it is only when 'the rights of the public, or of third persons, depend upon the exercise of the power or the performance of the duty to which it refers,' that the statute should be held mandatory, and otherwise but directory. Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 590, and see Sedgw. Stat. and Const. Law, 368-74. Here the essence of the thing to be done,—that upon which the rights of the public depend—is the giving of the bond, not the precise time when it is done."

The court reviews the cases of State v. Toomer, 7 Rich. Law Rep. 216; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674, and cites the following cases:

> People v. Holly, 12 Wend. 480.
> State v. Churchill, 41 Mo. 41.
> State v. Porter, 7 Ind. 204.
> Speake v. United States, 9 Cranch. 28.

In Clark v. Ennis, 45 N. J. L. 69, the first proposition of the syllabus reads as follows:

> "When a statute declares that if a sheriff shall not renew his bond within a specified time, his office shall immediately expire and become vacant, a failure to renew the bond within the prescribed time does not per se vacate his office. He is an officer with a defeasible title until the judgment of forfeiture is pronounced in due form and all his acts prior to such judgment are valid as to the public and third persons."

In the opinion the court quotes Stokes v. Kirkpatrick, 1 Metcalf 138:

> "The provisions of the act can not be construed as abrogating the ancient and well established rules and principles applicable to the vacation or forfeiture of offices according to which such vacancy or forfeiture can be declared only by a direct proceeding."

The court at page 77 calls attention to the fact that the New Jersey statute further provided:

> "And if such sheriff shall thereafter presume to execute his office, then all his acts done under color of office shall be absolutely void."

The court construes this strong language to merely apply so far as the officer himself is concerned, and that as to the public and third persons the official acts are valid until in the manner duly prescribed by law the office shall be deemed and taken to be vacant by reason of the alleged default.

In Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala., 674, the sixth proposition of the syllabus reads as follows:

> "The failure of a public officer to give bond within the time prescribed by law (Code, paragraph 125), only renders him liable to a proceeding for the forfeiture of the office, but does not, per se, operate his instantaneous removal from it."

The court at page 690 says:

> "Whenever the constitution provides for the election of an officer, he derives his title to the office from the election and not from his commission, which is the mere evidence of his right * * *. The election having thus invested him with his title to the office, the statute requiring him to file his bond within fifteen days and providing that on his failure to do so 'he vacates his office' operates as a defeasance and not as a condition precedent. The question we are considering is therefore analogous to that which arises in reference to corporations when they do some act which it is provided by their charter shall amount to a forfeiture of their vested rights; and decisions in such cases are in point here."

The court then cites a number of cases from different states, in support of the proposition that there is no forfeiture ipso facto, but that proper proceedings might be brought to have the forfeiture judicially decreed.

Judge Caldwell, in 18 C. C. 304, State ex rel. v. Pollner, seems to have taken for granted that the Ohio doctrine holds that the filing of a bond is not a condition precedent to the entering upon his office by a mayor.

At page 310 he uses this language:

> "The contention of the relator is, in this case, that, until he is elected, has taken the oath of office, has filed a bond and that bond been accepted by the city council, that he is not mayor, and can not act as mayor legally.
> "On the other hand, the respondent claims that the law is if there is no time fixed by statute when the officer shall take his office, shall enter upon his duties, then his term commences immediately if he sees fit to enter upon the duties of it and, if he does not, it is a mere waiver upon his part. And secondly, that the requiring of the oath, that the requiring of the bond or any other thing that the statute may require, although the statute may be explicit, is merely directory language, and is not mandatory, and I believe the courts in this country now quite unanimously and, I do not know but entirely, say so at this time, that language of that kind is merely directory, and is not mandatory language."

This case should be noted because section 3352 G. C., which was repealed (103 O. L. 786) and was formerly section 1518 of the Revised Statutes, provided as follows:

> "If a person elected assessor in any ward * * * fails to give bond and take the oath of office for one week after his election, * * * the office shall be deemed vacant, * * *."

In State, for the Use of the Commissioners, &c., v. Findley, et al., 10 Ohio 51, the second paragraph of the syllabus reads as follows:

> "The oath of office is a mere ministerial act, and not a condition precedent to entering upon the duties of the office, nor will the omission to take it by the principal in an official bond discharge the sureties."

This was a case of a Guernsey county treasurer, wherein an action had been brought on the treasurer's bond and the defense was made that the treasurer could not be considered as such officer before the oath of office was taken.

The court at page 59 says:

> "If an officer be created by letters patent, he is a complete officer before he is sworn. This is almost the only way in which administrative officers are created in Great Britain; but it can not be denied that the creation of an officer by election is as high, if not higher, source of title to the officer. * * *
> "But there are a class of persons who derive their office, even in England, from election. The officers of towns corporate are thus created, and by the statute of 13 Car. II, it is declared, that in case certain oaths are not taken, the election shall be utterly null and void, yet the same authorities just cited have declared the same doctrine, which was considered applicable to the test act. It must be recollected, that the question is not made in an information, or quo warranto, where it would directly and properly arise, it is made after the state has consented to waive the objection, after the principal has enjoyed the benefits and emoluments of the office, and for aught that appears, in consequence of the very bond which has been given. The taking of the oath can only be considered as directory to the officer, and not as a condition precedent to his authority to act as treasurer."

This decision is important when we note the similarity between the statutes at that time applying to county treasurers and the statutes now applicable to probate judges.

Section 2 of the act prescribing the duties of county treasurers, as found in Swan's Statutes of Ohio, 1841, at page 963 provided:

> "That each county treasurer, previous to entering on the duties of his office shall give bond * * * and shall also take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to be endorsed on said bond * * *."

Section 3 provided:

> "That if any person elected to the office of county treasurer shall not give bond and take the oath or affirmation as required in the preceding section on or before the first Monday in June next after his election, his office shall be considered vacant."

But conceding that the rule in Ohio is the strict or mandatory rule, and going to the extent that a failure to file the bond in question ipso facto vacated the office, let us consider whether or not in law there was a filing of the bond under the peculiar facts of this case. The claim is made that the bond was given to the auditor of the county as clerk of the board of commissioners, on the afternoon of February 9, 1917. (Section 2566 G. C.). The next day the bond was taken by Judge Dyson, the commissioners not being in session, and was brought to the respective residences of two of the commissioners, where it was severally signed.

On February 12, 1917, two of the commissioners, at what seems to have been a special meeting, but concerning which claim is made that the third commissioner had no notice of same, formally approved said bond. Later, at a meeting of the board of commissioners on February 20, 1917, the minutes of the meeting of February 12, 1917, were approved.

There seems to be no question but that Judge Dyson entered upon the discharge of some of the duties of the office of probate judge on February 9, 1917, and since it is my holding that his first term expired on February 8, 1917, and there was no holding over, in consequence any duties transacted on the 9th of February, 1917, constituted an "entering upon the discharge of his duties."

We then have two questions:

1. When was the bond filed?
2. When were the duties referred to performed, in relation to the time of the filing of the bond?

I am inclined to the view that the presentation of the bond to the auditor, as clerk of the board of county commissioners, on the afternoon of February 9, 1917, was a filing of said bond with the commissioners. Under the strict letter of the law, the probate judge is required to "give bond to the state," before entering upon the discharge of his duties.

The bond given must be "with sufficient surety approved by the board of county commissioners or by the auditor and recorder in the absence from the county of two of the commissioners."

Section 1581 G. C. further provides that this bond, with the oath of office endorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the county treasurer, but the section does not specifically provide that such deposit with the treasurer be made at any particular time. It will be noted that the section above mentioned does not provide that the bond shall be "filed" with any officer. The provision is that the probate judge shall "give" a bond before entering upon the discharge of his duties, and in the same sentence there is the other provision that the bond given is to be "with sufficient surety approved by the board of commissioners" or the other officers in their absence.

Section 2566 G. C. provides:

> "By virtue of his office, the county auditor shall be the secretary of the county commissioners, except as otherwise provided by law. When so requested, he shall aid them in the performance of their duties. He shall keep an accurate record of their proceedings, and carefully preserve all documents, books, records, maps and papers required to be deposited and kept in his office."

As stated by Okey, J., in Lima v. McBride, 34 O. S. 338, at p. 349:

> "The commissioners of the county constitute a board, and the county auditor is their secretary. * * * The proceedings of the board are in many respects those of a court of special and inferior jurisdiction."

In Jones, Auditor, v. Commissioners, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 152, the court points out that in the commissioner statutes the duties are prescribed for the "clerk," while in the county auditor statute he is designated "secretary." At p. 154 of the opinion it is held, in speaking of the use of the terms "secretary" and "clerk":

> "whether he fills one position or both, and they are therefore used by the legislature in this chapter as synonymous terms—describing the same officer."

The term "secretary" to my mind implies broader powers and duties than would necessarily devolve upon a mere "clerk," and since by virtue of his office the county auditor is made the secretary of the county commissioners, and under the law the bond of the probate judge should be approved by said county commissioners, it is my opinion that the probate judge had performed all that was incumbent upon him to do, as far as filing the bond for the approval of the county commissionners was concerned, when he filed his bond with the secretary of the county commissioners, if same were proper in form and sufficient in surety.

Under the conceded facts as I understand them, the formal approval by the commissioners took place some time subsequent to the filing with the county auditor, as secretary of the board of county commissioners, on the afternoon of February 9, 1917. There seems to have been some action taken by two of the commissioners on February 10, 1917, and later, on February 12, 1917, the bond was formally approved by the commissioners, with two members present, and still later, on February 20, 1917, the minutes of the meeting of February 12, 1917, were formally approved, all members being present.

To my mind, the case of State ex rel. v. Tool, 4 O. S. 553, is sufficient authority for the proposition that the bond was given and approved on the 9th of February, 1917, when it was filed with the county auditor as secretary of the board of county commissioners. In the Tool case the statute provided that if any person, elected to the office of county treasurer, shall not give bond and take the oath or affirmation as required by section 2, on or before the first Monday in June next after his election, his office shall be considered vacant. The requirements of section 2 were that he should give bond with four or more freehold sureties to the acceptance of the county commissioners, and should also take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to be endorsed on said bond, that he would faithfully discharge all the duties of his office.

This was an action in quo warranto and the defendant Tool pleaded that on the first Monday of June, 1855, he executed a bond with more than four freehold sureties, to the acceptance of the commissioners of the county, in the sum prescribed by the commissioners; that he then and there took the oath prescribed by law, subscribed the same and caused it to be endorsed on the bond according to law, and therefore that he lawfully exercised the duties of the office of county treasurer; that on the first Monday of June, 1855, he executed and delivered to the commissioners, for their acceptance, a bond conditioned according to law, in the penal sum of eighty thousand dollars, with twenty-four freehold sureties; that the commissioners on said first Monday of June, 1855, neither accepted nor rejected the bond, but continued their session until the next day after the said first Monday of June, 1855, and then and there accepted and approved the said bond, and that the said Tool then and there, on the same day, took and subscribed the oath required by the state and caused the same to be endorsed on the bond thus accepted by the commissioners. To this answer a demurrer was filed by the state.

It will be noted that the statute in this case provided that both the bond should be given and the oath taken on or before the first Monday of June next after the election. At p. 559, Kennon, J., says:

> "This bond was not accepted by the commissioners on the first Monday of June next after the election, nor was the oath, required by the statute, taken and subscribed, nor was it indorsed on the bond, on or before the first Monday of June.

"The bond was executed and delivered to the commissioners, for their acceptance, within the time prescribed by law, but was neither accepted nor rejected on that day; but on the next day, and during the regular June session of the commissioners, was accepted and approved by them. * * *

"In such case, the doctrine of relation would apply, and the acceptance, by the commissioners, of the bond on the next day, would relate back to the time of the delivery of the bond to the commissioners for their acceptance.

"It is said, in 18 Viner's Abridgement, 290, that where there are divers acts concurrent to make a conveyance estate, or other thing, the original act shall be preferred, and to this the other acts shall have relation."

The court cites instances in which the doctrine of relation applies, and continues (p. 560):

"In the case supposed, the presentation of the bond on the first Monday of June, with the oath indorsed thereon, and the acceptance by the commissioners, are, in the sense in which the word concurrent is used by Viner, concurrent acts, and the acceptances shall relate back to the first Monday of June, and the whole be considered as having been done on that day; although, in point of fact, the acceptance was made and entered by the commissioners on the day after the first Monday of June."

So in the instant case, as far as the approval of the bond by the commissioners is concerned, I think the later acts of the commissioners all relate back to the filing with their secretary, and that the bond which was finally approved by the commissioners under the fiction of the doctrine of relation, was filed on the afternoon of February 9, 1917.

Having now determined that the bond was given and approved at the time of filing with the county auditor, as the secretary of the county commissioners on February 9, 1917, the remaining question is, did that fact constitute the giving of a bond by the probate judge, "before entering upon the discharge of his duties," as provided in section 1581 G. C.?

As I recall the conceded facts, Judge Dyson, prior to the time of the taking of the oath and presentation of the bond on February 9, 1917, performed certain duties of his office. A will was filed and application made for probate; two findings and orders of appraisement were issued; two accounts were filed, and two proofs of publication were also filed.

Strictly speaking, it would appear that inasmuch as it has been determined that any acts of the probate judge performed on February 9, 1917, were done under the new term, that as far as different parts of the day are concerned, the acts above referred to were performed before a bond had been given and approved. It is a well settled principle that the law does not regard parts or fractions of a day.

Black, Interpretation of Law, section 73.

Bouvier, speaking of the definition of "day" says:

"A day is generally, but not always, regarded in law as a point of time; and fractions will not be recognized."

Of course, although the law does not generally consider fractions of a day, it would do so when substantial justice requires it.

Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640.

Under the title of "Fraction of a Day," Bouvier says:

> "In computing the time for the performance of official duties, each fraction of a day is to be considered as a full day.
> "The doctrine applies chiefly, if not entirely, to judicial and other public proceedings, and not to transactions of parties whose priority of right becomes a question of fact: Maynard v. Esher, 17 Pa. 222."

So we have in the present case the performance of two acts on the same day—the performance of certain official acts and the giving of the required bond.

Were this a question of transaction between parties, it might be well to divide the day and determine which act was prior, that substantial justice might be done between the parties. But this is not a question of parties; nor does the same rule apply to the public and an officer as would apply between two contending parties with property rights.

I am inclined to a liberal view in this matter, by reason of the divers positions taken by the courts of the United States upon the question whether a statute prescribing time for a public officer to qualify is directory or mandatory. The adjudications vary according to the wording of the particular statute, but, as stated in an exhaustive note found in Annotated Cases, 1915, D., p. 412:

> "In the majority of the jurisdictions the rule has been laid down that in the absence of a provision expressly declaring that the failure to take the oath or give the bond required shall operate ipso facto to vacate the office, such a statute is merely directory and the officer may afterwards comply with the requirements of the statute, unless a vacancy has actually been declared by the proper legal authority."

Section 7 G. C., providing what shall take place when one neglects to give the bond within the proper time, contains the following language:

> "Such office shall be considered vacant."

The following states, using similar or identical language, hold this provision to be merely directory:

Alabama,	Delaware,	Georgia,	Illinois,
Indiana,	Kentucky,	Michigan,	Mississippi,
Missouri,	New Hampshire,	New Jersey,	New York,
North Carolina,	Oregon,	Pennsylvania,	South Carolina,

Washington and Wisconsin.

The note maker includes Ohio in the list of states which construe such provisions as directory, citing as authority, State v. Tool, 4 O. S. 553, hereinbefore noted.

The following jurisdictions hold that the requirement is mandatory and that the timely taking of the oath or filing of the bond is a condition precedent to the right to entry on the office, so that the right is absolutely lost by a failure to perform the condition within the time limited:

Arkansas,	California,	Florida,	Kansas,
Louisiana,	Maryland,	Montana,	Nebraska,

Nevada, Texas and Virginia.

It might be noted here that Nebraska, Arkansas and possibly some of the other states last mentioned have statutes which are more far-reaching in their application than the Ohio statute. They provide for either a forfeiture of the office or that the office shall thereupon ipso facto become vacant.

As pointed out in the note referred to in 38 Amer. Ann. Cases, 415, it is generally held, both in jurisdictions declaring such statutes to be mandatory and in those declaring them to be directory, that where the failure to qualify within the time prescribed by the statute is due to default or hindrance of others, or to circumstances beyond the control of the officer, he will not be deprived of his office.

In Horton v. Parsons, 37 Hun. 42, the court was construing a similar statute to the Ohio statute. The New York statute provided that before the officer entered upon the duties of his office, and within ten days after being notified of his election, he shall take the oath of office, and that if he does not do so, &c., such neglect shall be deemed a refusal to serve, and if he shall refuse to serve, a special town meeting may be called to supply the vacancy.

At page 45 the court says:

> "There was no such meeting called; no new election had, and he proceeded and continued to perform the duties of his office. He was legally elected and sought to qualify by taking and filing his oath of office (which was defective), and making and filing the requisite bond. He became an officer by the election, and his title to it was defeasible. His right to continue to hold it depended upon the statutory conditions, one of which was the taking of the oath of office. He was in no sense a usurper of the office, but was legally inducted into it by election. * * * But it has been held in effect that the statute is not self-executing, and does not work a forfeiture for the cause it affords, but that it must come from some act, judicial for otherwise, which effectually ousts him and severs his relation to the office. And that until then he is practically an officer de jure, having a defeasible title to the office."

In State v. Ruff, 4 Wash. 234, the court, declaring the statute providing that on failure to qualify within the prescribed time the office "shall become vacant," to be directory, said:

> "It is the election which gives the right to the office and the qualification is only an incidental requirement for the protection of the public. If the provisions for such qualification are not timely complied with, the public can protect itself by declaring a vacancy and filling the same by appointment, but until such acts have been done, the force of the election has not been exhausted, and upon a compliance with the incidental duty of qualification is given full force."

To the same effect is People v. Benfield, 80 Mich. 265, wherein it was said:

> "The courts generally hold that even though the statute expressly provides that upon a failure to give a bond within the time prescribed the office shall be deemed vacant, and may be filled by appointment, the default is a ground for forfeiture only, and not a forfeiture ipso facto, and if, notwithstanding this default, the state or other power sees fit to excuse the delinquency by granting the officer his commission, the defects of his title are cured and it is the title de jure having relation back to the time of his election or pointment."

In Foot v. Styles, 57 N. Y. 399, it was said:

"The act resembles a cause of forfeiture of a franchise or corporate charter which is only enforceable by a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto."

In Minick v. The State, 154 Ind. 379, the court said:

"As the delay does not of itself amount to a rejection of the office but is only a ground of forfeiture, the party elected and in default may still be permitted to qualify after the prescribed time; and if he does so his default will be considered as waived."

I have said herein that the words "shall be considered," as used in the phrase "such office shall be considered vacant," have a definite, legal meaning, and it may not be amiss to call attention to one case wherein our supreme court was construing a somewhat similar statute.

In the case of Terrill v. Auchauer, 14 O. S. 80, the court had before it a section providing that:

"No sheriff or other officer making sale of property, either personal or real, nor any appraiser of such property, shall directly or indirectly purchase the same; and any purchase so made shall be considered fraudulent and void."

At pages 84 and 85 the court uses the following language:

"What is the precise idea which the legislature intended to express in the use of this language? Was it intended that such sales, and all conveyances made in pursuance of them, should be, as to all the world, and under all circumstances, as if they had never been made—however advantageous the sale may have been to all parties interested, and however desirous such parties might be to maintain and enforce it? Or was it intended only, that whenever a party interested in the sale should directly interpose, or institute a proceeding to avoid the sale, it should 'be considered,' that is to say, adjudged by the court, that the fact of the purchaser having been an appraiser was conclusive evidence of fraud, and that the sale should thereupon be 'considered' or adjudged void? This is the question.

"If the language of the statute were entirely unequivocal, we should be bound to follow it, to whatever consequences it might lead, short of a manifest absurdity. But this can hardly be said of the language of this clause of the statute. In common parlance, consideration means deliberation, thought; but in legal phraseology, the consideration of the court means the judgment of the court; and 'it is considered by the court,' as equivalent to 'it is adjudged by the court.' And the suggestion is, at least, not without plausibility, that this language of the statute indicates a rule prescribed as a guide to judicial action, when invoked for the purpose, rather than a legislative fiat, always and everywhere operative irrespective of judicial action."

So in the present case it strikes me it would not be a constrained construction to hold that section 7 G. C. indicates a rule prescribed as a guide to judicial action, rather than causing an ipso facto forfeiture.

In view of the weight of authority on the side of that line of decisions which hold provisions such as we have in our statute to be directory, it seems to me that I am not called upon to enforce the harsh and seemingly unfair, strict rule of interpretation, and while in some cases the rule of the indivisibility of a day might seem farfetched, and if the equity of a case demanded, would not be invoked, yet, under all the circumstances of the instant case, I am inclined to the view that it should be given the fullest effect. Applying both the doctrine of relation and that of the indivisibility of a day, we do not have much difficulty in determining that, as a matter of law, Judge Dyson entered upon the discharge of his duties and gave his bond upon the 9th day of February, 1917, and since, under the circumstances of this case, that will be considered to have been done first which under the law should have been done first, the giving of the bond would relate back to the first instant of the beginning of the day of February 9, 1917, and the entering upon the discharge of his official duties by fiction of law would immediately follow the giving of the bond.

It is my opinion, then, that Judge Dyson as a matter of law, gave his bond before entering upon the discharge of his duties and that no vacancy exists in the office of Probate Judge of Guernsey county.

Although I have taken the liberal view just expressed, I do not wish to be understood as holding that the question is absolutely free from doubt. The inquiry made of this department is whether or not under all the particular and peculiar circumstances of this case a vacancy exists, which should be filled by appointment by the governor. The entire question is not free from doubt, for, as shown in the somewhat lengthy discussion herein, the courts of the different jurisdictions are diametrically opposed to each other on the question. But it strikes me that the matter is one of more local than general interest. The election of Judge Dyson was by the voters of Guernsey county. His duties and the functions of his office appertain to that county. It was the board of commissioners of Guernsey county that saw fit to make the approval of the bond at the time and in the manner shown in the conceded facts.

In consequence of all the foregoing, I do not think this department should declare that the state of facts shown in this case worked a forfeiture ispo facto of the office and thus warrants the filling of the vacancy. If the question is of sufficient local public interest, the courts are open and a suit by way of quo warranto would afford the Ohio courts an opportunity to pass upon the direct question.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNCIL OF CENTERBURG, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE: Bonds of the Village of Centerburg, Knox County, Ohio, in the sum of $3,000, for the purpose of constructing sewers and sewage disposal works in said village.

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Centerburg, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue. As a result of such examination I find such proceedings to be in conformity with the provisions of the General Code relative thereto.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that bonds of said village, when properly prepared and signed by the proper officers, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said village.

The transcript covering proceedings relating to the above bond issue is embodied in the transcript covering the proceedings relating to the bond issue of said village in the sum of $7,000 for the construction of a sanitary plant, which transcript is attached to opinion of even date herewith approving said last named issue.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOND ISSUE FOR CONSTRUCTION OF SANITARY PLANT—WHEN COUNCIL SUBMITS QUESTION TO ELECTORS—NOT NECESSARY THAT RESOLUTION CONTAIN RECITAL THAT BOARD OF HEALTH RECOMMENDED SAID PLANT—NET INDEBTEDNESS OF TWO AND ONE-HALF MILLS ON TAX DUPLICATE VALUATION OF REAL AND PERSONAL PROPERTY IN MUNICIPALITY—HOW SAME ASCERTAINED.

Though it is advisable that the resolution adopted by the council of a municipal corporation submitting to the electors thereof the question of a bond issue for the purpose of constructing a sanitary plant under the provisions of Section 4471, General Code, should contain the recital that the construction of such sanitary plant has been recommended by the board of health of the municipality, or of the officer or board having the powers of a board of health, such recital is not jurisdictional and the resolution is not invalid by reason of its omission.

In ascertaining the net indebtedness of two and one-half mills upon the tax duplicate valuation of real and personal property in the municipality prescribed by sections 3941 and 3952 General Code, beyond which indebtedness can not be created without a vote of the people, bonds theretofore issued on a vote of the people for a purpose authorized by section 3939 General Code are not to be considered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE: Bonds of the village of Centerburg, Knox County, Ohio, in the sum of $7,000.00, for the purpose of constructing a sanitary plant in the said village.

I am herewith enclosing to you transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Centerburg, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue.

The statutory provisions under which the officials of the village have been acting in matters relating to the construction of this proposed sanitary plant are those contained in sections 4467 et seq. of the General Code, and the issue of these bonds is provided for by ordinance of the village council passed pursuant to a majority vote on the proposition of such bond issue by the electors of the village at an election held pursuant to authority of section 4471, General Code.

From the transcript it appears that at a called meeting of the council of the village, which meeting seems to have been called by written notice served on the members in the manner provided by law, one W. O. Phillips, health officer and acting board of health in and for said village, submitted to the mayor and council of the village a recommendation in words as follows:

"I hereby recommend that council cause plans and estimates to be prepared and acquire by condemnation or otherwise, such land or lands, within or without the corporate limits, as are necessary to provide for the proper disposal in a sanitary manner of the sewage of the village of Centerburg, Ohio.

"This recommendation is made to protect the health of the inhabitants of the village."

Thereupon a motion was made, which was properly seconded, that the recommendation be accepted. Upon this motion the roll was called, with the result that the motion carried by the votes of all five of the councilmen present.

After this motion was adopted a resolution was introduced declaring it necessary to issue and sell bonds in the fiscal year beginning January 1, 1917, for the purpose of constructing a sanitary plant, in the sum of $7,000.00, and that the question of issuing and selling the bonds of said village in the sum aforesaid be submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of said village at a special election to be held in said village for that purpose on the seventeenth day of March, 1917, at the regular place or places of voting in said village, and that the election should be conducted, canvassed and certified in the same manner as other general municipal elections. Upon a motion for the suspension of the rules, adopted on roll call by the yea vote of all five members present, the second and third readings of the resolution were waived and said resolution placed upon its passage, with the result that said resolution was adopted as read by the yea votes of all members present.

As will be noted, there was no recital in the resolution of council submitting the question of this bond issue to the electors of the village, that the construction of the proposed sanitary plant had been recommended by the health officer of the village; and inasmuch as municipal corporations under their general statutory powers have authority to construct sewage disposal works (Section 3647 G. C.) and under the provisions of Section 3939, Sub. 14, General Code, may likewise issue bonds for the construction of such sanitary disposal works, it would have been desirable if the resolution providing for the submission of the question of such bond issue had contained such recital showing affirmatively that the issue of such bonds and further proceedings relating to the construction of such sanitary plant were under the special provisions of Sections 4467 et seq. of the General Code, and not under the general statutory provisions authorizing municipal corporations to construct such works and issue bonds therefor. However, I see nothing in the provisions of the statutes under consideration which makes such recital a jurisdictional requisite to the submission to the electors of the municipality of the question of a bond issue under section 4471 General Code.

The resolution submitting the question of the issue of the bonds to the qualified electors of the village was not published in the manner provided by statute for the publication of ordinances and resolutions of a general nature or providing for improvements, but notice of the election was given by newspaper publication in the manner and for the time prescribed in section 3946, General Code.

Under the decision of the court of appeals of Huron county, in the case of Cleveland S. & C. Railway Company v. City of Norwalk, 22 C. C. n. s. 590, this publication of the notice of election was a sufficient compliance with the statutory provisions requiring the publication of resolutions and ordinances of a general character, or which provide for improvements.

From the certificate of the canvass made by the deputy state supervisors of elections of Knox county, it appears that the election on the bond issue was held on March 17, 1917, with the result that one hundred and six votes were cast in favor of the proposition and sixty-eight votes against the same.

From the transcript it appears, however, that three days before the election, to wit, on March 13, 1917, at a meeting called by the mayor, the council of the village, five of the six members thereof being present, adopted a resolution to amend the resolution submitting the bond issue proposition to a vote of the electors of the village.

In this resolution it was recited that the health officer of the village of Centerburg had recommended the preparation of plans for the construction of a sanitary plant for said village for the proper disposal of the sewage and waste matter of the village, and that said plans, approved by the state board of health, were then on file in the office of the village clerk; and after reciting further that said resolution was concurred in by two-thirds of all members elected to council, provided as the first section thereof as follows:

> "That it is necessary to issue and sell bonds in the fiscal year commencing January 1, 1917, for the purpose of constructing a sanitary plant, as defined in section 44677 of the General Code of Ohio, in an amount greater than one per cent. of the total value of all property in said village as listed and assessed for taxation, to wit: in the sum of $7,000.00; and that the question of issuing and selling the bonds of said village in excess of said one per cent., that is, in the sum aforesaid, be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of said village at a special election to be held in said village for that purpose on the 17th day of March, A. D., 1917, at the regular place or places of voting in said village; and said election shall be conducted, canvassed and certified in the same manner as other general municipal elections."

Section 2 of this resolution directed the mayor to give public notice of the time and place of holding said election in the manner provided by law; while section 3 thereof directed the clerk to certify a copy of the resolution to the deputy state supervisors of elections for Knox county.

It thus appears that the resolution adopted by council March 13, 1917, covers all the ground covered by the resolution of February 12, 1917, and that if effect is given to the later resolution as a resolution legally adopted by council, it is to be considered as repealing by implication the former resolution, with the result that the subsequent proceedings relating to the bond issue are invalidated; for if the former resolution is to be considered as repealed by the later one, the election held on March 17, 1917, is not supported by the authority granted in the former resolution, while the later resolution could not be considered as authority for said election, for the reason that under said resolution sufficient time is not provided for the notice of the election.

I am of the opinion, however, that this second resolution was not legally adopted. In the first place, it does not appear from the transcript that the meeting of council of March 13, 1917, at which this second resolution was adopted, was called in the manner prescribed by law for the calling of special council meetings.

Again, though this resolution was one of a general nature (57 O. S. 374), it appears from the transcript that same was adopted on first reading without any suspension of the rule prescribed by section 4224, General Code, requiring ordinances or resolutions of a general nature to be fully and distinctly read on three different days before the same are passed.

For these reasons, I am inclined to the view that the resolution of February 12, 1917, was in no manner affected by the adoption of this later resolution, and that the subsequent proceedings of council relating to this bond issue are not invalidated thereby.

As a further consideration with respect to the question of the validity of this bond issue, I note from the financial statement attached to the transcript that the general bonded indebtedness of the village, as distinguished from indebtedness incurred in the issue of bonds in anticipation of special assessments, amounts to the sum of $37,650, with approximately $2,000 in the sinking fund to meet maturing bonds. Inasmuch as the duplicate valuation of taxable real and personal property in the village is the sum of $1,085,200, it is apparent that the net bonded indebtedness of the village is in excess of two and one-half per cent. of the tax duplicate.

Of the bonded indebtedness of the village above stated it appears that $27,000 represents a bond issue voted by the electors for the construction of water works, and inasmuch as there is nothing in the transcript to indicate that the water works constructed in pursuance of this bond issue is self-sustaining within the provisions of paragraph "f" of section 3949 General Code, the question is suggested whether such issue of $27,000 for water-works purposes, issued on a vote of the people, is to be considered as within the two and one-half per cent. limitation prescribed by sections 3941 and 3952 General Code; for if this particular issue is to be considered in arriving at the two and one-half per cent. limitation prescribed by these sections, the further question is suggested whether, in view of the decision of the supreme court in the case of Henderson v. City of Cincinnati, 81 O. S. 27, the bond issue election held on March 17, 1917, was not required to pass by a two-thirds vote, notwithstanding the general provisions of section 4471 G. C. that such bond issue proposition might carry on a majority vote.

Doubt on the first question here suggested is created by the fact that the circuit court of Cuyahoga county, in the case of Cleveland v. Cleveland, 13 C.C. n. s. 436 (affirmed without report 83 O. S. 482), in its decision excluded bonds issued on a vote of the people from the then four per cent. limitation prescribed by section 3942, General Code, wholly upon consideration of the then provisions of section 3945 General Code, which section was construed to expressly exclude such bonds from said limitation.

Section 3945 General Code was repealed by the act of 1911 amending the Longworth act, and the question here suggested must be determined on a consideration of the present statutory provisions.

A sufficient clue to the legislative intent with respect to this question is found, I think, in the provisions of section 3941 General Code as compared with section 3942 as it stood before the enactment of the act of 1911. The then provisions of section 3942 provided that the net indebtedness incurred by a municipal corporation for the purposes designated in section 3939 "shall never exceed four per cent of the total value of all the property in such corporation, as listed and assessed for taxation, unless the excess of such amount is authorized by vote of the qualified electors of the corporation in the manner hereinafter provided."

Looking to section 3941 General Code, the corresponding section in the law as it now stands, it will be noted that it provides that the net indebtedness created or incurred by the council under section 3939 General Code, and under an act passed April 29, 1902, to amend sections 2835, 2836 and 2837 and to repeal section 2837-a of the Revised Statutes, together with its subsequent amendments, shall not exceed four per cent. (now two and one-half per cent.) of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation, as listed and assessed for taxation.

In view of the language of section 3941 General Code, as it now stands, when considered as an amendment of the provisions of the corresponding section in the Longworth law before the amendment of 1911, I am of the opinion that municipal bonds issued on a vote of the people under the provisions of the present Longworth law, so called, are not to be considered as within the two and one-half per cent. limitation prescribed by sections 3941 and 3952 General Code. This being true, it is not necessary to consider the question whether under any circumstances the proposition of a bond issue under section 4471 General Code, must carry by a two-thirds vote rather than the majority vote therein prescribed.

In the resolution above referred to which the council of the village attempted to pass under date of March 13, 1917, it was recited that the bond issue proposed in the sum of $7,000 was an amount greater than one per cent. of the total value of all property in said village as listed and assessed for taxation. If this recital was true, it would raise the question suggested by the decision of the supreme court in the case of Henderson v. Cincinnati, supra, whether such bond issue was not required to pass by a two-thirds vote of the electors, notwithstanding the provisions of section 4471 General Code that the proposition might carry on a majority vote. However, from an inspection of the transcript I do not find the recital to be true. As before noted, the duplicate valuation of the taxable real and personal property in the village is $1,085,200; one per cent. of this amount is $10,852. The only other bond issues provided for by the village during the fiscal year 1917 are an issue of $8,973 under date of February 1, 1917, the same being bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the construction of sewers in the village, and the $3,000 issue for sewer purposes the proceedings as to which are set out in this same transcript.

Under section 3949 General Code, bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments are not to be considered in ascertaining any of the debt limitations of the Longworth act; while the $3,000 issue for sewer purposes, together with this issue aggregate the sum of $10,000, which is within the one per cent. limitation as to bonds issued during the fiscal year, even if we were required to consider this $7,000 issue as within the one per cent. limitation of section 3940 General Code, prescribing the amount of indebtedness that may be created in any one fiscal year.

The foregoing disposes of the questions which have suggested themselves to me in a consideration of the transcript relating to this bond issue; and finding the subsequent proceedings of council relating to the same to have been in all respects regular and the bond form submitted to be in proper form, said issue of bonds and the proceedings relating thereto are approved.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds, when signed by the proper officers of the village, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said village.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX MAP DRAFTSMAN—MUST BE FURNISHED AND PAID UNDER SECTIONS 5551 AND 5552—NEW ACT HAS NO EFFECT ON THESE SECTIONS.

Under the new Highway Act, which becomes effective on June 25, 1917, the assistants to the county Surveyor as tax map draftsmen must be furnished and paid under the provisions of Sections 5551 and 5552 G. C., the provisions of the new act having no effect upon this matter.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—I have your communication of June 2, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a certain matter. Your communication reads as follows:

> "In view of the fact that Section 7181 General Code, as amended in Amended House Bill No. 300, now makes it the duty of the county Surveyor to act as tax map draftsman, does this repeal by implication all of the provisions of Sections 5551 and 5552 General Code? In other words, are the assistant tax map draftsmen to be appointed under sections 5551 and 5552 G. C., or is this service now to be rendered by the regular assistants in the county Surveyor's office?"

Your request has to do with the comparison of certain sections of our statutes as they exist now and the same sections as they will exist after the taking effect of the new highway law and as modified by said law. The sections to which you particularly refer are 5551 and 5552 G. C., which have to do with the appointment of a tax map draftsman and assistants of the tax map draftsman. Said sections read as follows:

"Section 5551. The board of county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor, who shall employ such number of assistants as are necessary, not exceeding four, to provide for making, correcting, and keeping up to date a complete set of tax maps of the county. Such maps shall show all original lots and parcels of land, and all divisions, subdivisions and allotments thereof, with the name of the owner of each original lot or parcel and of each division, subdivision or lot, all new divisions, subdivisions or allotments made in the county, all transfers of property showing the lot or parcel of land transferred, the name of the grantee, and the date of the transfer, so that such maps shall furnish the auditor, for entering on the tax duplicate, a correct and proper description of each lot or parcel of land offered for transfer. Such maps shall be for the use of the board of equalization and the auditor, and be kept in the office of the county auditor."

"Section 5552. The board of county commissioners shall fix the salary of the draughtsman at not to exceed two thousand dollars per year. They shall likewise fix the number of assistants not to exceed four, and fix the salary of such assistants at not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per year. The salaries of the draughtsman and assistants shall be paid out of the county treasury in the manner as the salary of other county officers are paid."

Your question arises by virtue of a provision found in the new highway act, which becomes effective on June 28, 1917. This provision reads as follows:

"The county surveyor shall be the county tax map draftsman, but still receive no additional compensation for performing the duties of such position."

From a careful study of this sentence it is evident that the legislature did not consider the duties of tax map draftsman to be performed by the county surveyor as county surveyor; but rather that the county surveyor, in addition to the position or office of county surveyor, should also hold the position of tax map draftsman. It does not say that the county surveyor shall do so and so in the way of preparing maps, but it says: "The county surveyor shall be tax map draftsman," that is, he virtually holds two positions. This construction is made clear from a consideration of the latter part of the sentence, which is "but still receive no additional compensation for performing the duties of such position." There are no duties mentioned in this section, or any provisions of any kind whatever made as to assistants. From this it is quite clear that this sentence has particular reference to the provisions of some other section or sections, and as the legislature did not repeal sections 5551 and 5552 G. C., the provision in the new law undoubtedly is to be read in connection with the provisions of said sections, but with particular reference to only one provision thereof, viz: "The board of county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor," etc.

These are the matters that are contrasted under the new and the old:

(1) Under the old the county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor as the tax map draftsman, while under the new the county surveyor shall be the tax map draftsman;

(2) Under the old the county commissioners shall fix the compensation of the draftsman at not to exceed two thousand dollars, while under the new he shall receive no additional compensation.

I am of the opinion that every other provision of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C. remains as it was before the enactment of the new law. The office or position of draftsman is still separate and distinct. His duties are still prescribed under the provision of section 5551 G. C.; and furthermore, I am of the opinion that the provisions for assistants as set forth in sections 5551 and 5552 G. C. apply, and that the same rule would apply to their selection and salary as applied before the enactment of the new law. That is, the same man holds two positions, and his assistants as county surveyor are provided for in one section of the statutes, while his assistants as tax map draftsman are fixed by the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that the provisions of the new highway act to become effective on June 28, 1917, have no effect in the matter of providing assistants to the tax map draftsman; that they are still selected and paid under and by virtue of the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General

BID—THAT EMBRACES BOTH LABOR AND MATERIAL—MUST CONTAIN A SEPARATE STATEMENT OF LABOR AND MATERIAL AND THE PRICE OF EACH.

The provision of section 4222 G. C. requiring a separate statement of labor and material with the price of each, if the work bid on embraces both labor and material, is mandatory in character, and a bid on such class of work which does not contain a separate statement of labor and material with the price of each thereof is irregular and illegal and should be rejected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 27, 1917, you submitted for my opinion the following request:

"In a village in which the council, under the provisions of section 4222 General Code, required bids for improvements embracing both material and labor, which shall be separately stated with the prices thereof, and a contractor bids as follows:

" '2,000 cu. yds. of excavation, labor 50 cents per cu. yd., material 50 cents per cu. yd., labor and material 50 cents per cu. yd.

" '5-inch concrete base, labor 11 cents per sq. ft., material 11 cents per sq. ft., labor and material 11 cents per sq. ft.,'

"using this method on items of all nature, simply for the purpose of showing that he desired the work only on the condition that he receive the contract for both labor and material."

"Question: Is such a bid legal?"

Section 4222 G. C. reads as follows:

"Each such bid shall contain the full name of every person or company interested in it and shall be accompanied by a sufficient bond or certified check on a solvent bank that, if the bid is accepted, a contract will be entered into and the performance of it properly secured. If the work bid for embraces both labor and material, they shall be separately stated, with the price thereof. The council may reject any and all bids. The contract shall be between the corporation and the bidder, and the corporation shall pay the contract price in cash. When a bonus is offered for completion of contract prior to a specified date, the council may exact a prorated penalty in like sum for each day of delay beyond the specified date. When there is reason to believe there is collusion or combination among bidders, the bids of those concerned therein shall be rejected."

The portion of the foregoing section that is important with reference to the question in hand is that which requires that "if the work bid for embraces both labor and material they shall be separately stated with the price thereof." In enacting this provision it was evidently the aim and object of the legislature to require that bids should separately state the labor and material with the price of each for the purpose of obtaining for the municipality whatever benefits might arise by reason of such separate statement. When it is considered that this provision requires that there shall be a separate statement of labor and material with the price thereof and that such a statement is made necessary for the benefit of the public, the conclusion seems to follow clearly that such a provision is mandatory in character and that any bids which do not comply with it by stating separately labor and material and the price of each would be irregular and illegal and should be rejected.

An extended examination of the authorities has disclosed only one case in which the matter in question has been passed on by the courts. This case is Columbus v. Board of Public Service, et al., Vol. XIV, O. D., page 715. At page 720, Bigger, Judge, says:

"The bids were made upon four separate items: First, dry earth excavation; second, wet earth excavation; third, rock excavation; fourth, concrete masonry, excluding cement.

"The bid is in the following form: Under the item of dry earth excavation, material fifty-eight cents, labor fifty-eight cents; total, fifty-eight cents, in figures; total price in words fifty-eight cents. Each of the four items are in the same form, the same figures being given under the head material, labor and total. There is some dispute as to whether or not the first three items of dry earth excavation, wet earth excavation and rock excavation, embrace both labor and material, but whatever may be said as to that there can be no question that concrete masonry, exclusive of cement, contains material as distinguished from labor. Now this requirement of the statute is mandatory. If this form of bid may be adopted, of course it is clear that it defeats the object and purpose of the law, which was to require a separate statement of the price of labor and material wherever the bid embraced both; and I am therefore of the opinion that the board was entirely justified in holding that all these bids which are in this form are irregular and illegal and cannot be considered. They are also indefinite, and under such a bid, if accepted, the claim might afterwards be made that the totals were a mere mistake and that the contract calls for just twice the amount contained in the total column."

In view of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the provision of section 4222 G. C., requiring a separate statement of labor and material with the price of each, if the work bid on embraces both labor and material, is mandatory in character and that a bid on such last mentioned kind of work which does not contain a separate statement of labor and material with the price of each thereof is irregualr and illegal and should be rejected.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ORDINANCE—VIOLATION NOT MISDEMEANOR—ALTHOUGH DECLARED TO BE SUCH THEREIN—WOMEN MAY NOT BE SENT TO OHIO REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN FOR VIOLATION OF SUCH ORDINANCE.

Even though council, under section 3628 G. C., provides in an ordinance that a violation of it "shall be a misdemeanor," this does not make such violation a "misdemeanor" within the meaning of that word as used in the state penal code.

A woman convicted of the violation of such an ordinance cannot be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter under date of May 19, 1917, from Hon. W. S. McConnaughey, city attorney, Dayton, Ohio, as follows:

"My attention has been called to your opinion No. 49 rendered to Hon. Perry Smith, prosecuting attorney at Zanesville, Ohio, holding that women convicted of violation of city and local ordinances cannot be sentenced to the reformatory for women at Marysville.

"The municipal court here in Dayton believed that women convicted in that court of the violation of city ordinances had to be sentenced to the Marysville reformatory under the provisions of section 2148-7, but certain girls so sentenced have been returned and the auditor has refused to issue vouchers for costs in such cases, and this office has been asked to confer with you in reference to the matter.

"The opinion as published in the departmental reports does not inform us as to whether in reaching your conclusion you took into consideration any possible effect of section 3628 General Code, whereby it is provided among the enumerated powers of municipalites that they shall have power 'to make the violation of ordinances a misdemeanor and to provide for the punishment thereof by fine or imprisonment or both,' etc. This provision we find, was considered by the supreme court in the case of Townsend v.

Circleville, but not squarely decided, as the court found in that case that the city council had not attempted to make the violation of the ordinance a misdemeanor and therefore found it unnecessary to determine the effect of this provision of the municipal code in a case where there had been such a declaration in the ordinance.

"I should be very glad to know if this section was taken into consideration in reaching the conclusion expressed by you in your opinion or, if, having considered it, you are still of the same opinion.

"We know that your opinion is supported by authority but have been unable to find any authority which construes such a provision of the statute as we have referred to in connection with the question involved and should like to be sure as to whether this question has had your consideration."

In reply, beg to advise that in passing upon the question before me in my former opinion No. 49, dated February 23, 1917, to which reference is made in the above communication, I had in mind the provisions of section 3628 General Code, but did not consider this section in the opinion for the reason that I regarded the word "misdemeanor," as used in that section, as an expression used merely for convenience of general designation. This is the view frequently expressed by the courts in this and other states.

In the case of Townsend v. Circleville, 78 O. S., p. 122, to which reference is made, the court, while not really required to consider the question of the effect of section 3628 G. C. (formerly section 1536-100, subdivision 29 Revised Statutes) upon the character of an ordinance styled by council a "misdemeanor," did give the subject consideration. In that case it was urged by counsel for plaintiff in error that the city of Circleville had exceeded its lawful power in attempting to give to the mayor exclusive jurisdiction over offenses created by the ordinance. Counsel argued that a violation of a municipal ordinance was a misdemeanor under the statutes of Ohio because of the provisions of section 1536-100 Revised Statutes, to the effect that council had power "to make the violation of ordinances a misdemeanor and to provide for the punishment thereof." The court at page 136 said:

"Section 6795 Revised Statutes defines misdemeanors as follows: 'Offenses which may be punished by death, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary, are felonies; all other offenses are misdemeanors.' and section 610 Revised Statutes provides that a justice of the peace shall have jurisdiction of misdemeanors throughout the county in which he was elected. Section 7, subdivision 29 of the municipal code, supra, provides that the council may make the violation of ordinances a misdemeanor and the contention is that the effect of this is to give to justices of the peace jurisdiction of complaints for the violation of the ordinance. Prior to the adoption of the municipal code in 1902, section 1861, Revised Statutes, provided, 'By-laws and ordinances of municipal corporations may be enforced by the imposition of fines, forfeitures, and penalties, on any person offending against any such by-law or ordinance.' It did not provide that council may declare the violation of the ordinance a misdemeanor and so there was no claim that a justice of the peace had jurisdiction of complaints for the violations of penal ordinances, excepting by statute in townships in which a hamlet was situated. However, such violations were then just as much misdemeanors as they now are, and a justice of the peace now has no better claim to jurisdiction than he then had. The statutory definition was originally adopted as a part of the code of criminal procedure and it comprises only violations of statutes."

In the case of State v. Collingsworth, 82 O. S. 154, the court held that "the violation of a penal ordinance of a municipality, as a result of which violation death ensues, is not an unlawful killing within the provisions of section 6811, Revised Statutes, which defines the crime of manslaughter." In that case it was claimed that the plaintiff in error had driven a horse at a rate of speed in violation of an ordinance, in which ordinance it was recited that whoever should violate the same "shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor." Counsel for the state argued that because the ordinance had been declared to be a "misdemeanor," it was manslaughter to kill a person while engaged in the wilful violation of such ordinance. The court took the opposite view, however, that even though the ordinance was styled a misdemeanor, it was not a misdemeanor as defined in the penal code of the state.

In the case of Pillsbury v. Brown, 47 Calif., 477, the court had before it for consideration practically the same question as you present. In that case the court called attention to the fact that a misdemeanor is an act or omission for which punishment, other than death or imprisonment, is denounced by law; that is, by the law of the supreme power, expressed by statute (Pol. Code, sections 4, 466-7.) In that case the act of March 27, 1872, reincorporating the city of Stockton (Acts of 1871-2, p. 595), provided:

> "And every violation of any lawful order, regulation or ordinance of the city council of the city of Stockton is hereby declared a misdemeanor or public offense, and all procecutions for the same may be in the name of the people of the state of California."

The statute also provided that it should be the official duty of the district attorney to "institute proceedings before magistrates for the arresting of persons charged with, or reasonably suspected of, public offenses," (Pol. Code, section 4256, subdivision 2), which meant, under the statute, those charged with acts or omissions violative of law and amounting to felonies and misdemeanors. (Penal Code sections 15 to 18.) The statute also provided (acts of 1869-70) a fee of $15.00 for the district attorney upon each conviction for such misdemeanor, to be taxed against the offender and collected by him, and in cases where the same could not be so collected of the offender, then to be collected of the county in which said conviction was had and be paid to the district attorney out of the funds of the county treasury. In this case the district attorney prosecuted one Wentoby under an ordinance of the city of Stockton and the district attorney claimed a fee of $15.00 on the theory that the violation of an ordinance of the city of Stockton was a misdemeanor.

The court said at page 480:

> "A misdemeanor is an act or omission for which a punishment, other than death or imprisonment, in the state prison, is denounced by law—that is, by the will of the supreme power, expressed by statute.(Pol. Code, sections 4, 466-7.) There is no statute, at least none is called to our attention, under which the misconduct of Wentoby, of which he was convicted in the police court, amounts to a misdemeanor. * * * His offense was a breach of ordinance No. 4, passed by the municipal government of the city of Stockton—nothing more. It is true that he was prosecuted in the name of the people of the state of California, and that the prosecution was conducted by their local law officer, but, after all, the gravamen of the proceeding was the breach of the ordinance of the city, and had there been no such ordinance in force, when the fact occurred, the prosecution must have failed. But it is said that the offense of Wentoby was a misdemeanor, notwithstanding it has been declared to have been such by any statute directly constituting it such and in support of this position we are referred to the act of March 27, 1872, reincorporating the city of Stockton (Acts 1871-2, p. 595), which, upon this point, is as follows:

" 'And every violation of any lawful order, regulation or ordinance of the city council of the city of Stockton is hereby declared a misdemeanor or public offense, and all prosecutions for the same may be in the name of the people of the state of California.'

"While there can be no doubt of the authority of the legislature to provide that penalties for the breaches of city ordinances may be enforced by proceedings against offenders in the name of the people of the state, a serious question might arise as to its authority to enact, that the breach of any ordinance of the city council thereafter to have passed should constitute a misdemeanor, since this would, in effect, be to delegate to the city council the power to enact laws, in the strict sense. But however this may be, we think that the statute of 1869-70, already referred to, in fixing the fees of district attorneys upon conviction had for misdemeanors committed, referred only to misdemeanors defined as such by the general public law of the state, and not to convictions for the breaches of mere local municipal ordinances, even though termed misdemeanors for convenience of general designation and prosecuted in the name of the people of the state."

From a consideration of these authorities, it is quite clear, I think, that even though council may style the violation of an ordinance a misdemeanor, such ordinance violation is not a misdemeanor within the meaning of the word as used in the penal code of the state, and that a woman convicted of a violation of such ordinance cannot, therefore, be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory at Marysville.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX BLANKS—QUESTIONS 28, 35, 36 AND 44 ARE REQUIRED THEREIN BY SECTION 5375-4 G. C.—COMMISSION MAY PRESCRIBE OTHER QUESTIONS—ALL QUESTIONS IN BLANK MUST BE ANSWERED.

Questions 28, 35, 36 and 44 of the blank for listing personal property, as prescribed by the tax commission, are all required to be set forth therein by G. C. section 5375-4, as enacted in 1917, though the commission has power thereunder to prescribe questions other than those required by law.

The tax law of 1917, by several express provisions, requires all questions in the blank orm to be answered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1917.

HON. H. H. TIMBY, Ashtabula, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I regret that I was unable to immediately reply to your letter of May 14, 1917. Inasmuch, however, as you inquire therein concerning certain features of the tax listing blank prescribed by the tax commission of Ohio, and your inquiry was not made until after the time for the making of voluntary returns had elapsed, I felt obliged to postpone its consideration to that of other matters which had to be answered immediately.

Your inquiry directs my attention to questions No. 28, 35, 36 and 44 on the form of tax return of personal property for 1917, as prescribed by the tax commission.

You first question the authority of the tax commission to prescribe the form of a blank and to place therein a statement that in order to obtain the benefit of a return under oath the taxpayer must answer all the questions on the blank.

In this connection section 5366 of the General Code, as amended by the act of 1917, provides in part as follows:

> "Each person required by law shall correctly list all such property on such blanks giving the true value thereof in money, and answer all questions correctly, and give all information asked and required by the printed forms contained on such blanks."

Also section 5375-1 of the General Code, as last amended, provides that:

> "Each question in the blank form for listing personal property shall be answered fully and accurately and each item therein shall be filled out. Where the word 'none' truly and completely states the fact respecting any item or question in such blank forms, it may be given as the answer thereto."

Section 5375-4, which is very lengthy and which bears upon practically all of the questions submitted by you, provides in the first part thereof that:

> "The state tax commission shall cause to be printed on the blanks prepared for listing personal property in each taxing subdivision, questions to be answered by all persons required to list property, which will elicit a full disclosure of all property required by law to be valued for taxation. In addition to all others, questions shall be asked the answer to which will elicit the following information:"
> (Here follow numerous questions which must be asked, though the section plainly authorizes the commission to prescribe other questions.)

The last sentence of this same section provides as follows:

> "Each question so propounded shall be answered specifically, and no return shall be accepted by the auditor or assessor until full disclosures are made as required herein."

From the above provisions it is very clear that the tax commission has ample authority to prescribe the form of the personal property tax list and to print therein the admonition to property owners that all questions on the blank must be answered.

The special questions, the applicability of which you question, are as follows:

> "28. As shown by the books of the bank, how much money had you in bank on listing day,
> (a) Subject to check? $_____
> (b) On demand certificate of deposit? $_____
> "35. What was the cash value of all unsecured claims? $_____
> "36. What was the total amount of all your actual, legal, bona fide debts on listing day? $_____
> "44. What are the names, dates of purchase and amounts paid for same, in detail, of all nontaxable stocks and bonds purchased by you within the year ending April 3, 1917?

No. of shares.	No. of bonds.	Company or authority issuing same.	Amount paid.
Total amount paid for such bonds and stocks			$

Section 5375-4 G. C. provides that the blank shall contain questions which will elicit a full disclosure as to "whether or not the person listing had any money in bank, how much subject to check and how much on certificates of deposit, both as disclosed by the books of the bank, and the amount in any other form, in bank or otherwise * * * ." Question 28 is nothing more or less than an exact compliance with the absolute requirement of the statute. The question itself is but a codification of what the courts of the state had previously held to be the criterion for determining the amount of "money" held by the person required to list on tax listing day. The mere fact that the taxing officers are prohibited by general statute from examining the books of a bank has nothing to do with this question. The depositors are at liberty to ask the bank what its books show and the law requires them to do this. The bank cannot refuse to answer.

Section 5375-4 also requires that the questions on the blank form shall elicit information as to "the amount of credits owing to such person secured by liens on real estate or personal property, and the amount of credits owing in form of notes, book accounts, and other claims or obligations, not so secured, together with the cash value of all claims secured by liens and unsecured." Of course question 35 is put into the blank because the above provision of law requires it to be put there. In order to arrive at taxable "credits" it is necessary, and always has been under our tax laws, for the taxpayer to ascertain the excess of the aggregate claims and demands owing to him over and above the credits of the legal bona fide debts owing by him. To do this, in turn he had in his own mind, at least, always to place a value upon his unsecured claims. Of course, this involved a considerable degree of estimation, or, as you put it, of "guess work," because a credit or a claim owing to the tax payer was to be valued not at its face value, but at the sum at which the person required to place the value thereon might think it reasonably to be worth. The only new thing in the present tax law is the requirement that the taxpayer put upon paper, i. e., upon the blank form the exact steps in the calculation which under the former law he was required or supposed to make in his own mind.

Section 5375-4 also provides that the questions to be asked shall elicit information as to the "total amount of all actual, legal, bona fide debts." Of course this provision accounts for question 36. In discussing question 35 I have, I think, sufficiently discussed the effect of and reason for this provision of statute. The same section, section 5375-4, provides that the questions shall elicit information as to "whether such person has purchased any non-taxable stocks and bonds within such year, and if so the name, date of purchase and the amount thereof in detail." There is a somewhat similar provision in section 5376, as amended, which I shall not quote. The provision above quoted adequately accounts for question No. 44. It embodies no radical departure from that which has always been required to be stated in the tax listing blanks. It does change the policy of the law in the matter of degree, as it were. Formerly the tax payer was required to list the amount of money which he had converted into non-taxable bonds of the state of Ohio, or any of its municipalities, and he was taxed upon a proportionate amount determined by the period of time within the taxing year in which his property to that extent had been represented by taxable effects or securities. Now the provision is extended to all non-taxable bonds and stocks as well, thus including bonds of the United States, or its territories, and domestic and certain foreign corporations, whose stock is not taxable under the laws of Ohio.

Section 5376 G. C., in the provision thereof hereinbefore referred to, but not yet quoted, provides that the list shall set forth:

> "the monthly average amount or value for the time he held or controlled them within the preceding year, of all moneys, credits, or other effects, within that time invested in, or converted into bonds or other securities not taxed, to the extent he may hold or control such bonds or securities on tax listing day."

Question 16 requires this information to be given and really belongs with and supplements question 44. If there is any criticism of the blank in connection with this matter it is that the questions are not asked in a logical order.

You will see that the law contains ample authority for asking all the questions concerning which you inquire; and that in point of fact none of these questions are asked by the tax commission under its authority to prescribe questions other than those prescribed by the statute; that is to say, the questions are required to be asked by the law itself and not prescribed by the tax commission; also the requirement that full answers be given for all questions does not emanate from the tax commission, but from the law itself. Of course there is and can be no question as to the constitutionality of these provisions.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—BOND OF HENRY D. BRUNNING—DEPUTY HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 1, 1917, with which you enclose the bond of Henry D. Bruning, who has been appointed deputy highway commissioner.

I have carefully examined this bond and find the same correct in form and legal and am therefore returning the bond to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—POWER TO ESTABLISH DISTRICTS AND PURPOSE THEREOF.

The power of the state civil service commission to establish districts under section 20 of the "Moore-Barnes" law, is for purposes of their own administration, and not to establish such districts to coincide with districts established by other state departments for their administrative purposes.

There is no provision of the civil service law authorizing the civil service commission to district the state and require applicants for office in the different districts to be residents thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1917.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted the following request for opinion from this department.

> "Several of the state departments have established districts for the purpose of administration and facilitating the work of their inspectional forces and field workers. The civil service commission in several instances has been requested to establish civil service districts which shall coincide with districts so established by the department making the request, and that examinations for positions having to do with the work in such districts, and certifications made for appointment, shall be confined to persons who are residents thereof.
> "We understand from section 486-20 of the civil service law that our commission has the right to divide the state into civil service districts for the purpose of administration, and establish an officer in each of such districts. We do not understand by this, however, that we are given authority to confine certification after competitive examination to persons who are residents of specified districts.
> "Section 486-10 of the civil service law says:
> " 'All applicants for positions and places in the classified service shall be subject to examination which shall be public, competitive, and free for all, within certain limitations to be determined by the commission as to citizenship, residence, age, sex, experience, health, habits, and moral character, etc.'
> "Will you please give us at the earliest possible moment, your opinion as to whether or not the civil service commission has authority under the law to district the state for purposes of examination and certification as set forth above?"

Your conclusion as to the effect of section 486-20 is correct, and the rule you have passed under authority of that section goes at least as far as you have any kind of authority to extend it. The authority of this section, as you express bears little, if any, relation to the power you inquire about. It is by its express terms "for the purpose of administration"—that means your administration. To apply it in the sense inquired about would require it to be distorted and perverted; that is, in place of having one set of districts in the state for the purpose of your own administration you would have to have different sets of districts for the purpose of the administration of different departments, or even the same department, for the industrial commission has the state districted for different purposes into different sets of districts.

The provision in section 486-10 that the examinations are free for all within certain limitations to be determined by the commission as to citizenship, residence, age, sex, experience, health, habits and moral character, cannot be construed as giving the commission authority to legislate upon these subjects. If, for instance, you were to do the thing about which you inquire, divide the state up into districts, say, for one of the state departments, and attempt to provide by rule that only residents of that district would be eligible to hold a position in that district, there being no legislative restriction on the subject, this would be an act of attempted legislation on your part and not a mere rule. It would rise to the dignity of law, and to so construe the section as to grant you that authority would be a delegation of power to you by the legislature which is against the express provision of the Constitution;

Article II, section 1;
Harmon v. State, 66 O. S., 249;
State ex rel. Allison v. Garver, 66 O. S., 555.

Where a statute is capable of two or more constructions, one of which would render it unconstitutional, it will always be given another construction whereby it will not contravene the constitution, and this section would, therefore, not be construed as giving you this power.

Reverting now to the first statement of your inquiry that some of the state departments have established districts for the purpose of administration and facilitating the work of their inspectional forces, and have requested you to establish districts accordingly: This, as already shown, and as you indicate, is not what you are authorized to do by section 486-20, and as that section is the charter of your authority upon the subject of districting, it not only gives you the power to establish districts in accordance with its terms, but it also limits your power in that respect to action in accordance with the provisions of the section itself. It would, therefore, afford no warrant for the complicated and commingled districting of the state required to accommodate your districts to those established by the other departments. Neither is it apprehended that this would be necessary. The establishment of your districts is administrative merely for your own purposes; that is, for the purpose of examinations, investigations, etc., and is more for the convenience of the public than of the commission in order that the benefits of your administration may be brought nearer within reach of the general public. An examination, therefore, when held in one of these districts, is just the same as an examination held by you at your own office if no such districts were established. It does not follow that the applicant for a position should be an inhabitant of that district. If he be required to be an inhabitant of the district established by some other department, and any one of your districts partly coincides with the territory of that district, he could take his examination at the place established by you in the district although his duties when appointed, or if appointed, would require him to act in a district of different boundaries, and neither would there be any objection so far as the civil service act is concerned, if he took his examination entirely out of his own district and in one of yours which was entirely separated from it, although it would be within your power under paragraph 1 of section 486-7 to establish rules on this subject, and such rule illustrates the difference above referred to between rules which are merely administrative and those which would assume to legislate.

Such rule as here supposed would be a mere administrative regulation adopted for the purpose of carrying out and effectuating legislative provisions.

It is not intended here to decide anything in reference to the power of other departments to establish districts for their own administration. Such power in each case would depend upon the language of the statute governing the particular department, or the absence of language on the subject. A number of the departments may have, and some of them certainly do have power to establish such districts. Taking the industrial commission as an instance, section 984 authorized the appointment of twenty-five district inspectors in the department of workshops and factories. This section was repealed, but section 985, providing the qualification of such district inspectors was left in force. The appropriation made by the present general assembly appropriated the sum of $33,000.00 for 22 such district deputies, from which it would be inferred that this department has divided the state into twenty-two such districts. It is not here intended to question the power of the commission to do so, but merely to cite an instance in which it is done. The same act provides for twelve district deputies in the mining department, so that here you have a department with two different sets of districts in the state, and with authority presumably to require each district deputy to be a resident of the district. In such case, when there is a vacancy, your eligible list would necessarily be confined to inhabitants of that particular district, but it would not be necessary that your district have conterminous boundaries with that district in order for him to be subjected to the proper examination.

Your question, therefore, is answered in the negative.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MUST BEAR EXPENSE OF REPAIR OR CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGES, ETC., ON HIGHWAYS OF COUNTY—ALSO EXPENSE OF REPAIRING AND MAINTAINING COUNTY ROADS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MUST BEAR COST OF REPAIRING AND MAINTAINING TOWNSHIP ROADS.

1. Under the provisions of section 7192 G. C. it is the duty of the county commissioners to bear the cost and expense of the repair or construction of a bridge or culvert on the highways of the county.

2. Under the provisions of sections 7464 and 7467 G. C. it is the duty of the township trustees to bear the cost and expense of repairing and maintaining township roads; and the duty of county commissioners to bear the cost and expense of repairing and maintaining county roads.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1917.

HON. ROY R. CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 3, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a certain matter. Your communication reads as follows:

> "The trustees of Ross township, this county, and the treasurer thereof, are at variance as to the legality of certain claims for road work, and the payment thereof, and wish to be guided in the matter by an opinion from you.
> "As I am informed, Howard Joyce, county surveyor, and thus county road superintendent of Jefferson county, in company with the three county commissioners, while on a trip of inspection of the roads through Ross township in June, 1916, passed along and over the road from the farm of one Lewis McClain to Mooretown; that they found a thirty-inch culvert washed away, making a slight detour necessary; that while making this detour they not only saw that the road was badly in need of repair, but their automobile was stalled in the detour, and they had to get out and help push the machine; that the said county road superintendent called the township district road superintendent and asked him to repair the road; that said district superintendent did not give him a satisfactory answer as to when he would make such repairs; that recognizing from his own observation and experience the necessity of immediate repair, Mr. Joyce informed one Lewis McClain that if the district road superintendent did not repair the road in two or three days, that he (Lewis McClain) should have the road repaired, that is, do whatever was necessary, not only to this culvert, but at other points that were in need of repair.

"The township superintendent did not repair the road and Lewis McClain, carrying out the instructions of the county highway superintendent, secured the services of certain men and their teams and made the repairs to this road, as ordered by the county road superintendent. Later, claim, duly approved by the county highway superintendent, was made to the township trustees. The trustees signed their approval of the same and ordered vouchers drawn for the payment. The treasurer of the township refused, and still refuses to draw vouchers to pay the claims which amount to seventy some dollars. This is a township road and the county commissioners took no action in the matter.

"On January 18 I wrote the township trustees that if a majority of them approved the claims and the county road superintendent who ordered the work done approved the claims, said trustees could legally pay the same, and based my opinion on the following:

" 'The new road law, known as the "Cass road law," gives the county surveyor exceptional powers and authority over the roads within his county. Section 7181 G. C. provides, "that the county surveyor shall be the county highway superintendent." Section 7187 provides that county highway superintendents shall approve all estimates and accounts of money obtained from county or township funds for the repair of roads, etc. Section 7182 G. C. provides that the county highway superintendent shall keep the roads in good condition throughout the county. Section 7198 reads:

" 'The county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties.' "

In answering your question it will be necessary for us to consider two propositions:

"1. Did the county highway superintendent have authority to do what he did in the matter of the improvement of the highway and the repair of the culvert?

"2. If so, who should pay for the same, the township trustees or the county commissioners?"

1. Let us first consider the question as to whether the county highway superintendent had the authority he assumed to have in the matter set out in your communication.

Section 7184 G. C. provides as follows:

"The county highway superintendent shall have general charge, subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department, of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, whether known as township, county or state highways, and such county highway superintendent shall see that the same are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law, and shall have general supervision of the work of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing the highways, bridges and culverts in his county, * * *."

From this section we note that the county highway superintendent has genera charge of the repair of all highways within his county, whether township, county or state. Further, he has general supervision of the work of maintaining and repairing bridges and culverts in his county.

Section 7192 G. C. provides as follows:

"The county highway superintendent shall keep the highways of the county at all times in good and suitable conditions for public travel. He shall generally supervise the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the bridges and culverts on the highways of the county, the cost of which shall be borne by the county, unless otherwise provided by law."

From this section it is evident that the county highway superintendent not only has the authority, but it is his duty to keep the highways of the county in good and suitable conditions for public travel, this applying to culverts as well as to other parts of the highways.

Section 7198 G. C. provides as follows:

"The county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties."

From this section we see the county highway superintendent has authority to employ such laborers, teams, etc., as may be necessary in the performance of his duties; but it is to be noted in this section that this must be done with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees. Inasmuch as the county commissioners were with him at the time he engaged Lewis McClain, I am assuming that he had their approval, especially from the fact that they were compelled to substitute man power for gasoline power in the matter of getting their machine over this certain road. But if it were a township road, the county highway superintendent could not act without the approval of the township trustees.

As held in Opinion No. 202, rendered by me on April 19, 1917, this approval must be given before the superintendent acts. This he did not have. But as said in Opinion No. 202, if the township trustees place their O. K. upon the bills incurred by the county highway superintendent, this might be considered as an approval of the work done under the direction of the county highway superintendent; that is, it would be considered as a sort of a nunc pro tunc approval. So that in your case I think we could consider that the township trustees gave their approval to the work done by the county highway superintendent.

From all the above, I think it is quite evident the county highway superintendent had full authority to do what he did in the matter of the repair of said road and culvert, as set out in your communication.

2. Who is to pay for work done, the township trustees or the county commissioners? In order to answer this question, it will be well for us to note the provisions of section 7464 G. C., which section classifies the roads of this state as state roads, county roads and township roads. It further provides that the state highway department shall maintain the state roads, the county commissioners shall maintain the county roads, and the township trustees shall maintain the township roads.

Section 7467 G. C. provides:

> "The state, county and township shall each maintain their respective roads as designated in the classification hereinabove set forth; * * * ."

These provisions would apply to the roads proper, but would not apply directly to the culvert in question.

Section 7192 G. C. provides that the cost of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the bridges and culverts on the highways of the county shall be borne by the county, "unless otherwise provided by law."

I have searched the statutes in vain to find a provision which would make the township liable for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of a bridge or culvert on the highways of the county.

Section 7562 G. C. provided that the township trustees should build and keep in repair all bridges and culverts when the cost of the construction did not exceed fifty dollars; but this section has been repealed and nothing like it was enacted to take its place so far as I have been able to ascertain.

Hence, it is my opinion that the county commissioners are under obligation to pay for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all culverts and bridges located in the county. There is an exception to this when the township trustees join with the state highway department in the construction of an inter-county highway or main market road, or when they construct such a road themselves, but this would not apply to the matter set out in your communication.

So answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that in so far as the repair of the said culvert is concerned, the county commissioners would be liable for the payment of that part of the cost and expense; and in so far as the repair of the highway is concerned, if it is a township highway under the provisions of section 7464 G. C., the township trustees would be under obligation to pay for the cost and expense of the repair; but if said highway is a county highway under the provisions of said section 7464, the county commissioners would be under obligation to pay for the cost and expense of the same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY TREASURER—ACCEPTANCE OF CHECK IN PAYMENT OF LIQUOR TAX—IS NOT PAYMENT OF SAID ASSESSMENT—IF CHECK NOT HONORED—SECTION 8291 DOES NOT APPLY—WHEN SUCH CHECK TREATED AS CASH BY TREASURER WHEN MAKING HIS SETTLEMENT—HE IS LIABLE ON HIS BOND FOR AMOUNT OF SAME.

1. Ordinarily, the receipt by a county treasurer of a check in payment of the liquor tax under section 6071 G. C. is not payment of such assessment, even if the officer, on receiving the check, marks the duplicate "paid" and issues a receipt therefor, if the check is not honored by payment.

2. County treasurers accepting checks in payment of taxes are not bound by the provisions of section 8291 G. C., providing that a check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after its issue, or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon, to the extent of the loss caused by the delay.

3. When a county treasurer, by an arrangement between himself and a person against whom a liquor assessment has been made, accepts a check therefor, holding said check, making his settlements with the auditor of state and county auditor, treating said check as cash and not presenting it for payment until after all of said settlements, the treasurer is liable on his bond for the amount of same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1917

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 1, 1917, you write asking for my opinion on facts stated by you as follows:

> "On June 14, 1916, one Willis Ward, deceased, who had been engaged in the retail liquor business in this city for several years past, gave a check on one of the banks here to M. J. Caldwell, treasurer of the county. There are no indorsements thereon. The above check was given by Mr. Ward to Mr. Caldwell in payment of the liquor tax assessment (section 6071), June half 1916, and in accordance with the provisions of section 6072 of the Code as amended 104 O. L. 166. The treasurer stamped on his duplicate the assessment against Mr. Ward 'paid,' but issued him no receipt therefor.
> "The auditor's duplicate in accordance with section 6085 of the Code charged the treasurer with the amount of the liquor tax assessment to be collected from Mr. Ward, to wit: five hundred dollars.
> "That on or about the 21st day of June, 1916, the treasurer, Mr. Caldwell, made a settlement with the auditor for the liquor tax assessment relying upon the validity of said check above mentioned. The auditor's duplicate shows Ward's liquor license tax paid.
> "Later, however, check in question was presented to bank for payment which was refused. This check is now carried as cash on the treasurer's book.
> "In the meantime, however, Mr. Ward became sick and died on the 2nd day of December, 1916, intestate. His widow, Margaret Ward, on the 5th day of December, 1916, was appointed administratrix of the estate of said Willis Ward. The only assets of the Ward estate, as disclosed by the inventory, consisted of furniture and fixtures in his saloon at the time of his death, and with which furniture and fixtures he was conducting the saloon at the time he gave check in question and up until the time of his death.
> "On October 16, 1914, Mr. Ward executed a chattel mortgage for the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars on the furniture and fixtures in his saloon. The furniture and fixtures will not sell for enough to satisfy the mortgage. Mr. Ward was the lessee of the premises wherein the saloon was located. This saloon was conducted by Mr. Ward a long time prior to June 1, 1916, without paying the Dow-Aiken tax for the last half of the year 1916.

"I think that I have stated herein all of the necessary facts. Mr. Caldwell, our county treasurer, now asks me if he cannot proceed to collect the tax under section 6078 of the Code.

"Under section 6072 of the Code, as amended 104 O. L. 166, would this tax become a lien on the real estate?"

Normally, the check given by Mr. Ward to the county treasurer not having been honored by payment, the situation presented with respect to the tax due on account of the business conducted by Mr. Ward would be the same as if the check had not been tendered or received, and this situation would not be altered by the fact that on receiving the check the tax for the amount of the assessment was marked "paid" by the treasurer and auditor of the county.

Fleig v. Sleet, 43 O. S. 53.
Hilsinger v. Trickett, 86 O. S. 286, 302.
Manck v. Frants, 4 W. L. B. 1043.

Section 8291 of the General Code, which is but declaratory of a rule of the law merchant or common law, provides that a check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after its issue, or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of the loss caused by the delay.

It was decided by the superior court of Cincinnati, in the case of Manck v. Frantz, that the rule declared by this statute had no application to checks received in payment for taxes; and if this section were to be considered as having application to checks given in payment of taxes there is nothing in the facts stated to indicate any damage sustained by the drawer of the check by reason of the delay in presentation of the same for payment. Ordinarily the only loss arising from delay in the presentment for which the holder of a check is responsible is that arising from the insolvency of the drawee.

Stewart v. State, 17 O. S., 83, 86.

With respect to the first question made by you, I note that section 7071 of the General Code provides that upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors there shall be assessed yearly and paid into the county treasury by each person, corporation or copartnership engaged therein the sum of $1,000.00.

Section 6072 provides, among other things, that such assessment with any penalty thereon shall attach and operate as a lien upon the real property on and in which such business is conducted as of the fourth Monday of May of each year, and shall be paid at the time provided for the payment of taxes on real and personal property within this state, to wit: one-half on or before the 20th day of June, and one-half on or before the 20th day of December, of each year.

Sections 6077 and 6078 of the General Code provide as follows:

"Section 6077. If a person, corporation or copartnership refuses or neglects to pay the amount due under the provisions of this chapter within the time therein specified, the county treasurer shall forthwith collect such amount with the penalties thereon, and four per cent. collection fees and costs, by distress and sale, as on execution, from any goods and chattels of such person, corporation or copartnership."

"Section 6078. The county treasurer shall forthwith call at the place of business of such person, corporation or copartnership, and, in case of the refusal to pay such amount so due, shall levy on the goods and chattels of such person, corporation or copartnership, wherever found in such county, or on the bar fixtures, furniture, liquors, leasehold and other goods and chattels used in carrying on such business. Such levy shall take precedence of all liens, mortgages, conveyances or incumbrances hereafter taken or had on such goods and chattels so used in carrying on such business; and no claim of property by a third person to such goods and chattels so used in carrying on such business shall avail against such levy by the treasurer. No property, of any kind, of any person, corporation or copartnership liable to pay such amount, penalty, interest and costs shall be exempt from such levy."

By the provisions of section 6078 G. C., the levy, when made as therein provided for, on the goods and chattels used in the conduct of the business, is made paramount to all liens, incumbrances or charges whatsoever taken or had on such goods and chattels by any act of the owner or otherwise.

It was the duty of the county treasurer, whenever a person, engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, failed to pay the assessment, to proceed forthwith and collect such assessment under the provisions of sections 6077 and 6078 G. C., and if a levy had been made, such levy would take precedence of all liens, mortgages, conveyances or incumbrances on such goods and chattels as were used in the carrying on of such business, and sales of such chattels would have been made under the provisions of section 6079 G. C.

Then, too, if a sufficient amount had not been made on the sale to pay the amount of the Dow tax assessment, the amount collected would have been reported to the auditor, and the county auditor, under the provision of section 6080 G. C., would have placed the amount due and unpaid on the tax duplicate against the real estate in which such traffic had been carried on, and said amount would have been collected as other taxes and assessments on such premises.

As I have said, this would have been the general rule, but from the facts stated in your communication it would appear that this is a case outside of the general rule. You state that Mr. Ward had been engaged in the retail liquor business prior to June 14, 1916, when he gave the check to the treasurer for the half year commencing on the fourth Monday of May, 1916, and which was payable under the provisions of section 6072 G. C. on or about the 20th day of June. The fact that the treasurer stamped on his duplicate the assessment against Mr. Ward as paid, but issued him no receipt therefor, is significant in itself.

You state that the treasurer made a settlement with the auditor for the liquor tax assessment on the 21st day of June, 1916, and that the auditor's duplicate shows Ward's liquor tax was paid. In your communication you further say:

"Later, however, check in question was presentenced to bank for payment which was refused. This check is now carried as cash on the treasurer's book."

You do not say at what date the check in question was presented to the bank for payment. I take it that your county treasurer, under the provisions of section 6096 G. C., on or before the 1st day of July, 1916, made a report to the auditor of state, of the amount of money paid into the treasury of the county under the provisions of the intoxicating liquors sections, and that on or before the 10th of July of that year, by draft or otherwise, he remitted to the treasurer of state the money due the state as shown by such statement.

I further take it, although the facts stated contain no mention thereof, that your county treasurer and the county auditor had their regular August settlement that year; that the revenues derived from the intoxicating liquor assessment were distributed under the provisions of sections 6093 at seq. G. C.; that at the end of the semi-annual collection of taxes for that period, the county treasurer made the statement to the county auditor required by section 2643 G. C., and that the county treasurer's fees were figured on the moneys collected on the liquor duplicate, including the five hundred dollars of Mr. Ward.

If what I have assumed is true, then the check in question was not presented to the bank for payment until after the August settlement, or possibly later, and this must have been done under some arrangement between the maker of the check and the treasurer, for if the check had been presented earlier, no doubt the treasurer would have taken the steps for the collection of the assessment provided by the liquor statutes, and if this check was held under the arrangement between the parties as indicated, then it appears to me that the treasurer, having reported the assessment as paid, and having remitted the state's portion of this very assessment to the auditor of state, and the other portion having been distributed according to law, is personally bound for the amount of the check.

Even prior to the August settlement this check was evidently carried as a cash item. The amount of this very check entered into the gross amount on which the treasurer's fees were figured. When settlement time came, both with the county auditor and the state auditor, this check was reported as cash, and, as stated in your letter, it is now carried as cash on the treasurer's book.

I can come to no other conclusion, under all the circumstances, and I hold that as far as the county is concerned this check is cash, to be accounted for by the treasurer and for which he is liable on his bond. I think that it is too late, after all of the statutory settlements made, to make any claim that the county has a right against Mr. Ward's estate for the amount of this assessment.

As far as the county is concerned, on the repeated solemn assurances of the treasurer, it was paid. It was no longer a check. It was cash. What rights the treasurer might have against the estate of Mr. Ward I am not passing upon, as it is a matter in which the county is not concerned.

Answering your specific question, then, and assuming that this check was held under some arrangement between the treasurer and the maker thereof, it is my opinion that the treasurer cannot proceed to collect the tax now, under section 6078 G. C.

Further, if I am correct in the above conclusion, a tax would not now become a lien on real estate, by virtue of section 6072 G. C., because, as before stated, the county is no longer interested, having received the amount of the assessment.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMPANY OPERATING RAILROAD CARS—MUST PROVIDE SEATS FOR MOTORMEN AND CONDUCTORS—COMPANY MAY MAKE REASONABLE REGULATIONS AS TO USE OF SAME.

1. Under the provisions of the act "requiring persons, etc. to provide for the well being of their employes." the persons or company owning or operating railroad cars must provide separate seats for motormen and conductors.

2. Under the provisions of said act the persons or company owning or operating the cars may make reasonable regulations requiring the motormen and conductors to stand while passing through the congested districts of a city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1917.

HON. BERNARD M. FOCKE, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.
Attention Hon. Sam. D. Kelly, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 2, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a certain matter. Your communication reads as follows:

> "We would like to have your opinion as to the meaning of house bill No. 144, passed at the last session of the legislature, entitled 'An act requiring persons, associations and corporations owning or operating street or interurban electric railroad cars to provide for the well being of their employes.'
> Section 1 of this act reads as follows:
> 'It shall be unlawful to operate in Ohio any electric street or interurban railroad car unless it be provided at all times during operation with seats for the motorman and conductor.'
>
> "To comply with the law will it be necessary for street railroads to provide individual seats for the motorman and conductor and permit them to use these seats at all times?
> "It has been the policy on the street car lines in Dayton to provide stools for their motormen, permitting them to use these stools while running in the outskirts, but demanding that they stand while passing through the congested districts. It has been the policy to permit the conductors to use the rear seats in the cars when these seats were not occupied by passengers.
> "Will it be necessary for these companies to put in special and individual seats?"

The section upon which you ask me to place a construction is a part of an act the title of which is as follows:

> "An act requiring persons, associations and corporations owning or operating street or interurban electric railroad cars to provide for the well-being of their employes."

Section 1 of said act reads as follows:

> "Section 1. That it shall be unlawful to operate in Ohio any electric, street or interurban railroad car unless it be provided at all times during operation with seats for the motorman and conductor."

The question suggested in your communication naturally divides itself into two parts, namely:

"1. Is it necessary for street railroad companies to provide individual seats for their conductors and motormen?

"2. Is it necessary that they be permitted to use these seats at all times and under all circumstances?"

I will place a construction upon said statute with a view to answering your questions in the order given.

What does the section say as to providing individual seats?

"unless it be provided at all times during operation with seats for the motorman and conductor."

is the language used. What are the important provisions in this clause?

"at all times during operation with seats" and

"with seats for the motorman and conductor"

are the important phrases in the clause; that is, the company must provide the car with seats at all times during operation, and these seats must be for the motorman and conductor. Hence, the company could not comply with the conditions of the statute in any manner other than by providing separate, distinct and individual seats for both the motorman and conductor. Merely permitting the conductor to use the rear seats in the car, when not occupied by passengers, would not be a compliance with the provisions of the statute.

What about the answer to the second question? The language of the statute is not so clear as to this matter, but it will be noted that there is no provision in the statute to the effect that the conductor and motorman must be permitted to use the seats at all times. In fact, there is nothing said about the using of the seats. This provision must be inferred from the other provisions of the statute. The seats are to be furnished for some purpose and with some object. That purpose and object are that the motorman and conductor might have them to use. But there is no provision in the statute that the motorman and conductor must be permitted to use the seats at all times while on duty, and it is not probable that they would so desire to use them.

Hence, it is my opinion that a reasonable regulation on the part of the street railway company, to the effect that the motorman and conductor stand while passing through the congested districts of the city, would not be a violation of the provisions of the statute. Such a provision would be with the object and purpose of protecting the passengers upon the car and persons using the streets of the city, and not for the advantage and gain of the company.

Furthermore, it must be kept in mind that this is a highly penal statute. It would therefore be strictly construed and nothing can be read into the statute other than that which is plainly within its terms.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that a street car company, under the act referred to by you, would be compelled to furnish separate seats for the motorman and conductor at all times during the operation of the car; further, that a company would not violate the provisions of said act by making a reasonable requirement that the motorman and conductor stand while passing through the congested districts of the city.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

RAILROAD COMPANY—NOT ALLOWED TO SELL INTOXICATING LIQUOR IN OHIO—TO SALVAGE SAME WHEN REFUSED BY CONSIGNEE—

A railroad company having left on its hands, in wet territory in Ohio, a stock of intoxicating liquors, by reason of the refusal of both the consignee and the consignor to receive or accept said goods, owing to the fact that the barrels containing said intoxicating liquors had been damaged in transit and a portion of the contents thereof had leaked out, and said railroad company desiring to sell such liquor to liquor dealers, in order to salvage such shipment and apply the proceeds upon the claim of the consignor, is not within the exceptions found in section 1261-63 General Code, and such proposed sales would be in violation of said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1917.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication of June 1, 1917, enclosing letter from Messrs. Semple and Sherick, attorneys, with reference to the sale of certain liquors damaged in transit, and requesting an opinion upon the facts therein stated.

The letter of Messrs. Semple and Sherick reads in part as follows:

> "Some thirty days ago Klein Brothers, of Cincinnati, Ohio, consigned to Anton Ujhelyi, of Lorain, Ohio, a carload shipment of liquor, consisting of twenty-eight barrels of brandy, eleven barrels of whiskey and ten barrels of rum. Such shipment was delivered to The Lorain, Ashland and Southern railroad company at Custaloga, Ohio, and was by the Lorain, Ashland and Southern railroad company transported to Lorain, Ohio. When such shipment arrived at Lorain, Ohio, it was found that six barrels had been damaged in transit and a portion of the contents of such barrels had leaked out in such car. The consignee refused to accept the six barrels and the consignor refused to permit the return of such barrels and remaining contents and has already filed claim for the total amount and value of such damaged barrels.
> "The Lorain, Ashland and Southern railroad company has had such damaged barrels gauged by an experienced gauger and his report is that four of the damaged barrels now contain approximately fifty-eight gallons of California brandy, one of the damaged barrels now contains approximately ten gallons of Jamaica rum and one of the damaged barrels now contains approximately thirty-seven and one-half gallons of Trester brandy. The Lorain, Ashland and Southern railroad company desires to sell such liquors to liquor dealers in the city of Lorain, Ohio, in order to salvage such shipment and to apply the proceeds upon the claim presented by the consignor. * * * ."

The attorneys representing the railroad desire to know whether or not they can sell such liquors as in the communication set forth, without violation of the liquor license law.

For the purpose of this inquiry, it is only necessary to call attention to the provisions of section 1261-63 G. C., which is section 48 of the state liquor license law, and is the penalty section for selling intoxicating liquors without a license.

Section 1261-63 G. C. reads as follows:

> "Whoever sells intoxicating liquors without having been duly licensed as provided herein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for the first offense and for a second or subsequent offense, not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than one month nor more than three months, or both.

"Sales of intoxicating liquor by other than dealers therein, in quantities of forty gallons or more, where said liquors are taken by way of payment of a debt or by way of collateral security on a loan, or are acquired for investment solely and sold en bloc, and sales under provisions of law requiring an executor, administrator, guardian, receiver or other officer of the court to sell, where such sales are made of a stock of liquors en bloc or a sale by a person, firm or corporation previously licensed but whose license is not renewed, or is revoked, forfeited, surrendered or otherwise lost, where such sales are made of a stock of liquors en bloc, are not included within the meaning of this section. Nor shall this section include the manufacturer of native wine, cider or other intoxicating liquors from the raw material and the sale thereof by the manufacturer in quantities of one gallon or more at one time at the factory or the sale thereof in said quantities by the manufacturer from the wagon or other vehicle of said manufacturer to the holder of a liquor license, or in said quantities to individual consumers where said liquors are delivered to the homes of said individual consumers in territory wherein the sale of intoxicating liquors is not prohibited by law. Nor shall this section include the sales made by a registered pharmacist upon a prescription issued in good faith by a reputable physician in active practice, or for exclusively known mechanical, pharmaceutical or sacramental purposes."

Inasmuch as it is stated in the inquiry that the railroad company desires to sell such liquors to liquor dealers in the city of Lorain, Ohio, it is evident that such acts would be entirely without the exceptions contained in section 1261-63 G. C. I do not think there is any necessity of pointing out how the proposed plan would fail to come within the exceptions. It is perfectly clear upon a mere reading of the section and comparing that part, that in any way might be claimed to be applicable, with the manner of sale set out in the communication. Nor do I feel that I am called upon to call attention to the provisions of the liquor tax laws or other statutes that might be applicable to the situation arising from making sales of intoxicating liquors in the manner proposed. Suffice it to say that it would be a clear violation of section 1261-63 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—MAY SEND DELINQUENT GIRL OVER SIXTEEN TO OHIO REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN, THE GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL, OR OTHER INSTITUTION FOR JUVENILE DELINQUENCY.

When the juvenile court finds a girl over 16 years to be delinquent, such court is not required to send her to the Ohio Reformatory for Women, but may, if it sees fit, send her to such institution or to the Girls' Industrial School, or other institution for juvenile delinquency.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1917.

HON. LEWIS D. SLUSSER, Probate Judge, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 12, 1917, as follows:

"Under section 2148-7, as amended in 105-106 Ohio Laws, pp. 130, 131, is the juvenile court at this time required to send females convicted of a misdemeanor or delinquency, when the time is over thirty days, to the Ohio State Reformatory for Women?"

Section 1644 General Code reads as follows:

"For the purpose of this chapter, the words 'delinquent child' includes any child under eighteen years of age who violates a law of this state, or a city or village ordinance, or who is incorrigible; or who knowingly associates with thieves, vicious or immoral persons; or who is growing up in idleness or crime; or who knowingly visits or enters a house of ill repute, or who knowingly patronizes or visits a policy shop or place where any gambling device or gambling scheme is or shall be operated or conducted; or who patronizes or visits a saloon or dram shop where intoxicating liquors are sold; or who patronizes or visits a public pool or billiard room or bucket shop; or who wanders about the streets in the night time; or who wanders about railroad yards or tracks, or jumps or catches on to a moving train, traction or street car, or enters a car or engine without lawful authority, or who uses vile, obscene, vulgar, profane or indecent language; or who is guilty of immoral conduct; or who uses cigarettes, cigarette wrapper or substitute for either, or cigars, or tobacco; or who visits or frequents any theater, gallery, penny arcade or moving picture show where lewd, vulgar or indecent pictures, exhibitions or performances are displayed, exhibited or given, or who is an habitual truant; or who uses any injurious or narcotic drug. A child committing any of the acts herein mentioned shall be deemed a juvenile delinquent person, and be proceeded against in the manner hereinafter provided."

Sections 2148-1, 2148-5, 2148-6 and 2148-7 provide:

"Section 2148-1. The Ohio Reformatory for women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age, convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided, and for the detention of such fenale prisoners as shall be transferred thereto from the Ohio penitentiary and the girl's industrial school as hereinafter provided.

"Section 2148-5. As soon as the governor shall be satisfied that suitable buildings have been erected and are ready for use and for the reception of women convicted of felony he shall issue a proclamation to that effect, attested by the secretary of state, and the secretary of state shall furnish printed copies of such proclamation to the county clerks of courts and from the date of said proclamation all portions of this act except those relating to the commitment of misdeameanants and delinquents shall be in full force and effect. Whenever additional buildings have been completed so as to care for misdemeanants and delinquents a proclamation shall be issued and published in the same manner and copies furnished to county clerks of courts and to all judges and magistrates having authority to sentence misdemeanants and delinquents and from and after the date of this proclamation all portions of this act relating to the commitment of persons to said reformatory shall be in full force and effect.

