of the county treasury in the same manner as the salary of county officials is paid. In addition thereto, the county highway superintendent and his assistants, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury, their actual, necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging."

Under the above provision of the statute the county highway superintendent and those assistants whose appointment and compensation are authorized by said provision of said statute, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury their actual and necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging.

This provision of the statute within the limitations therein prescribed covers the actual and necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging, of the county highway superintendent and his assistants, when engaged in the performance of all the duties which are by law required of said county highway superintendent except those duties prescribed by section 212 of said amended senate bill No. 125.

As to those expenses incurred under authority of the above provision of section 7181, G. C., and within the limitations therein prescribed, I am of the opinion that such expenses, when properly itemized and approved by the county highway superintendent, may be paid by the county treasurer on the warrant of the county auditor.

It is evident, however, that your inquiry is more particularly directed to the authority for the payment of expenses incurred by the county highway superintendent, his assistants, inspectors and superintendends, in the performance of those duties required by the provisions of said section 212 of said amended senate bill No. 125, being section 1219 of the General Code.

This section relates to the surveys and plans of the proposed improvement of an inter-county highway, made by the state highway commissioner with the cooperation of the commissioners of a county or the trustees of one or more townships within said county, under authority of section 177 and related sections of said amended senate bill No. 125, and the division of the expense of making such surveys and plans and the expense of supervision and inspection of said improvement, and provides as follows:

"Section 212. The chief highway engineer may direct the county highway superintendent to make the necessary surveys and plans for the proposed highway improvement. The expense of such surveys and plans shall be equally divided between the state and county, except in cases where the improvement is being made on application of the township trustees, in which case the expense of such plans and surveys shall be equally divided between the state and township. The county highway superintendent, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, may employ such assistatnts as are necessary to prepare such plans and surveys, and also, with like approval, such superintendents and inspectors as may be necessary in the construction of said improvement. Each of said assistants, superintendents and inspectors shall receive such pay as the chief highway engineer may determine. All work in connection with such improvement shall be done under the direction of the chief highway engineer. The expense of supervision and inspection of said improvement shall be apportioned on the same basis as the cost of construction."

Under the above provision of the statute it will be observed that the expense of making the surveys and plans for the improvement therein referred to is equally divided between the state and county, or in case the improvement is being made on the application of the township trustees said expense is equally divided between the state and the township, while the expense of supervision and inspection of such improvement is to be apportioned on the same basis as the cost of construction.

In my opinion the term "expense" as used in the above provisions of section 1219, G. C., covers actual and necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging.

As to the actual and necessary traveling expenses of the county highway superintendent and those assistants employed by him with the approval of the chief highway engineer, incurred in making said plans and surveys, I am of the opinion that one-half of said expense, when properly itemized and when approved by the county highway superintendent and the chief highway engineer or the state highway commissioner, should be paid from the state treasury on the warrant of the state auditor and the remaining one-half of said expense when properly itemized and approved as aforesaid should be paid from the county treasury or township treasury, as the case may be, on the requisition of the state highway commissioner and on the warrant of the proper official of said county or township, and that the actual and necessary traveling expenses of the county highway superintendent and such inspectors and superintendents as are employed by him with the approval of the chief highway engineer, incurred in the supervision and inspection of the aforesaid improvement, when properly itemized and approved as aforesaid, should be paid by the state, county and township in the manner above prescribed and on the same basis as the cost of construction.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY AUDITOR'S REPORT—PUBLICATION IN GERMAN NEWSPAPER—MUST BE PRINTED IN GERMAN LANGUAGE.

The county auditor's report, when published in a German newspaper as prescribed by section 2508, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 488, must be printed in the German language and this requirement obtains under all similar statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of September 29, 1915, enclosing the following inquiry:

> "Where any law requires or permits the publication of a legal advertisement in a German newspaper, would it be legal if said advertisement, so printed in a German newspaper, was published in the English language?"

Since receiving your inquiry aforesaid, further communication from you discloses that the particular case under which your question arises, has reference to the publication of the county auditor's report, as prescribed under section 2508,

G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 488. It appears in this instance the publisher of a newspaper printed in the German language is claiming the right to publish said report in said newspaper in the English language.

I have no hesitancy in saying that such publication would be wholly foreign to the purpose of this and other laws requiring publication of legal matters in German newspapers, and not in compliance with either the letter or spirit of the law.

The section in question provides, among other things, that said report, in addition to other publications, provided for, "shall be published in the same manner in one newspaper, if there be such, printed in the county in the German language and having a bona fide general circulation of not less than six hundred among the inhabitants of such county speaking that language."

It must be observed, before discussing these provisions, that it is the settled rule in this country, when legal notices are required to be published, an English newspaper is always intended unless it be expressed otherwise. This is so because all legal records of this land are required to be and are kept in the English language.

This general rule has been adopted by the courts of this state and was first announced in the case of City of Cincinnati v. Bickett, et al., 26 O. S., 49, the third branch of the syllabus of which reads as follows:

> "Where a statute of the state requires a publication to be made in a 'newspaper,' in the absence of any provision to the contrary, a paper published in the English language is to be understood as intended, and a publication in a paper printed in any other language is not a compliance with the statute."

This case was followed in 53 O. S., 346, wherein the court had under consideration the publication, in a German newspaper, of the annual report of the county commissioners, which was covered at that time by the provisions of section 917, Revised Statutes, being the same section, in its amended form now under consideration. Under the provisions of said section 917 at that time, the court held that it did not afford authority for either publishing said report in a German newspaper or paying for the same.

Under this application of the general law, any exception therefrom must be by express authority of the legislature, and when so provided must be given a literal meaning and application.