"All female persons convicted of felony, except murder in the first degree without the benefit of recommendation of mercy, shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women in the same manner as male persons are now sentenced to the Ohio state reformatory. And in so far as applicable, the laws relating to the management of the Ohio state reformatory and the control and management thereof, shall apply to the Ohio reformatory for women.

"Section 2148-6. Female persons over sixteen years of age found guilty of a misdemeanor by any court of this state shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women and be subject to the control of the Ohio board of administration, but all such persons shall be eligible to parole under the provisions of this act.

"Section 2148-7. After the issuance of the first proclamation hereinbefore referred to, it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a felony to be confined in either the Ohio penitentiary or a jail, workhouse, house of correction or other correctional or penal institution, and after the issuance of the second proclamation it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a misdemeanor or delinquency to be confined in any such place, except in both cases the reformatory herein provided for, the girls' industrial school or other institution for juvenile delinquency, unless such person is over sixteen years of age and has been sentenced for less than thirty days, or is remanded to jail in default of payment of either fine or costs or both, which will cause imprisonment for less than thirty days, provided that this section shall not apply to imprisonment for contempt of court."

It will be noted that section 1652 General Code authorizes the commitment of delinquent females (under eighteen years) to the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware. Section 2148-1 G. C. provides that the Ohio Reformatory for Women shall be used for the detention of females over sixteen who have been "convicted of delinquency." Section 2148-7 G. C. makes it unlawful for females under sixteen years, or those over sixteen years sentenced or committed for over thirty days, to be imprisoned in any penitentiary, jail, workhouse, house of correction or other correctional or penal institution other than the Ohio Reformatory for Women, the Girls' Industrial School or other institution for juvenile delinquency.

Under the provision of section 2148-7 G. C. it is plain that so far as that section is concerned females under sixteen years, and those over sixteen years sentenced or committed for more than thirty days, may be sentenced to the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware or the Ohio Reformatory for Women at Marysville. Section 2148-1 provides that the Ohio Reformatory for Women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age convicted of delinquency. So it is clear that female delinquents under sixteen should not be sent to the Ohio Reformatory for Women.

The next question is, to what institution should female delinquents over sixteen be committed when their commitment requires an imprisonment of over thirty days?

Section 1644 General Code provides that a female under 18 years of age may be found to be "delinquent" and section 1652 G. C. authorizes the commitment of such female delinquents under 18 years to the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware. Section 2148-1 G. C., as above noted, provides that the Ohio Reformatory for Women "shall be used for the detention of all females over 16 years of age convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided." This does not mean that all girls over 16 years of age, found to be delinquent, shall be sentenced to the Ohio Reformatory for Women, but only means that that institution may be used for all such females if found to be delinquent. In other words, section 2148-1 G. C. aims rather to open the Ohio Reformatory for Women to all such persons as may be sent there by the court rather than to make it compulsory upon the court to sentence such persons to such institution. That this is the intention of section 2148-1 is, I think, evident from the fact that the legislature in section 2148-5 provided that "all female persons convicted of felony, except murder in the first degree without the benefit of recommendation of mercy, shall be sentenced to the Ohio Reformatory for Women." And it also provided in section 2148-6 G. C. that "female persons over sixteen years of age found guilty of a misdemeanaor by any court of this state shall be sentenced to the Ohio Reformatory for Women." The above shows clearly that when the legislature wanted certain classes of females (for instance those convicted of felonies and misdemeanors) sentenced exclusively to the reformatory for women, it did not rely upon section 2148-1 to accomplish this purpose, but thought it necessary to make separate and additional provision in order to compel the courts to sentence such females to the Ohio reformatory for women exclusively.

For the above reasons it is my opinion that section 2148-1 G. C., while authorizing courts to imprison delinquent females over 16 in the Ohio reformatory for women, does not prevent the juvenile court from sentencing such delinquent females to other institutions as provided by law, and therefore, in direct answer to your question, I advise you that the juvenile court is not required to commit females found to be delinquent to the Ohio reformatory for women when the sentence is over thirty days, but may commit such females to such institution when such delinquent females are over sixteen years of age.

I note also that you ask as to females convicted of misdemeanors. This department has heretofore ruled that females over sixteen years of age, convicted of misdemeanors, are to be committed to the Ohio reformatory for women when the imprisonment is in excess of thirty days. However, it was held in a subsequent opinion that the word "misdemeanor," as used in these statutes, did not include the violation of a municipal or local ordinance and that females convicted of the violation of local ordinances could not be committed to the Ohio reformatory for women. This holding, to the effect that female violators of local ordinances cannot be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women, does not in any way conflict with our holding in this opinion that females over sixteen, found to be delinquent, may be sentenced to that institution, for the reason that although section 1644 General Code classifies a female under eighteen, who violates a city or village ordinance, as a delinquent, yet such female when found to be delinquent and committed has not been convicted of a violation of the city or village ordinance, but has simply been found to be incorrigible. CANDIDATES FOR ASSESSOR—NOT REQUIRED TO PAY FEE WHEN FILING DECLARATION OF CANDIDACY.

Candidates for assessors are not required to pay a fee at the time of filing their declaration of candidacy for nomination under section 4970-1 G. C. Assessors do not come within the purview of said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1917.

HON. WILILAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of June 12, 1917, asking whether or not a fee is to be charged for the filing of declaration of candidacy for nomination of assessors.

Section 4970-1 G. C. provides:

> "At the time of filing the declaration of candidacy for nomination for any office, each candidate shall pay a fee of one-half of one per cent. of the annual salary for such office, but in no case shall such fee be more than twenty-five dollars. All fees so paid in the case of candidates for state offices, office of United States senator and congressman-at-large, shall forthwith be paid by the officer receiving the same into the treasury of state. All other fees shall be paid by the officer receiving the same into the treasury of his county to the credit of the county fund. No fee shall be required in the case of candidates for committeeman or delegate or alternate to a convention or for president or vice-president of the United States, nor for offices for which no salary is paid."

Section 3364 G. C., as enacted by the last general assembly and found in S. B. No. 177, passed as an emergency measure March 21, 1917, approved March 21, 1917, and filed in the office of the secretary of state, March 23, 1917, reads as follows:

> "Section 3364. The compensation of assessors and assistant assessors, which shall be paid out of the county treasury, shall be four dollars per day for each day of not less than eight full hours of actual service they are necessarily engaged in the performance of their duties. Each assessor and assistant assessor shall make and file with the county auditor a statement giving in detail the date of each day on which he was necessarily engaged in the performance of his duties, the number of hours he worked each such day and verify it by oath, which oath the county auditor may administer. If the county auditor is satisfied that such statement is correct he shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer for the amount thereof. No such warrant shall be drawn until such assessor or assistant assessor has filed with the county auditor all the statements and returns of property listed by him, the lists of the owners of property, the statistics and enumerations required of him by law, and the county auditor is satisfied that the same are as full and accurate as could be made. The county auditor shall fix the time within which such officers shall complete their work and they shall not receive compensation for a longer period, unless the county auditor, for good cause shown, shall extend the same."

It will be noted that the fee required of the candidate at the time of filing his declaration of candidacy for nomination for any office is based upon "the annual salary" for the office. and while a maximum fee is stated in the section, there is no provision for a minimum fee.

Section 4970-1 G. C. excepts certain candidates from the required fee, namely. committeeman or delegate or alternate to a convention, president or vice-president of the United States, and "officers for which no salary is paid."

It will be noted from a reading of section 3364 G. C. that a per diem compensation is provided for the assessors and assistant assessors for as many days of actual service that they are necessarily engaged in the performance of their duties.

Section 5366-1 G. C., as passed March 21, 1917, provides for the listing of personal property between the second Monday of April and the first Monday in June annually.

Section 5367 G. C., as passed by the last legislature, provides for a meeting of the assessors of each county on the first Monday of May, while section 5368 G. C. requires the assessors to return all lists taken by them or their assistants to the county auditor on or before the first Monday in June.

So it will be seen that the time of service of the assessors and assistant assessors is not fixed, nor is their compensation, being dependent upon the number of days they are necessarily engaged in the performance of their duties. The filing fee is based on the annual salary for the office for which the person is a candidate. There is no annual salary for assessors. As stated before, they are on a per diem basis.

As the compensation the assessors receive is not to be determined until the completion of their work, it would be an impossibility to figure a filing fee, even if the compensation they are to receive should be deemed a salary. It is my opinion that assessors are not required to pay a fee at the time of filing their declaration of candidacy for nomination, both because assessors do not receive an annual salary and because it would be impossible to figure the amount of a filing fee, since the per diem compensation of assessors cannot be determined until long after the time of filing their declaration of candidacy.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN PERRY, MUSKINGUM AND ROSS COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 12, 1917, enclosing certain final resolutions for highway improvements. These final resolutions are as follows:

"Perry county—Section 'O-1,' Logan-New Lexington road, I. C. H. No. 355.

"Muskingum county—Section 'M-1,' Zanesville-Dresden road, I. C. H. No. 344. Type 'A.'

"Muskingum county—Section 'M-1,' Zanesville-Dresden road, I. C. H. No. 344. Type 'B.'

"Muskingum county—Section 'M-1,' Zanesville-Dresden road, I. C. H. No. 344. Type 'C.'

"Ross county—Section 'd,' Dayton-Chillicothe road, I. C. H. No. 29."

I have examined these resolutions carefully and find them correct in form and legal, and am, therefore, returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

GREEN SKUNK PELT—UNLAWFUL TO HAVE SAME IN POSSESSION—PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1917—WILL NOT BE UNLAWFUL AFTER JULY 1, 1917—WHEN SKUNK RAISED IN CAPTIVITY.

Prior to July 1, 1917, it is unlawful to have in possession the green pelt of a skunk propagated and raised in captivity except from November 15th to February 1st.

After July 1, 1917, when H. B. 109 (107 O. L. 182) becomes effective, it will not be unlawful.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1917.

HON. SUMNER E. WALTERS, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 2, 1917, you inquire as follows:

"Referring to the following provisions of the General Code of Ohio:

" 'Section 13413. * * * whoever during the period when it shall be unlawful to kill such animal shall have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk unless such person can show by the original invoice signed by the shipper that such pelts were shipped from without the state shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars.

" 'This section shall not prevent the owner of a farm or anyone authorized by him in writing from killing a skunk when doing an injury upon his premises. The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the commissioners of fish and game.

" 'Section 1464. A justice of the peace, mayor or police judge shall have final jurisdiction within his county in a prosecution for a violation of any provision of the laws relating to the protection, preservation or propogation of birds, fish and game and shall have like jurisdiction in a proceeding for the condemnation and forfeiture of property used in the violation of any such law. (99 v. 380-75.)

" 'Section 13559. * * * the grand jury shall proceed to inquire of and present all offenses committed within the county in and for which it was impaneled and sworn. (R. S. 7194; 66 v. 298-72; S. & C. 753.)'

"I would be pleased to have you answer the following questions:

"1. Is it an offense under section 13413 for a man to have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk from an animal propagated and raised in captivity by himself?

"2. Does section 1464 of the Code require a magistrate to hear and finally determine offenses charged under section 13413? Or may the magistrate in his discretion bind the accused over to the grand jury when the accused himself demands that that be done?

"3. When an accused under section 13413 has been bound over to the grand jury by a magistrate, is it the grand jury's duty under section 13559 to inquire into the case and determine whether or not to charge the accused with an offense?"

You first inquire whether it is an offense under section 13413 G. C. for a man to have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk from an animal propagated and raised in captivity by himself.

Section 13413 G. C. (103 O. L. 112) provides as follows:

"Whosoever shall catch, kill or injure a skunk, or pursues it with such intent, except from the fifteenth day of November to the first day of February both inclusive, or whoever shall at any time or place dig out, or smoke out with fumes or gases, any skunk or in any manner destroy the den or burrow of any skunk, or whoever during the period when it shall be unlawful to kill such animal shall have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk unless such person can show by the original invoice signed by the shipper that such pelts were shipped from without the state shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars.

"This section shall not prevent the owner of a farm or any one authorized by him in writing from killing a skunk when doing an injury upon his premises. The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the commissioners of fish and game."

Said section is an amendment to section 13413 as found in the original General Code. Section 13413 as it appeared on codification is as follows:

"Whoever catches, kills or injures a skunk, or pursues it with such intent, except between the first day of November and the first day of February inclusive, shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifteen dollars. This section shall not prevent the owner of a farm or enclosure, used exclusively for the breeding and raising of polecats or skunks, from catching or killing them therein; and a farmer or tenant may kill a skunk or polecat when doing an injury upon his premises.

It appears, therefore, that the last quoted section distinctly recognizes the right of an owner of a farm or enclosure, used exclusively for the breeding and raising of skunks, to catch and kill them therein. However, in the amendment of said section found in 103 O. L. 112, the provision that the section should "not prevent the owner of a farm or enclosure, used exclusively for the breeding and raising of polecats or skunks, from catching or killing them therein" was eliminated and there is therefore no exception now found in section 13413 G. C. to the inhibition against catching, killing, injuring or pursuing with such intent a skunk except from the 15th day of November to the 1st day of February. Section 13413 as it now is likewise makes it unlawful during the period that it is unlawful to kill such animal, to have in possession the green pelt of a skunk unless the person so having such pelt in possession can show "by the original invoice signed by the shipper that such pelts were shipped from without the state." There is, therefore, no exception in the statute in favor of a person who has raised a skunk in captivity having in his possession the green pelt of such skunk except during the period between November 15th and February 1st, inclusive.

A skunk is a fur bearing animal and fur bearing animals are considered in the same catagory as game and the legislature has the same right to protect the same as it has to protect game animals. Skunks are animals ferae naturae. The right to the possession and ownership of animals ferae naturae is considered on an entirely different plane from the possession of ordinary personal property.

In the case of Roth v. State, 51 O. S. 209, it was decided that "it is an offense, under section 6964, Revised Statutes, to sell quail in this state, except between the tenth day of November and the fifteenth day of December, though such quail were killed outside of the state, and where it was lawful to kill the same. The section is constitutional." Under the police power of the state authorizing the protection of game animals, the legislature has the right to determine that the possession of such animal, or any part thereof, at least during the time when it is unlawful to kill the same in this state, renders the person so in possession guilty of a crime.

A good discussion of the question of the ownership of game animals and the question of possession thereof by an individual, is found in the case of Fitton v. State, 1 O. N. P. 133, being the decision of Judge Brown of the common pleas court of Butler county. In the opinion of Judge Brown are cited many cases bearing upon the question in hand. During the course of his opinion, on page 135 of the report, he states as follows:

> "The authorities agree that the ownership of all game animals and birds is in the people in their sovereign capacity, that is, in the state, and no individual has any property rights in game other than such as the state may permit him to acquire, and even where game has been captured and reduced into possession by the individual with the permission of the state, his ownership in it may be regulated and restrained by appropriate legislation enacted for considerations of state or for the benefit of the community. In other words the cases hold that the question of enjoyment in this field is one of public policy and not of private right."

Further on in the opinion of Judge Brown he refers to the case of Magner v. People, 97, Ill., 320, and quotes from the opinion of that court on page 331 as follows:

> "We think it obvious that the prohibition of all possession and sales of such wild fowls or birds during the prohibited seasons would tend to their protection, in excluding the opportunity for the evasion of such law by clandestinely taking them when secretly killed or captured here, beyond the state and afterwards bringing them into the state for sale, or by other subterfuges and evasions.
> "It is quite true that the mere act of allowing a quail netted in Kansas to be sold here does not injure or in any wise affect the game here; but a law which renders all sales and all possessions unlawful, will more certainly prevent any possession or any sale of the game within the state, then will a law allowing possession or sales here of the game taken in other states. This is but one among many instances to be found in the law where acts, which in and of themselves alone are harmless enough, are condemned because of the facility they otherwise offer for a cover or disguise for the doing of that which is harmful."

It would seem, therefore, that the state has the undoubted right to prohibit or regulate the possession of game animals in this state in such manner as it sees fit and I do not think that it can be argued that the fact that the animal mentioned was propagated in captivity would grant to the breeder thereof any better right in such animal than it would to any other person who had reduced an animal to possession from the wild state.

The syllabus of the case of Commonwealth v. Gilbert, 160 Mass., 157, as found in 22 L. R. A. 439, is as follows:

> "The penalty for selling or offering for sale, or having in possession, any trout which is not alive during the close season, which is imposed by statute 1884, chapter 171, section 53, extends to trout artificially propogated on one's own premises, in view of section 26, which declares that such trout may be sold at all times for purposes of culture and maintenance, but not for food during close seasons.
> "The legislature may forbid the sale, offering for sale, or possession during the close season of trout which are not alive, although they were artificially propogated on one's own premises, if such close season is not unreasonable."

In the case of State of Missouri v. Anton Weber, 205 Mo., 44, 10 L. R. A. (n. s.) 1155, the facts were that the defendant had in his possession and was offering for sale in Kansas City on December 14, 1905, the carcasses of eight deer, from which the natural evidences of their sex had been removed; that the deer in question had been raised in captivity upon a stock farm in Missouri and were killed and their carcasses sold and shipped to defendant. The statute prohibited the killing or attempting to kill any deer under the age of one year and further made it unlawful to kill any deer of any age between the first day of January and the first day of November in each year, and for the purpose of preventing the extinction of the species, unlawful to kill any doe. It was further made unlawful "to have in possession or transport at any time the carcass of any deer, or any portion of such carcass, unless the same has thereon the natural evidence of its sex."

The question was raised in that case by the defendant that the deer in question were not game animals in the ordinary and accepted meaning of the term, and were not embraced in, or germane to, the subject of the game law, as expressed in its title and were not therefore within the provisions of said law. During the course of the opinion the court says:

> "No owner of deer raised in captivity has a better title thereto than has the hunter at common law to the deer captured or killed by him, and it has always been held that the state has authority to regulate the sale of such game, or prohibit it altogether." Citing the case of Commonwealth v. Gilbert, 160 Mass., 157, herein-before referred to."

Further on the court says:

> "The end and object of the law, as expressed in the title, is the preservation and protection of game animals, and the provision, inhibiting the possession by any one of the carcass of any deer which has not thereon the natural evidence of its sex, is a means to that end. As we have said, the deer in question come within the meaning of the term 'game' which means animals farae naturae, or wild by nature. It makes no difference that said deer were raised in captivity, and had become tame. They are naturally wild."

The court further says:

> "The provisions of the section are clearly embraced within the police power of the state, under which rights in private property must, to a reasonable extent, yield to the public welfare."

The court affirmed the judgment of conviction.

Turning now to the statutes of this state under consideration—the statute makes the catching, killing or injuring of a skunk or pursuing it with such intent, except between November 15th and February 1st, unlawful and likewise makes it unlawful except during said period, to have in possession the green pelt of a skunk, unless there is evidence by original invoice that the pelt was shipped from without the state. This is undoubtedly a reasonable exercise of the police power. After the animal has been killed there is no way to determine whether or not the green pelt came from an animal raised in captivity or one which had been running at large, and the legislature has seen fit to provide that the possession of a green pelt, unless accompanied by an original invoice showing that the pelts were shipped from without the state, should constitute an offense.

I am therefore of the opinion that it is an offense under section 13413 G. C. for a man to have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk from an animal propagated and raised in captivity by himself.

Before concluding this opinion, however, I desire to call your attention to H. B. No. 109, found in Vol. 107 O. L., page 182, which law will go into effect about July 1st. Said bill in section 2 thereof amends original section 1415 and repeals section 13413. Said amended section 1415 and section 1415-1 are as follows:

> "Section 1415. No person shall catch, kill, injure or pursue with such intent a raccoon, muskrat, skunk, mink or opossum, except from the 15th day of November to the first of February, both inclusive; but nothing in this section shall prevent the owner of a farm or enclosure, used exclusively for the breeding and raising of polecats or skunks, from catching or killing therein, or prohibiting the killing of the animals named herein or any of them, in any manner or at any time except on Sunday by the owner, manager or tenant of the premises or by his bona fide employes or persons having such owner's permission when such animals or any of them are found injuring or destroying property."
> "Section 1415-1. No person shall at any time or place dig out, or smoke out with fumes or gases, any skunk or in any manner destroy the den or burrow of any skunk, and no person during the period when it shall be unlawful to kill such animal shall have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk, unless such person can show by the original invoice signed by the shipper that such pelts were shipped from without the state. This section shall not prevent the owner of a farm or any one authorized by him in writing from killing a skunk when doing injury to his premises."

Section 1415, as amended, makes it unlawful to kill a skunk except between November 15th and February 1st, but excepts therefrom the owner of a farm or enclosure used exclusively for the breeding and raising of skunks from catching or killing them therein, and section 1415-1 makes it unlawful "during the period when it shall be unlawful to kill such animal" to have in possession the green pelt of a skunk.

Since under the provisions of section 1415, as amended, it is not unlawful for the owner of a skunk farm to kill a skunk raised by him at any time during the year, it would likewise not be unlawful to have in his possession the green pelt of such skunk so killed.

Fully answering your question, then, I am of the opinion, as before stated, that it is an offense under section 13413 G. C. for a man to have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk from an animal propagated and raised in captivity by himself, but that after July 1st, when said section 13413 is repealed and amended section 1415 and new section 1415-1 are in force, it will not be unlawful.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMMON PLEAS JUDGE—POWER TO APPOINT COURT CONSTABLES AND CRIMINAL BAILIFFS.

In a county which has but one common pleas judge, such judge may appoint one or more court constables when in the opinion of the court the business thereof so requires.

Such court may appoint one regular criminal bailiff who shall be a deputy sheriff and on application of the sheriff may appoint additional criminal bailiffs for particular cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CALVIN D. SPITLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of May 29, 1917, which was previously acknowledged, you submit for my opinion the following statement of facts:

> "I have been asked whether or not Seneca county, which has but one common pleas judge, is entitled to more than one court bailiff or court constable?
> "After considering the provisions of sections 1692, 1693, 1541 and 1544 of the General Code, I have rendered an opinion to the effect that the provisions of the latter part of section 1693 contemplates the appointment of one court constable only where one judge holds court. * * *
> "I would like to have your opinion on this question."

You refer to General Code section 1541, which provides in part as follows:

> "The judge of the court of common pleas of a county, * * * may appoint * * * the following: * * * a criminal bailiff, who shall be a deputy sheriff and hold his position during the pleasure of the judge * * of such court. He shall receive compensation to be fixed by such judge * * * at the time of his appointment, not to exceed the amount permitted by law to be allowed court constables in the same court, which shall be paid monthly from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor."

There is also another section of the General Code which is numbered 1541 and which contains the same language above quoted, and which was held in State ex rel v. Sayre, 12 Ohio N. P. (n. s.) 13, not to have been repealed, but the language therein not being in conflict with the language above quoted, the same, as far as our question is concerned, need not further be considered in this opinion.

Section 1543 G. C. provides that:

> "The criminal bailiff shall act for the sheriff in criminal cases and matters of a criminal nature in the common pleas and probate courts of such county. Under the direction of the sheriff he shall be present during trials of criminal cases in such courts, and during such trials perform all the duties as are performed by the sheriff. The criminal bailiff shall conduct prisoners to and from the jail of such counties, and for that purpose shall have access to the jail and to the court room whenever ordered by such courts, and have care and charge of such prisoners when so doing. Under the direction of the sheriff the criminal bailiff shall convey to the penitentiary all persons sentenced thereto. He shall receive and collect from the state treasurer all costs in such criminal cases in the same manner as the sheriff by law is required to do, and pay the amount so collected to the sheriff of such county."

Section 1544 G. C. provides:

"On the application of the sheriff, in a criminal case, if a court is satisfied that the administration of justice requires an additional bailiff to execute process, it may appoint such additional bailiff as in its discretion may be necessary. His powers and duties shall cease when such case is determined."

Section 1545 G. C. provides in part:

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties the criminal bailiff shall give bond to the sheriff in the sum of five thousand dollars * * *."

The above sections and part sections provide when and how criminal bailiffs may be appointed by the judge of the court of common pleas of a county, and if such bailiff is appointed as a regular criminal bailiff he is by the provisions of said sections a deputy sheriff, and must give bond to the sheriff, and acts in said court in the place of the sheriff, or, in other words, as far as the criminal work of such court is concerned, he is in the same position as any other deputy sheriff; that is, he stands in the place of the sheriff. But, if such criminal bailiff be appointed for a single case only, then his appointment is made on the application of the sheriff, and in such case his powers to act shall cease when the particular case in which he was appointed is determined.

I anticipate, however, that your inquiry is not meant to cover the above class of bailiffs, but that you really intend to inquire in relation to the appointment of court constables who are frequently referred to as court bailiffs, and who attend the court in both its civil and criminal branches.

I gather the above from the reason that you refer to section 1692 G. C. upon a part of which said section it is necessary for me to place construction in considering your question. Said section provides in part:

"When in the opinion of the court, the business thereof so requires, each court of common pleas, * * * in each county of the state, and, in counties having at the last or any future federal census more than seventy thousand inhabitants, the probate court may appoint one or more constables to preserve order, * * * and discharge such other duties as the court requires. When so directed by the court, each constable shall have the same powers as sheriffs to call and impanel jurors, except in capital cases."

If the punctuation of the above quotation were modified or changed, the construction of same would be comparatively easy. To illustrate, if the comma were removed from its location following the word "inhabitants" and placed after the words "probate court," then said section would read in part as follows:

"* * * Each court of common pleas * * *, and in counties having at the last or any future federal census more than seventy thousand inhabitants the probate court, may appoint one or more constables * * *."

That is to say, when in the opinion of the court the business of such court so requires it to be done, each court of common pleas may appoint one or more constables. and in counties having more than seventy thousand inhabitants each probate court may appoint one or more constables, in each case for the purposes mentioned in said section. As the section stands, the punctuation seems to indicate that only the probate court is empowered to appoint constables. I do not believe that that is what the legislature intended when said section was enacted, and I believe the punctuation should be so changed that the section will be given such effect that all of the words mean that which was reasonably intended for them by the legislature. Such change in the punctuation is perfectly permissible, for in Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, 2d edition, section 361, the author says:

"The questions in court relating to punctuation or affecting construction have generally arisen on the presence, omission or misplacing of commas.

"In Ewing v. Burnet, the court say: 'Punctuation is a most fallible standard by which to interpret a writing. It may be resorted to when all other means fail; but the court will first take the instrument by the four corners in order to ascertain its true meaning. If that is apparent on judicially inspecting it, the punctuation will not be suffered to change it.'

"Where effect may be given to all the words of a statute by transposing a comma, the alternative being the disregard of a material and significant word, or grossly straining and perverting it, the former course is to be adopted. Courts, in the construction of statutes, for the purpose of arriving at or maintaining the real meaning and intention of the lawmaker, will disregard the punctuation or transpose the same or substitute one mark for another, or repunctuate."

Following, then, the said rule of construction and transposing the comma after the word "inhabitants" and placing it after the words "probate court,"the section is given its reasonable and intelligent meaning. That is to say, when in the opinion of the judge of the court of common pleas the business of the court requires the same, such court may appoint one or more constables to preserve order or to discharge any other duties required by the court.

My attention is also called to the last sentence of section 1693 G. C., a part of which section reads as follows:

"Each constable shall receive the compensation fixed by the judge * * * of the court making the appointment. * * * In counties where only one judge holds court, the constable provided for herein, when not attending the common pleas court, shall, upon order of the judge of such common pleas court, and without additional compensation, attend the probate court or the court of appeals of such county."

The words "provided for herein" refer to the act of which said section 1693 was a part when the same was enacted and the fact that the singular number is used in speaking of the court constable will not, in my opinion, have the effect of limiting the language of section 1692 above quoted, where the court is given the power to appoint one or more constables.

I therefore advise you that the judge of your court of common pleas may appoint one regular criminal bailiff who shall be a deputy sheriff, and upon application of the sheriff it may appoint an additional bailiff for a particular criminal case, and that said court may appoint one or more court constables to perform such duties as the court requires.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY CREATE NEW DISTRICT FROM RURAL AND VILLAGE DISTRICT—UNNECESSARY TO FILE MAP OF NEW DISTRICT WITH AUDITOR—MAJORITY OF ELECTORS OF ENTIRE NEW DISTRICT NECESSARY TO PREVENT SUCH AN ARRANGEMENT—WHO HAS RIGHT TO APPOINT BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR SUCH NEW DISTRICT.

1. A county board of education may create a new school district from a rural and a village district over which it has jurisdiction.

2. It is not necessary to file a map of such newly created district with the county auditor. The filing of a map applies to a transfer of territory from one district to another.

3. The entire territory of the newly created district is considered the territory "affected" and a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected is necessary to prevent such arrangement from being carried into effect.

4. The county board of education may appoint a board of education for a district created by it, but if it fails to do so, or if for any other reason there exists a district without a board ofeducation, then the board of county commissioners of the county shall appoint such board of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. PHIL H. WEILAND, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication in which you submit for my opinion the following statement of facts:

"At a joint session of the Sparta village board of education and the South Bloomfield township board of education, together with the county board of education, at Sparta, Ohio, May 20, 1916, the following resolution was passed and signed by the members of the Sparta board of education and the South Bloomfield board of education and presented to the county board.

" 'WHEREAS, it seems necessary to unite the South Bloomfield township school and the Sparta village school districts into one district in order to secure a tax duplicate sufficient to maintain a second grade high school, Therefore,

" 'BE IT RESOLVED, that the county board of education disband the above named school districts and appoint a board of education for a new district out of the two old boards of education.

" 'RAY CHALFANT,
" 'GEORGE HARROD,
" 'W. D. MITCHELL,
" 'J. R. KELLER,
" 'C. S. STINEMETZ,
" 'J. B. LARRIMORE.

"The county board of education met in called session at the call of Jenkins and Hindman to create a district out of the South Bloomfield township and Sparta village school districts, and to transact other necessary business on August 25, 1916. All members were present but Haldeman.

"RESOLUTION

" 'WHEREAS, the Sparta village school district does not have a tax duplicate sufficient to maintain a good second grade high school and,

" 'WHEREAS, we believe that such a school should be provided for and maintained in that community, not alone for the boys and girls of the village, but for those of South Bloomfield township as well, and

" 'WHEREAS, the board of education of said village realizing the situation did some weeks ago petition the county board to create one district out of the Sparta village and South Bloomfield township school districts, and

" 'WHEREAS, later, after a thorough discussion of the situation in a joint meeting with the county board of education, said boards jointly petitioned the county board to create a new district from the two districts; therefore be it

" 'RESOLVED, That we hereby, in accordance with section 4736 of the Ohio School Laws, abolish the Sparta village and South Bloomfield township school districts and create therefrom a new district to be known as the South Bloomfield rural school district, the same to include all the territory composing the two said districts; and furthermore be it

" 'RESOLVED, That we hereby appoint the following men members of the board of education of the newly created district to serve until their successors are elected and qualified.

" '(Signed) DR. H. B. LARRIMORE,
" 'K. E. FARMER,
" 'J. KELLER,
" 'EDWARD PROST,
" 'RAY CHALFANT.'

" 'Be it furthermore

" 'RESOLVED, That the clerk be hereby directed to notify the boards of education of the Sparta village and South Bloomfield school districts of the above action and direct the treasurer-clerk of each board to audit their books at once, have the same O.K.'d by their boards, or by the county auditor and turn the same over to the treasurer-clerk of the newly created board, together with all money in their treasuries. And furthermore be it

" 'RESOLVED, That our clerk be directed to file a copy of these resolutions with the county auditor and that the latter is hereby authorized to transfer the funds coming to the two abolished districts to the treasurer-clerk of the newly created district. And furthermore be it

" 'RESOLVED, That the newly created board be authorized to settle such outstanding bills as have been incurred by the two abolished boards and to meet the other obligations of said boards.'

" 'Moved by Levering and seconded by Hindman, that the above resolutions be adopted.

" 'Levering yea; Hindman yea; Jenkins yea; Babcock yea.

" 'Moved by Jenkins and seconded by Levering that we authorize the clerk of the township board to notify the newly elected board to meet Monday evening, May 29, 1916, at the township hall to organize, take the oath of office and make out the levy and transact any other necessary business.

" 'Jenkins yea; Levering yea; Hindman yea; Babcock yea.'

"Question 1. Under the above proceedings, is the new district a legally constituted district? And has the law been complied with in making this creation?

"Question 2. Must a map be filed with the auditor, showing the change of boundary of the new district? And is there a legal transfer or creation until a map is filed with the county auditor?

"Question 3. If a map must be filed with the county auditor, may a majority of the qualified electors of the territory, affected by such order, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of the school district so proposed?

"Question 4. Has the county school board, under section 4736, power and authority to appoint the board of education of the newly created district, or does this power vest in the county commissioners?

"Question 5. Are the transactions already performed by this newly created board of education regular and legal?

"Question 6. In case this creation of the new district is illegal, i. e., that all the provisions of the law regarding such creation have not been complied with, what further steps are necessary to make it regular and legal?

"Question 7. In case a map must be filed with the county auditor, what effect—after this map is filed, or before this map is filed—would it have if a remonstrance signed by a majority of the electors of the original South Bloomfield township district of the Sparta village school district were filed?

"In conclusion I might state that no map has been filed with the county auditor showing any transfer of territory, and that the county auditor refuses to place the funds in one budget until such map has been filed. I might also add that the village school district of Sparta, Ohio, has a tax duplicate of practically $300,000.00."

You mention in your inquiry that the tax duplicate of the Sparta village school district is practically $300,000 and my answer herein has been delayed that I might determine the effect that matter would have upon your situation in lieu of former opinions heretofore rendered by this department.

It was held by my predecessor, Hon. Edw. C. Turner, in opinion No. 1847, and found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, page 1398, that when a village district has a tax valuation of less than $500,000, such district ceases to be a village district unless the electors thereof vote to organize such territory into a village district. It was also held in opinion No. 145, rendered March 27, 1917, following the reasoning of said opinion No. 1847, of my predecessor Hon. Edward C. Turner, that when the tax valuation of a village school district falls below $500,000, such district fails to be a village district. This question has been reconsidered by me, in opinion No. 341, rendered June 6, 1917, and I h ld that a village school district which once existed and whose tax valuation falls below $500,000 is not by that act alone dissolved. So that when the county board of education of your county united the Sparta village school district and the South Bloomfield township rural school district, and thereby created a new school district, it was acting within the scope of its authority, as provided in General Code section 4736, that the county board of education is authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof.

General Code section 4736 under which said county board acted, reads as follows:

> "The county board of education shall arrange the school districts according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to the pupils and shall file with the board or boards of education in the territory affected, a written notice of such proposed arrangement; which said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of school districts so proposed. The county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof. The county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district and direct an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness belonging to the newly created district. Members of the boards of education of the newly created district shall thereafter be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the boards of education of the village and rural districts."

You are advised at the outset that the resolution passed by the joint boards of education of said township and village districts had no effect in law. It was nothing more than an expression of an opinion as to an existing condition. So that when the county board of education created the new district, its act was the initial step in the proceedings as provided by law, and when the written notice of such proposed arrangement was filed with the boards of education in the territory affected, that is, with the boards of education of both Sparta village and the South Bloomfield township rural boards, said district was a legally constituted district unless by the further provisions of section 4736 a majority of the qualified electors of said territory should file a written remonstrance with the county board against such proposed arrangement. The territory in both districts was equally affected. The fact that the new district was named the South Bloomfield rural school district instead of some other name would make no difference in law. When General Code section 4735 was enacted, it created the South Bloomfield township school district into the South Bloomfield township rural school district and when the county board united said rural and said village school districts and created a new district, it could give said new district one of the old names for that matter, or an entirely new one. Said section 4736 G. C. does not provide for the filing of a map showing the extent of the boundary line of said district and therefore it was not necessary for the said county board to file such map. The provision with reference to the filing of a map is contained in General Code section 4692 and only applies where territory is transferred from one school district to another, but does not apply where a new district is created under section 4736 G. C.

The question as to whether the county board of education has a right to appoint a board of education for such new school district is not so easily determined. The language of section 4736, in relation thereto, seems clear and explicit. It provides that "the county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district," but section 4736-1 G. C. provides:

> "In rural school districts hereafter created by a county board of education, a board of education shall be elected as provided in section 4712 of the General Code. When rural school districts hereafter so created, or which have been heretofore so created, fail or have failed to elect a board of education as provided in said section 4712, or whenever there exists such school district which for any reason or cause is not provided with a board of education, the commissioners of the county to which such district belongs shall appoint such board of education * * *."

Said section 4736 was enacted May 20, 1915, and approved by the governor May 27, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 28, 1915. Said section 4736-1 was enacted May 20, 1915, approved by the governor June 4, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, being, therefore, the later of the two acts.

It is somewhat difficult to ascertain whether or not the language of said acts is so contradictory that the latter will repeal the former by implication, or whether effect can be given to both. Effect must be given to both if the same can be done, and I am of the opinion that if at the time the county board of education creates a new district it appoints a board of education for such district, said board of education thereby becomes the legally constituted board for such district, but if, for any reason or cause, the county board of education fails to appoint a board of education for such newly created district, then I am of the opinion that the board of county commissioners have the right to appoint such board, thus giving effect to both of the above mentioned sections.

Answering your questions, then, in the order in which they are asked, I advise you:

> "First: Under the proceedings a new district was legally constituted and the law has been in substance complied with.
> "Second: It is not necessary, when acting under section 4736, to file a map with the auditor, showing the boundary line of the new district.
> "Third: If a majority of the qualified electors of the territory contained in said newly created district file a written remonstrance with the county board of education against the arrangement so proposed, then said proposal will not become effective, but if such remonstrance is not so filed, said district will stand.
> "Fourth: The county board of education, under section 4736 G. C. has authority to appoint a board of education for the newly created district, but if they fail or neglect to do so, the county commissioners may then act under section 4736-1.

"Fifth: The board being a legally constituted board of education, its transactions are therefore regular and legal."

Your sixth and seventh questions are answered in the above. My attention has been called to the cases of Klein v. Martin, 95 O. S. and board of education v. DeTray, 95 O. S. in which some reference is made to the appointing power of the board of county commissioners in relation to a rural school board. In the first case the court uses the following language:

"If the county board of education were, in effect, mistaken as to Nashville being a village school district, then the new district it created is a rural district and under the provisions of section 4736-1 General Code the county board of commissioners is authorized to appoint the members of its board of education."

In the second case the board of county commissioners appointed the board of education in the newly created McCutchenville rural school district and said acts were held valid by the court of appeals. The supreme court, in affirming the judgment of the court of appeals, affirmed same, however, on other grounds, so that my opinion follows in substance both the above cases.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PLANS, ESTIMATES AND SPECIFICATIONS—FOR HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION—CANNOT BE CHANGED AFTER CONTRACT HAS BEEN AWARDED.

Where a contract for the construction of a highway is let under competitive bidding, and the bids are made under certain plans, estimates and specifications, there is no authority in law for changing the plans and specifications after the contract has been awarded.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 24, 1917, in which you set out copy of a letter received by you from the Engineering Service Company, and ask my opinion in reference to the matters set out in the letter received by you. Your letter, together with said copy, reads as follows:

"I respectfully direct your attention to a request received by me from Engineering Service Company, which company has a contract with this department for the improvement of section 'L' of the Athens-Marietta road, I. C. H. No. 157, in Washington county. The request of Engineering Service Company is as follows:

" 'COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1917.

" 'HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

" 'SIR:—Pursuant to and in accordance with our conversation of May 19th, we beg to submit for your consideration the following facts:

" 'On April 28, 1916, Engineering Service Company were awarded a contract for the construction of section "L," Marietta-Athens road, I. C. H. No. 157, in Washington county.

" 'Construction operations were begun June 17th, shortly after the contract was received. Grading was completed about one month after this time and we were then ready to begin placing the foundation material.

" 'After careful examination of the geological formations in this section and after discussing the matter with a number of the towns people, it appears that there were only two available sites from which a suitable sand stone for foundation purposes could be obtained. Whereupon, Engineering Service Company selected samples of the sand stone, one sample from the property of a Darl Ellis and the other from the property of a Mr. White.

" 'After due time for the completion of the test, the manager of the Engineering Service Company called at your laboratory, secured a copy of the report on the tests of the stones and submitted these copies to your division engineer, Mr. R. N. Waid, who is in charge of the work.

" 'After careful comparison of the results of these tests, and the requirements of the specifications, your engineer acquiesced that we proceed to quarry stone on the Ellis property until he could get down there, providing such material was the best that could be found. Of this, we gave him every assurance that we had made a thorough and conscientious effort to locate a stone of better quality. Probably on account of other duties not permitting, your engineer did not arrive until the lapse of a couple of weeks, during which time we had proceeded to quarry the sand stone in a rather large way, as our time for the completion of the highway was drawing near, and as we then supposed we were quarrying a stone which was thoroughly suitable for the porpose mentioned.

" 'In the meantime, it appears that a number of the local men who were not on the friendliest terms with this Darl Ellis, had decided among themselves, that if it were in their power to do so, they would prevent the use of the Ellis stone in the construction of the highway.

" 'Your Mr. Waid, together with the county highway superintendent, Mr. Weeks, and the county commissioners, visited the quarry and examined same. It was then decided that they did not care to have this material used for foundation purposes. We immediately requested a suggestion on their part as to where we might open a quarry. One of the body of commissioners, a Hr. Henry, who lives near this road, stated that he knew of no better quarry than the one on Mr. White's property which had already been rejected by the test of your laboratory. Your department then suggested that the type of construction be changed radically, in that a limestone foundation be used instead of the sand stone and that the thickness be reduced to four inches. This proposition was rejected by the board of commissioners, who in the meantime had learned that there was silicious formations on the property of Mr. Calendine, about one mile west of the improvement. Your engineer, a member of the body of commissioners, and the contractor, viewed this formation which was found to be a thoroughly hard, apparently durable stone.

" 'It was then suggested that as Engineering Service Company, working under the directions of the highway department had quarried considerable stone on the Ellis property, that they be indirectly compensated for their work by being required to place six inches of this hard stone instead of eight inches of the other. This was generally known among the abutting property owners and at that time met with their approval.

" 'Engineering Service Company was told by your engineer, Mr. Waid, that as soon as the county commissioners signified their acquiescence in the proposal, your official sanction would likely be given. Whereupon your county highway superintendent placed his stakes and in the presence of an inspector the foundation was placed to a depth of six inches except between stations 1068+50 to 1078+50, where it was determined that seven inches should be used.

" 'Engineering Service Company now stands ready to place the limestone top course with the bituminous binder as originally agreed, and they do hereby respectfully pray that you give your official sanction to the substitution which was suggested by the officials and executed in accordance with their wishes by Engineering Service Company.

" 'Yours respectfully,

" 'ENGINEERING SERVICE COMPANY,

" 'Per (Signed)

Clifford Shoemaker, Manager.'

"I am also attaching hereto copy of an interview between Mr. Shoemaker of Engineering Service Company, Mr. Waid, the division engineer, and myself on May 21, 1917.

"I am also transmitting herewith a copy of our contract with Engineering Service Company which I would be pleased to have you return and respectfully ask your opinion as to whether or not I may legally comply with the request of Engineering Service Company.

"I shall be glad to deliver to you our entire file for examination should you desire it."

You also attach transcript of a certain interview between yourself and Mr. Shoemaker, together with Mr. Waid, the division engineer in your office. This interview is too lengthy to quote, but I shall make a note of the same in certain respects. You also enclose a copy of your contract with Engineering Service Company, but this is also too lengthy to quote only in certain parts which are vital in respect to the question you ask.

In short, your question has to do with this:

> May the plans, specifications and estimates for the construction of a highway be modified after the bid has been submitted and the contract let and the work under the contract partially completed?

In answering this question I desire, first, to call your attention to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, on September 5, 1916, found in Opinions of Attorney General, 1916, volume II, page 1504. The syllabus of this opinion is as follows:

> "Where a contract for a bridge is required to be let at competitive bidding and is so let, there is no authority for changing the plans and specifications after the contract is awarded."

On page 1505 of the report Mr. Turner uses the following reasoning:

> "It should first be observed that the contractor is entitled to complete the work according to the original plans and specifications and to receive therefor the agreed price. His rights under his contract cannot be violated by the county and if he were to refuse to accede to any change in plans or to agree to an omission of certain parts of the work in consideration of a reduction in compensation, there would be no necessity for a further discussion of the matter. I am satisfied, however, that even should the contractor agree to a change of plans and to the construction of another and more expensive railing in consideration of an increased compensation, or should he agree to waive his right to construct the railing and to accept a reduced compensation with the idea that a separate contract might thereafter be let for the construction of the railing, there is no method by which such contract might be so made between the county and the contractor as to preserve the requirement of competitive bidding."

Mr. Turner held that even though the parties interested might desire to change the plans and specifications, yet this could not be done because of the fact that it would destroy the requirement of competitive bidding. In other words, the taxpayers and those assessed for the making of the improvement have a right to demand that the contract be let to the lowest and best bidder. In order that the contract may be let to the lowest and best bidder the bid must have been made with a view to certain plans, estimates and specifications. Those who bid upon the work rely upon the fact that the road will be constructed in the manner set out in the plans and specifications, and they bid accordingly.

In the contract entered into by and between the state of Ohio and Engineering Service Company there is a definite specification as to the matter of the sandstone foundation, which is in words and figures as follows:

"Sandstone shall meet the following requirements:
"It shall be clean, sound, durable, and of uniform quality.
"When tested in accordance with the methods described in the Appendix of Material Specifications No. 5 the stone shall show in the abrasion test a loss of not more than twenty-five per cent., and a toughness of not less than three (3)."

The specifications, which are a part of the contract, further provide as follows:

"Depth of sandstone foundation, 8 inches at center, 8 inches at sides."

The Engineering Service Company now asks that the specifications be changed to read "6 inches" instead of "8 inches." Why is this requested? In a way to repay them for stone quarried on the farm of Darl Ellis, which stone so quarried was not used. If the stone quarried on this farm came up to the standard set out in the plans and specifications, the contractor should have used the same, and no one could have prevented his using the same. If the stone did not come up to the standard set out in the specifications, then the contractor could not use the same, and would be compelled in order to fulfill his contract to go elsewhere to get his foundation course of stone. It is not clear just why the contractor left this stone and went elsewhere, but in the interview above mentioned Mr. Cowen asked this question:

"State why. Was it a personal matter or the quality of the stone?"

Mr. Shoemaker, answering for Engineering Service Company, said:

"Well, it was a personal matter, but they jumped behind the quality of the stone and I can substantiate this statement by saying that their suggestion of another quarry was one that had been tested and showed a stone of far inferior quality."

In another part of this interview Mr. Shoemaker says:

"The suggestion to change from a soft stone which has been quarried on the property of Darl Ellis was made by the board of county commissioners. They stated it was their desire to have 6 inches of the harder stone in preference to 8 inches, and to quote them literally 'or even 18 inches in depth of a material from the property of Darl Ellis' "

Mr. Shoemaker says he really did get a better material by going elsewhere to quarry it; but, as said before, the contractor was compelled to get a material that would come up to the specifications made a part of the contract, and no better than provided for in the specifications.

It is suggested that the state highway commissioner in a way acquiesced in the quarrying of stone on the Darl Ellis farm, but, like all other matters that are carried on verbally, just what was said and done by the highway department is uncertain. It is also uncertain as to what the county commissioners said and did. To obviate this liability to a misunderstanding, written contracts are made, and both parties should be held to the terms of the written contract. It would be a most dangerous principle to hold that the written contract can be modified by oral communications, and further, such a principle is contrary to law.

Any taxpayer would have the right to enjoin the payment of money for the construction of this work with a six-inch foundation. This for the reason that the plans and specifications call for an eight-inch foundation of sandstone, and for the further reason that the work might have been let for a much less sum had the specifications provided for a six-inch foundation instead of an eight-inch foundation.

It is true the copy of the letter sets forth that the county commissioners are agreeable to a change to six inches; that the abutting property owners in a way are agreeable to a change; but even if this might be taken as true it does not take into consideration the rights of the taxpayers in the matter of the construction of this road.

Hence answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that, in a case where the specifications call for an eight-inch foundation of sandstone of a certain quality and grade, and bids are received thereunder and the contract let, the specifications can not afterwards be changed so as to provide for a six-inch foundation.

Further, I concur in the opinion of my predecessor above mentioned.

I am returning herewith copy of your contract submitted with your letter.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN BROWN, BELMONT, CHAMPAIGN, HOCKING, MORGAN, PREBLE, SHELBY AND WARREN COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 9, 1917, enclosing certain final resolutions in reference to the construction of highways, upon which you ask my approval. Said resolutions are as follows:

"Brown county—Section 'A,' Ripley-Hillsboro road, I. C. H. No. 177.

"Belmont county—Section 'C,' National road, I. C. H. No. 1.

"Champaign county—Section 'q,' Urbana-West Jefferson road, I. C. H. No. 188. Type 'A.'

"Champaign county—Section 'q,' Urbana-West Jefferson road, I. C. H. No. 188. Type 'B.'

"Champaign county—Section 'q,' Urbana-West Jefferson road, I. C. H. No. 188. Type 'C.'

"Hocking county—Section 'A-1,' Logan-McArthur road, I. C. H. No. 397 (also duplicate).

"Morgan county—Section 'H,' McConnelsville-Athens road, I. C. H. No. 162.

"Preble county—Section 'B,' Eaton-Greenville road, I. C. H. No. 210 (also duplicate).

"Shelby county—Section 'A-1,' Urbana-Sidney road, I. C. H. No. 192.

"Warren county—Section 'D,' Cincinnati-Chillicothe road, I. C. H. No. 8."

I have examined these final resolutions carefully and find them correct in form and legal, and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ALIEN ENEMIES—MAY BE LICENSED AS STATIONARY ENGINEER—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION MAY TAKE ALLEGIANCE INTO CONSIDERATION WHEN DETERMINING THE FITNESS OF APPLICANTS.

1. Alien enemies peacefully resident in the United States are entitled to be licensed as stationary engineers upon equal terms with other persons.

2. Such persons are likewise not disqualified by their allegiance alone from being licensed as boiler operators; but the industrial commission may take such fact into consideration, with other facts, in determining the fitness of a particular applicant to operate a steam boiler.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 19th, requesting my opinion upon the question

> "whether or not alien enemies are entitled to take examinations for the positions of stationary engineer and boiler operator, and whether or not licenses may be granted to them if they successfully pass such examinations."

In a recent opinion to the industrial commission I endeavored to deal somewhat carefully with the principles which should govern its action upon claims arising under the workmen's compensation law and asserted by subjects of Germany and others. The principles therein applied were developed from the root principle upon which is predicated the disability of an alien enemy to sue in the courts of a belligerent country, which disability is established by and is a part of the municipal common law of this country and this state.

I pointed out in the course of that opinion that at the foundation of all the rules which had been worked out through the adjudicated cases bearing upon the subject is the idea that as a matter of public policy the enrichment of the resources of or commercial intercourse with the enemy country during the war must be prevented; that hence all acts and contracts, the direct or indirect effect of which is to produce such enrichment or intercourse, are illegal and proscribed; and that even the assertion of the remedial right of enforcement of contracts or property rights vested prior to the outbreak of the war is likewise prevented or suspended during the continuance of the war.

It was also pointed out therein that because of the foundation principle above referred to the persons against whom the rules described are operative are not those who are merely citizens or subjects of the enemy country, but rather those who, regardless of their nationality in the sense of citizenship or technical allegiance, actually reside within the territorial boundaries of the enemy's civil jurisdiction or military control, or otherwise by their voluntary acts have effected such a de facto adherence to the enemy or subjection to his power as that the enrichment of the individual's resources will bring property or funds within the potential reach of the enemy's exactions. Therefore, though upon the theory of implied license, subjects of the enemy country peacefully resident within the territory of the belligerent country, are really not treated as alien enemies at all, but rather as alien friends; and even those who actually reside within the territory of friendly or neutral states cannot be said to have the status of alien enemies, but are rather to be treated as alien friends for the purpose of the rule discussed in the said opinion.

In short, all the conclusions at which I arrived in the opinion referred to were based upon the fundamental principle which denounces the aggrandizement of the enemy's pecuniary resources.

It is obvious that this principle has no application to the question now under consideration. If subjects of the enemy country who reside in the state of Ohio and here apply for licensure in the respects referred to in your letter are to be denied the privilege of obtaining such licenses upon meeting the conditions which are exacted of all others who similarly apply for like licenses, it is clear that such denial cannot be predicated upon any of the principles or rules actually applied to the solution of the question answered in the previous opinion. Rather, such denial, if it is to be made, must be grounded upon some notions as to the status of the subjects of an enemy country peacefully residing within the territory of the belligerent country.

What is that status? Clearly such persons are "aliens" and if alienage per se constitutes a disqualification for the purpose now under consideration, as it might possibly, the question is answered. However, it is clear that unless the statutes providing for the issuance of such licenses themselves require that the recipient thereof shall be a citizen, such requirement does not exist, for it cannot be implied.

The purpose of laws like those under consideration is to regulate the conduct of certain occupations with a view to the preservation of the public safety by insuring the possession of certain technical or empirical qualifications on the part of those who are to be permitted to carry on such occupations. The class of persons to whom such laws are intended to apply includes those who, in the absence of such legislation, would be permitted by the policy of the common law to engage therein—or more exactly, those who but for such reasonable exercise of the police power would have a right to pursue such lawful occupation. On this point the law makes no discrimination between aliens as such and citizens. The natural right to carry on lawful occupations is, I think, conceded to aliens as such, and no authority need be cited in support of this principle.

Without pursuing the subject further I may say that I am of the opinion that alienage in and of itself is no natural disqualification against licensure of the kind mentioned by you. Indeed, I assume that this has been the understanding and practice of the commission in time of peace.

We may, therefore, lay on one side all peculiar attributes of status which result from alienage in and of itself and address ourselves to the consideration of the question as to whether and to what extent enemy character fastens itself upon aliens of the class under consideration by reason of the existence of the state of war.

In the earlier opinion referred to it was pointed out that such enemy character undeniably exists for some purposes and has certain significance even as to those persons who reside peacefully within the territory of the belligerent state. Thus, in theory, the property of such persons is subject to confiscation—though as a principle of living law this consideration may be disregarded as the rule is virtually, if not entirely, obsolete. Again, such persons may be required to register their names and addresses, may be excluded from certain residential areas, and may even be held prisoners or detained in definitely appointed places; but when such restrictive measures are applied and have been complied with by the persons affected thereby the result seems to be an implied safe-conduct which entitles such persons to maintain virtually the status of alien friends for the time being.

(Porter v. Freudenberg (1915), 1 K B., 857; and other authorities cited in the opnion referred to.)

In this country at the present time since the issuance of the president's proclamation under and by favor of permanent statutes of the United States, coupled with the enrollment of all aliens under the registration law put into effect since the former opinion was written, together with the more fundamental principle that in the absence of any positive political action the acquiescence of the government in the continued presence of resident "alien enemies" is to be presumed and safe-conduct may be inferred therefrom, all lead to the conclusion that subjects of Germany who reside in this state and have complied with all the regulations prescribed by the federal government for the conduct of such persons are entitled to be regarded as under safe-conduct and for many purposes at least as "friends" and not as "enemies."

In spite of these principles, does enough "enemy character" adhere, so to speak, to such persons as to disqualify them from being the recipients of licenses which may be regarded as privileges emanating from the state? As broadly stated, this question is of tremendous and far-reaching importance. It, however, can be as broadly answered, I think, by careful consideration of the real foundation of the rules last above referred to respecting "safe-conduct."

What is it that may affect the liberty of subjects of an enemy country residing within the territory of the belligerent? And what is it that when put into effect and even when withheld entirely, results in an implied safe-conduct? The answer in both cases may be summed up in the phrase "political action."

A subject of Germany residing in the United States may be imprisoned, possibly his property may even be confiscated, but if either of these things occurs it will be because of political action. At the present time subjects of Germany residing in this country do so under an implied and even express safe-conduct, provided they conduct themselves in accordance with the regulations prescribed for them; but these regulations, and the safe-conduct itself, are the result of political action.

The principle then must be, I think, stated thus:

Subjects of an enemy country residing in a belligerent state are susceptible to such repressive measures as the state in the exercise of its police power may choose to take respecting them; but in the absence of the exertion of such police power through repressive measures, and particularly when the measures that have been taken in effect guarantee safe-conduct, the common law visits upon them no inimical consequences and virtually regards them as "friends."

The answer to your question, then, must be sought not in the common law, but in the statutes themselves through which the police power of the state in this particular has been exercised. I quote the following sections of the General Code:

> "Section 1048. Each person who desires to act as a steam engineer shall make application to the district examiner of steam engineers for a license, upon a blank furnished him, and shall pass an examination in the construction and operation of steam boilers, steam engines and steam pumps, and in the subject of hydraulics. The examination shall be conducted under the rules and regulations adopted by the chief examiner which shall be uniform throughout the state. The district examiners, assistant chief examiner and chief examiner may administer all oaths or affirmations to any applicant whenever the same is made necessary by the rules and regulations adopted by the chief examiner."
> "Section 1049. If, upon such examination, the applicant is found proficient in such subjects, a license shall be granted him to have charge of and operate stationary steam boilers and engines of the horse power required by law, for one year from the date on which it is issued. Upon written charges after notice and hearing, the district examiner may revoke the license of a person guilty of fraud in obtaining such license, or who has become insane, or is addicted to the liquor or drug habits to such a degree as to render him unfit to discharge the duties of a steam engineer."
> "Section 1050. Upon application, the person to whom a license is issued under the provisions of this chapter shall be entitled to a renewal thereof annually, unless the district examiner for a cause named in the preceding section and upon notice and hearing shall refuse such renewal."

"Section 1052. A person dissatisfied with the action of a district examiner in refusing or revoking a license or renewal thereof, may appeal to the chief examiner of steam engineers, who shall investigate the action of the district examiner. If the chief examiner finds that such action of the district examiner was justified under the requirements of this chapter, he shall sustain him in his action; if he finds that the district examiner was not so justified, he shall require him to issue a license to the person making the appeal."

"Section 1058-1. Any person who desires to operate or have charge of a stationary steam boiler of more than thirty horse power, except boilers which are in charge of a duly licensed engineer, shall make application to the district examiner of steam engineers for a license so to do, upon a blank furnished by the examiner, and shall successfully pass an examination upon the following subjects: the construction and operation of steam boilers, steam pumps and hydraulics, under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the chief examiner of steam engineers, which rules and regulations and standard of examination, shall be uniform throughout the state. If, upon such examination, the applicant is found proficient in said subjects a license shall be granted him to have charge of and operate stationary steam boilers of the horse power named in this act. Such license shall continue in force for one year from the date the same is issued, and upon application to the district examiner may be renewed annually without being required to submit to another examination. Provided, however, the district examiner may, on written charges, after notice and hearing, revoke the license of any person guilty of fraud in passing the examination, or who for any cause has become unfit to operate or have charge of stationary steam boilers, provided, further, that any person dissatisfied with the action of any district examiner in refusing or revoking a license or renewal thereof, may appeal to the chief examiner who shall review the proceedings of the district examiner."

"Section 871-11. On and after the first day of September, 1913, the following departments of the state of Ohio, to wit: commissioner of labor statistics, chief inspector of mines, chief inspector of workshops and factories, chief examiner of steam engineers, board of boiler rules, and the state board of arbitration and conciliation, shall have no further legal existence, except that the heads of the said departments, and said boards, shall within ten days after the said date submit to the governor their reports of their respective departments for the portion of the year 1913 during which they were in existence, and on and after the first day of September, 1913, the industrial commission of Ohio shall have all the powers and enter upon the performance of all the duties conferred by law upon the said departments."

"Section 871-22. It shall also be the duty of the industrial commission and it shall have full power, jurisdiction and authority:

"(1) To appoint advisers, who shall without compensation, assist the industrial commission in the execution of its duties; to retain and assign to their duties any or all officers, subordinates and clerks of the commissioner of labor statistics, the chief inspector of mines, the chief inspector of workshops and factories, the chief examiner of steam engineers, the board of boiler rules, chief inspector of steam boilers, the state board of arbitration and conciliation, and the state liability board of awards.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"(11) On and after September 1, 1913, to examine and license persons who desire to act as steam engineers, and persons who desire to operate steam boilers and persons who desire to act as inspectors of steam boilers; to provide for the scope, conduct and time of such examinations, to provide for, regulate and enforce the renewal and revocation of such licenses, to inspect and examine steam boilers and to make, publish and enforce rules and regulations and orders for the construction, installment, inspection and operation of steam boilers and all appliances connected with steam boilers and to do and require and enforce all things necessary to make such examination, inspection and requirement efficient. * * *"

"Section 871-24. All duties, liabilities, authority, powers and privileges conferred and imposed by law upon the * * * chief examiner of steam engineers, assistant chief examiner of steam engineers, district examiners of steam engineers, the board of boiler rules, head of the department of the board of boiler rules and the chief inspector of steam boilers, assistant chief inspector of steam boilers, general inspectors of steam boilers, special inspector of steam boilers, * * * are hereby imposed upon the industrial commission of Ohio and its deputies on and after the first day of September, 1913.

"All laws relating to the * * * chief examiner of steam engineers, assistant chief examiner of steam engineers, district examiners of steam engineers, the board of boiler rules, head of the department of the board of boiler rules and the chief inspector of steam boilers, assistant chief inspector of steam boilers, general inspector of steam boilers, special inspectors of steam boilers, * * * on and after the first day of September, 1913, shall apply to, relate and refer to the industrial commission of Ohio, and its deputies. Qualifications prescribed by law for said officers and their assistants and employes shall be held to apply, wherever applicable, to the qualifications of the deputies of the commission assigned to the performance of the duties now cast upon such officers, assistants and employes."

In the first place, I do not believe that under the group of sections last above quoted the industrial commission has any power to add to or subtract from the qualifications which an applicant for either of the kinds of licenses mentioned in your letter must have in order to receive a license. It is true that the commission has very broad powers, but in this particular its powers are clearly limited to enforcing and administering the statutes as it finds them. For this purpose, therefore, the existence of discretion in the Commission is to be determined by the sections of the General Code relating to examinations for steam engineers licenses and examinations for boiler operators licenses.

The statutes are not exactly alike. Section 1048 applicable to steam engineers licenses, requires that each person desiring such license to pass an examination in certain subjects conducted under the rules and regulations adopted by the chief examiner which shall be uniform throughout the state. If the applicant is found proficient in the subjects in which he is examined his license must be granted to him; but such license may be revoked for fraud, insanity or addiction to the liquor or drug habits to such a degree as to render the licensee unfit to discharge the duties of a steam engineer.

I have no hesitancy in advising that the authority of the chief examiner (the industrial commission) to prescribe rules and regulations goes at least as far as indicated by the causes of revocation in section 1049. That is to say, for obvious reasons I think the commission by rule may refuse to grant a license or even an examination to a person guilty of fraud in making his application, or who is insane, or who is addicted to the liquor or drug habit to such a degree as to render him unfit to discharge the duties of steam engineer. It would be idle in such cases to require a license to be issued and then to cause it to be revoked immediately.

The question, then, arises as to whether or not the commission by its rules may add a personal disqualification other than those mentioned in section 1049 General Code. That is to say, suppose that in the opinion of the commission a man might be unfit to discharge the duties of steam engineer for some reason other than because of his lack of technical proficiency as subject to be ascertained by examination, and likewise other than insanity or addiction to liquor or the drug habit, has the commission under its inherited power to adopt rules and regulations for the conduct of examinations authority to add such qualification?

In the face of the decision in Harmon v. State, 66 O. S. 249, this question would appear to be answered in the negative. This decision, however, has been very much discredited, and there is grave doubt as to whether it states correct principles of law.

In Theobald v. State, 10 C. C. N. S. 536, the present law for licensing stationary engineers was considered and held to be constitutional, all the objections alleged in Harmon v. State under the old law having been removed. Of the provision for rules and regulations for the conduct of examinations the court, per Marvin, J., says, at page 539:

> "The same provision is found in the old act in this regard, but in the present statute there is found what is not found in the old, that the rules and regulations under which examinations shall be held shall be uniform throughout the state, and that these rules and regulations shall be adopted by the chief examiner. Now it is said that practically the objections to the old statute exist as against the new.
> "The court said, in the case referred to, that a district examiner could in fact make the law for his district, limited only by his will as to what shall constitute the standard of the qualification of engineers, and that this was granting legislative authority to this examiner.
> "Under the provisions of the present statute, as has already been shown, the rules and regulations for the examination are fixed by the chief examiner and are to be uniform throughout the state, and that seems to us clearly to make him not a legislative but an administrative officer with power only execute the statutes enacted by the general assembly. * * *"

It did not seem to occur to the court in this case that by "rules and regulations" qualifications other than those enumerated in the statute or by necessary inference therefrom could be prescribed; for the court goes on in the remainder of the opinion to point out that the very enumeration of subjects in which an examination should be had saved the amended statute from the criticism leveled at the old in Harmon v. State, supra.

In view of the history of the law providing for the licensing of steam engineers, I am of the opinion that the law is not to be so interpreted as to vest in the chief examiner, or the industrial commission as his successor, any power by rule or regulation to add to the qualifications of the applicant anything not expressed in or implied from the statute.

I might come to another conclusion were it not for such history, but that history precludes the discussion of the problem of delegation of legislative power in general, and I therefore conclude with respect to the statutes relative to the licensing of steam engineers, that the industrial commission may not refuse to grant a license to a person who has by his examination been found proficient in the subjects in which he has been examined, though, in the opinion of the commission, he may be a person "unfit to discharge the duties of a steam engineer," unless such "unfitness" arises from fraud in obtaining a license, insanity, or addiction to the drug or liquor habits.

In short, in the case of steam engineers' licenses the political action necessary to withdraw the privileges of residents generally from the subjects of Germany who are law-abidng residents of this country is not embodied in the law in question, and authority to take it is not thereby delegated to the industrial commission.

Coming now to boiler operators I note that section 1058-1 General Code is strikingly similar in phraseology to sections 1048 and 1049 General Code, except in one point. It is therein provided that the district examiner (i. e. the industrial commission) may revoke the license of a person "who for any cause has become unfit to operate or have charge of stationary steam boilers." It will be observed that this difference is, for the purposes of this opinion, a very material one. In the case of steam engineers the only unfitness which would justify revocation of a license—and upon the reasoning of this opinion would justify refusing to issue it in the first instance—is such unfitness as would result from insanity or from the liquor or drug habits; in the case of boiler operators, however, the commission as the successor of the chief examiner may revoke —and hence refuse to issue—a license when the licensee or applicant is for any cause unfit to operate or have charge of stationary steam boilers.

The constitutionality of this provision might be seriously questioned in view of the state of the Ohio law on the general subject hereinbefore referred to, and especially in view of Harmon v. State, supra; but for our present purposes the constitutionality of this provision will be assumed, with the qualification only that the word "unfit" is not to be regarded as vesting in the commission any arbitrary power; and that the phrase "for any cause" in the same connection must be taken to mean for some cause bearing relation to the public safety the protecton of which is the great object of the law.

This being the case, the question arises as to whether the industrial commission must or may lawfully determine, if it finds such to be the fact, that a resident alien enemy is, on account of his allegiance to the enemy country and on that account alone, unfit to operate a steam boiler.

In King v. London County Council (1915) 2 K. B., 466, mandamus to compel the issuance of a moving picture license to a company a majority of whose shareholders were non-resident alien enemies was refused on the ground of discretion by the same court which in The Continental Tyre and Rubber Company v. Dailer (1915) 1 K. B., 893, referred to in my previous opinion to the commission, had held that the enemy character of an English corporation could not be predicated on the character of its shareholders or managers. In other words, the English court of appeals held that though the company in question was not technically an alien enemy company, yet the London County Council might in the reasonable exercise of a discretion to be exercised for the protection of the public safety refuse it a license on the ground of stock control by alien enemies.

This is the only case either in England or in this country which I have been able, in a somewhat limited research, to find upon the question. Of course the constitutional question as to the delegation of legislative power could not arise in England, but once that question is gotten over and the problem is reduced to what is the exercise of a reasonable discretion it would appear that the decision might be of some service here.

It is at least clear from the case, however, that it can not be held as a matter of law that a peaceful resident of this country who happens to be a subject of Germany is, on account of his technical allegiance, an unfit person to operate a steam boiler. The conclusion involves a weighing of evidence and the determination of facts in each individual case which the commission must make.

It is my opinion, therefore, that as to boiler operators the industrial commission is without authority to consider the fact of the German allegiance of a resident of this country as conclusively establishing the unfitness of the applicant to operate steam boilers; that the commission is of course not prohibited, as a matter of law, from determining that such allegiance does not render a person "unfit;" and that in a case where the commission is considering the fitness of a particular individual, i. e., whether or not he may, with due regard to the public safety, be entrusted with the operation of a steam boiler, you may take his enemy allegiance into consideration, with all other facts bearing thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE—HEALTH OFFICER MAY BE SELECTED AS EXEMPT FROM SAME—SANITARY POLICEMAN MAY NOT BE SO SELECTED.

The health officer appointed by the municipal board of health is as "assistant" to such board, and may be selected as exempt from the classified civil service under paragraph "8" of section 8 of the civil service law.

The sanitary policemen appointed by such board are not "assistants" in contemplation of the provision of said section and may not, therefore, be selected as exempt from the classified service under favor of the provision of said paragraph.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On April 27th you addressed the following inquiry to this department:

> "In a non-charter governed city, has the board of health the legal power to exempt the health officer and sanitary policemen from the classified service of the civil service laws of the state?"

It is presumed by your inquiry that you desire to know whether the board of health has the right to select the officers in question under favor of paragraph 8, of section 8 of the Moore-Barnes law, General Code, section 486-1 et seq. The provision in question is as follows:

> "Section 486-8. * * * (a) * * * The unclassified service shall comprise the following positions which shall not be included in the classified service, and which shall be exempt from all examinations required in this act.
> "8. Three secretaries, assistants or clerks and one personal stenographer for each of the elective state officers; and two secretaries, assistant or clerks and one personal stenographer for other elective officers and each of the principal appointive executive officers, boards or commissions, except civil service commissions, authorized by law to appoint such secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer. * * *"

This section applies not only to state officers, but to those of the county and municipality. The appointive state officers and other elective officers than state officers are comprised in the latter division of the paragraph, as are also boards and commissions. It is seen, therefore, that this provision includes appointive state officers and state boards and also elective officers and boards and commissions whether they be properly designated as state boards and commissions or not.

That municipal boards are within the act is shown by the exception of the civil service commission, which being in the plural must include the municipal civil service. It therefore follows that without this exception the municipal civil service commissions would be able to avail themselves of the privilege given by the act, and as such municipal civil service commissions are excepted from the term "boards and commissions" it follows in like manner that such municipal boards and commissions are likewise within the privilege of the act, from which it is demontrated that the board of health alluded to in the inquiry is within the contemplation of the act and entitled to the exemption, so that it only remains to consider whether the officers mentioned are such officers as may be so taken out of the classified service. In order that this be so they should come under the exceptions in the paragraph itself,—that is, they should be either secretaries, assistants, clerks or stenographers. By elimination, they are not stenographers, they are not secretaries or clerks. Therefore, unless they may properly be described as assistants they are not within the provisions of the act.

An assistant is one who assists, and an assistant of an officer is one who would assist such officer in the prosecution of the duties of his office. In like manner, an assistant of a board would be one who assists such board in the prosecution of its lawful duties. The assistant may not possess all the powers or have all the authority or fulfill all the requirements of his principal. This is especially true of a board, as no one but the board, properly speaking, can do the things done by it in the sense or in the manner in which it does them itself. The board acts as a body through its members and by resolutions or motions spread upon its minutes and adopted by a majority of its members in accordance with law and with lawful and proper bylaws. This is true of every organization known as a board, and in as much as the statutes permit such board to have an assistant, it follows that the assistant must do different things and act in a different manner from the board itself, which things, however, must be confined to the objects of the existence of the board. Such objects in the case of a board of health are universally known, and the health officer and the sanitary policeman are chosen by the board, under power given them by statute to select and employ them for the purpose of carrying out the duties of the board.

The health officer undoubtedly comes within the above description of an "assistant." He acts largely in an advisory capacity to the board; is generally, although not universally, a doctor; and is in respect to some matters, and in a varying degree as to different boards and different circumstances, practically almost independent in his authority in furthering the purposes for which the board exists. He stands in a confidential relation to them, and in every view and for every reason is in as high a degree an "assistant" as it is possible for a board to have.

The case of a policeman is different. His duties are entirely executive. He is entrusted with some discretion in carrying out some of the details; that is to say, if he finds premises, alleys, etc., in an unsanitary condition he issues orders and enforces them to have such matters corrected; but as to his general duties, they consist in carrying out the general regulations and specific orders of the board, and entirely in accordance with the instructions of the board and generally, also, he accepts instructions from the health officer. So that his duties are not of the same character as those of the health officer, but have a distinction therefrom that is plainly discernible.

You are, therefore, advised that the board of health may select their health officer under favor of the provisions above quoted without receiving him upon an eligible list, but as to the sanitary policeman he is in the classified civil service and must be obtained from such list or in accordance with the civil service law.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—UPON INFORMATION TRANSMITTED FROM BOARD OF REVIEW—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO REVALUE REAL ESTATE ON DUPLICATE LESS THAN ITS TRUE VALUE IN MONEY —UPON SUCH INFORMATION AUDITOR MAY MAKE REVALUATION OF BETTERMENTS AND IMPROVEMENTS ON LANDS.

When the board of revision, acting under section 5604 G. C., as amended in 1917, calls to the attention of the county auditor the fact that a parcel of real estate, as such, has for a number of years been assessed upon the tax duplicate at very much less than its true value in money, the county auditor is without power to act in any respect directly upon such information; the provisions of section 5604, which assumes that he has power to take such action, not being effective in themselves to give him such power, and there being no such power under other sections of the General Code.

The county auditor has power to act upon information transmitted to him under section 5604 in the revaluation of improvements and betterments on lands, in which event his action affects only the current duplicate; and in case taxable land has been entirely omitted from the duplicate, in which event his action may affect not only the current duplicate but also any of the five preceding years unless during that time the property has changed ownership.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 12th requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Where a parcel of real estate has, for a number of years past, been assessed upon the tax duplicate at very much less than its true value in money, can the county auditor, under the provisions of General Code, sections 5604, 5573 and 5576, as amended, by having the matter called to the attention of the board of revision and upon the report of that board to him, and notice by him to the owner, proceed to ascertain the true value in money of such real estate for each of the preceding five years and thereupon make a subsequent addition for such preceding five years, to the amount of such portion of the true value as shall have escaped taxation during such previous years?"

The sections referred to by you as amended by legislation of 1917, now in effect, are as follows:

> "Section 5604. When the county board of revision discovers or has its attention called to the fact that, in a current year or in any year during the five years next preceding, any taxable land, building, structure, improvement, minerals, mineral rights, personal property or other taxable property in the county, has escaped taxation or been listed for taxation at less than its true value in money, the board may investigate the same and report to the county auditor all facts and information in its possession relating to the same. The county auditor shall make such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized and required by law to make in other cases in which real and personal property has escaped taxation, or has been improperly listed or valued for taxation."
> "Section 5573. If the county auditor discovers that any tract of land or any lot or part of either, has been omitted, he shall add it to the list of real property, with the name of the owner, and ascertain the value thereof and place it opposite such property.

"In such case he shall add to the taxes of the current year the simple taxes of each and every preceding year in which the property has escaped taxation, not exceeding, however, five years, unless in the meantime the property has changed ownership, in which case only the taxes chargeable since the last change of ownership shall be added; or the owner thereof, if he desires, may pay the amount of such taxes into the county treasury, on the order of the auditor."

"Section 5576. Such county auditor, if he ascertains that a mistake was made in the value of an improvement or betterment of real property, or that the true value thereof was omitted, shall return the correct value, having first given notice to the owner or agent thereof, of his intention so to do."

Section 5604 G. C. expressly authorizes and directs the county board of revision, under the circumstances therein named, to report to the county auditor any facts and information in its possession to the effect that any "taxable land" as well as any "building, structure, improvement, minerals, and mineral rights" has "been listed for taxation at less than its true value in money." The county auditor is then authorized to make "such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized and required by law to make in other cases in which real and personal property has escaped taxation, or has been improperly listed or valued for taxation." That is to say, so far as section 5604 is concerned, it would appear that the legislature in enacting it assumed that the county auditor would be authorized to make inquiries and corrections in cases where real property, consisting of land only, or of land and buildings together, had been improperly listed or valued for taxation.

However, neither of the other two sections referred to by you gives to the county auditor any power to revalue land as such. Under section 5573 he may place a valuation upon any tract of land, etc., which has been omitted from the duplicate, going back five years, unless the property has in the meantime changed ownership. Under section 5576 he may correct a mistake in the valuation "of an improvement or betterment of real property," or supply by original valuation an omission in the assessment of such improvement or betterment; but he may not under this section revalue real estate itself as a whole, i. e., the land irrespective of the improvements or betterments.

I know of no other sections of the General Code at present in force which give the county auditor power to revalue land as such except when it has been omitted from taxation entirely. Section 5604 can not be given such effect. It is true that it purports to confer independent power upon the county auditor in that it requires him to "make such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized and required by law to make in other cases." That is to say, this form of expression might seem to imply that the power of the county auditor to act upon information furnished him by the board of revision is separate and distinct from the power which he has to act upon his own initiative "in other cases." This inference would be justified if the clause in question should stop with the phrase "in which real and personal property has escaped taxation" but it does not do so. In the form in which it stands it merely authorizes the auditor, upon the instigation of the board of revision, to make such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized to make in other cases in which (for present purposes) real and personal property has been improperly listed or valued for taxation, but he is not authorized by law to make any inquiries and corrections in other cases where real property, as distinguished from improvements and betterments thereon, has been improperly valued for taxation.

I am of the opinion therefore that the power of the county auditor under the sections quoted by you is limited to the revaluation of improvements and betterments, as to the valuation of which he finds that a mistake was made at the last assessment thereof. Under this section his action can affect only the current duplicate. If the property has escaped taxation altogether then under section 5573 he may go back for five years, or until the last change of ownership, as suggested by your question.

That the power of the auditor extends thus far is, I think, reasonably clear when it is taken into account that in original section 5576 the power to correct a mistake in the value of an improvement or betterment was vested in the personal property assessor. It is clear under this section that the power extended virtually to every valuation, i. e., the correction of fundamental errors as distinguished from clerical errors; the reasons for this change are, I think, sufficiently plain. By amending section 5576 in 1917 the general assembly, consistently with its policy respecting other sections, has merely transferred this power to the county auditor, the nature of the power remaining unchanged.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ENGINEER—HOW TO BE EMPLOYED UNDER SECTION 2411 TO ASSIST COUNTY SURVEYOR—SECTION 2411 G. C. DOES NOT AUTHORIZE EMPLOYMENT OF ENGINEER TO SECURE DATA TO ENABLE HIM TO TESTIFY AS EXPERT WITNESS IN CONSERVANCY COURT.

Section 2411 G. C. authorizing the employment of an engineer to assist the county surveyor, contemplates employment in such manner as will make the engineer and his assistant engineer, rodmen, inspectors, etc., employes of the county, and does not authorize a contract with an independent contractor whereby such contractor is to furnish his own assistants and execute the work entirely in accordance with his own ideas, without being subject to the orders of the county commissioners.

Neither does such section authorize the employment of an engineer for the purpose of securing data to enable him to testify in a conservancy court concerning the advisability of adopting plans outlined by the conservancy board for flood protection in the district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. R. A. KERR, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On May 14, 1917, I rendered you an opinion No. 243 in connection with the contract of the county commissioners of Miami county with John W. Hill for engineering services. In that opinion I held that because no certificate was filed by the auditor under section 5660 G. C, the contract was void and the engineer could not compel the commissioners to pay the balance of $545.00 due. In that opinion I stated:

> "From these authorities it is clear that inasmuch as the county auditor did not file the certificate under section 5660 G. C at the time the commissioners entered into this contract with Mr. Hill, they (the county commissioners) did not enter into a legal agreement and the balance of $545.00 cannot, therefore, be legally paid Mr Hill.
> "The above being true, discussion of whether or not county commissioners might have had the power to enter into said contract, as set out herein, is unnecessary."

I am in receipt of a communication from George T. Poor, attorney for Mr. Hill, in which he calls my attention to section 2413 G. C. and states that the auditor's certificate to this contract was not necessary; this upon the theory that the contract was made under section 2411 G. C.

It was my view at the time opinion No. 245 was written that the contract could not be made under section 2411 and that inasmuch as it had to be made under other authority, if it could be made at all, the auditor's certificate was necessary, and not being filed its omission was fatal.

Since the receipt of Mr. Poor's letter I feel that a consideration of his objections call for an opinion and I wish to address to you, therefore, this communication upon the question of whether or not a contract could have been made under section 2411 G. C.

Section 2411 G. C. reads:

> "When the services of an engineer are required with respect to roads, turnpikes, ditches or bridges, or with respect to any other matter, and when on account of the amount of work to be performed, the board deems it necessary, upon the written request of the county surveyor, the board may employ a competent engineer and as many assistant engineers, rodmen and inspectors as may be needed, and shall furnish suitable offices, necessary books, stationery, instruments and implements for the proper performance of the duties imposed on them by such board."

Section 2413 G. C. reads:

> "The board of county commissioners shall fix the compensation of all persons appointed or employed under the provisions of the preceding sections, which, with their reasonable expenses shall be paid from the county treasury upon the allowance of the board. No provisions of law requiring a certificate that the money therefor is in the treasury shall apply to the appointment or employment of such persons."

From a reading of section 2411 it is at once apparent that the employment contemplated therein is such as will give the county commissioners a continuing jurisdiction over those employed. In other words, it intended that those employed under its provisions should be employes of the county and not independent contractors.

An independent contractor is defined in 26 Cyc., page 970, as follows:

> "One who contracts to do a specific piece of work, furnishing his own assistants and executing the work entirely in accordance with his own ideas, or in accordance with the plan previously given to him by the person for whom the work is done, without being subject to the orders of the latter in respect to the details of the work, is an independent contractor."

Surely this is not the kind of employment furnished by section 2411 G. C. Attention is called to the following provisions of the act:

> "The board may employ a competent engineer and as many assistant engineers, rodmen and inspectors as may be needed, and shall furnish suitable offices, necessary books, stationery, instruments and implements for the proper performance of the duties imposed on them by such board."

Section 2413 G. C., originally a part of the same act, provides in part:

> "The board of county commissioners shall fix the compensation of all persons appointed or employed under the provisions of the preceding sections, which, with their reasonable expenses shall be paid from the county treasury upon the allowance of the board."

These provisions make it plain that the engineer contemplated by these sections is not an independent contractor who may furnish his own assistants and execute the work entirely in accordance with his own ideas, without being subject to the orders of the county commissioners, but that these sections authorize the appointment of such an engineer as will be a county employe, performing such duties as the county commissioners see fit to impose upon him from time to time, aided, if necessary, by assistant engineers, rodmen and inspectors also appointed or employed by the county commissioners, and doing the work under the supervision of the county commissioners from an office furnished by the commissioners and with instruments, etc., provided by the commissioners as well. No where in the act can any authority be found for an agreement with an independent contractor whereby such contractor furnishes his own assistants and executes the work entirely in accordance with his own ideas.

Neither do I think the subject matter of the contract falls within the terms of section 2411. Section 2411 G. C. provides in part: that an engineer may be employed by the county commissioners "when the services of an engineer are required with respect to roads, turnpikes, ditches or bridges or with respect to any other matter."

In Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, volume II, page 814, section 422, it is stated:

"When there are general words following particular and specific words, the former must be confined to things of the same kind."

This doctrine has been accepted by the courts of this state in many decisions which may be cited.

"General words, following particular and specific words, must, as a general rule, be confined to things of the same kind as those specified." Shultz v. Cambridge, 38 O. S., 659.

See State v. Johnson, 64 O. S., 270.

The plain effect of these authorities on section 2411 G. C. is to make us view it as though it read as follows:

When the services of an engineer are required with respect to roads, turnpikes, ditches or bridges, or with respect to any other SIMILAR matter.

The question then is, do services, such as were contracted for in this instance, come within this description? The language of the section would indicate that the legislature meant to authorize the employment of an engineer for services in connection with the construction or improvement of roads, turnpikes, ditches, bridges or other similar work within the county. It further indicates that it has reference to such work as the county surveyor will ordinarily be compelled to do but is unable to perform because of the amount of the work to be done.

Work to be done in this case was not construction or repair work within the county but engineering work to be done in connection with two other counties for the purposes of opposing the plan of the Miami conservancy district. A reading of the resolution and the contract clearly shows that the whole object of the employment was to gather information upon which to base arguments for the substitution of a flood prevention plan without dams for that with dams adopted by the Miami conservancy board. It was not such county work as would come within the scope of the official duties of the surveyor but was work to be done in connection with the question of flood prevention, not as a county, but as a district proposition, and upon a scale and in a manner surely not dreamed of by the legislature that enacted section 2411 General Code.

From these considerations I am of the opinion that the county commissioners were without authority to make this contract under section 2411 General Code and that if they had any authority at all to make the contract, such contract was subject to the provisions of section 5660 General Code and the auditor's certificate not being furnished under this section the omission was fatal to the legality of the contract.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY CREATE NEW DISTRICT BY UNITING VILLAGE AND RURAL DISTRICT—A REMONSTRANCE FILED AGAINST SUCH ACTION—SHOULD CONTAIN NAMES OF MAJORITY OF ELECTORS OF ENTIRE NEW DISTRICT.

Where a county board of education created a new school district and a remonstrance is filed against such action, such remonstrance must contain the name of a majority of the qualified electors of the entire new district.

A county board of education may create a new district by uniting a village and a rural district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You submit for my opinion the following statement of facts:

> "The county board of education in Marion county, Ohio, acting under the authority of section 4736 G. C., created a new school district by uniting a village school district and a rural school district. In accordance with a clause of section 4736 'said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed, unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of such districts so proposed.'
> "In order to nullify the action of the county board, is it necessary that a remonstrance be signed by a majority of the electors residing in the newly created district as a whole; or will a majority of the electors residing in either of the original school districts nullify said action?"

In addition to the above I have also ascertained that the village district referred to in your communication had, at the time the new school district was created, a tax valuation of less than $500,000 and it was therefore necessary to delay answering your inquiry until the question as to whether such village school district was dissolved according to law, was decided for from that fact other questions in the case will be determined.

This department held in opinion No. 341, rendered June 6, 1917, "that a village district which once existed and whose tax valuation falls below $500,000, is not by that fact alone dissolved." So that when the county board of education of Marion county, acting under authority of section 4736 G. C., created a new school district by uniting a village school district and a rural school district, it was acting within the scope of its authority.

Said section 4736 G. C. provides in part:

> "Said arrangements shall be carried into effect as proposed unless within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of the school district so proposed."

You inquire just what is meant by the territory affected. But one thing, it seems to me, can be meant by said language. The territory in the village district was just as much affected as the territory in the rural district. It was not a transfer of one district to another, but a creating of a new district out of the two and that this can be done under the above section was decided by the court of appeals of Fairfield county, Ohio, April 26, 1917, in the case of Dillon Fisher v. J. W. Whittus, et al., in which case the county board of education created the Liberty Union village school district from the Basil village school district and the Baltimore village school district, and injunction was asked to prevent such action. The plaintiffs claim that the county board of education was wholly without authority or power, statutory or otherwise, to create a new school district out of two village school districts and contended that the county board of education had no jurisdiction to dissolve village districts and create a new district therefor. But the court held:

> "The county board of education has full and complete power and authority to create a new district from the territory embraced in them. No claim is made in the amended petition that advantage was taken by the electors of the new school district of the provisions of General Code section 4736, 'which said arrangements shall be carried into effect as proposed unless within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of the school district so proposed.' From a careful examination of section 4736 General Code, which further provides 'the county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof.' we are fully convinced that the county board of education has full power and authority over village districts and may create a new district by consolidating two village districts. This language is clear, plain and explicit and certainly gives to the county board full and complete power in the premises."

It is determined from the above language quoted from said decision that the county board not only has a right to create a new school district from two districts over which it has jurisdiction, but it is also suggested that the electors of the new school district failed to take advantage of the remonstrance proposition which is provided for in said section 4736 G. C. and the conclusion is clear that all the territory of the new district is "territory affected by such order of the county board" and that the limits of the entire district must be taken into consideration in ascertaining a majority of the qualified electors of the territory. Whatever construction is made applicable in relation to village districts over which a county board of education had jurisdiction would, of course, apply to a village and a rural district over which the county board has jurisdiction as in your case.

Answering your question specifically, then, I advise you that it is necessary that a remonstrance be signed by a majority of the electors residing in the newly created district as a whole in order to nullify the action of the county board in the creation of a new district.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CITY COUNCIL—MAY PROVIDE FOR CREATION OF BOND FUND—AND MAY PROVIDE IN BOND ORDINANCE HOW SAME SHALL BE EXPENDED—MEMBERS OF COUNCIL ELECT ALL OF THE EMPLOYES THEREOF.

A city council may authorize the creation of a bond fund for the purpose of extending, enlarging and improving a municipal water works system and may provide in the bond ordinance that such fund shall be expended only for the purpose of paying the cost and expense of constructing such water lines as council may specifically provide by resolution.

Under the provisions of section 4210 G. C. the members of council elect all of the employes thereof no matter whether they are called assistants to the clerk of council or designated by some other name.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 9, 1917, you submitted for my opinion the following propositions:

> "(1) When council by ordinance has authorized bond issues for the purpose of extending, enlarging and improving the water works system, such ordinance of authorization containing the following clause:
> " 'Section 5. That the proceeds of the sale of said bonds shall be placed in the city treasury to the credit of the water works fund and shall be disbursed upon proper vouchers for the payment of the cost and expense of constructing water lines as authorized by resolution of council and for no other purpose whatever,'
> "may council later, by such resolution, restrict the laying of water pipe to certain streets and alleys, the cost thereof being paid from the proceeds of the bond sale authorized by ordinance, first mentioned, or has the director of public service the discretion as to the streets and alleys in which water pipe may be laid?
> "(2) In view of the provisions of section 4210 G. C., has council the authority to select the assistants to the clerk of council, or may said clerk select his own assistants?"

The first question which you submit has reference to a situation in which a city council has created a general bond fund for the purpose of extending, enlarging and improving the water works system thereof but has provided in the ordinance authorizing the issue of bonds that said fund shall be expended only for paying the cost and expense of constructing such extensions of the water lines as the city council may specifically authorize by resolution. You are desirous of knowing, therefore, whether the council or the service director of a city has the authority to determine on what particular streets water pipes shall be laid.

Section 3956 G. C. provides:

> "The director of public service shall manage, conduct and control the water works, furnish supplies of water, collect water rents, and appoint necessary officers and agents."

Section 3961 G. C. provides in part:

> "Subject to the provisions of this title, the director of public service may make contracts for * * * the enlargement and repair * * * manufacture and laying down of pipe * * * and for all other purposes necessary to the full and efficient management and construction of water works."

Section 4328 G. C. provides:

> "The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

Section 4240 G. C. provides:

> "The council shall have the management and control of the finances and property of the corporation, except as may be otherwise provided, and have such other powers and perform such other duties as may be conferred by law."

Section 4211 G. C. provides:

> "The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title. All contracts requiring the authority of council for their execution shall be entered into and conducted to performance by the board or officers having charge of the matters to which they relate, and after authority to make such contracts has been given and the necessary appropriation made, council shall take no further action thereon."

Section 3956 supra vests in the city service director the authority to manage, conduct and control its water works system. Section 3961 supra authorizes him to make contracts with reference to the management and construction of said water works system, subject to the provisions of law relating to the entering into of agreements by the director of public service of a city. Section 4328 supra provides that the director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of his department not involving more than $500.00, but requires that before he shall make an expenditure, other than for the compensation of persons employed in his department, in excess of $500.00, he shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council, and when so authorized and directed, shall make a contract only with the lowest and best bidder after proper advertisement. Section 4240 supra places in the city council the management and control of the finances and property of the corporation except as may be otherwise provided. Section 4211 supra makes the powers of council legislative only and forbids it performing any administrative duties except as is specifically provided. Said section also goes on to state that after council has authorized the making of a contract for a city and has made the necessary appropriation therefor, the board of officers having charge of the matters to which said contract relate shall execute same and conduct them to performance and that council shall take no action further than the authorization and appropriation of funds therefor.

From the foregoing provisions of the General Code it can be gathered that it is necessary for the council of a city to make an appropriation of funds before a valid contract can be entered into by the administrative officials of a city having charge of the matter or matters to which said contract relates and that when the expenditure which will be made in pursuance of said contract is in excess of $500.00, said council must specifically authorize and direct the particular officer or board having charge of same to enter into said contract.

The particular facts that you state do not disclose whether or not the expenditure for the water lines in question will involve the expenditure of an amount in excess of $500.00 and hence it is impossible to determine from them whether it is necessary for the director of public service to be authorized and directed to make a contract for said water mains extension. However, the facts do show that the moneys received from said issue of bonds were ordered placed in a general water works fund to be used for the extension, enlargement and improvement of the water works system by constructing such water lines as the council might authorize by resolution. I see no reason why the council might not provide that this bond fund could only be expended for paying the cost and expense of constructing such specific extensions to the water works system as it might see fit to authorize by resolution. The council of a city is vested with the lawmaking power of such municipality, and the management and control of the finances and property of such city is placed in its control except in so far as administrative duties with respect to same are in the hands of the executive officers of the city. The council provides the funds that are necessary to take care of the expenditures of the city and it is right and proper that it should exercise control over the purposes for which the money is to be spent, and the mere fact that it had decided to authorize the director of public service to spend this bond fund for the making of only such water extensions as it might specifically provide for would not mean that the council had gone beyond its lawmaking power and was endeavoring to exercise some of the executive authority of the director of public service.

The following language from the opinion of Summers, Judge, in The City of Akron v. Dobson, 81 O. S. 66, at page 77, sustains the conclusion that I have reached with respect to the power of the city council in regard to its control over appropriations:

> "The council provides the money for carrying on the government, either by a levy of taxes or an issue of bonds, and it is proper that it should have some control over the expenditures, but considering these sections in the light of the purpose of the code we think their requirements are met by an ordinance making an appropriation and stating generally the purpose for which it is made, and authorizing the directors to enter into contracts to effect that purpose. If the directors do not have or retain the confidence of the council, it is in the power of the council to be more specific."

Answering your first question specifically, then, I am of the opinion that where a city council has created a bond fund for the purpose of extending, enlarging and improving its water works system, it may provide in the bond ordinance that such fund shall be expended only for the laying of water lines in such streets and alleys as council may provide by resolution, and that the city council is vested with the authority to determine what specific water lines shall be constructed.

Your second inquiry is whether under the terms of section 4210 G. C. the city council or the clerk of council select the assistants to the clerk of council.

Section 4210 G. C. reads as follows:

> "Within ten days from the commencement of their term, the members of council shall elect a president pro tem, a clerk, and such other employes of council as may be necessary, and fix their duties, bonds and compensation. The officers and employes of council shall serve for two years, but may be removed at any time for cause, at a regular meeting by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to council."

It seems clear from the provisions of the foregoing section that the members of council themselves elect such employes as are necessary for the needs of council. Specific provision is made for the election of a clerk and a president pro tem, but nothing is said as to any other specific positions. Hence, we must presume that the determination of what other employes are needed is left to the discretion of council. I cannot see that it makes any difference whether these employes are called assistants to the clerk of council, or whether they are called by some other names in so far as their selection is concerned, as the plain wording of the statute shows clearly that the power of selecting them is vested in the members of council.

Answering your second question specifically, then, I am of the opinion that the members of council elect all of the employes thereof no matter whether they are called assistants to the clerk of council or whether designated by some other name.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL—POWER TO SEPARATE LABOR AND MATERIAL REQUIRED FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT—AND HIRING EMPLOYES DIRECT.

A village council has no right to separate the labor and material required in the improving of a street, where the cost of the improvement will exceed $500.00, and let the contract for the material needed at public bidding and then do the labor part of some by hiring the necessary employes directly, since such a procedure would violate the purpose and intent of section 4221 and 4222 G. C., which contemplates a public letting in such cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 8, 1917, I received a communication from Hon. Thomas Eubank, village solicitor of New Madison, Ohio, requesting my opinion on the following question:

"The engineer's estimate for resurfacing, repairing, and improving one of our streets in about $1,100 for materials and $1,000 for labor.

"The council wants to do the work directly (section 3939 General Code as amended, vol. 106, page 538, clause 22).

"Can they do this, letting out the contract for materials alone, or does section 4221 require them to let out contract for both labor and materials?"

Inasmuch as the request submitted by Mr. Eubank has reference to a question of public and great general interest I am taking the liberty of setting forth my views with respect to same in an opinion addressed to your bureau.

Section 4221 G. C. reads as follows:

"All contracts made by the council of a village shall be executed in the name of the village and signed on behalf of the village by the mayor and clerk. When any expenditure other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such contracts shall be in writing and made with the lowest and best bidder after advertising for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the village. The bids shall be opened at twelve o'clock noon on the last day for filing them, by the clerk of the village and publicly read by him."

The above section provides in effect that when any expenditure of a village exceeds five hundred dollars, except the compensation of persons employed by it, it shall only be made after a contract has been entered into with the lowest and best bidder after proper advertising therefor.

This section contemplates, then, that there are two classes of expenditures in excess of five hundred dollars as far as the powers of the village are concerned, one being expenditures for personal services and the other expenditures for other than personal services. No difficulty arises in determining the power and authority of the village council, which represents the village of course, in entering into contracts in excess of five hundred dollars where the thing contracted for its personal services sure and simple, for it is clear that in such a case no advertising is required nor is it necessary to contract with the lowest and best bidder. However, where the work or thing contracted for embraces both labor and material, the question then arises as to whether or not the village council may separate the labor and material and consider the labor necessarily involved in the doing of the work in question under the head of personal services and thereby insist that it is not necessary for it to advertise for bids for the doing of the labor part of the work.

Section 4222 G. C., which throws some light upon this question, reads as follows:

"Each such bid shall contain the full name of every person or company interested in it and shall be accompanied by a sufficient bond or certified check on a solvent bank that, if the bid is accepted, a contract will be entered into and the performance of it properly secured. If the work bid for embraces both labor and material, they shall be separately stated, with the price thereof. The council may reject any and all bids. The contract shall be between the corporation and the bidder, and the corporation shall pay the contract price in cash. When a bonus is offered for completion of contract prior to a specified date, the council may exact a prorated penalty in like sum for each day of delay beyond the specified date. When there is reason to believe there is collusion or combination among bidders, the bids of those concerned therein shall be rejected."

It is noted from an examination of the provisions of the last mentioned section that the law makes provision for public bidding on work which embraces both labor and material and that it requires that bids for work of such character shall separately state the labor and material embraced in said work with the price bid therefor. Such a requirement, which is apparently mandatory in character, indicates to my mind the intention of the legislature to require the letting at public bidding of all contracts in excess of five hundred dollars for the doing of work that embraces both labor and material, and negatives any idea that the village council might have the right to separate the labor and material and let a contract for the material at public bidding and then do the actual labor required by the hiring of the persons required, although their compensation would be in excess of five hundred dollars.

The provisions of the General Code which require the letting of contracts in excess of five hundred dollars at public bidding were enacted for the purpose of protecting the taxpayer and preventing fraud and collusion in the expenditure of public funds and with the view also to having public work done on a competitive basis which would insure the doing of public work at the lowest price possible and give all persons interested a chance to bid on same.

I am therefore of the opinion that the village council would have no right to separate the labor and material required in the improving of a street, where the cost of the improvement will exceed five hundred dollars, and let the contract for the materials needed at public bidding and then do the labor part of same by hiring the necessary employes directly, since I feel that such a procedure would be a violation of the purpose and intent of sections 4221 and 4222, supra, which contemplate a public letting in such cases.

In rendering this opinion I am invoking the same principles which caused one of my predecessors, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to reach a similar conclusion with respect to the power and authority of a city under a like state of facts, in an opinion rendered under date of July 9, 1913, to Hon. W. S. Jackson, city solicitor of Lima, Ohio, found in vol. II of the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1913, page 1520.

I have forwarded a copy of this opinion to Hon. Thomas Eubank, village attorney, at New Madison, Ohio.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

UNSALARIED INTERNE SERVICE—RESOLUTION OF STATE MEDICAL BOARD IN REGARD THERETO—NOT IN CONFLICT WITH SECTION 1236.

Resolution of state medical board in regard to unsalaried interne service not in conflict with section 1286 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. HOWELL WRIGHT, Member Ohio Senate, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of April 17th, 1917, as follows:

> "As a member of the legislature interested in proposed legislation, I desire to ask the opinion of the attorney-general relative to a resolution adopted by the state medical board, and the interpretation of certain terms contained in the same by the state medical board.

"The resolution and the questions are contained in the enclosed copy of my letter to the state medical board, under date of January 12, 1917. The interpretation of the terms in accordance with the questions asked is contained in the enclosed copy of a letter from the secretary of the state medical board, under date of January 19th. The approval of the interpretation as given by the secretary of the board in this letter is contained in the enclosed copy of a letter from the secretary under date of April 6th.

"I desire to address to you the same questions as contained and explained in my letter of January 12th, and to ask your interpretation of the terms "salaried" and "unsalaried" interne service. In explanation I might add, can board and lodging or board and lodging plus any one of the items enumerated in my letter of January 12th, given to an interne in exchange or return for his services rendered in a hospital as such, be properly considered a fee or compensation of any kind, direct or indirect? This quotation is from section 1286 of the medical practice act."

Your letter of January 12, 1917, to the state medical board is as follows:

"DR. GEORGE H. MATSON, Secretary, State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

"DEAR DR. MATSON:—The state medical board has adopted the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, the state medical board considers hospital interneship as furthering the better medical education of prospective practitioners.

"BE IT RESOLVED—That unsalaried interne service shall be considered as a part of the medical education course, and holders of such interne appointments shall not be required to be licensed in Ohio during their term of service, provided such internes at the time of their appointment file with the secretary of this board their respective preliminary and medical qualifications, the date and term of the service and the name of the hospital,

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED—That salaried interne service shall be considered as the practice of medicine and the holders of such interne appointments shall be required to secure licenses in Ohio, and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED—That all previous rulings of this board in conflict with these resolutions are hereby rescinded.

"The executive committee of the Cleveland hospital council has considered this resolution and instructed its secretary to address the following communication to the state medical board. As the hospitals are seriously concerned with the action taken the board is urged to reply to the questions asked at the earliest possible moment—if possible before the next regular meeting of the board, which I understand takes place in February.

"In its resolution the board makes the distinction between unsalaried interne service and salaried interne service and requires that holders of unsalaried interne appointments shall not be required to be licensed, but that holders of salaried interne appointments must be licensed. In general the question as raised by the resolution referred to and upon which the council seeks further light is, How are we to interpret "salaried" and "unsalaried?" What shall be the basis of distinction between these two classifications of interne service?

"As you undoubtedly know, hospitals have different plans for compensating internes for service rendered. Practically all hospitals give board and lodging and laundry. In addition some provide a stipulated number of white uniforms each year. Some make cash allowances for incidental expenses, while certain others given in addition to board and lodging certain instruments such as a stethoscope, hammer, scissors, etc.

"The question of grave concern to the hospitals, as raised by your resolution, is this, Does the state medical board consider these items, individually and collectively, given by hospitals to internes in exchange or return for their services rendered in the hospitals as such, as salary, fee or compensation of any kind, direct or indirect? It may be stated in another way: In what class of service, salaried interne service or unsalaried interne service shall the hospital place an interne who receives board and lodging or board and lodging plus any one of the items enumerated above in exchange or return for his services rendered in the hospital as such? You will probably note at once that the resolution of the board has raised a very important hospital question and will appreciate the necessity of an early reply. In addition may I say that the interpretation requested is likely to have important bearing upon proposed legislation now under consideration."

Your question resolves itself into this, can the receipt of board, lodging, laundry, uniform, instruments, and allowance for incidental expenses from a hospital by holders of interne appointments be considered as a practice of medicine within the meaning of section 1286 G. C.

Section 1286 G. C. provides as follows:

"A person shall be regarded as practising medicine, surgery or midwifery, within the meaning of this chapter who uses the words or letters 'Dr.,' 'Doctor,' 'Professor,' 'M. D.,' 'M. B.,' or any other title in connection with his name which in any way represents him as engaged in the practice of medicine, surgery or midwifery, in any of its branches, or who examines or diagnoses for a fee or compensation of any kind, or prescribes, advises, recommends, administers or dispenses for a fee or compensation of any kind, direct or indirect, a drug or medicine, appliance, application, operation or treatment of whatever nature for the cure or relief of a wound, fracture or bodily injury, infirmity or disease. The use of any such words, letters or titles in such connection or under such circumstances as to induce the belief that the person who uses them is engaged in the practice of medicine surgery or midwifery, shall be prima facie evidence of the intent of such person to represent himself as engaged in the practice of medicine, surgery or midwifery."

It will be necessary here to determine just what is meant by a fee or compensation. Bouvier's Law Dictionary defines fee as follows:

"A reward or wages given to one for the execution of his office or for professional services, as those of a counsellor or physician."

19 Cyc., 462, defines fee as follows:

"A charge or emolument; a compensation for particular acts or services; the term is distinguished from wages or salary in that it refers to compensation for particular acts, whereas wages or salary refer rather to compensation for work during a definite period of time."

The court in the case of Winona & St. Paul R. R. v. Denman, 10 Minn., 267 defines compensation as follows:

"The primary significance of the word compensation is equivalence and the second or more common meaning something given or obtained as an equivalent."

The court in the case of State v. Sheldon, 111 N. W. 372 (Neb.), held:

> "To compensate is to make a suitable reward for services. The word as used by the makers of the constitution relating to officers means a compensation or reward paid in return for the performance of an official duty."

The court in the case of Frizzell v. Holmes, 115 S. W. 246 (Ky.), held:

> "Compensation in its ordinary acceptation applies not only to salaries but to compensation by fees for specific services, etc."

Do any of the items mentioned in your communication come within these definitions of the words "compensation" or "fee"? Are any of these items furnished to the interne given to him to compensate him for his labor, or as a recompense for his services? I think not. There is a different reason, it seems to me, why the hospitals furnish these items to their internes; for instance, board and lodging is furnished, not as compensation, but is given so that the interne will be at the hospital at all times. The very nature of his duties requires this so that he may be there to attend to any emergency that may arise. Other items are given him to save him from the extraordinary expense he would be put to by reason of his employment. A fee or compensation, to my mind, implies something more than merely repaying one for the expense he has been put to in the service of another, or given to him with a view of saving him from expense while in the service of another. A fee or compensation implies a net gain of something of value, money, over and above such expense.

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that board, lodging laundry, instruments, uniforms and allowance for incidental expenses, given to holders of interne appointments, cannot be construed to be salary under the resolution of the state medical board, herein quoted, or the receipt of the above mentioned items cannot be considered as a practice of medicine within the meaning of section 1286 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN STATE ACQUIRES TITLE TO PROPERTY UPON WHICH THERE IS A LIEN FOR TAXES—LIEN BECOMES MERGED IN LARGER TITLE —COUNTY AUDITOR NOT AUTHORIZED TO PUT PROPERTY ON DELINQUENT LIST WHEN TITLE IS IN STATE.

1. The lien imposed by section 5671 G. C. upon real property for taxes thereon is that of the state, and when thereafter the state acquires the fee simple title to such property the lien for such taxes is merged in the larger title of the state and thereby becomes lost.

2. The county auditor is not authorized to put upon the delinquent land list property the title to which is in the state, and a tax sale made by him of such property is wholly void and confers no rights upon the purchaser against the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from you under date of May 9, 1917, with which you enclosed a communication received by you from Messrs. Hedges, Hoover & Tingley, attorneys at law, Columbus, Ohio, apparently making some claim on behalf of Mr. T. B. Miller by reason of the purchase by him of a tax title on the south half of inlot No. 152 in the village of Spencerville, Allen county, Ohio, after the property had been conveyed to the state of Ohio by Michael Connaughton and wife. The letter of the attorneys is as follows:

> "On the 11th day of February, 1913, Mr. T. B. Miller purchased the south half of inlot No. 152 in Spencerville, Allen county, Ohio, for taxes for the year 1911 and simple taxes for the year 1912; this property was purchased for the full amount of the taxes $28.35.
> "We understand from the auditor of Allen county, that this property was purchased by the state of Ohio from Michael Connaughton on July 15, 1911, and that the deed was filed and recorded April 19, 1912. As far as third persons are concerned, this transfer took effect on the 19th day of April, 1912, and for that reason the taxes for the years 1911 and 1912 are a lien on the property from the day preceding the second Monday of April. After the recording of this deed there would be no taxes, but prior to that time the taxes would be a lien.
> "We would be glad to take this matter up with you at your earliest convenience."

In your communication, after stating the facts with reference to the conveyance of this property to the state of Ohio and the transfer and record of the deed therefor, you set out the warranty clause of said deed, in part, as follows:

> "that the title so conveyed is clear, free and unincumbered and further that he will warrant and defend the same against all claim or claims of all persons whomsoever, save and except the taxes and assessments coming due and payable in December, 1911, and thereafter. Those are assumed by the grantee in addition to the consideration hereinbefore mentioned."

From the facts above stated it appears that at the time this property was conveyed to the state of Ohio, to wit, on July 15, 1911, said property was subject to the lien of the state for the undetermined taxes for the year 1911.

With respect to this question section 5671 General Code provides as follows:

> "The lien of the state for taxes levied for all purposes, in each year, shall attach to all real property subject to such taxes on the day preceding the second Monday of April, annually, and continue until such taxes, with any penalties accruing thereon, are paid."

It is obvious that this lien is none the less the lien of the state by reason of the fact that such taxes are collected by local county officials, nor of the further fact that such taxes when collected are distributable in part to local subdivisions, whether county, township, school district or municipality.

Wasteney v. Schott, 58 O. S., 410, 415.

The court in its opinion in this case says:

> "Revenues are essential to the maintenance of the state and the execution of its governmental functions. Taxation is a recognized constitutional and lawful means of raising such revenues for most, if not all public needs; and the courts will take notice that general taxes levied by the state directly, or through local agencies to which it has delegated that power, constitute a source of revenue for use in the due performance of the functions of the state government. Whether voluntarily paid, or collected by suit, they go partly to the general funds of the state for its disbursement in the administration of public affairs, and are in part disbursed in the due course of local administration by officers exercising the delegated powers of the state, deemed necessary and proper for that purpose. In the latter case, as well as the former, the fund belongs to the state's revenues, and the disbursement is for the public benefit, although local advantages may also result. Through county, township, municipal, and other organizations, they are paid out in the administration of public justice, the maintenance of the public order and security, the support of the public schools and other purposes of a public nature pertaining to the state government. Hence, for all such taxes levied on real property the lien thereon provided by statute is declared to be in favor of the state."

The lien and claim possessed by the state for the undetermined taxes on this property at the time the same was conveyed to it by Michael Connaughton and wife was an interest inferior in nature and quality to the fee simple title which it took by said conveyance, and said lien and claim were by operation of law merged and lost in said conveyance.

Reid v. State, 74 Ind., 252;
Smith v. Santa Monica, 162 Cal., 221;
Foster v. City of Duluth, 120 Minn., 484.

The lien and claim of the state on this property for the undetermined taxes for 1911 being merged and lost in the fee simple title acquired by the state by this conveyance, and no taxes having thereafter accrued against this property while the same was owned by the state, nothing was purchased by Mr. Miller which can be the subject of any claim against the state. Moreover, it appears that at the time Mr. Miller purchased this tax title not only had the title to this property vested in the state of Ohio, but also—if it be a matter of any significance here—the deed therefor had been transferred, filed and recorded.

The title to this property being in the state, the auditor thereafter had no authority to put this property upon the duplicate for taxation, and still less had he authority to put the same upon the delinquent land list, and the tax sale made by him of this property to Miller was wholly void and conferred no rights upon the purchaser.

State of Ohio v. Griftner, 61 O. S., 203, 214.

It is obvious that the conclusion above indicated is not affected by the fact that the state, in the deed delivered to it by Michael Connaughton and wife, assumed the taxes on this property payable in December, 1911, and thereafter. It is impossible to disassociate this agreement from the deed in which it is found, and inasmuch as by the delivery of the deed taxes which were then a lien upon the property were merged in the conveyance, and no taxes thereafter accrued against the property while the same was owned by the state, it follows that there was nothing upon which the agreement with respect to the assumption of such taxes could operate.

For the above reasons, I am of the opinion that Mr. Miller has no claim which you are required or authorized to adjust on behalf of the state.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

INTANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY—WHEN SAME MUST BE LISTED FOR TAXATION IN OHIO.

1. A person who moved into Ohio, intending to make a place therein his permanent home, more than six months prior to the day before the second Monday in April, 1917, must list his intangible personal property, including notes secured by mortgage in foreign real estate, in Ohio in 1917.

2. The fact that such mortgage-secured obligations are not taxable in the state wherein the real estate is located does not affect their taxability in Ohio; there was and is no provision of Ohio law, whereby, by the payment of a registration fee or otherwise, such obligation may be made exempt from taxation in Ohio against the creditor mortgagee.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. C. A. WILMOT, Prosecuting Attorney, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 25, 1917, encloses a formal request for an opinion upon the following facts:

> "Mr. M. was a resident of Michigan and owned a farm in Michigan; in August, 1916, he moved from Michigan to Geauga county, and purchased a farm in Chardon and Hambden townships in this county. The farm which he owned in Michigan was sold by Mr. M. a short time prior to August, 1916, Mr. M. receiving as part payment of the purchase price of the farm in Michigan a mortgage in the sum of thirteen thousand dollars. The laws of Michigan provide that on the filing of a mortgage for record the owner of the mortgage may pay one-half of one per cent. of the amount of the mortgage, and on the payment of the sum of one-half of one per cent. the mortgage is not subject to taxation. Mr. M. filed his mortgage and paid to the recorder the sum of sixty-five dollars, and there is endorsed on the mortgage the receipt showing the payment of the sixty-five dollars and that the mortgage is exempt from taxation in Michigan.
> "The assessor called on Mr. M. for a list of his personal property and Mr. M. exhibited to the assessor this mortgage of thirteen thousand dollars, but claimed that he should not be required to list it for taxation in Ohio. Mr. M. will not have resided in the state of Ohio one year until about the middle of August, 1917, having lived in Michigan until the middle of August, 1916.
> "The question which I desire to have your opinion on is: 'Shall this mortgage be listed for taxation in the state of Ohio before Mr. M. has resided one year in the state of Ohio?'
> "Second. 'Is there any provision of law by which Mr. M. upon the payment of a fee similar to the Michigan registration fee escape the listing of this mortgage for taxation in Ohio?' "

It is clear, of course, upon your statement that the present legal residence of the gentleman inquired about is in the state of Ohio; of course he has not acquired a voting residence in the state, but it appears that he has moved into Ohio with the intention of making a place therein his permanent home. Ohio is, therefore, his domicile of choice, and any reasonable legislation of Ohio respecting the taxation of his personal property would have to be sustained.

The Ohio legislation which covers the subject is as follows:

> "Section 5373. A person who has had his actual or habitual place of abode in this state for the larger portion of the twelve months next preceding the day before the second Monday of April in each year, shall be a resident of this state for the purpose of taxation, and the personal property which he is required by law to list shall be taxable therein, unless, on or before that day he has changed his place of abode to a place without this state with the bona fide intention of continuing actually to abide permanently without this state. The fact that a person who has so changed his actual place of abode, within six months from so doing, again abides within this state, shall be prima facia evidence that he did not intend permanently to have his actual place of abode without this state. Such person, so changing his actual place of abode and not intending permanently to continue it without this state and not having listed his property for taxation as a resident of this state, for the purpose of having his property listed for taxation within this state, shall be deemed to have resided on the day when such property should have been listed, at his last actual or habitual place of abode within this state. The fact that a person whose actual or habitual place of abode during the greater portion of such twelve months has been within this state, does not claim or exercise the right to vote at public elections within this state, shall not of itself constitute him a nonresident of this state within the meaning of this section."

It will be observed that by the provisions of this section the legislative policy of this state as embodied therein does not go so far as to tax the personal property of all persons who reside within the state on tax-listing day, but that residence therein for the larger portion of the twelve months next preceding a day bfore the second Monday of April is required in order to establish what might be called a tax domicile herein.

If Mr. M. moved into Ohio in August, 1916, he must have resided in Ohio for a period between seven and eight months next preceding the second Monday of April, 1917. Therefore he had established a residence in Ohio for the purpose of taxation and his personal property, money and credits held by him in Ohio must be listed for taxation here.

The foregoing comments constitute an answer to your first question.

Your second question may be answered by the short statement that there is no provision of law by which Mr. M., upon the payment of fees similar to the Michigan registration fee, may escape the listing of his mortgage for taxation in Ohio.

A law has been enacted and passed providing for a registration on the Michigan plan. This act did not go into effect so as to in any way influence the result of the 1917 assessment and, indeed, is not yet in effect. Moreover, it applies only to mortgages on Ohio property and does not in any way assume to exempt from taxation mortgages owned and controlled in Ohio by a resident of Ohio on property located in another state.

Of course, it will make for clearness to observe that Ohio laws do not tax "mortgages" as such at all, but rather the credit. Mr. M. is taxed because somebody owes him money.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COUNCIL OF CLEVELAND HEIGHTS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:——

IN RE: Bonds of the village of Cleveland Heights, in the sum of $12,000.00, for the purpose of improving highways leading into said village.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Cleveland Heights relative to the above bond issue, and find the same to be in accordance with the provisions of the General Code relating thereto.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that bonds of said village, properly prepared in accordance with bond form submitted, will, when signed by the proper officers, constitute valid and binding obligations of the village of Cleveland Heights.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—CONSTRUCTION OF HOUSE BILL No. 224.

1. H. B. 224 goes into effect on July 2, 1917.

2. The provision of section 1342 requiring 26 weeks of study does not necessarily mean 26 consecutive weeks.

3. The word "practical" as used in section 1342 means actual knowledge of the science of embalming gained from training or practice.

4. The board has power, within the limitations of section 1339 G. C., to pay expenses of member to investigate curriculum of the different schools, provided it can not be determined in any other manner.

5. The phrase "admittance to a high school" used in section 1342 requires evidence of elementary education as would admit to a high school.

6. It is discretionary with the state board of embalming examiners whether or not reciprocal licenses shall be issued and such license may be issued to licensed embalmers of another state whether or not said license was issued prior to the time H. B. 224 goes into effect.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. B. G. JONES, Pres. State Board of Embalming Examiners, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of April 16, 1917 as follows:

"The last general assembly passed a new law regulating the practice of embalming in this state, and as it will be the duty of this board to place this law in operation, we respectfully ask your construction upon the following question, to wit:

"1. When does this law go into effect?

"2. Regarding the requirement that the applicant has to complete 26 weeks of study, can the board construe this 26 weeks to be consecutive or not?

"3. Regarding the word "practical" under the head of two years of practical experience, we would like your construction upon this word.

"4. Has this board the power to pay the expenses of a member to investigate the curriculum of the different schools? this we believe should be done in order that we may be sure that these schools are complying with the law.

"5. We would like your construction regarding what you would construe under the title 'admittance to a high school.'

"6. Should our board, under the reciprocal clause, issue a license to embalmers of other states, whose requirements are the equal of ours, who secured their licenses previous to the enactment of this present law?"

Your first question inquires when this law goes into effect. This law was passed March 21, 1917, and filed in the office of the secretary of state April 3, 1917.

Section 1-c of article II of the constitution provides, in part, as follows:

"* * * No law passed by the general assembly shall go into effect until ninety days after it shall have been filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state. * * *"

Under the above provision of the constitution this law goes into effect ninety days from April 3, 1917. Therefore, I advise you, in answer to your first question, that this law goes into effect July 2, 1917.

Your second question is as follows:

"Regarding the requirement that the applicant has to complete 26 weeks of study, can the board construe this 26 weeks to be consecutive or not?"

Section 1342 G. C. as amended by the last general assembly, provides:

"Every person desiring to engage in the practice of embalming or the preparation of the dead for burial, cremation or transportation, in the state of Ohio, shall make a written application to the state board of embalming examiners for registration, giving such information as the said board may, by regulation, require for such registration. Each application must be accompanied by a fee of one dollar with the certificates of three reputable citizens (one of whom shall be a licensed embalmer), that the proposed applicant is of good moral character and stating his age and general education which shall be such as to entitle him or her to admittance to high school. If the said board shall find the facts set forth in the application to be true, the said board shall issue to said applicant a certificate of registration. Before a registered applicant can apply for and take an examination in the practice of embalming or preparing for burial, cremation or transportation, the body of any dead person in the state of Ohio, said applicant shall have completed to the satisfaction and approval of the said board a course consisting of at least twenty-six weeks of studies in the science of embalming, disinfection and sanitation in a regular school of embalming, recognized by said board or shall have had at least two years of practical experience under a licensed embalmer in this state, during which time he or she shall have embalmed (arterially) at least twenty-five dead adult human bodies. All applications for a license to practice embalming and the preparation of the dead for burial, cremation or transportation in this state, must be made to the state board of embalming examiners in writing and contain the name, age, residence and the person or persons with whom employed, the name of the school attended together with a certificate from two reputable citizens that the applicant is of legal age and of good moral character, also a certificate under oath when required by the said board from the president or dean of the embalming school or college he or she has attended, that the applicant has complied with the requirements of said school or college or a certificate under oath, when required by said board, from the licensed embalmer under whom he or she has worked as an apprentice, that he or she has worked as an apprentice, that he or she has complied with the requirements of apprenticeship as set forth in this section. Each application must be accompanied by a fee of ten dollars and the certificate of registration. If after the state board of embalming examiners are satisfied that the applicant has qualified as set forth in this section, the said board shall cause the said applicant to appear before them and be examined in the subjects as set forth in the preceding section, and he must pass said examination with an average grade of not less than seventy-five per cent."

The above quoted section of the General Code simply provides for a course consisting of at least 26 weeks of study, etc. This section does not provide that the 26 weeks shall be consecutive, and there is nothing in the section to indicate that it was the intention of the legislature that the 26-week period therein should be construed to be consecutive. Under this provision of section 1342 it is necessary only for the board to satisfy itself that the applicant has studied the required branches of the science of embalming for a period of time covering 26 weeks, regardless of whether or not the said 26 weeks are consecutive. If this rule were otherwise, it would in many instances work a hardship upon a student; for example, a student starts his course, and before he has completed the same, he may have to give it up because of sickness or other reason. I do not think that it was the intention of the legislature that upon the removal of the disability he should be required to start his course anew. It would under these circumstances be only reasonable and fair to the student that he be given credit for the work he has completed, and that he be permitted to take up his course at the point where he left off, and which would not and could not be the case if this provision of the statute were interpreted to mean 26 consecutive weeks.

The statute being silent on this point, I advise that your board cannot construe this provision of section 1342 to mean 26 consecutive weeks.

Your third question is as follows:

"Regarding the word 'practical' under the head of two years of practical experience, we would like your construction upon this word."

The above quoted section of the statute provides that an applicant shall either take a course in the science of embalming in a school or "shall have had at least two years of practical experience under a licensed embalmer in this state, during which time he or she shall have embalmed (arterially) at least twenty-five dead adult human bodies. The legislature in this section not only provided that such applicant should have a certain amount of practical experience, but in the same sentence set forth what this practical experience should, in part, consist of, to wit: arterially embalming dead human bodies.

Now the only conclusion that can be drawn from the above quotation from section 1342 G. C. is that the legislature meant by practical experience that the applicant should actually engage in the work of embalming human bodies under the direction of a licensed embalmer. This view is strengthened by another clause in the same section which provides that the board may require a certificate under oath from a licensed embalmer under whom he, or she, worked as an apprentice, that he, or she, complied with the requirements of this section. This part of the section clears up all doubt as to the meaning of the word "practical," as used herein. It can have no other meaning than that applicant should have two years of experience in the science of embalming human bodies.

I, therefore, advise you, in answer to your third question, that the word "practical" as used in this section means actual knowledge of the science of embalming gained from training or practice.

Your fourth question is as follows:

> "Has the board the power to pay the expenses of a member to investigate the curriculum of the different schools; this we believe should be done in order that we may be sure that these schools are complying with the law."

Section 1342 G. C. provides in part as follows:

> "* * * said applicant shall have completed * * * a course * * * in the science of embalming, disinfection and sanitation in a regular school of embalming, recognized by said board."

This section of the above statute, above quoted makes no mention of what shall be recognized by the board, nor does it point out the standard required for these schools before they can be recognized by the board as provided in said section. The statute being silent on these points, there is only one conclusion at which we may arrive, and that is, the board must ascertain for itself the schools that are teaching a course in the science of embalming that would fit a graduate therefrom to perform the duties that will be required of him in actual practice in a proper manner, and that the school teaches the branches of the science of embalmimg required by this section of the statute.

The board must further determine the method of arriving at these conclusions.

Section 1339 G. C. provides that the members of said board shall receive "their reasonable and necessary traveling expenses while discharging the actual duties of their office."

If in the opinion of the board it is impracticable to determine the fitness of an embalming school by other means than by a personal examination of the same, then your board has the right to make such inspection. If, however, it is possible for the board to determine the qualification of these various schools from other evidence than a personal examination, it would be the duty of the board to use such evidence in determining whether or not such schools should be recognized. For instance many of these schools publish a catalogue showing the courses taught, the number of hours such subjects are taught a week, the number of professors and associate professors, etc., teaching at said school. In many instances an examination of these catalogues might satisfy the board as to the qualifications and standing of such schools. There are probably other ways for your board to determine whether or not these schools are up to the standard, without making a personal examination. However, it is a question of fact for your board to determine whether it is necessary to make a personal examination of these schools, or whether an examination of other evidence before the board is sufficient to enable you to pass upon the fitness of said school.

Therefore, I advise you that in cases where the board finds that it is absolutely necessary to make a personal examination to determine the qualifications of said school, the expenses incurred in such investigation may be paid under section 1339, I might, however, in this connection call your attention to another provision of section 1339, viz:

"The salaries and expenses incurred by the board and the members thereof in the discharge of their duties shall be paid by the state auditor on vouchers countersigned by the secretary-treasurer, and the state of Ohio shall not be liable for same or be at any expense in this connection beyond the amount received as fees."

Your fifth question is as follows:

"We would like your construction regarding what you would construe under the title 'admittance to a high school.' "

Section 7655-7 G. C. provides as follows:

"After September 1st, 1915, the holder of a certificate of graduation from any one room rural school of the first grade or from any consolidated rural school which has been recognized shall be entitled to admission to any high school without examination. Graduates of any elementary school shall be admitted to any high school without examination on the certificate of the district superintendent."

This is the only section of the General Code that provides for the admission of pupils from elementary schools to high schools. In other cases, admission of pupils from elementary schools to high schools is fixed by rules of the various boards of education. The general rule for admission of pupils from elementary schools to high, however, seems to be that any pupil who has successfully completed the entire course of a first grade elementary school is entitled to admission to high school.

Therefore, I advise you, in answer to your fifth question, that any applicant for examination must forward to the board of embalming examiners evidences of such elementary education as would, under the above quoted section of the statute, admit him to a high school; or evidence that he has successfully completed the course of any first grade elementary school or its equivalent.

Your sixth question is as follows:

"Should our board, under the reciprocal clause, issue a license to embalmers of other states, whose requirements are the equal of ours, who secured their licenses previous to the enactment of the present law?"

Section 1343-1 G. C., provides as follows:

"The state board of embalming examiners may grant without examination an embalmer's license to a duly licensed embalmer of another state, who shall have been examined by a regular board of embalming examiners on substantially the same subjects and requirements demanded by the board of this state, and shall have obtained an average grade of not less than seventy-five per cent in such examination. Such license shall be known as a reciprocal license, applications for which shall be made on a form containing a certified statement from the board which granted the original license in the other state, stating the grade and result of examination. Each applicant for a reciprocal license shall pay a license fee of twenty-five dollars, which shall accompany the application for such license. Such reciprocal license shall be renewed annually upon payment of a renewal fee of one dollar as provided above."

This section does not make it the duty of your board to issue licenses without examination to embalmers of other states who are within the provisions of this section. The section is not mandatory; it is directory only. It provides that "the state board of embalming examiners may grant without examination * * * ." It does not state that the board shall grant a license to such embalmers, but leaves it to the discretion of the board.

The question of whether or not an applicant receives his license from a board of embalming examiners of another state previous to the time this act takes effect has nothing whatever to do with granting a reciprocal license by your board. The law does not say that said applicant for reciprocal license must have been licensed previous to the time this law goes into effect.

Therefore, I advise you, in answer to your sixth question, that it is discretionary with your board whether or not you shall issue such reciprocal license, and that you may issue such a license to a licensed embalmer of another state who has successfully passed an examination, as provided in this section regardless of whether or not said license was issued prior to the time this law goes into effect.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF HIGHWAY—UNLAWFUL TO INSERT IN SPECIFICATIONS ALTERNATE PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE HAULING OF MATERIALS.

It would not be legal, either under the law as it now is, or as it will be from and after June 28, 1917, to insert in specifications and plans, or in a contract for the construction of a highway, alternative provisions, one providing that the material should be hauled by team and wagon, and the other that it should be hauled by truck.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. D. M. CUPP, Prosecuting Attorney, Delaware, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 27, 1917, in which you submit certain questions for my opinion. Your communication reads as follows:

"1. Would a provision in the specifications for the improvement of a county road by the county commissioners providing for alternative bids, one for team hauling, and the other for truck hauling, of the material necessary for such road improvement, be valid?

"2. Can the county commissioners insert in a contract for the improvement of a county road a provision that the material necessary for such improvement be team hauled and thus prohibit the use of a truck or other kind of vehicle for that purpose?"

In your communication you submit two different questions, which naturally resolve themselves into one, for I am of the opinion that the county commissioners could not validly include such a provision as you suggest, in a contract in a case in which the plans, profiles, estimates and specifications do not include such a provision. If a contractor bids for the construction of a certain highway, and plans, etc., under which he bids, specify nothing as to the manner in which the material for the construction is to be hauled, and he is awarded the contract under his bid, the county commissioners could not legally specify in the contract that the material be hauled in some particular way, for the reason that such a provision might radically modify the price at which the contractor could complete the work, due to his particular kind of equipment for hauling material; and, vice versa, if it is legal to place such a provision in the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates, then it would be legal to place it in the contract entered into between the county commissioners and the contractor.

So your questions resolve themselves into this:

> Can the county commissioners provide alternative plans, profiles, specifications and estimates, one specifying that the material for the construction of a road shall be hauled by truck, and another that the said material shall be hauled by wagons and teams?

The law as it now stands says nothing whatever as to alternative plans, profiles, etc., for the construction of highways; but section 6911 of the act which becomes effective on June 28, 1917, provides for alternative plans, profiles, etc., which section reads as follows:

> "Section 6911. * * * The county commissioners may order the county surveyor to make alternate surveys, plans, profiles, cross-sections, estimates and specifications, providing therein for different widths of roadway, different materials or other similar variations, and approve all or any number of such alternate surveys, plans, profiles, cross-sections, estimates and specifications. The county surveyor may, without instructions from the county commissioners, prepare alternate surveys, plans, profiles, cross-sections, estimates and specifications, providing therein for different widths of roadway, different materials, or other similar variations. * * * ."

From a reading of this section it is quite evident that there is no provision made for alternate plans, etc., along the lines suggested in your communication. The provisions apply merely to different kinds of material, different widths of road, etc.; that is, something which pertains directly to the work itself, and not in reference to something that is entirely collateral to the work.

But I do not feel that your question needs necessarily to be decided as to whether alternate plans, profiles, etc., may be provided for, or not. Let us look into the general plan and scope of the law in reference to the matter of plans and specifications and bidding on and letting of contracts.

Section 6911 G. C. provides that the county commissioners shall determine:

> "* * * the route and termini of such road, the kind and extent of the improvement, and at the same time shall order the county surveyor to make such surveys, plats, profiles, cross-sections, estimates, and specifications as may be required for such improvement, * * *"; that is, his plans and specifications are to be made in reference to the improvement itself, and not in reference to matters collateral thereto.

Section 6945 G. C. provides that the contract shall be awarded to the lowest and best bidder. The parties who pay for a road have a right to demand that the contract shall be let to the lowest and at the same time the best bidder.

If the county commissioners were permitted to go outside of the construction of the highway to matters merely collateral thereto, they might make such provisions that the work could not be done at nearly as low a figure as it otherwise could be done, and this would be indirectly violating the provisions of this section. Further, I believe it would be a dangerous proposition to hold that the county commissioners could have inserted in the plans all kinds of matters that are collateral to the work itself. It would open up a field upon which it would be dangerous to enter.

So that under the law as it now is, I am of the opinion that it would not be legal to embody in the plans and specifications such a provision as suggested in your communication, and under the law as it will be after June 28, 1917, the statute itself seems to preclude such alternative provisions as you suggest.

Therefore, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that it would not be legal for the county commissioners to have inserted, either in the plans and specifications or in the contract for the improvement of county roads, alternative provisions, one providing that the material for the construction of the road should be hauled by team, and the other providing that it be hauled by truck.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—NOT LIABLE FOR DAMAGES ARISING FOR WANT OF PROPER OBSTRUCTION WHEN HIGHWAY CLOSED.

Under the provisions of section 1225 General Code the county commissioners are not liable for damages arising from the fact that proper obstructions were not erected and proper notices were not posted to warn the public that a highway is closed to travel.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CALVIN D. SPITLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to certain matters, which communication reads as follows:

> "In the month of October, 1915, a part of the Portland road in Seneca county was being macadamized and improved under the authority of the state highway commission, which had let the contract to Knepper, Burr and Jeakle for macadamizing the same and to rebuild a certain bridge thereon.
> "The traveled portion of the highway was open and while there was a sign which extended approximately half way across the road, yet in the darkness it was difficult to see. The bridge had been taken out and the planks therefrom piled in the highway.
> "F. A. Vickery in the darkness of the evening drove his automobile past the sign without seeing it and over the pile of planks. There was no light or other signal near the obstruction to give him warning of the danger.
> "Soon thereafter he filed a claim for damages with the board of county commissioners of Seneca county, Ohio, asking them to pay to him the sum of $23.00 which he claims it cost him to have his machine repaired.

"This morning I was asked for my opinion as to whether the commissioners can pay this bill. I am of the opinion that they cannot, inasmuch as it seems to me that there was no negligence on the part of the county commissioners. I have advised the commissioners that the contractors were primarily liable because of their negligence; but they are in bankruptcy and the claimant does not want to file his claim against their estate.

"After looking at the provisions of section 1208 of the General Code, I am of the opinion that no suit can be brought against the state of Ohio, and that the only way in which the claimant can proceed against the state is to go before the legislature. This he does not want to do on account of the small amount involved.

"Will you be good enough to advise me whether or not in your opinion the county commissioners are liable for this claim? I realize that the amount involved is small, yet the principle established may be far reaching."

The answer to your question I think will be found in sections 1225 and 1208 of the General Code.

Section 1225 G. C. provides as follows:

"The state highway commissioner shall, if he deems it advisable, close a highway or a section thereof which is being constructed, improved or repaired under this act, in order to permit a proper completion of such work. * * * The contractor or other person acting under authority of said highway commissioner or engineer, shall thereupon close the same to the public by erecting suitable obstructions, and posting conspicuous notices to the effect that the highway is closed. * * *"

Further on in this section we find the following language:

"* * * When a road is so closed the state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer shall cause to be erected suitable signs or barricades warning the public that the highway or a part thereof is closed to traffic, and the temporary routes to be used shall be conspicuously marked by proper signs at all proper road crossings and forks. The state highway commissioner shall have full power and authority to open to traffic at any time any portion of the highway closed as heretofore provided."

It will be seen from the provisions just quoted that the state highway commissioner has complete authority over the matter of closing roads being improved to public travel. Also has full authority to erect suitable obstructions and to post conspicuous notices to the effect that the highway is closed.

While the county commissioners, in said section, are given authority to erect temporary highways to be used by the traveling public in lieu of the closed highway, yet they are given no authority or duty whatever in reference to the matter of obstructions to be placed and notices posted to warn the public that the highway is closed.

From the provisions of this section I think we are safe in drawing the conclusion that the county commissioners would not be liable for any accident which occurred because of defective obstructions or defective notices. Having eliminated the county commissioners in the matter of liability, the next question arising is as to whether the state of Ohio might be held provided the state highway commissioner or those acting under him did not comply with the law in reference to the matters under consideration.

As you state in your communication, the state cannot be sued. So the only remedy open to Mr. Vickery is the general assembly.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—HAS JURISDICTION OVER CHILD WHEN IT HAS BEEN COMMITTED TO BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES.

Where a minor child is committed to the juvenile court to the board of state charities, the said court continues to have jurisdiction over said child for the purposes of discipline and protection.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 26, 1917, you ask my opinion upon the following proposition:

> "A part of section 1352-3 of the General Code, enacted in 1915, provides that when a minor child is committed by the juvenile court to the board of state charities, 'the board shall thereupon, ipso facto, become vested with the sole and exclusive guardianship of such child.'
> "Does the general provision of section 1643, notwithstanding the language of section 1352-3, permit the committing judge to recall the child previously committed to the board of state charities, unless it be with the consent of the board of state charities?"

The first section of the General Code referred to in your communication, to wit, 1352-3, provides as follows:

> "The board of state charities shall when able to do so, receive as its wards such dependent or neglected minors as may be committed to it by the juvenile court. County, district, or semi-public children's homes or any institution entitled to receive children from the juvenile court may, with the consent of the board, transfer to it the guardianship of minor wards of such institutions. If such children have been committed to such institutions by the juvenile court that court must first consent to such transfer.
> "The board shall thereupon ipso facto become vested with the sole and exclusive guardianship of such child or children. The board shall, by its visitors, seek out suitable permanent homes in private families for such wards; in each case making in advance a careful investigation of the character and fitness of such home for the purpose. Such children may then be placed in such investigated homes upon trial, or upon such contract as the board may deem to be for the best interests of the child, or proceedings may be had, as provided by law, for the adoption of the child by suitable persons. The board shall retain the guardianship of a child so placed upon trial or contract during its minority, and may at any time, if it deems it for the best interest of the child, cancel such contract and remove the child from such home. The board, by its visitors, shall visit at least twice a year all the homes in which children have been placed by it. Children for whom on account of some physical or mental defect it is impracticable to find good, free homes, may be so placed by the board upon agreement to pay reasonable board therefor not to exceed $3.50 per week, which shall be paid out of funds appropriated to the use of the board by the general assembly. When necessary any children so committed or transferred to the board may be maintained by it in a suitable place until a proper home is found."

"So far as practicable children shall be placed in homes of the same religious belief as that held by their parents."

General Code section 1643 provides:

"When a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attain the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attains such age."

In the first section above quoted, the guardianship is placed, under the conditions therein mentioned, in the board of state charities, but in the second section above quoted the child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection a ward of the court. That is to say, while the board of state charities has the control and custody of the child and stands, so to speak, in the place of the parent, yet such guardianship and custody is limited to the continuing jurisdiction of the juvenile court for the purposes of discipline and protection.

General Code section 1643, above quoted, was construed in the case of children's home of Marion county, et al. v. Fetters, et al., 90 O. S. 110, in which case habeas corpus was asked to gain the custody of a child which the juvenile court had placed with said children's home. The court on page 127 held:

"The legislature in the exercise of its police power, in order to protect children and to remove them from evil influences, has established the juvenile court. When proceedings are regularly had in that court and there is a finding that the child is delinquent, it becomes a ward of the court. In the interest of the child and in the interest of society the court can commit its custody to strangers or to an institution for its moral training and education over the objection of the parents. * * * It is in the power of that court, if it deem it advisable, to restore the child to its parents. But there is no authority for any other court to interfere in an independent proceeding, with the custody of the child thus entrusted by law to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court."

The language above quoted from General Code section 1352-3, and especially that part which gives the board of state charities the sole and exclusive guardianship of such child or children, is very similar to the language of General Code section 3093, which reads in part as follows:

"All inmates of such home (children's home) who by reason of abandonment, neglect or dependence have been admitted, or should have been by the parent or guardian voluntarily surrendered to the trustees, shall be under the sole and exclusive guardianship and control of the trustees during their stay in such home * * *."

The last above mentioned section was construed in opinion No. 969 of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, found on page 754 of the annual reports of the attorney-general for 1914, volume 1, in which he used the following language:

> "It is apparent that although under section 3093 the trustees of the children's home are given the 'sole and exclusive guardianship' of the children admitted to the home by reason of neglect or dependence, there is a continuing jurisdiction vested in the juvenile court, which such court retains 'for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection' until the child attains the age of twenty-one years. The words 'sole and exclusive guardianship' in section 3093 are limited in their meaning by these other sections of the Code, which plainly indicate that the protecting arm of the juvenile court remains about the child until it has attained the age of twenty-one years."

What, therefore, applies to the trustees of children's homes in relation to the sole and exclusive guardianship of the children in the custody of such trustees would also apply to the board of state charities when it becomes vested with the sole and exclusive guardianship of children; and following the reasoning of both my predecessor and of the court in the case above mentioned, I advise you that section 1643 G. C., above quoted, does permit a continuing jurisdiction by the juvenile court over a child which is committed to the board of state charities and without the consent of such board.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SURETY COMPANY—LIABLE WHEN TIME FOR COMPLETION OF CONTRACT EXTENDED—WHERE IT AGREES THAT A CHANGE IN TERMS OF CONTRACT SHALL NOT AFFECT ITS OBLIGATION.

Where a surety company agrees that no changes in the terms of the contract shall in any wise affect the obligation of said surety on its bond, the time in which the contract was to have been completed may be extended without releasing the surety from its obligation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 5, 1917, in which you ask my opinion about a certain matter therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "I am attaching hereto for examination by you copy of contract between this department and Richard Conway for the improvement of section "D" of the Wauseon-Napoleon road, I. C. H. No. 296, in Henry county. A copy of the bond given by Mr. Conway with the Illinois Surety Company, as surety, is also attached to the contract.
> "As you know, the Illinois Surety Company has been in the hands of a receiver for some time and this department is, of course, holding estimates due Mr. Conway for work on the above improvement until the consent of the surety can be obtained to an extension of time on this work.
> The retention of these estimates by this department is seemingly working a hardship on Mr. Conway and he has made application to us for the release of same. Mr. Conway claims that he cannot proceed with his work until an estimate is given him by this department.

For your information, Hon. Edward C. Turner, when attorney-general, rendered an opinion under date of September 30. 1915, being opinion No. 876 found at page 1887 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for that year, which opinion deals with the question of extension of time for the completion of work covered by our contracts.

"Mr. Conway has stated to this department that he has been in communication with the receiver for the Illinois Surety Company, or his representative, and that since the company is in the hands of a receiver, it cannot consent to an extension of time and there is no person authorized to act for it in the premises.

"Our best information from our division engineer and other sources is that Mr. Conway will be able to complete this job if granted an extension and allowed his estimates.

"With reference to the following statement in Mr. Turner's opinion:

" 'Whether or not the bondsmen or surety company could be held where there has been an extension of time without first obtaining their consent, would depend upon the facts of each particular case,'

"I beg to direct your attention to the following provision of the bond submitted by Mr. Conway:

" 'And the said surety hereby stipulates and agrees that no changes, extensions, alterations, deductions or additions, in or to the terms of the said contract, or in or to the plans and specifications accompanying the same shall in any wise affect the obligation of said surety on its bond.'

"In view of the expressed stipulations by the surety in the contract bond as quoted above to the effect that no changes, extensions, etc., in or to the terms of the contract shall affect the obligation of the surety on its bond, and in view of the further fact, as appears, that the surety company is in the hands of a receiver, and that no one is authorized to act for it in a matter of this kind, and either consent to an extension of time or refuse the same, I respectfully request your opinion as to whether this is one of the cases where an extension of time would not release the surety and as to whether, in view of the above, I may lawfully grant Mr. Conway an extension of time for the completion of his contract.

"If this request can have your earliest possible attention, it will be appreciated by this department and those who are interested in the early completion of the contract."

Inasmuch as your question arises as well from an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, as from anything else, I desire to note the opinion rendred by Mr. Turner, found in Opinions of Attorney-General, 1915, volume II, page 1884. Mr Turner found in the syllabus of said opinion as follows:

"In no case should an extension of time be allowed without securing from the bondsmen of the contractor a written agreement consenting to the extension."

Of course, if this were exactly what Mr. Turner found in his opinion it would be impossible for me to find that you could extend the time for the completion of the contract by Mr. Conway unless I saw fit to overrule Mr. Turner; but I find, on page 1887, the following reasoning:

"It should be the uniform practice of your department to grant no extensions of time without the written consent of the bondsmen or surety company. This will avoid many complications which would be bound to follow any other course."

With this language and with this principle I heartily concur, and I feel that the uniform practice should be as suggested therein.

But Mr. Turner further sets forth the following principle:

"Whether or not the bondsmen or surety company could be held where there has been an extension of time without first obtaining their consent, would depend upon the facts of each particular case."

That is, of course, the facts which would have to do with this matter would be found mainly in the bond. So let us, with the finding of Mr. Turner in mind, note what the provisions of the bond are in reference to the liability of the surety company. It contains the following provision:

"And the said surety hereby stipulates and agrees that no changes, extensions, alterations, deductions or additions, in or to the terms of the said contract, or in or to the plans and specifications accompanying the same shall in any wise affect the obligation of said surety on its bond."

There could hardly be stronger language used than that which is used in the bond as to the liability of the surety company under the circumstances therein set out.

It is true the matter of time is generally considered to be of the essence of the contract. Yet it is not one of the most vital elements of a contract, especially in reference to a contract of the nature of the one under consiseration. So, that, when the surety company stipulates that no changes in the terms of the contract shall in any wise affect the obligation of said surety on its bond, I feel that the said surety company could not take advantage of the fact that the time for the completion of the contract has been extended.

With this principle of law in mind, let us consider the facts in this case: You suggest that the Illinois Surety Company is in the hands of a receiver, and therefore its ability to perform the obligations of its contract is very uncertain. Further, you state it is your opinion that Mr. Conway will be able to complete the work according to his contract, provided the time for the completion of the same is extended and he be given the estimates now due and the estimates as they become due.

So that when we consider the law in this case and the facts in connection with the law, it is my opinion that you have authority to extend the time for the completion of the contract, if you should deem this best under all the circumstances, and that by so doing you would not release the surety company from its obligation.

In rendering this opinion, I am not in any way overruling the opinion rendered by my predecessor, as I feel that he set out in said opinion a most salutary rule for your department to follow, but under all the facts and circumstances as found in this case and the law which would apply to the same, I am of the opinion as hereinbefore set out. Of course, you will from time to time retain fifteen per cent. as is provided for by law.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 7, 1917, enclosing a final resolution in reference to the construction of a certain highway in Hancock county, as follows:

> "Hancock county—Sec. 'b-1' Findlay-Kenton road, Pct. No. 2428, I. C. H. No. 221 (also duplicate)."

I have examined this resolution carefully and find the same correct in form and legal and am therefore returning it to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CONTRACT—FOR FEEDING PRISONERS IN COUNTY JAIL—CHARGED WITH VIOLATION OF CITY ORDINANCE—SHOULD BE MADE WITH COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

County commissioners are the proper parties to make the arrangements with the proper city authorities for the keeping and feeding of prisoners committed to the county jail, pending a hearing before the proper city officials, in those cases in which the prisoners are charged with a violation of a city ordinance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of April 5, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to certain matters set out therein. Your communication reads as follows:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Have the county commissioners legal authority under the provisions of section 2850 and section 2997, General Code, to make a contract with the proper authorities of a city for the feeding of city prisoners in the county jail, confined there pending hearing in the municipal court, or is it necessary for the city authorities to make such contract with the sheriff direct?"

Your communication has to do only with those cases in which the accused is charged with the violation of city ordinances. But in answering your question it will be well to keep in mind that there are two classes of offenses which may come before the proper magistrates of a city, namely, those cases in which the accused is charged with the violation of a state law, and those cases in which the accused is charged with the violation of a city ordinance.

The first class of cases comes before the magistrate for a preliminary examination, merely for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether the accused should be bound over, or whether he should be released. In this class of cases the magistrate has no jurisdiction to hear the matter, except in those cases in which the statutes so provide. But in the matter of violation of ordinances, the magistrate sits as a court and has jurisdiction to hear and determine.

Your communication has to do with only those cases in which the accused is charged with the violation of city ordinances. But in answering your question, I desire to note an opinion rendered by Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, having to do with the class of cases in which the accused is charged with the violation of a state law. This opinion was rendered by Mr. Hogan on January 15, 1912, and is found in Vol.I, p. 135 of the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1912. The question submitted to Mr. Hogan for his opinion read as follows:

> "Should the city reimburse the county for amount paid to sheriff for keeping prisoners in jail in cases wherein the defendant has been committed to the county jail from the mayor's court (there being no police court) for violation of state laws? If defendants in state cases are remanded to the county jail, pending a trial before the mayor's court, should the city or the county pay for maintenance?"

Mr. Hogan, in answering the question submitted to him, found as follows, as set out in the syllabus:

> "The city is not liable to reimburse the county for money paid for keeping prisoners in jail in cases wherein defendants have been committed to jail from a mayor's court for violation of state laws.
>
> "The county should pay for the maintenance of prisoners confined in the county jail pending a trial before a mayor's court for an offense committed or charged in violation of a state law."

On p. 139 Mr. Hogan uses the following language:

> "Both the city and the county are important factors in the government of the state. The city has jurisdiction of local affairs while the county has more general duties and performs more of the functions of the state.
> "The statutes do not charge the city with liability for keeping prisoners in the county jail who have been charged or convicted of offenses in violation of state laws. The county, as the representative of the state, pays for the keeping of these prisoners in the first instance, and without statutory authority the county cannot place the liability therefor upon the city.
> "The city, therefore, is not liable to reimburse the county for money paid for keeping prisoners in jail in cases wherein defendants have been committed to jail from a mayor's court for violation of state laws.
> "The county should pay for the maintenance of persons confined in the county jail pending a trial before a mayor's court for an offense committed or charged in violation of a state law."

From this opinion we see that Mr. Hogan arrived at the conclusion that the same principles must apply whether the accused is committed to the county jail after a conviction, or whether he is committed to the county jail pending a trial or examination before the magistrate. In this finding I believe Mr. Hogan is correct.

Coming now directly to your question, I am of the opinion that the same principle should apply to it, namely, that whatever arrangements should be made for the care of persons convicted of a violation of a city ordinance and committed to the county jail, must be made in cases where the accused is committed to the county jail, pending a hearing before the magistrate. There can be no reason given why such a conclusion should not be reached, and it is the natural inference to be deduced from the statutes, as hereinafter set out. With this principle in mind, let us proceed to note what the statutes provide in reference to the matter under consideration.

Sections 4564 and 4565 G. C. read as follows:

> "Section 4564. Imprisonment under the ordinances of a municipal corporation shall be in the workhouse or other jail thereof, if the corporation is provided with such workhouse or a jail. Any corporation not provided with a workhouse, or other jail, shall be allowed, for the purpose of imprisonment, the use of the jail of the county, at the expense of the corporation, until it is provided with a prison, house of correction, or workhouse. Persons so imprisoned in the county jail shall be under the charge of the sheriff of the county, who shall receive and hold such persons in the manner prescribed by the ordinances of the corporation, until discharged by due course of law."
> "Section 4565. The county commissioners, at their discretion, on giving ninety days' written notice to the council of any corporation, may prohibit the use of the county jail for the purpose authorized in this chapter."

The language used in section 4564 G. C., to wit:

> "Any corporation not provided with a workhouse or other jail shall be allowed, for the purpose of imprisonment, the use of the jail of the county," would apply to committing the accused to the county jail, pending a hearing, as well as committing him to the county jail after he had been found guilty before the magistrate.

These sections clearly show also that the question, as to whether the municipality shall have the right to continue the committing of prisoners to the county jail, rests with the county commissioners, for they can compel a discontinuance at any time by giving a ninety day written notice to the council of the municipality. Thus we see that this matter of committing city prisoners to the county jail concerns the city on the one hand and the county commissioners on the other.

The next thing to consider is this: Who takes charge of the prisoners when they are committed to the county jail by the proper city magistrate?

Section 3157 G. C. provides:

> "The sheriff shall have charge of the jail of the county and all persons confined there, keep them safely, attend to the jail, and govern and regulate it according to the rules and regulations prescribed by the court of common pleas."

Thus we see that the county commissioners give their consent, either tacit or otherwise, to the municipality, to commit prisoners to the county jail, but when they are so committed it becomes the duty of the sheriff to take charge and have custody of the prisoners confined therein. No other person or official has any business or concern with the prisoners in jail.

The question now arises as to how the sheriff is to be compensated for keeping and feeding the prisoners so committed to jail by the proper magistrates of the city. This is provided for in section 2997 G. C., which reads in part as follows:

> "Section 2997. In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law. * * *"

Section 2850 G. C. also provides:

"The sheriff shall be allowed by the county commissioners not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail, * * *."

It is quite evident that persons committed to jail, pending a hearing before the proper official of the city, are persons in jail, and that they would come under the provisions of section 2850 G. C.

Let us recapitulate:

1. The county commissioners have it within their power either to permit the city to commit its prisoners to the county jail, or not, just as the county commissioners see fit to do.

2. After the prisoners are committed to the county jail the sheriff has complete care and custody of said prisoners in jail, which would include their keeping and feeding.

3. The county commissioners must make an allowance to the sheriff of not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for each prisoner for keeping and feeding the same.

4. Hence, if the county commissioners permit the municipal authorities to commit their prisoners to the county jail and thus compel the sheriff to take custody of the same and to keep and feed them, they are under obligation to pay the sheriff, for their keeping, the amount which they have allowed him under the provisions of section 2850 for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail.

From all the above, what is the answer to your question? There is but one answer and that is, the county commissioners are the proper parties to enter into the contract with the proper city authorities for the care and keeping of the prisoners, and not the sheriff. The sheriff has nothing whatever to do with the contract of the city officials.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that any arrangements entered into for the keeping and feeding of prisoners committed to the county jail, pending a hearing before the proper city official, in which the prisoner is charged with the violation of a city ordinance, must be entered into between the county commissioners and the proper city authority, and not between the sheriff and such city authority.

In passing I might call attention to sections 4125 and 4126 G. C. which might at first sight seem to be in conflict with the above opinion, but the provisions of said sections have to do with municipal prisons or station houses and not with county jails.

I desire also to make a suggestion in reference to a case reported in volume 15 N. P. Rep. (N. S.) 505, styled The State of Ohio ex rel. Frank F. Gentsch v. A. J. Hirstius. There is language used in the opinion rendered in this case which might seem to be in conflict with the opinion rendered herein. We might infer from the language used in said cause that the contract ought to be entered into between the city and the sheriff, rather than between the city and the county commissioners; but this language is purely obiter and is not at all called for in the matter decided by the court. The court used this language due to the fact that it was talking of federal prisoners and city prisoners confined in jail, and applied the same language to city priosners that it applied to federal prisoners.

The court was construing section 3179 G. C., which provides for the committing of federal prisoners to the custody of the sheriff. This section specifically provides that the sheriff shall receive certain compensation and that the prisoners shall be supported at the expense of the United States. The language of this section evidently implies that the contract for the care and support of the federal prisoners is to be entered into between the United States government on one side and the sheriff of the county on the other, since the provision of said section 3179 is as follows:

> "No greater compensation shall be charged by a sheriff for the subsistence of such prisoner, than is authorized by law to be charged for the subsistence of state prisoners."

Section 3179 has nothing to do with city prisoners. Neither is there any provision in the statute for the sustenance of city prisoners, other than those set out in the opinion rendered herein.

Hence, from the above I do not feel that the opinion rendered herein by me should be controlled by the obiter dicta used in said above styled cause, but that it should be based rather upon the provisions of the statutes as above set forth.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX COMMISSION—METHOD TO BE FOLLOWED BY SAID COMMISSION FOR THE PURPOSE OF APPORTIONING WHOLE VALUE OF RAILROAD AMONG DIFFERENT TAXING DISTRICTS OF STATE.

For the purpose of apportioning among different taxing districts in this state the whole value of a railroad in this state, as determined by the tax commission of Ohio, the commission must proceed as follows:

1. The value of all real estate not used in daily running operations, as assessed for taxation by the local authorities, must be deducted (in the case of an interstate railroad this should be done before the apportionment between states.)

2. The commission should separately ascertain the value of all real estate other than main track, roadbed and power houses, all structures and all stationary personal property of the company, and also separately ascertain the value of the rolling stock, main track, roadbed, power houses, poles, wires, supplies, moneys and credits of the company. Of these two classes of property, the former must be localized in the taxing districts where such property is situated, and the values as so localized must be equalized by the commission. The latter value is to be apportioned in the proportion that the length of the road in each taxing district bears to the entire length of the road in the state.

In determining such values for the purpose of apportionment, the commission is not bound by the assessments of any local officers; but the commission is bound by such assessments for the purpose of making deductions of the value of the real estate not used in operation.

Whether the value of terminal facilities is to be localized or apportioned on the mileage basis, depends upon whether such terminal facilities constitute "roadbed" or not. All ground covered by tracks and actually used for trackage purposes constitutes such roadbed. Structures other than those upon which tracks actually rest do not constitute roadbed and must be localized.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of May 22, 1917, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "Under the provisions of sections 5429 and 5430 of the General Code is it the duty of the commission to apportion the value of the roadbed, stations and real estate necessary to the daily running operations of a railroad to each county and to each taxing district therein in like proportion that the length of the road in such county bears to the entire length thereof in all the counties and to each city, village and district or part thereof therein, or should the commission determine the true value in money of such real estate in each county and taxing district and place such value in the taxing district in which the real estate is situated regardless of the length of the road in such district?"

The sections of the General Code to which you refer are in part as follows:

"Section 5429. The commission shall ascertain all of the personal property, roadbed, stations, power houses, poles, wires, water and wood stations and real estate necessary to the daily running operations of the road, moneys and credits of each railroad company and each suburban or interurban railroad company, having any line, or road, or part thereof in this state and the undivided profits, reserved or contingent fund of the company, whether in moneys, credits, or in any manner invested, and the actual value thereof in money, and also locomotives, motors and cars not belonging to the company, but hired for its use or run under its control on its road by a sleeping car company or other company. * * *"

"Section 5430. The value of such property, moneys and credits of each of such street, suburban and interurban railroad and railroad companies, as found and determined by the commission, shall be apportioned by the commission among the several counties through which the road, or any part thereof, runs, so that to each county and to each taxing district therein, shall be apportioned such part thereof as will equalize the relative value of the real estate, structures and stationary personal property of such company therein, in proportion to the whole value of the real estate, structures and stationary personal property of the company in this state; and so that the rolling stock, main track, roadbed, power houses, poles, wires, supplies, moneys and credits of the company shall be apportioned in like proportion that the length of the road in such county, bears to the entire length thereof in all the counties, and to such city, village and district or part thereof therein."

Section 5445 G. C. should also be considered in this connection. It provides as follows:

"Section 5445. When a street, suburban or interurban railroad or railroad company has part of its road in this state and part thereof in another state or states, the commission shall take the entire value of such property, moneys and credits of such public utility so found and determined, in accordance with the provisions of this act, and divide it in the proportion the length of the road in this state bears to the whole length thereof, and determine the principal sum for the value of the road in this state accordingly, equalizing the relative value thereof in this state."

The catalogue of sections applicable to the subject at hand would not be complete without referring to the fact that section 5422 G. C., which is lengthy and which prescribes the form of the report or statement to be made annually by each public utility, including railroad companies, itself sets forth certain information applicable solely to railroad companies and street, suburban and interurban railroad companies

(see paragraph 13), and without quoting sections 5423 and 5424 G. C., which immediately follow the section last above referred to. They are as follows:

> "Section 5423. On the second Monday of June of each year, the commission shall ascertain and assess, at its true value in money, all the property in this state of each such public utility, subject to the provisions of this act, other than express, telegraph and telephone companies.
> "Section 5424. In determining the value of the property of each such public utility to be assessed and taxed within the state, the commission shall be guided by the value of the property as determined by the information contained in the sworn statement made by the public utility to the commission and such other evidence and rules as will enable it to arrive at the true value in money of the entire property of such public utility within this state, in the proportion which the value of such property bears to the value of the entire property of such public utility."

It is necessary also to call attention to section 5428 G. C., which is as follows:

> "Section 5428. The commission shall deduct from the total value of the property of each of such public utilities in this state, as assessed by it, the value of the real property owned by such public utilities, if any there be, as otherwise assessed for taxation in this state, and shall justly and equitably equalize the relative values thereof."

It is clear that sections 5423, 5424 and 5428 G. C. apply to railroad companies. As a matter of legislative history, however, these sections and those immediately preceding them were first incorporated in the statute law of Ohio by the so-called Langdon law of 1910 (101 O. L. 399). Prior to that time the assessment of railroad property had been committed to boards of county auditors, and was governed by sections of the Revised Statutes, and for a time the General Code, similar in purport to sections 5429 et seq.

The first or new group of sections to which I have referred, has been many times described as the application, on the part of the legislature, to the assessment of public utility property generally, of the principles of what was known as the "Nichols law," originally applicable to express, telegraph and telephone companies, the controlling idea of which was to authorize and require the valuation of the properties of such public utilities as going concerns, by what was described as the "unit rule."

The old railroad statutes on the other hand, did not at least perfectly embody the unit rule, but required a partial distributive valuation of railroad property to be made; that is to say, the property of a railroad was to be valued by classes. All personal property, including certain things, all the real estate, all the moneys and credits, all the locomotives and rolling stock, etc., were to be valued; but there was no authority to value the railroad as a whole.

The exact meaning of the statutes in their present form, for the purposes of your question, must be arrived at by determining just how these two original inconsistent schemes of legislation were fitted together in the legislation of 1910 and that of 1911 which revised the former. An exhaustive discussion of this theme would consume too much space. Suffice it to say that my opinion is that sections 5423 and 5424 G. C., as applicable to railroads, require that the initial determination of the tax commission be with respect to the value of the entire road or property as a unit and as a going concern; but that under section 5429 G. C. the commission is also required to place separate values upon the different classes of property therein mentioned.

The question thus arises as to what was the purpose of the general assembly in retaining substantially so much of the old law applicable to railroad companiesas is now found in section 5429 G. C., in the face of the application of the unit rule to the valuation of property of such companies. The answer to this question is, I think, found in section 5430 G. C. and succeeding sections, including section 5445. These sections require that certain subsidiary valuations be apportioned among taxing districts and as between the state and other states, in proportion to the length of the road; whereas other subordinate values are not to be distributed on the mileage basis, but are to be assigned to the several taxing districts in which the property they represent has its natural taxable situs and the valuations so assigned are to be equalized by the commission.

The foregoing interpretation of the sections read together is the only one which will give proper effect to each of them. It is true that such interpretation gives to present section 5429 G. C. an effect different from that which language almost identical with that at present found in it had in sections 2772 et seq. R. S., later sections 5423 et seq. G. C. Nevertheless, I am satisfied that my conclusion is correct for the two following reasons:

1. Present section 5429 G. C. is not word for word the same as section 2772 R. S. That section required the board of county auditors to > "proceed to ascertain all the personal property which shall be held to include roadbed, water and wood stations" etc.

Present section 5429 G. C. omits the language underscored in the above quotation. This difference is very material. Formerly, all that a railroad had and used in operation constituted its personal property, moneys and credits. This was the qualified or imperfect unit rule to which I have referred. Now, however, the unit rule is brought about by the clearer and more positive provisions of sections 5423 et seq., above quoted. And so it was not only not necessary to have the above underscored language in the statutes any longer, but it would have been redundant to leave it there.

Hence, when the substance of section 2772 R. S. was put into the Langdon law of 1910, this language was left out because what are now sections 5423 et seq. G. C. had been put in; and by leaving the underscored language out of what is now section 5429 G. C., the legislature clearly manifested an intent different from that which was embodied in original section 2772 R. S. The difference is obviously this: Section 2772 R. S. with the language which has been quoted in it describes the procedure of the only valuation or valuations of railroad property which were authorized and required to be made; section 5429 G. C. with the underscored language of section 2772 R. S. left out, and with sections 5423 et seq. G. C. incorporated into the statutes in pari materia, no longer refer to the only assessment of railroad property nor even to the initial and primary determination to be made by the tax commission with resepct thereto.

Inasmuch as section 5430 G. C. manifestly requires certain apportionments to be made on the basis of the distributive values arrived at under section 5429 G. C., the only purpose which can be assigned to section 5429 G. C. in its present form, its original purpose having been thus changed, is that the distributive valuations, which it requires to be made, shall be for the purpose of apportionment and for no other purpose.

2. To hold any other way would be to bring section 5429 G. C. into sharp conflict with all that precedes it; whereas, to hold as above indicated brings all the sections into harmonious relations with each other and makes the scheme of valuation and apportionment of railroad property, for the purpose of taxation, though somewhat complicated, at least consistent and workable as an entirety.

It is not necessary to pursue this subject further. It is enough to repeat the conclusion already expressed, namely, that under section 5424 G. C. the tax commission must first determine the unit value of a railroad in this state as a going concern; that under section 5429 G. C. it must at the same time divide up this unit value, after deducting the value of real estate not used in operation, into values representing certain classes of property, and that under section 5430 G. C. the real estate, structures and stationary personal property of the company, exclusive of main track, roadbed and power houses (if any), are to be localized in the taxing districts in which they belong and their value equalized with that of similar property elsewhere, and the rolling stock, main track, roadbed, power houses (if any), supplies, moneys and credits are to be apportioned in proportion to track mileage.

In this connection my attention is called to one inaccuracy in the commission's statement of its question. In referring to the property to be apportioned on the mileage basis, you speak of it as:

> "The roadbed, stations and real estate necessary to the daily running operations of a railroad."

Section 5430 G. C. on its face does not justify this reference, as it requires all real estate, excepting roadbed and all structures, including stations, whether necessary to the daily running operations of the road or not, to be localized along with "stationary personal property," and extends the mileage rule of apportionment only to "rolling stock, main track, roadbed, etc."

It is my opinion that the commission is in error if it has been assumed that stations and other real estate necessary to the daily running operations of a railroad, other than its roadbed, main track, power houses, poles and wires, are subject to apportionment among taxing districts on the mileage basis. I find no decisions under original sections 5429 and 5430 G. C. which would be in point for this purpose and which militate against the conclusion which I have reached.

The reasoning of the court in Railway v. Hynicka, 4 N. P. (N. S.) 345; 77 O. S. 628, is in accord with it. The question there was whether a bridge spanning the Ohio river was to be regarded as a "structure" and "localized," or as a part of the "main track" or "roadbed" and "averaged." The court held that the bridge was a part of the roadbed.

It is true that for the purpose of apportionment as between states, in the case of an interstate railroad, under present section 5445 G. C., all property used in operation is to be distributed on the mileage basis, except insofar as the implied limitation on the taxing power of the state, which prohibits the taxing of property having a situs beyond its territorial jurisdiction, may restrain the operation of the statute. But the apportionment among taxing districts is upon a different basis, as above stated.

With this exception I am ready to answer your question as follows:

It is the duty of the commission, under the sections considered, to apportion the value of the roadbed, main track, including all side tracks and terminal tracks as such (Railway v. Hynicka, supra), together with the movable personal property, rolling stock, moneys and credits, to each county and each taxing district therein, through which the line of the road runs, in like proportion that the length of the road therein bears to the entire length thereof in the state; and it is the duty of the commission to determine the true value in money of all real estate other than that above specified, including stations, land and buildings necessary to the daily running operations of the railroad; and to appraise the value of each tract of real estate and each such structure, together with the value of stationary personal property, in the taxing district in which it is found or situated, regardless of the length of the road in such district, equalizing, however, the value so assigned with the value of other such property of the railroad and of other railroads and public utilities in the other taxing districts in the state.

This conclusion is arrived at without thus far considering section 5428 G. C., which has been quoted. This section was not a part of the scheme of things embodied in the old Revised Statutes. As I have pointed out, all real estate necessary to the daily running operations of the railroad were under those laws to be considered as "personal property." Property owned by but not used in the daily running operations of a railroad company was therefore not considered personal property and hence not subject to assessment by the board of county auditors under the old law. Therefore, the imperfection of the old statute, considered as an attempt to approximate the unit rule. But under sections 5423 and 5424 G. C., which do clearly require the unit rule as to railroad property, it necessarily follows that the initial determination of the commission will include the value of all the property of the company, which, as its assets, is reflected in its earning power, or in its capitalization or in any other criterion of the value of the whole as a unit.

Therefore, the commission in the first instance values more property than the county auditors under the old statute could value, viz.: property not used in the daily running operations. This property of course is "otherwise assessed for taxation" because under section 5429 G. C., requiring specific valuations by the commission, the commission is limited to the valuation of such real estate as is "necessary to the daily running operations of the road."

In other words, to say that under section 5429 G. C. the unit value for the state, arrived at by the commission, under section 5424 G. C., must be subdivided, would be an inaccuracy of expression; for in point of fact before the determinations required by section 5429 G. C. are made, the deductions required by section 5428 G. C. must be made. That is to say, the first thing for the commission to do, after it has determined the unit value of the property of the railroad in the state, is to deduct from that value the assessed value of any real estate owned by the company, but not necessary to the daily running operations of a road, justly and equitably equalizing the value so deducted. It is the remainder that is to be subdivided into parts in accordance with section 5429 G. C.

Another way of stating the same thing is to say that by virtue of section 5429 G. C. the commission is to make the controlling assessment of all property necessary to the daily running operations of the road, whether real or personal. If local taxing authorities have assessed such property, there is no doubt that the commission may, for purposes of convenience and in the spirit of co-operation, ratify such assessments and adopt them as their own for the purposes of sections 5429 and 5430; but the commission is not bound by such assessments, but only bound by local assessments of property not used in the daily running operations of the road.

In point of fact I am sure that a careful historical study of the statutes involved would show that real estate used in the daily running operations of a railroad was never intended to be subject to local appraisement at all. The statutes in their present form, however, leave doubt as to this and I do not care to go further than to hold that whether or not local taxing officers have the power to appraise real estate used in the daily running operations of a railroad, in the first instance, such appraisement is not binding upon the tax commission.

In this connection I note that my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, in an opinion to Hon. Henry W. Charrington, prosecuting attorney at Gallipolis, Ohio, rendered February 28, 1916, and found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, volume I, page 351, held in effect that section 5428 G. C. makes it the duty of the tax commission to deduct from the total value of the property of any public utility the value of the real property owned by the public utility and assessed for taxation by the local authorities. He did not expressly pass upon the question as to whether the valuations of the local authorities are binding upon the commission, as to real estate used in the operation, although it is rather clear from his statement that in his opinion a negative answer should be given to this question.

The opinion which I have expressed is in apparent but not real conflict with that of Mr. Turner. Mr. Turner was considering the case of a public utility other than a railroad, viz., a gas company. As to such public utilities, there is no provision like that of section 5429 G. C., which applies exclusively to suburban and interurban railroad companies and railroad companies. In short, as to other public utilities, the commission is not required or authorized to make any separate appraisement of real property used in operation, though under section 5422 G. C. the value of that used in operation is to be furnished to the commission for its convenience in making its initial determination. But under section 5429 G. C., as to the classes of utilities therein enumerated, the commission is expressly authorized to do precisely what in this respect the old board of auditors was required to do (though, as we have seen, for a different purpose), namely, to determine the value of the real estate used in daily operations.

It follows that section 5428 G. C. may, and possibly does, have a different effect as applied to a public utility other than a suburban or interurban railroad company or railroad company, than that which it may have with respect to public utilities other than those enumerated. In the one case I am of the opinion, as hereinbefore stated, that it requires and authorizes the deduction at the assessed value of the real estate not used in operation only. In the other case Mr. Turner held—and I am not prepared to disagree with him—that it requires the deduction from the unit value of all the real estate, whether used in operation or not, as assessed for taxation by the local authorities. The difference in the application of section 5428 G. C. arises as has been seen, because of the provisions of section 5429 G. C.

In connection with your question you mention the fact that certain real estate, which you characterize as "terminal facilities," is alleged by certain county auditors and other local authorities to be worth much more than the sum which the commission has heretofore determined to be its proper valuation; yet the commission finds in the cases of the railroads involved that as a whole they are not greatly more valuable than they heretofore have been. If the commission, therefore, is obliged to accept a local assessment of such terminal facilities, or is obliged to assess them at what the commission may in candor be satisfied to be their true value in money, and localize such assessments in the taxing district where the facilities are located, the result necessarily would be that the remainder of the unit value attributable to movables, moneys and credits and roadbed, and which is subject to apportionment elsewhere in the state, on the track mileage basis, will be correspondingly less; so that the commission can not increase the value of the terminals, if that value must be localized, without either putting a false value on the road as a whole, or decreasing the value apportioned to the taxing districts through which the main line runs.

It is conceivable that a case may arise or may have arisen in which, because of the peculiar requirements of the law and exceptional developments of fact, the commission may actually have, in the discharge of its duty, to reduce the per mile apportionment of some railroads. Such a result would not show that the law had been improperly administered and would not in point of fact work any injustice to any one, however disagreeable it may be to be obliged to reduce the tax valuation of any given taxing district. In fact the law, as I interpret it, may require such a result in a conceivable case.

However, the commission is advised:

That terminal facilities used in daily running operations are to be valued by the commission, and that the determinations of local officers are not binding on the commission; that land and structures purchased with a view to converting them into terminal facilities, but not actually used for that purpose, are subject to local assessment, and the value thereof, as so appraised, must be deducted by the commission from the unit value of the road under section 5428 G. C.

The commission is therefore advised that as to "terminal facilities" used in daily running operations, the value thereof as determined by the commission may enter into the aggregate sum which is to be apportioned on the track mileage basis, if such "terminal facilities" represent a part of the "roadbed." The roadbed of a railroad may be defined for this purpose as any land actually covered by its tracks, whether main tracks, side tracks or terminal tracks, including enough land on the sides thereof as may be reasonably necessary for normal right of way purposes (Railway v. Hynicka, supra.) This is true whether the tracks are actually located on the ground or are placed upon some structure such as a bridge or a pier or dock.

All other "terminal facilities" such as warehouses, docks not covered with tracks, ground used for storage purposes, &c., though subject to valuation by the commission, must, when valued and equalized, be assigned, as to such valuation, to the taxing district in which they are located, and may not be distributed over the route of the railroad on the mileage basis.

The commission is further advised that the valuation placed by the commission upon terminal facilities, which on the principles above laid down must be localized in the taxing district, must be equalized with the valuation of other real property, structures and stationary personal property of the railroad in other counties and taxing districts, and with similar property of other railroads elsewhere in the state.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX COMMISSION—MUST VALUE REAL PROPERTY OF A RAILROAD USED IN ITS DAILY RUNNING OPERATIONS—COUNTY AUDITOR HAS NO AUTHORITY TO MAKE SUCH VALUATION—DEDUCTIONS UNDER SECTION 5429 INCLUDE ANY REAL ESTATE NOT USED IN OPERATION.

A county auditor, acting under section 5548 G. C., has no authority to value the real estate of a railroad, used in its daily running operations. The tax commission, acting under section 5429 G. C., must assess such property. The deductions required by section 5428 G. C., as applied to railroads, include only real estate not used in operation. The commission may enlist the aid of local taxing authorities in discharging its duty under section 5429 G. C., but it must make the final assessment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 12, 1917, supplementing your earlier letter of May 22, 1917, and requesting my opinion as follows:

> "If a county auditor proceeds under the provisions of section 5548 et. seq. to assess the real estate in a subdivision or subdivisions in a county, should such assessment include the real estate and buildings of a railroad company used in its daily running operations in so far as the same is located in such subdivision or subdivisions? If so, may the railroad company complain as to such assessment to the board of revision and appeal from the decision of that board to the tax commission? In the past the practice of county auditors has not been uniform in this regard. In some counties such real estate has been assessed locally, but the value has not been placed upon the tax list except through the certificate of the tax commission issued in accordance with section 5458 of the General Code.

"If, in answer to the commission's letter of May 22, 1917, it is your opinion that its duty is to determine the true value in money of the real estate necessary to the daily running operations of a railroad and place such value in the taxing district in which the real estate is situated, regardless of the length of the road in such cases, is the commission bound to use the values placed upon such real estate by the county auditor proceeding under section 5548 et seq. (if it is your opinion that he may place values on the same), or may it determine the value regardless of the county auditor's assessment?"

These questions are, I think, in substance covered by an opinion which has already been prepared and will doubtless reach the commission before this opinion is placed in your hands. However, for the sake of clearness and because these questions were not very exhaustively discussed in the other opinion, I will restate my conclusions thereon and elaborate briefly upon my reasons therefor.

I said in the other opinion that a careful historical review of the railroad property tax appraisement sections would show that never since they had been in force had the real property assessors, locally selected, had any authority to appraise such property of a railroad company used in its daily running operations. This is true, I think, upon the short ground that section 2772 R. S., commented upon in the other opinion, made all such property "personal property" for the purpose of appraisement, and specifically imposed upon boards of county auditors the duty of valuing the same.

The duty of a real property assessor under general sections such as what is now section 5548 G. C., is limited to the appraisement of "real property," i. e., that which is "real property" for purposes of taxation. Because the property used in the daily running operations of a railroad was not real property for purpose of taxation—at least for purpose of appraisement—it was not subject to assessment or appraisement by the real estate assessors.

This state of affairs continued to be the law until the act of 1911, revising the Langdon law of 1910, was passed; for the Langdon law itself retained the phrase "which shall include" and gave rise to the very conflict and contradictions in terms commented upon in my other opinion (see section 75, 101 O. L. 418). The elimination of this no longer necessary language was one of the refinements introduced into the act by the Hollinger law of 1911. By that time, however, the tax commission had taken over the appraisement of real property of railroads, used in daily running operations, and there had been no such change in the law as would restore the jurisdiction over such property to the real property assessors; on the contrary, the state of the law, with respect to the withdrawal of this subject matter from the field of the exercise of the powers of local assessment, was continued, and all that was done was to transfer to the tax commission the specific duty, formerly imposed upon the county auditors, to value such property as a part of the "personal property" of railroads.

In 1911, and for the reasons stated in the other opinion, a change was made. No longer was real property, used in daily running operations, to be considered strictly as "personal property;" yet it specifically was required that it should be valued for taxation by the tax commission.

For two distinct reasons this change did not have the effect of restoring jurisdiction over real property used in daily running operations, to the local assessing officer. Those reasons are:

1. In this respect I think it is clear that the act of 1911 was a mere revision of that of 1910 and the object of the changes made therein was merely to make for clearness of expression and to do away with inconsistencies. Under such circumstances the familiar and well established rule is that such verbal changes are not to be regarded as having changed the substance of the law.

2. Even if there had been no legislative history behind section 5429 G. C., in its relation to sections like present section 5548 G. C., we would have this situation:

One section gives one officer power to appraise all real property. Another section, specific in its character, gives to another officer or tribunal power to appraise a particular kind of real property, i. e., that used in the daily running operations of the railroad. The maxim which governs in such cases is that the specific provision is to be regarded as an exception to the general provision.

Reading the two sections together, therefore—and this is necessary and proper, as both relate to the assessment of real estate—sections like section 5548 G. C. are to be understood as authorizing the local assessing officer to assess and value for taxation all real estate excepting that, the value of which is to be specifically determined as such by the tax commission; and by consulting section 5429 G. C., and related sections, it turns out that real estate used in the daily running operations of a railroad or an interurban or suburban railroad is to be specifically and finally valued for taxation by the commission.

As pointed out in the other opinion, it is otherwise with respect to real estate owned by railroad companies, but not used in daily running operations. The tax commission is under no duty and indeed has no power to value such real estate as such. The unit value at which it may arrive, under section 5424 G. C. and similar sections, may include, as an element thereof, so to speak, the value of such real estate not used in operation. But in arriving at the unit value the commission presumably has not valued the real estate as such, but merely the railroad as a whole. Therefore, section 5428 G. C., as applied to railroad companies, requires the deduction, at the assessed value thereof, of real estate otherwise assessed for taxation, i. e., real estate not used in the daily running operations of the railroad.

It was also pointed out in the other opinion that section 5428 G. C., as applied to public utilities other than railroads and suburban or interurban railroads, has a broader meaning because as to such other public utilities the commission is not authorized and required, as it is by section 5429 G. C., specifically to assess and value real estate as such. Therefore, the deductions to be made under section 5428 G. C. comprehend all the real estate of public utilities other than railroads and suburban or interurban railroads; but as to the latter they include only real estate not used in the daily running operations of the road.

Under section 5428 G. C. the commission is of course bound by the local appraisement, which indeed is the only one made of the real estate to which it applies as such.

Under section 5429 G.C. the local officials are bound by the commission's appraisement, which indeed is the only authorized assessment of real estate used in daily running operations, as such.

As suggested in the other opinion, there is no impropriety in the commission, under its general powers, enlisting the aid of local taxing officials, to enable it more effectually to appraise real estate used in daily running operations. Nevertheless, the result is the appraisement of the tax commission and not that of the local officers, and the commission is not bound by the opinions of such local officers with respect to such real estate.

You say that in the past the practice has varied, but I take it from your letter that in no county has any assessment finally gone upon the duplicate with respect to real estate used in the daily running operations of a railroad, except upon the certificate of the tax commission issued in accordance with section 5458 G. C. It appears, therefore, that the practice in this essential respect, while not uniform in detail, has been in accordance with the view of the law which I have expressed.

I think the foregoing statement, which indeed is, as observed, but a restatement of the conclusions more generally expressed in the other opinion, fully answers the questions in your letter of June 12, 1917.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COURT OF DOMESTIC RELATIONS—MAHONING COUNTY—JURISDICTION—RECORDS—JUVENILE COURTS—JURISDICTION—CLERK OF COMMON PLEAS COURT—MAHONING COUNTY—DUTIES IN REFERENCE TO DIVISION OF DOMESTIC RELATIONS.

The act of the general assembly of March 20, 1917, providing an additional common pleas judge for Mahoning county, who shall be disignated as a judge of the court of common pleas division of domestic relations, simply provides for an additional judge for said court in said county, and furnishes a designation of the particular part of the jurisdiction and duties to be exercised by him.

Juvenile courts have jurisdiction in a manner different from the other or general jurisdiction of the courts designated to act as such juvenile court, and are required by law to have kept by the clerk an appearance docket and journal for the business of such juvenile court alone.

The said division of domestic relations of the court of common pleas of Mahoning county, as provided in said act, is among its other duties, to constitute such juvenile court, and the clerk of the court of said county will be required to keep such appearance docket and journal for the business of such court of domestic relations coming under the head of juvenile court work, while the entries, notations, etc., of such courts, in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction as courts of common pleas will be made upon the regular dockets, journals and records of the court of common pleas.