Referring now to the provision above quoted, it is apparent the legislature intended the publication made under said provisions to be printed in the German language. That its purpose was definite in this regard is shown by the provision not only that the newspaper should be printed in that language, but that it shall have a circulation of not less than six hundred among those speaking the language. The plain purpose thus expressed is to furnish a certain class of the inhabitants of a given county this report in their language.

For the foregoing considerations, I therefore hold that in the case presented, and in similar cases where legal publications are directed by law to be made in German newspapers, said publication must be printed in said newspaper in the German language. This conclusion, I think, is in harmony with the remarks of the court in State ex rel. v. Lorain, 12 N. P., (n. s.) 636.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF HEALTH—LOCAL OFFICE OF REGISTRAR VACANT—CITY BOARD MAY BE COMPELLED BY MANDAMUS TO APPOINT QUALIFIED PERSON TO FILL SUCH VACANCY.

In case of a vacancy in the office or position of local registrar of a city the city board of health may be compelled by mandamus to appoint a qualified person to fill such vacancy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have yours under date of September 29, 1915, as follows:

"Under section 203, General Code of Ohio, Charles Griffith, local registrar of Bucyrus, Ohio, district, was removed on the 26th day of July, 1915, by the secretary of state for failing to efficiently discharge the duties of his office in this, to wit: Failing to make reports of births and deaths to the state registrar of vital statistics.

"Under section 201, General Code, the board of health of Bucyrus, Ohio, was requested by the secretary of state to appoint a successor to the aforesaid Charles Griffith, but said board of health has failed and refused to appoint a successor to the aforesaid Charles Griffith, and we are asking your opinion on the following question:

"In case the board of health of a city fails or refuses to appoint a local registrar as provided in section 201 of the General Code, who would have the authority to appoint or what remedy has the secretary of state in the matter?"

Section 203, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

"Each sub-registrar shall note, over his signature the date on which each certificate is filed, and forward all certificates to the registrar of his township within ten days, and in all cases before the third day of the following month. A local or sub-registrar who fails to efficiently discharge the duties of his office shall be forthwith removed from office by the secretary of state, in addition to other penalties which may be imposed by law."

This section confers upon the secretary of state jurisdiction to remove any local or sub-registrar for the cause therein specified, and in the event any local or sub-registrar of a city is so removed according to law, there is thereby, of necessity, created a vacancy in such office or position.

Section 201, G. C., provides as follows:

"In villages, the village clerk and in townships the township clerk shall be the local registrar, and in cities the city board of health shall appoint a local registrar of vital statistics, and each shall be subject to the rules and regulations of the state registrar, the provisions of this chapter and to the penalties provided by law. With the approval of the state registrar, each local registrar, shall appoint a deputy who, in case of absence, illness or disability of the local registrar, shall act in his stead.

Acceptance of such appointment shall be in writing and such deputy shall be subject to the rules, regulations and provisions governing local registrars."

While there is no specific provision found for filling a vacancy in the office or position of local registrar in a city, the officers in whom is lodged the authority to appoint such local registrar, are specifically designated.

Taking into consideration the purpose of the legislation upon this subject, it was manifestly the intent of the legislature that there should, at all times, be provided competent persons for the discharge of the duties and functions of such registrar, and I am, therefore, of opinion that when there exists a vacancy in the office or position of local registrar in a city, the city board of health may be compelled, by mandamus to appoint a person qualified under the law to fill such position.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—PREPARES BOND ISSUES AND TRANSCRIPTS FOR TOWNSHIP BOARDS OF EDUCATION—NOT ENTITLED TO EXTRA COMPENSATION FROM COUNTY—MAY RENDER BILL AGAINST INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS OF SUCH BOARD.

It is the duty of prosecuting attorneys to prepare bond issues and transcripts for boards of education of which they are legal advisers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. HOMER E. JOHNSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marion, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of August 2d has through inadvertence remained unanswered. Such letter was in answer to a letter from us under date of July 28th, wherein I advised you that I had received some communications from the township clerk of Waldo township with reference to the right of the board of education of said township to pay a bill presented by the prosecuting attorney for preparing a bond issue and a transcript for the board of education of Waldo township.

Your letter of August 2nd relative thereto advises us that under section 4761, G. C., you have always furnished advice and conducted litigation for the different boards of education without any charge; that you have attended board meetings when requested and made no charge, but that you feel in matters outside of the duties of the official position you are justified in making a charge therefor. And you further state:

"We feel that this case is strictly within that class of business. Several townships during the last few months have centralized or consolidated their schools. It was necessary to issue bonds; it was up to the members of the board in making a motion to adopt a certain resolution to frame the resolution in proper form. It was the clerk's duty to spread the minutes of the said meeting upon their record correctly and to make a transcript of the proceedings for the bonding company purchasing their bonds. In the Waldo case, not one of the members were able to do this correctly, and it has been so in other cases. It was absolutely necessary for them to employ some one who knew. It was not enjoined upon the prosecuting attorney by law to do this for them. It was therefore arranged that we should draw the entire proceedings beginning with the original resolution declaring the necessity, etc., then following the notice of vote, issue of bonds, notice of sale, certificates, statistics to bidders, form of bonds and in fact everything required by the attorneys for the bonding company buying the issue. We then delivered the bonds. We do not charge for the necessary advice but we have made a small charge for making up this proceeding and then getting together a transcript of the same to accompany the delivery of the bonds. Someone else would do this if we did not. We think it no more than fair that we should be paid for this extra work, it being entirely outside of our line of duty."

Section 4761, G. C., provides in part that except in city school districts, the prosecuting attorney of the county shall be the legal adviser of all boards of education of the county in which he is serving.