Mothers' pension cases, so called, in Mahoning county, are before this court of common pleas, division of domestic relations and under its authority as a juvenile court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

HON. JARED P. HUXLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On May 31, 1917, you forwarded to this office a request for an opinion as follows:

> "I am enclosing to you herewith letter just received from J. Arthur Ferris, county clerk, in which he asks me to secure a ruling from you as to the duties, jurisdiction, etc., of the new court of domestic relations created for this county by the last legislature. His letter is self-explanatory as to what rulings we desire.
> "I would ask that you let us have this opinion at as early a date as possible in order that the clerk may place his order for such records and office supplies as may be necessary to handle this new work."

The letter referred to and enclosed is as follows:

> "If possible I wish that you would secure for me a ruling of the Attorney-General as to what jurisdiction and duties are conferred on the new court of domestic relations for Mahoning county as per bill of last session.
> "It is of course obvious that this court hears divorce and alimony cases and all cases affecting domestic relations that have heretofore been tried in common pleas court, but what of juvenile cases? And if they are heard in this court how are they to be taken care of by the clerk? Are they to be entered on the criminal or on a separate appearance docket? Also do the mothers' pension cases come to this court? And if so, are they to be kept separate from the other common pleas cases?
> "Briefly, if these two classes of cases are by this legislation brought to this court are they still to be kept separate and apart from other common pleas cases in the manner they are now kept in the probate court (in this county), or are they to be kept in the usual manner and form and in the same records as other common pleas cases?

"As this judge will assume his duties the first week in July it is important that we have this information at once, so that time may be had for making the necessary books and supplies. * * *"

The act of the legislature to which your inquiry relates is as follows:

(House Bill No. 532.)

"To provide for an additional judge of the court of common pleas for Mahoning county, and providing for his election as a judge of said court, division of domestic relations.

"Section 1. From and after the passage and taking effect of this act, there shall be one additional judge of the court of common pleas in and for Mahoning county, who shall reside therein. Such additional judge shall be elected in 1918, and every six years thereafter, for a term of six years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election. Until such additional judge of the court of common pleas is so elected and qualified, the governor shall fill such position by appointment. Vacancies occuring in the office of such additional judge in Mahoning county shall be filled in the manner prescribed for the filling of vacancies in the office of judge of the court of common pleas. He shall have the same qualifications, and shall receive the same compensation as is provided by law for the judges of the court of common pleas in Mahoning county. He shall exercise the same powers and have the same jurisdiction as is provided by law for judges of the court of common pleas. He and his successors shall, however, be elected and designated as a judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations. To such judge shall be assigned all juvenile court work arising under title four, chapter eight of the General Code, and all divorce and alimony cases, and cases involving the care and custody of children in said county. Whenever said judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, shall be sick, absent or unable to perform his duties, the same shall be performed by another judge of the court of common pleas of said county, assigned for said purpose, according to law."

This act provides for an additional judge of the court of common pleas in your county. No new jurisdiction or duty for the common pleas court is provided in the act; that is, nothing is therein provided but what already may be the duty of a judge of the court of common pleas. The juvenile court is provided for in section 1639 of the General Code, which in part is as follows:

"Courts of common pleas, probate courts, and insolvency courts and superior courts, where established shall have and exercise, concurrently, the powers and jurisdiction conferred in this chapter. The judges of such courts in each county, at such times as they determine, shall designate one of their number to transact the business arising under such jurisdiction. When the term of the judge so designated expires, or his office terminates, another designation shall be made in like manner.

"The words juvenile court, when used in the statutes of Ohio, shall be understood as meaning the court in which the judge so designated may be sitting while exercising such jurisdiction, and the words 'judge of the juvenile court' or 'juvenile judge' as meaning such judge while exercising such jurisdiction. * * *"

This is followed by a special provision for Hamilton county substantially the same as that provided above for Mahoning county, the only difference, after the court is organized and in operation, being that in Mahoning county the jurisdiction of the court includes "cases involving the care and custody of children in the said county," otherwise the language is borrowed from the Hamilton county act.

As to your first inquiry as to the jurisdiction and duties conferred on the new court of domestic relations, it seems to be sufficiently answered in the act itself, as it provides only for an additional judge of the court of common pleas, but instead of having the judges of the court designate one of their number to transact these particular duties, the statute itself selects and designates one particular judge, who with his successor in office, is to perform these particular duties, so that the duties to be performed by the new court of domestic relations are in no manner different from those devolving upon the court already having jurisdiction of the subjects embraced under this title.

Under the general laws including all counties except Hamilton and Mahoning other courts than the court of common pleas may be designated as juvenile courts, including the probate court, which may be so designated in the manner provided by statute, and so far as those duties are concerned they are to be performed precisely in the same manner as already done by the juvenile court. In so far as the new court of domestic relations has given it other jurisdiction than that of juvenile court, it is jurisdiction already possessed by the court of common pleas exclusively, so far as divorce and alimony are concerned, and concurrently with other courts so far as cases involving the care and custody of children are concerned. No distinction is made as to such divorce and alimony cases; they will be brought and proceeded in and determined exactly as they are now, being placed upon the same dockets, journals, records, etc., as before the organization of the new court, there being no difference whatever in that branch of the business, except that the new judge is the one who is designated to hear and determine the cases as they arise.

As to cases involving the care and custody of children, these usually arise in three ways:

1st. By habeas corpus.

2nd. In divorce and alimony cases. What has already been said as to procedure in divorce and alimony cases applies equally to cases involving the care and custody of children arising in such divorce and alimony cases and in habeas corpus cases; in one case they arise in cases already upon the docket and make no difference whatever in the modus operandi in conducting and docketing such cases or recording the proceedings of the court in reference thereto.

3rd. In juvenile court cases. These cases come up in the same form and are conducted and disposed of in the same manner in this court of domestic relations as in any other juvenile court, and in respect to such juvenile court alone is there occasion to consider the connection of the clerk of the court therewith as to such docketing and recording and as to the books to be kept by him in which entries and references to such cases are to be made.

In this respect the juvenile court has a species of identity of its own, whether its duties be devolved upon the court of common pleas, probate, insolvency or superior court, and whichever of those courts be assigned as such juvenile court they proceed in the same manner, exercising the juvenile jurisdiction as a sort of addition or adjunct to its ordinary jurisdiction. Certain books are required to be kept by the clerk of the juvenile court. Of course, when this is the court of common pleas he is the clerk of the courts of the county; when as the probate court in the ordinary counties, he is the probate judge himself, and so on. Now, as each of these courts which may be designatd as juvenile courts is required by law to keep certain designated books which are different in each case, it is apparent that something additional would be required by whichever one acts as such juvenile court; consequently we have section 1641 General Code, which is as follows:

> "The clerk of the court or the judge exercising the jurisdiction shall keep an appearance docket and a journal, in the former of which shall be entered the style of the case and a minute of each proceeding and in the latter of which shall be entered all orders, judgments and findings of the court."

The clerk of the court of common pleas is already required to keep an appearance docket. (Section 2878 General Code.) The probate court is not so required. (Section 1594 General Code.) This latter section provides twelve different records or books to be kept by the probate court and not including an appearance docket, so that the probate court when designated as a juvenile court is compelled to keep an appearance docket upon which, of course, is entered the juvenile court matters alone. The matter to be entered on the appearance docket in the juvenile court is the "style of the case and a minute of each proceeding." The present juvenile court, however, is a court of common pleas which must already keep an appearance docket. The provision as to the entry on the appearance docket is as follows: (Section 2879 General Code.)

> "The clerk shall enter upon the appearance docket at the time of the commencement of an action or proceeding, the names of the parties in full, with names of counsel, and forthwith index the case direct and reverse in the name of each plaintiff and defendant. In like manner and at the time it occurs, he shall also index the name of each person who may thereafter become a party to such action or proceeding. At the time it occurs and under the case so docketed, he shall also enter the issue of the summons or other mesne process or order and the filing of each paper, and he shall record in full the return of such writ or order with the date of its return to the court, which entry shall be evidence of such service."

It will be observed that this appearance docket requires different entries from the appearance docket in the juvenile court, that this docket provided for in section 2879 is one appropriate for use in civil actions, and not at all adapted to the peculiar and somewhat summary business of the juvenile court. It therefore appears, that as this court will be required to keep an appearance docket, such appearance docket will not be separate from that of other branches of the common pleas court in the county. There is but one common pleas court in each county, although there may be a number of judges; there is one clerk and one set of books, and that set of books will be the books of this proposed court of domestic relations, and the appearance docket will be the appearance docket of this court—that is, of the court of common pleas of which this is simply a division, and on this appearance docket will go all the divorce and alimony cases and habeas corpus cases just the same as they do at the present time, but as to the juvenile business it will be necessary for the clerk to keep a separate appearance docket, which will be used by the division of domestic relations, and by that division only in its capacity as juvenile court; also a separate journal will be kept in the same manner and for the same purpose upon which will be entered all orders, judgments and findings of the juvenile court. It will be necessary for the clerk to distinguish when this particular judge presiding in the court of domestic relations is acting under his ordinary jurisdiction as a judge of the court of common pleas and when he is acting under the statutes providing for the duties of a juvenile court. In the former case all entries will be made on the ordinary books, in the latter case upon this appearance docket and this journal.

An order touching the custody of children might be one or the other. In cases where the court of common pleas, not being a juvenile court now, makes such orders, to wit: in habeas corpus cases and in divorce and alimony cases, the entry, notations etc., will be upon the general books of the court of common pleas; but when making orders touching the care and custody of children only in the jurisdiction of his duties as a juvenile court, the entry will be upon this special appearance docket and journal.

Inquiry is made as to whether mothers' pension cases come to this court. This is plainly answered by the statutes providing for such pensions, which are found in the chapter on the juvenile court (Sections 1683-2 et seq. General Code.) It plainly appears from these sections that the juvenile court is one having cognizance of all such cases, therefore the new court of domestic relations as such juvenile court will have said jurisdiction, and entries, etc., will be in its capacity as such juvenile court and upon the same dockets and records. This seems to answer all the inquiries made by your clerk.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX MATTERS—ITEMS ALLOWED IN PROBATE JUDGES COST BILL THEREIN.

Items allowed in probate judge's cost bill in collateral inheritance tax matters.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have a communication from John W. Davis, probate judge of Mahoning county, as follows:

"I am enclosing a copy of a cost bill, as taxed against the estate of Eliza A. Bushnell, for proceedings had under the collateral inheritance tax law.

"According to the contention of the state examiner, the only item entitled to be taxed is that in line No. 14, being a charge of 25 cents, or in other words, a charge of 10 cents per 100 words for the certifying to the county auditor of the decree or order of the court as to what property is subject to the collateral inheritance tax. Therefore, the court is allowed nothing for the performance of his judicial act nor for making a journal of his order or decree, nor for the making up of his collateral inheritance record; or in other words, if the contention of the examiner is supported by your department, the probate court is allowed nothing whatever to pay his deputy clerks or stenographers for journaling his order or decree and for making up the record of proceedings.

"The state examiner has been basing his contention on his construction of circular letter from attorney-general's department dated April 8, 1914, being No. 176; also circular letter to the county auditors under date of July 16, 1914.

"Hoping to have a ruling at your earliest convenience as to whether or not we are entitled to tax fees, as in other matters, to make our office self-supporting for work done under the collateral inheritance act, or whether we are entitled to compensation only for the certifying to the auditor of the court's order or decree, * * *."

I am addressing this opinion to your department because you have indicated to me that you are very much interested in the subject matter of same and are desirous of having this department advise you just what items may be properly included in the probate judge's cost bill in collateral inheritance tax cases. Because of this latter reason I am giving attention in this opinion not only to the items taxed by the probate judge of Mahoning county on the cost bill attached to his letter, but also to all of the items set forth in such cost bill so that your department may be advised of what fees may be allowed probate judges for their services in connection with collateral inheritance tax matters.

The cost bill submitted reads as follows:

1.	Docketing cause, each	$0.10	$0.10
a.	Indexing cause in the docket, each name	.05	.05
2.	Filing (--) praecipes, pleadings, subpoenas, cost bill and other necessary documents, each	.05	.10
a.	Noting the filing of same, except subpoena and praecipe therefor, on the docket (--), each	.05	.05
3.	Taking (--) affidavits, including certificate and seal (including certifications to pleadings), each	.25	------
4.	Taking (--) undertakings or bonds, each	.25	------
5.	Issuing (--) writs, orders or notices, except subpoenas, each	.30	------
a.	Noting the issue of same on docket (--), each	.10	------
6.	Certificate of deposit on foreign writ	.10	------
7.	Certificate of opening deposition	.10	------
8.	Entering each cause on the trial or motion docket and indexing same (--) terms, each	.10	.10
9.	Issuing subpoenas, (--) names, each	.05	------
10.	Swearing (--) witnesses, each	.05	------
11.	Entering attendance of (--) witnesses, each	.10	------
12.	Certifying fees of (--) witnesses, each	.05	------
13.	Each entry (-- entries) on journal—per 100 words or fraction thereof	.10	.60
a.	Indexing same (--)	.05	.05
b.	Posting same on docket (--)	.10	.10
14.	Making (--) copies of pleadings, process, record, or files, in. certf. and seal (-- words), per 100 words	.10	.25
15.	Noting on docket (--) papers mailed, each	.05	------
16.	Writing advertisement required to be published (posted up, only 25 cents)	.37½	------
17.	Hearing and deciding each application in assignments	2.00	2.00
18.	Execution	.50	------
19.	Making complete record in cause (-- words) per 100 words	.10	1.10
a.	Indexing same, each cause	.10	------
b.	Recording plat not exceeding six lines	1.00	------
c.	For (--) additional lines, each	.10	------

20.	Receiving and disbursing money $———, a commission of one per centum on the first $1,000, $———, and one-fourth of one per centum on $———, all exceeding $1,000	-----	------
21.	Making cost bill, taxed but once	.40	.40
22.	Entering on cash book costs received in each cause	.25	.25

Sections 5340, 5343, 5345 and 5347 General Code read:

"Section 5340. Within ten days after the filing of the inventory of every such estate, any part of which may be subject to a tax under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter, the judge of the probate court, in which such inventory is filed, shall make and deliver to the county auditor of such county a copy of the inventory; or, if it can be conveniently separated, a copy of such part of the estate, with the appraisal thereof. The auditor shall certify the value of the estate, subject to taxation hereunder and the amount of taxes due therefrom, to the county treasurer, who shall collect such taxes, and thereupon place twenty-five per cent. thereof to the credit of the county expense fund, and pay seventy-five per cent. thereof into the state treasury, to the credit of the general revenue fund, at the time of making his semi-annual settlement.

"Section 5343. The value of such property, subject to said tax, shall be its actual market value as found by the probate court. If the state, through the prosecuting attorney of the proper county, or any person interested in the succession to the property, applies to the court, it shall appoint three disinterested persons, who, being first sworn, shall view and appraise such property at its actual market value for the purposes of this tax, and make return thereof to the court. The return may be accepted by the court in a like manner as the original inventory of the estate is accepted, and if so accepted, it shall be binding upon the person by whom this tax is to be paid, and upon the state. The fees of the appraisers shall be fixed by the probate judge and paid out of the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor. In case of an annuity or life estate, the value thereof shall be determined by the so called actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest.

"Section 5345. Each probate judge, at least once in six months, shall render to the county auditor a statement of the property within the jurisdiction of his court that has become subject to such tax during such period, the number and amount of such taxes as will accrue during the next six months, so far as they can be determined from the probate records, and the number and amount thereof due and unpaid. Each probate judge shall keep a separate record, in a book to be provided for that purpose, of all cases arising under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter.

"Section 5347. A final settlement of the account of an executor, administrator or trustee shall not be accepted or allowed by the probate court unless it shows, and the judge of that court finds, that all taxes imposed by the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter, upon any property or interest therein, belonging to the estate to be settled by such account, have been paid. The receipt of the county treasurer shall be the proper voucher for such payment."

On February 15, 1914, this department rendered an opinion to Hon. A. V. Donahey, auditor of state, in which it was held that the probate judge "may lawfully charge and collect from the county treasury, as provided in section 5346, the sum of ten cents per hundred words for making the copy required to be made by section 5340, but is not entitled to any fees whatever for performing the act of delivery required by the section."

ITEM-1 —DOCKETING CAUSE.

1A—INDEXING SAME.

Section 1594 G. C. provides:

> The following books shall be kept by the probate court:
> * * * * * * * * * *
> "2. An administration docket, showing the grant of letters of administration or letters testamentary, the name of the decedent, the amount of bond and names of sureties therein, and containing a minute of the time of filing each paper, and a brief note of each order or proceeding relating to the estate with reference to the journal or record in which the order or proceeding is found. * * * "

It is my view that the proceeding relative to the collateral inheritance tax is a "proceeding relating to the estate" within the meaning of the above section and that this proceeding should be docketed in the administration docket and not in a separate docket. This being so it follows that no fee can be allowed the probate judge for docketing and indexing, as included in the above item.

ITEM 2 —FILE NECESSARY DOCUMENTS.

2A—NOTING SUCH FILING EXCEPT SUBPOENAS AND PRAECIPES ON THE DOCKET.

Section 2900 G. C., above referred to, provides:

> "For filing each praecipe, pleading, subpoena, cost bill and other necessary document, five cents; for noting the filing of same, except subpoena and praecipe therefor, on the appearance docket, each, five cents."

I am not quite clear as to just what papers were filed by the probate judge in the specific cause before me, but assuming that they were papers such as return of appraisers, etc., the fee set out in the cost bill should be allowed for the filing of such papers and the noting of the filing on the docket.

ITEMS 3, 4, 5, 6, AND 7 INCLUDE THE TAKING OF AFFIDAVITS, TAKING OF UNDERTAKINGS OR BONDS, ISSUING WRITS, ORDERS OR NOTICES, EXCEPT SUBPOENAS, NOTING THE ISSUE OF SAME ON DOCKET, RECORDING RETURN OF SAME ON DOCKET, CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT ON FOREIGN WRIT AND CERTIFICATE OF OPENING DEPOSITION.

When it is necessary for the probate judge to do any of these things in connection with collateral inheritance tax matters, he may be paid the fee allowed by law therefor, the same as though the collateral inheritance tax matter was a separate and distinct proceeding.

ITEM 8—ENTERING CAUSE ON THE TRIAL OR MOTION DOCKET.

Section 1594 G. C. provides what books may be kept by the probate court and provides for the keeping of four dockets, to wit: an administration docket, and guardian's docket, a civil docket and an execution docket. There is no authority in law for the probate judge to keep a trial and motion docket and it is therefore my opinion that this item should be disallowed.

ITEMS 9 AND 10—ISSUING SUBPOENAS AND SWEARING WITNESSES.

The probate judge is entitled to these fees in collateral inheritance tax proceedings the same as in administration of estates and other matters.

ITEMS 11 AND 12—ENTERING ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES AND CERTIFYING FEES OF WITNESSES.

Section 5346 G. C. provides for the "fees of officers having duties to perform" in connection with the collateral inheritance tax law, but provides no fees for witnesses. This being the case it will be unnecessary for the probate judge to enter the attendance of witnesses or certify their fees in collateral inheritance tax cases and no fees for such services should be allowed.

ITEMS 13, 13A AND 13B—ENTRY ON JOURNAL, INDEXING SAME AND POSTING SAME ON DOCKET.

Section 2900 General Code provides:

> "for each entry on journal per hundred words or fraction thereof, ten cents; for indexing same, five cents; for posting same on appearance docket, ten cents."

ITEM 14—MAKING COPIES OF PLEADINGS, PROCESS, ETC.

Section 2901 G. C. provides:

> "for making copies of pleadings, process, records or files, including certificate and seal, ten cents per hundred words."

This section relates to probate judges' fees, the same as section 2900, when the fees of the probate judge for such service are not enumerated in sections 1601 and 1602 Section 5340 provides:

> "The judge of the probate court, in which such inventory is filed, shall make and deliver to the county auditor of such county copy of the inventory."

By authority of the section just quoted, the probate judge is entitled to receive the fees charged in this item.

ITEM 15—NOTING ON DOCKET PAPERS MAILED.

It is not necessary in collateral inheritance tax proceedings in the probate court to mail any papers, neither are there any defendants in such proceedings. Therefore there will be no occasion for this charge and the item should not be allowed.

ITEM 16—WRITING ADVERTISEMENTS REQUIRED TO BE PUBLISHED (POSTED UP ONLY 25 CENTS.)

No advertisements are required to be published in the collateral inheritance tax proceedings by the probate court, therefore this item should not be allowed.

ITEM 17—HEARING AND DECIDING EACH APPLICATION IN ASSIGNMENTS.

Section 5343 G. C. requires the probate judge to hear the application of the prosecuting attorney or other persons interested for the appointment of appraisers and to appoint the same. I can find no statute authorizing any fee to be charged by the probate judge for hearing an application or for the appointment of appraisers and therefore conclude that this item should not be allowed.

ITEM 18.—EXECUTION.

The probate court itself has nothing to do with the collection of the collateral inheritance tax and therefore item 18 should not be allowed.

ITEMS 19, 19A, 19B AND 19C. MAKING COMPLETE RECORD IN CAUSE; INDEXING EACH CAUSE; RECORDING PLAT NOT EXCEEDING SIX LINES; FOR ADDITIONAL LINES.

The only fees enumerated in this item which should be allowed are 19 and 19a, for making complete record in cause and for indexing same, each cause. Section 5345 G. C. provides:

> "Each probate judge shall keep a separate record in a book to be provided for that purpose, of all cases arising under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter."

Section 2901 G. C., heretofore referred to, provides for making complete record in each cause, ten cents per hundred words; for indexing same, each cause, ten cents.

ITEM 20.—

No authority for any charge of this kind.

ITEM 21.—MAKING COST BILL, TAXED BUT ONCE.

Inasmuch as section 5346 G. C. provides that "seventy-five per cent. of the cost of collection and other necessary and legitimate expenses incurred by the county in the collection of such taxes, shall be charged to the state," it is necessary for the probate judge to make up a separate cost bill relating to collateral inheritance tax matters, and the charge for making the cost bill in this item is, therefore, a proper one.

ITEM 22.—ENTERING ON CASH BOOK COSTS RECEIVED IN EACH CAUSE.

Section 2901 General Code provides for entering on cash book costs received in each case, 25 cents. This charge is, therefore, a proper one.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COURT CONSTABLES—THEIR RIGHTS AND DUTIES IN COUNTIES THAT HAVE BUT ONE COMMON PLEAS JUDGE.

A court of common pleas of a one-judge county cannot lawfully require a court constable to attend to the assignment of cases.

Court constables of such counties cannot be allowed "further compensation" as provided for constables who attend to the assignment of cases, in addition to their regular compensation for preserving order and discharging such other duties as the court requires.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

HON. JOHN P. BAILEY, Common Pleas Judge, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication in which you ask my official opinion covering the following statement of facts:

> "1. May the court of common pleas of a one-judge county lawfully require a court constable to attend to the assignment of cases?
> "2. If so, may such court allow such court constable further compensation, that is, compensation in addition to his allowance as court constable?"

Your inquiry deals with a construction of sections 1692 and 1693 G. C., with which sections you are thoroughly familiar, and it is therefore unnecessary to quote same herein except as the different parts are referred to from time to time.

It is provided in section 1692 G. C. that when in the opinion of the court the business of such court so requires it to be done, each court of common pleas of a county in this state may appoint one or more court constables to preserve order. It is further provided in said section that each court of common pleas, in counties where more than two common pleas judges regularly hold court at the same time, may appoint one or more constables to attend the assignment of cases, and it is further provided that each court of common pleas may require such constable or constables to discharge such other duties as the court directs, except that when the court directs the constables to call and impanel jurors, such direction shall not be made in capital cases.

At first thought it would seem as though the right of a court in directing a court constable to discharge "such other duties" would mean that if in the opinion of the court the business of such court would so require it to be done, the court might direct such constable or constables to attend the assignment of cases, but from a history of the legislation which affects said section, I question if the above conclusion could follow. Said section 1692 G. C. was originally enacted March 27, 1875, and was a part of "an act to facilitate the administration of justice," in which act it was provided that the court of common pleas had a right to appoint a bailiff who shall be under the direction of the court, "preserve order and perform such other duties as shall be required of him by the court." Said section was amended numerous times between the time of its first enactment and the date hereinafter mentioned, but each amended section contained the above quoted phrase in substantially the same form in which it was originally enacted. While the section remained in that form I have no doubt but that a court might direct a bailiff or constable in the performance of "such other duties" to attend the assignment of cases. But in 103 O. L., 417, said section was amended to read as it now stands; that is to say, the phrase "attend the assignment of cases in counties where more than two common pleas judges regularly hold court at the same time" was inserted between the phrases "to preserve order" and "and discharge such other duties as the court requires." While the same is set off in said section by commas, yet I cannot see how it can be considered to be a parenthetical expression any more than would any other language be so considered which is set off by commas, and the punctuation is used to assist in conveying the legislative intent or meaning. Such intent must be gathered from a reading of the whole section, each part of the same in connection with every other part, and if the original meaning of the section is changed by the use of certain language in the amendment or by the place where such language is used, it will be presumed that the same was so intended by the legislature when it so amended said section to read as it now does.

What, then, can the said section as amended mean? But one thing, it seems to me, and that is that whatever construction might have been given to said language as it was originally enacted, or as it stood for practically thirty years, the same now must mean that the court of common pleas, when in its opinion the business of such court so requires it to be done, may appoint one or more constables to preserve order, and in counties where more than two common pleas judges regularly hold court at the same time such court may require such constable or constables to attend the assignment of cases. I believe the effect of said amendment, last mentioned, was to limit the authority of the court in that one particular; that is to say, whatever authority the court may have had to order court constables to attend the assignment of cases under the general authority of requiring such constables to "discharge such other duties as the court requires," it is my opinion that from and after the time said section was amended in 1913, the court of common pleas could only require constables to attend the assignment of cases in those instances where more than two common pleas judges regularly hold court at the same time. To give said section any other interpretation would be to fail to give effect to the plain ordinary language used.

My opinion in this matter is in accord with the opinion of Kyle, J., rendered May 1, 1917, in the matter of a court constable for the common pleas court of Green county, Ohio, in which the following language is used:

> "From that phrase (more than two) in the section it would seem to me that constables could only be directed to attend the assignment of cases in counties where more than two common pleas judges regularly held court, and in my opinion in all counties where one or two common pleas judges regularly hold court there can be no assignment by the court directing the court constable or constables to attend the assignment of cases.
> "The reason of the statute is probably that where more than two common pleas judges hold court at the same time the duties of so assigning cases are such—in order that attorneys may not have their cases conflict in the assignment—that it may become necessary to have one or more persons to especially attend to that duty."

This conclusion also follows Opinion No. 1613 of my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, rendered May 23, 1916, and found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, page 908, in which opinion that official used the following language:

> "A judge of the court of common pleas in a county where only one judge holds court cannot legally appoint a court constable to attend the assignment of cases, and fix an additional compensation for so doing."

From the above, then, I advise you that the court of common pleas of a county in which there is only one common pleas judge cannot require the court constable to attend to the assignment of cases.

My answer to your first question being as above indicated, it follows, of course that no further compensation can be made to such court constable in addition to his allowance for his services as such.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY APPOINT WHEN WHITE-MULCAHY LAW TAKES EFFECT.

Upon the taking effect on June 28, 1917, of the White-Mulcahy law, the township trustees may, under the provisions of section 3370 G. C. of said act, appoint a township highway superintendent, and the term for which township highway superintendents were appointed under the law as it now is will cease upon the taking effect of said act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

HON. JARED P. HUXLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a matter therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "The township trustees of Green township, this county, acting under the authority given them by section 3370 of the General Code, did on January last appoint two township highway superintendents, who were appointed for one year each and have given the required bond.
> "Under house bill No. 300 an act was passed amending said section 3370, which goes into effect, as I understand, some time the latter part of this month, changing the above mentioned manner and permits the control of township roads in three different ways. The third method therein set forth provides for the appointment of 'some competent person,' which on its face means one person.
> "The township trustees now desire a determination of their status as to their retaining the two township highway superintendents so hired for one year each."

The question about which you ask arises under the provisions of section 3370 G. C. of what is known as the Cass highway law, which is now in force and effect, and the provisions of the same section, as found in the White-Mulcahy law, which will become effective on the 28th day of June, 1917. The section as it now stands reads as follows:

> "For the purposes of this act there shall be in each township not less than one nor more than four road districts, as the township trustees may determine. The district or districts shall include all the territory in such township. The trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent who shall be known as township highway superintendent and who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. Under the direction of the township trustees he shall have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair. He may be removed by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty."

The section as amended by the White-Mulcahy law, reads as follows:

> "The township trustees shall have control of the township roads of their township and shall keep the same in good repair. The township trustees may, with the approval of the county commissioners or state highway commissioner, as the case may be, maintain or repair a county road or inter-county highway or main market road within the limits of their township. In the maintenance and repair of roads the township trustees may proceed in any one of the following methods as they deem for the best interest of the public, to wit:

"1. They may designate one of their number to have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within the township, or

"2. They may divide the township into three road districts, in which event each trustee shall have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within one of such districts, or

"3. They may appoint some competent person, not a member of the board of trustees, to have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within the township which person shall be known as township highway superintendent, and shall serve at the pleasure of the township trustees. The method to be followed in each township shall be determined by the township trustees by resolution duly entered on their records."

It will be noted that under the old law the township is divided into not less than one nor more than four road districts, as the township trustees may determine, and provision is made that the trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent who shall be known as township highway superintendent and who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. Under the provisions of this section, as amended, there are three methods provided to take care of the maintenance and repair of the roads of the township, any one of which may be adopted by the township trustees. (1) one of the township trustees may have complete charge of the maintenance and repair of the roads in the whole township, or (2) the township may be divided into three road districts, and each trustee have charge of the maintenance and repair of the roads within one of such districts, or, (3) the township trustees may appoint some competent person to have charge of the maintenance and repair of the roads, who shall be known as township highway superintendent and shall serve at the pleasure of the township trustees. Hence under the old law the township highway superintendents serve until their successors are appointed and qualified, while under the new they serve at the pleasure of the township trustees. For all practical purposes there is possibly but little difference between these two provisions.

You state that under the law as it is, the township trustees of a certain township last January appointed two township highway superintendents for one year and that under the provisions of the new law they desire to follow the third method set out in said section. Your question now is as to whether the appointment of the two township highway superintendents for one year will interfere with the rights of the township trustees, upon the taking effect of the new act, to appoint one township highway superintendent for their township.

The present law does not make provision for the appointment of township highway superintendents for a definite term. But let us suppose that the township trustees had authority in law to appoint said township highway superintendents for a period of one year, what then would be their rights in and to their office on and after June 28, 1917? I am of the opinion that the same principle will control whether the township trustees decide to follow one method set out in said section 3370 or whether they decide to follow another method. Suppose the township trustees would decide that they would divide the township into three road districts and each of the three trustees take jurisdiction of the maintenance and repair of the roads within a district. What, then, would be the rights of the two persons appointed last January for the period of one year? The answer to this question will decide the question submitted by you. The mere fact that the person appointed under the new act has the same name as the person appointed under the old cannot vary the answer. The fact is that there is a completely different scheme for the maintenance and repair of highways under the new than there is provided under the old law.

The courts of our state have been uniform in holding that a person appointed to an office has no vested rights in and to the office and that the legislature may at any time modify the law so as to do away with the office and end the term of those who may have been appointed or elected to office.

In Knoup v. Piqua Bank, 1 O. S., 603, at page 616 of the opinion the court, in discussing this matter, reasons as follows:

> "There are some offices, also, which are said to be estates for a term of years, or for one year. And ministerial offices may be granted in reversion, or to commence at a future period. Some offices are even assignable by deed. But, in America, a public officer is only a public agent or trustee, and has no proprietorship, or right of property, in his office. It is true that in The State v. McCollister, 11 Ohio Rep. 50, Judge Hitchcock said, that an officer had 'a vested right' in his office, but that dictum is opposed to many and well considered authorities.
> "It is true, that an officer elected by the legislature, or the people, cannot be expelled from his office, arbitrarily, by a resolution, or act, because the constitution prescribes an impeachment, or other mode of trial for such cases, but if the office be created by the legislature, it may, in the absence of express constitutional restriction, be abolished or suspended; and yet the officer cannot claim compensation, for the loss of his office. He has no property, or individual right in it. He is but a trustee for the public; and whenever the public interest requires that the office should be abolished, or the duties of the office become unnecessary, the incumbent cannot object to the abolition of the office."

In the same volume, at page 622, in a case styled Toledo v. Bond, the court, in the opinion at page 655, reasons as follows:

> "It is true, that Judge Hitchcock, in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of The State v. McCollister, 11 Ohio R., 49, says, that the incumbent of an office 'has a vested right in his office' from which he cannot be 'ousted by direct legislation.' I do not understand the learned judge to mean anything more than that the incumbent has an existing right in the office, from which the legislature has no power to dismiss him by any direct act, or to divest him by a law prospectively adding new qualifications, for the office. If anything more than this was intended or expressed, it is clearly not law; for it is well settled in this country, that the incumbent may be deprived of an office by its abolishment, or repeal."

In State v. Wright, 7 O. S., 333, the court states in its syllabus the following principle:

> "The constitution of the state has not limited the power of the general assembly to abolish courts created by the legislature, nor its power to vacate the office of judges of such courts."

In this case it was claimed by the relator that the repealing act, in so far as it attempted to abolish the office of the judge prior to the expiration of the time for which he was elected and commissioned, is contrary to the constitution of the state, and therefore inoperative; that his office continued in being notwithstanding the repealing act; and he now seeks, by this motion, to compel the auditor of state to issue his warrant on the treasurer of state for his salary accruing subsequently to the time fixed for the taking effect of the repealing act. But the court held that the contention of the relator was not well taken and the relator was not entitled to the relief for which he prayed.

From these cases I think it is well established in Ohio that the legislature may, at any time, modify a law under which a person is appointed or elected to an office so as to defeat him in the exercise of the duties of his office for the full length of time for which he was appointed or elected. Therefore, I am of the opinion that the township trustees may at any time, after the taking effect of the White-Mulcahy law, appoint a person to act as township highway superintendent under the provisions of the new law and that the term of those appointed last January will end upon the taking effect of said law.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMMISSIONER OF SECURITIES—APPOINTMENT THEREOF CREATES NEW DEPARTMENT—TAKES OVER DUTIES OF BLUE SKY AND LOAN SHARK DEPARTMENT—STATUS OF PRESENT EMPLOYES OF SAID DEPARTMENT.

The act of March 21, 1917, providing for the appointment of a commissioner of securities, etc., creates a new state office and a new state department to which is confided the duties of the bureaus of the banking department heretofore popularly known as the "Blue Sky Department" and the "Loan Shark Department."

The present employes of the banking department who are performing the duties of the said bureaus do not become officials or employes of the new department upon its organization unless they be selected de novo for such positions under the provisions of the civil service law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

HON. PHILIP C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On May 31, 1917, the following inquiry was received from your department:

> "Will you please advise whether or not employes who are rendering services as blue sky and loan shark employes will continue their employment when the new department becomes operative under the law.
> "The employes of the blue sky department are at present known as: assistant commissioner, inspectors, expert accountant, bookkeeper, filing and license clerk, clerk-stenographer and stenographer.
> "Those in the loan shark department are known as: Chief examiner loans, inspector-examiners and stenographer.
> "The employes in the new department to be known as the securities department, which, under the law, is to take over the work of the blue sky and loan shark employes, are to be known according to the appropriation in the budget as: Commissioner, deputy commissioner, grade three bookkeeper, stenographer and filing clerk, chief examiner, examiners, grade three stenographer, examiners, license clerk and assistant examiners."

The act creating the new department mentioned by you, to be known as the "Securities Department," was passed March 21, 1917, approved by the governor on March 30th, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on March 31st, and will, therefore, become a law, unless prevented by referendums, about July 1. It creates an entirely new department, at the head of which is a state officer whose office has heretofore never been in existence.

Section 1 of the act is as follows:

> "There shall be a commissioner of securities, who shall be appointed by the governor for a term of three years."

Section 2 of the act, among other things, provides:

> "* * * Neither the commissioner of securities, nor his deputy, nor any of his employes, shall be interested directly or indirectly in any firm or corporation which is a dealer in securities * *."

Section 4 provides for the salary of the office, the bond and the oath, as follows:

> "* * * The deputy commissioner of securities shall give bond to state in the sum of ten thousand dollars. * * *"

Section 6 provides:

> "The commissioner of securities shall appoint a deputy commissioner of securities. * * *"

Section 7 makes the deputy a deputy by giving him power to represent his principal.

Section 8 provides:

> "Subject to the provisions of the legislative budget as to standardization and compensation, the commissioner of securities may employ necessary examiners, clerks, accountants and stenographers, to assist in the performance of the duties imposed upon him by law, and fix the salaries or compensation of such employes. Upon vouchers approved by the commissioner of securities, such salaries or compensation shall be paid semi-monthly by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state."

The foregoing are all the provisions bearing upon the subject of the employes of the new department. The duties of the office are provided for in section 11, as follows:

> "The commissioner of securities shall execute all the laws enacted to regulate the sale of bonds, stocks and other securities and of real estate not located in Ohio, and to prevent fraud in such sales, heretofore executed by the superintendent of banks; and shall also execute all laws enacted to regulate and license the loaning of money, without security, upon personal property, and the purchasing or making loans upon salaries or wage earnings, heretofore executed by the superintendent of banks, and shall have such other powers and duties as may be provided by law."

The balance of the act points out the manner in which the duties of the department are to be performed.

The appropriation act for the ensuing year provides for the following officers and employes for the department:

> "Commissioner,
> Deputy commissioner,

Grade three bookkeeper,
Stenographer and filing clerk,
Chief examiner,
Three examiners,
Grade three stenographer,
Two examiners,
Examiner,
License clerk."

These positions, or most of them at least, are not recognizable in the provisions for the banking department in the last appropriation act. It therefore follows that the present employes of the banking department would not by reason of their employment be continued as such employes in the new securities department. The effect of the new law is to abolish the positions, and being separated from the service without cause or fault on their part they are thereby entitled to be placed upon an eligible list for similar employment in the state departments, including, of course the new department in question, in which event if they avail themselves of such privilege they will not be different from other persons upon such eligible list, though some or all of them might be selected for such service.

Your inquiry is, therefore, answered in the negative.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TEACHER—EMPLOYED IN OHIO BY BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY NOT ACT AS AGENT IN ANOTHER STATE FOR COMPANY WHOSE SCHOOL BOOKS ARE FILED WITH SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

A teacher employed by a board of education in Ohio shall not act as a sales agent, in the state of Missouri, for any person, firm or corporation whose school books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction as provided by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1917.

HON. EUGENE WRIGHT, Prosecuting Attorney, Logan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 3, 1917, you request my opinion upon the following:

> "If an Ohio teacher should act as sales agent directly or indirectly for a person, firm or corporation whose school text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction of Ohio, as provided by law, in the state of Missouri, would the fact that his employment was in the state of Missouri work a forfeiture of his certificate to teach in the public schools of Ohio, under section 7718 General Code of Ohio?"

General Code section 7718 provides in part:

> "A * * * teacher employed by any board of education in the state shall not act as sales agent, either directly or indirectly, for any person, firm or corporation whose school text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction, as provided by law, or for school apparatus or equipment of any kind for use in the public schools of the state. A violation of this provision shall work a forfeiture of their certificate to teach in the public schools in Ohio."

The above section was unquestionably enacted to prevent fraud in the recommending or in the using of text books in the schools of this state; that is, to prevent those persons whose duty it is to use text books in the schools from having any pecuniary interest in having certain text books adopted by the various boards of education.

Section 7718 provides that when a teacher who is employed by any board of education in the state, acts whether directly or indirectly for any person, firm or corporation, whose text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction as provided by law, he shall forfeit his certificate. The section does not say that such teacher must act as such sales agent in this state, but if he is employed by a board of education in this state he shall not act as a sales agent. In principle what is the difference whether he should act within or without the state? Could he have any greater or less interest as such agent without the state than within? If acting in good faith could he be more or less loyal to his employer without than within the state? The prohibition is from acting and I can see no difference whether such employment would be without or within the state. If such teacher would teach within this state he must secure employment other than from book companies who have filed their books in this state while he is not so engaged in teaching.

I therefore advise you that if a teacher employed by any board of education in Ohio acts as sales agent for a person, firm or corporation who has filed text books in Ohio, and such teacher acts as such agent in Missouri, he will forfeit his certificate to teach in Ohio the same as though he were acting as such agent in Ohio.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CITY BOARD OF PARK COMMISSIONERS—DUTY OF SAID BOARD IN REFERENCE TO BALANCE OF FUND COLLECTED FROM PROPERTIES PURCHASED WITH FUNDS DERIVED FROM ISSUE OF BONDS.

Where a city board of park commissioners, under the provisions of section 3704 G. C. has been transferring annually to the trustees of the sinking fund the balance of the rents collected from properties purchased with funds derived from the issue of bonds, part of which bonds are still outstanding and unpaid, after deducting the cost of the maintenance and operation of such property, but recently, apparently to circumvent the provisions of this law, has employed laborers at the rate of $2.25 per day, and given them the use of such property, when it had formerly paid said laborers $2.50 per day without the use of said property, and has not collected any rents at all since such new arrangement was instituted, the said board of park commissioners as an official board is liable to the trustees of the sinking fund of said city for the amount of such rent that it has applied to the current expenses of running said parks and which was over and above the cost of maintaining and administering said property, and such amount that has been wrongfully diverted from the sinking fund should be transferred from the park fund and placed to the credit of the sinking fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication in which you submit for my opinion the following request:

"Under the provisions of section 3704 G. C. the board of park commissioners of a city of this state has been transferring annually to the trustees of the sinking fund the rents collected on properties acquired by bond issue, part of which bonds are still outstanding and unpaid. However, recently, apparently to circumvent the provisions of this law, said board of park commissioners, under resolution, have been following this practice: Laborers, who have been regularly employed at $2.50 per day by resolution of the board, are permitted to use these properties but are then paid only $2.25 per day and given the use of such property. In this manner, while the city pays a little less for the labor, the employe has the use of the property and no rents are collected.

"Question: Is the board of park commissioners liable to the sinking fund trustees in any amount under such arrangement?"

Section 3704 G. C. reads as follows:

"Money arising from the sale or lease of real estate, or a public building or from the sale of personal property, belonging to the corporation, shall be deposited in the treasury in the particular fund by which such property was acquired, or is maintained, and if there be no such fund it shall be deposited in the general fund. If the property was acquired by an issue of bonds the whole or a part of which issue is still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for, such money, after deducting therefrom the cost of maintenance and administration of the property, shall on warrant of the city auditor be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of the principal of the bond issue."

The foregoing section provides in part that if real property of a municipality is acquired by an issue of bonds, the whole or a part of which issue is still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for, any moneys received from the lease of such real estate, after deducting therefrom the cost of maintenance and administration of the property, shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of the principal of the bond issue.

It seems clear, therefore, that the object and purpose of the legislature in making such a provision was to require that after the current running expenses of maintaining and administering said property had been paid any surplus should be transferred to the sinking fund and utilized in the retirement of the bonds from the issue of which the funds were derived to purchase said property. When the purpose of such provision is considered in connection with the phraseology of said section the conclusion seems evident that such provision is mandatory in character.

Section 4057 G. C. provides in part:

"The board of park commissioners shall have the control and management of parks, park entrances, parkways, boulevards, etc."

Section 4061 G. C. provides:

"The board (of park commissioners) may employ a secretary, general superintendent, engineer, clerks and such other necessary employes for carrying into effect the purposes of its creation, and shall fix the rate of compensation and term of service of its employes."

The two foregoing sections vest in the board of park commissioners the authority to control and manage the parks, etc., of a municipality, to employ such employes as may be necessary and to fix their compensation.

I am informed through your request and through supplemental information received from you that the board of park commissioners has endeavored to fix the compensation of laborers under its employ by providing that such laborers shall receive $2.25 per day and in addition shall be permitted to reside in and use certain property owned by said municipality and acquired for park purposes but not as yet applied to that use; also that prior to this arrangement these employes had been receiving $2.50 per day. Under such procedure, then, the board of park commissioners is receiving twenty-five cents per day for the use of said premises by its employes.

It is evident that the park board has acted on the presumption that it was authorized to fix the compensation of its employes in part by providing that they might use certain premises. As the term "compensation" is ordinarily used with respect to public employes it means the amount of money said employes receive or are entitled to receive for their services and it is in this sense that the legislature uses the word "compensation" when it provides that a certain board shall be authorized to fix the compensation of its employes; and especially is this true when the statute provides that a particular board shall fix the rate of compensation. However, there are exceptional cases no doubt in which the word "compensation" might have a broader meaning and would cover matters other than the actual amount of money to be paid employes for their services. But such exceptions have no application in my opinion to the present case wherein the park board has endeavored to provide that compensation shall include not only wages or salary for services rendered, but the use of public property as well.

Sections 3698 and 3699 G. C. provide for the lease or sale of corporate property and read as follows:

> "Section 3698. Municipal corporations shall have especial power to sell or lease real estate or to sell personal property belonging to the corporation, when such real estate or personal property is not needed for any municipal purpose. Such power shall be exercised in the manner provided in this chapter."
> "Section 3699. No contract for the sale or lease of real estate shall be made unless authorized by an ordinance, approved by the votes of two-thirds of all members elected to the council, and by the board or officer having supervision or management of such real estate. When such contract is so authorized, it shall be made in writing by the board or officer having such supervision or management and only with the highest bidder, after advertisement once a week for five consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the corporation. Such board or officer may reject any or all bids and readvertise until all such real estate is sold or leased."

The last mentioned sections of the General Code authorize a municipal corporation to lease real estate that belongs to it, when such real estate is not needed for municipal purposes. It is provided, however, that no lease of real estate shall be made unless it is authorized by an ordinance of council passed by a two-thirds vote and approved by the board or officer having supervision or management of such real estate, and further, the law goes on to say that such lease shall only be made after proper advertisement with the highest bidder.

No exception is found to this general provision that the lease of real estate of a city shall be made only in the above mentioned way. Consideration does not seem to have been given by the legislature to the matter of whether the real estate is worth a great deal or very little or whether the rental to be received is large or small in providing for the procedure of a municipality in leasing same. No doubt these very stringent provisions were made to cover the leasing of all municipal real property so that there would be no favoritism shown in leasing same and the interests of the public would be protected at all times.

However, I can appreciate a situation wherein it would not be possible to comply with the provisions of the above section when the leasing of real estate is considered from a practical standpoint, since it might be possible only to lease the property for a very short time or the property might be of such a character that a person who could use same would not be in position to bid on it or to make a lease for any length of time. Hence, as a practical matter it would seem that any arrangement that might be made to lease property of such a character without following the above mentioned procedure would, in the absence of objection by a taxpayer or citizen of the municipality and if reasonable in character, be unobjectionable. However, I am not attempting in this opinion to pass on the legality of the lease of such property but have merely quoted the provisions of law with respect to the leasing of municipal real estate for the purpose of showing that the board or officer having supervision or management of same is authorized only in the manner provided by law to lease same to the highest bidder and that such provisions apply to leases of municipal property regardless of value. It is my opinion that such provisions indicate clearly that a park board would have no right to provide that part of the compensation of its employes should consist of the right to use public property not needed for park purposes.

Having arrived at such a conclusion, then, I am of the opinion that the board of park commissioners in attempting to make such an arrangement as stated in your request, would be circumventing the provisions of section 3704 which require the transfer to the sinking fund of a certain portion of the rentals of municipal real estate.

Answering your question, then, specifically, I am of the opinion that where a city board of park commissioners, under the provisions of section 3704 G. C. , has been transferring annually to the trustees of the sinking fund the balance of the rents collected from properties purchased with funds derived from the issue of bonds, part of which bonds are still outstanding and unpaid, after deducting the cost of the maintenance and operation of such property, but recently, apparently to circumvent the provisions of this law, has employed laborers at the rate of $2.25 per day and given them the use of such property when it had formerly paid said laborers $2.50 per day without the use of said property, and has not collected any rents at all since such new arrangement was instituted, the said board of park commissioners as an official board is liable to the trustees of the sinking fund of said city for the amount of such rent that it has applied to the current expenses of running said parks and which was over and above the cost of maintaining and administering said property, and such amount that has been wrongfully diverted from the sinking fund should be transferred from the park fund and placed to the credit of the sinking fund.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—NO AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER MONEY FROM ONE TOWNSHIP FUND TO ANOTHER—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS —METHOD OF PROVIDING FUNDS TO TAKE CARE OF COMPENSATION—DAMAGES—COSTS AND EXPENSES OF A ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

1. There is no provision in sections 5649-3d and 5649-3e G. C. authorizing the township trustees to transfer money from one township fund to another, the unexpended balances remaining at the end of any fiscal year reverting to the fund from which it was appropriated at the beginning of the year.

2. When the county commissioners select one of the methods set out in section 6919 G. C., for providing the funds to take care of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of a road improvement, said method must be followed exclusively and can not be taken in connection with other methods.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 5, 1917, in which you ask my opinion on the following, as therein set out:

> "1. At the beginning of the fiscal half year, can the township trustees appropriate and transfer from the general fund of the township, moneys to the road and bridge funds, under authority of sections 5649-3d and 5649-3e, without applying for such authority to the court of common pleas under sections 2296 to 2302, inclusive, of the General Code?
> "2. Can the trustees of the township donate from its funds money toward the construction of a county road being constructed under sections 6906 to 6948 inclusive, wherein the road is petitioned to be constructed and paid for under and in the manner provided by subdivision 4 of section 98 (section 6919) of the laws of Ohio, 105-106 (1914-1915), pages 600 and 601, the said road petitioned for as above specified having been granted by the county commissioners?
> "3. If your answer to question 2 herein is that the township trustees can make a donation, please advise from what fund of the township the money can be donated."

In your communication you ask for an opinion upon three different questions and I shall take them up in the order in which you set them out.

1. You ask whether the township trustees may, at the beginning of a fiscal half year, transfer money from the general fund to the road and bridge funds, under authority of sections 5649-3d and 5649-3e G. C.

Section 5649-3d G. C. reads as follows:

> "At the beginning of each fiscal half year the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a of this act shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from the moneys known to be in the treasury from the collection of taxes and all other sources of revenue, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

Section 5649-3e G. C. provides as follows:

> "Unexpended appropriations or balances of appropriations remaining over at the end of the year, and the balances remaining over at any time after a fixed charge shall have been terminated by reason of the object of the appropriation having been satisfied or abandoned, shall revert to the general fund, and shall then be subject to other authorized uses, as such board or officers may determine."

It will be noted that section 5649-3d G. C. provides that the township trustees, with certain other boards, must, at the beginning of each fiscal half year, namely, March 1 and September 1 of each year, make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided. These appropriations must be made from moneys known to be in the treasury, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof. There is no provision whatever in this section authorizing the transfer of money from one fund to another. In fact the spirit of these provisions is against such a principle.

Your communication likely arises from the language found in section 5649-3e G. C. as follows:

> "Unexpended appropriations or balances of appropriations remaining over at the end of the year, * * * shall revert to the general fund, and shall then be subject to other authorized uses, as such board or officers may determine."

especially the words "shall then be subject to other authorized uses."

This might be construed as meaning that the balances remaining in any fund at the end of a fiscal year might be used by the township trustees for any authorized use for which it might be needed, thus giving the township trustees and other boards the authority practically to transfer the unexpended balances in any one fund to any other fund.

In considering your question and the construction to be placed upon this section, I desire to note an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan. The opinion is found in Vol. I of the Report of the Attorney-General for 1912, p. 285, under date of June 22, 1912. In this opinion Mr. Hogan was considering among other things the very matter that you seem to have in mind, and in the last paragraph of the syllabus he lays down the following proposition:

> "Section 5649-3e of the General Code provides 'that balances remaining over shall revert to the general fund.' From the primary meaning of the word 'revert' and also from the fact that the general fund is treated as a thing already existing and is not defined as a new creation such language should be construed to require such balances to revert to the funds from which they were taken."

On page 294 he reasons as follows:

> "I am, therefore, of the opinion that the phrase 'shall revert to the general fund' means, in effect, 'shall revert to the funds from which they were taken; and, further, that the phrase 'and shall then be subject to other authorized uses as such board or officers may determine' means 'and they shall be subject to such other uses as are authorized to be made of such funds:' so that in order that a balance of an appropriation thus reverting may be expended for a purpose or use to which the original fund is not properly applicable, such balance must first be transferred in accordance with the law authorizing such transfers to the fund from which it is desired to make the new appropriation before being subject to expenditure in such matter."

It will be noted that Mr. Hogan held in this opinion that the unexpended balances remaining in any fund at the end of any fiscal year revert to the same fund from which it was appropriated at the beginning of the year, and that such balances must first be transferred in accordance with the law authorizing such transfers to the fund from which it is desired to make the new appropriation before being subject to expenditure in such matter. That is, Mr. Hogan held there is no provision in this section warranting the transfer of the unexpended balances from one fund to another, but such a transfer, if made at all, must be done in accordance with the law authorizing such transfers. This law, as you suggest in your communication, is found in sections 2296 to 2302 inc. G. C.

I am of the opinion that Mr. Hogan was correct in his opinion and in his reasoning, and I therefore approve the same.

Hence, answering your first question specifically, it is my opinion that there is no provision in sections 5649-2d and 5649-3e G. C. that would authorize the township trustees to transfer money from one township fund to another, whether or not the money transferred is the balance remaining unexpended at the end of any fiscal year.

2. In answering your second question, it is my opinion that there is no provision of law whereby the township trustees could donate money to assist in the construction of a highway under the conditions suggested by you. It is true section 6921 G. C. provides that the county and township may enter into an agreement whereby they may each pay such part of the cost and expense of an improvement as may be agreed upon between them. Section 7467 G. C. provides that the township trustees may contribute to the maintenance and repair of roads under the control of the county commissioners. But the provisions of neither of these sections would apply to the conditions suggested by you.

In your case there was a petition filed under the provisions of sections 6907 et seq. G. C. This department has held that a petition filed under the provisions of this act must specify which method of paying compensation, damages, costs and expenses thereof shall be used.

Section 6919 G. C. provides eight different methods of paying compensation. The petition filed in the case suggested by you, and which has been allowed by the county commissioners, specified the fourth method, which reads as follows:

"4. The county commissioners may assess against the real estate within one mile of said improvement in proportion to the benefits thereto, such part of the costs and expenses thereof as they may determine, and the balance shall be paid out of the county treasury from any funds available therefor."

With this in mind, let us note the provisions of the first part of section 6919 G. C., which reads as follows:

"The board of county commissioners shall at the time said improvement is granted, whether upon a petition or by unanimous vote of the board without a petition, determine by resolution, the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses thereof, and such compensation, damages, costs and expenses shall be apportioned and paid in the manner specified in the petition, when the board is acting upon a petition, which shall be in one of the following methods, to wit: * * * ."

This language is emphatic and certain. Not only is there no provision for such a procedure as you suggest, but the language is emphatic that one of these methods must be followed absolutely in the matter of raising the funds to provide for the payment of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of an improvement, and that the "compensation * * * shall be apportioned and paid in the manner specified in the petition, when the board is acting upon a petition, which shall be in one of the following methods."

Hence, as your county commissioners have selected the fourth method set out in section 6919 G. C., this method must be used exclusively. As it makes no provision for the township trustees assisting in providing the compensation, damages, costs and expenses, they can not donate money for this purpose.

Therefore, answering your second question specifically, when the county commissioners select one of the methods set out in section 6919 G. C. for providing the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of a road improvement, said method must be used exclusively and not in connection with some other method.

3. The answer I have given to your second question makes it unnecessary to answer the third.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMMON PLEAS JUDGE—TAKING OFFICE JANUARY 1, 1910—SALARY BASED ON CENSUS OF 1900—SALARY OF SAID JUDGE WHEN HE HOLDS OVER BEYOND EXPIRATION OF HIS TERM—FINDINGS OF EXAMINER OF BUREAU OF INSPECTION NOT CONCLUSIVE.

Under section 2232 G. C., as in force in 1909, the additional salary of a common pleas judge was computed on the basis of the federal census next preceding his assumption of the duties of his office. A judge who took office in January 1, 1910, was governed in this respect by the census of 1900. A judge who assumes to hold over after the expiration of his term under the mistaken belief that such term has been extended, is entitled to receive no more additional salary than that to which he was entitled during his regular and lawful term.

The findings of an examiner of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices are not conclusive. Money paid to a public officer under a finding of such examiner, erroneous in law, may be recovered back.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "By an act found in 100 O. L. 62, an additional common pleas judgeship for Mahoning county was created, the first term of office under which began on January 1, 1910, and the first election for which was to take place in November, 1909. Subsequently in 103 O. L. 673, this act was repealed and it was provided in the last named act that in Mahoning county, in 1916, one judge should be elected whose term should begin January 1, 1917. It seems to have been assumed that the last named act had the effect of extending the term of office created by the first named act. At any rate, a person was elected to the additional judgeship created by the first act in November, 1909, took office January 1, 1910, and served continuously until January 1, 1917, when the judge who was elected under the provisions of the second act took office.

"(1) Upon what census should the additional compensation of the above described judge be based from January 1, 1910, to December 31, 1915, inclusive?

"(2) Upon what census should such additional compensation be based from January 1, 1916, to December 31, 1916, inclusive.

"(3) An examiner of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, at a previous examination covering the period of service of the above described judge up to April 1, 1915, was of opinion that the salary should have been based upon the census of 1910; and finding that compensation had been drawn on the basis of the census of 1900, made a finding in favor of the incumbent for the difference, Mahoning county having increased in population at the 1910 census. The amount embraced in the examiner's finding was paid to the judge. If this was an error, can the same be corrected through an examination now being conducted and, if so, how?"

The original act above referred to need not be fully quoted, as its essential terms are set forth in the above statement of facts. It will be noted that the above abstract of the law seems at first blush to be violative of the spirit and intent, at least, of article 17 of the constitution, as enacted in 1905, and in force when the act was passed. This section in effect requires all regular elections for common pleas judges to be held in the even numbered years. However, the initial election provided for by the act was not a regular election and it was expressly provided by section 5 of said act that:

"The election of the successors of said additional judge shall be held at the general election on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the even numbered years immediately preceding the expiration of the term of office of said additional judge, and his successors in office, and the successors of said additional judge shall be elected for terms of six years each."

Thus it will be seen that the original act contemplated the election of the successor of the additional judge thereby created in November, 1914, the term to begin January 1, 1916, or more than thirteen months after the election.

The second act, above mentioned, provided inter alia that the times for the next election of common pleas judges in Mahoning county, and the beginning of their terms, should be as follows:

"* * * In Mahoning county, in 1916, one judge, term to begin January 1, 1917, and in 1918, one judge, term to begin February 9, 1919."

In an elaborate repealing clause, designated as section 2 of the act, many if not all of the acts of the general assembly, providing for judgeships and the election of additional judges in different judicial districts in the state, were repealed. There was an express repeal therein of the act of 1909 (see page 680.) The act contained no saving clause nor did it express any intention to extend the term of the incumbent of the position, above described. In form the whole act was an amendment of section 1532 of the General Code, save for the repealing clause above referred to. In 1914, 104 O. L., 243, the act last above described was amended, but nothing in this amendatory clause affects the question under consideration.

At the outset of my investigation of this question I may say that I am impressed with the conviction that the act of 1913 did not have the effect of extending the term of the judge in question. On the contrary, by repealing the act creating the addition a judgeship without qualification, and by providing for the election of the judge in Mahoning county whose term was not to commence until a year after the expiration of the term provided for by the original act, I think the act of 1913 abolished the position. In fact, had it not been for the schedule to section 3 of article XIV of the constitution, as amended in 1912, there would be great doubt, in my opinion, as to whether or not the de jure existence of this position was not terminated when the act of 1913 went into effect. The schedule in question provides that:

> "If the foregoing amendment shall be adopted by the electors, the judges of the courts of common pleas in office or elected thereto, prior to January 1, 1913, shall hold their offices for the term for which they were elected * * *."

Moreover, the general assembly, in 1913, was wholly without power to extend beyond six years the term of office of any common pleas judge, either expressly or by implication. That term was fixed at the time of the election of the judge by article XVII, section 2 of the constitution, and subsequently by Section 12 of Article IV of the Constitution, as amended September 3, 1912. There was a time when the general assembly might have extended beyond six years the term of office of the common pleas judge; article XVII, adopted in 1905, provided that:

> "The general assembly shall have power to so extend existing terms of office as to affect the purpose of section 1 of this article."

and section 3 of the article provided:

> "Every elective officer holding office when this amendment is adopted shall continue to hold such office for the full term for which he was elected and until his successor shall be elected and qualified, as provided by law."

So that, for the purpose of putting into effect the provisions of article XVII, terms might be extended and officers might hold over after the expiration of their terms, if not extended, until their successors were elected and qualified, in spite of the rule laid down by the supreme court in State ex rel. v. Brewster, 44 O. S., 589, and applicable generally, to the effect that the general assembly may not extend the term or tenure of an officer beyond that which is fixed in the constitution. (See State ex rel v. Pattison, 73 O. S., 305).

But this special power of the general assembly was limited to "existing terms," i. e., terms existing in 1905, and to officers "holding office when this amendment is adopted," i. e., in 1905.

The result of all these considerations is that the repeal of the act of 1909, and the simultaneous enactment of a law providing for a judgeship in Mahoning county, the first term of office of which would begin a year after the term of office provided for in the act of 1909 would otherwise have expired, did not have the effect of extending the term of office of the incumbent of the judgeship, under the act of 1909, but, on the contrary, worked an abolition of that position upon the expiration of that term, there being no similar position which would then exist and take the place of the former office; and even if it was the intention of the general assembly to perpetuate the office, as such, and not to create the one-year hiatus, which I think in point of law was created, yet that intention could not constitutionally go to the extent of extending the term of the incumbent to cover the one-year period.

If I understand your statement of facts correctly, however, this conclusion is important only to the extent of determining the character of the tenure of the judge in question during the year 1916. He seems to have held on without any appointment or re-appointment. All parties concerned acquiesced in the supposition that his term had been extended. Undoubtedly he held court and pronounced judgments and decrees, as well as received his compensation.

For the purpose of this opinion, the judge in question will be treated as a de facto officer, holding under color and claim of an extension of his original term. I do not understand that his tenure during this period is referable to any claim of title other than that his term had been extended.

As such de facto officer, having drawn the additional salary payable to a common pleas judge, I do not think he should be obliged to re-pay into the public treasury the entire compensation which he thus received for the year, although he had no legal title to the office; but if the amount which he drew was in excess of the amount payable to the incumbent of such office, had such an office existed and been properly filled, then it is clear that he should refund such excess amount, and the de facto character of his tenure would not be a defense to a demand for such a refunder.

With the way cleared of these difficulties, then, the solution to the main question is not difficult. Section 2252 of the General Code provides for the additional salary of common pleas judges and, as the same existed when the judge in question assumed the duties of his office, it provided as follows:

> "In addition to the salary allowed by the preceding section, each judge of the court of common pleas and of the superior court shall receive an annual salary equal to sixteen dollars for each one thousand population of the county in which he resided when elected or appointed, as ascertained by the federal census next preceding his assuming the duties of such office, if in a separate judicial subdivision. Such additional salary shall be paid quarterly from the treasury of the county upon the warrant of the county auditor. If he resides in a judicial subdivision comprising more than one county, such additional salary shall be paid from the treasuries of the several counties of the subdivision in proportion to such population thereof upon the warrants of the auditors of such counties. In no case shall such additional salary be less than one thousand dollars or more than three thousand dollars."

In the opinions of former attorneys-general is found elaborate discussions of the date to which a federal census is referable. The exact question as to the date of promulgation of the census of 1910 does not arise in this case. It is obvious that it did not take place before January 1, 1910, on which date the judge in question "assumed the duties of his office." The federal census "next preceding" that date was the census of 1900. Therefore, the census of 1900 is the proper basis for the computation of his additional salary at the outset of his term; and by virtue of the provisions of section 2252-2, as enacted 104 O. L., 250, together with the restrictive application of article IV, section 14 of the constitution. that census continued to be the basis of the computation of his salary, at least until the end of his regular term.

The second question requires me to consider whether the same basis of computation continued to obtain during the period of one year, the status of the judge's service during which has been discussed herein. In my opinion it did. It is true that we encounter here the difficulty of determining the legal compensation of an officer holding without any authority of law whatsoever. However, this difficulty must be solved, I think, by measuring the right of the incumbent with respect to compensation by the claim and color of title which he was asserting. As I have pointed out the incumbency of the judge must have been referable to a claim that his original term had been extended by the act of the legislature. Therefore, though I have also pointed out that it was impossible for the legislature to extend his term and that in point of fact and law the legislature did not extend his term, yet in view of all the circumstances the judge should receive such salary as he would have been entitled to receive if it had been possible for the legislature to extend his term and if his term had actually been extended.

If this period of one year was an extension of his term, then, to begin with, it must be regarded as a part of his term for the purpose of the provisions of article IV, section 14, which provides that the compensation of the judges of the court of common pleas "shall not be diminished or increased during their term of office." This limitation is not of clear application here because it might be argued that it applies to a legislative change and does not restrain the legislature from passing a prospective law providing that when a new census is promulgated, the salary of the judge, then in office, shall be automatically changed and adjusted to the newly ascertained population. But the spirit of this provision seems to have been otherwise interpreted by the legislature in providing for the additional compensation under consideration; and section 2252 of the General Code, as above quoted, makes it very clear that the promulgation of a new census during a term shall not affect the salary of the incumbent, which continues to be measured by the census promulgated "next preceding his assuming the duties of such office."

Therefore, section 2252 of the General Code, which is the sole source of such authority to pay any salary to the judge in question for the year described as may be predicated upon his de facto incumbency of the position, clearly does not authorize an increase of salary during the extension of the term, if such extension were possible.

From another point of view, the judge in question "assumed the duties of his office" but once—on January 1, 1910. When he began the year's service, now under discussion, he did not again "assume" his duties. What the legislature had in mind, in using the language employed by it in section 2252, was undoubtedly the commencement of a service under a new election or appointment and not a mere holding over under a hypothetical extension of term.

For all these reasons, then, I am of the opinion that the census of 1900 is the basis of the salary of the judge inquired about by you for both the periods of time mentioned in your first two questions.

As to your third question, I have no hesitancy in advising that the excess salary received by the judge in question, for the period of time preceding April 1, 1915, may be recovered from him. The findings of an examiner of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, in spite of their force as prima facie causes of action by virtue of section 286 and succeeding sections of the General Code, do not, in my opinion, have the effect of estoppels in case they are mistaken in point of law to the advantage of officers or third parties receiving payments of public funds. While it was held in Vindicator Printing Company v. State, 58 O. S., 362, that the doctrine denying recovery of money paid under mistake of law naturally applies when the public is the plaintiff, yet for reasons pointed out in that decision and others, it has no application here. In the first place, section 286, and succeeding sections, themselves reverse this rule; and in the second place, the rule itself does not apply to excessive fees or compensation drawn by a public officer from the public treasury, which constitute one of its exceptions.

Walker v. Dillonvale, 82 O. S., 149.

In short, through the examiner's error, the judge in question has received excessive salary to which he was not in law entitled, unless a finding of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices has some unusual force, there is nothing to restrain the bureau from making a corrected finding for a recovery and rectifying the mistake.

I am unable to conclude that these sections have such effect. The functions of the bureau are in no sense judicial and its findings do not constitute res judicata. The department does not act in a proprietary capacity and it is difficult to see how an estoppel can be built up against it.

There certainly would be no difficulty in enforcing recovery if the mistake had been one of fact instead of one of law; and inasmuch as the rule of no recovery, in case of mistake of law, does not apply for the reasons above stated, I am of the opinion that a finding for a recovery should be made against the judge in question, covering his entire term, in spite of the fact that the compensation received by him for the period of time ending on April 1, 1915, was paid in accordance with the previous erroneous finding of the bureau.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MEMBER OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY—ACCEPTANCE OF OFFICE IN SERVICE OF UNITED STATES FORFEITS OFFICE AS SUCH MEMBER OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY—ACCEPTANCE OF EMPLOYMENT IN SERVICE OF U. S. DOES NOT WORK SUCH FORFEITURE.

If a member of the general assembly should accept office either in the civil or military service of the United States, he would thereby forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly. If he accepts a mere employment either in the civil or military service of the United States, he would not forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 7, 1917, in which you ask me for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "Can a member of the legislature enter the federal service, either civil or military, without forfeiting his seat in the general assembly?"

Your communication, while very brief, is rather broad and comprehensive in its nature. You ask whether a member of the legislature can enter the federal service, either civil or military, without forfeiting his seat in the general assembly.

In considering this question we will be compelled to subdivide federal service into those positions which may be termed offices and those which are mere employments. We will have to do this by virtue of the provisions of section 4 of article II of the constitution of Ohio, as this is the section which controls in the matter about which you ask. This section reads as follows:

> "Section 4. No person holding office under the authority of the United States, or any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in, the general assembly; but this provision shall not extend to township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public, or officers of the militia."

It will be seen that the provisions of this section have to do merely with the holding of an office under the authority of the United States. Let us first consider the matter of the civil service of the United States. The courts of our state always have drawn a distinction between those positions which might be considered as mere employments and those which are strictly termed offices.

The court in State ex rel. v. Brennan, 49 O. S. 33, on p. 39 of the opinion distinguishes between offices and mere employment as follows:

> "From these definitions and illustrations it is clear that the position created by the act in question is an office, and that the defendant, if selected in the manner prescribed by law, is an officer. Upon him is imposed the right to exercise an employment in the purchase and control of property of the public, not as a temporary, casual act, but as a continuous duty. He is to exercise public functions in the supposed interest of the people. These he exercises independently, for others, and with-out their leave. He is given by the act itself the title or designation of 'stationary storekeeper,' and it is not without significance that he is also denominated an 'officer.' He is to give bond for the faithful performance of his duties, and is entitled to the yearly salary affixed by the act. The office is an independent one. Its duties are not devolved upon the occupant by a superior, as ministerial duties may be devolved upon a deputy, but are imposed by the statute. True, the statute does not provide for an oath of office. But this is not important, for, if by other tests, he is an officer, then the constitution, section 7, of article 15, prescribes the oath, and its injunctions surely cannot be less obligatory than if directed by statute.
> "It is equally clear that, if an officer at all, he is a county officer. The office of 'stationary storekeeper' is created for the county of Hamilton. The duties relate to the purchase and custody of the property of the county, and the salary is to be paid by the treasurer of the county from the general fund of the county."

In State v. Kendle, 52 O. S. 346, the court, in the opinion at p. 356, in discussing this same question, uses the following language:

> "The case of State v. Brennan, 49 Ohio St. 33, is relied on. In that case the act, held invalid, created the office of 'stationary storekeeper' for Hamilton county, to be filled by the appointment of the clerk of the court of the county. It was a separate and distinct office provided for that county. The power of the legislature to provide for the appointment of persons to act as assistants in an office filled by election has not, and cannot well be questioned. It is on this principle that the appointment of deputy clerks, deputy sheriffs, and so forth, are made and recognized, each of whom perform many, and in some cases all, the duties of the office in which he acts as deputy. So as to these jury commissioners: They are appointed by the common pleas judges to assist in the administration of justice, as are master commissioners and court constables: They are but handmaids of the court in the selection of judicious and discreet persons to serve on such juries as are required in the trial of causes, and the presentment of indictments."

In State ex rel. Allen v. Mason, 61 O. S. 62, the court uses the following language in reference to this matter (p.72):

> "Since the relator performs no duties except such as by law are charged upon his superior, the pension agent, his position is not an office but merely an employment."

From all the above it is readily seen that if a member of the legislature should enter the federal civil service in such a capacity as that it would be denominated a mere employment, he would not forfeit his office as member of the general assembly under and by virtue of said section 4 of article II of the Constitution of Ohio, but if he should enter the federal civil service in such a capacity as to be denominated an office, he would then forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly.

The above discussion is very general in its nature, but it is impossible for me to make it specific for the reason that you do not suggest any particular position in your communication.

The question arises now as to service in the United States army. The provision of the Constitution is:

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States."

As there is no provision either in the law or in the Constitution in reference to members of the general assembly, to the effect that they must reside in the county from which they are elected during the term for which they are elected, and inasmuch as the above provision refers merely to officers, I am of the opinion that a member of the general assembly could enlist as a private in the United States army and not forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly; and this especially in view of the fact that the session of the general assembly as provided for by law is now at an end.

So that the question you submit resolves itself into this, as to whether the inhibition that—

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States shall have a seat in the general assembly," would include an office in the United States army.

Let us note the further provisions of the said section. We find this provision as to state offices:

> "but this provision shall not extend * * * to officers of the militia."

From this it would seem that the framers of the Constitution in using the term "office" had in mind not only offices in the civil service, but also officers in the military service. This also appears to be the construction placed upon this term by the courts.

I will quote from but one case, in which the court was construing a constitutional provision somewhat similar to our own, namely, Kerr v. Jones, 19 Ind. 351. In the syllabus the law is stated as follows:

> "The office of colonel of volunteers, as now existing, and the office of reporter of the decisions of the supreme court of Indiana, within the meaning of the ninth section of the second article of the Constitution of said state, are lucrative offices.
> "The office of colonel of volunteers in the military service of the United States, is not an office in the militia.
>
> "The acceptance, therefore, of the latter office, by the incumbent of another lucrative office, under the laws of Indiana, would vacate the former."

On page 353 the court in the opinion say:

> "Our constitution provides, that no person shall 'hold more than one lucrative office at the same time,' with some exceptions, not embracing the case at bar; and it specifies two classes of offices that shall not be regarded as lucrative, namely, offices in the militia to which no salary is attached, and the office of deputy postmaster, where the compensation does not exceed ninety dollars per year. On general principles, the office of colonel of volunteers, as now existing, is lucrative, and so is that of reporter of the supreme court. Mr. Harrison can not hold them both, therefore, unless the office of colonel of volunteers is an office in the militia, within the meaning of the constitution, and if he can not hold them both, his acceptance of the colonelcy, being the later office, vacated that of reporter."

Hence, answering your question specifically, from all the above it is my opinion that if a member of the general assembly should accept a position either in the civil or in the military service of the federal government, which, under the principles above set out, would be denominated an office, he would forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly. If, on the other hand, he should accept a position either in the civil or military service of the United States, which, under the principles above set out, would be denominated a mere employment, he would not forfeit his office as a member of the general assembly.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT—WHEN COST TO BE DIVIDED BETWEEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—BONDS COVERING TOWNSHIP'S SHARE OF COST SHOULD BE ISSUED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Where a road is improved under agreement between county commissioners and township trustees, by the terms of which the cost and expense of the improvement is to be divided between the county and the township under authority of section 6921 of the General Code, and it is necessary to issue bonds covering the township's share of the cost and expense of such improvement, such bonds should be issued by the county commissioners under authority of section 6929 of the General Code and in the manner therein provided.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

HON. GEO. C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This department is in receipt of your favor of June 6, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

"Will you please pardon an inquiry, but we failed to understand your opinion given to Hon. G. B. Findlay, prosecuting attorney, Lorain county, under date of February 23, 1917, relative to power of township trustees to issue bonds, in the event you intended it should be applicable to the construction of roads when being improved by the county commissioners, but not in conjunction with the state. What is your opinion when the state has no part in the improvement? May we call your attention repectfully to section 6921 of the General Code of Ohio?

" 'The county commissioners, or joint board thereof, upon an unanimous vote, may without a petition therefor, order that all the compensation and damages, costs and expenses of constructing any improvement be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes on the grand duplicate of the county, or out of any road improvement fund available therefor, or the county commissioners or joint board thereof may enter into an agreement with the trustees of the township or townships in which said improvement is in whole or part situated, whereby said county or township, or one or more of them may pay such proportion or amount of the damages, costs and expenses as may be agreed upon between them.'

"You are already familiar with section 3295. It seems to us that taking sections 6921 and 3295 together, that township trustees have power to issue bonds for the township's share of the cost and as well the cost of that portion to be assessed upon the abutting property when there is an agreement with the board of county commissioners to pay certain portions of such cost and expense."

The opinion referred to in your communication was limited to the matter of issuing bonds covering the township's share of the cost and expense of an inter-county highway improvement, and the conclusion there reached was that such bonds should be issued by the county commissioners under section 1223, General Code, and not otherwise.

Covering the precise question made by you, to wit: that of the matter of issuing bonds to meet the township's share of the cost and expense of a county road improvement, apportioned to the township by agreement between the trustees thereof and the county commissioners under section 6921, General Code, I herewith enclose copy of an opinion of this department addressed to the Industrial Commission of Ohio under date of April 24, 1917, (Opinion No. 213) and copy of an opinion of my predecessor, Honorable Edward C. Turner, addressed to Honorable Irving Carpenter, prosecuting attorney, Norwalk, Ohio, under date of March 6, 1916, (Opinion No. 1327).

The first of the opinions just referred to is one disapproving certain bonds issued by Middleburgh Township, Cuyahoga county, to pay the township's share of the improvement of a county road in said township on an agreement as to division of cost and expense made by and between the trustees of said township and the county commissioners of Cuyahoga county.

In the opinion of my predecessor referred to it was held that where a road is improved under an agreement between county commissioners and township trustees, by the terms of which the cost and expense of the improvement is to be divided between the county and the township, and it is necessary to issue bonds, the same should be issued by the county commissioners under authority of section 6929, General Code.

I see no reason to depart from the conclusions reached in the above mentioned opinions, and, answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that bonds issued to meet the township's share of the cost and expense of a county road improvement, apportioned to the township by agreement between the trustees of said township and the county commissioners under section 6921 General Code should be issued by the county commissioners under section 6929 General Code, and not under section 3295 General Code as amended 106 O. L. 536.

With respect to your suggestion as to the authority of the township trustees under section 3295 General Code to issue bonds covering that portion of the cost and expense of a county road improvement to be assessed upon abutting property, I am clearly of the opinion that bonds in anticipation of assessments for the improvement of county roads under chapter 6 of the Cass road law should be issued by the county commissioners under section 6929 General Code and not otherwise. So far as I have been able to discover, the only bonds that township trustees are authorized to issue in anticipation of the collection of assessments for road improvements are those which, under the provisions of sections 3298-8 and 3298-9 General Code, they are authorized to issue on a vote of the electors for the purpose of improving roads in the township, and which bonds under the provisions of section 3298-14 General Code, may cover such part of the cost and expense of improving such roads as is assessed by the township trustees against lands lying within one mile from either side or terminus of the improvement or abutting thereon, as the trustees may determine.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

A. V. DONAHEY—GOVERNOR'S DEED—BERTHA M. HOLMES.

Opinion relative to granting new deed by governor of Ohio to Bertha M. Holmes, in Athens county, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me the papers in connection with a mistake made in certificate of purchase No. 407, issued by the Ohio university on or about November 5, 1910, to William Skinner, upon which Hon. Judson Harmon, then governor of Ohio, by deed dated November 15, 1910, duly conveyed to said William Skinner an undivided one-half interest in and to the premises described as follows:

> "Situate in the city of Athens, county of Athens and state of Ohio, being the undivided one-half of the southwest subdivision of inlot No. 38, beginning at the southwest corner of said inlot No. 38; thence east 159 feet, more or less, to the west line of the lot owned and occupied by John P. Dana; thence north 58 feet; thence west 159 feet more or less to Congress street; thence south 58 feet to the place of beginning."

Section 8528 G. C. provides as follows:

> "When, by satisfactory evidence, it appears to the governor and attorney general, that an error has occurred in a deed executed and delivered in the name of the state, under the laws thereof, or in the certificate of any public officer, upon which, if correct, a conveyance would be properly required from the state, the governor shall correct such error by the execution of a correct and proper title deed, according to the intent and object of the original purchase or conveyance, to the party entitled to it, his heirs, or legal assigns, as the case may require, and take from such party a release in due form, to the state, of the property erroneously conveyed."

Under the above section, when it appears by satisfactory evidence to the governor and attorney-general that an error has occurred, the governor "shall correct such error by the execution of a correct and proper title deed."

From the papers submitted it appears that the property in question was Ohio university leasehold lands and that on March 11, 1891, E. R. Lash and wife conveyed the same to William Skinner and J. A. Holmes, and that the same were held jointly by said Skinner and Holmes until September 18, 1897, when Holmes conveyed his interest to Skinner. It further appears that William Skinner died in 1898, leaving a widow, since deceased, and one surviving heir at law, Bertha M. Holmes.

It further appears that on or about the 5th day of November, 1910, said Bertha M. Holmes paid or caused to be paid to Hon. H. H. Haning, treasurer of the president and trustees of the Ohio University, the sum of $8.50, being the amount required to pay off the lien of the Ohio University on the entire premises; that a certificate of purchase was duly issued, being certificate No. 407, but that said certificate erroneously stated that said sum was the amount required to pay off said lien on the undivided one-half of said premises, when in fact it was the sum required to pay off the lien on the whole of said premises, and that said certificate also stated that William Skinner was the then owner of the premises although said Skinner had died several years prior thereto and said Bertha M. Holmes was the owner of the whole of said premises.

It further appears that said certificate No. 407 was duly forwarded to the auditor of state and that thereafter Hon. Judson Harmon, then governor of Ohio, issued a deed based on said certificate, which deed was duly recorded in volume 114, pages 75 and 76, Athens County Deed Records.

The above facts are obtained from the papers which you have submitted to this department. In accordance with section 8528, said Bertha M. Holmes has tendered a quit claim deed to the president and trustees of Ohio University for the premises conveyed by Hon. Judson Harmon to William Skinner, deceased, the description being the same as hereinbefore set out, the purpose of the deed being set out as follows:

"This deed is made for the purpose of clearing the record of the title of said premises and to comply with section 8528 of the General Code of Ohio, and to reinvest in the said grantee such title, if any, that passed to said William Skinner under said deed from said Judson Harmon, governor of the state of Ohio, the said William Skinner being deceased at the date of the execution of said deed, and said deed should have been executed to said Bertha M. Holmes for the entire interest in said premises."

Said Bertha M. Holmes and James A. Holmes, her husband, have likewise tendered a quit claim deed to the state of Ohio in trust for the benefit of the president and trustees of the Ohio University, its successors and assigns forever, for the above described piece of property.

The documents submitted are satisfactory evidence to me that an error has occurred in the deed executed and delivered in the name of the state and if my opinion is concurred in by the governor of Ohio a deed should be executed by the governor granting to Bertha M. Holmes all the right, title and interest in and to the premises described as follows:

"Situate in the city of Athens, county of Athens and state of Ohio, being the south-west subdivision of inlot No. 38, beginning at the south-west corner of said inlot; thence east 159 feet more or less to the west line of the lot owned and occupied by John P. Dana; thence north 58 feet thence west 159 feet more or less to Congress street; thence south 58 feet to the place of beginning."

We herewith return the papers which you submitted to us.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF COUNCIL OF LAKEWOOD, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO June 22, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bonds of the city of Lakewood, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, in the sum of $7,530.00, in anticipation of the collection of assessments for draining and grading Hilliard avenue between West Madison avenue and Riverside road in said city, and for constructing sidewalks thereon."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the city of Lakewood, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue, and find said proceedings to be in substantial conformity to the provisions of the General Code of Ohio and the provisions of charter of the city of Lakewood applicable thereto.

I am of the opinion that bonds of said city of Lakewood, Ohio, covering said bond issue will, when prepared in accordance with bond form submitted and signed by the proper officers, constitute valid and binding obligations of said city.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

LOANS UPON NOTES, ETC.—PERSON ENGAGED IN SAID BUSINESS—WHO EXACTS GUARANTEE OF GENUINENESS OF NOTES, ETC.—CANNOT CHARGE MORE THAN EIGHT PER CENT INTEREST.

Under the act of May 7, 1915, including sections 6346-1 to 6346-10 General Code a person or firm engaged in the business of making loans upon notes or chattel mortgage, or both, as collateral security, and who exacts that a guarantee be obtained of the genuineness or validity of such note or mortgage cannot charge interest at such rate that the combined interest and premium shall exceed eight per centum per annum.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 22, 1917.

HON. PHILIP C. BERG, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On June 4, 1917, you requested my opinion as follows:

"There are numerous firms over the state doing extensive business in advancing money on automobiles to the dealer, so as to enable him to retail machines on a partial payment plan. Will you be so kind as to give me your opinion as to the scope of sections 6346-1-10 the General Code, in so far as they apply to the following hypothetical case:

"A firm advances sixty per cent. of the retail value of an automobile to the dealer, taking from him the purchaser's note or notes. The charge on these notes is strictly six per cent. for the time they actually run. It is also possible to discount these notes should the purchaser care to (by making earlier payments and save interest charges). The firm, however, requires that the dealer shall give them a security bond, upon which the minimum premium is ten dollars, and also that the car, upon which the chattel mortgage is taken, shall be insured to the extent of their equity against fire, theft, collision, etc. The firm is the agent for the surety and bonding companies, and requires that the policies be taken out only in their companies.

"It is evident upon the face of this matter that the profit to the firm purchasing the notes comes through the insurance premiums, since they undoubtedly rediscount a large proportion of the paper thus secured. Is this in violation of the sections referred to above?"

The sections you mentioned, as amended, constitute the act of May 7, 1915, and it is only necessary to quote the first section as bearing upon your question, as the first is the declaratory part of the law and the others all supply the machinery and regulations for carrying it into effect. It is as follows:

"Sec. 6346-1. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, partnership * * * to engage, or continue, in the business of making loans, on * * * notes, * * * or mortgage * * * of chattels, or of furnishing guarantee or security in connection with any loan or purchase, as aforesaid, at a charge or rate of interest in excess of eight per centum, per annum, including all charges, without first having obtained a license so to do from the superintendent of banks and otherwise complying with the provisions of this act."

The different things forbidden above are joined by the disjunctive "or" and are therefore in the disjunctive so far as the form of expression is concerned.

In your hypothetical case three charges are stated: "Interest," "guaranty insurance," and "insurance against fire, theft, collision, etc." The latter may be eliminated as it is in no sense any part of the charge for mere interest, but is a security which enures entirely to the interest of the owner of the machine. That is, if there is a loss he gets what is paid on the policy or gets the benefit of it by having it applied on his debt, the party making the loan receiving only the insurance instead of the mortgaged property where the latter is destroyed or injured. So that the question presented is whether the interest charge and the guaranty insurance together may exceed eight per centum, or, in other words, if they do exceed eight per centum, whether or not it requires the license provided for in the act.

The object of this law is primarily to prevent exactions of usury, and where it is permitted places it under the regulation of the banking department; and although the two things considered, namely, the interest on the loan and the premium for the guarantee of the debt are stated in the disjunctive form and separately it is to be considered whether, taking in view all the language of the section in connection with the purpose of its enactment, it does not mean that the total of both charges shall not exceed eight per centum.

Your inquiry does not state whether the transaction is a loan to the dealer or a purchase of the notes, the statement being simply that the firm in question advances sixty per cent. of the retail value of an automobile, taking the purchaser's note or notes. This, of course, might be a purchase outright of the notes, or it might be a loan upon them of that amount, taking the notes as collateral. We will suppose it to be the latter in order that the question of interest and usury may be clearly involved. Then let us repeat the section, leaving out all unnecessary parts, and we have:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person to engage in the business of making loans on notes or * * * mortgage of chattels or of furnishing guarantee or security in connection with any loan or purchase as aforesaid at a charge or rate of interest in excess of eight percentum including all charges."

This section is capable of the construction that eight per centum might be charged for each, that is, eight per cent. interest on the money and not to exceed eight per centum for the guarantee of the claim.

This guarantee in practice is not an insurance or suretyship of the claim, but a mere guarantee of the authenticity of the note and against the existence of any defense to it.

What then is the maximum of both these charges? Is it eight per centum, or is it sixteen per centum?

I am of the opinion that eight per centum is the total that can be charged for both, for the following reasons: "Or" may be read "and" when necessary to the sense. It is not, however, in this connection necessary to substitute "and" for "or" in order to obtain the above result. It follows from the use of the terms found in the section if the guarantee alone were being provided for by the legislature the word "premium" would have been used. What they did say, however, is "at a charge or rate of interest in excess of eight per centum, including all charges" so that the fact that the word "premium" is omitted, the word "interest" used and the statement that it is to include "all charges" makes clear the legislative intent that in such transactions the interest and all the other charges contemplated in the section are only to amount to eight per centum. This works no violence to the provisions of the law to charge interest alone at as high a rate as eight per centum. The prohibition of this statute is not simply for making the eight per centum include other charges which would thereby reduce the rate of interest, but it is against engaging in the business of making loans at such rate including charges, and it does not even prevent this, but as a police regulation, which it is, requires such person engaging in such business to take a license and comply with the provisions of the act.

Where such interest charge and the other charges do not exceed eight per centum, of course, it is unnecessary to comply with the act; and if the transaction amounts to a sale of the notes in question, this would be equally true in an individual transaction or true generally unless the sale were merely colorable and the real arrangement constitutes or amounts to the making of loans. This could not be if the notes were endorsed "without recourse," but it would depend upon the facts of each case as it arose whether the course of business between the parties constituted sales of paper in good faith or was a mere scheme or device for furnishing credit at a higher rate than the statutes permit.

Answering your question directly, if the case you suppose is a loan upon collateral the parties engaged in making such loans, if the total charge for interest and premium exceeds eight per centum would be under the provisions of the law and must comply with it.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—HOW ASSESSED AND COLLECTED AGAINST ESTATES DEVISED TO TAKE EFFECT AT FUTURE TIME.

Where a testator devised to his brother his interest in certain real property until all of said brother's children become of age, at which time testator's interest in said real property is to be divided equally between all of said children living at that time,

HELD:

(1) That, without reference to the question whether the estate taken under said will by the children of testator's brother is vested or contingent, section 5331 General Code casts a lien upon the property for the security of the payment of the collateral inheritance tax on the share or shares passing to any child or children of testator's brother under the will; but that

(2) Inasmuch as the question as to which, if any, of the children of testator's brother will ultimately take under the will is one which cannot now be determined, the assessment and collection of the collateral inheritance tax on the share or shares of said estate going to any child or children of testator's brother will have to be postponed until the termination of the prior estate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 22, 1917.

HON. FRANK CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from you asking opinion, in which you say:

> "The following is a copy of an item in the will of a testator who died in our county some time ago:
> "'I give and devise to my said brother, John Sweeting, the use of all of my interest in the farm now owned and occupied by us jointly, known as the Warren Adams farm, containing 128 acres, until all of his children become of age, at which time I desire my said interest in said farm to be divided equally between all of his children living at that time.'

"The question which I desire to submit to you is in reference to the application of the statute providing for a collateral inheritance tax to this bequest.

"As I understand the law, all bequests made to persons other than those exempted by the statute, are subject to a collateral inheritance tax of five per cent. The statute, however, exempts $500.00 to each beneficiary. In this case John Sweeting is given an estate for a term of years, and without question this estate should pay the collateral inheritance tax, but the remainder or reversion is to go to his children when the youngest reaches the age of 21 years.

"At the present time there is one child in the family of John Sweeting, who is about three years of age.

"What would you say as to the correct procedure to be followed in ascertaining the collateral inheritance due on the estate left after John Sweeting has enjoyed the use bequeathed to him? As I view the matter there is no way of ascertaining how many exemptions there should be or how many legatees, if any, there will be under this item of the will."