You state in your letter that it has been necessary for you to prepare the resolutions, proceedings and transcripts thereof, for the reason that the members offering the resolutions were unable to properly prepare the same and that the clerk was not able to spread the minutes of the meeting upon his record correctly nor to make a transcript of the proceedings for the bonding company. While that may be true, nevertheless, if it was not the duty of the prosecuting attorney as legal adviser of the board to prepare the proper resolutions, minutes, etc., it was the duty of the members of the board of education and the clerk so to do, and your bill should, therefore, not be against the board of education for performing the duties which should have been performed by the members and clerk, but against the members themselves, if they were unable so to do. As legal adviser of the board of education, however, it would seem to me that it was your duty under section 4761, G. C., to advise the board and prepare the necessary papers for them to accomplish the work which they desired to accomplish.

I cannot, therefore, agree with you in your conclusion that it would be legal for the board of education to pay the bill presented by the prosecutor for preparing bond issue and transcript for the board of education of Waldo township.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—FORM OF BONDS—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—ASSISTANT COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT.

Form of bond prescribed for county highway superintendent, assistant county highway superintendent and township highway superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a communication from Hon. Ben. A. Bickley, prosecuting attorney of Butler county, asking for a copy of the form of bond which is being used under section 7183 of the General Code, as found in 105-106 Ohio Laws, at page 613, the same being the provision contained in section 140 of the Cass law, and which provides for a bond to be given by the county highway superintendent and by his assistant.

Although not asked for, I am submitting a form of bond to be used in the case of the township highway superintendent, which differs somewhat from the others, especially with reference to the fact that the amount of the bond is fixed by statute in the sum of two hundred dollars, in section 3371, of the General Code, which is section 76 of the Cass law, and to be found on page 594 of volume 105-106, Ohio Laws.

In view of the statewide application of the question, I am addressing this communication to your office.

It is my opinion that to meet the requirements of the section referred to forms of bond may be used in the several instances as follows:

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING LAW—INTERPRETATION OF PHRASE "A MAIN BUSINESS SECTION"—HAS NOT BEEN JUDICIALLY DEFINED—MEASURING SHOULD BE THE PLAIN AND ORDINARY ONE, NOT TECHNICAL OR PARTICULAR—COUNTY BOARDS SHOULD DETERMINE THE MATTER UPON FAIR CONSIDERATION OF ALL FACTS IN PARTICULAR CASE.

It is for the county liquor licensing boards to determine in the first instance what are the central and main business sections of cities within the terms of section 1261-34, 103 O. L., 223, upon consideration of all material facts in each particular case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours under date of September 21, 1913, as follows:

"Enclosed herewith you will find request from the Mahoning County Liquor Licensing Board, for a construction of the last sentence of section 19 of the liquor licensing code.

"The state board would be very glad to have your opinion at an early date as the question is arising in many of the counties."

The enclosed inquiry of the Mahoning County Liquor Licensing Board referred to is as follows:

> "Under date of June 25th we wrote you as follows:
> "'We ask you for your construction of the last sentence in the final paragraph of section 19 of the state license code; in a word, we would ask you to advise us if it is the province of this board to determine what constitutes 'a main business section.' We have two different cases to consider here, both of them in districts where foreign-born citizens largely predominate. These two districts are very largely occupied with little stores of various kinds and are unquestionably a business section for the people of the immediate locality, but to be on the safe side we ask your board for a construction of this particular paragraph.'
> "Will you kindly advise us in this matter?"

That portion of section 19 of the liquor license law to which you refer, being section 1261-34, G. C., 103 O. L., 223, provides as follows:

> "No license shall be granted after August 1, 1915, to operate a saloon within three hundred feet of any permanent public or parochial school building, measuring the distance in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises on which such school building is located, nor two hundred feet in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises. This provision shall not apply to a bona fide reputable hotel or club; or to a saloon located within three hundred feet of a school house in the central or a main business section of the city."

This inquiry is directed particularly to the meaning of the phrase "the central or a main business section of the city." This phrase has not, to my knowledge, been judicially defined. Its terms are in common use in the ordinary affairs of every day life, and are not here used in any technical or particular sense, hence must be interpreted in their plain and ordinary meaning.

The difficulty involved in your inquiry arises, however, in the application of this phrase to particular cases, giving rise to questions of fact no general rule for the determination of which can be laid down, nor can these questions be determined by any one in a particular case without a full knowledge of all the material facts which may not, at least in many cases, be obtainable otherwise than upon view of the locality under consideration.

These, then, are questions to be determined in the first instance by the county boards upon a fair consideration of all the material facts in the particular case, subject to review by the courts for abuse of discretion under the particular facts involved.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY APPOINT SCHOOL PHYSICIAN TO PERFORM DUTIES REQUIRED BY SECTION 7692-1, G. C.—IN ITS DISCRETION SAID BOARD MAY EMPLOY A TRAINED NURSE TO AID SAID APPOINTED PHYSICIAN—BOARD MAY DELEGATE SUCH DUTIES TO BOARD OF HEALTH PROVIDING SAID BOARD OR ITS OFFICER IS WILLING TO PERFORM DUTIES—DELEGATED BOARD OR OFFICER MAY APPOINT SAID PHYSICIAN AND SAID NURSE IF DETERMINED NECESSARY.

The board of education of a school district may, under authority of section 7692, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 897, appoint a school physician to perform the duties required by the provisions of section 7692-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 897, and in its discretion said board may employ a trained nurse to aid in the performance of said duties, or said board may delegate said duties to the board of health or officer performing the functions of a board of health in said district, providing said board or officer is willing to assume the same, together with the power to appoint said school physician and employ said trained nurse if said board or officer determines that the same is necessary for the proper discharge of the aforesaid duties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. ALLEN T. WILLIAMSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 24th, which is as follows:

> "The board of education in several of the school districts in this county have had under consideration the question of appointing a trained nurse who should supervise and inspect the sanitary condition of the school buildings, and aid in the inspection of the health of the pupils. The question has been referred to me and I am inclined to advise that a board of education has the power to employ and pay a trained nurse for the above purposes. The sections of the General Code which seem to give authority to appoint school physicians and nurses are found amended and supplemented in vol. 103 at page 897 and are the General Code numbers, 7692 to 7693, both inclusive. According to section 7692 the powers therein delegated by the board of education may be redelegated by the board to the board of health exercising jurisdiction as such within the school district, and would seem to broaden the powers of the board of health in the respect of employing a nurse. However, I am in receipt of a copy of your opinion rendered to the state board of health under date of May 13, 1915, and published in department reports in the issue of June 3rd, which would seem to deny authority in the board of health to employ a nurse. In the opinion you refer to a communication from Mr. James E. Bauman, and it may be that he cited you to the above sections, and that you had them before you when rendering the opinion. In the light of the sections which I have cited I would be pleased to have your opinion on the authority of both the board of education and the board of health, acting under these sections, to employ and pay a trained nurse."

Under section 7692, G. C., prior to its amendment in 103 O. L., 897, the authority to provide for the medical inspection of pupils attending public schools was limited to boards of education of city school districts.

This section as amended now provides:

"Each and every board of education in this state may appoint at least one school physician; provided two or more school districts may unite and employ one such physician, whose duties shall be such as are prescribed in this act. Said school physician shall hold a license to practice medicine in Ohio. School physicians may be discharged at any time by the appointing power whether the same be a board of education or of health or health officer, as herein provided. School physicians shall serve one year and until their successors are appointed, and shall receive such compensation as the appointing board may determine. Such boards may also employ trained nurses to aid in such inspection in such ways as may be prescribed by the board. Such board may delegate the duties and powers herein provided for to the board of health or officer performing the functions of a board of health within the school district if such board or officer is willing to assume the same. Boards of education shall co-operate with boards of health in the preventing of epidemics."

The duties of the school physician are prescribed by the provisions of section 7692-1, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 897. This section reads as follows:

"School physicians may make examinations and diagnoses of all children referred to them at the beginning of every school year and at other times if deemed desirable. They may make such further examination of teachers, janitors and school buildings as in their opinion the protection of health of the pupils and teachers may require. Whenever a school child, teacher or janitor is found to be ill or suffering from positive open pulmonary tuberculosis or other contagious disease, the school physician shall promptly send such child, teacher, or janitor home, with a note, in the case of the child, to its parents or guardian, briefly setting forth the discovered facts, and advising that the family physician be consulted. School physicians shall keep accurate card index records of all examinations, and said records, that they may be uniform throughout the state shall be according to the form prescribed by the state school commissioner, and the reports shall be made according to the method of said form; provided, however, that if the parent or guardian of any school child or any teacher or janitor after notice from the board of education shall within two weeks thereafter furnish the written certificate of any reputable physician that the child, or teacher or janitor has been examined, in such cases the services of the medical inspector herein provided for shall be dispensed with, and such certificate shall be furnished by such parent or guardian from time to time, as required by the board of education. Such individual records shall not be open to the public and shall be solely for the use of the boards of education and health or other health officer. If any teacher or janitor is found to have positive open pulmonary tuberculosis or other communicable disease, his or her employment shall be discontinued upon expiration of the contract therefor, or, at the option of the board, suspended upon such terms as to salary as the board may deem just until the school physician shall have certified to a recovery from such disease."

Section 7692-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 898, provides for the publication of rules by the state school commissioner (now the superintendent of public instruction) and the state board of health acting jointly, for the detailed enforcement of the requirements of the statute above set forth, and section 7692-4, G. C., makes it the duty of each board of education by affidavit of an officer thereof or otherwise to prove to the superintendent of public instruction that it has complied with said requirements.

In view of the foregoing provisions of the statutes it seems clear that it is the duty of each board of education to provide for the inspection and examinations authorized by section 7692-1, G. C. For this purpose said board is authorized by the provision of section 7692, G. C., as amended, to employ a school physician having the qualifications therein prescribed, or the boards of education of two or more school districts may unite for the purpose of employing such physician.

Said board of education, or union of boards as the case may be, may in its discretion employ a trained nurse to aid in such inspection in such ways as may be prescribed by said board or union of boards.

In case the board of education of a school district delegates the duties and powers conferred upon it by provision of said statute to the board of health or officer performing the functions of a board of health within such school district, providing such board or officer is willing to assume said duties and powers, said board of health or health officer will have the same authority by virtue of such delegation to appoint a school physician and employ a trained nurse as is conferred by provision of said statute on said board of education.

Under provision of section 7693, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 898, the board of education of any school district may provide and pay compensation to the employes of the board of health in addition to that provided by the city, township or other municipality.

As I view it the provisions of section 7692, G. C., as amended, contemplate the employment of a trained nurse only when such employment is necessary to enable the school physician, appointed under authority of said section, to properly perform the duties required of him by the provisions of section 7692-1, G. C.

The question raised in the opinion to the state board of health, referred to in your inquiry, was as to whether or not the board of health of a city has the authority to employ a public health nurse and whether the council of such city has the authority to appropriate to said board of health the funds to pay the compensation and expenses of such nurse. In that opinion it was held that there is no authority on the part of a city council to appropriate to the city board of health the funds necessary to pay such compensation and expenses and that there is no authority on the part of said board of health to employ a public nurse except that contained in section 4436 of the General Code which authorizes the employment of a nurse for the purpose of giving attention to persons in quarantine. In arriving at this conclusion the above provisions of section 7692, G. C., as amended, were not considered material for the reason that it could not be said that said statute authorizes the employment of a public nurse for the performance of those duties contemplated by the state board of health in its request for said opinion.