Applicable to a consideration of the question presented by you, I note the following sections of the General Code:

"Sec. 5331. All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, or by deed, grant, sale, or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor, to a person in trust, or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendent or adopted child, shall be liable to a tax of five per cent of its value above the sum of five hundred dollars. Fifty per cent. of such tax shall be for the use of the state; and fifty per cent. of such tax shall go to the city, village or township in which said tax originates. All administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance made during the grantor's life, shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest as hereinafter provided, until they have been paid, as hereinafter directed. Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid.

"Sec. 5333. When a person bequeaths or devises property to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, or adopted child, during life or for a term of years, and the remainder to a collateral heir, or to a stranger to the blood, the value of the prior estate shall be appraised, within sixty days after the death of the testator, in the manner hereinafter provided, and deducted, together with the sum of five hundred dollars, from the appraised value of such property.

"Sec. 5335. Taxes imposed by this subdivision of this chapter shall be paid into the treasury of the county in which the court having jurisdiction of the estate or accounts is situated, by the executors, administrators, trustees, or other persons charged with the payment thereof. If such taxes are not paid within one year after the death of the decedent, interest at the rate of eight per cent. shall be thereafter charged and collected thereon, and if not paid at the expiration of eighteen months after such death, the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein such taxes remain unpaid, shall institute the necessary proceedings to collect the taxes in the court of common pleas of the county, after first being notified in writing by the probate judge of the county of the non-payment thereof. The probate judge shall give such notice in writing. If the taxes are paid before the expiration of one year after the death of the decedent, a discount of one per cent. per month for each full month that payment has been made prior to the expiration of one year, shall be allowed on the amount of such taxes."

"Sec. 5341. When any of the real estate of a decedent passes to another person so as to become subject to such tax, the executor, administrator or trustee of the decedent shall inform the probate judge thereof within six months after he has assumed the duties of his trust, or if the fact is not known to him within that time, then within one month from the time that it does become known to him.

"Sec. 5343. The value of such property, subject to said tax, shall be its actual market value as found by the probate court. If the state, through the prosecuting attorney of the proper county, or any person interested in the succession to the property, applies to the court, it shall appoint three disinterested persons, who, being first sworn, shall view and appraise such property at its actual market value for the purposes of this tax, and make return thereof to the court. The return may be accepted by the court in a like manner as the original inventory of the estate is accepted, and if so accepted, it shall be binding upon the person by whom this tax is to be paid, and upon the state. The fees of the appraisers shall be fixed by the probate judge and paid out of the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor. In case of an annuity or life estate, the value thereof shall be determined by the so-called actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest."

No question is presented in your communication with respect to the nature of the interest devised to John Sweeting, nor with respect to the manner in which the collateral inheritance tax thereon should be computed and collected. Your question is as to the correct procedure to be adopted with respect to the matter of computing and collecting the collateral inheritance tax due on the estate left after termination of John Sweeting's interest in this property.

The collateral inheritance tax is not a property tax, but is rather a tax on the right of inheritance, and the tax is on the separate shares passing to the recipients of the testator's bounty, each of whom is entitled to the five hundred dollars exemption provided for in section 5331 of the General Code.

In the Matter of Howe, 112 N. Y. 100.
In the Matter of Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 327.

Section 5331 General Code provides that such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien on the property, and be and remain a lien until paid.

Without reference to the question whether the estate taken under this will by the children of John Sweeting when the youngest reaches the age of twenty-one years is vested or contingent, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 5331 above quoted cast a lien upon the property for the securtiy of the payment of the collateral inheritance tax on the share or shares passing to any child or children of John Sweeting under the will.

In computing the value and the resultant tax of the estate subsequent to the estate for years of John Sweeting, regard should be had to the provisions of section 5333 of the general Code, subject to the rule that each share passing under the will is entitled to the exemption of five hundred dollars. It will be noted from the provisions of section 5333 that they are not in terms applicable for the purpose of ascertaining the value of a subsequent estate when the prior estate is taxable. However, I note that in the case of Dow v. Abbott, 197 Mass., 283, a case construing a similar statute in the collateral inheritance tax law of the state of Massachusetts, on a situation of facts somewhat similar to that presented here by the interest devised to John Sweeting—there is authority to the point that in determining the value of the subsequent estate here in question section 5333 of the General Code should be applied.

Inasmuch, however, as the question as to which, if any, of the children of John Sweeting will ultimately take under the will is one which cannot now be determined, I quite agree with the view expressed in your communication, that the assessment and collection of the collateral inheritance tax on the share or shares of said estate going to the child or children of John Sweeting in remainder will have to be postponed until the termination of the prior estate.

It is a general rule, in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, that an inheritance or succession tax cannot be assessed or demanded as of the date of the testator's death when the actual value of the postponed estate cannot be ascertained, for the reason that the person or persons who will ultimately become entitled cannot be known or identified until the termination of the intermediate estate, as where the devolution of the remainder or other expectant estate depends on a question of survivorship or other simliar contingency.

BIDS—HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT—NOT NECESSARY TO ACCEPT LOWEST BID.

1. Where county commissioners have received bids for the improvement of a highway, the specifications calling for separate bids upon a tar bound improvement and an asphalt bound improvement, in awarding the contract, they may take into consideration not only the bids, but the bids in connection with the kind of improvement upon which the bids are based.

2. Under section 6945 G. C. the question is not as to who is the lowest bidder, but who is the lowest and best bidder. The county commissioners have a right to consider the character of the bidder, the efficiency of the thing to be furnished, and the price in view of the other considerations. From this consideration the lowest bidder may not be the best bidder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 22, 1917.

HON. C. C. CRABBE, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 12, 1917, in which you ask for my opinion upon certain matters. Your communication reads as follows:

> "I am anxious to have your opinion on the following:
> "'Bids are to be received by the board of county commissioners for the construction of bituminous macadam road. The specifications drawn by the engineer for this work permit bidders to bid on either a bituminous material tar or a bituminous asphalt as a binder in the construction of the top course.
> "'So as to invite competition between the different kinds of binders the county engineer has provided in his proposal sheet or bidding blank a place for the bidder to bid on either a top course constructed with an asphalt binder or a top course constructed with a tar binder.
>
> "'In making up the approximate estimate he has estimated both top courses at the same unit price.
> "'Now the question arises, when the bids are opened by the board of county commissioners, should they make their decision as to the kind of top course, either asphalt bound or tar bound, which the contractor is to use before they decide on the lowest and best bidder?
> "'I am taking into consideration when I mention that the county commissioners decide as to the kind, General Code, section 6911 of the Cass highway law. This section gives the county commissioners the authority to decide the kind and extent of the improvement.
>
> "'In the event that the county commissioners decide to use a certain kind of top course for this construction and the bids on the other kind of top course are lower, would they have the authority to award the contract on the kind of top course which in their opinion is the best for the construction of this certain improvement?
> "'General Code, section 6945 of the Cass highway law, provides for the county commissioners to award the contract to the lowest and best bidder. Does the word "best" as used in this connection take into consideration the contractor's financial standing, the kind and character of equipment he has for doing the work, and his reputation for good workmanship, or does the word "best" refer exclusively to kind and type of work?'"

From your communication and in connection with it, I assume that the commissioners of your county, after deciding to proceed with the construction of a certain highway, requested the county surveyor to make plans, profiles, specifications and estimates for the same; that he was ordered by the county commissioners to make his specifications and estimates so as to cover the improvement, provided a tar binder was used in the construction of the same, and also in the event that an asphalt binder should be used, or in any event the county surveyor did so make his specifications and estimates. The county commissioners then adopted the specifications and estimates so made by the county surveyor and advertised for bids for the construction of the highway, based upon said plans, profiles, specifications and estimates so made by the county surveyor; that bidders were notified in the advertisement that said plans, etc., were on file and could be examined by any one desiring to bid; that on account of said advertisement bids were submitted, some on the theory that the tar binder should be used and others on the theory that asphalt binder should be used, and that these bids were submitted on blanks furnished by the county surveyor, giving all bidders the opportunity to bid on each kind of construction, should he desire so to do. The bids so submitted have been opened by the county commissioners.

At this stage of the proceedings we reach the questions arising in the minds of your county commissioners. Your communication gives rise to three separate and distinct questions and I shall therefore separate it into three different parts:

> "1. Shall they make their decision as to the kind of top course, either asphalt bound or tar bound, which the contractor is to use, before they decide on the lowest and best bidder?"

In answering this question it will be well for us to note the provisions of section 6911 G. C., which reads as follows:

> "Sec. 6911. When the board of commissioners have determined that any road shall be constructed, improved or repaired, as herein provided for, such board shall determine by resolution by unanimous vote, if acting without a petition, and by a majority vote, if acting upon a petition, the route and termini of such road, the kind and extent of the improvement, and at the same time shall order the county surveyor to make such surveys, plats, profiles, cross-sections, estimates, and specifications as may be required for such improvement, but the profile and grade therefor shall be subject to the approval of the commissioners."

It will be noted by the provisions of said section that after the county commissioners have determined that any road shall be improved, they shall determine "the kind and extent of the improvement," and at the same time shall order the county surveyor to make such surveys, etc., as may be required for such improvement. From this section it will be seen that the natural and logical method to pursue is, first, to determine the kind and extent of the improvement, and then order the county surveyor to make the surveys, etc.

From a reading of this section it might be inferred that the county commissioners would be compelled to decide upon some one certain kind of improvement; but it will be noted that said section further provides that the county commissioners shall at the same time order the county surveyor to make such surveys, plats, profiles, cross-sections, estimates and specifications as may be required for such improvement. From this language it can well be inferred that the county commissioners would not necessarily be compelled to decide upon some certain kind of improvement.

Section 6912 G. C. provides that the county commissioners must give notice, by publication, to all persons interested, that the survey, plats, etc., are on file, for the purpose that they may object to the improvement, if they have any objections. From this, persons interested in the improvement might ask the county commissioners to select some certain kind of improvement, in order that they might know whether to object or not. But however this may be, I am of the opinion that bidders would have no right to object to the action of the county commissioners in selecting two different kinds of improvement, and this especially after they have examined the specifications and estimates, have had full opportunity to bid upon the same, and have submitted their bids to the county commissioners, and when no advantage was taken of or fraud practiced upon them. They would be estopped from raising any question as to the method adopted by the county commissioners.

With this in mind, what is the answer to your first question? In arriving at a conclusion as to who is the lowest and best bidder, I believe that the county commissioners should consider the bids in connection with the kind of binder upon which bids were submitted; that the county commissioners may consider together the bids and the kind of improvement, and that they are not compelled first to select the kind of improvement and then decide, in view of this, as to who is the lowest and best bidder. By thus proceeding, they may be greatly helped in ascertaining as to who is the lowest and best bidder. It must be remembered that the question is not, who is the lowest bidder, but who is the lowest and best bidder, taking into consideration the work to be done and the persons who bid upon the work.

Your second question is as follows:

> "2. In the event the county commissioners decide to use a certain kind of top course for the construction of the highway, and the bids on the other kind of top course are lower, would they have the authority to award the contract on the kind of top course which in their opinion is the best for the construction of this certain improvement?"

In connection with this question, let us note the provisions of section 6945 G. C., which provides for the notice to be given by the county commissioners in advertising for bids, and reads in part as follows:

> "Sec. 6945. * * * Such notice shall state that plans and specifications for such improvement are on file in the office of the county commissioners, and the time within which bids will be received. The county commissioners may let the work as a whole or in convenient sections as may be determined. They shall award the contract to the lowest and best bidder."

As said in answer to your first question, the question is not, who is the lowest bidder, but who is the lowest and best bidder. The courts have always held that this confers upon the persons awarding the contract a wide discretion in the matter of awarding the same; that they may award the contract to one not the lowest bidder, provided they decide some other bidder is the best under all the circumstances.

In State ex rel. v. Village of St. Bernard, 10 C. C. 74, the court lays down the following proposition in the second branch of the syllabus:

> "2. Under the advertisement made for bids in this case, where no definite description is given as to the character of the pumping engines required, or that they should be of any designated pattern, or be of a certain system of operation, other than that mentioned in very general terms, then, if there be bids therefor by two or more persons, offering to furnish engines of a substantially different character in one or more respects, and the trustees acting with due care and on proper inquiry and consideration, in good faith, are of the opinion that one of them is not in accordance with the terms of the advertisement for bids in any substantial respect, and that one is much preferable to the other, and that the interests of the village would be better subserved by choosing the one rather than the other, they might legally do so, though the bid for this was higher than the other."

The court in the opinion on p. 75 use the following reasoning:

"If there be bids therefor by two or more persons, offering engines of a substantially different character in one or more respects, and the trustees, acting with due care and on proper inquiry and consideration, in good faith, are of the opinion that one of them is not in accordance with the terms of the advertisement for bids in any substantial respect, and that one is much preferable to the other, and that the interests of the village would be better subserved by choosing the one rather than the other, that they might legally do so, though the bid for this was higher than for the other. In such case the one selected might well be the lowest bid for that particular kind of an engine, and in such case a court ought not to interfere with the discretion conferred upon them."

In State ex rel. v. Hermann, et al., 63 O. S. 440, the court lays down the law in the syllabus as follows:

"A statute which confers upon a board of public officers authority to make a contract 'with the lowest and best bidder,' confers upon the board a discretion with respect to awarding the contract which cannot be controlled by mandamus."

In State ex rel. v. Com'rs., 36 O. S. 326, the court reasons as follows, in the opinion, p. 330:

"If the commissioners were required, at all events, to award the contract to the one offering to perform the labor and to furnish the materials at the lowest price to determine which would be a mere matter of figures, it would not be difficult for bidders to so combine, as to secure the work at the full estimate of the architect. The statute was enacted for the benefit of the public, and not for individual bidders, and it should be executed with sole reference to the public interest.

"Mandamus will lie only where there is a plain dereliction of duty upon the part of public officers, and can never be invoked to control discretion which is being exercised in good faith, and with a sole view to the public welfare."

In view of all the above, I am of the opinion that your county commissioners, taking into consideration the kind of improvement, may award the contract to one who is not the lowest bidder, provided they decide that under all the circumstances his is the best bid.

Your third question is this:

"3. Does the word 'best,' as used in this connection, take into consideration the contractor's financial standing, the kind and character of the equipment he has for doing the work, and his reputation for good workmanship; or does the word 'best' refer exclusively to kind and type of work?"

In my opinion the word "best" does not refer exclusively to kind and type of work, but refers to everything that may enter into the carrying out of the contract entered into for the performance of the work.

In Yaryan v. City of Toledo, 8 C. C. (N. S.) 1, the court use the following language in the second branch of the syllabus:

> "2. The provision of section 143 of the Municipal Code that the board of public service shall make a contract with the lowest and best bidder, or may reject any and all bids, does not limit the board to a mathematical computation as to who is the lowest responsible bidder, but permits the board to go beyond the price bid and the character of the bidder, and to accept the best proposition offered, considering quality, feasibility and efficiency of the thing to be furnished, the qualifications and responsibility of the bidder, and the price proposed in view of all the other considerations."

In the opinion, p. 19, the court use the following language:

> "We think this permits the board to take into consideration more than the price and more than the character of the bidder; we think it allows the consideration of three elements at least, and that the competition provided for in this statute is in three lines, at least. The awarding tribunal may consider:
> "1st. The quality of the thing, the feasibility of the plan, the efficiency of the thing that is to be furnished, etc.
> "2nd. The quality of the bidder, his qualifications, responsibility, etc.
> "3rd. The price, in view of the other considerations."

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CREATION OF NEW SCHOOL DISTRICT—FILING REMONSTRANCE AND MAPS.

Sections 4692 and 4736 G. C. provide for two separate and distinct matters, one for the transfer of territory, the other for the arranging of school districts. The provisions of these sections are separate and distinct and the provisions of one of the sections are not in any way modified by or related to the provisions of the other.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 22, 1917.

HON. JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio. ---- ---------- --

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 15, 1917, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "The Lucas County Board of Education in accordance with the provisions of section 4736 of the General Code heretofore filed written notice with the boards of education of Maumee School Districts Nos. 1 and 2, which the county board desires to arrange in one school district.
> "Within the thirty days after the filing of said notice, more than a majority of the electors of Maumee School District No. 1 filed a petition in remonstrance against the proposed arrangement.

"Quaere 1. Is this petition in remonstrance sufficient, it not containing a majority of the qualified electors of Maumee School Districts Nos. 1 and 2?

"After the thirty days had expired the county board of education met to take such acts as it deemed necessary to complete the arrangements under section 4736 of the General Code. At that time the attorney representing the petition in remonstrance, called the attention of the board to the opinion of the attorney-general found in Vol. III of Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1915, p. 2450, and in accordance with that opinion told the board that the steps provided by section 4692 of the General Code were a necessary part of the proposed arrangement under section 4736. Acting upon the advice of the prosecuting attorney, the county board of education then took no further action, pending the opinion of the attorney-general upon this subject.

"Maumee School Districts Nos. 1 and 2 include the whole of the village of Maumee and some portions of adjoining townships. The dividing line between the two school districts is a street known as Key street.

"Quaere 2. What sort of a map has the county board to file with the auditor 'showing the boundaries of the territory transferred' if, in your judgment, section 4692 is a necessary part of the proceedings outlined in section 4736?

"Quaere 3. In the event that you should hold that the proceedings authorized by section 4692 are a necessary part of the proceedings of section 4736, the proceedings under section 4736 having been regular to this point, can the board proceed from there to perfect these proceedings under the provisions of section 4692?"

As the questions in your communication have to do with the provisions of sections 4692 and 4736 G. C., my conclusions must be deduced from a consideration and comparison of these two sections

1. In order to arrive at an understanding as to what was in the mind of the legislature in enacting these two sections, let us first compare the provisions of the two sections and the procedings therein set out.

It will be noticed in general at a glance that:

Section 4692 G. C. deals with the matter of the transfer of territory, and that section 4736 G. C. deals with the matter of creating school districts;

Section 4692 never creates a new school district, while section 4736 has to do entirely with the creation of school districts.

With this general scope of the two statutes in mind, let us compare the proceedings under the one with the proceedings under the other.

Section 4692 G. C. provides for the filing of a map, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and makes this filing a jurisdictional fact; while section 4736 G. C. provides for filing a notice of such proposed arrangement, and makes this filing a jurisdictional fact.

Section 4692 G. C. provides for filing a remonstrance against said proposed transfer by those living in the territory annexed; while section 4736 G. C. provides for filing a remonstrance against the arrangement of school districts proposed by those living in the territory affected by the order.

Section 4692 G. C. provides for giving notice of such proposed transfer to those living in the annexed territory; while section 4736 G. C. provides for giving notice of such proposed arrangement to boards of education in the territory affected.

Section 4692 G. C. makes no provision for the appointing of a board of education, while section 4736 G. C. makes provision for the appointing of a board of education.

Thus it will be noticed that the proceedings under these two sections of our statutes vary materially, the one from the other, and when we remember the scheme and purpose of said sections, we can readily see and understand why there is a difference in the method of procedure.

Take for example the matter of appointing a board of education. There is never any need of appointing a board of education under section 4692 G. C., for the simple reason that the provisions of this section never create a new district, but merely transfer territory from one district to another; while the provisions of section 4736 G. C. create new districts and hence provisions must be made for the appointing of boards of education.

Take for example the filing of a map. What use or purpose would the filing of a map serve under the provisions of section 4736 G. C., when it is dealing with whole districts? But under the provisions of section 4692 G. C. a map is absolutely essential, because of the fact that certain territory must be limited by metes and bounds and is transferred from one district to another, and hence a map is very essential to inform the auditor as to the territory transferred.

Take for example the giving of notice. When territory is transferred, notice must be given by publication and by the posting of notices to the people living in the territory transferred. However, when it comes to the provisions of section 4736 G. C., we are dealing with districts and boards of education, and hence notice is given merely to the boards of education of the districts concerned.

Thus we can readily see that these two sections provide entirely different schemes for entirely different purposes, and the terms and procedure of the one have absolutely nothing to do with the terms and the procedure of the other. As said before, one section has to do merely with the transfer of territory from one district to another; while the other has to do with the formation or arrangement of districts, without any thought of the transfer of territory.

2. It will aid us materially, in placing a construction upon these two statutes, to note the company in which they are found. This always assists in arriving at the scope, meaning and purpose of a statute or section thereof. We find that section 4692 immediately follows section 4690 (the intervening section having been repealed), and precedes section 4696 G. C. Section 4690 G. C. deals with the matter of annexing territory to a city or village, while section 4696 G. C. deals with the matter of transferring territory from a county school district to a city school district, or to another county school district. So that the general scope of all these sections has to do with the question of the transfer of territory. It is also well to remember that section 4692 G. C., before the enactment of the school code in 1914, was found in the General Code under the subject of transfer of territory.

Section 4736 G. C. immediately follows sections 4735, 4735-1 and 4735-2 G. C. Section 4735 G. C. has to do with present existing township and special school districts. Section 4735-1 G. C. has to do with the dissolution of a rural school district and joining the same to a contiguous rural or village district. Section 4735-2 G. C. has to do with the question of the title of the property of rural school districts when they are dissolved and joined to a rural or village district. The general scope of all these sections has to do with the question of school districts and not with the matter of territory at all.

3. It will aid us to note the history of these two sections. Section 4692, as said before, has for a long time been associated with those statutes and sections thereof which have to do with the transfer of territory. It is comparatively an old section of our statutes, and before the enactment of the school code related to the question of transfer of territory from one district to another. Section 4736 G. C. is comparatively a new section of the statutes, having been enacted for the first time in 1914, when the general school code was enacted.

It will be worth while to quote sections 4692 and 4736 G. C. as they were enacted in 1914 as a part of the general school code, and then as they now exist.

Section 4692 G. C., as found in 104 O. L. 135, read as follows:

"Part of any county school district may be transfered to an adjoining county school district or city or village school districts by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts. To secure such consent, it shall be necessary for each of the boards to pass a resolution indicating the action taken and definitely describing the territory to be transferred. The passage of such a resolution shall require a majority vote of the full membership of each board by yea and nay vote, and the vote of each member shall be entered on the records of such boards. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, is placed upon the records of such boards and copies of the resolution certified to the president and clerk of each board together with a copy of such map are filed with the auditors of the counties in which such transferred territory is situated."

Section 4692 G. C. as it now reads, is as follows:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. If an entire district be transferred the board of education of such district is thereby abolished, or if a member of the board of education lives in a part of a school district transferred, the member becomes a non-resident of the school district from which he was transferred and ceases to be a member of such board of education. The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

Section 4736 G. C, as found in 104 O. L. 138, read as follows:

"The county board of education shall as soon as possible after organizing make a survey of its district. The board shall arrange the schools according to topography and population in order that they may be most easily accessible to pupils. To this end the county board shall have power by resolution at any regular or special meeting to change school district lines and transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another. A map designating such changes shall be entered on the records of the board, and a copy of the resolution and map shall be filed with the county auditor. In changing boundary lines the board may proceed without regard to township lines, and shall provide that adjoining rural districts are as nearly equal as possible in property valuation. In no case shall any rural district be created containing less than fifteen square miles. In changing boundary lines and other work of a like nature, the county board shall ask the assistance of the county surveyor, and the latter is hereby required to give the services of his office at the formal request of the county board."

Section 4736, as it now reads, is as follows:

"The county board of education shall arrange the school districts according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to the pupils, and shall file with the board or boards of education in the territory affected, a written notice of such proposed arrangement; which said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of school districts so proposed. The county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof. The county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district and direct an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness belonging to the newly created district. Members of the boards of education of the newly created district shall thereafter be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the boards of education of the village and rural districts."

It will be noted that section 4736 G. C. was first enacted to take care of the organizing of the whole county into school districts by the county board of education, the first two sentences of the section reading as follows:

"The county board of education shall as soon as possible after organizing make a survey of its district. The board shall arrange the schools according to topography and population in order that they may be most easily accessible to pupils."

It will be seen that this section, as first enacted, dealt also with the transfer of territory, which provision is as follows:

"To this end the county board shall have power by resolution at any regular or special meeting to change school district lines and transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another."

This section when first enacted provided for a map, just as did section 4692 G. C. Let us notice when this map had to be filed as provided in section 4736 G. C. (104 O. L. 138). It reads:

"* * A map designating such changes shall be entered on the records of the board, and a copy of the resolution and map shall be filed with the county auditor. * *."

Thus it will be seen that even when the map was provided for in this section, it had nothing to do with the matter of the arranging of the districts, but simply with the transfer of territory. This section 4736 G. C. was then amended and the matter of the transfer of territory was taken out of said section altogether. The question of the map was also taken out, because it had no further use in the section. From this it is absolutely clear that the legislature did not intend that the question of the map should still be considered when the procedure in section 4736 G. C. is followed.

So that from all the above we are safe in concluding, I think, that there are two separate, distinct and independent purposes embodied in these two sections, and two separate, distinct and independent methods of procedure set out in said sections, and that the procedure in one has absolutely nothing to do with the proceedings in the other, and the terms expressed in the one section are not to be modified by the terms as set forth in the other.

I am driven to this conclusion by another consideration. It will lead to endless confusion if the provisions of one of these sections are made to modify those of the other. Section 4692 G. C. provides that the remonstrance must be filed within thirty days after the filing of the map with the county auditor, while section 4736 G. C. provides that the remonstrance must be filed within thirty days after the filing of the notice with the board of education. Now, if both of these things are done in any proceeding, what date will control in fixing the thirty-day period? Further, section 4692 G. C. makes such provision that a whole district may be transferred to another district, and if this is done the board of education of the district transferred is abolished; while section 4736 provides that one district may be created out of two districts, and when this is done the county board shall appoint a board of education for the new district. If we confuse these two sections, how will we ascertain whether the boards of education of the two districts are abolished and a new one to be appointed by the county board of education; or whether but one board is abolished and the other one remains? The only safe and logical course to pursue is to consider these two sections as separate, distinct and independent sections, complete in and of themselves, without making the one refer in any respect to the other.

Whenever the object sought is a mere transfer of territory from one district to another, whether a part of a district or the whole thereof be transferred, the provisions of section 4692 G. C. should be followed. When the object sought is the arrangement or rearrangement of school districts or the formation of a new district, whether from one or more school districts or parts thereof, the provisions of section 4736 G. C. should be followed.

From all the above, your queries are easily answered; in fact they are already answered.

Query No. 1:

> "Is this petition in remonstrance sufficient, it not containing a majority of the qualified electors of Maumee School Districts Nos. 1 and 2?"

It is not. Section 4736 G. C. provides that:

> "* * a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board (may) file a written remonstrance * *."

Query No. 2: This has to do with the map. As suggested above, there is no map required under the provisions of section 4736 G. C.

Query No. 3: This relates to your further proceedings. The provisions of section 4692 G. C. have nothing to do with the provisions of section 4736 G. C. You will proceed under and by virtue of the provisions of section 4736 G. C. exclusively.

In answering your question, I am not unmindful of the opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, on December 31, 1915, to which you refer, and which is found in Vol. III of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1915, at p. 2450. I do not concur in his opinion, wherein his conclusions vary from those herein reached.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SALARY—OF CLERK APPOINTED IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE—AFTER PASSAGE OF APPROPRIATION.

Where a clerk was appointed to a position in the classified service after the passage of the appropriation bill by the present general assembly to take the place of another who held the position at the time of the passage of said act, the new appointee is entitled to the same salary received by the former up to the end of the appropriation on the first of July, 1917, unless such salary be reduced as provided in section 4 of the appropriation act of the 81*st general assembly.*

The salary of such clerk having been appointed after the passage of the last appropriation act will be governed by the amount appropriated therefor by such act after the first day of July, 1917.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1917.

State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

> "Since the passage of the appropriation bill by the last session of the legislature, under section 8, of which provision is made for certain classifications and salary schedules of positions in the classified service, the following case has been presented, upon which we are unable to render proper decision without your interpretation of section 8 above referred to:
> "After the passage of the appropriation bill 'A' was appointed to a position in the classified service. The position to which he was appointed has been graded by the state civil service commission as of the clerical service, clerk group, grade III. 'A' succeeded 'B' who, on the day the act was passed, was receiving a salary in excess of the amount fixed by the general assembly for clerks of this grade. The following questions arise:
> "1. Is 'A's' salary, in so far as it is payable out of the 1915 appropriation bill, that is, for the period intervening between his appointment and the first of July, 1917, limited by section 8 of the 1917 appropriation bill?
> "2. Is 'A's' salary on and after July 1st, 1917, covered by the limitations of that section of the bill, even though it might result in a reduction of salary below that which he had theretofore been receiving, if the answer to the first question is in the negative?
> "We are called to pass upon many similar cases, and it is desirable that we have your opinion at the earliest possible moment."

Section 8 of H. B. 584, passed at the last session of the legislature, being the general appropriation bill, provides that so much of the appropriation made in section 2 for personal service as pertains to the compensation of employes in certain groups and grades of the classified service, among which is the clerk group, may be expended at certain annual salaries attached to each of said groups, but contains a proviso as follows:

> "provided, however, that rates of compensation of persons now employed in the foregoing groups and grades of the classified civil service of the state, which on the date of the passage of this act may exceed the uniform rate fixed herein for the service, group and grade of their positions, as so classified, shall not be affected by the provisions of this section; but such rates of compensation as fixed on said date for such positions shall be the rates at which the appropriations herein made may be expended for the compensation of such persons while holding such positions."

This provision in the general appropriation bill, as you well know, is a distinct departure from former appropriation bills. Either an appropriation was made for a particular position or a lump sum appropriation was made for a number of such positions.

In section 9 of the appropriation act of the 81st general assembly (106 O. L., 828), when an appropriation was made for the payment of the salaries of a specified number of employes whose salaries were not fixed by law, it was made the duty of each department, board or commission, for whom the appropriation was made, to apportion such appropriation account and to assign to each position a specified amount or part thereof. The section further provides:

> "Such department, board or commission shall file such apportionment, in writing, with the president of the board provided for in section 4 of this act (consisting of the governor or any competent, disinterested person, appointed by him, the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives and senate, respectively, the attorney-general and the auditor of state), which board shall examine the same and see that the provisions of law and of this act are complied with in making such apportionment. Said board may change such apportionment in order to comply with such law or the provisions of this act, and when satisfied that the same is in all respects legal and in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall certify such apportionment, with any modification it may make, to the auditor of state, with the approval of a majority of its members endorsed thereon. Subject to the approval of said board, any department, board or commission may change the salary or compensation attached to any such position under its control. * * * *"

If an appropriation has been made for the payment of salaries of a specified number of employes as a lump sum appropriation, it is the duty of the board to apportion to each position a proportionate part of such lump sum approriation, and report the same to the board mentioned. This in practical effect was the same as if an appropriation had been made for each particular position, so that we can consider a particular appropriation made to a particular position, and the apportionment of a lump sum appropriation made to a number of such positions after apportionment is made amounts practically to the same thing.

The proviso in H. B. 584, quoted above, seeks only to protect those in the employ of the state at the date of the passage of the act, which was on March 21, 1917, from being reduced in compensation received by them at the time of the passage of H. B. 584. It did not undertake to protect the successor of any such person in his compensation. However, H. B. 584 can have no effect upon the salary of any one paid prior to July 1, 1917, at which date it goes into effect.

Answering your two questions therefore,

1. "A's" salary, in so far as it is payable out of the 1915 appropriation bill, that is for the period intervening between his appointment and the first day of July, 1917, is not limited by section 8 of the 1917 appropriation bill.

2. "A's" salary on and after July 1, 1917, is covered by the limitations of that section of the bill, even though it might result in a reduction of salary below that which he had theretofore been receiving.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AGENT—NECESSARY STEPS FOR COUNTY TO SECURE STATE AID IN THE MATTER OF EMPLOYMENT—WHEN APPROPRIATION MAY BE MADE—SECTION 9921-4 FOR SUPPORT OF SUCH AGENT.

As steps preliminary to a county's securing the assistance of the state in the matter of the employment of an agricultural agent, it must raise its share for the support of the agent for the first year and transmit the same to the state treasurer, and at the same time give the trustees of the Ohio State University assurance that a like sum shall be raised for a second year.

Whether or not an appropriation may be made under section 9921-4 G. C. for the support of a county agent at a given time, depends upon the form of the annual budget for the current year and the state of the appropriation accounts from the general revenue fund made at the beginning of the current fiscal half year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1917.

HON. TOM A. JENKINS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 16, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to certain matters. Your communication reads in part as follows:

> "* * The chamber of commerce of this city at the instigation of some of our leading farmers organized a society which is prerequisite to the securing of an appropriation for the purpose of employing a farm agent, and after doing this they came before the board of commissioners and requested that the commissioners make them an allowance of $1,500 to cover the allowance made by the national and state governments. This request was granted, although our county is in poor circumstances financially. The commissioners feel that the purpose was a good one and was worthy of their support. In keeping with their judgment they adopted a resolution providing for the appropriation of $1,500.00 from the general fund of the county for the purpose of employing a county farm agent. The county auditor raised the question that this was an appropriation that could not be made except at stated times as provided by law. It seemed to be the policy of the commissioners to make this allowance and later recoup from funds which will be coming to our county fair and our local apple show.

The auditor claims that his $1,500.00 cannot be paid now, and he has taken this up with Mr. Parrot of the inspection department of the auditor of state's department, who is at work here in this county at present. Mr. Parrot believes that this money cannot be legally paid in this manner. The audior and I have talked the matter over, and we think that if we can get the state department to use their appropriation to meet the expense of this agent for the first half of this year, that we will include in our next levy a small levy for the farm agent proposition which will make available for us the necessary $1,500.00, which we can pay after the December taxes are collected. * *."

In considering the matter suggested in your communication, it will be necessary for us to quote a number of sections of statutes which have to do with the matter of agricultural agents.

Sections 9916, 9921-2 and 9921-4 G. C. read as follows:

"Sec. 9916. When twenty of more persons, residents of a county, organize themselves into a farmer's institute society, for the purpose of teaching better methods of farming, stock raising, fruit culture and business connected with agriculture, and adopt a constitution and by-laws conforming to rules and regulations furnished by the trustees of the Ohio State University, and when such society has elected proper officers and performed such other acts as are required by the rules of the trustees of the Ohio State University, it shall be a body corporate.

"Sec. 9921-2. From moneys appropriated by the state for the employment of agricultural agents, not to exceed three thousand dollars in any one year shall be expended for any county that shall raise at least one thousand dollars for the support of an agricultural agent for one year, and shall give satisfactory assurance to the trustees of the Ohio State University that a like sum shall be raised for a second year, or shall establish and maintain a county experiment farm as provided in the statutes. To secure this aid from the state, the board of county commissioners of any county shall agree to the employment of an agricultural agent approved by the dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University.

"Sec. 9921-4. Each and every county of the state is authorized and empowered to appropriate annually not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, for the maintenance, support and expenses of a county agricultural agent, and the county commissioners of said county or counties are authorized to set apart and appropriate said sum of money and transmit the same to the state treasurer who shall place it to the credit of the agricultural extension fund to be paid for the purposes aforesaid, on warrant issued by the auditor of state in favor of the Ohio State University. If for any reason it shall not be used as contemplated in this act (G. C. Secs. 9916 to 9921-5) before the expiration of two years, it shall revert to the county from which it came."

These sections contain the provisions which are necessary for us to take into consideration in answering the question suggested by you.

The matter suggested by you has to do with the question as to how the county commissioners may make provision for the necessary funds, in order to enable your county to take advantage of the provisions of these sections in the way of employing an agricultural agent for the county.

You state in your communication that your county is in poor circumstances financially, and has not the necessary funds at hand in order to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of an agricultural agent. You state further, however, that your county commissioners have made an appropriation of $1,500.00 to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of the agricultural agent for the first year, and you inquire whether there is some way by which the state can pay the salary of the agent for the first half of the year, by the end of which time your county commissioners hope to be able to realize under the appropriation made.

In view of this question let us note the provisions of section 9921-2 G. C. Under this section the county is entitled to the assistance of the state in the matter of securing an agricultural agent under this condition:

> "any county that shall raise at least one thousand dollars for the support of an agricultural agent for one year, and shall give satisfactory assurance to the trustees of the Ohio State University that a like sum shall be raised for a second year."

From the provisions of this section it seems that the raising of not less than $1,000.00 and the assurance that a like amount will be raised for the second year must take place before the project is entered upon. It will be noticed that the assurance is not to be given that a certain sum will be raised to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of the agricultural agent for the first year; but on the other hand, the amount must be raised for the first year and assurance given that the same amount will be raised the second year.

Section 9921-4 G. C. provides:

> "Each and every county of the state is authorized and empowered to appropriate annually not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars for the maintenance, support and expenses of a county agricultural agent * *;"

further, the amount so appropriated shall be transmitted

> "to the state treasurer, who shall place it to the credit of the agricultural extension fund to be paid for the purposes aforesaid * *."

Said section further provides:

> "If for any reason it shall not be used as contemplated in this act * * before the expiration of two years, it shall revert to the county from which it came."

From the language of these two sections it seems clear that the money to take care of the county's share of the cost and expense of the agricultural agent for the first year must be provided for and placed to the credit of the agricultural extension fund as a step preliminary to the entrance upon the project.

This seems also to have been the idea of your county commissioners, as your communication states they have appropriated $1,500.00 for the purpose. But you further state your county is not in condition financially to realize upon this appropriation. You seem to infer that the money is not on hand to meet it.

This condition does not harmonize with the provisions of section 5660 G. C., which reads in part as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of > money, unless the auditor * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, * *. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

Hence, your county commissioners could not pass a resolution appropriating money, unless the same were in the fund, and if it were in the fund, this same money, so appropriated, could not be used for any purpose other than that for which it was appropriated.

Therefore, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that a county, in order to take advantage of the provisions made in the sections above quoted, must first provide the necessary funds to take care of its share of the cost and expense of the agricultural agent for the first year and at the same time give assurance to the trustees of the Ohio State University that a like amount will be raised for a second year.

I note from your communication that your county auditor raises the question as to whether the $1,500.00 could be paid now. I am not quite clear as to what your county auditor may have had in mind, unless it is the provisions of section 5649-3d G. C., in which provision is made that:

> "At the beginning of each fiscal half year the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a of this act shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, * * and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

The annual budget of the county commissioners made up last year provided for the needs of the county for the fiscal year, which this department has held to begin and end on the first of March. If the last clause of the above quoted section, prohibiting the making of an appropriation for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget, be interpreted so as to require the county commissioners to specify, in making up their annual budget, not merely the general needs of the general county fund, but also in detail the various specific purposes for which such fund shall be expended, then it would follow that such specific purposes must be enumerated in the annual budget. Such enumeration will control the appropriation of the moneys in the general revenue fund for the next succeeding year. So that upon this theory it would follow that unless the support of a county agent were set forth in the annual budget made up last year, the county commissioners would be without authority to make an appropriation out of the general revenue fund of the county for such support at any time during the fiscal year beginning in March, 1917.

I do not think that any such hard and fast interpretation of the latter provisions of section 5649-3d G. C. is required. The section in this respect is to be read in connection with section 5649-3a G. C., which prescribes the form and contents of the annual budget. That section provides that there shall be set forth in the annual budget:

"an estimate stating the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year, and for each month thereof. Such annual budgets shall specifically set forth:

"(1.) The amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year.

"(2.) The balance standing to the credit or debit of the several funds at the end of the last fiscal year.

"(3.) The monthly expenditures from each fund in the twelve months and the monthly expenditures from all funds in the twelve months of the last fiscal year.

"(4.) The annual expenditures from each fund for each year of the last five fiscal years.

"(5.) The monthly average of such expenditures from each of the several funds for the last fiscal year, and also the total monthly average of all of them for the last five fiscal years.

"(6.) The amount of money received from any other source and available for any purpose in each of the last five fiscal years, together with an estimate of the probable amount that may be received during the incoming year, from such source or sources.

"* *."

It will be observed that all the requirements of this section relate to "funds' as such. Therefore, it might be argued that no greater detail is required to be set forth in the annual budget than the amount needed for each fund in gross. It is difficult, however, to reconcile such a position with the prohibition of that part of section 5649-3d G. C. now under consideration.

Except in cases wherein a transfer of funds may be authorized, it would be impossible for any of the money in one of the funds of the county to be expended for any purpose otherwise than that for which such fund might lawfully be used. That being the case, there would be no need for the general assembly expressly to require that no appropriation should be made for any purpose other than that set forth in the annual budget, if the only purpose required to be set forth in the annual budget were the general purpose of a given fund.

Moreover, the further requirement that no appropriation shall be made for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances, tends to show that the budget commissioners are intended to have some control over the amount which may be appropriated for a given purpose, exclusive of receipts and balances.

Unless the word "appropriation," as used in section 5649-3d G. C., is synonymous with "fund," the necessary inference must be that the budget is required to go into as great detail as is the appropriation, and that such detail is greater than that required of the county commissioners in merely dividing their levy into funds.

A consideration of the legislative history of section 5649-3d G. C. shows clearly that the word "appropriation," as therein used, imports, indeed, a subdivision of a "fund." The form of this section was suggested by section 3797 G. C., which is a part of the municipal code and under which ,with the related sections, it has always been very clear that an appropriation account is a subdivision of a fund.

Indeed, section 5649-3e G. C., a part of the Smith law, of which section 5649-3d is likewise a section, provides as follows:

"Sec. 5649-3e. Unexpended appropriations or balances of appropriations remaining over at the end of the year, and the balances remaining over at any time after a fixed charge shall have been terminated by reason of the object of the appropriation having been satisfied or abandoned, shall revert to the general fund, and shall then be subject to other authorized uses, as such board or officers may determine."

This requirement that an appropriation shall revert to a fund makes it clear that an "appropriation" and a "fund" are not the same thing.

On the whole, therefore, I am of the opinion that the strict meaning and intent of the sections which I have been considering are that the county commissioners, in making up their annual budget, must estimate the amount required to be raised by taxation, not merely for the general purposes of the general county fund, but also in detail for the different kinds of objects for which the general fund may lawfully be expended. So that it would follow as an abstract proposition that unless the appropriation for the support of a county agent were such an appropriation as had been set forth in the annual budget made up last year, it could not be made during the current year.

But I recognize the fact that in practice the strict view of the law which I have felt obliged to take has not been adhered to, and that the budget estimates and allowances for general county fund purposes have been made with little if any specification of detail. This is equivalent to saying that in general practice the counties have failed to realize the spirit of the Smith law; but it is, I believe, nevertheless the fact. And even where some detail has been observed, it is, and in my opinion may lawfully be, the practice to leave a general balance available for miscellaneous appropriation for any purpose for which the general fund may lawfuly be appropriated. Such an allowance, in the nature of a contingent allowance, is not out of keeping with the spirit and even the letter of the Smith law.

If, therefore, in your county, by reason of the manner in which the budget was made up and the allowances were made by the budget commissioners, there is no such detailed subdivision of the purposes of the general revenue fund, as to preclude the making of an appropriation for the purpose under consideration, on the ground that it is not within any of the purposes set forth in the annual budget, then the latter part of section 5649-3d G. C. does not so operate as to prevent the appropriation.

The effect of the requirement that appropriations shall be made at the "beginning of each fiscal half year" remains to be considered. As pointed out, an appropriation is the setting apart of a specified portion of a fund, i. e., the division of a fund into different accounts, attributable to different objects for which the fund may lawfully be expended. This is the sense in which the term is used in section 5649-3d G. C., and of course it is the sense in which it is used in section 9921-4 G. C.

There is this difference, however, between sections 9921-4 and 5649-3d G. C.: The former speaks of an annual appropriation, while the latter requires appropriations to be made semi-annually. This difference is reconciled, however, by observing that inasmuch as the whole amount appropriated under section 9921-4 G. C. is to be expended in one lump sum, so far as the county is concerned, this is a purpose which could pertain to only one fiscal half year, and therefore in truth and in fact an annual appropriation for this purpose is all that is required or authorized, though semi-annual appropriations for other purposes generally are required.

At the beginning of the fiscal half year, viz., March 1, 1917, your county commissioners made appropriations from the general county fund. If these appropriations exhausted the amount of money in the fund and were under headings or designations such as to exclude the possibility of referring the expenditure authorized under section 9921-4 G. C. to any of them, then the auditor's point would be well taken and the appropriation for the purposes of the last named section could not now be made, for the money in the fund would all have been appropriated for other purposes, and there would be no more money in the fund subject to appropriation, no matter how much money might actually be in the fund.

But if at the March session the county commissioners did not appropriate all the money in the fund, leaving a balance equal to the amount intended for the support of the county agent, then in my opinion such appropriation may be made, despite the strict language of section 5649-3d G. C., which requires all appropriations to be made "at the beginning of each fiscal half year," for there is nothing requiring the county commissioners to make all appropriations by a single order; and if any object, for which the fund may lawfully be appropriated, is overlooked or omitted, I believe that action at earliest opportunity, with respect to such overlooked or omitted appropriation, must be held to be taken "at the beginning" of the fiscal half year, within the meaning of section 5649-3d G. C.

Again, if the appropriations which your commissioners made of the moneys in the general revenue fund at the beginning of the present fiscal half year were made under such general headings as to leave one of them available for expenditure for such a purpose as that defined in section 9921-4 G. C., then I am of the opinion that, although the law has not been strictly complied with, it would be lawful for the commissioners to authorize the expenditure of the amount of money determined upon for the support of the county agent, without further appropriations.

It will be observed that under section 9921-4 G. C. the appropriation and the expenditure are virtually simultaneous; and if an appropriation has been made under a heading which includes other objects than the support of a county agent, I am of the opinion that no further action by way of appropriation is necessary, and that authority immediately exists to order the expenditure.

It will be seen, therefore, that I cannot answer positively the question which the auditor raises, first, because you do not explain in your letter the exact point which the auditor has in mind, and second, because, assuming the point to arise under section 5649-3d G. C., I have no knowledge as to the manner in which the annual budget for the present year was made up, nor of the manner in which appropriations were made on March 1 of this year, from the general county fund.

I must, therefore, answer the question which the auditor has in mind by saying that if the budget was made in such detail as to exclude the making of any appropriation for the purpose of the support of the county agent, such appropriation cannot be made; if, regardless of the form of the annual budget, the appropriations made in March exhausted the general county fund and were themselves made in such detail and under such designations as to exclude the possibility of using any one of them for the purpose mentioned in section 9921-4 G. C., action under that section cannot now be taken; but if the annual budget for this year was not in such form as to preclude the making of an appropriation of the kind; and if either (1) the appropriations made in March, 1917, did not exhaust the entire fund, or (2) such appropriations were made under such general designations or headings as to render the expenditure authorized under section 9921-4 G. C. a proper charge on one of them, action may be taken under this section at the prsent time.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of June 15, 1917, enclosing communication, bearing date April 2, 1917, from the chief deputy of the division of workshops, factories and public buildings, concerning which you ask an opinion. The enclosed communication reads as follows:

> "The legislature passed House Bill 327, amending section 1008 of the General Code, which relates to the hours of labor for women. I am enclosing you a copy of this bill with the request that an opinion be asked of the attorney-general as to what effect it will have on section 12996, which I am enclosing.
> "Section 12996 provides that no boy under the age of 18, or girl under the age of 21 shall be employed, permitted, or suffered to work in, about, or in connection with any establishment or occupation named in section 12993,
> "(1.) for more than six days in any one week;
> "(2.) nor more than 54 hours in any week;
> "(3.) nor more than 10 hours in any one day;
> "(4.) or before the hour of 6 in the morning or after the hour of 10 in the evening.
> "This was not repealed by House Bill 327, amending section 1008 of the General Code, which provides that females over 18 years of age shall not be employed, permitted or suffered to work in certain establishments, or occupations, more than nine hours in any one day, or more than fifty hours in any one week.
> "The question arises, which section of the law will control as to the hours per week, and hours per day which a girl between 18 and 21 years of age may be employed? I will respectfully request that an opinion be secured from the attorney-general as soon as possible."

An answer to your question involves provisions of the following sections of the General Code:

Section 1008 as amended by the last legislature in H. B. No. 327, 107 O. L. 149, reads:

> "Sec. 1008. * * Females over 18 years of age shall not be employed or permitted or suffered to work in or in connection with any factory, workshop, telephone or telegraph office, millinery, or dressmaking establistment, restaurant or in the distributing or transmission of messages or in any mercantile establishment located in any city, more than nine hours in any one day, except Saturday, when the hours of labor in mercantile establishments may be ten hours, or more than six days, or more than fifty hours in any one week, but meal time shall not be included as a part of the work hours of the week or day, provided, however, that no restriction as to hours of labor shall apply to canneries or establishments engaged in preparing for use perishable goods, during the season they are engaged in canning their products."

Section 12993 G. C. reads as follows:

"No male child under 15 years or female child under 16 years of age shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any (1) mill, (2) factory, (3) workshop, (4) mercantile or mechanical establishments, (5) tenement house, manufactory or workshop; (6) store, (7) office, (8) office building, (9) restaurant, (10) boarding house, (11) bakery, (12) barber shop, (13) hotel, (14) apartment house, (15) bootblack stand or establishment, (16) public stable, (17) garage, (18) laundry, (19) place of amusement, (20) club, (21) or as a driver, (22) or in any brick or lumber yard, (23) or in the construction or repair of buildings, (24) or in the distribution, transmission or sale of merchandise; (25) nor any boy under 15 or female under 21 years in the transmission of messages.

Section 12996 G. C. reads as follows:

"* * No * * girl under the age of 21 years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any establishment or occupation named in section 12993 (1) for more than six days in any one week, (2) nor more than fifty-four hours in any one week, (3) nor more than ten hours in any one day, (4) or before the hour of 6 o'clock in the morning or after the hours of 10 o'clock in the evening. In estimating such periods, the time spent at different employments or under different employers shall be considered as a whole and not separately."

The conflict, if any, which arises under your question, occurs by reason of the fact that said sections 1008 and 12996 G. C., prior to the amendment by the last legislature, carried the same hours per day and hours per week for girls between the ages of 18 and 21 years. Now, by reason of the change in section 1008, different hours of labor are provided for the particular occupations found in both of the sections.

There is no difficulty in regarding the cases in which the occupations mentioned in the two sections, to wit, section 1008 and section 12993, to which section 12996 refers, are different. In those cases the provisions of the particular section which refers to the particular occupations in each section control respectively. But an examination of the enumeration of occupations in section 12993 and the enumeration found in section 1008, as recently amended, discloses that section 12993 fixes certain hours per week and hours per day for the occupations designated (2), (3), (4), (9) and part of (25), while in section 1008, in the enumeration of occupations are found the same occupations just referred to numerically, and a different schedule of hours per week and hours per day is provided.

It may not be amiss to compare the provisions of the two sections in so far as applicable herein.

Sec. 1008 G. C. applies to girls over 18 years of age. Section 12996 G. C. applies to girls under 21 years of age.

Sec. 1008 provides girls shall not be employed more than six days out of a week. The same provision is made in Sec. 12996.

Under Sec. 1008 girls shall not be employed more than fifty hours a week. Under Sec. 12996 they may not be employed more than fifty-four hours a week.

Under Sec. 1008 girls may not be employed more than nine hours a day. Under Sec. 12996 they may not be employed more than ten hours a day.

Under Sec. 1008 they may be employed ten hours on Saturday in mercantile establishments in cities. Under Sec. 12996 there is no specific provision as to length of time they may be employed on Saturday .

Under Sec. 12996 they cannot begin work before 6 o'clock in the morning, nor work after 10 o'clock in the evening. We find no provision as to this matter in section 1008.

Under Sec. 12996 the time spent in different employments or under different employers shall be considered as a whole, and not separately. Under Sec. 1008 there is no provision in reference to this matter.

Under section 1008 there is found an exception providing that no restrictions as to hours of labor shall apply to canneries or establishments engaged in preparing for use perishable goods during the season they are engaged in canning their products. Under Sec. 12996 there is no mention of canneries or other establishments, or exceptions thereof from the provisions of the section.

Bearing the above comparison in mind, it will be noted:

1. Both sections provide for six days a week. Hence, there is no difficulty in that regard.

2. Section 1008 G. C. provides for ten hours a day on Saturday. Said section 12996 contains no provisions in reference to Saturday. The provisions in section 1008 would control as to the occupations therein mentioned as to that day, as far as females over 18 years of age are concerned.

3. Section 1008 contains no provision in reference to the time at which girls may begin work and the times at which they must quit. Since this matter is provided for in section 12996, the provisions of the latter section will control as to occupations mentioned in section 12993, which contains the enumeration of occupations to which reference is made in section 12996.

4. Section 12996 provides that in estimating the periods of time therein mentioned, the time spent at different employments or under different employers shall be considered as a whole and not separately. No such provision is found in section 1008.

5. In section 12993, to which section 12996 refers, we find no provision as to canneries or other establishments preparing perishable goods. There is such an exception found in section 1008, and the latter section will control as to such establishments.

I have traveled a little outside of the question submitted, for the purpose of comparing the parts of the sections under consideration. Your direct question is: Which section of the statute will control as to the hours per week and hours per day which a girl between 18 and 21 years of age may be employed?

Bearing the comparisons above noted in mind, and in view of the fact that section 1008 is the last expression of the legislature in reference to the subject matter, it is my view that the provisions of section 1008 will control as to the hours per week and hours per day in all of such occupations as are found in section 1008, and that if the same establishments are mentioned in section 12993, said parts of said section are impliedly repealed wherever they are in conflict with the provisions of section 1008. The two sections being in pari materia, must be read together, in so far as the same is possible. Wherever they conflict, the provisions of section 1008 G. C., being the latest statute on the subject, will control.

It will be noted that the provisions of both sections are in the negative and are prohibitive and not permissive.

From the foregoing it follows that a girl under 21 and over 18 years of age may not be employed for a longer period than fifty hours a week or nine hours a day in the occupations enumerated in section 1008, and as to such hours and such occupations the provisions of section 1008 control. In those occupations enumerated in section 12993 and to which reference is made in section 12996, and which occupations are not enumerated in classification found in section 1008 as amended, of course the provisions of section 12996 shall be given full effect. I think it is clear that both sections where not in conflict can be given the effect intended by the legislature and that wherever conflicting provisions are found in the sections the later provisions of section 1008 G. C. control.

In all the foregoing the references to section 1008 G. C. are to the section as amended March 20, 1917, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on March 29, 1917, which will go into effect ninety days after March 29, 1917.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN APPROPRIATIONS MAY BE TRANSFERRED FROM ONE DEPARTMENT TO ANOTHER.

Sec. 7 of H. B. 584 (general appropriation act, 107 O. L.) provides for transfer of appropriations only when the functions of any department have been transferred to another department by a law becoming effective after July 1, 1917.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1917.

State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a request for opinion from your board to the following effect:

> "The eighty-second general assembly in passing H. B. 158, transferred from the state board of agriculture to the state board of pharmacy the enforcement of the pharmacy laws. H. B. 158 did not carry with it an appropriation for the enforcement of said pharmacy laws, neither did H. B. 584 provide the state board of pharmacy with funds for the enforcement of said laws, except, that H. B. 584 did make appropriations to the dairy and food division of the state board of agriculture for the enforcement of the pharmacy laws so transferred by H. B. 158.
> "Section seven, of H. B. 584, provides for a transfer of appropriations when the functions of any department (in part) have been transferred to any other department by a law becoming effective after July 1st, 1917. Now, the fact that H. B. 158 becomes effective prior to the date on which H. B. 584 shall take effect, can the funds appropriated in H. B. 584 to the dairy and food division of the state board of agriculture for the enforcement of the pharmacy laws be transferred to the state board of pharmacy for the purpose for which they were intended?"

Section 7 of H. B. 584, being the general appropriation bill passed by the eighty-second general assembly, provides as follows:

"A transfer, in whole or in part, of the functions of any existing department, board or commission, for the uses and purposes of which appropriations are made in sections 2 and 3 of this act, to any other department, board of commission by a law which takes effect after the date on which this act shall become effective, shall not affect the availability of any such appropriations except as hereinafter provided. On and after the date on which any such law shall become effective such appropriations shall be available for the proper uses and purposes of the department, board or commission to which such functions are thereby transferred, and such department, board or commission shall on and after such date have the exclusive power and authority to incur liabilities against such appropriations and to draw orders and invoices on account thereof as provided in section 4 hereof, to the extent only, however, of the balances then remaining to the credit of such appropriations in excess of the amount of contingent liabilities theretofore incurred, which shall be considered the net balances thereof for the purposes of this section. In the event that any department, board or commission, for the uses and purposes of which an appropriation is made in sections 2 and 3 of this act, is abolished by any such law, and any function of such department, board or commission so abolished is not transferred to any other department, board or commission by the provisions of such law, the net balances of appropriations available for the uses and purposes of such abolished department, board or commission in the discharge of such function shall, on the date on which such law shall become effective, lapse into the fund from which they were appropriated.

"If any appropriation account, whether for personal service or otherwise, created by sections 2 and 3 of this act for the uses and purposes of a department, board or commission which is abolished, or any function, or functions, of which are transferred to any other department, board or commission by the provisions of any law so taking effect as aforesaid is primarily available in the discharge of all or several of the functions of such first department, board or commission, the controlling board, immediately upon the taking effect of such law, at a meeting open to the public, and after consultation with each of the departments, board or commissions to be affected by its action, shall ascertain and determine the proportion of the net balance of any such appropriation account which will be needed in the discharge of each of the functions or group of functions so transferred to a single department, board or commission, or the proportion thereof which will no longer be needed by reason of the abolition of any such functions. The board shall determine the amount of the net balance of such appropriation account attributable to each of the functions for which the original appropriation was made, and the auditor of state shall divide the appropriations accounts on the books of his office in accordance therewith, and in the event of the abolition of a function shall lapse the appropriation or the net balance of such appropriation account determined by the board to be attributable to such abolished function, into the fund from which the original appropriation was taken."

It is apparent from a consideration of section 7 that it only applies to the transfer, in whole or in part, of the functions of any existing department, board or commission to any other department, board or commission by a law which takes effect after the date on which the appropriation bill becomes effective, to wit, July

1, 1917, and therefore it does not in any manner apply when the act transferring the function of one board to another takes effect prior to the taking effect of the appropriation bill and that therefore the controlling board mentioned in the act would be without power to perform any duties under said section 7. The legislature does not seem to have made any provision relative to the situation which you present.

Even if we were to consider that while the act did not provide for such a situation, nevertheless it provided for a situation so similar that the spirit of the provision should be given effect rather than its strict letter, we are met with a further difficulty. Under the appropriation to the board of agriculture of Ohio, dairy and food division, there is an appropriation to the following effect: "4 drug inspectors $4,800.00" under personal service A-1. Under F-6 transportation, there is a sum of $20,000 appropriated which undoubtedly is to include transportation expenses of the four drug inspectors.

By an examination of the law pertaining to drug inspection I find that section 1177-12 authorizes the board of agriculture to enforce the laws against fraud, adulteration or impurities in "drugs" and unlawful labeling of the same within the state. That it is authorized to make uniform rules and regulations for the enforcement of the drug laws of the state.

Under section 1177-13 I find that the board of agriculture in the performance of its duty is authorized to enter any drug store "where it believes or has reason to believe drugs, * * * are made, prepared, dispensed, sold or offered for sale," and examine a package containing or supposed to contain a drug.

Under section 12757 a penalty is placed upon any person who refuses to allow the board of agriculture, its inspectors or agents to enter a drug store.

Section 5774 prohibits the manufacture for sale, offer for sale, the selling or delivering, or having in possession, of a drug which is adulterated.

Section 5775 defines the term "drug."

Section 12758 is a penal section against the selling, among other things, of a drug which is adulterated or misbranded.

Under section 12673 it is made the duty of the board of agriculture to enforce the provisions of section 12672 relating to the sale of cocaine, etc.

The bill to which you refer, being H. B. 158, amending section 1313, pertains solely to the enforcement of the laws pertaining to the practice of pharmacy and provides that the state board of pharmacy shall enforce such laws, the section providing:

> "It is the intention herein there the state board of pharmacy shall enforce or cause to be enforced the provisions of sections 12705, 12706, 12707, 12708, 12709 and 12710 of the General Code."

Section 12705 is a penal section for the managing and conducting of a retail drug store without having a legally registered pharmacist in charge thereof.

Section 12706 is a penal section relative to the dispensing or selling of a drug, etc., by one not being a legally registered pharmacist or assistant pharmacist.

Section 12707 states certain exceptions as does likewise section 12708.

Section 12709 refers to the filing of a false or forged affidavit with the state board of pharmacy, and section 12710 refers to the certificate of registration.

It is apparent, therefore, that the only laws to be enforced by the board of pharmacy are what may be strictly construed as "laws relating to the practice of pharmacy" and do not have any connection whatever with the question of the adulteration of drugs or to the sale of cocaine, etc.

It is apparent, therefore, from the above that there is necessity for the employment by the dairy and food division of the board of agriculture of drug inspectors and the number thereof has been determined by the legislature. I am informed that the mere fact that the board of agriculture will no longer enforce the provisions of sections 12705 to 12710 inclusive of the General Code will in no way lessen the work of the drug inspectors of the dairy and food division of the board of agriculture.

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion

(1) That section 7 of house bill 584 (general appropriation bill) does not apply to the situation which you have presented in your inquiry.

(2) That under the facts as I have them the situation presented by you would not be within the spirit of section 7 of H. B. 584 and would not authorize a transfer of a part of the appropriation made for drug inspectors to the board of pharmancy.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—DEPUTY CLERK IN PROBATE JUDGE'S OFFICE AND PROBATION OFFICER.

A deputy clerk in the probate judge's office may also be appointed probation officer in the court exercising juvenile jurisdiction, provided it is physically possible for one person to properly attend to the work of both offices.

As to question of civil service, see Opinion No. 93, March 8, 1917.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1917.

HON. FRED C. BECKER, Probate Judge, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter wherein you submit the following:

"I respectfully request your opinion based upon the facts stated and the question propounded herein and assure you that I shall greatly appreciate the courtesy of an opinion.

"STATEMENT OF FACTS.

"On the 9th day of February, 1917, I gave bond and assumed the duties of probate judge of Allen county, Ohio. On the same date by the action of the judge of the common pleas court of Allen county, Ohio, and myself as probate judge of Allen county, Ohio, I was designated as judge of the juvenile court of Allen county, Ohio, and am now serving as probate and juvenile judge of Allen county, Ohio, as fully appears by the journal of both common pleas and probate courts. (Sec. 1639 G. C. as amended.)

"Provisions of the General Code of Ohio governing the appointment of deputies in probate judge's office and probation officers in juvenile court:

"'Sec. 1584 G. C. Each probate judge shall have the care and custody of the files, papers, books, and records belonging to the probate office. He is authorized to perform the duties of clerk of his own court. He may appoint a deputy clerk or clerks, each of whom shall take an oath of office before entering upon the duties of his appointment, and when so qualified, may perform the duties appertaining to the office of clerk of the court. Each deputy clerk may administer oaths in all cases when necessary, in the discharge of his duties. Each probate judge may take a bond with such surety from his deputy as he deems necessary to secure the faithful performance of the duties of his appointment.

"'Sec. 2981 G. C. Such officers may appoint and employ necessary deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers or other employes for their respective offices, fix their compensation and discharge them, and shall file with the county auditor certificates of such action. Such compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate for each office the amount fixed by the commissioners for such office. When so fixed, the compensation of each duly appointed or employed deputy, assistant, bookkeeper, clerk and other em-employe shall be paid monthly from the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor.

"'Sec. 1662 G. C. The judge designated to exercise jurisdiction may appoint one or more discreet persons of good moral character, one or more of whom may be women, to serve as probation officers, during the pleasure of the judge. One of such officers shall be known as chief probation officer and there may be first, second and third assistants. Such chief probation officer and the first, second and third assistants shall receive such compensation as the judge appointing them may designate at the time of the appointment, but the compensation of the chief probation officer shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, that of the first assistant shall not exceed twelve hundred dollars per annum, and of the second and third shall not exceed one thousand dollars per annum, each payable monthly. The judge may appoint other probation officers, with or without compensation, but the entire compensation of all probation officers in any county shall not exceed the sum of forty dollars for each full thousand inhabitants of the county at the last federal census, and in no case shall the entire compensation of all probation officers in any county exceed the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars. The compensation of the probation officers shall be paid by the county treasurer from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor, which shall be issued upon itemized vouchers sworn to by the probation officers and certified to by the judge of the juvenile court.'

"QUESTION.

"In view of the foregoing provisions may a probate judge appoint a person as deputy and fix his salary in the probate judge's office and also appoint him as a probation officer and fix his salary in conformity with the statute governing salaries of probation officer; so that he may act and perform services in both the probate judge's office and as probation officer in the juvenile court and receive from each a salary?"

Section 1662, referred to in your letter of inquiry, was amended in 103 O. L. 874 and again in 107 O. L. 19, said last amendment reading as follows:

"The judge designated to exercise jurisdiction may appoint one or more discreet persons of good moral character, one or more of whom may be a woman, to serve as probation officers, during the pleasure of the judge. One of such officers shall be known as chief probation officer and there may be one or more assistants. Such chief probation officer and assistants shall receive such compensation as the judge appointing them may designate at the time of the appointment, but the compensation of the chief probation officer shall not exceed three thousand dollars per annum and that of the assistants shall not exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum. The judge may appoint other probation officers, with or without compensation, but the entire compensation of all probation officers in any county shall not exceed the sum of forty dollars for each full thousand inhabitants of the county at the last preceding federal census. The compensation of the probation officers shall be paid by the county treasurer from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor, which shall be issued upon itemized vouchers sworn to by the probation officers and certified to by the judge of the juvenile court. The county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the treasury and the treasurer shall honor and pay the same, for all salaries, compensation and expenses provided for in this act, in the order in which proper vouchers therefor are presented to him."

This exact question was passed upon by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to Hon. E. C. Peck, probate judge of Williams county, Ohio, on August 18, 1914, being Opinion No. 1103 and found in Vol. II of the Annual Report of the Attorney General for 1914, at page 117. In the course of the opinion, after referring to sections 1584 and 1682 as set out in your letter, Mr. Hogan states:

> "The rule of incompatibility is stated by Judge Dillon, at page 727 of volume 1, of his work on municipal corporations, as follows:
> "'Incompatibility in offices exists when the nature and duties of the two offices are such as to render it improper from the considerations of public policy, for the incumbent to retain both.'
> "From a consideration of the duties of the deputy clerk of the probate court and probation officer, I can see nothing that would make the two offices incompatible under the above rule, and it is my opinion that they may be held by one and the same person, providing, of course, that it is physically possible for one person to properly attend to the work of both offices."

I concur in the conclusion reached by Mr. Hogan and therefore advise you that the probate judge may appoint a person as deputy and also appoint him as probation officer, when the probate judge exercises juvenile jurisdiction, provided, of course, that it is physically possible for one person to properly attend to the work of both offices.

The question relative to the probation officer being within civil service has been answered by Opinion No. 93, rendered to Hon. Ben. A. Bickley, prosecuting attorney of Butler county, on March 8, 1917, a copy of which opinion is herewith enclosed.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMMITMENT TO HOSPITAL FOR INSANE—JURISDICTION OF PROBATE COURT—PAYMENT OF COSTS WHEN COMMITMENT ILLEGAL—HOW PERSON COMMITTED BY COURT WITHOUT JURISDICTION CAN BE RECOMMITTED.

Where a person lives in one county, and has a legal settlement in a township therein, the probate court of another county has no jurisdiction to commit said person to a hospital for the insane, the above facts appearing of record in the commitment proceedings.

There is no authority for the payment of costs in the transportation of such person and a re-commitment to the hospital for the insane is necessary. This can be done by having the probate judge of the county in which such person has a legal residence visit the state hospital and after having satisfied himself of her condition return to his county and proceed with the commitment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1917.

HON. GEORGE W. TEHAN, Probate Judge, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of recent date, as follows:

> "We have had some correspondence with the state board of administration and the bureau of inspection arising upon the following state of facts:
> "In January of this year this court committed L. B., an insane patient, resident of Fayette county. On account of tied up traffic the probate judge of Fayette county requested that she be committed from this county, she being at the time in the tuberculosis hospital here. She was extremely violent. The probate judge of Fayette county voluntarily offered to have that county pay the costs and after the commitment was made a bill was sent to Fayette county and the same was promptly paid. The bureau of inspection states that these fees should be returned to Fayette county. The bureau also took occasion to say that this court had no authority to make the committment but the state board of administration says there is no question but what the commitment was properly made.

"What we now would like to have a ruling on is, whether we shall remit the fees back to Fayette county. It did not seem fair that our county should stand the costs of the commitment when the patient did not have a residence here."

You also advise that the records of your county show this patient to have been a resident of Fayette county, with a legal settlement therein, at the time of her commitment to the insane hospital.

Sections 1953, 1954, 1961 and 1981 of the General Code provide:

"Sec. 1953. For the admission of patients to a hospital for the insane, the following proceedings shall be had. A resident citizen of the proper county must file with the probate judge of such county an affidavit, substantially as follows:

"The State of Ohio,_____County, ss:

"_____the undersigned, a citizen of _____county, Ohio, being sworn, says that he believes_____is insane (or, that in consequence of his insanity, his being at large is dangerous to the community.) He has a legal settlement in_____township, in this county.

"Dated this_____day of_____A. D. _____

"Sec. 1954. When such affidavit is filed, the probate judge shall forthwith issue his warrant to a suitable person, commanding him to bring the person alleged to be insane before him, on a day therein named, not more than five days after the affidavit was filed, and shall immediately issue subpoenas for such witnesses as he deems necessary, two of whom shall be reputable physicians, commanding the persons in such subpoenas named to appear before him on the return day of the warrant. If any person disputes the insanity of the party charged, the probate judge shall issue subpoenas for such person or persons as are demanded on behalf of the person alleged to be insane.

"Sec. 1961. The warrant, with the receipt of the superintendent thereon, shall be returned to the probate judge and filed by him with the other papers relating to the case. Until a certificate is furnished by a medical witness that the patient is free from all infectious diseases and from vermin, the probate judge shall refuse to make such application to the superintendent. The relatives of a person charged with insanity, or found to be insane, in all cases, may take charge of and keep such person if they desire to do so. In such case, the probate judge, before whom the inquest has been held, shall deliver such insane person to them.

"Sec. 1981. The probate judge shall make a complete record of all proceedings in lunacy. The costs and expenses, other than the fees of the probate judge and the sheriff, to be paid under the provisions of this chapter, shall be as follows: To each of the two physicians designated by the court to make examination and certificate, five dollars, and witness fees as allowed in the court of common pleas; to witnesses the same fees as are allowed in the court of common pleas; to the person other than the sheriff or deputy sheriff making the arrest, the actual and necessary expense thereof and such fees as are allowed by law, to sheriffs for making arrests in criminal cases; to the person other than the sheriff, deputy sheriff or assistant, for taking any insane person to state hospital or removing one therefrom upon the warrant of the probate judge, mileage at the rate of five cents per mile, going and returning; and for the transportation of each patient to or from the hospital, mileage at the rate of two cents per mile; to one assistant to convey to the hospital when authorized by the probate judge, two dollars and, two cents per mile each way; all mileage allowed herein shall be for the distance actually and necessarily traveled."

It is clear from a reading of section 1953 G. C. that the patient referred to in your communication should have been committed to the hospital for the insane by the probate judge of Fayette county, since she was a resident of that county. Your court in Clark county, therefore, had no authority to commit such woman to the Columbus state hospital, and inasmuch as your court was without jurisdiction, it follows that no fees can be charged in connection with such commitment.

In order that the commitment of this woman to the Columbus state hospital for the insane may be lawful, it will be necessary for her to be re-committed by the probate court of Fayette county. This can be done in one of two ways. Such woman can be returned from the Columbus state hospital to the probate court of Fayette county and committed by the probate judge of that county in the regular manner, or, if it is deemed unsuitable or improper to return this woman to the probate court of Fayette county on account of the character of her affliction or insanity, such probate judge may visit such woman in the Columbus state hospital and certify that he is so ascertaining the condition of such woman by actual inspection, and then a proceeding may be had in the probate court of Fayette county regularly committing her to the Columbus state hospital. This by reason of section 1955 G. C., which reads:

"If, by reason of the character of the affliction or insanity, it is deemed unsuitable or improper to bring such person into such probate court, the probate judge shall personally visit such person and certify that he has so ascertained the condition of the person by actual inspection, and all proceedings as herein required may then be had in the absence of such person."

If the latter method is chosen, the probate judge of Fayette county may select two physicians from such county to pass upon the mental condition of such patient, or, since she is now located at the Columbus state hospital, he may select two physicians from Columbus for the same purpose and have them testify in the probate court of Fayette county.

I would also advise you that since there was no jurisdiction in your county in the commitment of this woman to the Columbus state hospital and no authority, therefore, for the payment of any fees to any officers in connection with such invalid commitment, there is no authority for the reimbursement of your county for such expense by the authorities of Fayette county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO ASSIST IN IMPROVING HIGHWAY WITHIN A CITY—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY ASSIST IN SUCH IMPROVEMENT WITH CONSENT OF CITY COUNCIL—MAY ALSO LAY OUT COUNTY HIGHWAY WITHIN CITY LIMITS AND ERECT BRIDGE THEREON—VACATION OF HIGHWAYS.

1. The state highway commissioner has no jurisdiction to improve or assist in improving any part of the highways lying within the limits of a city, his jurisdiction being limited to villages.

2. The county commissioners may, if the council of a municipality consents, construct a highway lying within the municipality, or may join in with the municipality in said construction.

3. The authorities of the municipality and of the county must take concurrent action in vacating that part of the public highway which lies within the corporate limits of the municipality, for the reason that it formerly was a part of the public roads of the county.

4. The county commissioners may vacate that part of the highway which is no longer used as a part of the main market roads of the state.

5. The authorities of the municipality have jurisdiction in the matter of relocating and establishing the streets lying within the corporate limits of the municipality.

6. The county commissioners have authority to lay out county highways within the corporate limits of a municipality and erect a bridge thereon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1917.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 25, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to several questions therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "I submitted and left with you on the 18th inst. a map or plat to change and improve a part of main market road No. 9 in this county where it enters the city of Dover from the south, and went over the same with you somewhat in detail as to the reasons for such change, and for the improvement, and the law applicable thereto.
> "I now submit to you in writing the facts pertaining thereto and ask you to render me your opinion of the law in reference thereto as soon as you possibly can.
> "You will notice from the map you have that main market road No. 9 extends through the city of Dover. The corporation line of the city of Dover on the south is the center of a stream known as Sugarcreek. This road then enters the city of Dover from the south at a point about the center of a bridge across this creek. From this bridge it crosses a low tract of ground, unimproved, for the distance of about 1,000 feet until it strikes an improved street in the city of Dover. This low ground is called the 'bottom' of said creek, and during high water it becomes impassable for public travel, and crossing this roadway at grade between said bridge and said improved street in Dover is the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad running north and south, and a main line of the Pennsylvania running north and south, and fourteen switches and side-tracks.

"You will also notice on this map a county road extending northward along the south bank of this creek from this main market road from a point near the south end of said bridge.

'It is desired by the commissioners of this county, the council of the city of Dover and the railroad companies, to change this main market road beginning at the intersection of this road with said county road and run it northward along said county road on the south side of said creek a distance of about 800 feet and there cross said creek upon a new bridge to be constructed and cross said low ground and strike another improved street in the city of Dover as shown by said map. They desire to cross this low ground on a viaduct to be constructed by the city and the railroads and thus have an overhead crossing across said railroads, switches and side-tracks. By doing this it will eliminate danger and obstructions to public travel on said main market road by high water and it will eliminate the danger of crossing so many railroad tracks. In connection with this they desire to vacate said part of main market road No. 9 from its intersection with said county road on the south side of said creek to where it connects with said improved street in the city of Dover.

"Several questions of law arise in order to make this change and improvement, upon which I would like to have your opinion.

'1. Who has the authority to vacate a part of main market road outside of a municipality; the state highway commissioner or the county commissioners, or must they both act thereon?

"2. Who has the authority to vacate the unimproved part of a main market road that lies within a municipality; the state highway commissioner or the council of the city, or must both act thereon?

"3. Who has the authority to re-locate, change and establish an unimproved part of a main market road within the limits of a city, the state highway commissioner, the council of the city, or must both act together?

"4. If that part of said main market road within the city of Dover should be changed as indicated above and should be improved as so indicated, who should have jurisdiction within the corporate limits of the city to grant, supervise and construct such improvement; the state highway commissioner or the council, or both?

"5. If such change should be made and such improvement constructed by the state paying a part, the county paying a part, the city of Dover a part and the railroad companies a part, what in your opinion would be the necessary legislation to enact on the part of each body to accomplish the same? In other words point out the necessary steps to be taken by each body in order to make a valid agreement for that purpose."

Before answering your questions, I desire to say that I am answering them on the theory that Dover is a city and not a village, as it had a population of 6,621 at the census of 1910.

Further, I am answering your questions under the provisions of the law which will become effective on the 28th day of June, 1917, for the reason that you suggested, in an oral conversation had with a member of our department, that you would not be able to take any of the steps in reference to the improvement under consideration before that time.

With these two preliminary statements in mind, I will proceed to a consideration of the questions you submit.

From your communication and from the map to which you call attention in your communication, I am rendering this opinion upon the following facts:

One of the main market roads of the state of Ohio runs through the city of Dover. As it now runs, it crosses numerous railroad tracks at grade within the corporate limits of the city of Dover. For this reason it is the desire of the state, through the state highway commissioner, of the county of Tuscarawas, the city of Dover and the railroad companies over whose tracks the said market road now passes at grade, to deviate from the present course and enter the city of Dover over another street, and at the same time the said market road is improved to construct an overhead bridge over the railroad tracks which will be crossed by the new route of travel.

It will be noted that this will call into question the jurisdiction of the state highway commissioner, the county commissioners and the authorities of Dover, and this matter of jurisdiction to act in the premises is chiefly that to which you call attention in your communication.

In answering your question, I will not take them up in the order in which they are set out in your communication, but will in the end endeavor to have them all answered.

First, let us note just what authority the state has in the matter of consructing inter-county highways or main market roads that pass through a city, with a view to that part of the said road that lies within the limits of a city.

The jurisdiction of the state highway commissioner to act in reference to main market roads or intercounty highways passing through cities and villages is set out in sections 1193, 1193-1, 1193-2 and 1231-3 G. C. These sections are too lengthy to quote in full, but a consideration of the same will develop the fact that the state highway commissioner has no jurisdiction whatever to join in with the county or the city in the construction of a main market road or intercounty highway that lies within the city limits.

Section 1193 G. C. provides that the application for state aid, in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty or main market roads.—

> "may include any portion of a highway in the limits of any village when the same is a continuation of the proposed improvement."

Section 1193-1 G. C. provides that when—

> "the improvement of an intercounty highway or main market road is extended into or through a village, or an improvement constituting an extension of an improved intercounty highway or main market road is constructed within a village, it shall not be necessary for the village to assume any part of the cost and expense of the proposed improvement," when the county commissioners or township trustees perform the work under the supervision of the state highway department.

Section 1193-2 G. C. provides:

> "Whenever any portion of a road to be improved by the state highway commissioner in co-operation with the county commissioners or township trustees lies within the corporate limits of a village," > such and such a procedure may follow.

Section 1231-3 G. C. provides as follows:

"The state highway commissioner may extend a proposed road improvement into or through a village when the consent of the council of said village has been first obtained;"

and said section further provides that the state highway commissioner and the council of the village—

"shall be governed as to all matters in connection with said improvement within said village by the statutes relating to road improvements through municipalities, by boards of county commissioners."

From these sections—and there are no other sections dealing with this matter—it is quite evident that the state highway commissioner cannot assist in any way with the construction of the main market roads within the limits of the city of Dover, his jurisdiction being limited to the construction of roads within villages.

Let us for the present leave the question of the jurisdiction of the state highway commissioner in the matter, and turn to the matter of the jurisdiction of the county commissioners.

Section 6949 G. C. provides in part as follows:

"The board of county commissioners may construct a proposed road improvement into, within or through a municipality, when the consent of the council of said municipality has been first obtained * * *."

It will be noted in this section that the board of county commissioners has jurisdiction in the matter of constructing highways not only through a village, but through a city as well, for the reason that the general term "municipality" is used.

With the two above propositions in mind, I am of the opinion that it will be necessary, in the construction of the highway which is mentioned in your communication, for the officials to follow two different plans or schemes:

1. The county and the state can, under the provisions of sections 1191 et seq. G. C., unite in the construction of that part of the improvement which lies without the incorporated limits of the city of Dover. They can unite in the construction of this part of the highway upon such terms as they may agree, under the provisions of the statutes in relation thereto.

2. The county and the city of Dover may unite in the construction of that part of the proposed improvement which lies within the corporate limits of the city of Dover. This they may do under and by virtue of the provisions of sections 6949 et seq. G. C.

This still leaves for consideration the matter of the construction of the overhead bridge over the railroads which are crossed by the contemplated improvement. You state the city of Dover and the railroad companies are willing and ready that such an overhead bridge or bridges be constructed.

Section 8863 G. C. provides:

"If the council of a municipal corporation in which a railroad or railroads, and a street or other public highway cross each other at a grade or otherwise, * * and the directors of the railroad company or companies are of the opinion that the security and convenience of the public require alterations in such crossing, or the approaches thereto, or in the location of the railroad or railroads or the public way, or the grades thereof, so as to avoid a crossing at grade * * * they may be made as hereinafter provided * *."

Hence, in section 8863 et seq. G. C. you will find a comprehensive scheme which may be followed by the railroads interested and the city of Dover.

From all the above it will readily be seen that the improvement which your officials have under contemplation will necessarily divide itself into three separate and distinct parts:

(1.) The county commissioners and the state highway department may join in the construction of that part of the improvement which lies without the corporate limits of the city of Dover.

(2.) The county of Tuscarawas and the city of Dover may unite in the construction of that part of the improvement which lies within the corporate limits of the city of Dover, not taking into consideration the matter of the overhead bridge or bridges and the approaches leading thereto.

(3.) The city of Dover and the railroad companies, over whose tracks the contemplated improvement will pass, may unite in the construction of the overhead bridge or bridges and the approaches leading thereto.

This, as I understand it, will take care of the matter of the entire improvement. It will be observed from this reasoning that it will be necessary for all the parties interested in this improvement to agree as a whole upon some line of action, and after the whole improvement is mapped out by all the parties interested, it can then be divided into its different component parts, and the various parties then take up the work that each has to do, as above indicated.

However, before leaving the matter of the improvement, I desire to take up the question of the construction of the bridge which will cross the creek on the new route, the center line of which creek forms the boundary of the city of Dover. Part of this bridge will rest within the city limits of Dover and part will rest without the city limits. For this reason it is not an easy question to decide whether the city or the county will have authority to construct this bridge. The statutes of our state seem to make no provision for such a situation.

The general proposition is that the county commissioners must construct and keep in repair all necessary bridges over the streams on state and county roads, whether the bridges are within the city limits or not; but the city itself must build and keep in repair bridges that are located on the streets of the city and do not form a part of a state or county road.

But here is a bridge that neither lies wholly within nor wholly without a municipality. The only feasible plan, as I view it, to make provisions for the construction of this bridge, is as follows:

When the city of Dover locates the street hereinafter provided for in subdivision "3," let it establish the street to a point not nearer to the said creek than will permit the erection of the bridge, together with the necessary approaches thereto, on territory outside of and beyond the limits of the street as established by the city of Dover. Then let the county commissioners lay out and establish a county road from the point where the street ends to a point that will intersect with the highway upon which the new main market route is to be established. Then the state highway commissioner, when he changes the route of the main market road, can extend it to the center line of the stream, which is the boundary line of the city of Dover. This will enable the county commissioners to erect the bridge across the river, because it will be a bridge located upon a county road, although a part of it is within the corporate limits of the city of Dover.

That the county commissioners have authority to locate a county road, even though a part or all of it is within the corporate limits of a municipality, is clear from the decisions of our courts.

Wells v. McLaughlin et al., 17 Ohio 99.

Lewis et al. v. Laylin, 46 O. S. 663, 672.
Railway v. Cummins, 53 O. S. 683, without report.

Let us now proceed with the consideration of certain other questions which you ask, having to do with the contemplated improvement.

1. As to the matter of changing the route of the existing main market road.

This will be done under the supervision of the state highway commissioner, the provisions therefor being found in section 1189 G. C.

2. If any new right of way is needed in the new route, who will secure it?

All right of way that may be needed will be secured by the county commissioners, provisions for which are made in section 1201 G. C.; that is, as to part outside of the city limits.

3. As to the matter of relocating or establishing the new street required for the construction of the proposed improvement.

Neither the state highway nor the county commissioners have any jurisdiction of this matter, but it rests entirely with the municipal authorities, provision for which is made in section 3714 G. C.

4. In reference to the matter of vacating the part of the present main market road which will no longer be used after the change of route and which lies outside of the corporate limits of the city of Dover.

Section 6860 G. C. makes provisions for this and reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners shall have power to locate, establish, alter, widen, straighten, vacate or change the direction of roads as hereinafter provided. This power extends to all roads within the county, except the inter-county and main market roads."

It will be noted in this section that the provisions of the same do not apply to main market roads, but it must be remembered that when the state highway commissioner changes the route of the main market road, the parts abandoned will lose their identity as main market road and will become mere county road, and thus the county commissioners will have authority to vacate the same.

The facts in this case are different from those upon which I based an opinion rendered to Hon. James F. Flynn, Jr., prosecuting attorney, Sandusky, Ohio, on May 21, 1917, and hence the conclusion herein reached is different.

5. As to vating the part of the route of the main market road which lies within the corporate limits of the city of Dover.

In so far as this highway partakes of the nature of a street, the municipal authorities may vacate the same, provisions for which are made in section 3725 et seq. G. C.

However, it was held in Railway v. Cummins, 53 O. S. 683, without report, that a municipal corporation cannot abandon a county road which by annexation has been brought within its limits. Under this holding of the court it will be necessary also for the county commissioners to vacate this part of the highway under the provisions of section 6860 G. C., above set forth.

Having covered the whole matter suggested by you in your communication, let us now note the different steps which must be taken and the order in which they are to be taken:

(1.) The city of Dover must first open up or establish the new street, in order to provide a complete route for the main market road as it is to be established.

(2.) After the street is established, as hereinbefore set out, the county commissioners can establish the county road to connect with the street in the manner hereinbefore indicated. Section 6860 G. C.

(3.) After this is done, the state highway commissioner may change the route of the main market road, extending the same up to the middle line of said creek, which is the corporate limit of the city of Dover. Section 1189 G. C.

(4.) Proceedings can then begin in the way of the construction of said improvement:

(a) The county commissioners and the state highway department constructing the part of the highway lying outside of the city of Dover.

(b) The county of Tuscarawas and the city of Dover constructing the part of the highway that lies within the city of Dover.

(c) The county commissioners constructing the bridge which spans the creek and leads into the city of Dover.

(d) The city of Dover and the railroad companies interested constructing the overhead bridge.

So far as I can see, all these constructions might proceed together, it being unnecessary to follow any particular order.

(5.) Vacation of the parts of the highway no longer used. This vacation cannot be had until the improvement is fully constructed:

(a) The part outside of the city of Dover may be vacated by the county commissioners.

(b) The part inside of the city of Dover may be vacated by the concurrent action of the county commissioners and the council of the city of Dover.

In passing, however, I might call attention a little more specifically in reference to the matter of the construction of the bridge, by the county commissioners, across the said creek. Section 5638 G. C. provides that the county commissioners shall not levy a tax, appropriate money or issue bonds for the purpose of building a county bridge, the expense of which will exceed $18,000.00, except in case of casualty, and as thereinafter provided, without first submitting to the voters of the county the question as to the policy of making such expenditure. The words, "as hereinafter provided," refer to the provisions of section 5643 G. C., which reads as follows:

> "Sec. 5643. If an important bridge ,belonging to or maintained by any county, becomes dangerous to public travel, by decay or otherwise and is condemned for public travel by the commissioners of such county, and the repairs thereof, or the building of a new bridge in place thereof, is deemed, by them, necessary for the public accommodation, the commissioners, without first submitting the question to the voters of the county, may levy a tax for either of such purposes in an amount not to exceed in any one year two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property upon the tax duplicate of said county."

It is my opinion that you will be compelled to take into consideration the provisions of these two sections, in the erection of said bridge, and if it costs more than $18,000.00, the matter will have to be submitted to the voters of the county, unless it comes within the exceptions found in section 5643 G. C., even though the location of the bridge will be somewhat removed from the present location of the same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WRIT OF EXECUTION—WHEN SAME RETURNED UNSERVED—AND CONSTABLE RESIGNS—SECOND WRIT MAY BE ISSUED TO ANOTHER CONSTABLE.

Where a constable returns a writ of execution unserved, and resigns his office, a second writ may issue to another constable or to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1917.

HON. J. L. HEISE, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 14, 1917, you enclose for my opinion the following statement of facts:

> "An execution was issued by a justice of the peace in Pickaway county, Ohio, which was regular on its face and against the chattels of the defendant, and in the absence of chattels against the body of the defendant for fines and costs. Said execution was placed in the hands of a constable of Saltcreek township, in said county, who retained said writ, without executing same, for a period of 26 days, the writ being returnable in 30 days. After retaining the writ for said period the constable resigned his office and returned the writ unserved. Said execution is now dead.
> "Can the justice issue a new execution and what procedure should the justice follow under the above circumstances?"

General Code section 13718 provides as follows:

> "When a magistrate or court renders judgment for a fine, an execution may issue for such judgment and the costs of prosecution, to be levied on the property, or, in default thereof, upon the body of the defendant. The officer holding such writ may arrest such defendant in any county and commit him to the jail of the county in which such writ issued, until such fine and costs are paid, or secured to be paid, or he is otherwise legally discharged."

By the above section an execution may issue for the judgment on a fine and costs of prosecution, the same to be levied on the property of the defendant, or if there be no property of the defendant upon which such execution may levy, then the body of the defendant may be brought before the court or taken into custody.

The above rights were all possessed by the constable while he was in office and similar rights existed in the sheriff of your county or of any county in which the defendant resided.

General Code section 13719 provides:

> "An execution, as provided in the next preceding section, may issue to the sheriff of any county in which the defendant resides, is found or has property, and the sheriff shall execute the writ. If the defendant is taken, the sheriff shall commit him to the jail of the county in which the writ issued, and deliver a certified copy of the writ to the sheriff of such county, who shall detain the offender until he is discharged as provided in such section."

All would be perfectly clear, then, if said execution had issued in the first instance to the sheriff or if its terms had been carried out by the constable. Having been returned, however, unserved, the question is, can a new execution be issued in the place of or in addition to the one which was issued to the constable and returned unserved. As to this there seems to be no question, for it is held in Elliott v. Elmore, 16 Ohio, p. 27, that:

> "Two executions of the same kind may be carried on the same judgment."

The above rule was enunciated in a civil proceeding and our civil procedure is followed in criminal procedure except where the same is modified by the criminal statutes. It was held in Faris v. State, 3 O. S. 159, 163, that:

> "Though a constable or sheriff may render himself liable to the plaintiff in execution by failing to make a levy or return within the time limited by law, the principal defendant in execution cannot object to the levying of a second execution."

Anwering your question, then, I advise you that the justice of the peace shall issue a new execution to the constable or, if there be no constable, then to the sheriff of the county in which the defendant resides.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS—POWER OF BOARD OF EDUCATION TO BORROW MONEY TO PAY FOR SUCH TRANSPORTATION.

A board of education may borrow money under section 5656 G. C. to pay for transportation of pupils and thus extinguish a valid legal obligation of such board which they have found exists.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1917.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication in which is contained for my opinion the following statement of facts:

> "The West Elkton village school district is overdrawn in the contingent fund $1,799; they have a balance in the tuition fund of $1,212.37; they have sufficient funds to pay their teachers for the balance of the year but have no funds with which to pay the hack drivers and the other contingent expenses. The fund is overdrawn more than their August draw will be and the question now comes up as to what is best to be done with reference to the school. * * * As the matter stood in front of me I suggested to the school board the advisability of closing down the schools. What would you suggest in the premises?"