Replying to your question I am of the opinion that the board of education of a school district may, under authority of section 7692, G. C., as amended, appoint a school physician to perform the duties required by the provisions of section 7692-1, G. C., and in its discretion said board may employ a trained nurse to aid in the performance of said duties or said board may delegate said duties to the board of health or officer performing the functions of a board of health within said school district, providing said board or officer is willing to assume the same, together with the power to appoint said school physician and to employ said trained nurse if said board or officer determine that the same is necessary for the proper discharge of the aforesaid duties.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—PURCHASE OF BONDS OF VILLAGE OF HUDSON, OHIO, BY SAID COMMISSION, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"In re:—Bonds of the village of Hudson, Ohio, in the aggregate sum of $40,750, dated August 1, 1915, and bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually."

These bonds consist of three separate issues as follows: $5,500.00 issued for the purpose of securing funds to pay the village's portion of improving Aurora and Streetsboro streets, consisting of six bonds—five of which are of the denomination of $1,000.00 each, falling due between August 1, 1925, and August 1, 1927, inclusive, and one bond of $500.00, due August 1, 1927.

$12,250.00 of special assessment bonds for the improvement of Streetsboro street, being thirteen bonds in all—twelve of which are of the denomination of $1,000.00 each, falling due from August 1, 1916, to August 1, 1925, and one of the denomination of $250.00, falling due August 1, 1925.

$23,000.00 of special assessment bonds for the improvement of Aurora street, consisting of twenty-three bonds in all of the denomination of $1,000.00 each, falling due from August 1, 1916, to August 1, 1925.

I have examined the transcripts of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Hudson relative to the authorization and sale of the above bonds, also the specimen bonds accompanying said transcript, and I am of the opinion that said bonds are issued for a purpose authorized by law, that the proceedings of said council and other officers are regular and in conformity with statutory provisions, that the amount of said bonds issued for the purpose of paying the village's portion of said improvement and the tax levy which will be necessary to pay the interest thereon and to create a sinking fund sufficient for the redemption of the bonds when due exceeds no statutory limitation, and that the form of all said bonds is properly drawn.

I therefore certify that when said bonds are properly executed and delivered they will constitute, in the hands of legal holders thereof, valid obligations of the village of Hudson.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ADVERTISEMENTS FOR BIDS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A COURT HOUSE SHOULD BE PUBLISHED BY BUILDING COMMISSION AND NOT BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2352, G. C., GOVERN.

Advertisements for bids for construction of new court house for Hamilton county, Ohio, should have been published by the building commission and not by the county commissioners. Said publication is governed by provisions of section 2352, G. C., regulating similar advertisements by county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of September 21, 1915, submitting the following statement and inquiry:

"Advertisement for bids for the construction of a new court house in Hamilton county, Ohio, was ordered by the building commission, and was published in six papers for six insertions.

"QUESTION. Was this permissible under the provisions of section 2338, General Code, or should the advertisements have been published by order of the county commissioners under the provisions of section 2352, General Code?"

Section 2338, G. C., to which you refer, provides in substance that the building commission shall adopt plans, specifications and estimates, shall invite bids and award contracts, and until the building is completed may determine all questions connected therewith, "and shall be governed by the provisions of this chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county."

Section 2352, G. C. is the general section of the law providing for the advertisement by county commissioners for sealed proposals for performing labor and furnishing materials for the erection of public buildings, bridges, etc., and said section limits said advertisement to one insertion per week, for four weeks, in two of the principal newspapers of the county, or, if there be only one newspaper in the county, said advertisement shall be published in said newspaper.

It appears from your inquiry that the publications made in this case were far in excess of that provided by the foregoing section 2352 and the question presented is whether said provisions of said section shall prevail, or do the provisions of section 2338 give the building commission its only authority and delegate to it the discretion to determine the manner and method of "inviting bids," without reference to any of the limitations imposed by the last clause of said section, which, as before noted, provides that said commission shall be governed by the provisions of the chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county.

This provision was first incorporated into said section 2338 by the codifying commission of 1910 and, therefore, was not in force at the time of the decision in the case of McKenzie v. State, 76 O. S., 369, in which it was held that the provisions of section 798, R. S.—now said section 2352, G. C.—did not apply in respect to contracts made by said building commission. The construction then adopted by the supreme court cannot, by reason of this fact furnish a guide under the present state of the law.

I have before me the recent decision of the court of appeals of Hamilton county, Ohio, in the case of State ex rel. Waltz v. Green, et al., which is to appear in volume 22 Ohio appellate and circuit court reports, in which the scope and effect of said clause is discussed. The court, after specifically directing attention to the provisions aforesaid added by the codifying commission, said:

"The General Code of Ohio is not merely the work of a codifying commission but it is also the enactment of the general assembly. Such important language could not have been added by inadvertence or without purpose, nor is it inconsistent with the preceding words of the clause of which it has been made a part. The power granting to the building commission to determine all questions connected with the building of the court house and jail is simply thereby modified by the requirements of such provisions of the chapter as are applicable thereto. The fact that certain sections of this chapter relate exclusively to bridges, infirmaries or children's homes only renders those particular sections inapplicable and is not argument against the controlling force of all provisions which are plainly applicable.

"The effect of this change is recognized in State ex rel. v. Cass, 13 C. C. n. s., 449, and the trial court here was right in holding that the words added must be deemed effective."

It is thus plainly intimated by the court above quoted that the last provision of said section 2338, being the provision added by the codifying commission, as heretofore noted, gives operative force to all provisions of the general law relating to the erecting of public buildings and applicable to the duties imposed upon said building commission, and practically the same view is expressed by the court in State ex rel. v. Cass, above cited. If, then, the provisions of said section 2352, regulating the manner and method of advertising for bids for the erection of public buildings, bridges, etc., are applicable they must control.

I know of no reason why they are not applicable. Said section 2338, supra, provides no method for advertising for bids, nor do any other sections of the law relating exclusively to the duties of a building commission make such provisions. Prior to the enactment of said provision of section 2338, this omission seems to have been a very prolific source of trouble, if we are to judge from the controversies appearing in reported cases. I cannot escape the conviction that one of the chief, if not the principal purpose in this amendment to the original law was to provide the same plan of advertising for bids as prevails when contracts are to be let by county commissioners for the erection of public buildings, bridges, etc.

I am therefore of the opinion that advertisements for bids for the construction of said court house should have been published by said building commission and not by the county commissioners, but that said publication is governed by the provisions of said section 2352, G. C., regulating similar advertisements by county commissioners.

As to the matter of findings for recovery in this particular case: I doubt very much, indeed, if, under all the facts and circumstances of this particular case, any verdict might be had at the hands of a jury because, in addition to the fact that it would well be argued that to the laymen constituting such a building commission the provisions of law were not clear and that they had acted in good faith for the best interest of the county, it would be readily apparent to the jury, from the nature and size of this particular work, that advertising in outside papers was really necessary to get the best and most economical results for the county. In other words, the jury would look upon this transaction as the exercise of good business judgment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF URBANA LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, DISAPPROVED—PURPOSE CLAUSE NOT SPECIFIC.

Proposed articles of incorporation of the Urbana Library Association disapproved because same fail to set forth specifically the purpose of its incorporation, and because reference must be had to the articles of incorporation of another company in order to ascertain the purpose of its organization.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 27th requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We are enclosing herewith check for $2.00, and proposed articles of incorporation of THE URBANA LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.
> "It is their intention to incorporate as an incorporation not for profit, but in their purpose clause they are taking up and continuing work of

THE URBANA PUBLIC LIBRARY COMPANY, a corporation organized for profit, and whose franchise was revoked for non-payment of taxes by the tax commission on August 27, 1914.

"We do not think that a corporation organized not for profit can take up the work of a corporation and its property that was organized for profit. We would like to have your opinion on this."

As set forth in its proposed articles of incorporation, The Urbana Library Association is formed

"for the purpose of taking up and continuing the work of the Urbana Public Library Company whose franchise was revoked through inadvertence, taking over its property and, therewith and by other means, perpetuate a public library for the citizens of Urbana and its visitors and so placing sources of knowledge, means of culture and high ideals within the reach of all."

Section 8625 of the General Code, specifying what the articles of incorporation shall contain, in so far as applicable, is as follows:

"Any number of citizens, not less than five, a majority of whom are citizens of this state, desiring to become incorporated, shall subscribe and acknowledge articles of incorporation, which shall contain: * * *

"3. The purpose for which it is formed. * * *

By virtue of the language of the section of the General Code above quoted the purpose for which a corporation is organized must be stated with reasonable certainty.

(Capital Company v. McGillin, 21 O. C. C., 210.)

The proposed articles of incorporation of the Urbana Library Association do not, to my mind, state with certainty the purpose of the incorporation, as required by the statute. It must be inferred that at least a part of the purpose for which it is to be incorporated is not stated at all, except by reference to the articles of incorporation of another corporation, which you state in your letter was an Ohio corporation organized for profit.

There is nothing, however, in the proposed articles of incorporation of the Urbana Library Association which reveals whether the Urbana Public Library Company was an Ohio corporation or a corporation organized in another state, or whether it was organized for profit or not for profit. The articles of incorporation of a proposed organization should set forth specifically the purpose of its incorporation, and not refer to some other paper, document or record for a complete statement of such purpose.

I therefore advise you that the articles of incorporation of the Urbana Library Association do not contain a statement of the purpose for which it is organized as required by law, and the same should not be accepted and filed by you.

The Urbana Public Library Company, as appears from the records in your office, was organized in 1891 as an Ohio corporation for profit, and in its articles of incorporation its purpose was stated to be:

"Establishing, sustaining and enlarging a public library and reading room for the use of the people of Urbana; that a taste for the best and purest literature may be created in many who have it not, and encouraged in all who have it; that a knowledge of the arts and sciences may be advanced; and that a comfortable, pleasant room, well furnished with good books and periodicals, may prove an attractive resort for young and old; that we may glean from many men of many minds the brightest and best thoughts of all ages and all lands."

It appears therefore that the purpose for which the defunct Urbana Public Library Company was organized, was such as an Ohio corporation not for profit may now be lawfully organized to carry out, and it follows that there is nothing in the law to prevent the Urbana Library Association from adopting articles of incorporation containing such purpose statement, but it should be specifically and fully set forth in its proposed articles of incorporation, and not made a part thereof by reference to some other document. While the proposed articles of incorporation of the Urbana Library Association should not be accepted and filed by you in their present form, such articles would be in a form such as could be accepted and filed by you if the purpose of the Urbana Library Association were stated to be that of:

"Acquiring, sustaining and enlarging a public library and reading room for the use of the people of Urbana; that a taste for the best and purest literature may be created in many who have it not and encouraged in all who have it; that a knowledge of the arts and sciences may be advanced; and that a comfortable, pleasant room, well furnished with good books and periodicals, may prove an attractive resort for young and old; that we may glean from many men of many minds the brightest and best thoughts of all ages and all lands;"

and if no other improper matter were added.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

NEWSPAPER—PUBLICATION—DAILY COURT REPORTER, DAYTON, OHIO—PUBLICATION OF "TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS" TO BE PAID FROM COUNTY TREASURY IS CONFINED TO TWO NEWSPAPERS OF OPPOSITE POLITICS—TERM, "NEWSPAPER OF GENERAL CIRCULATION," DEFINED.