It is the policy of our law that no one of the four particular funds into which the school levy is devided by General Code section 7587 shall be overdrawn.

I know of no way in which a fund can be overdrawn legitimately. All expenses, except those upon contracts for the employment of teachers, officers and other school employes of boards of education are subject to the conditions of section 5660 G. C., which provides that before a board of education shall enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass required for the payment of such obligation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn. So that any expenditure, except in the employment of teachers, officers and other school employes, would require such certificate. If your deficit, however, arose on account of transportation of pupils, then it has been held that no certificate would be required because the persons who performed such transportation thereof are considered "other school employes."

In Opinion No. 1226, Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1914, page 1394, it is held:

> "Whether or not the money may be borrowed to pay for the transportation of pupils depends, therefore, upon the further question as to whether a contract for such transportation is a contract for the employment of a 'school employe' within the meaning of section 5661 General Code, as well as upon any other fact that might make such transportation a legal obligation of the district, notwithstanding the limitations of section 5660 General Code. * * * If transportation were provided for by the hiring of a team and driver, the contract would be only for the employment of a school employe within the meaning of section 5661 General Code."

So that not being subject to the required certificate, above mentioned, it is then permissible, when any such indebtedness arises, for the board of education to borrow money or issue bonds of the school district, as provided by section 5656 G. C., and pay said indebtedness.

Said section reads in part as follows:

> "* * * The board of education of a school district * * * for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

The above section permits the school district to borrow money and it is held in Commissioners v. State, 78 O. S. 287-303, quoting from Merrill v. Town of Monticello, 138 U. S. 673, that:

> "It is admitted that the power to borrow money, or to incur indebtedness, carries with it the power to issue the usual evidences of indebtedness by the corporation to the lender or other creditor. Such evidences may be in the form of promissory notes, warrants, and, perhaps, most generally, in that of a bond."

And in opinion 1226, above cited, it is held:

> "The board of education may borrow money to pay a charge against the district on account of transportation * * * and that a contract for furnishing transportation would be a contract of employment * * * and that a local board of education has power, under section 5656 G. C., to borrow money for this purpose to the extent that transportation may be required by law."

It is further held in opinion No. 418, Attorney-General's Reports, 1911-1912, page 551, that:

"Contracts for the employment of teachers, officers and other school employes of boards of education are excepted from the general rule requiring the presence of money in the fund at the time of entering into the contract, as a condition precedent to the validity of such contract. That being the case, it would be possible for such a contract to be a subsisting and valid obligation of the district, for which, in a given year, it would not have money, either in the treasury or levied and in process of collection. Being a valid obligation of the district the board of education might lawfully pass the resolution referred to in section 5658.

"Therefore, such obligations, which I suppose are within the purview of your question, being 'the usual running expenses of the school' may be met by borrowing money under section 5656."

From the last above quotation, however, it must not be understood that the usual running expenses of schools are outside of the provisions of section 5660 G. C., except in reference to contracts for employment of teachers, officers and other school employes of boards of education.

I therefore advise you that under the conditions above noted your board of education has the right to borrow money or issue bonds under section 5656 G. C. to make up said deficit.

You suggest that the board of education is going behind every year at least $2,000.00, and that the only remedy, in your judgment, was to have a vote on levying an additional three mills for five years. You must remember, however, that all limitations outside of the exceptions noted in sections 4450, 4451, 5629, 7419 and 7630-1 of the General Code must not exceed fifteen mills, for General Code section 5649-5b provides:

"If a majority of the electors voting thereon at such election vote in favor thereof, it shall be lawful to levy taxes within such taxing district at a rate not to exceed such increased rate for and during the period provided for in such resolution, but in no case shall the combined maximum rate for all taxes levied in any year in any county, city, village, school district, or other taxing district, under the provisions of this and the two preceding sections and sections 5649-1, 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code as herein enacted, exceed fifteen mills."

You further ask what I suggest in the premises. It is, of course, impossible for me to suggest to you in this opinion all the courses which might be followed in the operation of the schools of said district, for under every given set of circumstances a different rule prevails and some of the things which would enter into my consideration would be the kind of district, tax valuation, population, adjoining districts, grade of schools and numerous other things, each, as above noted, depending upon the particular case and all probably unnecessary to consider if relief can be had by your district under section 5656 G. C.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

BONDS—FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT—ISSUED UNDER SECTION 1223 G. C.—MAY BE ISSUED BEFORE ASSESSMENT IS MADE AGAINST ABUTTING PROPERTY OWNER.

Bonds issued by county commissioners under and by virtue of the provisions of section 1223 G. C. may in point of time be issued before the assessment is made against the abutting property owners in the matter of any road improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1917.

HON. FRANK CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of June 12, 1917, in which you ask for my opinion upon a certain matter therein set out, was received. Your communication reads as follows:

> "Section 1223 of the General Code of Ohio provides that the county commissioners may, in anticipation of the collection of special assessments and taxes, sell the bonds of the county for the purpose of procuring funds with which to construct and repair roads in the manner set forth in sections 1178 to 1231-3 of the General Code of Ohio.
> "In sections prior to section 1223 provisions are made for assessing ten per cent. of the cost of the improvement and construction of a pike on an intercounty highway upon the abutting property owners according to the benefits.
> "I desire your opinion as to whether it is necessary to have these special assessments apportioned by the township trustees and such apportionment certified to the county auditor before the resolution providing for the issuance of bonds in the manner set forth in section 1223 is passed; or can this resolution be passed and the bonds issued and sold prior to the apportionment of the assessments?"

The direct question you have in mind is this: As to whether, when the county commissioners decide to issue bonds under and by virtue of the provisions of section 1223 G. C., these bonds may be issued before the assessment is made against the abutting property owners, or must the bonds be issued after the assessment is made against the abutting property owners?

The direct answer to your question is that the bonds may be issued before the assessment is made against the abutting property owners.

In order that we may get a correct understanding in reference to this matter, let us note a little history leading up to the point at which the assessment against the abutting property owners can logically and safely be made:

Section 1195 G. C. provides that if the state highway commissioner approves of the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of an intercounty highway or main market road for which application has been made by the county commissioners, he shall certify his approval of the application, or any part thereof, to the county commissioners.

Sectoin 1196 G. C. provides that he shall then cause to be made plans, specifications, profiles and estimates for said improvement.

Section 1199 G. C. provides that these plans, etc., shall be transmitted to the county commissioners, with the certificate of approval of the state highway commissioner endorsed thereon.

Section 1200 G. C. provides that, if the county commissioners approve of such plans, profiles, etc., then they shall pass a resolution adopting the same and send a certified copy of such resolution to the state highway commissioner.

Under the provisions of section 1218 G. C. the state highway commissioner cannot enter into a contract for the improvement of a highway until the county commissioners shall have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance that part of the cost and expense of said improvement over and above the amount to be paid by the state. But under the provisions of section 5660 G. C. the county commissioners cannot enter into such an agreement until the county auditor shall have certified to the county commissioners that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it must be taken for said improvement. However, if bonds have been issued and in process of delivery, these bonds, for the purpose of the certificate, may be considered to be in the treasury to the credit of the fund.

From all these provisions it is readily seen that, if the county commissioners decide to issue bonds to take care of that part of the cost and expense of an improvement to be borne by the county, township and abutting property owners, the bonds must be issued before the county commissioners can enter into the agreement to bear their share of the cost and expense, and this agreement must be made before the contract of the state highway commissioner is entered into. Hence, the bonds must be issued before the contract can be entered into by the state highway commissioner for the improvement of the highway.

Section 1211 G. C. provides that upon the completion of the improvement, the chief highway engineer shall immediately ascertain the cost and expense thereof and apportion the same to the state, county, township or townships and abutting property owners; and from the provisions of section 1214 G. C., unless otherwise provided, the county must pay twenty-five per cent of all cost and expense of the improvement, the township fifteen per cent., and the abutting property owners ten per cent. of the cost and expense of the improvement, and said section 1214 G. C. further provides that the township trustees shall make the assessment against the abutting property owners.

From the provisions of sections 1211 and 1214 G. C. it is readily seen that the assessment against the abutting property owners cannot logically be made until the improvement is fully completed, because it cannot be accurately ascertained what the abutting property owners will have to bear until the work is completed.

To be sure, I am not holding that it is absolutely essential in law that the assessment be put off until the work is completed, but if it is made before it would simply be an estimated amount that could be assessed against the abutting property owners.

I am aware that it is thought by some that the provision of section 11 of article XII of the state constitution compels a different conclusion from that above indicated. This provision of the state constitution, which is quite familiar, reads as follows:

> "No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivisions thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

I think it is a sufficient answer to the contention that this constitutional provision requires the trustees of a township to apportion assessments against abutting property owners to meet their share of an intercounty highway improvement, or to levy a tax on the taxable property in the township to pay the township's share of such improvement, before the county commissioners are authorized to issue bonds covering the same under section 1223 G. C., to note that the constitutional provision above quoted, as construed in the opinion of the court in the case of Link v. Karb, 89 O. S., 326, 338, has reference only to the legislation, to wit, ordinance or resolution, whereby the issue of the bonds is provided for, and is effective only as requiring that such ordinance, resolution or other legislation shall make provision for an annual levy of taxes sufficient in amount to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, which provision, when so incorporated in the ordinance, resolution or other legislation providing for the issue of such bonds, is mandatory upon subsequent taxing authorities who must make such annual levy, regardless of what exigencies may arise in the future. Moreover, with respect to your precise question, which concerns only the matter of the apportionment and certification of assessments by the township trustees against the owners of abutting property to pay their share of the cost and expense of an intercounty highway improvement, it will be noted that the provision of the state constitution above quoted makes no reference to assessments, nor does it enjoin upon any authority the duty of making assessments in connection with the matter of issuing bonds.

Hence, answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion on the considerations above noted that bonds may be issued by the county commissioners under section 1223 General Code covering the cost and expense of an intercounty highway improvement before assessments are apportioned and certified by the township trustees against the owners of abutting property for the purpose of paying their share of the cost and expense of such improvement.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PROBATE COURT—MAHONING COUNTY—JURISDICTION AS JUVENILE COURT WILL END—UNDER ACT PROVIDING ADDITIONAL COMMON PLEAS JUDGE—DIVISION DOMESTIC RELATIONS.

Under the act providing for an additional common pleas judge in Mahoning county to be known as "Common Pleas Judge—Division of Domestic Relations," the jurisdiction of the probate court of said county as juvenile court and the power of said probate court to have such jurisdiction conferred upon it will end, and thereafter the said court or the judge thereof will have no further jurisdiction or capacity to have jurisdiction conferred upon it as such juvenile court.

The said law has no effect upon the exclusive jurisdiction of the probate court which will continue in said county as elsewhere to perform all duties under the statutes in reference to the adoption of infants.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 2, 1917.

HON. JOHN W. DAVIS, Probate Judge, Mahoning County, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 21, 1917, you make an inquiry of this department as follows:

> "On May 20, 1917, the general assembly of the state of Ohio, enacted a law creating an additional judge of the court of common pleas of Mahoning county, said judge to be known as common pleas judge, division of domestic relations. On April 4, 1917, this law was filed with the secretary of state, becoming effective under the constitution of the state of Ohio ninety days from said date or on the 3rd day of July, 1917.

"By agreement of myself as probate judge and the common pleas judges of Mahoning county I have been and am administering the juvenile code within and for said county. Under section 1639, of the General Code of Ohio, the probate judge is given concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas judges as to the administration of the juvenile code.

"Under the new act, creating a court of domestic relations, no concurrent jurisdiction is given to the probate judge of this county as to the administration of the juvenile code. Therefore, I am of the opinion that when this law becomes effective, July 3, 1917, if no appointment has been made by the governor of a judge, as judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, it will be the duty of one of the other common pleas judges of this county to administer the juvenile code as provided under either or both section 1639 of the General Code and also the new law creating the court of domestic relations and that after said law creating said court of domestic relations becomes effective July 3, 1917, I will have absolutely no legal right to preside over the juvenile code in and for Mahoning county.

However, to make positive, as to the restrictions of said new law upon my present jurisdiction, I am presenting to you, for opinion, the question, whether or not, as probate judge, I will have any jurisdiction, legal right or authority to continue to administer the juvenile code within and for Mahoning county after said law, creating a court of domestic relations within and for Mahoning county, becomes effective July 3, 1917, in case no appointment has been made by the governor or whether said jurisdiction will exist only with the present common pleas judges until an appointment or election of a common pleas judge, division of domestic relations?

"I also wish to have your opinion on the following question, in connection with the law establishing said court of domestic relations, as to whether or not the phrase, 'In cases involving the care and custody of children in said county' or any other part of said act, will take away from me the right and jurisdiction, as probate judge, to pass upon and grant the adoption of minors?

"Inasmuch as the number of days are limited until such law becomes effective, I hope that you will make special effort to give me an immediate opinion on the two above questions."

Adverting to your last question as to the effect of said law upon your jurisdiction in reference to the adoption of children I refer you to an opinion rendered to Hon. Jared P. Huxley, prosecuting attorney of Mahoning county, on June 18, 1917, in reference to the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, for Mahoning county.

It was pointed out in the opinion referred to that the law in question provides for an additional judge of the common pleas court, and then proceeds to make a statutory distribution of the business of said court whereby certain duties that had theretofore been apportioned among the judges and assigned to the different judges at different times by arrangement of the judges themselves was thereafter by virtue of said statute permanently assigned to said judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, and his successors in office.

Looking at the statute in reference to this subject it appears that the purpose of the act is as above stated, and that it is not an act intended to make radical differences in the jurisdiction of the court, and it may safely be stated that it makes no jurisdiction of the court further than is involved in assigning to this particular court certain classes of cases that were before subject to the concurrent jurisdiction of the other court, that is—it gives no jurisdiction to the court of common pleas that the court did not formerly already possess, at least potentially, and that it is not intended to be a law not having uniform application throughout the state any further than by merely providing for such additional judge and assigning to him certain duties within the jurisdiction already possessed by the court. Therefore, the phrase, "in cases involving the care and custody of children in said county," refers to cases which might be in any court of common pleas. That is, the word "cases" is not used in a general sense as applied to all matters which might arise in any way involving the care and custody of children, but cases in the sense of cases in court. The adoption of a child in this sense is not a "case," but is a mere statutory duty imposed or authority conferred upon the probate court in relation to the adoption of such infant whereby a new relationship or status is created in some respects similar to the appointment of a guardian, but different in that it creates a new capacity to inherit.

The act in question is not intended to take away the jurisdiction of the probate court in such matters any more than it would as to the issuing of marriage licenses, which comes under the head of "Domestic Relations" so that, answering this question, your jurisdiction in reference to the adoption of children is not affected by this act.

Reverting now to your first question as to whether or not you, as probate judge, will have any jurisdiction to administer the juvenile court within and for Mahoning county after the law becomes effective, I have no hesitation in confirming your opinion that your functions as juvenile judge will cease upon the going into effect of this law, and may add that no vacancy in the office of the judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, will have the effect of imposing any duties as juvenile judge upon the probate judge of Mahoning county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MUTUAL TELEPHONE COMPANY—NOT SUBJECT TO PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION—BECAUSE OF RENTING TELEPHONES TO COUNTY.

If mutual telephone companies operating on assessment plan rent telephones to county at actual cost, such fact will not of itself subject them to public utilities commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 2, 1917.

HON. HARRY S. CORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter to the following effect:

> "At the request of a county commissioner, I am sending you his question for answer in a matter which fully explains itself, and kindly ask your opinion of the same."

The question which was submitted is as follows:

> "In this county, Putnam, are eighteen Farmers' Mutual Telephone companies with their exchanges located in the villages and at various places throughout the county, one of which is located at Ottawa, the county seat.

All are run on the assessment plan. If the company at Ottawa rents a few telephones to the county for use at the court house for the convenience of the general public of the county at actual cost, will it be subject to the public utilities commission and a rate fixed and they be compelled to change their plan of operation?"

Section 614-2 G. C. provides in part as follows:

"Any person or persons, firm or firms, co-partnership or voluntary association, joint stock association, company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated * * * when engaged in the business of transmitting to, from, through, or in this state, telephonic messages, is a telephone company and as such is declared to be a common carrier. * * *"

Section 614-2a G. C. provides as follows:

"The term 'public utility' as used in this act, shall mean and include every corporation, company, co-partnership, person or association, their lessees, trustees or receivers, defined in the next preceding section, except such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit and except such public utilities as are, or may hereafter be owned or operated by any municipality, and except such utilities as are defined as 'railroads' in section 501 and 502 of the General Code and these terms shall apply in defining 'public utilities' and 'railroads' wherever used in chapter one, division two, title three, part first of the General Code and the acts amendatory or supplementary thereto or in this act:"

Section 614-3 G. C. provides as follows:

"The public service commission of Ohio is hereby vested with the power and jurisdiction to supervise and regulate 'public utilities' and 'railroads' as herein defined and provided and to require all public utilities to furnish their products and render all services required by the commission, or by law."

There is no doubt that the mutual telephone companies, referred to in your communication, come within the definition of a telephone company as found in section 614-2, supra. Section 614-2a, supra, in defining the term "public utility" excepts such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit. The mutual telephone companies as described in the question submitted do not fall within the definition of public utilities as defined in section 614-2a and therefore the public utilities commission of Ohio does not have power and jurisdicton to supervise and regulate the same so long as they continue to operate not for profit. The term "not for profit" does not mean that utilities that do not find themselves in possession of a surplus after all proper expenses and deductions are made, are not amenable to regulation by public authority. The sole question is whether or not they are operated with the intention and for the purpose of producing a profit on the investment, and this, in the case of the Putnam County Telephone companies, is negatived in the question submitted. If the company at Ottawa rents telephones to the county, their use being limited to public purposes, at a rental which covers the actual cost and no more, I am of the opinion that the same will not be subject to the public utilities commission, since such renting of telephones would not bring such company within the term "public utility" as defined in section 614-2a.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MAYOR—CANNOT RECEIVE PAYMENT FOR LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED ON BEHALF OF VILLAGE.

Section 3808 G. C. prohibits payment to the mayor of a village for legal services rendered by him on behalf of such village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 2, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Hon. C. M. Babst, mayor of the village of Crestline, Ohio, has submitted to me for opinion a question which seems to me to be of general interest and I am, therefore, writing an opinion to you upon the subject and will send a copy thereof to Mr. Babst. He states as follows:

"I, as you probably know, am a practicing attorney and also mayor of Crestline. Council does not employ a legal adviser but depends on me and requests me to take care of all legal matters such as drawing of ordinances, resolutions, conducting bond issues and also empowered me to take care of litigation now pending in an appropriation proceeding, designating me in the ordinance to make the application for a jury and carry the case to a conclusion.

"Council also appropriated $200.00 at the beginning of the year for legal services and now wishes to pay me for what work I have done since the first of the year.

"I am not appointed legal adviser. One member of council wishes a ruling on the question before anything is done and at their request I am writing for the answer.

"I am familiar with the statute which prohibits the mayor's salary being rasied while in office, but I am inclined to believe that council has a legal right to pay for services rendered and which are outside of his duties as mayor.

"I conceive considerable difference between a legal adviser and a solicitor, for a solicitor must have qualifications pointed out by section 4304, he must be an attorney-at-law duly admitted to practice in the courts of the state, while a legal adviser need have no qualification, excepting perhaps that he must be learned in the law. He does not necessarily have to be an attorney admitted to practice. Thus while a village may employ a legal adviser of council or any department of the village, if this appointee was not an attorney it would have to employ one to bring or defend an action. I am prepared to state, too, that there are many men who are well qualified to give legal advice but who have never been admitted to practice; this is largely true in all probate offices.

"Council wishes to pay me for stenographer services in connection with my legal work. Kindly let me hear from you at your earliest convenience."

Section 4220 G. C. provides as follows:

"When it deems it necessary, the village council may provide legal counsel for the village, or any department or official thereof, for a period not to exceed two years, and provide compensation threefor."

In your letter, however, you state that the council of the village has not employed a legal adviser, but has designated you to look after the legal matters and had appropriated two hundred dollars at the beginning of the year for legal services.

Section 3808 G. C. provides:

> "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any provision of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other thing he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, and if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom."

It appears, therefore, that the mayor of a village is prohibited by the provisions of the above section from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. Payment of the amount appropriated by council to you for compensation for legal services rendered would be an expenditure of money in which you would be interested, as would likewise the payment to you of money for stenographic services in connection with your legal work. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the payment would be unauthorized.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOND FORM—TO BE USED IN ENTERING ALL CONTRACTS FOR PUBLIC WORKS OR IMPROVEMENT.

1. In entering into all contracts for the construction, erection, alteration or repair of public buildings or other public works or improvements, substantially the form of bond as set out in an act entitled: "An act to protect persons performing labor and furnishing materials for the construction and repair of public works" must be used.

2. The difference between the Cass highway law and the White-Mulcahy law is not such as to require a different form of contract, other than that the material under the new act may not all be furnished by the contractor, as it was under the old law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 6, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to the form of a contract and bond, a copy of each of which you attach thereto. Your communication reads as follows:

> "I am attaching hereto form of agreement and proposal and contract bond now in use by this department.
> "It is rather apparent from an examination of the White- Mulcahy law that some changes will be necessary both in the form of contract and bond, and I am transmitting these forms to you with the request that you kindly revise same so that they may be in accordance with the provisions of the new law."

1. The particular matter which you have in mind is as to whether the provisions of the White-Mulcahy law will necessitate a change in the form of the contract and bond used by you in the matter of highway improvements.

Let us first note the form of the bond. Section 1208 G. C. of the law as it now is provides among other things that the > "bond shall be conditioned for the payment of all material and labor furnished for or used in the construction of the road for which such contract is made, and which is furnished to the original contractor or subcontractor, agent or superintendent of either engaged in said work."

Section 1208 as amended in the White-Mulcahy law leaves out all reference to the conditions above quoted, for the reason, I think, that provision is made in said section 1208 of the White-Mulcahy law that:

> "* * * The state highway commissioner shall not draw his requisition for any warrant in favor of any contractor or make any payment to any contractor for any estimates on account of any contract let under the provisions of the preceding sections, until the affidavit of such contractor, or its officer or agent in the case of a corporation, that all indebtedness of such contractor on account of material incorporated into the work or delivered on the site of the improvement, or labor performed thereon has been paid, is filed with the state highway commissioner * * *;"

or in lieu thereof it is provided that he may file a waiver from all persons furnishing material and labor.

From these provisions, the legislature evidently felt that the persons furnishing labor or material were fully protected under the law, and, therefore, there would be no necessity for protecting them under the bond.

We find in section 1209 G. C. of the White-Mulcahy law this provision:

> "* * * Before entering into a contract for the completion of an improvement, the commissioner shall require a bond with sufficient sureties, conditioned as provided in section 1208 of the General Code. * * *"

The form of bond now used by your department is conditioned as provided in section 1208 of the law as it now stands, and from the change in the provisions of section 1208 and the provision set forth, found in section 1209 of the new law, it might be reasonably inferred that you could safely omit said conditions from your bonds on and after June 28, 1917.

But I desire to call your attention to an act entitled (107 O. L. 642):

> "To protect persons performing labor and furnishing materials for the construction and repair of public works."

This act is too long to quote, but I will enclose a copy of same for your consideration. In said act it is provided:

> "That when public buildings or other public works or improvements are about to be constructed, erected, altered or repaired under contract, at the expense of the state," the bond required shall be conditioned as set out in the act. Section 4 of the act (Sec. 2365-4 G. C.) sets forth a form of bond and provides that this form shall be substantially followed.

There is no question that contracts such as you enter into are for the construction of public works or improvements and I believe that the only safe plan for you to adopt is to use a bond substantially the same as that set out in section 4 of the above named act.

I desire further to say that when you compare the form of bond which has been used by your department and the form of the bond set forth in section 4 of said act, there is no great difference in the terms or conditions set out. But on account of a decision of our supreme court in Roofing Co. v. Gaspard, 89 O. S. 185, I believe it will be well for you to change your form of bond and follow exactly the bond set out in section 4 of the said act, for the reason that your form of bond does not provide that it is for the benefit of the material men and laborers, while the form set out in section 4 does so provide.

2. You ask in reference to the form of contract used by you. I am of the opinion that your present form of agreement would need to be modified but very little. It provides that the second party agrees to furnish all materials. This might have to be modified under the new law, because of the fact that there is provision made for your purchasing the material from the state board of administration, providing they have suitable material on hands. For this reason it might be advisable for you to modify your form of contract to read something as follows:

> "That for and in consideration of payments hereinafter mentioned, to be made by the party of the first part, party of the second part agrees to furnish all materials excepting the following: (then leave a blank space in which you could write the materials that you might secure through the state board of administration) and all appliances, tools and labor and perform all the work," etc.

The above is suggested, although it might not be absolutely essential, for the reason that it is further provided in the agreement that the "plans and specifications" shall become an essential part of every contract; and the new law provides that all materials secured from the state board of administration must be set out in the plans and specifications. So that this matter would practically be taken care of under the plans and specifications, although I believe it would be well to make the above change.

Other than the suggestions above made, I am of the opinion that your present form of contract and bond will be adapted to the provisions of the new law, as well as they are to those of the old.

You will remember that I suggested in a former communication that there seems to be no specific provision for a proposal contract bond; that is, the law seems to contemplate that the bond will be given after the contract is awarded. But this is a matter more of procedure than of law, and, as you have been following the procedure requiring a proposal contract bond, I am not desirous of in any way interferring therewith.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

CHIEF OF FIRE DEPARTMENT—HAS AUTHORITY TO ENTER BUILDINGS FOR PURPOSE OF EXAMINATION—MUNICIPALITY MAY PASS ORDINANCE TO AUTHORIZE SUCH AN EXAMINATION—AND MAY PROVIDE PENALTY FOR REFUSAL TO ALLOW SUCH EXAMINATION.

1. Where a city has regularly established a fire department the chief of said department, under Sec. 834 G. C. has the same authority to enter upon premises and into buildings for the purpose of examination as have the state fire marshal, his deputies and subordinates, etc.

2. "Or other officer," as found in Sec. 12858 G. C. includes such chief of fire department.

3. A municipality may by ordinance designate and authorize the chief of its fire department to enter for the purpose of examination any building in the city at reasonable times, which in his opinion is in danger of fire.

4. Such municipality may provide a penalty within the limits of Sec. 3628 G. C., for obstructing such chief of the fire department in the performance of his duties under such ordinance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5, 1917.

HON. T. ALFRED FLEMING, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of June 22, in which you state that the chief of the fire department of the city of Canton seeking to act under authority of section 834 General Code attempted in the course of his inspection work to make inspection of a certain dwelling house in said city, and that he was refused the privilege of so doing. You further state that the chief filed an affidavit in the matter, copy of which is attached to your letter. The affidavit, omitting the formal parts, charges that one G. H. White

> "did unlawfully refuse to permit the said R. O. Mesnar, the legally appointed, acting and qualified chief of the fire department of said city of Canton, to enter said building for the purpose of making an inspection thereof to ascertain what specially hazardous agencies and things existed therein liable to cause fire, and for the purpose of inspecting the manner of the construction of flues and chimneys of said building; said R. O. Mesnar as such chief of the fire department having on said day at about the hour of 3:00 o'clock in the P. M. made a request upon said G. H. White to make said inspection."

You ask that an opinion be given in the matter.
Section 834 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal, his deputies and subordinates, the chief of the fire department of each city or village where a fire department is established, the mayor of a city or village where no fire department exists, or the clerk of a township in territory without the limits of a city or village, at all reasonable hours may enter into all buildings and upon all premises within their jurisdiction for the purpose of examination."

If the affidavit were founded on this section I think it would be defective in that it does not aver that Canton is a city where a fire department had theretofore been established, but on its face it shows it was founded on an ordinance, and not on the statute.

Section 834 purports to give the chief of a fire department of a city or village where a fire department is established the right and authority at all reasonable hours to enter buildings and upon premises for the purpose of examination.

Section 835 includes the chief of the fire department in the list of officers who upon inspection, and finding the necessity therefor, are authorized to make certain orders providing for remeding dangerous conditions. The only penalty section in the fire marshal statutes seems to be section 837 General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Any person or persons, being the owner, occupant, lessee or agent of buildings and premises who willfully fails, neglects or refuses to comply with any order of any officer named in the last four preceding sections, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than fifty dollars nor less than ten dollars for each day's neglect."

This section provides a punishment for a person who "willfully fails, neglects or refuses to comply with any order of any officer named in the last four preceding sections." I do not think that this section would furnish a penalty for the refusal of a person to permit the officer named to go upon the premises or to make the inspection. It seems rather to provide a penalty for failure to comply with an order after the inspection has been made.

It seems to me that the only violation under the facts stated in your inquiry would possibly be under section 12858 of the General Code, which reads as follows:

> "Whoever abuses a judge or justice of the peace in the execution of his office, or knowingly and willfully resists, obstructs or abuses a sheriff, constable or other officer in the execution of his office, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than thirty days, or both."

There might be some contention that the chief of the fire department was not such "other officer" as is contemplated in said section, but I believe the reasoning found in Woodworth v. State 26 O. S. 196, especially the language of McIlvaine, C. J., on pages 198 and 199, is sufficient to bring the chief of the fire department within the provisions of section 12858. At page 199 the court uses the following language:

> "The words of this statute, 'or other officers,' when viewed in the light of their ordinary meaning, and of all the rules or maxims for construction, and the mischief to be remedied, to wit, abuse of or resistance to public officers engaged in the execution of their offices, we think should be construed so as to embrace ministerial as well as judicial offices generally other than those named. Otherwise, the administration of most important public affairs may be thwarted by evil-disposed persons, without any adequate remedy on the part of the public—a state of the law which should not be made by construction merely, when the words of the statute are sufficiently comprehensive to prevent it."

In this case a road supervisor was held to be within the term "or other officers." In the case of State v. Steube, 10 Dec. Rep. 199, "other officers" was held to include a prosecuting attorney.

It would be my opinion that a person refusing the chief of the fire department of a city or village, where a fire department has been regularly established under the law, permission to enter into buildings or upon premises for the purpose of making an examination would be resisting an officer under section 12858 General Code.

Since the consideration of your communication of June 22nd, I am in receipt of your letter of June 27th, in which further facts are given. It appears that an affidavit by the chief of the fire department was made on April 26, 1917; that said affidavit was held to be subject to a motion to quash; and that a new affidavit was filed May 21, but it further appears that the affidavits were not filed under section 834, nor was the chief of the fire department acting in an official capacity under that section, but that he was acting under and by virtue of an ordinance of the city of Canton and that the affidavit charged a violation of not a state law but of an ordinance of the city of Canton, to wit, section 58, page 35, of the Revised Ordinances of the City of Canton. It seems that this ordinance provides, among other things, that it shall be the duty of the fire chief

> "from time to time to inspect all buildings and structures within the city, to ascertain what specially hazardous agencies and things exist therein liable to cause fire, * * * to inspect the manner of construction of all flues, fire places, furnaces, ovens, chimneys, heating pipes, electric lights, etc. * * *"

The penalty clause reads:

> "Any person refusing or neglecting to abate any dangerous thing when ordered to do so by the chief of the fire department, or refusing to permit said chief of the fire department to enter such building or premises for the purpose of such inspection and investigation, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) and costs of prosecution, or be imprisoned not more than ten days or both."

Attention is called to the fact that section 834 General Code provides for "entering buildings at all reasonable hours" and that the question is raised whether city ordinances giving fire chiefs the right to go on premises and in buildings from time to time and at any time is valid inasmuch as the state law only gives that privilege to the chief of the fire department in reasonable hours, and a further question is presented as to the penalty. It is said that the city ordinance appears to provide a greater penalty than the state law, if the state law provides any penalty at all. Not having the entire city ordinance before me I can only consider that portion which is quoted.

I am inclined to the view that the city would have a right by ordinance to provide for the inspection of buildings and structures within the city in the manner provided in the ordinance, and that the city might designate the chief of the fire department to perform this inspection, and likewise provide for the penalty as in the ordinance provided.

Section 3617 General Code authorizes municipalities to organize fire departments.

Section 3636 authorizes municipalities to provide for the regulation of the erection of buildings and > "to provide for the inspection of buildings or other structures and for removal and repair of insecure buildings."

This is the section that authorizes the establishment of the building inspection department.

Section 3628 General Code authorizes municipalities to make the violation of ordinances a misdemeanor and provide for the punishment thereof by fine or imprisonment or both, but "such fine shall not exceed five hundred dollars and such imprisonment shall not exceed six months."

By virtue of this section, assuming the authority of the city to enact the ordinance in question irrespective of whether or not a penalty was provided under the state law, the city would be authorized to provide a penalty not exceeding the provisions found in section 3628 General Code.

Section 4395 Genral Code provides as follows:

> "The council may regulate the erection of houses and business structures and prohibit within such limits as it may deem proper, the erection of buildings, unless the outer walls be constructed of non-combustible material, and, on the petition of the owners of not less than two-thirds of the ground included in any square, or half-square, prohibit the erection on any such square or half-square, of any building, or addition to any building more than ten feet high, unless the outer walls be made of iron, stone, brick and mortar, or of some of them, and to provide for the removal of any building or additions erected contrary to such prohibition."

Section 4396 General Code provides as follows:

> "The council may invest any officer of the fire or police department, with the power, and impose on him the duty, to be present at all fires, investigate the cause thereof, examine witnesses, and compel their attendance and the production of books and papers, and to do and perform all such other acts as may be necessary to the effective discharge of such duties."

Section 4397 General Code provides as follows:

> "Such officer shall have power to administer oaths, make arrests and enter for the purpose of examination, any building which, in his opinion, is in danger from fire; and he shall report his proceedings to the council at such times as may be required."

Assuming again that the ordinance in question was passed under authority of section 4395 General Code above mentioned, then I am satisfied that the prosecution brought by the chief of the fire department, provided the affidavit was proper in all respects, could be successfully maintained and that the procedure therein would be only under the city ordinance, and the provisions of the state fire marshal law would not affect the situation in any way.

Section 4396 General Code authorizes council to invest the chief of the fire department with certain powers and duties, while section 4397, among other things, gives him the right to enter, for the purpose of examination, any building which in his opinion is in danger from fire. Of course the officer would be permitted only to enter buildings for the purpose of inspection at reasonable times, but what would constitute a "reasonable time" would appear from the particular facts in the individual case, and the courts would correct any abuse of discretion that might be lodged in the officer as to the time of his making an inspection.

In view of all the foregoing I am of the opinion that in a city or village where a fire department has been regularly established by law, the chief of the fire department has the same authority to enter upon premises and into buildings for the purpose of inspection as have the state fire marshal, his deputies and assistants; that a person wilfully obstructing the chief of the fire department in the performance of his duties in this regard is guilty of resisting an officer under section 12858 General Code: that a city by ordinance can designate the chief of the fire department to make inspection of buildings, and in order to force compliance with the orders of the chief of the fire department may by ordinance make it an offense to obstruct him in the performance of his duties in that regard, and may provide a penalty not exceeding the provisions found in section 3628 General Code.

Trusting that this answers your several questions, I am,

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST COMPANY—NOT UNDER CONTROL AND SUPERVISION OF THE INSURANCE DEPARTMENT OF THE STATE—GUARANTEE OF TITLE BY SUCH COMPANY IS IN EFFECT THE SAME AS THE INSURANCE OF SUCH TITLE.

A title guarantee and trust company under the provisions of sections 9850 et seq. General Code is not in the insurance business in the sense that it is under the control and supervision of the insurance department of the state.

The guarantee of a title by such a company to its customer to whom it furnishes an abstract of title is in legal effect the same as the insurance of such title.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 1, 1917, you addressed the following request to this department:

> "A question has arisen respecting the proper construction to be given to section 9850 G. C., which provides as follows:
> "'A title guarantee and trust company may prepare and furnish abstracts and certificates of title to real estate, bonds, mortgages and other securities, and guarantee such titles, the validity and due execution of such securities, and the performance of contracts incident thereto, make loans for itself or as agent or trustee for others, and guarantee the collection of interest and principal of such loans; take charge of and sell, mortgage, rent or otherwise dispose of real estate for others, and perform all the duties of an agent relative to property deeded or otherwise entrusted to it.'
> "We have assumed that the provision of that section, that such companies may guarantee titles is in effect an insurance of the title. That construction has been challenged, and we will thank you for an early opinion upon that question. We have ourselves occasionally looked into the statutes of other states on this subject, notably that of New York, which uses the conjunctive phrase 'guarantee and insure.'"

A difference is recognized in the text books and authorities between "guaranty" and "insurance." Upon examination, however, the difference is found to be subjective rather than objective. That is to say, the difference is found to exist between the two things themselves in their nature and essence and not in the objects accomplished by them, which, in substance, is the same.

You have kindly submitted with your request a copy of an opinion of Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, attorney-general, under date of December 2, 1913, found in the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for the year 1913, Vol. I, page 164. This opinion was rendered to you upon your inquiry which in substance was as to whether you still had the supervision and control over guarantee title and trust companies, or whether the same was taken away or affected by the statutes creating the superintendent of banks and providing for supervision by him of banks and trust companies, which answer was that your powers and duties with reference to such guarantee title and trust companies still remained unaffected by the statutes in question. With that opinion I am in full agreement.

The guaranty of a title is the same thing in legal effect as would be the insurance of it, so far as the benefit to accrue to the guarantee or policyholder is concerned, but as to the company itself a guaranty company is not an insurance company. This is well illustrated in an Iowa case. (Cole v. Haven, 7 N. W. 383.) The question on that case was with reference to a person or organization engaged in the business of putting up lightning rods who gave a guaranty with each sale against loss from lightning. The question was whether they were subject to the regulations of the insurance department of the state, and they were held not to be so because not engaged in the insurance business because of the difference between guaranty and insurance.

While it is not clearly stated in this case, or elsewhere in any authority I have examined, I find the difference to be essentially this: That in the case of guaranty it is not the principal or main object of the business, but a collateral or incidental matter to some other object in reference to which parties contract together, as in the case just cited the business of the parties giving the guaranty was not insuring buildings against lightning, but was furnishing and erecting lightning rods to protect buildings, and the issuance of the guaranty was merely collateral to the other business—an inducement to enter into it. No building was insured against lightning except where the party sold the lightning rods and put them up, which was the main or principal business, the guaranty was merely auxiliary and accessory to it.

The same situation is true in the case of a guarantee title and trust company. The business in which these companies engage is primarily that of making abstracts of title. As incidental to that business they insure the correctness of their work, or, more correctly speaking, guarantee such correctness. They do not guarantee titles generally or to persons or in instances otherwise than where they have furnished such abstracts, and are not therefore considered to be in insurance business or under the regulations of the insurance department of the state of Ohio. The business, however, is insurance so far as it affects the persons with whom such company deals. If the work turns out bad or the title is defective upon which they pronounced favorably their customer is reimbursed for what he loses, just as he would be if he called the business insurance, so that it would seem that in the statutes of New York referred to by you nothing was added by the words "and insure"; that insure is a simple repetition of the word "guarantee."

The word "guaranty" does not exactly indicate the nature of the obligation assumed, which is really a warranty. The former is used where the undertaking is collateral to some other original obligation, while the latter is applied to an original agreement. However, the contract is collateral in the sense that it is not the main thing agreed about, but only incidental thereto, that is, the business is furnishing abstracts and, as incidental or collateral to that, the title is guaranteed. It is called "guaranty" in the statutes, and the business is fully regulated in the accompanying sections 9850 to 9856 General Code under the heading "Title Guarantee and Trust Companies."

"Sec. 9850. A title guarantee and trust company may prepare and furnish abstracts and certificates of title to real estate, bonds, mortgages and other securities, and guarantee such titles, the validity and due execution of such securities, and the performance of contracts incident thereto, make loans for itself or as agent or trustee for others, and guarantee the collection of interest and principal of such loans; take charge of and sell, mortgage, rent or otherwise dispose of real estate for others, and perform all the duties of an agent relative to property deeded or otherwise entrusted to it.

"Sec. 9851. No such company shall do business until its capital stock amounts to at least one hundred thousand dollars fully paid up, and until it has deposited with the treasurer of state fifty thousand dollars in securities permitted by sections ninety-five hundred and eighteen and ninety-five hundred and nineteen. Except such deposit, the capital shall be invested as the board of directors of such company prescribes.

"Sec. 9852. The treasurer of state shall hold such fund or securities deposited with him as security for the faithful performance of all guarantees entered into by such company, but so long as it continues solvent he shall permit it to collect the interest or dividends on, its securities so deposited, and to withdraw them or any part thereof, on depositing with him cash or other securities of the kind heretofore named so as to maintain the value of such deposit at fifty thousand dollars.

"Sec. 9853. Any company so organized shall be limited in its operation to only one county in this state, which shall be designated in its application for a charter, except, that if it desires to issue its policies of title insurance in more than one county it may issue them in such other county or counties upon depositing with the treasurer of state an additional sum of fifty thousand dollars in securities as above provided, for each additional county in which it proposed to operate.

"Sec. 9854. If such a company has made deposits with the treasurer of state as herein required, it may request such treasurer to return to it securities in excess of the amount so required, and he shall surrender such excess to the company, taking proper receipts therefor.

"Sec. 9855. All companies doing the business of guaranteeing titles to real property shall comply with and be governed by the foregoing provisions relating thereto. But such companies heretofore organized and doing business thereunder, may continue business without prejudice to any rights thereby acquired or obligations incurred.

"Sec. 9856. Title guarantee and trust companies shall make such reports to the auditor of state as are required of safe deposit and trust companies and be subject to like examinations and penalties."

The last section requires reports to be made to the auditor of state in like manner as were required of safe deposit and trust companies. Other sections require a deposit of fifty thousand dollars, provide for its custody and repayment and impose various restrictions and limitations on the business.

I am therefore of the opinion that the assumption of your bureau of accounting for municipalities that the guarantee of such titles is in effect an insurance of titles is correct.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COSTS—OF CONVICTION AND TRANSPORTATION—STATE LIABLE FOR SAME—WHERE WOMEN ARE SENTENCED TO OHIO REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN FOR COMMISSION OF FELONIES.

1. The state is liable for the cost of conviction and the costs of transportation in cases where women are sentenced and committed to the Ohio reformatory for women for the commission of felony, transportation fees to be the same as are allowed in penitentiary cases.

2. The state is not liable for costs of conviction and costs of transportation when women are sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women for misdemeanors or delinquency.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5, 1917.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication in which you submit the following:

"Kindly let me have your written opinion on the following propositions at your earliest convenience:

"1. Is the state liable for the costs of conviction when a female is sentenced to the reformatory for women for a felony?

"2. Is the state liable for the costs of conviction when a female is sentenced to the reformatory for women for a misdemeanor?

"3. Is the state liable for the costs of conviction when a female is sentenced to the reformatory for women for delinquency?

"4. If the state be liable for any of the costs above enumerated, is it also liable for transportation fees, and, if so, what fees shall be paid in each of the three specific instances; namely, in cases of felony, misdemeanor and delinquency?'

Sections 2148-1, 2148-5, 2148-6 and 2148-7 G. C. provide:

"Sec. 2148-1. The Ohio reformatory for women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age, convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided, and for the detention of such female prisoners as shall be transferred thereto from the Ohio penitentiary and the girls' industrial school as hereinafter provided.

"Sec. 2148-5. As soon as the governor shall be satisfied that suitable buildings have been erected and are ready for use and for the reception of women convicted of felony he shall issue a proclamation to that effect, attested by the secretary of state, and the secretary of state shall furnish printed copies of such proclamation to the county clerks of courts and from the date of said proclamation all portions of this act except those relating to the commitment of misdemeanants and delinquents shall be in full force and effect Whenever additional buildings have been completed so as to care for misdemeanants and delinquents a proclamation shall be issued and published in the same manner and copies furnished to county clerks of courts and to all judges and magistrates having authority to sentence misdemeanants and delinquents and from and after the date of this proclamation all portions of this act relating to the commitment of persons to said reformatory shall be in full force and effect.

"All female persons convicted of felony, except murder in the first degree without the benefit of recommendation of mercy, shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women in the same manner as male persons are now sentenced to the Ohio state reformatory. And in so far as applicable, the laws relating to the management of the Ohio state reformatory and the control and management thereof, shall apply to the Ohio reformatory for women.

"Sec. 2148-6. Female persons over sixteen years of age found guilty of a misdemeanor by any court of this state shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women and be subject to the control of the Ohio board of administration, but all such persons shall be eligible to parole under the provisions of this act.

"Sec. 2148-7. After the issuance of the first proclamation hereinbefore referred it, it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a felony to be confined in either the Ohio penitentiary or a jail, workhouse, house of correction or other correctional or penal institution, and after the issuance of the second proclamation it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a misdemeanor or delinquency to be confined in any such place, except in both cases the reformatory herein provided for, the girls' industrial school or other institution for juvenile delinquency, unless such person is over sixteen years of age, and has been sentenced for less than thirty days, or is remanded to jail in default of payment of either fine or costs or both, which will cause imprisonment for less than thirty days provided that this section shall not apply to imprisonment for contempt of court."

FELONY CASES

Sections 13722, 13724, 13725 and 13726 G. C. read:

"Sec. 13722. Upon sentence of a person for a felony, the officers, claiming costs made in the prosecution, shall deliver to the clerk itemized bills thereof, who shall make and certify, under his hand and the seal of the court, a complete bill of the costs made in such prosecution, including the sum paid by the county commissioners for the arrest and return of the convict on the requisition of the governor, or on the request of the governor to the president of the United States. Such bill of costs shall be presented by such clerk to the prosecuting attorney, who shall examine each item therein charged, and certify to it if correct and legal.

"Sec. 13724. If the convict is sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary or to death, and no property has been levied upon, the sheriff shall deliver such certified cost-bill, having accredited thereon the amount paid on costs, with the convict, to the warden of the penitentiary. When property has been levied upon and remains unsold, the clerk shall not certify to the sheriff the costs of such conviction, or part thereof, for payment from the state treasury, but the convict shall be delivered to such warden in pursuance of his sentence, upon payment of the costs of transportation.

"Sec. 13725. In transporting convicts to the penitentiary, the sheriff may employ one guard for every two convicts transported; but the court may authorize a larger number, in which case a transcript of the order of such court shall be certified by the clerk thereof, under the seal thereof, and the sheriff shall deliver it to the warden of the penitentiary with such convict. The sheriff shall receive eight cents per mile for mileage, five cents per mile for transporting each convict and six cents per mile for the service of each guard, the number of miles to be computed by the usual route of travel.

"Sec. 13726. When the clerk certifies on the cost bill that execution was issued according to the provisions of this chapter, and returned by the sheriff 'No goods, chattels, lands or tenements, found whereon to levy,' the warden of the penitentiary shall allow so much of the cost-bill and charges for transportation as is correct, and certify such allowance, which shall be paid by the state."

From these sections it is evident that there was ample provision for the payment of costs and transportation charges in the case of women sent to the Ohio penitentiary before the law made it mandatory to send them to the Ohio reformatory for women. Section 3016 reads:

"In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from the county treasury."

Sections 13726 and 13727 General Code, providing for the payment of costs by the state, were originally parts of an act passed March 4, 1844, entitled "An act further to provide for the collection of costs in criminal cases." (42 O. L., p. 30.) This act provided for the payment of costs by the state "in all cases of conviction of any person of any crime, punishment whereof is imprisonment in the penitentiary." It will be noted here that the object of the statute was to pay the costs of convicting any person convicted of any crime the punishment whereof is imprisonment in the penitentiary, and as to the provision for the payment of costs, the legislature had uppermost in mind the crime of which the person was convicted rather than the institution to which such person was being sent. It was provided that the warden of the penitentiary should certify to cost bills, but at that time no other institution was taking care of prisoners convicted of felonies. If there had been such institutions at that time there is no doubt but that the superintendents of such institutions would have had similar duties imposed upon them. Some years after this act was passed, the Ohio State Reformatory was established and it has always been held that the above sections, providing for payment of costs, included cases where the defendant was sentenced to the Ohio State Reformatory as well as to the penitentiary. This holding, I think, was correct since the prisoners sentenced to the reformatories for felonies were convicted of a crime "the punishment whereof is imprisonment in the penitentiary" within the meaning of the act of March 4, 1844.

The reformatory act provided:

"Male persons between the ages of fifteen to twenty-one years, convicted of felonies shall be sentenced to the reformatory instead of the penitentiary."

This did not affect the status of the prisoners so far as this act was concerned since although they were sentenced to the reformatory, they were sentenced for a crime which was punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Section 2134 of the act relative to the Ohio State Reformatory, provided:

> "In transporting a prisoner to the reformatory, the sheriff shall perform like duties, have like powers and receive like compensation as provided by law for transporting prisoners to the penitentiary."

This is the only expression of the legislature regarding transportation of prisoners to the reformatory. There is no legislative expression at all concerning payment of costs by the state. However, as stated above, it has always been held that the costs and transportation charges in the case where prisoners are sentenced to the Ohio State Reformatory for felonies should be paid the same as when such prisoners are sentenced to the penitentiary. For the reasons stated above I believe this holding to be correct. The act establishing the Ohio reformatory for women provided that women convicted of felonies should be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women instead of the Ohio penitentiary, but makes no express provision for payment of costs or transportation.

Section 2148-5 G. C. provides:

> "In so far as applicable, the laws relating to the management of the Ohio state reformatory and the control and management thereof, shall apply to the Ohio reformatory for women."

The reasoning outlined above, to the effect that the act of 1844, providing for the payment of costs and transportation in felony cases, applies to the Ohio state reformatory, is equally applicable to the present situation concerning the Ohio reformatory for women. These women, though sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women, have been convicted of crimes the punishment whereof is imprisonment in the penitentiary, and in the light of the reasoning just outlined, and the provision of section 2148-5 just referred to, it is my opinion that when a woman is convicted of a felony and sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women, the costs and transportation to such institution should be paid by the state the same as if such women were sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary.

MISDEMEANORS.

COSTS:

The only provision of law concerning the payment of costs in misdemeanor cases is section 3019 General Code, which provides as follows:

> "In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowances to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

Under this section county commissioners may allow costs in misdemeanor cases wherein the defendant proves insolvent to the extent of $100.00 per year, but there is nowhere in the statutes any provision of law by which the state is made to reimburse the county for the payment of such costs. The fact that the defendant, when convicted, is sentenced to a state institution does not carry with it any such obligation independent of statute and therefore even though a woman, when convicted of a misdemeanor, is sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women, the state is not liable for the costs in the case.

TRANSPORTATION CHARGES:

Section 13716 General Code reads:

> "When a person convicted of an offense is sentenced to imprisonment in jail, the court or magistrate shall order him into custody of the sheriff or constable, who shall deliver him, with the record of his conviction, to the jailer, in whose custody he shall remain in the jail of the county until the term of his imprisonment expires or he is otherwise legally discharged."

Women sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women for misdemeanors are sentenced either by the common pleas court, probate court, the mayor, justice of the peace, or police judge.

When sentenced by the common pleas or probate court, the order of commitment should be addressed to the sheriff.

In such case the transportation charges may be taken care of under section 2997 of the General Code, which reads:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. * * *"

It will be noted from a reading of this section that the county commissioners may allow the sheriff in such cases his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in conveying such women to the Ohio reformatory for women. There is no provision in law whereby the state is obliged to reimburse the county for this expenditure.

Neither do I know of any provision of law imposing any obligation upon the state to pay the cost of transportation of prisoners to the Ohio reformatory for women when sentenced by the mayor, justice of the peace or police judge.

DELINQUENCY CASES:

In regard to delinquency cases, section 2148-1 provides:

> "The Ohio reformatory for women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age, convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided, and for the detention of such female prisoners as shall be transferred thereto from the Ohio penitentiary and the girls' industrial school as hereinafter provided."

This department has held that girls between 16 and 18 years of age, found to be delinquent, may be committed to the Ohio reformatory for women.

Section 1682 General Code, a part of the juvenile court chapter, reads:

"Fees and costs in all such cases with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court."

This section was originally a part of section 40 of an act passed April 23, 1908, entitled "An act to regulate the treatment and control of dependent, neglected and delinquent children, and to repeal certain acts therein named." Section 40, at page 202, reads:

"This act shall be liberally construed to the end that its purpose may be carried out, to-wit: That proper guardianship may be provided for in order that the child may be educated and cared for, as far as practicable in such manner as best subserves its moral and physical welfare, and as far as practicable in proper cases that the parent, parents or guardians of such child may be compelled to perform their moral and legal duty in the interest of the child. And all fees and costs in all cases coming within the provisions of this act, together with such sums as shall be necessary for the incidental expenses of such court and its officers, and together with the costs of transportation of children to places to which they may be committed, shall be paid out of the county treasury of the county upon itemized vouchers and certified to by the judge of the court."

No express provision is now made as to who shall convey girls to the girls' industrial school when committed for delinquency, but it has been held by this department that the probate judge may appoint, if he sees fit, a probation officer to accompany such girls and fix her compensation as he sees fit.

1914 Opinions of the Attorney-General, Vol. 2, page 1275.

Of course if the judge should order a regularly appointed probation officer to do this, such probation officer would only be paid his expenses. From the above it is seen that when a girl has been committed to the girls' industrial school for delinquency, she may be taken to such institution by a regularly appointed or especially appointed probation officer. The costs in that case, as well as the expense of transporting the girl to the girls' industrial school, must be paid by the county and no provision is made in law for the reimbursement of the county by the state.

The Ohio reformatory for women statute simply provides that delinquent girls over 16 years may be committed to the Ohio reformatory for women instead of the girls' industrial school. Neither the statute relating to the costs in the case nor the statute relating to the powers of the court to order the probation officer to convey the delinquent child are affected by the Ohio reformatory for women law, and therefore it is my opinion that when the juvenile court sends the delinquent child to the Ohio reformatory for women instead of the girls' industrial school, the costs of transportation to such institution are paid in the same manner as when the court commits the juvenile delinquent to the girls' industrial school.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TOLLS—RIGHT TO FIX TOLLS TO BE CHARGED BY BRIDGE COMPANY OWNING BRIDGE SPANNING NAVIGABLE RIVER FORMING COTERMINOUS BOUNDARY BETWEEN TWO STATES.

1. In the matter of fixing a schedule of tolls to be charged by a bridge company owning a bridge spanning a navigable river forming the coterminous boundary between two states, congress has the paramount right for the reason that the traffic across said bridge is interstate in nature.

2. But where congress has not spoken, the two states upon the soil of which the ends of the bridge rest may by concurrent action fix a schedule of rates. But neither state alone can do so, excepting as to rates of toll from that state to the other state.

3. If the bridge company is charging an unreasonable schedule of tolls for passage over the bridge, either the courts of West Virginia or those of Ohio would have jurisdiction to grant relief. The federal courts would not have such jurisdiction.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 5, 1917.

HON. ROY R. CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of April 25, 1917, in which you ask for certain information. Your communication reads as follows:

> "At Steubenville, Ohio (Jefferson county), there is a bridge across the Ohio river, owned by a corporation. This bridge is used for public traffic, vehicles, traction line and pedestrians.
> "There is a schedule of tolls ranging from five cents for foot passengers to ten dollars for traction engine. At present there is considerable complaint against the rates charged under this schedule.
> "Kindly inform me what commission or court or authority has the power to regulate the toll over such bridge. I am aware of section 9312 G .C., but I find nothing in connection therewith prescribing what authority may be appealed to in the matter of tolls."

The matter about which you inquire in your communication raises an interesting and at the same time an important question. In order to arrive at a conclusion which will bear investigation, it will be necessary to note a number of propositions which are more or less closely related to the direct question propounded by you in your communication. The bridge mentioned therein extends from the Ohio side, across the Ohio river, to the West Virginia side of the river, the Ohio river being a navigable one. This statement of fact alone suggests the different elements to be taken into consideration in answering your question.

We have suggested in this statement three different jurisdictions which we must consider, namely, the jurisdiction of the state of Ohio over the bridge, the jurisdiction of the state of West Virginia over the same, and the jurisdiction of the federal government over it. The jurisdiction of the state of Ohio is raised because one end of the bridge rests upon the soil of the state of Ohio. The jurisdiction of the state of West Virginia is raised because the other end of the bridge rests upon the soil of that state. And the fact that the bridge exends over and across a navigable river, raises the jurisdiction of the United States.

1. Let us note from what source an individual or corporation gets authority to build a bridge crossing a navigable river, with permission to charge tolls upon those persons who desire to use the same. The courts are unanimous upon this proposition, and that is, that this right can be secured only from the legislature of the state in which the bridge is to be built.

In Fall et al. v. County of Sutter, et al. 21 Calif. 237, the court say:

> "Franchises for erecting toll bridges, or ferries, being sovereign prerogatives, belong to the political power of the state and are primarily represented and granted by the legislature as the head of the political power."

The court in a case reported in 76 Ga. 644, styled Welchel et al. v. State of Georgia, holds that private individuals have no authority to erect a bridge across a navigable river and charge toll for the passing of persons over the river, unless they get their authority so to do from the proper authority of the state.

In Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 798, we find the following language:

> "This court follows the supreme court of Georgia, that authority to grant the franchise of establishing and maintaining a toll bridge over a river where it crosses a public highway in that state is vested solely in the legislature, and may be exercised by it, or be committed to such agencies as it may select."

In the opinion, p. 794, the court say:

> "A grant of this franchise from the public in some form is therefore necessary to enable an individual to establish and maintain a toll bridge for public travel. The legislature of the state alone has authority to make such grant. It may exercise its authority by direct legislation, or through agencies duly established, having power for that purpose."

2. Inasmuch as the Ohio river lies between two states, let us next consider the proposition how an individual or corporation could get the right to erect a bridge across a river running on the boundary between two states.

The courts are harmonious upon the proposition that no one has the right to erect such a bridge except he be given authority to do the same by the legislatures of the two states between which the river forms the boundary.

In The President, Managers, etc., v. Trenton City Bridge Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 46, the first two branches of the syllabus read as follows:

> "Upon principles of public law, it is clear that the power of erecting a bridge, and taking tolls thereon, over a navigable river which forms the coterminous boundary between two states can only be conferred by the concurrent legislation of both states.
> "When the power to make and maintain such bridge, and take tolls thereon, has been given by the joint legislature of both states, the principle could hardly be admitted, that either state, by its separate legislation, could declare that no other bridge should be built across such river within certain limits, and thus render the franchise exclusive."

On p. 50 of the opinion we find the following language:

"Independent of the provisions of this agreement, upon principles of public law, it would seem to be a principle too clear to admit of doubt, that the power of erecting a bridge within the territories of both states, and of taking tolls thereon, could only be conferred by the concurrent legislation of both states. Neither state can, of its own authority, authorize a corporation to place piers, to erect a bridge, and construct a highway over the navigable waters and within the territory of an adjacent state, much less can it confer upon such corporation the franchise of taking tolls within the territory of such state. That franchise is a branch of the sovereign prerogative. The conferring of it is an exercise of sovereign power, and the right can only be exercised within the territory of the sovereignty that confers. The principle, that New Jersey, alone, could neither confer the power of building the bridge or of taking tolls within the territory of Pennsylvania, is too clear to admit of dispute or to require an authority in its support. The principle was recognized and acted upon in the case of Middle Bridge Corporation v. Marks, 26 Maine R. 326."

3. The principle is well established that neither state granting the privilege to build a bridge across a navigable river forming the boundary between two states, has any rights or jurisdiction over the end of the bridge located upon the soil of the other state.

In Middle Bridge Corporation v. Marks, 26 Me. 326, the court say in the syllabus:

"1. The legislature of this state cannot create a corporation and so authorize it to build a bridge, extending out of the limits of this state as to empower such corporation to collect toll of one who passes only upon that part of the bridge without the limits of this state.

"2. And where no express promise is made, the law will not enable such corporation to recover toll or compensation, as on an implied one, against a person for merely passing over without their permission, and under any claim of right, such portion of the bridge as was erected by such corporation upon the territory of a foreign government."

At p. 328 the court say in the opinion:

"The legislature of this state had no power to authorize or create a corporation to build that end of the bridge, it being out of the limits of this state. As an incorporated body, therefore, the plaintiffs, by virtue of their act of incorporation, can have no claim to any use of a privilege, or exercise of authority there."

In the above case a bridge was built from the state of Maine into the Province of New Brunswick, and the corporation was chartered under the laws of Maine.

In Evansville & H. Traction Co. v. Henderson Bridge Co., 134 Fed. Rep. 973, there is a very interesting case upon this question. In the syllabus of said case the following langauge is used:

"A statute of Indiana cannot give a right to use a bridge across the Ohio river beyond low water mark, which constitutes the boundary line of the state."

On p. 975 of the opinion the court uses this language:

"Beyond this, however, is the question, much discussed at the hearing, as to whether the Indiana law can have any controlling effect upon the propositions involved in the case. Neither by virtue of its enactment by the Indiana legislature, nor by the lesser matter of its acceptance by the defendant, could Indiana law have any vigor south of the low water line on the Indiana side of the Ohio river, which line is the boundary limit of the state of Indiana and of its jurisdiction. Even assuming that defendant's bridge is a public highway in Indiana, the laws of that state and the consent of defendant to accept the benefits thereof cannot give any vigor to those laws in Kentucky. The mere acceptance of their benefits by a Kentucky corporation, with the consent and under the authorization of this state, does not bring those laws across the Ohio river even on a bridge. This seems clear enough, and, if the court be correct in that conclusion, the provisions of the Indiana law, both as respects the uses to which the Indiana end of the bridge may be put and as to the duties of the defendant in Indiana, may be let out of consideration, leaving us only to deal with the rights of the complainant and the duties of the defendant in this case, as they may be fixed by or as they may depend upon the laws of Kentucky alone."

4. The principle of law is well established that in so far as the building of the bridge involves the navigability of a stream, the federal government has sole jurisdiction under its power to regulate commerce between the states and with foreign nations.

In support of this proposition, we desire to call attention to the case of Newport & Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. The United States, 105 U. S. 470. In the syllabus the court say:

"1. The paramount power of regulating bridges that affect the navigation of the navigable waters of the United States, is in congress.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"3. The power of congress, in respect to legislation for the preservation of interstate commerce, is free from state interference. When, therefore, congress in a proper way declares a bridge across a navigable river of the United States to be an unlawful structure, no legislation of a state can make it lawful."

On p. 475 of the opinion, Chief Justice Waite uses the following language:

"The paramount power of regulating bridges that affect the navigation of the navigable waters of the United States is in congress. It comes from the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the states. That the Ohio is one of the navigable rivers of the United States must be conceded. It forms a boundary of six states and the commerce upon its waters is very large."

5. With the above fundamental principles in mind, let us now turn to a history of the legislation that has to do with the bridge about which you speak in your communication.

Section 9310 G. C. provides as follows:

"A company organized to construct a bridge over the Ohio river may construct and maintain such bridge, with suitable avenues or approaches leading thereto, and with a single span or a draw, as it determines; but in either case, in order that the bridge may not obstruct the navigation of the river, it shall be built in accordance with an act of congress approved July 14, 1862, entitled, 'an act to establish certain post-roads,' or any act subsequently passed on the subject."

In reference to fixing and collecting tolls for the use of any bridge erected across the Ohio river, section 9312 G. C. provides as follows:

"Such company may fix and collect reasonable rates of toll for all persons, animals, vehicles and property passing or transported over the bridge, but which at no time shall exceed those collected at the Covington and Cincinnati bridge. The company shall set up and keep in a conspicuous place, at each end of the bridge, a board on which the rate is written, painted, or printed in a plain, legible manner."

So much for Ohio legislation.

Section 2014 of the West Virginia code provides as follows:

"Corporations may be formed under the provisions of the first twenty-four sections of chapter 54 of the code, for the purpose of bridging the Ohio river. Any such corporation or any railroad company is hereby authorized to construct or maintain a bridge across said river in the manner now or which may hereafter be provided by the congress of the United States, upon complying with the requirements, conditions and provisions so prescribed, and not otherwise; and such corporation is authorized to take tolls for the passage of persons, railroad cars, engines, vehicles and other things passing on and over such bridge. * * *"

I want to call attention right here to the fact that the laws of Ohio provide that reasonable rates of tolls may be fixed and collected by the company, while the West Virginia laws simply authorize the corporation to take tolls for the passage of persons, etc.

Let us now turn to the legislation enacted by congress in reference to the erection of the bridge at Steubenville. The act was passed July 14, 1862, chapter 167, 12 Statutes at Large, p. 569, and was, "An act to establish certain post-roads." The act provides that the bridge partly constructed across the Ohio river at Steubenville, in the state of Ohio, abutting on the Virginia short of said river, is hereby declared to be a lawful structure. It further provides that when completed, it shall have been so constructed as to leave the navigation of the river unobstructed; also for certain dimensions, etc.; that said bridge is hereby declared to be a public highway, and the act establishes a post-road for the purpose of transmission of mails of the United States, and provides that the parties interested therein, or either of them, are authorized to complete, maintain and operate said road and bridge when completed, as set forth in the preceding section (which section provides for dimensions, etc.), anything in any law or laws of the above named states to the contrary notwithstanding.

6. Now, with all the above kept clearly in mind, the next important question that arises is as to whether the traffic carried on across the bridge is interstate commerce or not. If it be interstate commerce, the federal authorities have complete and final jurisdiction over all matters connected with the traffic over the bridge. This is one of the important questions raised in your communication and I shall therefore give it careful consideration.

In Boyle v. The Philadelphia & Reading Ry. Co., 54 Pa. St. 310, the court, in the fourth branch of the syllabus, makes the following distinction:

> "'Toll' is a tribute or custom paid for passage, not for carriage; something taken for a liberty or privilege, not for a service."

In Commonwealth v. Henderson Bridge Co., 99 Ky. 623, the court was called upon to pass upon such a question, and held:

> "This defendant company is not engaged in commerce or transportation at all. It has no authority or power or franchise to engage in commerce or transportation. It was simply authorized to build this bridge, and, when built, then the railroads that may be engaged in transportation, and so indirectly engaged in commerce, may transmit merchandise and passengers over its structure, in consideration of a reasonable rate of toll for so doing. This is all; nothing more."

In the above case the bridge company was attempting to escape a franchise tax imposed by the laws of Kentucky, on the ground that it was engaged in interstate commerce.

The above cases, and others which might be cited, seem to indicate that the traffic across a bridge of the kind under discussion is not interstate commerce in any sense of the term, and therefore would not under any circumstances be regulated by congress.

There is a case reported in 154 U. S. 204, styled Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Co., Plff. in Err., v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, which seems to decide this question the other way, although the language used in what might be termed the syllabus and the language used in the opinion proper, when compared with that used in the concurrence of the opinion, is, to say the least, very confusing; yet I feel that we can draw from this case certain principles which will control in the matter under consideration and which at least establishes the proposition that the traffic across a bridge of the kind under consideration is in the nature of interstate commerce. In the syllabus it is stated:

> "A state has no power to regulate tolls upon a bridge connecting such state with another state; congress alone has such power.
> "Whether two states can, in the absence of legislation by congress, fix, by reciprocal action, the rates of toll and fare over a bridge connecting such states, this court does not decide in this case.
> "A bridge across waters between two states and connecting such states, is an instrument of interstate commerce and traffic across it is interstate commerce."

In studying the opinion carefully, we find that the language used above is not warranted, from the real finding of the court, and, therefore, to ascertain what the court really decided, we must turn to the opinion itself.

On p. 209 the court states the question involved in the case as follows:

> "This case involves the power of a state to regulate tolls upon a bridge connecting it with another state, without the assent of congress, and without the concurrence of such other state in the proposed tariff."

In discussing this question, the court further on in the opinion lays down the fundamental principles which control in the matter of commerce, as follows:

"1. Those in which the power of the state is exclusive;

"2. Those in which the states may act in the absence of legislation by congress;

"3. Those in which the action of congress is exclusive and the states cannot interfere at all."

In discussing these three propositions, the court say that one illustration of the cases coming under the second division, namely, wherein the states and congress have concurrent jurisdiction, is, "the construction of dams and bridges across the navigable waters."

In its reasoning on p. 220 the court uses the following language:

"It is clear that the state of Kentucky, by the statute in question, attempts to reach out and secure for itself a right to prescribe a rate of toll applicable not only to persons crossing from Kentucky to Ohio, but from Ohio to Kentucky, a right which practically nullifies the corresponding right of Ohio to fix tolls from her own state. It is obvious that the bridge could not have been built without the consent of Ohio, since the north end of the bridge and its abutments rest upon Ohio soil; and without authority from that state to exercise the right of eminent domain, no land could have been acquired for that purpose. It follows that, if the state of Kentucky has the right to regulate the travel upon such bridge and fix the tolls, the state of Ohio has the same right, and so long as their action is harmonious there may be no room for friction between the states; but it would scarcely be consonant with good sense to say that separate regulations and separate tariffs may be adopted by each state (if the subject be one for state regulation), and made applicable to that portion of the bridge within its own territory. So far as the matter of construction is concerned, each state may proceed separately by authorizing the company to condemn land within its own territory, but in the operation of the bridge their action must be joint or great confusion is likely to result."

The court uses the following language on p. 222:

"We do not wish to be understood as saying that, in the absence of congressional legislation or mutual legislation of the two states, the company has the right to fix tolls at its own discretion. There is always an implied understanding with reference to these structures that charges shall be reasonable, and the question of reasonableness must be settled as other questions of a judicial nature are settled, by the evidence in the particular case."

At the conclusion of the opinion in this case we find language used which we feel can safely be relied upon in arriving at the conclusion as to what the court really found in the case before it. The language is as follows:

"Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, Mr. Justice Field, Mr. Justice Gray and Mr. Justice White concurred in the judgment of reversal, for the following reasons:

"The several states have the power to establish and regulate ferries and bridges, and the rates of toll thereon, whether within one state, or between two adjoining states, subject to the paramount authority of congress over interstate commerce.

"By the concurrent acts of the legislature of Kentucky in 1846, and of the legislature of Ohio in 1849, this bridge company was made a corporation of each state, and authorized to fix rates of toll.

"Congress, by the act of February 17, 1865, chap. 39, declared this bridge 'to be, when completed, in accordance with the laws of the states of Ohio and Kentucky, a lawful structure;' but made no provision as to tolls; and thereby manifested the intention of congress that the rates of toll should be established by the two states. 13 Stat. at L. 431.

"The original acts of incorporation constituted a contract between the corporation and both states, which could not be altered by one state without the consent of the other."

From the above, I feel I am safe in arriving at the following conclusions:

1. One state alone cannot fix a schedule of charges or tolls for passage over a bridge across a navigable stream located on the boundary between two states. This principle seems established beyond a doubt.

2. Traffic over the bridge is in the nature of interstate commerce, or, in other words, it is commerce of such a nature that congress and the states concerned have concurrent jurisdiction over the matter of fixing tolls charged for such traffic.

3. The right of congress to act in the matter of fixing tolls and tariffs for the traffic across the bridge is paramount but not exclusive.

4. If congress does not speak through legislative action, its intention is manifested to the end that the states may concurrently act in the matter of fixing the tolls and tariff.

5. If neither congress nor the states act in the matter of fixing a rate of tariffs for passage across the bridge, the courts will grant relief in cases where the company owning the bridge charges an unreasonable tariff for passage across the same.

With these fundamental principles in mind, let us also remember, in view of what has been set out above, that the state of West Virginia and the state of Ohio have concurrently granted the franchises to the said bridge company, to locate its bridge across the Ohio river; that congress has fixed no schedule or tariff of rates in the matter of passage across the bridge, simply having declared the bridge to be a legal structure when completed according to plans and specifications set out in the act; and that neither the state of Ohio nor the state of West Virginia, nor both acting concurrently, have attempted to fix a schedule of rates that may be legally charged by the bridge company.

From all the above the answer to your question is fairly evident and is as follows:

(1) The people interested might appeal to congress to fix a schedule of rates for passage across the bridge, inasmuch as the right of congress to act in this matter is paramount.

(2) Inasmuch as congress has not seen fit to act in this matter, the people interested might appeal to the states of West Virginia and Ohio to act concurrently in the matter of fixing a schedule of rates to be charged by the company for passage across the bridge.

(3) If the people interested do not care to appeal to congress or to the legislatures of the states of West Virginia and Ohio for relief, they might, as suggested in Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, supra, appeal to the courts.

But here the same question arises that we considered in reference to the law-making bodies. What court has jurisdiction over a matter such as this? Have the federal courts jurisdiction, or have the state courts jurisdiction? As said above, congress has the paramount right and power to enact legislation in reference to the tolls that may be charged for passage across the bridge, for the reason that the traffic is in the nature of interstate commerce; but congress has never acted in reference to this matter. Hence, I am of the opinion that the federal courts have nothing over which they may exercise jurisdiction.

In 8 Fed. 190, there is a case styled Canada South. Ry. Co. v. International Bridge Co., which involves facts very similar to those under consideration. The Canada Southern Ry. Co. applied to the federal courts, asking them to determine the rate of tolls to be charged for the use of a bridge erected by the defendant, The International Bridge Co. This bridge company was chartered under the laws of the state of New York and the Dominion of Canada. In these charters no limitation was placed upon the rate of tolls to be charged for the use of the bridge by railway trains, but the directors were empowered to charge such tolls as they might deem expedient. The bridge rested upon the soil of the state of New York and the Dominion of Canada and was across navigable waters.

Congress had enacted some legislation in reference to the bridge, but said nothing about the rate of tolls. The defendant raised the question that the act of congress did not confer power upon the court to prescribe the compensation which the bridge company might charge for the use of its property, and that therefore the court had no jurisdiction over the matter. The court held that the contention of the defendant was correct and dismissed the petition on the ground that it had no jurisdiction in the matter. In fact this case went so far as to almost hold that in no case could the courts assume jurisdiction to determine the matter of tolls unless express jurisdiction were given to it for this purpose.

So that in view of the holding of the court in this case and of the fact that congress has enacted no legislation whatever in the case under consideration, in reference to the matter of tolls, it is my opinion that the federal courts have no jurisdiction over the matter.

If the federal courts have no jurisdiction, have the courts of this state jurisdiction, when we remember that one end of the bridge is on the soil of West Virginia? Would an order of the court bind the bridge company as to its rights on the West Virginia side of the river?

In State of Maryland v. Northern Central Ry. Co., 18 Md. 193, the court laid down the following propositions of law in the syllabus:

> "Corporations owing their corporate existence, in part, to the state of Maryland, and exercising their franchises therein, may be restrained from expending their funds for any other than corporate purposes anywhere.
> "A plea, by a corporation, to the jurisdiction of a Maryland court, on the ground that the corporate property lies partly in another state, or that its corporate existence is derived, in part, from a charter of another state, is not tenable.
> "Such a corporation must, for the purposes of justice, be treated as a separate corporation by the courts of each state from which it derives its being; that is, is a domestic corporation to the extent of the state in which it acts, and as a foreign corporation as regards the other sources of its existence."

In Alexander v. Tolleston Club, 110 Ill. 65, the court say in the syllabus:

> "A court of equity in this state has jurisdiction of a bill, the object of which is to obtain an injunction to prevent the defendant from interfering with a right of way claimed by the complainant over lands situate in another state, where the defendants are personally served. The jurisdiction in equity by way of injunction is strictly in personam."

In the opinion on p. 77 the court say:

"The further objection made is, that the circuit court had no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the action because the land was in another state. Appellant resided within the jurisdiction of the court and was personally served with process. The object of the bill was to obtain an injunction to prevent appellant from interfering with a right of way claimed by complainant over lands situated in the state of Indiana, under a lease, the controversy involving the construction of the lease. The jurisdiction of equity by way of injunction is strictly in personam. It is well settled that courts of equity may decree the specific performance of contracts respecting land situated beyond the jurisdiction of the state where suit is brought. The ground of this jurisdiction, as said by Story, is, that courts of equity have authority to act upon the person; and although they cannot bind the land itself by their decree, yet they can bind the conscience of the party in regard to the land, and compel him to perform his agreement according to conscience and good faith."

So that in view of the above decisions it is my opinion that the people interested might appeal to the courts of our state for relief.

In passing, however, I desire to call attention to a case found in 234 U. S. 317, styled Ft. Richmond, etc., v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, etc. The finding in this case is broad enough to permit the legislature of the state of Ohio to act alone in so far as tolls to be charged for passage from the state of Ohio to the state of West Virginia is concerned; but the legislature of the state of Ohio could not act in so far as passage from the state of West Virginia to Ohio is concerned. Hence, if you should simply desire to control the rates of passage from the state of Ohio to the state of West Virginia, the legislature of Ohio could act independently of that of West Virginia.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP CLERK—SALARY NOT TO EXCEED $150.00 PER ANNUM.

The township clerk is entitled to receive, as his compensation for any one year, the sum of not to exceed $150.00.

Amounts received over and above the sum of $150.00 by the township clerk should be returned to the township treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1917.

HON. EARL K. SOLETHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 14, 1917, previously acknowledged, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Referring to the examination of the township accounts of Henry township, Wood county, Ohio, from August 22, 1914, to November 3, 1916, by State Examiner C. C. Davis, you will find the following finding:
> "(7) Clerk, William B. Henning, received as follows:
> "For 1914, amount paid, $250.00; excess, $100.00.
> "For 1915, amount paid, $250.00; excess, $100.00.
> "For 1916, amount paid, $262.50; excess, $111.50.
> "Total finding of $311.50 being made against Mr. Henning.
> "You will further note that the examiner made findings against the trustees of this township for the reason that stone road improvements had not been made under the subdivision covered by section 6999 G. C.
> "These findings against the trustees were later cancelled by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices for the reason that a further examination of the stone road books of this township showed that this township was improving its roads under the provisions of sections 6976 to 7018 G. C. inclusive. I made an extensive examination of the stone road books of this township and found that they had been improving under these sections ever since the law was enacted, and upon this showing being made to the bureau of inspection they promptly cancelled the finding against the trustees.
> "It seems to me that the same reasoning would apply in the case of the clerk, as according to section 6999, he is entitled to services performed under sections 6976 to 7018 inclusive, an allowance not to exceed $100.00 in any one year. Section 3294 G. C. limits the amount to be paid to the trustees to $150.00 per year, and section 3308 limits the amount a clerk is entitled to receive to $150.00 per year. If the trustees are entitled to the additional $100.00 under section 6999, I can see no reason why the clerk should not receive pay for his services under this same section not to exceed $100.00 per year.
> "In view of the above facts, I wish you would render me an opinion as to whether the finding against the clerk is correct."

Your inquiry calls for a consideration of those sections of the General Code which provided for the compensation of a township clerk prior to the enactment of what is commonly called the Cass road law.

General Code section 3308 provides as follows:

> "The clerk shall be entitled to the following fees, to be paid by the parties requiring the service; twenty-five cents for recording each mark or brand; ten cents for each hundred words of record required in the establishment of township roads, to be opened and repaired by the parties; ten cents for each hundred words of records or copies in matters relating to partition fences, but not less than twenty-five cents for any one copy, to be paid from the township treasury; ten cents for each hundred words of record required in the establishment of township roads, to be opened and kept in repair by the superintendents; for keeping record of the proceedings of the trustees, stating and making copies of accounts and settlements, attending suits for and against the township and for any other township business the trustees require him to perform, such reasonable compensation as they allow. In no one year shall he be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than one hundred and fifty dollars."

The above section is followed in ascertaining the compensation of the township clerk in all township matters, that is, in all matters in which the township as a whole is interested or matters which would be considered "township business."

Under the General Code sections which provide how township roads should be improved, and especially under the subdivision beginning with section 6976 and ending with section 7018, a certain plan was permitted for road improvement by township trustees. Said plan provided that when a petition of one hundred or more taxpayers of such township was presented to the trustees of the township, praying for the improvement of the public roads within such township, and which includes a road running into or through a village or city, that the township trustees should submit the question of such improvement to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election held therein, and that if said proposition carried, then the roads of said township should be improved as provided by said subdivision.

It is a separate and distinct plan and is distinguished from the other plans set forth in the various subdivisions of said chapter in which the same is found by being a complete scheme of procedure and different from that which was followed when acting under other subdivisions of said chapter. Under said subdivision the township trustees, by virtue of section 6999, are entitled to a compensation other and different from their regular compensation as such trustees. That is, under said subdivision the township trustees are entitled to the sum of $2.00 per day for the time actually employed in addition to the fees allowed otherwise by law for other services. For other township services generally township trustees are only entitled to the sum of $1.50 per day.

It is also provided in said subdivision that the township treasurer shall receive compensation other and different from his regular fees as such township treasurer. That is to say, for handling the township money generally the township treasurer receives the sum of two per cent., but under the subdivision of said chapter, above referred to, and as provided by General Code section 7015, the township treasurer shall receive and disburse the monies arising from the provisions of the subdivision of this chapter, and shall receive as compensation therefor one-half of one per cent. of the first ten thousand, or less, distributed in any one year, and one-fourth of one per cent. of any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, to be paid out of the township funds, and he shall receive no other compensation for services rendered under said subdivision of said chapter.

It is also provided in said subdivision of said chapter, and in section 6999:

> "The trustees shall allow the township clerk for his services under such subdivision a reasonable compensation not to exceed one hundred dollars in any one year."

The services of the township clerk, under such subdivision of said chapter, are no different than are the services of the township trustees different from their other services as township trustees, and are no different than are the services of the township treasurer different from his regular duties as such township treasurer. How a distinction could be made between these different officials is a thing I am not quite able to understand.

Under section 3294 G. C., the compensation of any trustee, to be paid from the treasury of the township, shall not exceed in any one year the sum of $150.00, but said sum is or may be made up in part of the $2.00 per day which is allowed such trustees under the subdivision of said chapter, and in part of the $1.50 per day which is allowed under section 3294 G. C.

Section 3308 G. C. provides:

> "In no one year shall he (the clerk) be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than $150.00."

Said $150.00 may be made up of such reasonable compensation as the township trustees may allow the township clerk for his services under the subdivision of the chapter, above referred to, or it may be made up from the fees for services performed in other township matters, but in either event whenever the amount of such fees, or whenever the amount of such reasonable compensation, reaches the amount of $150.00 in any one year, then under the provisions of section 3308 no greater amount can be paid.

I do not understand that the bureau of inspection and supervision held that your township trustees could draw more than $150.00 in any one year. As I understand it, what the bureau did hold was that the amount which the trustees could draw was ascertained for the services rendered under the subdivision of said chapter above referred to, at the rate of $2.00 per day, under section 6999, instead of at the rate of $1.50 per day, as provided by section 3294 G. C., and that the whole amount could not, in any one year, exceed the sum of $150.00. The same reasoning would apply to the township clerk if his services for matters outside of those rendered under the subdivision of the chapter above referred to amounted to the sum of $150.00. Then no matter what the trustees should allow him under section 6999, he would not be entitled to receive the same from the township treasury on account of the prohibition contained in section 3308.

In the same opinion of my predecessor, above referred to, the following language is used:

> "I am of the opinion that for services rendered by the township clerk in the performance of duties required by the statutes governing the aforesaid plan of township road improvement, said clerk is entitled to a reasonable compensation not to exceed $100.00 in any one year, to be allowed by the township trustees under authority of section 6999 of the General Code, and that said compensation is in lieu of any allowance for such service under authority of section 3308 G. C., and is subject to the limitation of one hundred and fifty dollars per year provided by said section."

I concur in the above and, answering your question, advise you that the finding of the examiner is correct and that the township clerk should return the amount of such finding to the township treasurer.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—MONEY SPENT BY SAID DEPARTMENT—SHOULD BE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION—IN DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF PREMIUM DUE FROM STATE TO INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

The amount of money paid out by the state highway department for labor, either directly or through an agent, under the provisions of section 1209 G. C., should be included in the amount of money spent by the state during the preceding fiscal year and the premium thereon should be taken care of as provided in section 1465-64 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 5, 1917, which reads as follows:

> "Attached hereto please find statement of the Industrial Commission of Ohio addressed to Edmund Burke claiming a premium of $112.00 covering the employment of twenty employes by Mr. Burke as an employer.
> "I am submitting herewith copy of a contract which this department has with Mr. Burke for the improvement of section 'I' of the Columbus-Millersburg road, I. C. H. No. 23, in Knox county, and respectfully request that you advise me whether Mr. Burke or this department is liable for the payment of the premium requested by the Industrial Commission."

Your question arises under the following statement of facts and provisions of law.

Your department originally let a contract for the improvement of section "I" of the Columbus-Millersburg road, I. C. H. No. 23, in Knox county. The original contractor failed to proceed with the work as provided in the contract and your department, under the provisions of section 1209 G. C., took the work over and is completing it under what is termed force account.

Said section 1209 G. C. reads in part as follows:

> "If, in the opinion of the state highway commissioner, the contractor has not commenced his work within a reasonable time, or does not carry the same forward with reasonable progress, or is improperly performing his work, or has abandoned, or fails or refuses to complete a contract entered into under the provisions of this chapter (G. C. Secs. 1178 to 1231-3), the state highway commissioner shall have full power and authority to enter upon and construct said improvement either by contract, force account or in such manner as he may deem for the best interest of the public, paying the full costs and expense thereof from the balance of the contract price unpaid to said contractor, and in case there is not sufficient balance to pay for said work, the state highway commissioner shall require the contractor or the surety on his bond to pay the cost of completing said work. * * *"

In completing this improvement under force account, you employed Edmund Burke as your agent and entered into a contract with him for the completion of the same. The contract which you attached to your communication is too lengthy to set out in full, but I will quote the parts of same which are necessary to enable me to render an opinion upon the matter submitted in your communication.

The "SECOND" provision of said contract reads as follows:

"SECOND: The party of the second part agrees to act as the agent of the party of the first part in employing all necessary labor, teams and all employes necessary in the completion of the work. The number of said teams, laborers and other employes and the price to be paid for their services, shall be subject to the approval of the party of the first part, except that party of the second part agrees to furnish competent foremen to be approved by the party of the first part for the sum of $4.00 per day. The compensation of said laborers, teams and other employes shall be paid by the party of the first part."

The "FOURTH" provision of said contract reads as follows:

"FOURTH: The party of the second part agrees to supervise the work of completing said improvement according to the plans and specifications heretofore prepared therefor on file in the office of the state highway commissioner and to the satisfaction and acceptance of the party of the first part. The party of the second part agrees to so supervise and superintend the completion of the said work that no damage will result to third persons and be responsible for any damage that may result by reason of any unlawful act on its part or the part of the laborers, foremen and other employes acting under its supervision and control."

From these two provisions it will be readily seen that Edmund Burke is merely the agent of the state of Ohio in the matter of the completion of this highway, and is not responsible for the payment of the premium for injury to the men, unless it be due to his own unlawful act or the unlawful act of his foremen and employes.

If Edmund Burke is not liable for the payment of this premium of $112.00, the question then arises, is the state of Ohio liable for the payment of same? In order to ascertain this it will be necessary for us to note the provisions of a number of sections which have to do with what is termed the workmen's compensation law of the state.

Section 1465-60 G. C. reads in part as follows:

"The following shall constitute employers subject to the provisions of this act (* * *):

"1. The state and each county, city, township, incorporated village and school district therein.

"* * *"

Section 1465-61 G. C. reads in part as follows:

"The terms 'employe,' 'workman' and 'operative' as used in this act, shall be construed to mean:

"1. Every person in the service of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein, including regular members of lawfully constituted police and fire departments of cities and villages, under any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written, except any official of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein. Provided that nothing in this act shall apply to policemen or firemen in cities where policemen's and firemen's pension funds are now or hereafter may be established and maintained by municipal authority under existing laws.

"* * *."

From the provisions of these two sections I think it is quite evident that the state, in the matter suggested by you, is liable for the payment of a premium, for the reason that it has in its employ persons as set out in section 1465-61 G. C. If it is liable for a premium, for what premium is it liable?

Section 1465-62 G. C. reads as follows:

"Every employer mentioned in subdivision one of section thirteen hereof (G. C. Sec. 1465-60), shall contribute to the state insurance fund in proportion to the annual expenditure of money by such employer for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof (G. C. Sec. 1465-61), the amount of such payments and the method of making the same to be determined as hereinafter provided.".

Section 1465-63 G. C. reads as follows:

"The amount of money to be contributed by the state itself, and by each county, city, incorporated village, school district or other taxing district of the state shall be, unless otherwise provided by law, a sum equal to one per centum of the amount of money expended by the state and for each county, city, incorporated village, school district or other taxing district respectively during the next preceding fiscal year for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof (G. C. Sec. 1465-61)."

From the provisions of these two sections it is evident that the state must contribute, to the state insurance fund, one per cent. of the amount expended by it in any one year.

Section 1465-64 G. C. reads as follows:

"In the month of January in the year 1914 the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state in favor of said treasurer as custodian of the state insurance fund, and for deposit to the credit of said fund, for a sum equal to one per centum of the amount of money expended by the state during the last preceding fiscal year, for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof (G. C. Sec. 1465-61), which said sums are hereby appropriated and made available for such payments; and thereafter in the month of January of each year, such sums of money shall in like manner be paid into the state insurance fund as may be provided by law; and it shall be the duty of the Industrial Commission of Ohio to communicate to the general assembly on the first day of each regular session thereof, an estimate of the aggregate amount of money necessary to be contributed by the state during the two years next ensuing as its proper portion of the state insurance fund."

What answer to your question do we obtain from the provisions of the sections herein quoted? It is evident that the state is not liable for the payment of the premium of $112.00. However, the amount of money that your department pays out during any one year, directly or through an agent, for the completion of contracts, under and by virtue of the provisions of section 1209 G. C., should be taken into consideration in arriving at the conclusion as to the amounts to be paid into the state insurance fund under the provisions of section 1465-64 G. C.

Hence, answering your question specifically, neither Mr. Burke nor your department is liable for the payment of the premium of $112.00. But the matter of the premium paid would be regulated by the provisions of section 1465-64 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

KAUSTINE CHEMICAL CLOSETS—LIMITATION UPON THE USE OF SAME.

The state board of health has authority to permit the use of Kaustine chemical closets subject to the following limitations:

Such closets may not be installed in a school house or other building. See Secs. 12600-65 and 12600-218 G. C.

They may not be installed within two (2) feet of any lot or alley line, or twenty (20) feet of any street line or any building of human habitation or occupancy, or within fifty (50) feet of any cistern, well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking or culinary purposes, whether they are located on the same or an adjoining lot or premises.

See Sec. 12600-267 G. C.

Sec. 12600-267 G. C., relating to the construction of privy vaults, has no application to Kaustine chemical closets.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1917.

The State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of recent rate, as follows:

> "Section 12600-65 G. C. in specifying school building sanitation, states '* * * Where water supply and sewerage systems are not available no sanitary equipment shall be installed within the building, but pumps in lieu of drinking fountains, closets and urinals in the above proportions shall be placed upon the school building grounds, and no closets or urinals shall be placed nearer any occupied building than fifty (50) feet.'
> "Section 12600-267 G. C. prescribes the location of privy vaults and prohibits their construction within fifty (50) feet of any school building. Section 12600-268 prescribes the construction of vaults specifying materials and methods.
> "In an opinion date July 25, 1916, the attorney-general states 'Whatever may be claimed for the Kaustine system chemical closets, it must certainly be regarded as a sanitary equipment for the uses and purposes for which it has been originated, and it is my opinion that the sweeping provisions of section 12600-65 G. C., supra, clearly prohibits the installation of this or any similar device inside of a school building in this state.'
> "We desire to bring the above to your attention in connection with a request for consideration of what power the state board of health may have to adopt regulations pertaining to the installation, use and maintenance of chemical closets. We believe that cognizance of the advantages of chemical closets over privy vaults, as this term is generally accepted, may properly be taken, at the same time recognizing the limitations of chemical closets, their inferiority to plumbing and the construction and maintenance which should be required. Obviously, in our opinion, the above sections of the General Code do not recognize any device which might be considered intermediate between plumbing fixtures and privy vaults, and as chemical closets must be considered sanitary equipment and not plumbing fixtures, the privy vault requirements seem to apply to them. We have in mind that it may be just and proper to put into effect regulations which will satisfactorily control the location, construction, installation, use and maintenance of chemical closets, recognizing their advantages and limitations.

"It is respectfully requested that you furnish this department an opinion in answer to the following:

"1. In enforcing the state building code (sections 12600-1 to 12600-282 G. C.), has the state board of health authority to permit the installation and use of chemical closets?

"2. If so, (a) must such equipment be located and installed as prescribed by sections 12600-267 and 12600-268 G. C., pertaining to privy vaults? or (b) has the state board of health authority to adopt and enforce regulations to control the location, construction, installation, use and maintenance of chemical closets and urinals?"

I am also in receipt of a copy of a report of a committee appointed by your board concerning the Kaustine chemical closet, with the recommendations of such committee as to the use of such closet.

Section 1237 G. C. reads:

"The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of health has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

Section 1261-2 G. C. reads:

"It shall be the duty of the state board of health, within ninety days after the passage and approval of this act, to appoint an elector of this state to fill the office of state inspector of plumbing, and to hold office until such a time as his successor may be appointed and qualified. The person so appointed must be a plumber with at least ten years' experience. The state board of health shall have the power to make and enforce rules and regulations governing plumbing to carry out the provisions of this act."

Section 12600-65 G. C. reads:

"Sanitation. Where a water supply and sewerage system are available a sanitary equipment shall be installed as follows:

"In the superstructure of the building one sink and one drinking fountain shall be installed on each floor to each six thousand (6,000) square feet of floor area or less.

"In the basement one sink and one drinking fountain shall be installed on the males' side, and the same on the females' side to each three hundred and fifty (350) pupils, or less.

"Sinks shall be the ordinary slop sinks, or in lieu of same, lavatories may be used providing the waste plug or stopper has been removed.

"Sanitary schoolhouse drinking fountains with jet giving a continuous flow of water shall be installed, and no tin cups or tumblers shall be allowed in or about any school building.

"In libraries, museums and art galleries there shall be provided the following fixtures, viz.:

"One water closet to each one hundred (100) females, or less.

"One water closet to each two hundred (200) males, or less.

"One urinal to each two hundred (200) males, or less.

"The above to be based upon the actual number of persons to be accommodated, the capacity, being established as prescribed under section 12, means of egress.

"In all other school buildings there shall be provided the following fixtures, viz.:

"One water closet for each fifteen (15) females, or less.

"One water closet for each twenty-five (25) males or less.

"One urinal for each fifteen (15) males or less.

"Toilet accommodations for males and females shall be placed in separate rooms, with a traveling distance between the same of not less than twenty (20) feet.

"Juvenile or short closets shall be used for primary and grammar grade schools. This does not apply when latrine closets are used.

"In buildings accommodating males and females it shall be presumed that the occupants will be equally divided between males and females.

"Where water supply and sewerage systems are not available no sanitary equipment shall be installed within the building, but pumps in lieu of drinking fountains, closets and urinals in the above proportions shall be placed upon the school building grounds, and no closets or urinals shall be placed nearer any occupied building than fifty (50) feet.

"Where pumps or hydrants are used the outlet shall be inverted.

"Buildings more than three stories in height shall be provided with toilet rooms in each story and basement, and in these shall be installed water closets and urinals in the above required ratios in proportion to the number of persons to be accommodated in the various stories.

"Toilet rooms for males shall be clearly marked 'Boys' toilet' or 'Men's toilet' and for females 'Girls' toilet' or 'Women's tilet'."

Section 12600-267 General Code reads:

"Location of Vault. No vault, manure pit, open top cesspool, septic tank or other reservoir which is used as a privy or receptacle for human or animal excreta shall be located within two (2) feet of any lot or alley line or twenty (20) feet of any street line or any building of human habitation or occupancy or within fifty (50) feet of any cistern, well, spring or other source of water supply used for drinking or culinary purposes, whether they are located on the same or an adjoining lot, or premises.

"Exception. No privy vault shall be located within fifty (50) feet of any school building."

Section 12600-218 G. C. reads:

"Water Closets Prohibited. Pan, valve, plunger, offset washout and other water closets except latrines having invisible seals or an unventilated space, or the walls of which are not thoroughly washed at each discharge are prohibited.

"Long hopper water closets, and similar appliances shall not hereafter be installed in any building.

"The provisions of this section shall also apply to the dry closet system or other system of closets in which the venting, back venting or local venting is to be made otherwise than in this code prescribed."

On July 25, 1916, Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1916, Vol. II, page 1276, my predecessor, Hon. E. C. Turner, rendered an opinion in which he held that "Indoor chemical closets may not be installed in school houses in view of the provisions of section 12600-65 G. C."

In that opinion Mr. Turner said:

"It is contended by counsel that the Kaustine system is a private sewage disposal system, and as such is not comprehended within the prohibitions contained in the section just quoted, and the further argument is offered that the system should not be brought within the terms of the statute for the reason that it was not originated until several years after the building code had been in force.

"Whatever may be claimed for the Kaustine system it must certainly be regarded as a sanitary equipment for the uses and purposes for which it has been originated, and it is my opinion that the sweeping provisions of section 12600-65 G. C., supra, clearly prohibit the installation of this or any similar device inside a school building in this state."

Mr. Turner in that opinion took the view that the Kaustine chemical closet was "Sanitary Equipment" within the meaning of Sec. 12600-65- G. C.

I agree with this view, and after carefully reading the report of the special committee above referred to, I am of the opinion that in determining when and where the chemical closet may be used within the provisions of the building code, we should view this closet as a "dry closet" which is, of course, also sanitary equipment. That it should not be classed as a "privy vault," I am satisfied after reading the various provisions that apply to such vaults.

The state building code, while not expressly authorizing the use of "dry closets," recognizes their use in several of its provisions, and in view of this and the provisions of Sec. 1237 to the effect that the board of health may make regulations "for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule." I am of the opinion that the board has authority to permit the use of these closets subject, however, to the following limitations:

Such closets may not be installed in a school house or other building. See Ssc. 12600-65 and 12600-218 G. C.

They may not be installed within two (2) feet of any lot or alley line, or twenty (20) feet of any street line or any building of human habitation or occupancy, or within fifty (50) feet of any cistern, well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking or culinary purposes, whether they are located on the same or an adjoining lot or premises.

See Sec. 12600-267 G. C.

Sec. 12600-268 G. C., relating to the construction of privy vaults does not, I think, have any application.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—HAS RIGHT TO COMMUTE AWARDS MADE IN CASE OF PERMANENT TOTAL DISABILITY.

1. Section 1465-87 G. C. as amended by 107 O. L. 162, authorizes the industrial commission to commute awards made in cases of permanent total disability, in addition to awards made in cases of death.

2. Commutation may be made of awards which have been made prior to the date when said amendment became effective.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On June 29, 1917, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "On the 24th day of January, 1916, Hon. E. C. Turner rendered an opinion with respect to the allowance of lump sum awards in cases of permanent total disability. The opinion of Mr. Turner, as set forth in this communication, was to the effect that the commission was without authority to make lump sum awards in cases of this character.
> "We desire, in this connection, to call your attention to the following language contained in section 1465-90 of the General Code, as same is embodied in house bill 506, passed by the last general assembly:
> "'The commission under special circumstances, and when the same is deemed advisable, may commute payments of compensation or benefits to one or more lump sum payments.'
> "The commission requests that you express an opinion as to whether or not the above amended section will apply to application for lump sum awards in claims involving permanent total disabilities which were sustained prior to the date on which the amendment became effective.
> "The case is rather urgent, and we respectfully request your opinion at the earliest possible date."

The section which you quote is Sec. 1465-87 G. C., instead of 1465-90. This section as it stood prior to the amendment of 107 O. L. 162, reads:

> "The board, under special circumstances, and when the same is deemed advisable, may commute periodical benefits to one or more lump sum payments."

As amended (107 O. L. 162), it reads:

> "Sec. 1465-67. The commission, under special circumstances, and when the same is deemed advisable, may commute payments of compensation or benefits to one or more lump sum payments."

The opinion of Attorney-General Turner, to which you refer, was based on the theory that old section 1465-87 only authorized commutation of benefits payable to the dependents of killed employes, while there was no authority to commute compensations payable to injured employes.

This distinction has been eliminated by the legislature in amending this section by the addition of the words, "Payments of compensation or," and the omission of the word, "periodical;" and as Sec. 1465-90 G. C., and other sections of the act, give the board full power and authority to determine all questions within its jurisdiction, said section 1465-87 as amended, puts the commutation of compensation and benefits squarely within the jurisdiction of the board.

The amendment of Sec. 1465-87, conceding that the same was necessary in order to allow the board to commute periodical payments of compensation in case of permanent total disability, does not interfere in any way with any right which existed before the amendment. As the law stood prior to the amendment, the fund was presumably liable for the total amount of compensation awarded, but the same could only be paid in periodical payments, no matter how urgent might be the reason for commuting the award. Under the amendment the employe is not compelled to accept commutation in place of periodical payments. As a matter of fact, the amendment is for his advantage, and it is safe to say commutation will never be made except upon the application of the claimant. The amendment cannot have the effect of increasing or decreasing awards, and has no effect on awards that have been made, except to authorize commutation of the same and immediate payment of a lump sum, instead of a long series of periodical payments.

Therefore there is no reason why this amendment should not apply to a case in which an award has been made prior to the date upon which it became effective, if application is made for commutation of the balance due under such award, and the board deems it advisable to commute the same. Express power to so commute existing awards is given by Sec. 1465-86, taken in connection with Sec. 1465-87 as amended. Said section 1465-86 provides:

"The powers and jurisdiction of the board over each case shall be continuing, and it may from time to time make such modification or change with respect to former findings or orders with respect thereto, as, in its opinion may be justified."

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PRINCIPALS—IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN CITY DISTRICTS—MAY BE APPOINTED BY THE SUPERINTENDENT.

"Principals" in the public schools are teachers, and under section 7703 General Code, in city districts, may be appointed by the superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 7, 1917.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—An inquiry has been received by this department from Hon. Max E. Brunswick, city solicitor, Youngstown, Ohio, in reference to a matter concerning your department, which inquiry is as follows:

"A question has arisen in our city in regard to the authority of the superintendent of schools to employ a principal of high school. This department was requested by the board of education to render an opinion in regard to this matter. We decided that the superintendent of schools had no such authority. An opinion purporting to come from the state superintendent of schools was published in our local papers last Saturday in a communication from our superintendent of schools, which was not in accord with the opinion we rendered the board of education.

"We beg to inquire whether you would, under these circumstances, decide this matter, provided we submit the questions of the board, our communication to the board and our reasons for reaching this conclusion.

"We desire this favor from you, only in order that we may have a decision from your office on this important matter."

The questions asked by the board of education, attached to the inquiry, which apply to the question asked here, are as follows:

"3. Does a superintendent of high schools in a city possess the authority to appoint the principal of a high school in said city?

"4. Does said superintendent possess the authority to appoint the principal of a grade school in said city?

"5. If said superintendent does not possess the authority, who then appoints the principals of high and grade schools in a city?"

The answer to the 5th question, of course, depends upon the answers to the third and fourth, and these may both be considered together. The statute vesting the control of schools in the school board is section 7690 General Code, and is as follows:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint a superintendent of the public schools, truant officers, and janitors and fix their salaries. * * *"

This section is applicable to all boards in all districts. As to city districts it is somewhat modified by another section, section 7702 General Code, which reads:

"The board of education in each city school district at a regular meeting, between May 1st and August 31st, shall appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than five school years, beginning within four months of such appointment and ending on the 31st day of August. * * *"

It will be noticed that while it is permitted to all boards under section 7690 General Code to appoint a superintendent it is required in a city district, that is, it is mandatory in such city district.

Section 7703 gives the authority of such superintendent, and is as follows:

"Upon his acceptance of the appointment, such superintendent, subject to the approval and confirmation of the board, may appoint all the teachers, and for cause suspend any person thus appointed until the board or a committee thereof considers such suspension, but no one shall be dismissed by the board except as provided in section seventy-seven hundred and one. But any city board of education, upon a three-fourths vote of its full membership, may re-employ any teacher whom the superintendent refuses to appoint. Such superintendent shall visit the schools under his charge, direct and assist teachers in the performance of their duties, classify and control the promotion of pupils, and perform such other duties as the board determines. He must report to the board annually, and oftener if required, as to all matters under his supervision, and may be required by it to attend any and all of its meetings. He may take part in its deliberations but shall not vote."

It is here enacted that the superintendent may appoint all teachers, and the question as to whether he may appoint a principal therefor depends upon whether such principal is a teacher. Several sections are quoted by the city solicitor in the brief attached by him to the inquiries as bearing upon the subject. These are the sections in which principals are named and are as follows:

"Section 7695. Except teachers, assistant teachers, supervisors, principals, superintendent of inspection, clerk of the board of education, etc.

"Section 7718. A superintendent, supervisor, principal or teacher employed by the board of education, etc.

"Section 7772. Principals and teachers of all schools, public, private and parochial, shall report to the clerk of the board of education of the city, etc."

From these sections he draws the following conclusion:

"The foregoing sections indicate that the position of principal and teacher are two separate and distinct positions of our public schools."

This conclusion is drawn upon a rule of construction of more or less value in its application to different cases that may arise, to the effect that unnecessary language is not used in the wording of statutes. Or, expressed in another form, that the legislature means some different and distinct thing by each different word used in an enumeration or list of subjects.

This rule is by no means of universal application and its uniform use would in many cases defeat the legislative intent, as words are frequently used in the way of apposition. In the present instance, however, there is a distinction which nevertheless does not take the principal out of the designation of "teachers." Every principal is a teacher, but every teacher is not a principal. The common, and almost universal, practice is that the principals of these ward schools hear classes and are teachers in every respect; the designation of "principal" only signifying that they have some authority over the other teachers in the building or division of the district; so that, to be a teacher is a necessary qualification of a principal, and after the teacher is promoted to be a principal he is none the less a teacher.

If the language of the statute be considered ambiguous in this respect so as to raise any doubt on that account and we look to the reason or spirit of it, the reflection is compelled that the same appointing power that selects the teachers should create the distinction among them as to which one shall be principal.

The reasons for the appointment of teachers by the superintendent are apparent. The superintendent more than any one else is supposed to know the school, know its necessities, the manner in which its work is carried on, the persons who are doing it, the different capacities and adaptabilities to the different branches of the work, whch includes the supervision given by the principals just as much as any other part of the work, and this, indeed, would seem to be more properly within the knowledge and capacity, and therefore within the authority of the superintendent than would the teachers, except that they are expressly named.

This is the interpretation given the law by the teaching profession and the people of the state, as the information is received from your department to the effect that it has been the universal understanding and practice for many years for superintendents to select the principals. I have, therefore, no hesitation in saying that the principal is a teacher, and that the superintendent may appoint him under the statutes. A question has been raised, however, as to whether this is not changed by the re-enactment of section 7705 General Code, which is as follows:

> "The board of education of each village, and rural school district shall employ the teachers of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than three school years, to begin within four months of the date of appointment. The local board shall employ no teacher for any school unless such teacher is nominated therefor by the district superintendent of the supervision district in which such school is located except by a majority vote. In all high schools and consolidated schools one of the teachers shall be designated by the board as principal and shall be the administrative head of such school."

In the concluding sentence of the above section it is enacted that the principal shall be selected by the board of education. It is seen, however, that this section is expressly restricted to villages and rural school districts, and it is the plain intent that the clause in question is restricted just as much as the residue of the section. It could hardly be concluded that if the legislature in the pursuance of one demand for a change in the method of the selection of principals of schools in a city would have made the change in this obscure manner by inserting a clause in general words in a section having particular application.

You are advised, therefore, that the practice of your department, of the teaching profession, and of the people of the state in this respect is according to law, and that the superintendent of a city district has authority to appoint principals of the various schools in the district.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SURVEYORS—WILL DRAW SALARY UNDER CASS LAW UNTIL EXPIRATION OF THEIR EXISTING TERMS.

County surveyors will continue to draw their salaries and compensation under and by virtue of the provisions of the Cass highway law up until the end of their present existing terms on the first Monday of September next.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 7, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of May 18, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to the following:

> "Does the change of salary of the county surveyor, as fixed by the provisions of section 7181 G. C., as amended in amended house bill No.

300, enacted by the recent session of the general assembly, become operative with the going into effect of the bill, or is this change of salary to be deferred until the commencement of a new term of the county surveyor?"

Your question has to do with this:

"Will the county surveyors, whose terms of office expire on the first Monday of September next, draw their compensation under and by virtue of the law as it stood prior to June 28, 1917, up until the time their terms expire, or will they draw compensation under and by virtue of the new highway law becoming effective on the 28th day of June, 1917?"

The section under the old law, providing for compensation, has been repealed by the new law and as soon as the new law goes into effect the provisions of the old will no longer have any force or effect. Hence, county surveyors cannot draw their compensation under the provisions of the old law on and after June 28, 1917, but must draw it under the provisions of the new law. This would be the general provision of the law in reference to the matter set out in your communication.

However, the provisions of section 20 of article II of the constitution of Ohio is to be considered. This section reads as follows:

"The general assembly, in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers; but no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished."

Hence, if the provisions of the new law modify the salaries of county surveyors, that is, either reduce the salaries heretofore received or increase the salaries, then the county surveyors would draw their compensation or salaries under and by virtue of the old law up until the times their present existing terms are at an end; and this because of the provisions of said section 20 of the constitution to the effect that no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term. So that it is necessary that we consider the proposition as to whether the provisions of the new law change the salaries of county surveyors on the light of the provisions of section 20 of article II of the constitution. In order to ascertain this question, it would be necessary for us to note the provisions of the old law as to the salaries of county surveyors as well as the provisions of the new law.

Section 7181 of the General Code (the old law) reads, in part, as follows:

"The county surveyor shall be the county highway superintendent. The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office and shall receive an annual salary to be computed as follows: One dollar per mile, for each full mile of the first one thousand miles of the public roads of the county, and in addition thereto forty dollars for each full one thousand of the first fifteen thousand of the population of the county as shown by the federal census next preceding his election; thirty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the second fifteen thousand of the population of the county; twenty-five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the third fifteen thousand of the population of the county; fifteen dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fourth fifteen thousand of the population of the county and five dollars per thousand for each full thousand of the population of the county in excess of sixty thousand. Such salaries shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid; provided, however, that no county highway superintendent shall receive in the aggregate a salary of more than four thousand dollars per annum. * * * Such compensation shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of county officials are paid. * * *"

From the provisions of this section it is quite evident that the county surveyors under the old law received a salary fixed and certain, payable in the same manner as the salary of the other county officials is paid, and in no event to exceed the sum of four thousand dollars per annum; the amount received not depending at all upon the services rendered but upon the time of service.

I am aware that the provisions of this section are somewhat uncertain in that it seems to confuse the salary of the county surveyor with the salary of the county highway superintendent.

In this connection I desire to call attention to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, found in Vol. II of the Report of the Attorney-General for 1915, at page 1785. On page 1787 in the opinion, Mr. Turner in discussing the above matter uses the following language:

"It is observed, first, that the salary provided is the salary of the county surveyor, not as highway superintendent but as county surveyor. That by virtue of his office as county surveyor, the county surveyor is highway superintendent. That 'the salary above provided for,' that is the salary of the county surveyor, shall cover also all services rendered by him as the county highway superintendent to the state, county and townships. In other words, instead of this language showing an intent to pay the salary 'above provided for' to the county surveyor for his services as county highway superintendent, I think it clearly means that the county highway superintendent shall draw no salary or fees as such but that the salary above provided for the county surveyor shall cover his services, not only as county surveyor but as highway superintendent. Not only is there no salary provided for the county highway superintendent, but there is an express provision that the salary of county surveyor shall cover all services in his ex-officio office of county highway superintendent and no public authority will have the power to grant him additional compensation for his duties as county highway superintendent."

It will be seen from this argument that the county surveyor receives a salary which covers all services rendered in his ex-officio office of county highway superintendent. In this I believe Mr. Turner was correct. With this in mind let us now turn to the provisions of the new law in reference to the salary of the county surveyor. They are found in section 7181 General Code, and are as follows:

"Sec. 7181. The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office and shall receive an annual salary to be computed as follows: One dollar per mile for each full mile of the first one thousand miles of the public roads of the county; and in addition thereto forty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the first fifteen thousand of the population of the county as shown by the federal census next preceding his election, thirty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the second fifteen thousand of the population of the county, twenty-five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the third fifteen thousand of the population of the county, fifteen dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fourth fifteen thousand of the population of the county and five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the population of the county in excess of sixty thousand; and also in each county in which on the twentieth day of December, 1915, the aggregate of the tax duplicate for real estate and personal property was twenty-five million dollars or more the sum of fifty dollars for each full one million dollars, not more than fifteen, by which such tax duplicate exceeded twenty-five million dollars, ten dollars for each full one million dollars, not more than sixty, by which such tax duplicate exceeded forty million dollars and five dollars for each full one million dollars by which such tax duplicate exceeded one hundred million dollars; provided, however, that in no case shall the annual salary paid the county surveyor exceed six thousand dollars. Such salary shall be paid monthly out of the general county fund upon the warrant of the county auditor and shall be instead of all fees, costs, per diem or other allowances, and all other perquisites of whatever kind or description which any county surveyor may collect or receive. * * *"

From the provisions of this section it is readily seen that the county surveyor receives under the new law an annual salary fixed and definite, based not upon services rendered but upon the time which he serves. This salary is to be paid monthly out of the general county funds upon the warrant of the county auditor, and in no case shall exceed the amount of $6,000.00 per year.

From a comparison of the provisions of section 7181 General Code as amended with the provisions of section 7181 General Code before it was amended, it is readily seen that the salary of a county surveyor is changed, as it is based upon a different calculation in the new as compared with the old law. For this reason the provisions of section 20 of article II of the constitution would apply, which are to the effect that "no change therein (that is in the salary) shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term"—that is, the county surveyors now in office will continue to draw their salaries or compensation under the provisions of the old law until their present terms expire.

In rendering this opinion I am not unmindful of the fact that the county surveyors under the old law drew in addition to their salaries certain compensation in the way of fees in connection with ditches and drainage work, and also in connection with services rendered under sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, of the General Code, but I am of the opinion that this can have no effect upon the matter in hand, for the reason that the stated salary of the county surveyor is changed, and therefore the provisions of section 20 of article II of the constitution must apply.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY CORONER—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION FOR HOLDING POST MORTEM EXAMINATION AT INSTANCE OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

County coroner, if he performs a post mortem examination at the instance of the prosecuting attorney, is entitled to such compensation as the county commissioners deem proper.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 7, 1917.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 26, 1917, as follows:

"On the tenth day of October, 1916, John Goodwin shot Samuel Decket at a point about two miles north of Camden, Ohio. Information was brought to me, and I immediately notified the coroner, and we repaired to the scene of the accident, and the coroner held an inquest. It was late in the evening, and a great many people were at the scene of the tragedy, and the coroner and myself viewed the body, and found that the deceased met his death by a shot fired from a revolver in the hands of John Goodwin. The bullet entered the breast and pierced the heart. The eye witness said that there was two shots fired, but that the first shot missed. We saw no evidence of a second shot or wound that night.

"I went to Camden the next day and was working on the case when the undertaker called my attention to the fact that there was a wound in the right shoulder. It then became a matter of extreme importance to the state to know how many bullets had entered the body. I at once saw two physicians at Camden, and requested them, with the assistance of the coroner, to make a post mortem of the body. The coroner came from his home about twenty miles north of where the deceased lived. He came there, and in conjunction with the two physicians already mentioned, held a post mortem examination, requiring considerable time and skill.

"The two physicians have been paid by the county commissioners. The question now turns upon the fees of the coroner. Can he be paid by the county commissioners? I can find no authority in 2866 for the payment of this fee, but believe that he should receive the same fee that the other physicians received. Is there any authority in law, known to your office, for the payment of this fee?"

General Code Section 2866 G. C. reads:

"Coroners shall be allowed the following fees: For view of dead body, three dollars; for drawing all necessary writings, and return thereof, for every one hundred words, ten cents; for traveling each mile, to the place of view, ten cents; when performing the duties of sheriff, the same fees as are allowed to sheriffs for similar services."

Section 2495 G. C. reads:

"The county commissioners may allow a physician or surgeon making a post mortem examination at the instance of the coroner or other officer such compensation as they deem proper."

Former Attorney-General Denman, under date of March 22, 1910, and found on page 688 of the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1910-11, rendered the following opinion:

"Hon. A. J. Crawford, Member of House of Representatives, Columbus, O.

"Dear Sir:—You have made of me oral inquiry as follows:

"Has a coroner, when duly elected and qualified in a county of this state, the legal authority to hold a post-mortem examination without the aid of persons or another physician, and to make a special charge against the county which elects him for such services?

"In reply thereto I beg to say that section 2856 of the General Code provides that,

"'When informed that the body of a person whose death is supposed to have been caused by violence has been found within the county, the coroner shall appear forthwith at the place where the body is, issue subpoenas for such witnesses as he deems necessary, administer to them the usual oath, and proceed to inquire how the deceased came to his death, whether by violence from any other person or persons, by whom, whether as principals or accessories before or after the fact, and all circumstances relating thereto. * * *'

"In the exercise of his official discretion, the coroner may make such examination as is necessary to determine the cause of the death into which he is inquiring; but his fees for such services must not exceed those allowed by section 2866 General Code. Our courts have construed this section as giving to the coroner the right to employ a physician or surgeon to conduct a post-mortem examination in cases in which, in the sound discretion of the coroner, such examination is necessary in order to determine the cause of the death.

"Section 2495 provides that:

"'The county commissioners may allow a physician or surgeon making post-mortem examinations, at the instance of the coroner or other officers, such compensation as they deem proper.'

"While it is the clear duty of the coroner to hold an inquest, not only to ascertain the cause of the death, but whether a crime has been committed, who the perpetrator is, and to secure and preserve the evidence to the end that justice may not be defeated, it is equally clear that the coroner is not authorized by these statutes to hold unnecessary inquests or post-mortem examinations, thereby incurring needless expense to the public.

"'The coroner must act in good faith—not capriciously or arbitrarily. He may not act where there is no ground to suspect that violence was the cause of the death.'

"State ex rel. v. Bellows, 8 Ohio Circuit Decisions, 376; 62 O. S. 307.

"Very truly yours,

"U. G. Denman,

"Attorney-General."

In that case the coroner evidently held the post-mortem on his own initiative and without direction or authority from the prosecuting attorney or other officer. In the case you present the coroner was acting at the instance of the prosecuting attorney. When the coroner performs a post-mortem at the prosecuting attorney's request, the coroner acts as a private physician and may be paid for his services the same as any other physician, it clearly not being his official duty to perform a post-mortem. This was the view taken by the common pleas court of Scioto county in the unreported case of Board of Commissioners v. Edwards. In that case the petition alleged that the defendant, while coroner, held a post-mortem examination at the request of the sheriff of Scioto county, and claimed that the coroner had no right to receive compensation from the county for such service. Petition prayed judgment for compensation collected by the coroner and the defendant demurred to the petition on the ground that it did not allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The court sustained the demurrer.

I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your question, that the county commissioners may allow the coroner such compensation as they deem proper for his services in performing the post-mortem examination referred to.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO CHARGE FOR RECORDING SURVEYS OF OTHER SURVEYORS.

When county surveyor records surveys of other surveyors upon order of county commissioners under section 2803 G. C. he is without authority to charge the county for such recording.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 7, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of May 31, 1917, as follows:

> "If a county surveyor records the surveys of other surveyors, upon order of the county commissioners, under the provisions of section 2803 G. C., may he charge the county the recording fees mentioned under section 2822 G. C., or does the amendment of section 7181 G. C., amended house bill No. 300, prevent him from so doing?
> "If he can charge the fees mentioned in section 2822 G. C. for such services, may he retain same for his own use?"

Sections 2803 and 2822 G. C. read:

> "(2803.) The county surveyor shall make and keep in a book provided for that purpose an accurate record of all surveys made by himself or his deputies for the purpose of locating any land or road lines, or fixing any corner or monument by which it may be determined, whether official or otherwise. Such surveys shall include corners, distances, asimuths, angles, calculations, plats and a description of the monuments set up with such references thereto as will aid in finding the names of the parties for whom made, and the date of making such surveys. Such book shall be kept as a public record by the county surveyor at his office, and shall be at all proper times open to inspection and examination by all persons interested therein. Any other surveys made in the county by competent surveyors, duly certified by such surveyor to be correct and deemed worthy of preservation, may, by order of the commissioners be recorded by the county surveyor.
> "(2822.) When employed by the day, the surveyor shall receive five dollars for each day and his necessary actual expenses. When not so employed, he shall be entitled to charge and receive the following fees: For each rod run, not exceeding one mile, three-fourths of one cent, and for each rod over one mile, one-half of one cent; for making out or recording a plat not exceeding six lines, seventy-five cents, and for each line in addition, five cents; for each one hundred words or figures therein, six cents; for calculating the contents of a tract not exceeding four sides, six cents, and for each additional line, ten cents; for mileage, going and returning, five cents per mile; and for all other services, the same fees as those of other officers for like services. Chain carriers and markers are entitled, each, to two dollars."

Section 7181 General Code, as amended in 107 O. L., page 110, reads:

"The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office and shall receive an annual salary to be computed as follows: One dollar per mile for each full mile of the first one thousand miles of the public roads of the county; and in addition thereto forty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the first fifteen thousand of the population of the county as shown by the federal census next preceding his election, thirty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the second fifteen thousand of the population of the county, twenty-five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the third fifteen thousand of the population of the county, fifteen dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fourth fifteen thousand of the population of the county and five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the population of the county in excess of sixty thousand; and also in each county in which on the twentieth day of December, 1915, the aggregate of the tax duplicate for real estate and personal property was twenty-five million dollars or more the sum of fifty dollars for each full one million dollars, not more than fifteen, by which such tax duplicate exceeded twenty-five million dollars, ten dollars for each full one million dollars, not more than sixty, by which such tax duplicate exceeded forty million dollars and five dollars for each full one million dollars by which such tax duplicate exceeded one hundred million dollars; provided, however, that in no case shall the annual salary paid the county surveyor exceed six thousand dollars. Such salary shall be paid monthly out of the general county fund upon the warrant of the county auditor and shall be instead of all fees, costs, per diem or other allowances, and all other perquisites of whatever kind or description which any county surveyor may collect or receive. The county surveyor shall be the county tax map draftsman, but shall receive no additional compensation for performing the duties of such position. When the county surveyor performs service in connection with ditches or drainage works under the provisions of sections 6442 to 6822 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio, he shall charge and collect the per diem allowances or other fees therein provided for, and shall pay all such allowances and fees monthly into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund. The county surveyor shall do likewise when he performs services under the provisions of sections 2807 to 2814 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio."

It will be noted that the fees provided for in section 2822 General Code are not authorized to be charged the county by the surveyor at all times, but simply when such surveyor was not employed by the day.

In an opinion of former Attorney-General Hogan, rendered under date of March 26, 1913, and found in Reports of the Attorney-General for 1913, Vol. I, page 232, it was held:

> "Under section 2803, General Code, when a county surveyor is not given a per diem compensation, he is to be allowed the fees therein specified for recording plats made by him in the course of his official duties. He is to be allowed the same fees for recording plats made by other surveyors or by himself for private parties, when they are recorded by him upon the order of the county commissioners."

In that opinion Mr. Hogan said:

> "By virtue of section 2803 of the General Code, the county surveyor is legally bound to make and keep, in a book provided for that purpose, an accurate record of all surveys, whether official or otherwise, and such survey shall include corners, distances, etc. Under section 2822 of the General Code the county surveyor may be employed by the day, or if not so employed by the day, then he is to receive certain prescribed fees. The fee prescribed for making out and recording a plat not exceeding six lines, seventy-five cents; and for each line in addition, five cents. If the surveyor is employed by the day, as provided in said section, then he is not legally entitled to fees for the making and recording of such plats. If, on the other hand, the surveyor is not so employed by the day, but is paid for his services by fees in accordance with said section, then he is entitled to the fees prescribed therein for making and recording plats of his own official surveys."

In case the county surveyor was employed by the day, he could not charge the county with any fees under section 2822 G. C.

Section 2822 has been made by reference to apply to fees charged by the county surveyor to private persons in political subdivisions other than the county, as well as to fees charged the county itself. After the enactment of section 7181 General Code in its present form, there was no longer any reason for the existence of section 2822 G. C., so far as the county is concerned, but in order to preserve its schedule of fees for charges to be made by the county surveyor to private persons, or to political subdivisions other than the county, the legislature provided in section 7181 G. C. that:

> "When the county surveyor performs service in connection with ditches or drainage works under the provisions of sections 6442 to 6822 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio, he shall charge and collect the per diem allowances or other fees therein provided for and shall pay all such allowances and fees monthly into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund. The county surveyor shall do likewise when he performs services under the provisions of sections 2807 to 2814 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio."

The first group of sections referred to under section 7181 relate to ditch improvements and the second group of sections relate to the establishment of corners of tracts of land when lines become lost or uncertain. The surveyor's fees in the first instance are paid as a part of the costs of the ditch proceeding and in the second instance by the person or persons applying for the survey.

In thus preserving the right of the surveyor to charge fees in such cases, the legislature evidenced an intention of abolishing such charges altogether, when the same will have to be paid by the county, and under the provisions of section 7181 G. C. the county surveyor is prevented from charging or receiving fees for services rendered the county.

It is therefore my opinion, in answer to your question, that when the county surveyor records the surveys of other surveyors upon order of the county commissioners, under the provisions of section 2803 G. C., he is without authority to charge the county, for recording, the fees mentioned in section 2822 G. C.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

"ROAD IMPROVEMENT"—(SEC. 1231-9 G. C.) TO WHAT IMPROVEMENTS SAID WORDS APPLY.

The word "road improvement" as used in section 1231-9 General Code apply not only to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways and main market roads in reference to which certain proceedings are had leading up to the same, but they apply also to the regular and continuous repair and maintenance of such highways.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 9, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a certain matter therein set out. Your communication reads as follows:

> "I respectfully direct your attention to section 1231-9 as contained in amended house bill No. 300:
> "'No act of the state highway commissioner * * * purchasing any material, machinery, tools, or equipment for road improvement * * * shall be valid or have any force and effect until such act has been approved by the highway advisory board by resolution duly passed by majority vote and entered upon its journal.'
> "Large quantities of different materials, tools and equipment are almost constantly being purchased through our bureau of maintenance. We are often confronted with a condition where the work of a maintenance gang must be suspended unless some particular item of equipment or material is purchased at once to permit the work to proceed. They are, in short, conditions of emergency that cannot be foreseen and must be acted upon at once in order to facilitate the work with despatch and economy to the state.
> "I, therefore, respectfully request your advice as to the scope of the word 'improvement' as contained in the above section, and as to how this section will apply to our maintenance and repair work, if at all."

The section upon which you ask me to place a construction forms a part of a group of sections which embodies an entirely new idea and departure in the matter of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads and intercounty highways under the jurisdiction of the state highway commissioner. This new idea is embodied in sections 1231-5 to 1231-11 General Code, inclusive.

The main idea of these sections is to have a board of four electors of the state of Ohio of recognized character and ability to act as an advisory board to the state highway commissioner. The state highway commissioner has many and various duties to perform. He handles and expends vast sums of money, he exercises an absolute discretion in matters of far-reaching effect and importance, and up to the time of the taking effect of the new law he had no one with whom to advise or consult in reference to matters which come under his jurisdiction. It seems to have been the thought and object of the legislature that the state highway commissioner should have a board with whom he might consult and advise and who might act in a sort of supervisory capacity in reference to the various important and far-reaching duties which he has to perform.

Keeping this apparent object of the legislature in mind, it will possibly not be difficult to place an interpretation upon the two words, "road improvement," as found in section 1231-9 General Code. The particular phrase in which these words are found is as follows:

> "purchasing any material, machinery, tools or equipment for road improvement."

In order to get the meaning of this section we would have to read in connection with it other parts of the same section, as follows:

> "No act of the state highway commissioner * * * purchasing any material, machinery, tools or equipment for road improvement * * * shall be valid or have any force and effect until such act has been approved by the highway advisory board, by resolution duly passed by a majority vote and entered upon its journal."

The question which you have particularly in mind in reference to this is as to whether the provisions of this section should apply only to those road improvements embodying a certain procedure leading up to the improvement, or whether the words should be made to apply also to all maintenance and repair of highways, whether the same be done under a certain procedure or whether the same be done from day to day and from time to time in the maintenance and repair of state highways of Ohio in general.

In answering this question it will be well to keep in mind that the powers of the state highway commissioner in the matter of maintaining and repairing the intercounty highways and the main market roads have been greatly increased and extended under the new law. This is evidenced by a consideration of section 1224 General Code and subdivision 3 of section 1221 General Code. These sections are too long to quote, but a careful consideration of the same will evidence the fact that the powers of the state highway commissioner in the matter of the maintenance and repair of state highways in general have been greatly extended and increased, and therefore if we should place such a construction upon the words "road improvement" as to limit the application to such construction, improvement, repair and maintenance of highways in which a certain definite proceeding is contemplated, and eliminate from the meaning the ordinary and continuous repair and maintenance of state highways by the state highway commissioner we must entirely circumvent the idea which the legislature had in mind.

It must be remembered that the state highway commissioner purchases but little material or equipment in the matter of the construction, improvement and maintenance of highways in which a certain proceeding is had leading up to the same, and this for the reason that such matters are done under contract through competitive bidding and not by the state highway commissioner himself; while in the matter of the ordinary and continuous repair and maintenance of intercounty highways and main market roads of the state the state highway commissioner will be compelled to buy a vast amount of material and equipment.

Hence it is my opinion that the legislature intended these words "road improvement" to include not only the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of highways in which certain jurisdictional steps are necessary to be taken leading up to the same, but also intended to make them apply to the regular and necessary repairs in general of the highways of the state.

You infer in your letter that this will possibly place a burden on the state highway department that will be difficult to bear. But let me call your attention to this fact: Under section 1231-9 General Code it is the act of the state highway commissioner which must be approved by the highway advisory board; hence it is not necessary in all cases in the purchase of material and equipment that the approval of the highway advisory board comes first, but the act may be performed first and afterwards the approval of the act given by the highway advisory board.

Under the plain reading of the statute I think it will not be very difficult for the highway advisory board and the state highway commissioner to map out a course of proceeding as will not place an undue burden upon the state highway department and yet will carry out the evident object and intent which the legislature had in mind in the enactment of the said statute.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—NO AUTHORITY TO ISSUE ORDER OF QUARANTINE FORBIDDING SHIPPING OF CERTAIN SPECIES OF PINE INTO STATE.

Neither the board of agriculture nor the secretary of agriculture has authority to issue an order of quarantine forbidding the shipping of all of certain species of pine into the state, irrespective of the fact as to whether it is infected or has been exposed to infection or not. This would be an order regulating interstate commerce and not a mere order of quarantine.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

The Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication in which you ask my opinion, as follows:

> "The question has arisen as to whether our quarantine against the shipment of white pine into Ohio on account of the white pine blister rust can be enforced.
> "What, if any, is our course of procedure? Can our quarantine be enforced?"

The order of quarantine about which you make inquiry, and a copy of which is attached to your communication, is in the words and figures as follows:

"OFFICIAL NOTICE OF QUARANTINE.

"It has been established by federal authorities that a dangerous imported disease of white pine trees, known as white pine blister rust (cronartium ribicola) exists in a number of states, principally those east of Ohio.

"As white pine trees have been found to be especially adapted to the poor soils of this state and are being used largely in reforestation work, and believing that the shipment of such trees into Ohio would be a menace to white pine plantings, and that the establishment of this disease in the state would check reforestation work, the board of agriculture of Ohio, by virtue of the authority conferred upon it by section 1122 General Code, hereby prohibits, until further notice, the shipment into the state of any of the following species of pines or their horticultural varieties, viz.: white pine (pinus strobus L), western white pine (P Monticola Dougl.), sugar pine (P lambertina Dougl.), stone pine or cembrian pine (P cembra L), rhotan or himalayan pine (P excelsa) and limber pine (P flexilis).

"This order shall not apply to pine trees necessary to be secured outside of Ohio by the state forester of the experiment station to be used for scientific purposes.

"Effective February 21, 1917.

"The Board of Agriculture of Ohio.
"N. E. SHAW, Chief, Bureau of Horticulture
"G. A. STAUFFER, Secretary."

From this order it is to be noted that the shipment of certain species of pine into the state of Ohio is absolutely forbidden, this order to be in force and effect until further notice. Your question is as to whether this order of quarantine is constitutional and valid and whether the same can be enforced.

Your department issued this order of quarantine under and by virtue of the provisions of section 1122 G. C., which reads as follows:

"The secretary (formerly the board) of agriculture may make such regulations as he deems necessary for the prevention and control of insect pests or plant diseases. The term 'nursery stock' as used in the section relating to nursery and orchard inspection, includes trees, shrubs, plants, vines, buds, scions and cuttings commonly grown in nurseries and orchards except greenhouse plants and cuttings thereof, bulbs, flowers, and vegetable plants. The terms 'insect pests' and 'plant diseases' as used in such section include San Jose scale, peach yellows, black knot and other dangerously injurious insect pests and plant diseases."

While the secretary (formerly the board) of agriculture has the power and authority, under and by virtue of the provisions of said section, to make rules and regulations, yet there is no specific provision made for the matter of quarantine. Sections 1131, 1132 and 1133 G. C. make certain provisions which shall control in the matter of shipping nursery stock into the state, but these provisions are more in the nature of inspection than of quarantine. Even though the statutes do not give any specific authority for quarantine, yet under the police powers of the state the secretary (formerly the board) of agriculture would have authority to issue a proper order of quarantine. The question is as to whether the order made is proper and whether it is valid and constitutional.

The particular question arises under and by virtue of the provision of the United States Constitution which is as follows:

"The congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes."
(Art. I, Sec. 8, Const. of U. S.)

In order to arrive at the answer to the question as to whether your order is constitutional, I desire to call attention to several decisions of the United States supreme court.

In the case of Hannibal & St. Joseph Rd. Co. v. John F. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, the court had before it a question very similar in principle to the one under consideration. Mr. Justice Strong delivered the opinion of the court and during the course of his opinion used the following language:

> "The statute, approved January 23, 1872, by its first section enacted as follows:
> "'No Texas, Mexican or Indian cattle shall be driven or otherwise conveyed into or remain in any county in this state between the first day of March and the first day of November in each year, by any person or persons whatsoever. * * *'
> "It is noticeable that the statute interposes a direct prohibition against the introduction into the state of all Texas, Mexican or Indian cattle during eight months of each year, without any distinction between such as may be diseased and such as are not * * *. It seems hardly necessary to argue at length that, unless the statute can be justified as a legitimate exercise of the police power of the state, it is a usurpation of the power vested exclusively in congress. It is a plain regulation of interstate commerce; a regulation extending to prohibition. Whatever may be the power of a state over commerce that is completely internal, it can no more prohibit or regulate that which is interstate than it can that which is with foreign nations. Power over one is given by the constitution of the United States to congress, in the same words in which it is given over the other, and in both cases it is necessarily exclusive. That the transportation of property from one state to another is a branch of interstate commerce is undeniable, and no attempt has been made in this case to deny it."

Further on in the opinion Mr. Justice Strong states the following proposition:

> "While we unhesitatingly admit that a state may pass sanitary laws and laws for the protection of life, liberty, health or property within its borders; while it may prevent persons and animals suffering under contagious or infectious diseases or convicts, etc., from entering the state; while for the purpose of self-protection it may establish quarantine, and reasonable inspection laws, it may not interfere with transportation into or through the state beyond what is absolutely necessary for its self-protection. It may not, under the cover of exerting its police powers, substantially prohibit or burden either foreign or interstate commerce."

In Kimmish v. Ball, 129 U. S. 217, the court had under consideration this same question. The case involved the validity of a statute of Iowa making a person having in his possession within it any Texas cattle which have not been wintered north of the southern boundary of Missouri and Kansas liable for any damages that may accrue from allowing them to run at large, and thereby spreading the disease known as Texas fever. In this case the question was raised that such a statute was in contravention of the commerce clause of the federal constitution. In support of this contention the attorneys relied upon Railroad Co. v. Husen, supra; but Justice Field, who rendered the decision in this case, reasoned as follows:

> "The case of Railroad Co. v. Husen, upon which the defendant relies with apparent confidence, has no bearing upon the questions presented. The decision in that case rested upon the ground that no discrimination was made by the law of Missouri, in the transportation forbidden, between sound cattle and diseased cattle; and this circumstance is prominently put forth in the opinion. 'It is noticeable,' said the court, 'that the statute interposes a direct prohibition against the introduction into the state of all Texas, Mexican or Indian cattle during eight months of each year, without any distinction between such as may be diseased and such as are not.' It interpreted the law of Missouri as saying to all transportation companies: 'You shall not bring into the state any Texas cattle or any Mexican cattle or Indian cattle between March 1 and December 1 in any year, no matter whether they are free from disease or not, no matter whether they may do an injury to the inhabitants of the state or not; and if you do bring them in, even for the purpose of carrying them through the state without unloading them, you shall be subject to extraordinary liabilities.'"

Then Mr. Justice Field continues:

"Such a statute, the court held, was not a quarantine law nor an inspection law, but a law which interfered with interstate commerce, and therefore invalid. At the same time the court admitted, unhesitatingly, that a state may pass laws to prevent animals suffering from contagious or infectious diseases from entering within it. No attempt was made to show that all Texas, Mexican or Indian cattle coming from the malarial districts during the months mentioned were infected with the disease, or that such cattle were so generally infected that it would have been impossible to separate the healthy from the diseased."

After thus discussing Railroad Co. v. Husen, supra, Mr. Justice Field concluded:

"The case is therefore reduced to this, whether the state may not provide that whoever permits diseased cattle in his possession to run at large within its limits, shall be liable for any damages caused by the spread of the disease occasioned thereby; and upon that we do not entertain the slightest doubt."

In Rasmussen v. State of Idaho, 181 U. S. 198, the court was considering a statute enacted by the Idaho legislature, authorizing the governor, when he had reason to believe that there is an epidemic of infectious disease of sheep in localities outside the state, to investigate the matter and if he finds that the disease exists, to make a proclamation declaring such localities infected and prohibiting the introduction therefrom of sheep into the state, except under such restrictions as, after consultation with the state sheep inspector, he may deem proper. The court in this case held that such a statute is within the police power of the state and is not in violation of the federal constitution as a regulation of interstate commerce.

Mr. Justice Brewer, in rendering the opinion in this case, discussed Railroad Co. v. Husen, supra, and used the following language:

"It will be perceived that the act was an absolute prohibition, operative during eight months of each year. It was an act continuous in its force; provided for no inspection; and was predicated on the assumption that the state had the right to exclude for two-thirds of each year the introduction of all those kinds of cattle, sick or well, and whether likely to distribute disease or not.

"In the case before us the statute makes no absolute prohibition of the introduction of sheep, but authorizes the governor to investigate the condition of sheep in any locality, and, if found to be subject to the scab or any epidemic disease liable to be communicated to other sheep, to make such restriction on their introduction into the state as shall seem to him, after conference with the state sheep inspector, to be necessary."

In Reid v. State of Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, the court had under consideration a statute of Colorado which prohibited the importing of cattle from south of the thirty-sixth parallel of north latitude between April 1 and November 1, unless first kept for ninety days at some place north of that parallel, or unless a certificate of freedom from contagious or infectious disease has been obtained from the state veterinary sanitary board. The court held that the provisions of this law placed no unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce.

In the opinion Mr. Justice Harlan says:

"The Colorado statute, in effect, declares that live stock coming between the dates and from the territory specified are ordinarily in such condition that their presence in the state may be dangerous to its domestic animals; and hence the requirement that before being brought or sent into the state they shall either be kept at some place north of the thirty-sixth parallel of north latitude for at least ninety days prior to their imporation into the state, or the owner must procure from the state veterinary sanitary board a certificate or bill of health that the cattle are free from all infectious or contagious diseases and have not been exposed to any of said diseases at any time within ninety days prior thereto. * * * As, therefore, the statute does not forbid the introduction into the state of all live stock coming from the defined territory—that diseased as well as that not diseased—but only prescribes certain methods to protect the domestic animals of Colorado from contact with live stock coming from that territory between certain dates, and as those methods have been devised by the state under the power to protect the property of its people from injury, and do not appear upon their face to be unreasonable, we must, in the absence of evidence showing the contrary, assume that they are appropriate to the object which the state is entitled to accomplish."

In Smith v. St. Louis & S. W. Rd. Co. of Tex., 181 U. S. 248, the court extended this principle of quarantine possibly further than is found in any other decision of the United States supreme court. In this case Brown, Harlan and White, J. J., refused to concur and rendered dissenting opinions. But even in this case Justice McKenna lays down the following proposition in the opinion:

"It (the principle) depends upon whether the police power of the state has been exerted beyond its province—exerted to regulate interstate commerce—exerted to exclude, without discrimination, the good and the bad, the healthy and the diseased, and to an extent beyond what is necessary for any proper quarantine. The words in italics express an important qualification. The prevention of disease is the essence of a quarantine law. Such law is directed, not only to the actually diseased, but to what has become exposed to disease."

From all the above cited cases it seems to me that one principle can be safely drawn, and that is that a state has not the power, under an order of quarantine, to prohibit the coming into a state of all of any class of objects, without any discrimination as to whether the same be good or bad, healthy or diseased.

The further principle may be deduced that the state has power to pass laws requiring a proper inspection and a proper quarantine, to prevent the coming into this state of diseased animals or those which have been exposed to a dangerously infectious or contagious disease.

I might cite many cases decided by the different states to the same effect, but I do not deem it wise so to do. I will quote from but one

In commonwealth v. Moore, 214 Mass. 19, in the opinion on p. 25 the court uses the following suggestive language:

> "A state law, although apparently for the protection of the public health, will be scrutinized as to its results in actual practice, to ascertain its essential characteristics, and will not be upheld merely because of its declared purpose. A statute which really operates as an undiscriminating exclusion of the products of other states will not be sustained because under the guise of a health statute. If it is in fact a regulation of interstate commerce in its primary application, then it is invalid, regardless of its dress or designation."

It is true all the above cases were decided in reference to statutes which apply to the animal kingdom, but it seems to me the same principles would apply much stronger to statutes having to do with the vegetable kingdom, especially such as we have under consideration.

With the above principles in mind, let us again turn to the question which we particularly have under consideration.

(1) The only authority given to the state board of agriculture for the promulgation of the order herein considered arises from the fact that it has authority to make rules and regulations. Section 1122 G. C.

(2) The statutes of our state do not grant power or authority to the secretary (formerly the board) of agriculture to promulgate an order of quarantine such as you set out in your communication, but he would have power and authority under the police powers of the state to issue a proper order in reference to the matters set out in the order of quarantine.

(3) The board of agriculture in its order has absolutely prohibited the shipping into this state of certain species of pine, not from one locality, not from one state, but from everywhere. It has not limited its order to infected pine nor to that which has been exposed to the infection in question.

It seems clear to me, from the law in the case as applied to the facts, that an order such as your board has issued would be invalid and unconstitutional and therefore could not be enforced. As set forth in the adjudicated cases above cited, your orders cannot be general and absolute, but must be limited to the object which you seek, and that is to prevent the spread of the infection in question. The order must be based upon a finding as to conditions existing in certain localities outside the state or in certain states, and it must be made in reference to those conditions. The order of quarantine cannot absolutely prohibit the shipment of certain species of pine into the state, without considering the fact as to the localities or the states whence it comes, or whether it is infected or not.

There is another principle to which I might call attention and that is this: In matters of which both the United States and the states have a sort of concurrent jurisdiction, if congress acts upon such matters, then the states cannot act upon the same.

In section 8 of an act to regulate the importation of nursery stock and other plants and plant products, etc., found in Vol. 37 of United States Statutes at Large, p. 315, we have the following:

> "Sec. 8. That the secretary of agriculture is authorized and directed to quarantine any state, territory, or district of the United States, or any portion thereof, when he shall determine the fact that a dangerous plant disease or insect infestation, new to or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, exists in such state or territory or district; and the secretary of agriculture is directed to give notice of the establishment of such quarantine to common carriers doing business in or through such quarantined area, and shall publish in such newspapers in the quarantined area as he shall select notice of the establishment of quarantine. That no person shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier receive for transportation or transport, nor shall any person carry or transport from any quarantined state or territory or district of the United States, or from any quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other state or territory or district, any class of nursery stock or any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products specified in the notice of quarantine except as hereinafter provided. * * *"

But under the above authority the secretary of agriculture has not seen fit to issue an order preventing the shipping of the species of pine set out in the order issued by your board, into the state of Ohio from other states. However, congress has given him authority so to do.

Hence, the secretary of agriculture not having acted in this matter, the state of Ohio, through its board of agriculture, might act in a proper order and not come in conflict with the above enunciated principle.

This is a question of considerable importance and I have therefore given to it the attention which I felt it deserved.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

TAX MAP DRAFTSMAN—NECESSARY STEPS TO BE TAKEN BEFORE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY EMPLOY SUCH PERSON.

A contract by the county commissioners with a person to act as tax map draftsman comes within the provisions of sections 5660 and 5661 G. C. and, therefore, cannot be entered into until the county auditor certifies that the money necessary to take care of said obligation is in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 22, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to certain matters. Your communication reads as follows:

> "The following question has been submitted to me by Ralph H. Strait, who is our county surveyor. Under house bill 300, which amended the Cass law being section 7181, I would like to have an answer to the following question:

"This amendment takes effect and becomes operative on or about the 28th day of June, 1917. Mr. Strait as county surveyor's term expires the first Monday in September of this year. Will he as county surveyor receive the salary as contemplated under section 7181 from June 28, 1917, to the first Monday in September, 1917, or what salary will he receive?

"March 1st, the county commissioners of this county entered into a contract with one John Dennis to make the tax maps of the county at a salary of $85.00 per month to be binding upon said county from one year March 1st. Under this amendment of section 7181 can he hold his position or contract for $85.00 a month when it is incumbent upon the county surveyor to make the tax maps under section 7181."

There are two separate and distinct questions embodied in your communication. The first one is as to whether the county surveyor, after June 28, 1917, the day upon which the new highway act takes effect, will draw compensation under the law as it now stands or under the new law.

Your first question is answered by an opinion rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices on July 7, 1917, being Opinion No. 433, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

Your second question has to do with the matter of the employment of a tax map draftsman for your county. In your communication of May 22, 1917, you state that your board of county commissioners entered into a contract with John Dennis to make the necessary tax maps for one year beginning with March 1, 1917, at a salary of $85.00 per month. Upon my request for further information you write under date of June 8, 1917, as follows:

"In reply to your letter of June 7th, I am sending you a copy of the record as found on Journal 18, page 233 of the county commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio. Contract of agreement. Same was entered into on the first day of March, 1917. There is no record in the commissioner's office that the auditor of the county certified for or on behalf of this contract."

In your latter communication you state that there is no record in the county commissioner's office that the county auditor certified for or on behalf of this contract. I desire to notice this fact first.

Section 5660 General Code provides that:

"The commissioners of a county, * * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. * * * Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county * * * is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

Section 5661 General Code provides as follows:

"All contracts, agreements or obligations, and orders or resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section, shall be void, but such section shall not apply to the contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers, and other school employes of boards of education."

Hence, applying the law as found in these two sections to the facts as set out in your latter communication, I am compelled to arrive at the conclusion that the contract entered into by the county commissioners with Mr. Dennis is void.

The courts of our state are uniform in applying the provisions of these two sections strictly to all contracts, agreements or obligations entered into by the county commissioners and other boards therein mentioned. The only exception to the above uniform holding of our courts is in a case where there has been a special fund created by means other than taxation for a specific purpose, and which cannot be used for any other purpose. With this one exception the courts are uniform in a strict application of the provisions of these two sections.

If the contract is void there is no need of our proceeding further to inquire as to whether Mr. Dennis has such vested rights in this contract that it will bind the county commissioners for a period of one year from the date upon which it was entered into, notwithstanding the fact that the law taking effect on June 28, 1917, changes the matter as to who may be tax map draftsman.

Hence, answering your second question specifically, I am of the opinion that before the county commissioners could enter into a contract with a person employing him to act as tax map draftsman, the county auditor must certify that the funds necessary to take care of the obligation are in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund.

In passing I might call attention to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Edward C. Turner, on May 29, 1916, and found in Vol. I of the Opinions of the Attorney General for 1916, p. 943, in which he held (in the syllabus) as follows:

"County commissioners are not authorized to employ any person other than the county surveyor for the purpose of correcting and keeping up to date an existing set of tax maps of the county."

It is readily seen that if this opinion should hold, the county commissioners would under no circumstances have been authorized to employ Mr. Dennis to correct and keep up to date the tax maps of your county.

However, the court of appeals of Muskingum county, in the November term, 1916, rendered an opinion in a case styled Earl A. Montgomery, Auditor, et al. v. The State of Ohio, ex rel. John S. Dennis, No. 91, in which it held different from the opinion rendered by Mr. Turner. The relief sought in said case before the court of appeals was a peremptory writ of mandamus requiring the commissioners to carry out a contract entered into by them with the relator for keeping up the tax maps and plats of said county at the agreed price of seventy-five dollars per month. In this case it was argued that the county commissioners were not authorized under the statutes to employ any person other than the county surveyor to correct and keep up to date the tax maps of the county, but the court held that the county commissioners had authority to enter into such a contract with a person other than the county surveyor, by virtue of section 5589 G. C. So that from this decision of the court of appeals of Muskingum county, the county commissioners had authority to enter into a contract with Mr. Dennis, provided the provisions of section 5660 G. C. had been complied with.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—ABSTRACT OF TITLE—EXECUTIVE MANSION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

The Executive Mansion Board, Columbus, Ohio,

Attention Hon. James E. Campbell.

GENTLEMEN:—Your board has submitted to this department abstracts of title covering four different pieces of real estate located in the city of Columbus, as follows:

1. The following described premises, situate in the county of Franklin, in the state of Ohio, and in the city of Columbus,

> "Being part of lot number one (1) of Gates and Ann O'Harra's subdivision of part of half-section No. 14, township 5, range 22 Refugee Lands, described as follows: Beginning at an iron pipe at the northwest corner of Broad street and Champion avenues in said city of Columbus; thence southwesterly along the north line of Broad street and the south line of said lot No One, 189.40 feet to an iron pipe in the east line of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition; thence northerly along the east line of said Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition, 174.81 feet to the south line of the first alley north of Broad street in said Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition, produced eastwardly to Champion avenue; thence eastwardly along said alley produced eastwardly to Champion avenue, 188.06 feet to the west line of Champion avenue; thence southerly along the west line of Champion avenue 174.53 feet to the place of beginning."

2. The following described premises situate in the county of Franklin, in the state of Ohio, and in the city of Columbus:

> "Being lot number three (3) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition to the city of Columbus, Ohio, as the same is numbered and delineated upon the recorded plat thereof, of record in Plat Book 5, page 137, recorder's office, Franklin county, Ohio."

3. The following described premises situate in the county of Franklin, in the state of Ohio, and in the city of Columbus:

> "Being lot number four (4) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition to the city of Columbus, Ohio, as the same is numbered and delineated upon the recorded plat thereof, of record in Plat Book 3, page 137, recorder's office, Franklin county, Ohio."

4. The following described premises situate in the county of Franklin, in the state of Ohio, and in the city of Columbus:

> "Being lot number five (5) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition to the city of Columbus, Ohio, as the same is numbered and delineated upon the recorded plat thereof, of record in Plat Book 5, page 137, recorder's office, Franklin county, Ohio."

Part of lot number one (1) Gates' and O'Harra's subdivision.

I find upon examination of the above abstract, date May 26, 1917, that the title to the premises described is in the name of Mary Elizabeth Deshler and that a general warranty deed from said Mary Elizabeth Deshler, with release of dower if necessary, will vest in the state of Ohio a clear title except for the taxes for the last half of 1916, amounting to $180.32, which remain unpaid and are a lien, and also the taxes for the year 1917, which are as yet undetermined.

Lot number three (3) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition.

I find upon examination of the above abstract, dated June 20, 1917, that the title to said premises is in the name of Clarence E. Woolman and that a general warranty deed from said Clarence E. Woolman, with release of dower if necessary, will vest in the state of Ohio a clear title except for the taxes for the last half of the year 1916, amounting to $74.29, which remain unpaid and are a lien, and the taxes for 1917, the amount of which is as yet undetermined, and also a special assessment for improving Ohio avenue, said assessment consisting originally of ten annual installments of $30.24 each, one of which has been paid—the next installment due with the taxes payable December 20, 1917—unpaid balance of said assessment $272.17 principal, $6.12 accrued interest for six months.

Lot number four (4) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition.

I find upon examination of the above abstract, dated June 20, 1917, that the title to the premises described is in the name of Clarence E. Lot number five (5) of John C. Bullitt's Ohio avenue addition.

I find upon examination of the above abstract, dated June 20, 1917, that the title to the premises described is in the name of Clarence E. Woolman and that a general warranty deed from said Clarence E. Woolman, with release of dower if necessary, will vest in the state of Ohio a clear title except for the taxes for the last half of the year 1916, amounting to $70.44, which remain unpaid and are a lien, and the taxes for 1917, the amount of which has not yet been determined.

I am herewith handing you the four abstracts hereinbefore referred to.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—HOW BONDS MUST BE ISSUED BY SAID OFFICIALS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

Sections 3298-15e and 3298-45 G. C. contain the only provisions authorizing the township trustees to issue bonds in the matter of the improvement of township roads, and in issuing bonds thereunder the provisions of said sections must be followed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

HON. D. H. PEOPLES, Prosecuting Attorney, Pomeroy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 20, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to a number of matters, as follows:

"1. Can township trustees issue bonds to build roads without submitting same to the electors of the township?

"2. If bonds can be issued, for what length of time can the bonds be issued?

"3. Can township trustees issue said bonds to pay their portion for building state roads?

"4. Must the sale of bonds be advertised, or can they be sold without advertisement?

"5. When the levy for road purposes amount to about $2,500 per year, can the trustees of a township borrow $15,000.00 and pay a portion of the same each year out of the levy for road purposes, and continue to pay each year until said amount is paid in full?

"6. If the township trustees can issue bonds, what proceeding is necessary (if the same is not submitted to a vote) to make the issuing of said bonds legal?"

Owing to the fact that the new highway act became effective on the 28th day of June, 1917, I will base my opinion upon the provisions of this act. I do this especially for the reason that the provisions of law now in force, having to do with the matter of constructing, reconstructing, resurfacing and improving township roads and all matters connected therewith, have been radically modified by the new law.

Under the law which became effective on June 28, 1917, there are two separate and complete plans for the improvement of township highways. The one scheme or plan is set forth in sections 3298-1 to 3298-15n inc. G. C.; the other in sections 3298-25 to 3298-53 inc. G. C. The first plan takes into consideration the property and territory of the entire township, including the property and territory in the municipal corporations situated therein. The second plan exempts the property and territory located within the corporate limits of the municipalities situated therein, the property and territory outside of said municipalities forming a road district.

The two plans are complete and comprehensive within themselves, and in deciding in reference to questions pertaining to the powers of township trustees in the matter of road improvements we must look to the provisions made in the two above plans or schemes. With this in mind, let us note what provisions are made in the first plan for the issuing of bonds by township trustees.

Section 3298-15d G. C. gives authority to the township trustees to levy annually a tax not exceeding three mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of the township, to provide a fund for the payment of the township's proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement.

Section 3298-15e G. C. provides that:

> "The township trustees, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments, or any part thereof, may, whenever in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of said township in any amount not greater than the aggregate sum necessary to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement. * * *"

This section contains the only provisions of law for the issuing of bonds by the township trustees in the matter of improving roads under this plan.

Under the second plan we find provisions made in section 3298-44 G. C., enabling the township trustees to levy a tax of not exceeding three mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of "said district;" that is, the property outside the corporate limits of any municipalities located within the township.

In section 3298-45 G. C. provisions are made for the issuing of bonds as follows:

> "The township trustees, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments, or any part thereof, may whenever in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of said road district, in any amount not greater than the aggregate sum necessary to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement. * * *"

This is the only provision made in the second plan or scheme giving authority to the township trustees to issue bonds.

Section 3298-18 G. C. provides that the township trustees may levy a tax to create a fund for dragging, maintenance and repair of roads, upon all the taxable property of the township outside of any incorporated village or city, or part thereof therein situated, not exceeding in the aggregate two mills in any one year; but there is no provision made for the issuing of bonds in anticipation of the collection of such taxes.

At this point let us note the answers to a number of your questions. First, can township trustees issue bonds to build roads, without submitting same to the electors of the township? Under the provisions of sections 3298-15e and 3298-45 G. C., it is evident that the township trustees have authority, in anticipation of the collection of taxes, to issue bonds without submitting same to the electors of the township, but these bonds must be issued in the matter of such particular road improvement and the funds derived from the sale of the bonds must be used for that particular improvement.

You also ask for what length of time can the bonds be issued. Under the provisions of said two sections, the bonds may be issued for a period not to exceed ten years.

You also ask whether the sale of the bonds must be advertised, or whether they can be sold without advertisement. The said two sections above noted provide that:

> "The sale of such bonds shall be advertised once not later than two weeks prior to the date fixed for such sale in a newspaper published in the county," etc.

You inquire whether the township trustees could borrow fifteen thousand dollars and pay a portion of the same each year out of the levy for road purposes, and continue to pay each year until said amount is paid in full. It is my opinion that this cannot be done. As said before, there is a specific and definite plan mapped out in the above provisions for the improvement of the township roads, and it is my opinion that these sections contain the only provisions in reference to the issuing of bonds and borrowing of money. It is true that section 3295 G. C. provides for the issuing of bonds by the township trustees, but the provisions of said section would not apply to the matter about which you inquire.

You also inquire what proceeding is necessary to make the issuing of bonds legal. Under sections 3298-15e and 3298-45 G. C., the method of proceeding is set out.

In addition to what I have already suggested, it might be well to call attention to the following provision found in each section:

> "Prior to the issuance of such bonds the township trustees shall, in case all or any part of said bonds are to be redeemed by special assessments, provide for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the township to cover any deficiencies in the payment or collection of any such special assessments."

This provision of the statute can be met by the adoption of a resolution in which the township trustees pledge themselves and their successors that they will, if necessary, to take care of any deficiencies that may arise, due to the non-payment of any special assessments, levy a tax sufficient to take care of any deficiencies so arising; but the levy need not be made until deficiencies occur. The other provisions of these two sections are easily followed.

You make inquiry also as to the authority of township trustees to issue bonds to pay the township's portion of the cost and expense of building inter-county highways and main market roads. In order to answer this question it will be necessary for me to turn to the chapter having to do with the improvement of intercounty highways and main market roads, and especially to sections 1222 and 1223 G. C.

Section 1222 G. C. provides in part as follows:

> "* * * For the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expense to be paid by the interested township or townships for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners or the township trustees are authorized to levy a tax not exceeding two mills upon all taxable property of the township in which such road improvement or some part thereof is situated. * * * Where the improvement is made upon the application of the county commissioners said county commission shall levy the tax and where the improvement is made upon the application of the township trustees said township trustees shall levy the tax. * * *"

Section 1223 G. C. provides that the county commissioners, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments or any part thereof, when the improvement is being done upon their application, may issue bonds to cover the shares of the cost and expense of the improvement payable by the county township or townships and the owners of the lands assessed for such improvement. But this section further provides that:

> "Where such construction, improvement or repair is made upon the application of the township trustees, such township trustees are hereby authorized to sell the bonds of the interested township in any amount not greater than the estimated compensation, damages, cost and expense of such construction, improvement or repair and under like conditions herein prescribed for county commissioners."

It will readily be seen from the provisions of this section that the township trustees have nothing to do with the levying of a tax or the issuing of bonds in the matter of the improvement of intercounty highways or main market roads, excepting in those cases in which the township trustees made application to the state highway commissioner for state aid.

When the county commissioners make application to the state highway commissioner for state aid, the taxes levied are levied by the county commissioners, and the bonds issued, if any, are issued by the county commissioners in a sufficient amount to cover not only the proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement due from the county, but also the proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement due from the township and from the assessed property owners. This matter will be more readily understood by a reference to the provisions of section 1192 G. C., which provides that if the county commissioners do not file any application for state aid before March 1 of any year, then the board of township trustees of any township may file such application.

Section 1223 G. C. contains the only provisions authorizing the township trustees to issue bonds in the matter of the improvement of intercounty highways and main market roads.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONER—SALARY CANNOT BE INCREASED OR DIMINISHED DURING TERM.

A municipal civil service commissioner is an officer with a fixed term of office and a salary which cannot be increased or diminished during such term.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your communication of recent date you requested an opinion from this department as follows:

"Mr. Van Dousen, city solicitor of Lorain, Ohio, was in the office yesterday informing the writer that he had submitted a matter for your opinion, which you had agreed to answer through the bureau. We are much pleased that this has been done with your consent as a written opinion upon this matter will also be of much value to this office.

"We beg to inform you, however, that this question was submitted to the writer some time since by State Examiner Will E. Heck, and at the time he was working upon the examination of the city of Lorain, and we replied to him as follows:

"'We have your favor of the 8th inst., and will take up your question as follows:

"'"1. The council of this city passed an ordinance increasing the salary of the members of the civil service commission. Are members of the civil service commission under the law which forbids an official having his salary raised during his term of office? If so, should I make a finding for the increased amount paid the members of the commission in this city?"

"'In reply thereto we respectfully refer you to section 486-19 G. C., covering municipal civil service as follows: "The mayor or other chief appointing authority of each city in the state shall appoint three persons, one for a term of two years, one for four years and one for six years, who shall constitute the municipal civil service commission. * * *" We also refer you to section 4213 G. C., providing that the salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed and we are, therefore, of the opinion that findings for recovery should be made for any violations of this section. You must ascertain, of course, the date of appointment of each man and be sure that the salary was increased during his term.'

"If we should happen to be incorrect in our judgment, we shall be pleased to hear from you."

Your answer given above seems to be undoubtedly correct as it is in consonance with two opinions of a former attorney-general, and recently the court of appeals of Muskingum county have decided to the same effect. The municipal civil service commissioners are municipal officers although they have sometimes jurisdiction over territory outside of the corporation, that is in case of school districts. They are appointed by the mayor. (Section 486-19 General Code.) Their salary is fixed by council. They are called "officers" wherever mentioned in the civil service law. It has not occurred to the attorney-general in either of the opinions mentioned, or to the court in the decision above alluded to, to question that they are such municipal officers. They are, therefore, governed by the provisions of section 4213 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The salary of any officer, clerk, or employe shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed, and except as otherwise provided in this title, all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury."

The first of the opinions above referred to—found in Vol. I, Reports of the Attorney-General, 1914, page 524, by Mr. Hogan—is to the effect that when the act then in effect was passed taking the place of the former statutes upon the subject, the existing terms of the commissioners being saved, that it could not be changed during the terms for which they were originally appointed.

The second opinion rendered in the same year, page 1439, Vol. II, was in a case where the salary having been changed the civil service commissioner resigned and then was reappointed in order that he might receive the new salary, which it was held he could not do.

The case in the court of appeals of Muskingum county was decided at the May term, 1917, and was the exact case as to which you ask an opinion. The court there considered not only section 4213, but also the constitutional provision as all-controlling, which is article II, section 20, which is as follows:

"The general assembly, in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers; but no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished."

The above constitutional provision certainly does lay down a principle of universal application. It is unnecessary to decide whether section 4213 is enacted in pursuance of article II section 20 or not. It is the law and whether it be required by that section of the constitution or not it is not in conflict with any other section, but is in harmony with the principle declared in that section. The particular question the court of appeals passed upon was upon the meaning of the word "term," or what it is that constitutes the term, and they held that it did not apply to one appointed to fill a vacancy after the change in salary had taken place. That is, the term of office, instead of being the statutory term for which the officer is chosen, is the term for which the office is held by the particular incumbent under an appointment or election.

There seems therefore to be no question left, but upon authority as well as reason you are advised that the salary of the civil service commissioners cannot be increased or diminished during the terms for which they are appointed. This, in the case in question, will result in different members of the board receiving different compensation for exactly the same services. This consequence, however, is a necessary one and any commissioner not satisfied with his salary may resign and make way for another to be appointed who will receive the same salary as his fellow commissioners; and this is nothing more than frequently happens, and as did happen in the case of the common pleas judges when those serving out terms of different numbers of years received the old salaries while the new ones chosen after the change received a new and different one.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—PROVISIONS THEREOF UNENFORCIBLE AS TO ALL EMPLOYERS ENGAGED IN EMPLOYMENTS MARITIME IN NATURE.

Under the decision of the supreme court of the United States, rendered May 21, 1917, section 1465-98 Ohio General Code, and all other provisions of the Ohio compensation act, are unenforcible as to all employers engaged in employments maritime in nature, under maritime contracts with an employer engaged in maritime pursuits upon any of the navigable waters of the United States, whether the employment be interstate or intrastate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On June 30th I received from you the following request for my opinion:

> "The commission has received a letter involving a point of law which we find necessary to refer to your department for an opinion. The letter reads as follows:
> "'Re—Question of application of the Ohio workmen's compensation act to stevedoring operations.

"'My attention has just been called to a decision rendered May 21, 1917, by the supreme court of the United States in the case of the Southern Pacific Company, plaintiff in error, v. Jensen and a number of other similar cases concurrently decided.

"'I assume that you are familiar with the decision in question. I write this letter to ask if you will be good enough to favor me with your views as to whether or not stevedores in Ohio, having particular reference to the large coal and ore docks along the lakes, who are engaged in the receiving and trans-shipment of iron ore and coal—are affected by this decision, taken in connection with section 51. (1465-98 O. G. C.)'

"As there are quite a few employers of labor whose status under the workmen's compensation law depend upon this opinion, we will kindly ask you to favor us with same at the very earliest possible date."

Stevedores are persons employed in loading and unloading vessels in port.

Section 1465-98 G. C. referred to in the above request is as follows:

"The provisions of this act (G. C. sections 1465-41a to 1465-43, 1465-45, 1465-46, 1465-53 to 1465-106) shall apply to employers and their employes engaged in intrastate and also in interstate and foreign commerce, for whom a rule of liability or method of compensation has been or may be established by the congress of the United States, only to the extent that their mutual connection with intrastate work may and shall be clearly separable and distinguishable from interstate or foreign commerce, and then only when such employer and any of his workmen working only in this state, with the approval of the state liability board of awards, and so far as not forbidden by any act of congress, voluntarily accept the provisions of this act by filing written acceptances, which, when filed with and approved by the board, shall subject the acceptors irrevocably to the provisions of this act to all intents and purposes as if they had been originally included in its terms, during the period or periods for which the premiums herein provided have been paid. Payment of premium shall be on the basis of the payroll of the workmen who accept as aforesaid."

This statute is almost identical with Sec. 114 of the New York workmen's compensation act, which is as follows:

"The provisions of this chapter shall apply to employers and employes engaged in intrastate, and also in interstate or foreign commerce, for whom a rule of liability or method of compensation has been or may be established by the congress of the United States, only to the extent that their mutual connection with intrastate work may and shall be clearly separable and distinguishable from interstate or foreign commerce, except that such employer and his employes working in this state may, subject to the approval and in a manner provided by the commission and so far as not forbidden by any act of congress, accept and become bound by the provisions of this chapter in like manner and with the same effect in all respects as provided herein for other employers and their employes."

This section of the New York act was considered by the supreme court of the United States in the case of Southern Pacific Company v. Jensen, referred to in your request, the decision of the court was rendered May 21, 1917.

The findings of fact, made by the New York commission, and upon which findings the case was determined, are as follows:

"1. Christen Jensen, the deceased workman, was, on August 15, 1914, an employe of the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation of the state of Kentucky, where it has its principal office. It also has an office at pier 49, North river, New York city. The Southern Pacific Company at said time was, and still is, a common carrier by railroad. It also owned and operated a steamship, El Oriente, plying between the ports of New York and Galveston, Texas.

"2. On August 15, 1914, said steamship was berthed for discharging and loading at pier 49, North river, lying in navigable waters of the United States.

"3. On said date Christen Jensen was operating a small electric freight truck. His work consisted in driving the truck into the steamship El Oriente where it was loaded with a cargo, then driving the truck out of the vessel upon a gangway connecting the vessel with pier 49, North river, and thence upon the pier, where the lumber was unloaded from the truck. The ship was about ten feet distant from the pier. At about 10:15 a. m., after Jensen had been doing such work for about three hours that morning, he started out of the ship with his truck loaded with lumber, a part of the cargo of the steamship El Oriente, which was being transported from Galveston, Texas, to New York city. Jensen stood on the rear of the truck, the lumber coming about to his shoulder. In driving out of the port in the side of the vessel and upon the gangway, the truck became jammed against the guide pieces on the gangway. Jensen then reversed the direction of the truck and proceeded at third or full speed backward into the hatchway. He failed to lower his head and his head struck the ship at the top line, throwing his head forward and causing his chin to hit the lumber in front of him. His neck was broken, in this manner he met his death.

"4. The business of the Southern Pacific Company in this state consisted at the time of the accident and now consists solely in carrying passengers and merchandise between New York and other states. Jensen's work consisted solely in moving cargo destined to and from other states.

"5. Jensen left surviving him Marie Jensen, his widow, 29 years of age, and Howard Jensen, his son, seven years of age, and Evelyn Jensen, his daughter, three years of age.

"6. Jensen's average weekly wage was $19.60 per week.

"7. The injury was an accidental injury and arose out of and in the course of Jensen's employment by the Southern Pacific Company and his death was due to such injury. The injury did not result solely from the intoxication of the injured employe while on duty, and was not occasioned by the wilful intention of the injured employe to bring about the injury or death of himself or another.

"8. This claim comes within the meaning of chapter 67 of the consolidated laws as re-enacted and amended by chapter 41 of the laws of 1914, and as amended by chapter 316 of the laws of 1914.

"9. Award of compensation is hereby made to Marie Jensen, widow of the deceased, at the rate of $5.87 weekly during her widowhood with two years' compensation in one sum in case of her marriage; to Harold Jensen, son of the deceased, at the rate of $1.96 per week and to Evelyn Jensen, daughter of the deceased, at the rate of $1.96 per week until said Harold Jensen and Evelyn Jensen respectively shall arrive at the age of eighteen years, and there is further allowed the sum of one hundred ($100.00) dollars for funeral expenses.'

The award was attacked on several different grounds, but was sustained by the New York court. In the federal supreme court only two contentions were considered.

First, that the Southern Pacific Company being an interstate common carrier by railroad is responsible for injuries to employes only under the federal employers' liability act, and no state statute can impose any other or different liability. The court quickly disposes of this contention, holding that the federal employers liability act applied only to employes having a direct and substantial connection with railroad operations, and the fact that the ship upon which the accident occurred happened to be owned by a railroad company did not bring employes engaged in loading or unloading the ship under the federal employers' liability act.

The second contention was that the application of the compensation act as made by the New York commission in this case conflicts with the general maritime law, which constitutes an integral part of the federal law under art. III, section 2 of the United States Constitution, and to that extent is invalid. The majoriy of the court held this contention to be sound; the holding, and reasons therefor, will appear by the following quotations from the opinion of Mr. Justice McReynolds:

> "Article III, section 2, of the Constitution, extends the judicial power of the United States 'To all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction;' and Art. 1, Sec. 8, confers upon the congress power 'To make all laws which may be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.' Considering our former opinions, it must now be accepted as settled doctrine that in consequence of these provisions congress has paramount power to fix and determine the maritime law which shall prevail throughout the country. Butler v. Steamship Co., 130 U. S. 527. In re Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 14. And further, that in the absence of some controlling statute the general maritime law as accepted by the federal courts constitutes part of our national law applicable to matters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558; Butler v. Boston S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 557; Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 552. * * *
> "By section 9, judiciary act of 1789 (1 Stat. 76, 77), the district courts of the United States were given 'exclusive original cognizance of all civil causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; * * * saving to suitors in all cases the right of a common law remedy where the common law is competent to give it.'. And this grant has been continued. Judicial Code, Secs. 24 and 256. * * *
> "The work of a stevedore in which the deceased was engaging is maritime in its nature; his employment was a maritime contract; the injuries which he received were likewise maritime; and the rights and liabilities of the parties in connection therewith were matters clearly within the admiralty jurisdiction. Atlantic Transport Co. v. Imbrovek, 234 U. S. 52, 59, 60.
> "If New York can subject foreign ships coming into her ports to such obligations as those imposed by her compensation statute, other states may do likewise. The necessary consequence would be destruction of the very uniformity in respect to maritime matters which the constitution was designed to establish; and freedom of navigation between the states and with foreign countries would be seriously hampered and impeded. A far more serious injury would result to commerce than could have been inflicted by the Washington statute authorizing a materialman's lien condemned in the Roanoke. The legislature exceeded its authority in attempting to extend the statute under consideration to conditions like those here disclosed. So applied, it conflicts with the constitution and to that extent is invalid.

"Exclusive jurisdiction of all civil case of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction is vested in the federal district courts, 'saving to suitors in all cases the right of a common law remedy where the common law is competent to give it.' The remedy which the compensation statute attempts to give is of a character wholly unknown to the common law, incapable of enforcement by the ordinary processes of any court and is not saved to suitors from the grant of exclusive jurisdiction. The Hine, 4 Wall. 571, 572; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 644; Steamboat Co. v. Chase, 16 Wall. 522, 531, 533; The Glide, 167 U. S. 606, 623. And finally this remedy is not consistent with the policy of congress to encourage investments in ships manifested in the acts of 1851 and 1884 (R. S. 4283-4285; Sec. 18, act of June 26, 1884, 23 State. 57, Ch. 121) which declare a limitation upon the liability of their owners. Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 104.

"The judgment of the court below must be reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Upon this important question the court was divided, five to four, Justices Holmes, Pitney, Brandeis and Clark dissented from the opinion of the majority as expressed by Mr. Justice McReynolds. Justices Holmes and Pitney delivered very strong dissenting opinions, but, as the law is what is announced by the five judges and not by the four, it "profiteth nothing" to discuss the dissenting opinions.

While it has nothing to do with this opinion, the open declaration by Mr. Justice Holmes that judges legislate should be noted. He says, in his dissenting opinion, "I recognize without hesitation that judges do and must legislate, but they can do so only interstially; * * *" I think the statement correct, but it should be taken so meaning that some courts when exercising this legislative power, will and do, when they deem it necessary that the power be exercised, create interstices, if none exist.

The opinion of the majority of the court is conclusive and speaks for itself; under it no state compensation law can apply to any employes engaged in employment maritime in its nature, or under what may be called a maritime contract, with an employer engaged in maritime pursuits, upon any of the navigable waters of the United States; it makes no difference whether the employment be interstate or intrastate. The test is, is the employment maritme so that the admiralty jurisdiction attaches?

The opinion in this case really has no application to G. C. 1465-98. An examination of that section shows that it was intended to apply only to "employers engaged in intrastate and also in interstate and foreign commerce, for whom a rule of liability or method of compensation has been or may be established by the congress of the United States. Only one such act is in existence and that is the federal employers liability act, which, the court expressly found, did not apply to the Jensen case. It will be noted too that section 1465-98 is purely optional and requires the written acceptance of the terms of the Ohio act by both employer and employe. It is needless to further consider this particular section, because, as stated above, it applies only to employers coming under the federal employers' liability act, and does not apply to maritime employes, such as stevedores. For maritime employes, no rule of liability or method of compensation has been established by congress—and, except to the extent indicated in the opinion of the court in the Jensen case, congress has not legislated in this field. The question really is, as maritime employes do not come under the federal employers' liability act, are they entitled to the protection of the Ohio compensation act? Our act is compulsory and in no sense elective and the answer given by the opinion in the Jensen case is that the Ohio act does not and cannot apply to maritime employments.

If the Ohio act were elective, then I think, as congress has not prohibited employer and employe from contracting as to liability, that if both actually and not by presumption agreed to comply with the act and be bound by its administration, then they would be held to their contract. But our act is compulsory and there is absolutely no provision for persons not bound by it electing to be so bound—except in the case of certain employes coming under the field of the federal employers' liability act, I am forced to hold that the ruling of the majority of the court in the Jensen case, must be construed as deciding that the Ohio act does not apply to maritime employments.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SALARY OF CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYE—MUST BE PAID IN ACCORDANCE WITH APPROPRIATION BILL.

Section 8 of the general appropriation budget bill of 1917 (107 O. L. 353) in prescribing uniform salaries for certain civil service positions, adopts the classifications and ratings of the civil service commisson and by such adoption controls designations of particular positions in section 2 of the same bill inconsistent with such classifications.

An appointing department, board or commission must pay out personal service appropriations for positions to which said section 8 relates only at the rates therein specified, which are not maximum rates merely but are absolute and uniform rates.

If the sums appropriated for personal service are not sufficient in amount to pay the rates so specified, the appointing authority, or the controlling board, is not required to secure additional funds in order to enable such payments to be made; but if such additional sums are not secured, no compensation at all may be paid on account of the positions affected by such failure; so that such positions are in effect abolished by such failure to secure additional funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1917.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of June 20th, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "The civil service commission has furnished this department with certain classifications of positions, and the salaries attached to same are in excess of the amounts this board desire to pay; for instance, an employe, whose service is clerical, is rated as clerk, grade 2, rate C, under which classification the salary is fixed at a minimum of $1,140 per year. The present salary of this employe is $900 per year, and this board does not desire to pay more. The same condition obtains with reference to a number of employes.
> "Your opinion is requested as to whether or not it is mandatory upon this board to pay to its employes the compensation fixed by the civil service rating."

Your inquiry involves consideration of section 8 of the general appropriation budget bill of 1917. The section is found in 107 O. L. 353, and provides in part as follows:

> "So much of the appropriation herein made for personal service as pertains to the compensation of employes in the following groups and grades of the classified civil service of the state, save and except employes in such groups and grades in * * * institutions under the control of the Ohio board of administration, * * * may be expended only in accordance with the classification and rules of the state civil service commission and at the following rates of annual salaries for the respective groups and grades, to wit:
> (Here follows a schedule of grades and rates with specific sums fixed to each rate.)
> provided, however, that rates of compensation of persons now employed in the foregoing groups and grades of the classified civil service of the state, which on the date of the passage of this act may exceed the uniform rate fixed herein for the service, group and grade of their positions, as so classified, shall not be affected by the provisions of this section; but such rates of compensation as fixed on said date for such positions shall be the rates at which the appropriations herein made may be expended for the compensation of such persons while holding such positions.
> "In case any personal service appropriation * * * is insufficient in amount to enable the * * * board or commission, for which the same is made to comply with the provisions of this section in the payment of the compensation of its employes, the controlling board may from the appropriation made to such controlling board, allot to such * * * board or commission a sum sufficient to enable such * * * board or commission to comply with this section. Such allotment shall be made on application and all the provisions of section 4 of this act, so far as consistent herewith shall apply. * * *"

Section 4 of the act referred to provides the machinery for application to the controlling board. It will not be necessary to quote that section in this connection. The appropriation to the controlling board referred to in section 8 is general under the heading "Contingencies" and does not shed any light upon the question referred to. See 107 O. L. 232-307.

I should state in connection with your inquiry as I have phrased it that your letter elsewhere shows that it is necessary to apply to the controlling board to get funds to pay the salary which you have in mind. Inasmuch as the general personal service items of the appropriation law, in section 2, for the Ohio board of administration, are all specific in column one, I assume, though you do not say so, that the clerkship which you have in mind is the one which is designated in said appropriation as "Grade IV clerk" as this is the only position for which a salary of $900 is appropriated. It will be observed that $900.00 is in excess of any rate fixed for grade IV clerks by section 8 of the law. It is apparent therefore that while the legislature has designated this position as grade IV in section 2, the effect of section 8 upon it must be one of two things:

1. If the position is properly rated as a grade IV clerkship, then the salary must be reduced so as to conform to the proper rating of grade IV.

2. If the position is properly classified as a higher grade than as stated, application to the controlling board is necessary to secure the funds with which to pay the compensation referred to in section 8.

Your statement seems to indicate that the second situation is the one which obtains with respect to the position under consideration.

It appears, therefore, that although in section 2 an appropriation is made for the salary of one grade IV clerk at $900.00, this particular clerkship has been regarded by the civil service commission as belonging in grade II and has taken rate C.

The first question to be considered, therefore, is as to whether or not there is a conflict between the gradings which have been mentioned and as to whether the position really is a grade IV position or a grade II clerkship.

The pertinent provision of section 8 in this connection is that which is expressed in the language "only in accordance with the classification and rules of the state civil service commission." In my opinion this is the controlling provision and even though in the body of the appropriation bill, that is section 2 thereof, a given position may be referred to as, for example, "grade IV clerk" yet for the purpose of section 8 this description is not controlling, but the grade of a particular position is to be determined by the classification and rules of the state civil service commission.

The reference here is to the action of the civil service commission under sections 486-7 and 486-9 of the General Code, as enacted 106 O. L. 400. I quote such portions of the sections named as are necessary to show the source of the authority of the civil service commission.

> "Sec. 486-7. The commission shall, First, Prescribe, amend and enforce administrative rules for the purpose of carrying out and making effectual the provisions of this act.
> "Sec. 486-9. As soon as practicable after the taking effect of this act, the commission shall put into effect rules for the classification of offices, positions and employments, in the civil service of the state. * * * Due notice of the contents of such rules and of all changes therein shall be given to appointing officers affected thereby, and such rules shall also be printed for public distribution. * * *"

There are also certain limitations in sections 486-15, 486-16 and 486-17 providing for promotions, transfers, reinstatements and reductions, which together with the term "classified service," which runs throughout the civil service act, show that the classification of positions and their gradation with respect to similarity of duties, etc., is one of the essential ideas of the civil service law as a whole, without which many of its provisions can have no effect.

There is no question in my mind as to the authority of the general assembly to delegate to the civil service commission as an administrative board the power to determine by comparison of duties, etc., the natural classes and grades into which the positions in the civil service of the state fall. This is not legislative power but merely a duty to apply the legislative policy embodied in the civil service act to particular facts.

I conclude, therefore, that section 8 of the appropriation law effectually controls section 2 thereof and that whatever designation may be given to a particular position in section 2, such designation must yield to that which is given to the same position by the classification and rules of the civil service commission where an inconsistency exists.

Therefore, even though the appropriation may have been made in the instance which you have in mind for a grade IV clerk, such appropriation, if expended for the payment of the salary pertaining to a position which according to the classification and rules of the civil service commission is a grade II position, must be governed by section 8.

Section 8 certainly legislates with respect to the salary to be paid to the incumbents of the different grades and rates of positions therein enumerated. It does not, of course, govern with respect to the salaries payable in the institutions under the control of the board of administration and I assume that your question does not relate to such positions.

The question arises, however, as to the extent to which section 8 controls. Plainly stated that question is whether section 8 absolutely fixes the salaries pertaining to the positions enumerated therein or whether it merely fixes the maximum compensation for each of them.