1. The provisions of section 6252, G. C., requiring the publication of the "times for holding courts" to be made in two newspapers of "opposite politics," as therein specified, are supplementary to and control the provisions of the special statutes requiring such publications to be made in one or more newspapers of general circulation.

Printing Co. v. State, 68 O. S., 362.

2. Whether a publication is or is not a "newspaper," or a newspaper of "general circulation" or newspaper of "opposite politics" is a mixed question of law and fact which can only be determined under the particular facts in each case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of September 29th requesting my written opinion upon the following questions:

"Section 1695, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 405, reads as follows:

'In the counties of Hamilton, Cuyahoga, Franklin and Lucas, the judges of the courts of record, other than court of appeals, shall jointly designate a daily law journal published in the county, wherein shall be publised all calendars of the courts of record in such county, which shall contain the numbers and titles of causes, and names of attorneys appearing therein, together with the motion dockets and such particulars and notices respecting causes, as may be specified by the judges, and each notice required to be published by any of such judges.'

"The attention of this department has been called to the fact that a daily paper entitled, 'Daily Court Reporter,' is being published at Dayton, Ohio. We observe at the top of the first column of the second page of this paper this item:

"'Approved by the court as a sufficient medium for the publication of legal advertisements.'

"QUESTION: May any legal advertisements, such as times of holding courts, publication of which is provided for by sections 1518, 1520, 1533, 1534 and 6252, General Code, or any other advertisements required by law to be published in newspapers of opposite politics, also be published in a paper like this and be paid for out of the county treasury?

"Could notices of sale of bonds and other advertisements, which the law provides may be published in newspapers of general circulation, be published in a paper of this kind, either in the counties named in section 1695, or any other places where same may be established?

The inquiries submitted in your foregoing communication can only be answered in a general way because in each particular instance there is involved a mixed question of law and fact. It may be stated that under the statutes specified by you, and all other similar statutes, the publications in which legal advertisements are required to be made may be divided into three classes: (1) Newspapers without any other or further qualifications as to circulation or politics. (2) Newspapers having a general circulation in any given territory. (3) Newspapers of opposite politics.

Every publication in which a legal advertisement may be made under the laws of this state must have one or more of the qualifications named in the foregoing classes. A "newspaper" in which legal notices may be made has been defined by the circuit court of this state in the case of Bigalke et al. v. Bigalke, 19 C. C., page 331, wherein the court adopts with approval the definition found in Wade on the Law of Notices, section 1066, which is as follows:

> "What is a newspaper? In order to fulfill the terms of the law the notices must be directed by the court or officer to be inserted for the statutory time in some paper printed and circulated for the dissemination of news; but it is not essential that, to answer the description, the paper shall be devoted to the dissemination of news of a general character. It may with equal propriety be published in a paper devoted exclusively to the discussion of religious, legal, commercial or scientific topics and the diffusion of knowledge touching special matters within its limited sphere, as in a public journal the columns of which are open to news of a general character. It may be a religious newspaper, a commercial newspaper, a legal newspaper or a scientific newspaper, or a political newspaper."

In this case the court further held that the Cleveland Daily Record was a newspaper and, while devoted primarily and principally to the proceedings in the courts and in the recorder's office and in the various county and city offices in the county in which it was published, yet it was a legal medium for the publication of such notices as were at that time required under section 5050, R. S., being section 11298 of the General Code.

It would seem under the foregoing authority that a newspaper to be a medium for legal advertising as contemplated by our statutes need not publish current news or matters that might be of interest to the public generally, but its news may be limited to a certain sphere and of interest only to a particular class.

Coming now to consider the requirement named in the second class heretofore specified, it is necessary to determine what constitutes a newspaper of general circulation under the requirements of those statutes which make that a requisite for the publication of legal advertisements in its columns.

Here again it may be stated that the question must be determined by the particular facts in each case and unless all the facts are known no satisfactory answer may be given. We have in the 14 C. C. Reports, (n. s.) page 531, in the case of State ex rel. v. Commissioners of Wood county, an opinion by a majority of that court which indicates from the facts there stated that the requirement of circulation may be very limited, not only as to numbers involved, but as to actual distribution of the publication within and over a certain given territory. This case was affirmed without opinion by the supreme court in 84 O. S., 447, and the facts upon which the opinion was based as stated by the court are as follows:

> "A newspaper having a circulation of 800 in a county containing a population of 50,000, distributed over twenty townships and in fifteen of those townships containing a population of 35,000, a circulation of only thirty-six, is a newspaper of general circulation within the meaning of the statute providing for the publication of the financial report of the county commissioners, required under section 2508, G. C."

It is apparent from the facts upon which the conclusion was reached in the foregoing case that the determination of the question of general circulation must depend entirely upon the circumstances of each case, which can only be ascertained by an examination of the subscription list of the newspaper under investigation, the population it purports to serve and the territory it claims to cover.

Referring now to newspapers coming within the provisions of the third class, the term "opposite politics" has been judicially defined in the case of city of Columbus v. Barr, 6 C. C., (n. s.) 151, as applying to newspapers which "are the recognized organs of parties politically opposed." Under this definition there should be no difficulty in any given case in determining the political qualification required.

Attached to your inquiry is a copy of the "Daily Court Reporter," published at Dayton, Ohio, and purporting to give a digest of the day's news in legal, real estate and business circles, and carrying the announcement, as you state in your letter, that it has been approved by the courts as a sufficient medium for the publication of legal advertisements. An inspection of its printed matter shows that in this particular issue it carries no current news whatever in its columns and that it is devoted wholly to the news of the courts and the business of the various county offices as appears from their records. Among its legal advertisements is found the times for holding courts of appeal in its district and also legal notices which are required by law in cases where the service of summons personally cannot be made in civil actions.