Examining section 8 closely we discover that its first and most significant declaration is that the appropriations for personal service, so far as they pertain to certain positions, "may be expended only * * * at the following rates of annual salaries for the respective groups and grades." This language is not ambiguous. It does not fix a maximum nor a minimum, but absolutely determines the rate applicable to a given grade and rate.

Other language of the section must, however, be considered. In the first place there is the proviso that the rates of compensation of persons "now employed in the foregoing groups and grades" shall not be affected by the provisions of the section. In effect it saves from reduction the salaries of employes whose compensation on a given date may exceed the uniform rate. The very phrase "uniform rate" as used in this proviso shows what the legislature intended, namely, that the compensation paid should be uniform throughout a given grade and class of the civil service. Moreover, the same proviso enacts as to the rates of compensation of such persons whose salaries are not to be affected by the schedule, that "such rates of compensation as fixed on said date (the date of the passage of the act) for such positions, shall be the rates at which the appropriations herein made may be expended for the compensation of such persons while holding such positions."

Here again is a limitation which precludes both the raising and lowering of salaries. It is not that the rates as fixed on the date of the passage of the act shall be the maximum salary which may be paid from the appropriations made in the body of the act nor that it shall be the minimum salary which shall be so paid, but that it shall be the rate at which the appropriation may be expended.

Of course at this point it is appropriate merely to call attention to the fact that when an appropriation is made for a given department, board or commission in the state government, coupled with the statement that it may be expended only in a certain way, or even that it may be expended in a certain way without the use of the word "only," a power is conferred which must be strictly construed. In this instance "construction" is scarcely necessary for the legislature thus far in section 8 has clearly evinced the intention to fix a uniform scale of salaries. Such a uniform scale of salaries cannot be obtained by merely fixing a uniform maximum rate or a uniform minimum rate. The uniformity at which the legislature has aimed is absolute.

The real doubt which arises grows out of the provisions for securing the additional funds necessary to enable a given department, board or commission to comply with the section. The language is permissive, not mandatory. Neither the department, board or commission nor the controlling board to which the section refers is in words required to do anything—all is optional.

What effect upon the preceding provisions of the section does this fact have?

In my opinion the clearly expressed intention of the first paragraph of section 8 of the law absolutely controls the expenditure of the funds. It does not, however, require that the funds be expended at these rates, but merely that if the funds appropriated are expended at all thy shall be so expended. There is nothing in section 8 which precludes the abolition of positions.

If, therefore, a given department, board or commission, or the controlling board, should determine that it was inexpedient to ask for or make the additional allowance necessary to comply with the salary rating set forth in the section with respect to a given position, such determination is not precluded by anything which is in the statute; but the effect of it will be virtually to abolish the given position.

The answer to your question, then, may be shortly stated as follows: It is not mandatory upon the board of administration to apply to the controlling board for an additional allowance in order to pay the particular employe mentioned in your question the salary to which, if retained in your employment, he is entitled to have as the incumbent of a clerkship in grade II, rate C, but if your board desires to continue the existence of the position you must, in order to do so, secure such additional allowance; for you are without authority to retain the position without paying the salary stipulated therefor in section 8 of the law.

Your question is, of course, answered by the foregoing. I may say, however, that if in your judgment the position is improperly graded and rated, the matter should be taken up with the civil service commission, which has continuing authority to classify positions in the civil service of the state. The authority is reposed in that commission and the appointing authority, such as your board is, while at liberty to disagree with the commission, has no power to change its determination and must be governed by it.

If, however, the view of the board is based upon the conviction that while the position may bear such relation to other positions of a similar character as that it may be said to be properly graded yet the salary therefor is too high, then the board's disagreement is with the legislature and not the civil service commission; for the amounts found in section 8 were fixed by the legislature. The civil service commission has no such authority and has assumed none.

If, however, the opinion of your board is that whether or not the position is properly graded and rated the particular incumbent of it is not worth more than $900.00 per year, then if the conclusions of the civil service commission respectnig the proper gradation and rating of this position are correct, it must necessarily be true that the particular incumbent is incompent to discharge the duties of the position. In other words, what the board has is a $900.00 man in a $1,140.00 job. The remedy for this situation is, of course, the removal of the particularly employe, subject to an appeal to the civil service commission under sections 486-7 and 486-17a of the civil service law.

In no event, however, may the board of administration retain this employe upon the pay roll and pay him less than the salary stipulated in section 8 of the act, so long as the position which he occupies is graded as it now is. While I do not believe it would be within the power of the state civil service commission, under section 486-21 G. C., to refuse to approve the pay roll of your department on this account, I am clearly of the opinion that it would be the duty of the auditor of state to decline to issue a warrant for the salary pertaining to the particular position except in accordance with said section 8 of the appropriation law.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SECTION 7246 G. C.—RELATING TO TRAFFIC RULES—NOT UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

The provisions of section 7246 G. C., as it was amended, are not unconstitutional, whatever might have been held in reference to its provisions before amendment of said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

HON. CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 28, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "Under favor of the above section (Sec. 7246 G. C.), certain traffic rules and regulations were adopted by the state highway commissioner to become effective December 5, 1915. Predicated upon section 7246 we have sections 13421-17 and 13421-22 of the General Code, which were passed for the enforcement of the traffic rules and regulations.
> "The question which I wish to raise is this:
> "Is not section 7246 unconstitutional, in so far as it permits a delegation of the legislative power in contravention of article two, section one, of the constitution? No provision is made for the delegation of this power to such a person as the state highway commissioner."

While the proposition is well settled that a board or officer may be given power by the legislature to make necessary rules and regulations to carry out the duties and obligations imposed upon them by the legislature, and by so doing the provisions of the constitution in reference to the delegation of legislative power will not be contravened, yet the establishing of rules and regulations may be carried to such an extent as to contravene the provisions of the constitution in the respect suggested by you. However, I will not pass upon this question, for the reason that section 7246 G. C. was radically amended by the law which took effect on June 28, 1917. Said section before it was amended read as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner within sixty days after the taking effect of this act, shall prepare and publish a set of traffic rules and regulations governing the use of, and traffic on, all state roads. All rules and regulations that are to apply generally throughout the state, including those applicable to roads constructed of the various kinds of road material, shall become effective thirty days after publication. Special rules and regulations or orders, applying only to specified sections of state roads, shall become effective as soon as posted at each end, and at all road crossings on such specified section. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this section, it shall be the duty of the state highway commissioner, the county commissioners, the county highway superintendent, the township highway superintendent, township trustees, and all patrolmen or deputies employed on any highways within the state, to prosecute any violation of this section. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, firm or corporation to enter upon, or travel over said state roads, except in accordance with the traffic rules and regulations promulgated by the state highway commissioner."

As section 7246 G. C. now stands, it reads:

> "No traction engine, trailor, wagon, truck, steam roller, automobile truck or other power vehicle, whether propelled by muscular or motor power, weighing in excess of twelve tons, including weight of vehicle, object or contrivance and load, shall be operated over and upon the improved public streets, highways, bridges or culverts within the state, except as hereinafter provided. This provision shall not apply to vehicles run upon rails or tracks or to fire engines, fire trucks, or other vehicles or apparatus belonging to any municipal or volunteer fire department or used by such department in the discharge of its functions. No object shall be moved over or upon such streets, highways, bridges or culverts upon wheels, rollers or otherwise, except as hereinafter provided, in excess of a total weight of twelve tons including weight of vehicle, object or contrivance and load."

From a comparison of the two sections, it will readily be seen that your communication is no longer pertinent, for the reason that the provisions, about which you raise the question, have been entirely eliminated from said section.

Section 13421-17 G. C., to which you refer, has also been amended and now reads as follows:

"Any person violating any of the provisions of sections 7246 to 7249 inclusive of the General Code, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars."

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 27, 1917, in which you ask my opinion in reference to five separate and distinct propositions, as follows:

> "With further reference to my letters of June 7 and 26, in regard to the application of house bill 300, known as the White-Mulcahy bill, I beg to suggest the following as being questions of particular importance to us at this time:
> "(1) See section 1208. Are the provisions of this section with reference to the payment of estimates to contractors applicable on contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the above bill?
> "(2) See section 1208. Are the provisions of this section with reference to assignments, and liens of subcontractors, material men, laborers and mechanics applicable on contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the above bill?
> "(3) See section 1209. Are the provisions of this section applicable on contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the above bill?
> "(4) See section 1212. Upon what contracts are the provisions of this section with reference to the payment for materials delivered applicable?
> "(5) See section 1213-1. Under what conditions is this section applicable? To be more specific—is or is not this section applicable where the proceedings for an improvement have not progressed as far as the final resolution?"

Before taking up your questions in the order in which they are set out in your communication, I will make a few observations which I feel will apply alike to all your questions.

In entering into a contract, the contracting parties take into consideration the provisions of law as they were at the time the contract was entered into. The law as it was at that time controls the case, as to the rights of the parties under the contract. The law really becomes a part of the contract itself and we usually say is read into the same. Therefore, a modification of the law cannot modify the rights of the parties under the contract, even though the modification may have no great or materrial effect upon the rights of the parties, or may not place any substantially greater burden upon the parties. In ascertaining the obligations which the parties assume in entering into a contract, they have the right to assume that the law which will be applied to the contract is the law in force and effect at the time the contract is entered into. With this in mind, let us note the questions in the order you have them.

1. Are the provisions of section 1208 G. C., with reference to the payment of estimates to contractors, applicable to contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the bill mentioned?

The part of section 1208 G. C. which applies to this question read as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner shall not draw his requisition for any warrant in favor of any contractor or make any payment to any contractor for any estimates on account of any contract let under the provisions of the preceding sections, until the affidavit of such contractor, or its officer or agent in the case of a corporation, that all indebtedness of such contractor on account of material incorporated into the work or delivered on the site of the improvement, or labor performed thereon has been paid, is filed with the state highway commissioner. In lieu of such affidavit the contractor may file the writen consent of all persons who have furnished material, either incorporated into the work or delivered on the site of the improvement, or performed labor thereon, that any estimate or estimates then due may be paid. Such consent shall be accompanied by the affidavit of the contractor, or its officer or agent, in the case of a corporation, that the consent bears the signature of all persons who have furnished material, either incorporated in the work or delivered on the site of the improvement, or performed labor thereon, and who have not been paid in full for such labor or material."

The portion of the section just quoted is matter found in the law which took effect on June 28, 1917, but was not contained in the law as it existed prior to that time. This new matter undoubtedly places burdens and obligations on the contractor, not contemplated under the old law and it involves matters which a contractor would undoubtedly take into consideration when bidding upon a certain contemplated work. Therefore, under the principles above enunciated, I am of the opinion that the provisions above quoted would not apply to those contracts which were entered into under the old law—that is, prior to June 28, 1917. There is language used in this section which seems to indicate that such was the intention of the legislature. It reads:

> "The state highway commissioner shall not draw his requisition for any warrant in favor of any contractor or make any payment to any contractor for any estimates on account of any contract let under the provisions of the preceding sections."

From this language it would seem to me that the legislature intended these provisions to apply to contracts entered into under and by virtue of the provisions of law after the same had been amended.

2. Your second question is as follows: Are the provisions of section 1208 G. C., with reference to assignments and liens of subcontractors, material men, laborers and mechanics applicable to contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the above bill?

The part of section 1208 G. C. which is applicable to your second question is as follows:

> "Nothing herein contained shall be held to prevent the payment, out of any estimate or estimates that may be due, upon the assignment by the contractor to any person who has furnished material for the work, or performed labor thereon of the amount due for such material or labor. The provisions of section 8324 of the General Code and the succeeding sections in favor of sub-contractors, material men, laborers and mechanics shall apply to contracts let under the provisions of the preceding sections as fully and to the same extent as in the case of counties."

This is also new matter, the same not being found in the law as it stood prior to June 28, 1917.

In answering this question, exactly the same reasoning applies as was used in answering your first question.

Hence, it is my opinion that the provisions of section 1208 G. C., which are applicable to your second question, would not apply to contracts entered into prior to June 28, 1917.

3. Your third question makes reference to section 1209 G. C. and is as follows: Are the provisions of this section applicable to contracts entered into prior to the taking effect of the above bill?

The part of section 1209 G. C. which is applicable to this question reads as follows:

> "When the state highway commissioner elects to complete said improvement by contract, such contract may be let either with or without competitive bidding, as the state highway commissioner may deem for the best interest of the public. When the state highway commissioner elects to invite competitive bids, he shall proceed in the manner provided by section 1206 of the General Code. Contracts for the completion of improvements may be let either for a lump sum or on a unit price basis. Before entering into a contract for the completion of an improvement, the commissioner shall require a bond with sufficient sureties, conditioned as provided in section 1208 of the General Code. When the contract is for a lump sum, the bond shall be in an amount equal to the contract price, and when the contract is let on a unit price basis the state highway commissioner shall fix the amount of the bond. When the state highway commissioner elects to complete an improvement by force account, and in so completing said improvement enters into an agreement with an individual, firm or corporation, to furnish material or machinery, employ labor or purchase material on behalf of the state, or supervise the work of construction, or do any or all of said things, the state highway commissioner may, if he deems it necessary, require said individual, firm or corporation to enter into bond with sufficient sureties in an amount fixed by the state highway commissioner, conditioned for the faithful performance of said agreement."

The provisions above quoted vary materially from the provisions of the old law. However, it is readily seen that none of these provisions have anything to do with the contract as it was originally entered into, but they have to do with matters which arise after the entering into of the contract, and a first thought it might seem that these provisions might be made applicable to a contract entered into prior to June 28, 1917, as well as those entered into after said date. It must be remembered that the sureties of the contractor also have the right to rely upon the provisions of the law as they were at the time the contract of suretyship was entered into. The matter above quoted has to do very materially with the rights of the surety under his contract, for the reason that he is compelled to pay the difference between the original contract price and the price at which the state highway commissioner is enabled to complete the work under force account.

Hence, it is my opinion that these provisions should not be followed in the matter of completing contracts under force account, in reference to those contracts which were entered into prior to June 28, 1917.

4. Your fourth question has to do with the provisions of section 1212 G. C. and is as follows: Upon what contracts are the provisions of this section, with reference to the payment for materials delivered, applicable?

The particular part of the section in reference to which your inquiry arises reads as follows:

> "In addition to the above payments on account of work performed, the state highway commissioner may also, if he deems it proper allow and pay to a contractor a sum not exceeding eighty-five per cent. of the value of material delivered on the site of the work, but not yet incorporated therein, provided such material has been inspected and found to meet the specifications. When an estimate is allowed on account of material delivered on the site of the work but not yet incorporated therein, such material shall thereupon become the property of the state; but in case such material is stolen or destroyed or damaged by casualty before being used, or for any reason becomes unfit for use, the contractor will be required to replace the same at his own expense."

This is entirely new matter. These provisions are for the benefit of the contractor himself and therefore he would not be heard to complain in reference to his rights under the contract. The state, of course, could waive its rights under the contract if it so saw fit to do. But here again it must be remembered that there are other parties interested in the contract as originally entered into. First, the county, the township and the abutting property owners have an interest in the way in which the money is paid out to the contractor, the times at which it is paid out and whether it is paid out according to law or not. Secondly, the surety of the contractor has rights in the contract and these are more vital than the rights of the county, the township and the abutting property owners.

If the contractor is paid for material delivered upon the ground but not incorporated in the work, under certain circumstances the surety might be vitally affected. For this reason I am of the opinion that you cannot follow the provisions as above quoted, in reference to any contract that has been entered into before the 28th day of June, 1917; but you are limited in the making of estimates, in reference to work done, to the provisions of law as they existed before said date.

The answers to these four questions have been based upon the proposition that the rights of parties in contracts can not be interfered with by subsequent legislation and that the parties entering into the contract have a right to assume that matters done under and by virtue of the contract will be done in accordance with the law as it stood at the time the contract was entered into.

I might, in reference to the answer to these four questions, call attention to section 3 of the act which became effective on June 28. 1917, which is as follows:

> "This act shall not affect or impair any contract entered into, any act done, any right acquired or any obligation incurred prior to the time when this act takes effect, under or by virtue of any statute hereby amended or repealed, but the same may be completed, asserted or enforced as fully and to the same extent as if such statute had not been amended or repealed. * * *"

While this principle would be applied without the embodying of such a provision in the act, yet the saving clause above quoted makes the principle specific and certain.

5. We come now to a consideration of your fifth question, which has to do with section 1213-1 G. C., your query being as to when the conditions of this section may be applied. This section is an entirely new one, containing altogether new matter. It is very lengthy and hence I will not quote the same in full, but it permits the state highway commissioner and the county commissioners to enter into an agreement varying the proportion of the cost and expense of the proposed improvement, which is to be borne by the state, the county, the township and the assessed property owners, from that which is otherwise provided by law. This variation is to be based upon the tax duplicate and the road mileage in the county; that is, if the road mileage in the county is large and the tax duplicate is small, the state may assume more than half of the cost and expense of the improvement.

While the answers to the first four questions you submitted are based upon the contractual rights of parties, the answer to this question cannot be so based, as the rights of parties in and to a contract do not enter into the discussion of this question.

I desire to call attention to section 26 G. C. which provides as follows:

> "Whenever a statute is repealed or amended, such repeal or amendment shall in no manner affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, * * *."

The question immediately arises as to whether the matters leading up to a road improvement and the improvement itself would be considered as a proceeding. From the decisions of our courts, I am of the opinion that there is no question but that said steps would be considered a proceeding under the provisions of section 26 G. C.

In Raymond v. Cleveland, 42 O. S. 522, the court held:

> "That the various steps in council and before the boards, with respect to such street improvement, constituted a proceeding."

In State ex rel. v. Cass et al., 13 C. C. (N. S.) 449, at p. 457 of the opinion, the court, in discussing the question as to whether the erection of a court house by a court house commission could be considered a proceeding under the provisions of section 26 G. C., used the following language:

> "Thus the statute had one purpose—one object. The commission's service was continuous, beginning with its appointment and ending when the court house was completed. It seems clear, thus viewed, that the work of the commission in carrying out the objects and purposes for which it was appointed, and the building of the court house down to its completion, constituted within the meaning of section 26 of the General Code 'a proceeding,' and that any amendment of the statute made after that proceeding was instituted and carried forward almost to completion, can in no manner affect the powers given that commission in the original act."

(Affirmed in State ex rel. v. Bldg. Com., 84 O. S. 443.)

In Hayes et al. v. City of Cincinnati, 62 O. S. 116, the court held that the making of an assessment upon the lots, in the matter of a proposed street improvement, constituted a proceeding under and by virtue of the provisions of section 26 G. C.

From all these cases it seems to me that there can be no question but that the matter of a road improvement constitutes a proceeding under the terms of section 26 G. C.

The question now is as to when the first step in the matter of a road improvement is taken, because the law which is in force and effect at the time of the taking of said first step will control in the further steps involved in the proceeding. It is my opinion that the first step is taken when the state highway commissioner approves the application of the county commissioners for the improvement of the intercounty highways or main market roads of the county, or when he approves any part of said highways for which application has been made, and orders the county surveyor to prepare plans, profiles, specifications, etc., for said improvement.

Hence, if this approval of the state highway commissioner was made and his ordering the county surveyor to make plans, specifications, etc., for an improvement occurred before June 28, 1917, then your department would proceed under the provisions of the old law. But if these steps have been taken since the 28th day of June, 1917, the provisions of the new law would control in the matter of your further proceedings.

I might in this connection call attention to section 2 of the act which became effective on June 28, 1917, which reads as follows:

"This act shall not affect pending actions or proceedings, civil or criminal, pertaining to the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance, repair, supervision or control of highways, bridges or culverts, brought in any court at any time prior to the taking effect of this act, under or involving the provisions of any statute hereby amended or repealed; but the same may be prosecuted or defended to final determination in like manner as if such statute had not been amended or repealed."

However, the provisions of this section limit and restrict the meaning of the word "proceeding" as used in section 26 G. C. and interpreted by our courts.

But if the proceeding about which we are talking is not saved under and by virtue of section 2 of the act itself, it would be saved by the provisions of section 26 G. C. and the construction placed thereon by our courts.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF ERIE COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.
GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE: Bonds of Erie county, Ohio, in the sum of $7,000.00, for the purpose of paying said county's share of the cost and expense of improving section 'P' of intercounty highway No. 294."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the county commissioners of Erie county, Ohio, relative to the above bond issue, and find said proceedings to be in substantial conformity to the provisions of the General Code relating to improvements of this kind.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that bonds properly prepared according to the bond form submitted will, when signed by the proper officers of Erie county, constitute valid and binding legal obligations of said county.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

SALARY—APPROPRIATED FOR LIQUOR LICENSE INSPECTORS—MAY BE EXPENDED FOR SALARY FOR EXAMINERS ONLY UPON AUTHORITY OF THE CONTROLLING BOARD.

An appropriation for the salaries of "thirty inspectors" may be expended for those of ten inspectors and twenty "examiners," the amounts being the same, only under authority granted by the "controlling board" under section 4 of the general budget appropriation act of 1917.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of July 9th enclosing copy of a resolution adopted by the state liquor licensing board, which resolution is sufficiently explained by the statement thereof made in your letter, which is as follows:

> "The liquor licensing board desires, by this resolution, to reduce the number of inspectors for which the legislature made an appropriation from thirty, the present number, to ten. The board also desires to appoint twenty examiners, at the same salary, each, as has been appropriated for the thirty inspectors.
> "In the first paragraph of section V of the liquor license law, is found this language:
> "'Said board shall employ the necessary clerks, examiners, inspectors, stenographers and other assistants as it may deem necessary, and fix their compensation, subject to the approval of the governor.'
> "The liquor licensing board has never, up to this time, appointed any examiners, as they were authorized to do by the act from which the quotation is made.
> "The question the civil service commission desires an opinion upon is: Has the liquor licensing board, under this act, the right to appoint, and pay the salaries of, the twenty examiners, provided for by the resolution, out of the appropriation made by the general assembly for inspectors?"

The question as to the power of the liquor licensing board to re-classify the field force of the department does not seem to be raised, and in fact the provision of the statute quoted by you seems to be sufficient to confer this authority. Your question would seem to relate solely to the power of the liquor licensing board to expend the appropriation in question for the given purpose.

In my opinion, the appropriation, in the first instance, may not be expended save in accordance with the stipulations thereof.

Section 2 of the general appropriation budget bill of 1917 appropriates to the state liquor licensing board the sum of $210,010.00 for personal service, itemized in column 1 thereof, inter alia, as follows:

" 6 special inspectors	$ 9,000.00
"30 inspectors	39,000.00"

The liquor licensing board, on its own motion, is without authority to expend the moneys appropriated except in accordance with this itemization. This is established by the first sentence of section 4 of the bill, which provides as follows:

"The sums set forth in the column designated 'Items' in sections 2 and 3 of this act, opposite the several classifications of detailed purposes, shall not be expended for any other purposes except as herein provided."

Therefore, the state liquor licensing board, on its own motion, is without authority to expend any part of its personal service appropriation for the salary of an "Examiner," nor any part of said appropriation set apart, in the first instance, for the salaries of "Inspectors" for any purpose other than the salary of an "Inspector."

However, section 4 itself provides how authority to deviate from the specifications of the column designated "Items" may be made. Without quoting it, it provides for application to a "controlling board, which may grant authority to expend the moneys appropriated * * * otherwise than in accordance with such classifications of detailed purposes, but within the purpose for which the appropriation is made." And said authority is expressly extended to cases in which the proposed purpose, which must be "within the purpose for which the appropriation is made," is not "included in the detailed purposes for which such appropriation is distributed by items." This is the case with respect to the situation about which you inquire. The state liquor licensing board desires to expend a part of its personal service appropriation otherwise than in strict accordance with the distribution thereof by items, but, nevertheless, for a purpose strictly within the general purpose for which the appropriation is made, viz., personal service.

It is my opinion that the state controlling board, by action taken under section 4, on the application of the liquor licensing board, has full power to authorize the expenditure of the personal service appropriation to the liquor licensing board in accordance with the re-classification of the liquor licensing service by that board.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH MCGHEE,

Attorney-General.

BOARD OF HEALTH—POWER TO COMPEL COUNCIL TO APPROPRIATE SUFFICIENT FUNDS TO PAY EMPLOYES OF SAID BOARD—ANNUAL BUDGET—HOW REDUCED—MUNICIPAL BUDGET COMMISSIONERS.

1. The council of a municipality may be compelled by a board of health to appropriate funds sufficient to pay the compensation fixed by the board of health for its employes and the proper remedy is mandamus, provided such sum, if placed in the annual budget, is not reduced by the budget commissioner.

2. The estimates of a city council, in the annual budget, and the various items thereof, including the item which contains estimates to pay such expenses, and to carry into effect the provisions of the board of health chapter, may be reduced by the county budget commission.

3. Strictly speaking, there is no municipal budget commission, but the board of tax commissioners of a municipality have only authority to examine the budget and return the same to the council with such suggestions and recommendations as the board of tax commissioners may deem proper.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

The State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your request for my opinion contains the following:

"1. What, if any, authority has a municipal or county budget commission to reduce the estimates submitted by a board of health—including compensation for employes and other administrative expenses?

"2. Is there any procedure whereby council can be compelled to appropriate a sum sufficient to pay the compensation fixed by a board of health for its employes without compelling the individual employe to maintain an action in mandamus?"

General Code section 4404 provides that the council of each municipality shall establish a board of health composed of five members to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council, and shall serve without compensation. It also provides that the mayor, by virtue of his office, shall be president of said board. Said section further provides that in villages, if the council deems advisable, it may appoint a health officer, whose appointment shall be approved by the state board of health and who shall act instead of a board of health. In such village the council shall fix the salary and term of office of the health officer and in cities the board of health shall fix the salary of such health officer. Such appointee in villages shall have the powers and perform the duties granted to or imposed upon boards of health in cities, except that the rules, regulations or orders of a general character and required to be published, made by such health officer, shall be approved by the state board of health.

General Code section 4405 provides that if a municipality fails or refuses to establish a board of health, or appoint a health officer, the state board of health may appoint a health officer and fix his salary and term of office. Said section further provides that such health officer shall have the same powers and duties as health officers appointed in villages in place of a board of health, and the salary as fixed by the state board of health, and all necessary expenses incurred by him in performing the duties of a board of health shall be paid by and be a valid claim against such municipality.

General Code section 4451 provides:

> "When expenses are incurred by the board of health under the provisions of this chapter, upon application and certificate from such board, the council shall pass the necessary appropriation ordinance to pay the expenses so incurred and certified. The council may levy and set apart the necessary sum to pay such expenses and to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter."

That it is necessary for a city council to act under the provisions of said section 4451 G. C., above quoted, was decided in the case of State ex rel. Miller v. Council of Massillon, 2 O. C. C. (n. s.) 167, in which case the court held that it is mandatory upon the council to make the necessary appropriation to meet the expense of a health officer and a board of health, and that mandamus will lie to compel an appropriation for such salary and expenses.

General Code section 3791 provides that on the first day of April in each year the mayor of each municipality shall submit to the council the annual budget of the current expenses of the municipality, and that any item of such budget may be reduced or omitted by the council, but that the council shall not increase the total amount of said budget; that in the making of such annual budget the mayor may revise and change any and all of the items in the annual estimates which have been furnished to him by the director of public service or director of public safety, or other officers of the municipality, but that he shall not increase the total of any such estimate when including it in his annual budget to council.

General Code section 3793 provides that council shall examine and revise such annual budget so submitted by the mayor, and after it has determined by ordinance the percentage to be levied for the several purposes, as provided by law upon the real and personal property in the corporation returned on the grand duplicate, the levies shall be submitted by the council to the board of tax commissioners, which board of tax commissioners shall examine and return the same, as provided by law, with such suggestions and recommendations as such board of tax commissioners may deem proper.

General Code section 4523 provides that in each city the trustees of the sinking fund shall be the board of tax commissioners. The levies of all taxes, however, shall be kept within certain limitations, as provided by General Code section 5649-2, which reads in part as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in section 5649-4 and section 5649-5 of the General Code, the aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied on the taxable property in any county, township, city, village, school district or other taxing district, shall not in any one year exceed ten mills on each dollar of the tax valuation of the taxable property of such county, township, city, village, school district or other taxing district for that year, * * *"

Section 5649-4 G. C. provides for certain emergencies for which emergencies the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax to provide therefor, irrespective of any of the limitations of the Smith one per cent. law, and section 5649-5 G. C. provides that the council of a municipal corporation may, by a majority vote of all the members elected or appointed thereto, declare by resolution that the amount of taxes that may be raised by the levy of taxes at the maximum rate authorized by sections 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code will be insufficient and that it is expedient to levy taxes at a rate in excess of such rate and that a vote upon a specified rate of increase may be had, extending over a term of years not to exceed five, and if such vote carries such increased rate may be levied on such municipality.

General Code section 5649-3a provides that on or before the first Monday in June of each year the council of each municipal corporation shall submit or cause to be submitted to the county auditor an annual budget, setting forth in itemized form an estimate, stating the amount of money needed for its wants for the incoming year, and section 5649-3b provides that the county auditor, treasurer and prosecuting attorney of the county shall constitute such budget commission, and also sets forth the duties of such budget commission as to adjusting of the rates of taxation and fixing the amount of taxes to be levied in each taxing district.

General Code section 5649-3c provides that the auditor shall lay before the budget commissioners the annual budget submitted to him by the various boards and officers named in section 5649-3b, together with the estimates for state purposes. The budget commissioners shall examine the budgets and estimates and ascertain the total amount proposed to be raised. If the budget commissioners find that the total amount of taxes to be raised therein does not exceed the amount authorized to be raised in the various taxing districts, that fact shall be certified to the county auditor. If the total amount is found to exceed such authorized amount in any township, city, village, school district or other taxing district in the county, the budget commissioners shall adjust the various amounts to be raised so that the total amount thereof shall not exceed in any taxing district the sum authorized to be levied therein, and "in making such adjustment the budget commissioners may revise and change the annual estimates contained in such budgets and may reduce any or all items in any such budget, but shall not increase the total of any such budget or any item therein. The budget commissioners shall reduce the estimates contained in any or all of such budgets by such amount or amounts as will bring the total for each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district within the limits provided by law." The budget commissioners shall certify their action to the county auditor, who shall ascertain the rates necessary to be levied upon the taxable property therein of the county and of each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district, returned on the grand duplicate, and place it on the tax list of the county. That the budget commissioners may adjust the various amounts of taxes to be raised in each taxing district, and that they may reduce certain estimates contained in the various budgets was held in State ex rel. Patterson, 93 O. S. 25, and in the absence of fraud, bad faith or abuse of discretion, it is not within the power of the court to interfere or control the discretion or judgment of such budget commissioners.

On page 33 of said report the court says:

> "It is the positive duty of the budget commissioners, in adjusting the various amounts to be raised, to see that the total amount shall not exceed in any taxing district the sum authorized to be levied therein, to-wit, ten mills on each dollar of the tax valuation of the taxable property therein. In the discharge of this duty they are to reduce the estimates contained in any or all budgets by such amount or amounts as will bring the total of the taxing district within the limits provided by law. It is to be observed that they are authorized to 'revise and change the annual estimates contained in such budgets.' They 'may reduce any or all the items in any such budget.' According to the contention of counsel for relator they must reduce the estimates contained in all the budgets. We do not think the statute will bear that interpretation. By its plain provisions the budget commissioners are called upon to use their official judgment and discretion in the adjustment of the various amounts and in the reduction which they make. In the absence of fraud, bad faith or an abuse of discretion, their action as certified to the county auditor cannot be interfered with."

I find nothing in our laws which permits a board of health to make or certify levies for taxes, but a board of health has the right to create the necessary expense in carrying out the orders provided for in the sections above noted, and when such expense is certified to the council of a municipality, then under the decision in the case of State v. Council, above cited, the council of the municipality must appropriate funds for such expenses and make the necessary levies therefor. If, however, the expenses so incurred would be such as to cause the tax rate to be increased beyond the maximum levy, then under the decision in State v. Patterson, the budget commissioners would have a right to reduce such budget so that the items thereof would come within the limits allowed by law.

From the language above quoted from General Code section 5649-3c, I am satisfied that the budget commissioners may not only reduce the various budgets as a whole, but "may reduce any or all items in such budget." That is to say, if in the judgment of the budget commissioners the amount certified by the board of health should be reduced along with the other items, or instead of certain other items, said section gives the budget commissioners the authority to so reduce said items.

Answering your questions specifically, then, I advise you:

(1.) That the county budget commission may reduce the estimates submitted by the board of health only when the total amount of the various budgets exceed the maximum levy provided by law; and that while, technically speaking, there is no municipal budget commission, I am taking it that you refer to the board of tax commissioners of the municipality, who have authority only to examine the budget and return the same to council with such suggestions and recommendations as the board of tax commissioners may deem proper.

(2) The council of a municipality may be compelled to appropriate a sum sufficient to pay the compensation fixed by the board of health for its employes, provided there are funds from which such appropriation can be made and an action in mandamus is the proper remedy and if the sum so certified by the board of health to the council is placed in the annual budget by the council and the budget commission in the exercise of its proper discretion reduces said item in order to bring the budget within the limitations allowed by law, then the council can only be compelled to appropriate that part of the sum so certified which is so allowed by said budget commission and which is collected and is the subject of appropriation.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION—NOT ENTITLED TO EXPENSES INCURRED IN ATTENDING MEETINGS OF SAID BOARD.

Members of the county board of revision, when residing away from the county seat, are not authorized under section 5585 G. C. to receive their expenses incurred in traveling from their home to the county seat and return on matters connected with the board of revision's work, or are they entitled to be reimbursed for the amount expended for board while engaged in such work at the county seat.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1917.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of June 18, 1917, as follows:

"In a county where the president of the board of county commissioners does not reside in the county seat, and acts as a member of the board of revision, as provided by section 5585 G. C., as amended in senate bill No. 177, does the language of this section referring to contingent expenses permit of the payment of this member's board bill while at the county seat, and his traveling expenses from his home to the county seat and return on such days as he serves in this capacity?

"If you answer this question in the affirmative, would this also apply to the county auditor, or county treasurer, acting as members of this board in case either of them lived away from the county seat?

"In this connection we desire to call your attention to an opinion of Attorney-General Edward C. Turner, to be found in the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, Vol. 1, page 623."

Section 5585 G. C., as amended in senate bill 177, reads:

"The compensation of the experts, clerks and other employes of the county boards of revision shall be paid monthly upon the certificate of the county auditor or county board of revision, as the case may be. The contingent expenses of the county auditor and county board of revision, including postage, and express charges, their actual and necessary traveling expenses and those of their deputies, experts, clerks or employes on official business outside of the county, when required by orders issued by the tax commission of Ohio, shall be allowed and paid as other claims against the county."

In an opinion dated April 24, 1915, my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, was asked to construe section 35 of the so-called Warnes law (103 O. L. 786-795), therein designated as section 5614 G. C., which statute was very similar to the one here before us.

In that opinion (found in Vol. 1, Annual Reports of the Attorney-General for 1914, p. 514) Mr. Hogan said:

"The nature of the expenses for which the officers mentioned may be reimbursed under favor of the statute, is generally indicated by the use of the word 'contingent.' The term 'contingent expenses' has a well understood technical meaning, viz.: Those expenses, miscellaneous in character, which the legislative body presumes will be incurred in the natural course of official business, but the exact character of which cannot be so definitely ascertained in advance as to permit specific enumeration of them.

People v. Yonkers, 39 Barb. 236, 272.
Dunwoody v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cl. 269, 280.

"Ordinarily, therefore, the phrase would not include such classes of expenses as might reasonably be foreseen and provided for by express mention. On the other hand, it would include all miscellaneous expenses which would naturally and necessarily be incurred by the public officer in the ordinary discharge of his duties.

"That the general assembly supposed that the phrase 'contingent expenses, would not necessarily include all expenditures is reasonably apparent from consideration of that part of the above quoted sentence which begins with the word 'including.' By specifically enacting that postage and express charges and certain traveling expenses shall be included within the purview of 'contingent expenses' of which the sentence speaks, the general assembly has made it plain, I think, that such charges and expenses would not, without the provision, have been contemplated within the meaning of the phrase, being expenses the incurring of which is a certainty and which are, therefore, not of the miscellaneous and unascertainable character ordinarily contemplated by the term 'contingent expenses.'"

Former Attorney-General Turner, in an opinion rendered April 6, 1916, found in volume 1, Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, page 623, quoted this opinion at length concerning its construction of the words "contingent expenses" and concurred in the same.

In the case of People v. Yonkers, 39 Barb. 266, referred to above, the court said at page 272:

"What is meant by contingencies? As the charge is found in an estimate of the expenses of improving Warburton avenue, I infer that thereby is intended contingent expenses—expenses which the commissioners could not ascertain—expenses which were unknown, which were uncertain, and which might or might not be incurred thereafter. A contingency is a fortuitous event which comes without design, forsight or expectation. In law a contingent remainder is a remainder depending upon an uncertainty. And so a contingent expense must be deemed to be an expense depending upon some future uncertain event."

In the case of Dunwoody v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cl. 269, 280, the court said at page 280:

"The adjectives contingent, incidental, and miscellaneous, as used in appropriation bills to qualify the word expenses, have a technical and well-understood meaning; it is usual for congress to name the principal classes of expenditure which they authorize, such as clerk hire, fuel, light, postage, telegrams, etc., and then to make a small appropriation for the minor and unimportant disbursements incidental to any great business, which cannot well be foreseen and which it would be useless to specify more accurately."

In the case of Wander v. Coleman, 95 N. Y. Sup. 696, the court said at page 700:

"Contingent expenses are such as are possible or liable but not certain to occur."

With these definitions of "contingent expenses" before us I must conclude that this expression cannot be held to include the traveling expenses of the president of the county commissioners, the county treasurer or county auditor, from their homes in the county to the county seat and return, nor their board bill while at the county seat in connection with their duties as members of the county board of revision. To authorize the payment of such expenses there should be clear statutory authority for the same. In this case there is no such authority but, on the contrary, the provision of section 5585, allowing these members of the board of revision contingent expenses, including their actual and necessary traveling expenses when on official business outside of the county, strongly indicates a contrary legislative intention.

It is a well known fact that all county officials do not actually reside at the county seat and an equally well known fact that in going to the county seat and returning therefrom to their homes they will necessarily incur certain expenses. There is nothing uncertain about this and inasmuch as the legislature has not expressly authorized the payment of such expense, I am confident it intended to withhold any authority for allowing the same.

I am, therefore, of opinion, in answer to your question, that the members of the county board of revision, viz.: the president of the board of county commissioners, the county auditor and county treasurer, are not authorized to receive, in case they do not reside at the county seat, their expenses in traveling from their home to the county seat and return on matters connected with the board of revision's work, nor their board bill while engaged in such work at the county seat.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1917.

HON. WILLIAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am herewith returning to you, with my certificate of approval endorsed thereon, articles of incorporation of the Mutual Automobile Insurance Company, which you submitted for my approval under date of July 17, 1917.

As pointed out in my opinion No. 20, rendered to you under date of February 3, 1917, disapproving articles of incorporation of the Mutual Fire and Automobile Insurance Company, theretofore submitted to this department for approval, there was at that time nothing in the way of statutory provision authorizing a mutual insurance company (other than life) to transact business other than fire insurance business and such other business as by statute was made incident to the transaction of fire insurance business.

On March 21, 1917, the legislature passed an act, the same being house bill No. 563, amending certain sections of the General Code authorizing the organization of mutual fire insurance companies so as to authorize the organization of mutual insurance companies for the purpose of transacting certain classes of insurance business other than fire insurance. Section 9607-2 G. C., as amended in said act above referred to, now provides that a domestic mutual company may be organized by a number of persons not less than twenty to carry on the business of mutual insurance and to reinsure and accept reinsurance, as authorized by law and its articles of incorporation. Said section further provides that such persons shall execute articles of incorporation which, if not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state and of the United States, shall be approved by the attorney-general and the secretary of state, and such articles and certificate of approval by the attorney-general shall be recorded by the secretary of state, who shall deposit a copy thereof with the superintendent of insurance.

The different kinds of insurance which mutual insurance companies are authorized to transact are classified in the section, as amended, beginning with fire insurance, and the section provides that a mutual (or stock) insurance company may transact only the first kind of insurance, or may transact such other as it may elect of the other kinds of insurance classified in the section.

Sub-section 4 of said section 9607-2 G. C. reads as follows:

> "4. Automobile insurance. Against loss, expense and liability resulting from the ownership, maintenance or use of any automobile or other vehicle, provided no policies shall be issued under this subdivision against the hazard of fire alone."

The purpose clause of the articles of incorporation here in question is drawn in exact accord with the provisions of subsection 4, above quoted. The articles are signed by twenty persons, the majority of whom it appears are citizens of the state of Ohio, the articles have been properly acknowledged by the incorporators and same certified in the manner required by the statute in such case made and provided.

It appearing, therefore, that these articles of incorporation have been drawn, signed, acknowledged and certified in the manner required by said act and the general provisions of the state corporation law, and it not appearing that said articles are in any respect inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state or with the constitution or laws of the United Staes, said articles of incorporation are hereby approved by me, as authorized and required by the provisions of said section 9607-2 General Code.

I am returning herewith check for $25.00 submitted with your inquiry of July 16th.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH McGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COLONY FOR VAGRANTS—NO APPROPRIATION AVAILABLE TO PURCHASE LANDS THEREFOR.

There is no appropriation available for the purchase by or under the advice of the Ohio branch council for national defense of lands for the purpose of establishing a colony or colonies for the segregation of vagrants.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 18, 1917.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary, Ohio Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 6th in which you inquire whether the Ohio branch council for national defense may secure state funds for the purchase or leasing of lands whereon might be established a state colony or colonies for the segregation of vagrants, has received my careful consideration. I have examined in connection with it the appropriation to the governor for expenditure in the mobilization of the national guard in case of war and for co-operation with the federal government, which I am advised is the appropriation which has heretofore been expended for the purposes suggested by the Ohio branch council for national defense, and also the provisions of the act amending the law providing for the investigation of the housing requirements of the officers, departments and commissions of the state, and to provide for the adequate housing thereof, which contains some general authority for the acquisition of lands for state purposes.

Without going into particulars I may say that I am of the opinion that neither of these appropriations is available for expenditure in the manner suggested.

I know of no other appropriation or provision of law under which the proposed action might be taken. The inherent difficulty in the case is that the Ohio branch council for national defense has no legal standing as a department of the state government. Theoretically it is merely the "governor;" that is to say, it really amounts to an advisory council for the governor. The governor is not authorized to purchase lands for such purposes.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—FINAL RESOLUTION FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN ERIE COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 13, 1917, with a final resolution in duplicate enclosed, which resolution is in reference to the following named highway:

"Erie County—Section 'P' of the Sandusky-Norwalk road, I. C. H. No. 294."

I have examined this final resolution carefully, and find the same correct in form and legal, and am, therefore, returning the same to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—ABSTRACT OF TITLE COVERING CERTAIN LANDS IN FRANKLIN COUNTY—OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1917.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—A few days ago you submitted to this department an abstract of title covering the following premises, situate in the county of Franklin, in the state of Ohio, and in the township of Clinton, and bounded and described as follows:

"(Description from surveys of same made in 1859 and 1891). Situated in section three, township one, range eighteen, United States military lands and being part of lots four (4) and five (5) as shown and designated on the plat in the partition suit of the Hess estate, of record in complete record No. 32, pages 479 to 491, court of common pleas, Franklin county, Ohio, and being more particularly described as follows, viz.:

"Beginning at the southwest corner of lot five (5), named above, thence N. 0° 45′ E. along the center of a road on the west line of said lot five (5) ninety and one-half (90.5) poles to the northwest corner of said lot five (5) to a stone, thence S. 88° 15′ E. on the north line of said lot five (5) one hundred three and seventy-four one hundredths (103.74) poles to a stone, an original corner in the center of the Delaware and Sandusky road; thence S. 7° 50′ W. with the center of said road three (3) poles to a limestone set for a corner, with a broken sewer pipe around it, from which a maple tree four inches in diameter bears N. 54° W. twenty-three feet and eight inches, another maple eighteen inches in diameter, bears N. 75° 45′ E. thirty-seven feet six inches to a blaze on tree 2 feet 6 inches above the root, and a maple 15 inches in diameter bears S. 80° E. thirty-four feet six inches to a blaze and thirty-three feet and six inches to a chop in root, thence S. 81° 15′ E. nineteen and eighty-eight one hundredths (19.88) poles to a niggerhead stone, three feet long, planted for a corner, October, 1891, thence N. 8° 00′ E. passing a limestone which is a corner to lot four (4) at twenty-five feet two inches and continuing same course four poles farther to a limestone corner between said lot four (4) and said lot five (5) of the Hess partition, thence S. 88° 15′ E. along the line between said lots 4 and 5 forty-eight and twenty-five one hundredths (48.25) poles to a stone from which a sycamore 20″ in diameter bears S. 36° W. 17 links distant, thence down the Olentangy river and with the meanders thereof S. 65° 15′ W. forty-eight (48) poles, thence S. 33° 15′ W. thirty-two (32) poles, thence S. 8° 20′ W. forty.three (43) poles to a stone and buckeye N. E. corner to said E. M. Lisle land, thence N. 88° 15′ W. on the south line of said lot five (5) and along the center of Lane avenue Free turnpike one hundred eight and twenty-five one hundredths (108.25) poles to the place of beginning, containing sixty-nine acres more or less of land and water."

With the abstract you also sent a deed covering the same piece of property, wherein Maria Louisa Hess Brown and William Preston Brown, her husband, deed said property to the state of Ohio.

I have carefully examined said abstract, dated June 22, 1917, and find that the title to the premises described is in the name of Maria Louisa Hess Brown and that the deed submitted will convey a clear title to the state of Ohio, save and except for the taxes for 1917 which are now a lien on said premises, but as yet undetermined.

The deed submitted, if accepted, will fully convey the title to the state of Ohio, but in the form submitted, the said Maria Louisa Hess Brown covenanting that she is lawfully seized of the premises and that said premises are free and clear from all encumbrances whatsoever, the amount of the taxes for the year 1917 should be deducted from the purchase price, since the deed is dated June 22, 1917.

I also note in the abstract that the premises are now under lease to the Ohio state university for the term beginning April 1, 1915, to be fully completed and ended on March 31, 1918, and that in said lease there is a privilege of purchase for $61,000.00, payable in cash. Upon the acceptance of the deed this lease should be cancelled.

I am herewith returning you the abstract and deed submitted.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL—TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF CHESHIRE RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE: Bonds of Cheshire rural school district, Gallia county, Ohio, in the sum of $20,000.00, for the purpose of constructing and equipping new school building in said school district."

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Cheshire rural school district relating to the above bond issue, and find said proceedings to be in conformity to the provisions of the General Code relating to bond issues of this kind.

I am of the opinion that properly prepared bonds, duly signed by properly authorized officers of said school district will, when so signed, be valid and subsisting obligations of said school district.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

WEAK SCHOOL DISTRICT—BOND ISSUE TO FUND OR REFUND TUITION INDEBTEDNESS—WHEN SAME MAY BE INCLUDED IN DEFICIENCY FOR WHICH STATE AID IS ALLOWED.

A weak school district may include in its deficiency for which state aid is allowed, the principal and interest of bonds issued to fund or refund tuition indebtedness in a past year, if the bonds fall due in the year in which state aid is granted. (Sec. 7596-1 G. C., 107 O. L. 621.)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

HON. D. H. PEOPLES, Prosecuting Attorney, Pomeroy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of recent date requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"The board of education of Olive township, this county (Meigs) have an indebtedness of about $450.00, due teachers for the year 1916-17. Can the board issue bonds to pay this amount? If bonds are issued can the board still draw state aid?

"If bonds are issued must the same be submitted to the electors of said township? If the bonds are issued must the same be advertised?"

Your first question has been repeatedly answered in the opinions of this department under various administrations, all of which held that under section 5656 of the General Code indebtedness due teachers for teaching service actually rendered and not paid for may be funded by the issuance of bonds as a "valid existing obligation" of the district; such indebtedness being a valid obligation because by virtue of section 5661 of the General Code contracts with teachers are not required to be made under the sanction of the certificate that the funds are in the treasury, etc., as required for contracts generally by section 5660 G. C.

Your third question is of course answered by the mere reference to section 5656 of the General Code. Bonds therein authorized to be issued do not require the approval of the electors.

Your fourth question is answered by the general provisions of section 2294 G. C., as amended 106 O. L. 492, which reads as follows:

> "All bonds issued by boards of county commissioners, boards of education, township trustees, or commissioners of free turnpikes, shall be sold to the highest bidder after being advertised once a week for three consecutive weeks and on the same day of the week, in a newspaper having general circulation in the county where the bonds are issued, and, if the amount of bonds to be sold exceeds twenty thousand dollars, like publications shall be made in an additional newspaper having general circulation in the state. The advertisement shall state the total amount and denomination of bonds to be sold, how long they are to run, the rate of interest to be paid thereon, whether annually or semiannually, the law or section of law authorizing the issue, the day, hour and place in the county where they are to be sold."

It is to be observed that under other sections, such bonds should not be advertised for sale until they have been offered at par and par and accrued interest respectively to the commissioners of the district sinking fund (if any) and to the industrial commission of Ohio, and have been refused by them. (See G. C. Secs. 7619, 1465-58.)

Your second question as to whether, if bonds are issued, the board of education can still draw state aid, requires consideration of certain new legislation. I refer to the act found in 107 O. L. 621, and which amends the state aid law. This act was filed in the office of the secretary of state April 2, 1917, and is now a law, and will of course determine the right of a school district to receive state aid for the year 1917-18, about which I assume you are inquiring. One of the provisions of that law is that embodied in section 7596-1 which is new matter therein and which provides as follows:

> "Whenever a school district receives state aid, as is provided for in section 7595-1 of the General Code the board of education of such school district may refund any tuition indebtedness by issuing bonds, as is provided by section 5656 of the General Code. When such bonds are due, the amount and interest of the bonds shall be a part of the deficit for the current year, and shall be paid as state aid by the auditor fo state as is provided by section 7596 of the General Code."

Without this section I do not think there would be any question but that a board of education could have issued bonds under section 5656 without impairing its right to receive state aid, if otherwise qualified; but the principal and interest of the bonds, or any part thereof, would not have constituted a part of the deficiency as estimated for the year in which they fall due in accordance with the general provisions of the state aid law. Section 7596-1, as I have quoted it, however enlarges state aid by making the accumulated tuition fund deficiency of a previous year a part of the deficiency for which state aid may be granted for a succeeding year, if bonds have been issued, and are due in such year.

Your second question is therefore answered by the statement that not only may the board "still draw state aid" if bonds are issued, but that the amount and interest of the bonds may become a part of the deficiency of the district for the succeeding year in which they fall due and state aid may be drawn.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO RELEASE STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT FROM THE PURCHASE OF ROAD BUILDING MATERIALS—FOR GIVEN LENGTH OF TIME.

1. Under section 1224-1 G. C. there is no provision authorizing the Ohio board of administration to grant a release to the state highway department for the purchase of road building material for districts consisting of certain counties in the state and for a given length of time, such as a year.

2. The provisions of this section were meant to apply to each individual contract and force account, as improvements are taken up from time to time by the state highway department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 30, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "This department is just in receipt of the following letter from the Ohio board of administration in regard to the purchase of prison made road material from that board.
> "'You are hereby granted a release from the purchase of road building material, such as stone and brick, from the Ohio board of administration for the year 1917, for your division No. 4 consisting of the following counties: Ottawa, Sandusky, Seneca, Erie, Huron, Lorain, Medina, Cuyahoga, Lake, Geauga, Ashtabula.'
> "I respectfully request an opinion from you as to whether or not the above letter is a sufficient compliance with house bill No. 300 or whether a written request shall be made by this department upon the Ohio board of administration prior to the letting of each contract or the starting of each force account for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a main market road or intercounty highway or any part thereof."

The question about which you make inquiry arises under and by virtue of the provisions of section 1224-1 G. C., and in order to have a correct understanding of the matter it will be necessary for me to quote the section in full. Said section reads as follows: (107 O. L. 134.)

> "Sec. 1224-1. Before a contract is let or a force account is started for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a main market or intercounty highway or any part thereof, wherein standard paving brick or crushed stone are to be used, the state highway commissioner shall make a written request upon the Ohio board of administration to furnish prison-made brick or crushed stone for said proposed improvement, and said board shall furnish prison-made, standard brick or crushed stone, or so much thereof as it may be able, for such improvement. If the Ohio board of administration is able to furnish prison-made materials or a part thereof, of the kind and quantity required by the state highway commissioner, it shall notify the state highway commissioner of that fact and also of the price to be charged by the board for such materials. If the Ohio board of administration is able to furnish materials or a part thereof, of the kind and quantity required by the state highway commissioner, and if the price quoted by the board of such materials plus the freight charges to the railroad shipping point nearest the road on which it is proposed to use such materials, does not exceed the cost at which such materials may be elsewhere purchased, plus the freight charges to the railroad shipping point nearest the road on which such materials are to be used, it shall be the duty of the state highway commissioner to purchase such materials of the Ohio board of administration and make payment therefor out of any available funds of the department. And the amount of material so furnished by the said Ohio board of administration shall be set forth in the specification and estimate for such improvement. And in case the cost of the stone or paving brick furnished by the Ohio board of administration for any improvement amounts to more than the apportionment assumed by the state, then the county commissioners shall pay to said board of administration, in the manner provided by law, the difference between the part of the cost and the expense of said improvement apportioned to the state and the total cost of the stone and paving brick furnished by said board for the improvement."

I will now note the different steps logically set forth in the section above quoted:

1. Before a contract is let or a force account started for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a main market or intercounty highway, or any part thereof, the state highway commissioner must make a written request upon the Ohio board of administration to furnish prison-made brick or crushed stone for said proposed improvement.

2. If the Ohio board of administration has the kind and quantity of materials, or any part thereof, required by the state highway commissioner, it shall notify the state highway commissioner of that fact and the price at which the said board can furnish the material.

3. If the price quoted, plus the freight charges to the railroad shipping point nearest the road on which it is proposed to use such materials, does not exceed the cost at which such materials may be elsewhere purchased plus the freight charges to the railroad shipping point nearest the road on which such materials are to be used, it shall be the duty of the state highway commissioner to purchase such materials of the Ohio board of administration.

It will be noted that the provisions of this section apply to every contract entered into where standard paving brick or crushed stone are to be used. The only question is as to whether the board of administration has on hands brick or stone of the kind to be used and whether it can furnish the material as cheaply as it can be purchased elsewhere. If these two questions are answered in the affirmative, then it becomes the duty of said board to furnish the material and the duty of the state highway commissioner to purchase it.

In computing the cost of the material, the freight rate to the point nearest the particular improvement under contemplation must be taken into consideration, and before a contract is let or force account entered into, a request must be made upon the board of administration. From this it is evident that the provisions of section 1224-1 G. C. are meant to apply to each individual contract and each individual force account, and not to whole counties or whole districts for a given length of time, such as a year.

In the plan suggested by you in your communication, the board of administration would have no means of knowing whether it would have material on hands when certain roads in certain counties were to be built, or whether or not they could furnish it as cheaply as it could be purchased on the market.

Hence, answering your question specifically, it is my opinion there is no provision in law warranting such a course as that mapped out in your communication, and that the provisions of section 1224-1 G. C. were meant to apply to each individual contract and force account, as improvements may be taken up from time to time by your department.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

MILK—FROM TUBERCULAR CATTLE—PERSON MAY BE PROSECUTED WHO SELLS, ETC.—EVEN THOUGH SAME HAS BEEN PASTEURIZED.

A person who sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell or exchange, or sells or offers for sale or exchange, milk which is the product of cows afflicted with tuberculosis, may be prosecuted under section 12717 of the General Code, and the fact that the milk has been subjected to the process of pasteurization, or has been condensed, will in no wise prevent prosecutions under said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

HON. T. L. CALVERT, Chief of Dairy and Food Division, The Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 15, 1917, as follows:

> "There are several instances in the state where city authorities have refused to receive milk from certain dairies on account of their cattle having tuberculosis.
> "When this action is taken by these city authorities they sell to some other place such as creamery, condensery or milk plant.
> "I would be glad to have an opinion stating whether this would be permissible if pasteurization is used. The only sections I have found that bear on this subject are 5778-5, 12717, 12727 and 12725. I will appreciate very much an early opinion."

Section 5774 G. C. reads:

> "No person, within this state, shall manufacture for sale, offer for sale, sell or deliver, or have in his possession with intent to sell or deliver, a drug or article of food which is adulterated within the meaning of this chapter, or offer for sale, sell or deliver, or have in his possession with intent to sell or deliver, a drug or article of food which is misbranded within the meaning of this chapter."

Section 5778 G. C. provides in part:

> "Food, drink, confectionery or condiments are adulterated within the meaning of this chapter * * * (5) if it consists wholly, or in part, of a diseased, decomposed, putrid, infected, tainted or rotten animal or vegetable substance or article, whether manufactured or not or, IN THE CASE OF MILK, IF IT IS THE PRODUCT OF A DISEASED ANIMAL; * * *"

Section 12758 G. C. provides:

"Whoever manufactures for sale, offers for sale or sells a drug, article of food or flavoring extract which is adulterated or misbranded as the terms 'drugs,' 'food,' 'flavoring extract,' 'adulterated' and 'misbranded' are defined and described by law, or manufacture, offers or exposes for sale or delivers a drug or article of food and fails, upon demand and tender of its value, to furnish a sample thereof for analysis, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and, for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one hundred days, or both."

These sections were originally sections 1, 3 and 5 of an act passed March 20, 1884, 81 O. L. 67, entitled "An act to provide against the adulteration of food and drugs." These sections read in part:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio that no person shall, within this state, manufacture for sale, offer for sale or sell any drug or article of food which is adulterated within the meaning of this act.

"Sec. 3. An article shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of this act * * * (b) in the case of food; * * * (5) if it consists wholly or in part of a diseased, decomposed, putrid, infected, tainted or rotten animal or vegetable substance or article, whether manufactured or not, or, in the case of milk, if it is the product of a diseased animal * * *

"Sec. 5. Whoever refuses to comply upon demand with the requirements of section 4, and whoever violates any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars nor less than twenty-five dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one hundred nor less than thirty days, or both. * * *"

At this time there was no separate and distinct legislation upon the subject of impure or adulterated milk, but milk was included as an article of food and prosecutions accordingly maintained.

It will be noted that under this act milk was deemed to be adulterated if, among other things, it was found to be a product of a diseased animal. This provision of the act is retained in section 5778 G. C. and it would therefore seem that a sale of milk which is the product of a diseased animal would now be punishable under section 12758—which was originally section 5 of the act referred to. On April 10, 1889, five years after the passage of the act referred to, the legislature passed an act entitled "An act to regulate the sale of milk," 86 O. L. 229. Sections 1 and 4 of this act provided:

"Sec. 1. BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF OHIO, That whoever, by himself, or by his servant, or agent, or as the servant or agent of any other person, sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell or exchange, or exposes or offers for sale or exchange, adulterated milk, or milk to which water or any foreign substance has been added, or milk from diseased or sick cows, shall, for a first offense, be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars; for a second offense by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the work-house for not less than thirty nor more than sixty days; and for a subsequent offense, by fine of fifty dollars, and by imprisonment in the workhouse of not less than sixty nor more than ninety days.

"Sec. 4. In all prosecutions under this chapter if the milk is shown upon analysis to contain more than eighty-seven per cent. of watery fluid, or to contain not less than twelve and one-half per cent. solids, not less than one-fourth of which must be fat, it shall be deemed, for the purpose of this chapter, to be adulterated, and not of good standard quality, except during the months of May and June, when milk containing less than twelve per cent. of milk solids shall be deemed to be not of good standard quality."

This act has since been several times amended and supplemented and the two sections mentioned are now found as sections 12716 and 12717 G. C., which read:

"Section 12716. In all prosecutions under this chapter, if milk is shown upon analysis to contain more than eighty-eight per cent of watery fluid, or to contain less than twelve per cent of solids or three per cent of fats, it shall be deemed to be adulterated.

"Section 12717. Whoever sells, exchanges, or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell or exchange, or exposes or offers for sale or exchange, adulterated milk, or milk to which water or any foreign substance has been added, or milk from cows fed on wet distillery waste or starch waste, or from cows kept in a dairy or place which has been declared to be in an unclean or unsanitary condition by certificate of any duly constituted board of health or duly qualified health officer within the county in which said dairy is located, or from diseased or sick cows, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars; and, for a second offense, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the jail or workhouse not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days."

It might be contended that since the passage of the act of April 10, 1889, the act of March 20, 1884, has not applied to milk prosecutions, since the later act, being a special and more comprehensive act upon the subject of the regulation of milk sales, repealed by implication the former act in so far as that act regulated the sale of milk, and that therefore section 5778 G. C. no longer applies to milk prosecutions.

I do not think, however, that this question necessitates a discussion of this proposition since the remedy you seek can be had as well under the later act as the former. In other words, section 12717 affords you the same remedy as section 12758 would afford, if it applied.

It will be noted that section 12717 provides that "whoever sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession, with intent to sell or exchange, or exposes or offers for sale or exchange, * * * milk * * * from diseased or sick cows, shall be fined not less than $50.00 nor more than $200.00; and for a second offense shall be fined not less than $100.00 nor more than $300.00, or imprisoned in the jail or workhouse not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days."

The milk you refer to in your communication comes from cows afflicted with tuberculosis and is, therefore, milk from diseased or sick cows within the meaning of this section. The fact that it has been subjected to a process of pasteurization does not alter this fact.

Section 12727, to which you refer, reads:

> "Whoever sells, exchanges, or offers for sale, or exchange, unclean, impure, unhealthy or unwholesome milk shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars and imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than ninety days."

This section deals with the condition of the milk rather than with the condition of the animal and its provisions would hardly include milk purified by pasteurization even though such milk was originally the product of a diseased cow.

You also call my attention to section 12725 G. C., which reads:

> "Whoever manufactures, sells, exchanges, exposes or offers for sale or exchange, condensed milk unless it has been made from pure, clean, fresh, healthy, unadulterated and wholesome milk, from which the cream has not been removed and in which the proportion of milk solids shall be the equivalent of twelve per cent. of milk solids in crude milk, twenty-five per cent. of such solids being fat, and unless the package, can or vessel containing it is distinctly labeled, stamped or marked with its true name, brand, and by whom and under what name made, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and, for each subsequent offense, shall be fined, not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars and imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than ninety days."

This section was originally section 13 of an act passed May 17, 1886, 83 O. L. 178, entitled "An act to prevent adulteration of and deception in the sale of dairy products and supplementary to chapter 11, title 1, part 4 of the Revised Statutes." At this time the only definition of "adulterated milk" to be found in the statutes was that of section 3 of the act of March 20, 1884, to which reference has heretofore been made. As stated before, that definition applied only to that act so that at the time section 12725 G. C. was passed as section 13 of the act of May 17, 1886, the legislature had not determined what "adulterated" milk was for the purposes of that statute. Subsequently on April 10, 1889, an act was passed, as heretofore noted, entitled "An act to regulate the sale of milk." Section 4 of that act provided that:

> "In all prosecutions under this chapter, if the milk is shown upon analysis to contain more than eighty-seven per cent. of watery fluid, or to contain not less than twelve and one-half per cent. solids, not less than one-fourth of which must be fat, it shall be deemed, for the purpose of this chapter, to be adulterated, and not of good standard, quality, except during the months of May and June, when milk containing less than twelve per cent. of milk solids shall be deemed to be not of good standard quality."

The words "this chapter," as used in that act, undoubtedly would have been held to mean "this act" up until the formation of the General Code, and would therefore not have referred to section 12725 G. C., which was originally section 13 of the act of 1886. However, in the formation of the General Code the legislature saw fit to place section 4 of the act of 1889, defining adulterated milk, in the same chapter as section 13 of the act of 1889, prohibiting the manufacture of condensed milk from "adulterated milk," the former section becoming section 12716 G. C. and the latter becoming section 12715 G. C.

The question then arises, was this act upon the part of the legislature, in so placing these sections, sufficient to make the definition of adulterated milk in section 12716 apply to the word "adulterated" as used in section 12725? If it was, then the fact that milk is from cows afflicted with tuberculosis in itself is not sufficient to make the milk "adulterated" under section 12725, since it is clear that the milk could contain less than 87 per cent of watery fluid or more than 12 per cent. of solids, or 3 per cent. of fats, even though such milk was the product of a diseased cow. If the act of the codifying commission, in so placing the sections referred to, is not sufficient to indicate a legislative intention to apply the definition of section 12716 to section 12725, then there would be no definition in the statutes of "adulterated milk" for the purposes of section 12725 G. C. and the ordinary legal meaning of the word would have to be given it in this section. This word has been defined as follows:

> "The act of corrupting or debasing; the act of mixing something impure or spurious with something pure or genuine, or an inferior article with a superior one of the same kind. See 16 M. & W. 644; State v. Norton, 24 N. C. 40."

Giving this meaning to the word "adulterated" as used in section 12725, the fact that the milk was the product of a diseased cow is not in itself sufficient to make it adulterated, since this definition, as well as the definition outlined in section 12716, deals with the condition of the milk rather than with the condition of the animal producing it. However, I am inclined to the view that even though no prosecution, based solely upon the fact that the milk is a product of a cow afflicted with tuberculosis, could be maintained under section 12725, yet such prosecutions could be had under section 12717. This prosecution would not be for the sale or the having in possession of condensed milk, but for the sale or the having in possession of milk "from diseased or sick cows," since even though the milk has been condensed, it is still milk from "diseased or sick cows" and, as stated before, the fact that it has been subject to the process of pasteurization does not affect this fact.

Anwering, then, your communication, I am of the opinion that a person who sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell or exchange, or sells or offers for sale or exchange, milk which is the product of cows afflicted with tuberculosis, may be prosecuted under section 12717 of the General Code, and the fact that the milk has been subjected to the process of pasteurization, or has been condensed, will in no wise prevent prosecutions under said section. In other words, it is a crime in this state to sell, or have in possession, milk which is the product of a tubercular cow, even though such milk has been pasteurized or condensed.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

REGISTRATION—STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—MAY ACCEPT SAME EVEN THOUGH APPLICANT HAD COMMENCED TWENTY-SIX WEEKS' COURSE BEFORE LAW WENT INTO EFFECT.

The state board of embalming examiners is authorized to accept registration after section 1342, as amended in 107 O. L. 656, became effective, even though the applicant was then pursuing the twenty-six weeks' course prescribed in said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

HON. B. G. JONES, President Ohio State Board of Embalming Examiners, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Recently you sent me a letter received by you from Hon. Charles O. Dhonau, president of the Cincinnati college of embalming, with the request for me to advise you as to whether or not your board had the right or authority to take the action desired by the college. The letter of Mr. Dhonau is in effect as follows:

> "Mr. Jones advised me several days ago that the new law would go into effect July 1st. (Referring to H. B. 224.)
> "There will probably be one or two students to matriculate for the 26 weeks' course in the middle of May.
> "If I notify you within five days after they matriculate, in accordance with the recommendations I made to the board, would the board co-operate and register these men for the November examination?
> "If the board will not do this for us we will probably lose the entire summer for Ohio 26 weeks' men.
> "I realize, of course, that the board would have no legal authority to register a man on the 15th of May, but in order to help things to keep on running in the proper manner, they might recognize this condition unofficially and make the proper arrangements.
> "Since the November and May examinations were approved by the schools of the state, the other schools would approve this suggestion because it would affect them in the same way."

The provisions of law relative to this matter are found in H. B. 224, which was filed in the office of the secretary of state on April 3, 1917. The bill was presented to the governor but did not receive his signature. However, without objection or approval, it was filed in the office of the secretary of state, as above stated.

Section 16 of article II of the constitution provides in part:

> "* * * If a bill shall not be returned by the governor within ten days, Sundays excepted, after being presented to him, it shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the general assembly by adjournment prevents its return; in which case, it shall become a law unless, within ten days after such adjournment, it shall be filed by him, with his objections in writing, in the office of the secretary of state. * * *"

The bill, therefore, became a law on April 3, 1917, and became effective on the ninety-first day thereafter, to wit, July 3, 1917. Therefore, the law was not in effect on the 15th day of May, being the time specified in the letter of Mr. Dhonau. Said law amended section 1342 G. C. (107 O. L. 656) to read in part as follows:

> "Every person desiring to engage in the practice of embalming or the preparation of the dead for burial, cremation or transportation, in the state of Ohio, shall make a written application to the state board of embalming examiners for registration, giving such information as the said board may, by regulation, require for such registration. * * * If the said board shall find the facts set forth in the application to be true, the said board shall issue to said applicant a certificate of registration. Before a registered applicant can apply for and take an examination in the practice of embalming or preparing for burial, cremation or transportation, the body of any dead person in the state of Ohio, said applicant shall have completed to the satisfaction and approval of the said board, a course consisting of at least twenty-six weeks of studies in the science of embalming, disinfection and sanitation in a regular school of embalming, recognized by said board or shall have had at least two years of practical experience * * * All applications for a license to practice embalming and the preparation of the dead for burial, cremation or transportation in this state, must be made to the state board of embalming examiners in writing and contain. * * * Each application must be accompanied by a fee of ten dollars and the certificate of registration. If after the state board of embalming examiners are satisfied that the applicant has qualified as set forth in this section, the said board shall cause the said applicant to appear before them and be examined. * * *"

While it is true that before section 1342 became effective there was no provision of law for the certificate of registration and consequently the board would be without authority to issue any certificate until the law became effective, nevertheless, a careful examination of section 1342 will disclose that there is no specific time mentioned within which registration must be applied for and, furthermore, there is no provision in the law that the registered applicant shall complete the twenty-six weeks of study only after registration, the law simply providing that before a registered applicant can take an examination "said applicant shall have completed to the satisfaction and approval of the said board" the twenty-six weeks. While it may have been the intention of the legislature to require that a person desiring to become an embalmer in this state shall first register, then take the course prescribed and then make application to take the examination, the law itself is not sufficiently explicit to show such to be the fact.

In view of that fact, I can see no objection in your board permitting registration after section 1342 as amended became effective, even though the applicant for registration shall have already taken part of the twenty-six weeks' course prescribed, especially so as no injustice would ensue to the state.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—VALIDITY OF BONDS ISSUED TO PURCHASE MOTOR TRUCKS FOR TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS.

A board of education is not authorized under sections 7625, 7626 and 7627 G. C., to issue bonds for the purpose of purchasing automobile trucks with which to transport pupils of the school district, and when such purpose is included within the purposes of a bond issue by the board of education under said sections of the General Code, such issue of bonds is invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

> "In Re: Bonds of Belle Center village school district, Logan county, Ohio, in the sum of $15,000.00, for the purpose of installing heating and ventilating, plumbing and drainage system in school building, making necessary repairs thereto, and for the purpose of procuring automobile trucks for the purpose of transporting pupils.

I am herewith returning to you, without approval, transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Belle Center village school district relative to the above bond issue.

The board of education of this school district has provided for the issue of these bonds in said sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000.00), pursuant to an affirmative vote of the electors of the school district on a submission of the question to said electors by the board of education, under the provisions of section 7625 G. C.

The resolution of the board of education under section 7625 G. C. designates the purposes of said bond issue as follows:

> "That it is necessary for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district that the school building of Belle Center, Ohio, be repaired and furnished, and that automobile trucks for the transportation of pupils of said district be purchased."

This being so, and the bond issue being a single proposition covering the purpose of procuring automobile trucks, as well as the purpose of equipping and repairing the school building, the bond issue fails for want of legal authority in the school district to submit the proposition in this form to the electors of the school district.

I have diligently endeavored to find something in the way of legal authority which might justify my approval of this bond issue in an amount sufficient to provide for equipping and furnishing the school building projects which the board of education might legally have provided for under the authority of said section 7625 G. C. This I have taken extra pains to do for the reason that I recognized that the condition confronting the board of education at Belle Center is one which in every sense is an emergency. The equipment and repairs which the board of education by means of this bond issue sought to furnish and make have been ordered by you through the department of workshops and factories, and some means must be found to make the necessary repairs and furnish the necessary equipment to carry out the order which you have made. However, I have not been able to find anything in the way of authority which would sanction my approval of any part of the bond issue, as no means are available for ascertaining what portion of said bond issue was issued for purposes within the purview and authority of section 7625 G. C., and what part thereof was issued for automobile trucks.

In support of the conclusions above reached by me I note the recent decision of the court of common pleas of Crawford county, Ohio, in the case of Shell v. Bevier, et al., where under substantially similar circumstances as to the purposes for which bonds were issued by a board of education, the court enjoined the issue of such bonds for the reason that among the purposes of the bond issue as submitted to the electors and mentioned in the resolution of the board of education, was the purpose of providing money for the transportation of pupils.

On the considerations above noted I feel that I have no discretion to advise you otherwise than to disapprove the bond issue, and to advise you not to purchase same.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COMMISSION FOR THE BLIND—AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY PERSON TO SELL PRODUCTS OF ITS WARDS.

The commission for the blind has authority under General Code section 3666 to employ persons to sell the products of the industry of their said wards and to pay for making such sales either by salary or commission or by a combination of both methods.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1917.

The Ohio Commission for the Blind, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This department is in receipt of the following request for an opinion:

> "The Ohio commission for the blind respectfully requests your opinion relative to the paying of commissions upon sales to employes of this board.
> "Under section 1363, it will be observed that the object of the commission is 'to assist the blind in finding employment, and to teach them industries which may be followed in their homes.' Further, according to section 1366, the commission is authorized 'to devise means for the sale and distribution of the products made by the blind in workshops.'
> "In the spring of 1912, the commission established a trade school for the blind, a portion of which might be considered a workshop or factory—in other words, a broom-making industry is carried on. Apprentices are admitted and given instruction in the broom trade and when they are competent to make a salable article they are paid wages or encouraged to return to their homes and establish a small broom-making plant of their own, the commission helping them to dispose of their product. Other blind men, who are living at home, are being encouraged to sell brooms, the proceeds from which is as definite a form of help to them as the wages paid to those working in the commission's shop.
> "Another form of industrial aid, which the commission is giving is chiefly to blind women who live in their own homes. Over 650 of these are being provided with raw material which they work up into products which then have to be disposed of. One of the most difficult problems which has confronted every organization for the blind in the world, which aims to give employment to the sightless, is that of finding a market for the things the blind make.

"The Ohio commission for the blind has tried three methods of selling the work of the blind:

"1. Through the co-operation of women's clubs, churches, etc., sales have been held in many towns throughout the state. The expense of such sales is not very large but on the other hand, the proceeds unfortunately are small and have not warranted much effort on our part.

"2. Prominent merchants in Akron, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, Springfield and Youngstown have contributed counter space in their stores and have allowed the commission to sell the blind people's products, the commission paying the salary of the clerks, and the stores holding themselves responsible for 'charge' accounts and delivery of goods. This method of selling has been fairly satisfactory although the commission feels that it is not the ideal as it has cost 33 1-3 per cent. of the total sales to defray the salary of the clerks, and furthermore it has not provided us with a market for all of the output of these blind women.

"3. The most recent method of disposing of the work has been to sell certain grades of articles at wholesale to merchants. In this plan, we find that the cost of disposing of the products will probably be less than any other method, and furthermore, the commission is able to give more work to the blind because the articles thus sold require less technical ability to make than those sold over the counters operated by the commission.

"The commission has sent its merchandise to these various stores by means of an agent who has been paid a salary of $75.00 a month and traveling expenses. As this phase of our work increased the commission found itself confronted with the fact that it had to compete with selling agents who were receiving a salary and a small compensation on repeat orders.

"The commission was confronted with the problem of paying more salary to its traveling sales agent or adopting the accepted plan of the mercantile world of granting a small commission on repeat orders in addition to the present salary. Recognizing the desirability of handling this part of our work on a basis similar to that pursued by other merchants, we took up the matter with the budget commissioner and finance committee and were instructed to pay this commission from our rotary fund and to make the effort to charge enough on our sale price of goods to cover the commission. In all the discussions relative to this matter, no one suggested that this might be legally impossible.

"We are presenting this matter to you in the hope that the law creating the commission may be such that it will be possible to operate under the policy of 'salary and commission' which is in vogue in other business concerns."

The statutes creating your commission and extending its authority and providing for the conduct of its duties are entitled, "Ohio Commission for the Blind," and consist of sections 1360 to 1369, inclusive. The particular section governing the matter concerning which you inquire is section 1366, which is as follows:

"The commission for the blind may establish, equip and maintain schools for industrial training and workshops for the employment of suitable blind persons, pay the employes suitable wages and devise means for the sale and distribution of the products thereof. * * *"

The section recognizes the well known condition to manufacturing, and that is that to make it successful it must be supplemented by sale and distribution of the product for prices sufficient to cover all expense and cost of production. It, therefore, does not simply authorize the sale of products, such authority would be implied, it is not at all necessary to express it, but the authority given, instead of simply to sell, is to "devise means for the sale and distribution of the products thereof."

A simple authority to sell would involve the means of making sales. This section goes further than that and permits you to devise means for the sale and distribution, and would indicate the legislative intent that you might resort to other or different methods of effecting such sale than the ordinary commercial methods. However, the means indicated in your inquiry are not unusual, but are the ordinary considerations and inducements for salesmen in the commercial world. There would, therefore, seem to be no doubt of your authority to make sale of the products manufactured in the schools for industrial training and workshops for the employment of suitable blind persons, as provided in section 1366, in the manner suggested, which has the approval of the budget commissioner and the finance committee, and you are instructed that you are fully authorized by law to do so.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR—HOW DEPUTIES PAID WHEN ACTING AS TAX MAP DRAFTSMAN—OTHER DEPUTIES—HOW PAID—DUTY TO RUN LOT LINES IN MUNICIPALITY.

1. When the county surveyor acts as tax map draftsman, his deputies are provided and paid under the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C.

2. When the county surveyor performs duties under sections 6442 to 6822, inclusive, or under sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, G. C., his deputies are provided under the provisions of section 2788 G. C. and their expenses are paid under the provisions of section 2786 G. C.

3. Under the conditions of section 2807 et seq. G. C., the county surveyor may be required to run lot lines at the request of an owner or person therein interested, whether the municipality has a civil engineer or not, and the fees therefor must, under the provisions of section 7181 G. C., be paid into the county treasury. There is no provision of statute as to subdividing tracts of land in municipalities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1917.

HON. ROGER D. HAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 29, 1917, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "The county surveyor has requested me to get an opinion from your office as soon as possible as to his duty under the White-Mulcahy Am. H. B. No. 300. This law went into effect June 26, 1917 and he has been called upon to perform some duties in reference to the following query:
> "When the county surveyor is required to perform duties under section

7181 as amended, in what manner are the deputies, their expenses and means of conveyance to be paid? Who will be held responsible for the collection of the above mentioned expense?

"Does the law give a lot owner within a municipality the right to require the county surveyor to locate the lines of any lot or subdivide any tract of land within such municipality under the provision of section 7181 as amended?

"In a city where no city engineer is employed, does the preceding paragraph apply?"

Your first question has to do with the matter of deputies for the county sursurveyor, in reference to his duties under and by virtue of section 7181 G. C. as found in the law which took effect on June 28, 1917. In order to answer this question intelligently, it will be necessary for me to differentiate the duties to be performed thereunder.

I will first note the duties the county surveyor has to perform under and by virtue of his position as tax map draftsman. Said section, in so far as it applies to these duties, reads as follows (107 O. L. 110):

"* * * The county surveyor shall be the county tax map draftsman, but shall receive no additional compensation for performing the duties of such position. * * *"

The duties he performs as tax map draftsman are not performed as county surveyor, but as county tax map draftsman; that is, virtually, two positions are held by the same person, namely, county surveyor and county tax map draftsman.

In so far as his deputies are concerned for this position, the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C. will control. If he needs a deputy in the performance of these duties, the county commissioners may fix the number and pay of the same, which is paid out of the county treasury, as other county officers are paid.

I went into this matter very fully in an opinion rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices under date of June 7, 1917 (No. 353), a copy of which I am enclosing for your information.

The other duties to be performed by the county surveyor under the provisions of section 7181 G. C. he performs as county surveyor and he has the right and authority to appoint the deputies he may need for said duties, under the provisions and limitations of section 2788 G. C., which reads in part as follows:

"Sec. 2788. The county surveyor shall appoint such assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes as he deems necessary for the proper performance of the duties of his office, and fix their compensation, but compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount fixed therefor by the county commissioners or allowed by a judge of the court of common pleas of the county. After being so fixed such compensation shall be paid to such persons in monthly installments from the general fund of the county upon the warrant of the county auditor. * * *"

You make inquiry also as to the expenses of the deputies of the county surveyor under said section as amended. The expenses of the deputies of county surveyor are provided for in section 2786 G. C., the latter part of which reads as follows:

"The county surveyor and each assistant and deputy shall be allowed his reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties."

This provision would apply to the additional help which the county surveyor might need under and by virtue of his duties set out in section 7181 G. C.

Your section question goes to the point as to whether the county surveyor, under the provisions of section 7181 G. C. as amended, is required to locate lot lines or subdivide lands when the same are located within a municipality. There is no change made in the amended section, so far as the duties of the county surveyor along this line are concerned. The only change is that under the provisions of the law as amended, the county surveyor must pay all fees and allowances for the work he performs under and by virtue of sections 2807 to 2814 inc. G. C., into the county treasury; while under the law as it originally stood he was entitled to retain such fees and allowances as an additional compensation over and above the regular salary allowed to him by law. The part of section 7181 G. C. which is applicable to this question reads as follows:

> "Sec. 7181. * * * When the county surveyor performs service in connection with ditches or drainage works under the provisions of sections 6442 to 6822 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio, he shall charge and collect the per diem allowances or other fees therein provided for, and shall pay all such allowances and fees monthly into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund. The county surveyor shall do likewise when he performs services under the provisions of sections 2807 to 1814 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio."

Hence, to answer your question, we must turn to the provisions of sections 2807 to 2814 inc. G. C. and especially to the provisions of said section 2807 which reads in part as follows:

> "Sec. 2807. Any person owning or being interested in a tract of land within the state, any corner, or line of which has become lost or uncertain, or is in danger of becoming lost or uncertain, by the removal, destruction, defacement or perishing condition of any corner, witness or line tree, or monument, or other cause, may call on the surveyor of the county where the land lies to make a survey thereof, and cause to be planted at any corner or corners, or at proper places in any line or lines thereof, a stone or post, noting particularly the situation and condition of the original corner trees, or monuments called for in the original survey, if found, and of all other trees or monuments, which it may be important or advisable to note, and of all the places of notoriety, over or by which the lines of such survey pass. * * *"

The provisions of this section are evidently broad enough to include lots or lines located in a municipality and it is my opinion that the county surveyor would be compelled to perform the duties mentioned in section 2807 G. C., whether or not the lands or lots are located in a municipality. You inquire, however, whether he would be compelled to subdivide tracts of land. I find no provision in said sections requiring the county surveyor to subdivide tracts of land.

Your third question has to do with the matter as to whether the county surveyor would be compelled to perform the duties under sections 2807 to 2814 inc. G. C., provided the land is located in a municipality and that the municipality has a civil engineer. In order to answer this question it will be necessary to note the provisions of section 4327 G. C., which reads as follows:

> "Sec. 4327. The director of public service may establish such subdepartment as may be necessary and determine the number of superintendents, Deputies, inspectors, engineers, harbor masters, clerks, laborers and other persons, necessary for the execution of the work and the performance of the duties of this department."

and the provisions of section 4366 G. C. which reads as follows:

"Sec. 4366. In each municipal corporation having a fire engineer, civil engineer or superintendent of markets such officers shall each perform the duties prescribed by this title and such other duties not incompatible with the nature of his office as the council by ordinance requires, and shall receive for his services such compensation by fees, salary or both as is provided by ordinance."

Under the provisions of these sections, if the city has a civil engineer, his duties are such as are prescribed in chapter 8, subdivision 2, division 5 of title XII, part I, of which said sections are a part, and such duties as may be given him by ordinance. There are no provisions in chapter 8 which give the city civil engineer the exclusive authority to locate lines and corners of lots located in a municipality, and of course the provisions of an ordinance giving him authority to run lot lines and subdivide tracts of land could not set aside the plain provisions of a statute making it the duty of a county surveyor to do the same.

Hence, answering your questions specifically:

1. When the county surveyor acts as tax map draftsman, his deputies are provided and paid under the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552 G. C.

2. When the county surveyor performs duties under sections 6442 to 6822 inc. or under sections 2807 to 2814 inc. G. C., his deputies are provided under the provisions of section 2788 G. C. and their expenses are paid under the provisions of section 2786 G. C.

3. Under the conditions of sections 2807 et seq. G. C., the county surveyor may be required to run lot lines at the request of an owner or person therein interested, whether the municipality has a civil engineer or not, and the fees therefor must, under the provisions of section 7181 G. C., be paid into the county treasury.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

BONDS—INDUCEMENT OFFERED BY CONTRACTOR TO BOND BUYER TO PURCHASE BONDS OF TAXING DISTRICT—LEGALITY OF SUCH TRANSACTION.

In the absence of any other facts, if a person of his own free will and accord enters into an understanding, verbal or otherwise, with a bond buyer to the effect that he will pay the bond buyer a certain premium out of his own pocket if such bond buyer purchases the bonds of a taxing district which were legally offered for sale, and if later on said person who paid said premium is awarded the contract at public letting for the improvement to be paid for out of the funds derived from said bond issue, neither the act of said person in offering said inducement for said bond sale nor the act of the bond buyer in accepting it is illegal; nor is said bond sale or the letting of said contract contrary to law, although the surrounding facts and circumstances should be carefully examined to ascertain if there was any fraud in the letting of said work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1917.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication under date of June 29, 1917, in which you ask my opinion on the following request:

> "In view of the present conditions and the difficulty encountered by certain taxing districts in selling bonds, also the fact that the rate of interest on certain county bonds is limited by statute to five per cent., also in view of the fact that where bids are received for an improvement contract in the regular course of events as set forth by law, it would be impossible for any contractor to know that he was to receive the contract until certification of funds being in the treasury could be made:
> QUERY: If a contractor of his own free will and accord entered into an understanding, verbal or written, with a bond buyer that if such bond buyer purchases the bonds of a taxing district which were offered for sale in compliance with the laws of the state, to the effect that he, the contractor, will pay the bond buyer one point, being one per cent. of the face value of the bonds, is such act of the contractor, or bond buyer, or both, if consumated, illegal?"

I presume from the statement of facts contained in your request that the word "contractor" therein refers to a prospective contractor, and not to one who sustains that present relationship to the subdivision in question as to the particular work to be done with the funds derived from the sale of said bonds. However, in so far as the answer to your question is concerned, I do not think that it makes any difference whether the person concerning whom you write is an actual contractor who has entered into a binding agreement, or whether his status is prospective in character.

I have examined the provisions of the General Code with respect to the rights and duties of contractors, and do not find any prohibition against such an arrangement as you describe. It might be that the person in question is willing to take the chance that he will be the low bidder when the contract is let after the bonds are sold, and for that reason is desirous of seeing a speedy sale of the bonds made. So far as the understanding between the bond buyer and the prospective contractor is concerned, it is a private matter pure and simple, since none of the public funds are involved in any way, nor can the public subdivision issuing the bonds be bound or obligated to any extent by this extraneous agreement between third parties, and the public has ample protection through the public sale of the bonds and public letting of the contract.

However, such an arrangement should cause you to scrutinize very closely the facts surrounding all transactions between the public officials of the particular subdivision and the person who paid the premium to the bond buyer, in the event that he should be the successful bidder, since it is possible that the conduct of the contractor with respect to the bond sale might be a factor in showing that there was a secret understanding between the officials and the contractor in the letting of the work. Still it must be understood that the facts you state by themselves would not prove anything in the way of criminal liability on the part of either the bond buyer or the prospective contractor; but if after the contract was let it was discovered that there were indications of an improper and illegal relationship between the representatives of the public and the successful bidder, this arrangement might tend to show the existence of such a condition.

I therefore advise you that in the absence of any other facts, if a person of his own free will and accord enters into an understanding, verbal or written, with a bond buyer to the effect that he will pay the bond buyer a certain premium out of his own pocket if such bond buyer purchases the bonds of a taxing district which are legally offered for sale, and if later on said person who paid said premium is awarded the contract at public letting for the improvement to be paid for out of the funds derived from said bond issue, neither the act of said person in offering said inducement for said bond sale nor the act of the bond buyer in accepting it is illegal, nor is said bond sale or letting of said contract contrary to law, although the surrounding facts and circumstances should be carefully examined to ascertain if there was any fraud in the letting of said work.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH MCGHEE,
Attorney-General.

PHYSICIAN—FALSE STATEMENT TO INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—TO RECEIVE ALLOWANCE FOR MEDICAL SERVICES—ALLOWANCE GRANTED—GUILTY OF OBTAINING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENSES.

If a physician makes a false statement of facts to the industrial commission as to the cause of the disability of an employe under the provisions of the workmen's compensation act, with the intent thereby to receive an allowance for medical services to which he knows he is not entitled under the law, and such false and fraudulent representations are relied upon by said industrial commission and by reason thereof the said physician obtains an allowance for medical services and receives a warrant therefor, said physician is guilty of the crime set forth in section 13104 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1917.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of recent date in which you make request for my opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "Your opinion is desired as to whether the following facts are such as to constitute a case for criminal prosecution:

"Under date of October 10, 1916, there was filed with the commission report of an alleged injury on one of the blank forms furnished by the commission for this purpose. The report was signed by the employe, claiming to have been injured, and set forth the following facts as to the nature and extent of the injury:

"'First finger on left hand swollen and pains, and has sore on first joint of same.'

"Blank forms of report were forwarded to the attending physician named on the employe's report, and the medical report filed by the attending physician contains the following description as to the nature of the alleged injury:

"'Forefinger of right hand burned—infected.'

"An investigation was made by the department, which developed the fact that claimant had a felon on the first finger of his left hand, and that this was the sole cause of his disability. There is no evidence whatever of any burn, nor does the employer have any record of the employe receiving any injury in the course of his employment.

"There seems to be no question but that the report of the attending physician was prepared for the purpose of fraudulently deceiving the commission as to the nature of the condition causing disability, so that the physician could collect fee for the treatment of a condition which ordinarily would not come within the scope of the compensation act.

"Will you please let us have your opinion as to whether there is any proceeding by which the physician could be prosecuted for the fraud thus practiced?"

In addition to the foregoing I am informed that the application for the allowance of the claim set forth in the above mentioned communication was passed on favorably upon hearing, and on the basis of said physician's report, which you state was false, an allowance in the amount of $11.00 for medical services rendered the claimant was made to him and the warrant for said above mentioned sum was turned over to said doctor by the said industrial commission and received by him.

Section 13104 of the General Code reads, in part, as follows:

"Whoever, by false pretense and with intent to defraud, obtains anything of value * * * if the value of the property * * * so procured * * * is thirty-five dollars or more, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years, or, if less than that sum, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than sixty days, or both."

Four elements are essential to constitute the crime set forth in the above quoted section. They are stated in State v. Williams, 6 O. N. P. n. s. 406 (which was affirmed by the supreme court in 77 O. S. 468) in the following language:

"First. There must be a false representation as to an existing fact or a past event.

"Second. There must be an intent to defraud.

"Third. There must be a reliance upon such fraudulent representations.

"Fourth. Something of value must be obtained thereby."

It is necessary, then, to determine whether the four essential elements which must be present to make up the offense of obtaining something of value by false pretense exist in the present case which you have presented for my consideration.

The first requirement, that there must be a false representation as to an existing fact or a past event, is certainly met by proof of the fact that the physician signed a written statement to the effect that the forefinger of claimant's right hand was burned and became infected, which said statement you advise was false and untrue.