It is apparent from the foregoing facts that this paper has been given such legal status as would qualify it to publish all notices provided by law, except those which are limited to newspapers of opposite politics, but as to advertisements, which must be published in newspapers of opposite politics, with no other information before me, except as stated in your letter and the copy of said publication attached thereto, I must conclude that said newspaper cannot qualify as an organ of any political party.

Referring now to your specific inquiry as to whether the "times for holding courts" may be published in this newspaper and paid for out of the county treasury, I am impelled to conclude that such publication and payment may not be made. This conclusion is reached for the reason that under the authority of Printing Company v. State, 68 O. S., 362, said section 6252, G. C., must be held to be supplementary to said sections 1519, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 412, and 1534, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 462, and to require the publication in question to be made in two newspapers of opposite politics. While the last named sections have been recently amended, their particular provisions pertinent to this inquiry have not been changed or modified by said amendments and remain the same as they were at the time said case above quoted was decided. This conclusion is reached irrespective of the provisions of said section 1695, G. C., which do not include the county in which said newspaper is published and which would be given no effect as to this particular transaction if they did include said county and provide for the publication of said newspaper.

As before stated, it is impossible to give you a specific answer as to any other case that might be involved in your inquiry. I have attempted here only to give you certain general rules, which may be applied by you to the facts in each particular case as it comes before you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—RECIPROCAL RELATIONS WITH OTHER STATES FOR PRACTICE OF DENTISTRY—EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATIONS OF APPLICANTS NOW BECOME PART OF REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED IN SECTION 1324, G. C.

The educational qualifications of applicants for license to practice dentistry in this state as provided by section 1321-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 298, enter into and become a part of the requirements specified in section 1324, G. C. Whether or not such qualifications in other states are equal to those in this state becomes a question of fact to be determined by reference to the laws of each state involved or to the rules established by the dental board of said state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1915.

HON. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary, Ohio State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 1st as follows:

> "I am sending you under separate cover copies of the dental laws of New Jersey, District of Columbia, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin and Minnesota.
> "The state board at the present time enjoys reciprocity with these states and we wish to know whether or not we can continue to do so under our amended law. Section 1324 of the General Code of Ohio permits us to enter into reciprocal relations with other states provided their requirements are equal or superior to ours."

Your attention must be directed, first, to the fact that no amendments were made to the dental law of this state by the present general assembly which can in any manner affect the subject of your inquiry except the enactment of section 1321-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 298. This section refers only to the educational qualifications which may be required hereafter of all applicants for license to practice dentistry in this state. No changes or modifications whatever were made in the provisions of section 1324, G. C., to which you refer, nor in the provisions of section 1322, G. C., which covers the subjects upon which the professional examination must be held.

It follows, therefore, if your board had reciprocal relations with the states named in your inquiry prior to said recent amendments to the law, there is nothing in its present state which can interfere with the continuance of such relations in each case named, except it be the matter of educational qualifications heretofore noted. It must be remembered in this connection that it is clear under the provisions of section 1324, supra, that educational qualifications enter into and become a part of the "requirements" therein specified. Whether or not such educational requirements in the states named are equal to those in this state becomes a question of fact to be determined by reference to the laws of each state involved or to the rules established under such laws by the dental board of each particular state.

An inspection of the laws as submitted by you shows that in the states of New Jersey, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois the educational qualifications required under the express provision of the law in each instance are precisely the same as those prescribed by the laws of this state. In the remainder of the states named by you there seems to be no provision of law specifically fixing any educational qualifications, but this matter appears to be delegated to the dental board of each state, to be determined by it and to be covered by such rules and regulations as it may prescribe and adopt.

In view of this situation, I would respectfully suggest that your board procure the regulations on this subject from the board of each state wherein no provisions of law expressly fix and prescribe educational qualifications and if upon investigation of the rules and regulations in this regard they are found to equal those of this state, I know of no legal reason against a continuance of reciprocal relations with the states thus meeting said requirements.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT OF WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—APPROPRIATION FOR RECITATION BUILDING AVAILABLE JULY 1, 1916—BIDS MAY NOT BE ACCEPTED NOW AND CONTRACT AWARDED AFTER JULY 1, 1916.

Bids for the construction of a recitation building for the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University, for which the funds appropriated will not be available until July 1, 1916, may not be accepted now and the contract awarded after July 1, 1916.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 2nd, you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

"Regarding the appropriations for the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University, in which the legislature appropriated for the year 1915, the sum of $40,000.00 for a gymnasium, and for the year 1916, the sum of $60,000.00 for a recitation building, plans and specifications, estimates of cost and bills of material have been prepared for both buildings and approved by the trustees, with the distinct understanding that no payment for the plans and specifications for the recitation building, covered by the appropriation of 1916, is to be made until the funds are available. The plans and specifications of both the gymnasium and recitation building have been presented to the state building commission for approval.

"Permission has been asked to prepare two separate advertisements, one for each building, to run the usual time required by the building code, and at the specified time of receiving proposals, to receive and open proposals for both buildings, with the understanding that the advertisements for the recitation building is not to be paid for until the 1916 appropriation is available, but that bids may be received on both buildings, and if within the amount of the estimates of cost filed, that a contract may be entered into for the gymnasium building and that the bid for the recitation building may be held in abeyance until the funds in the 1916 appropriation are available, then a contract entered into covering the amount of the lowest regular bid.

"The purpose being that if the institution can advertise for both buildings at one and the same time, they will attract a much larger number of bidders and the competition will be far sharper, and if a contractor knows that he can secure a contract for both buildings, his tools, appliances and equipment, the purchasing of his materials and the arranging of his labor, will make his proposal, it is estimated, from $2,000.00 to $2,500.00 less than if these buildings were bid upon at separate times.

"It is purely unselfish on the part of anybody interested and works an advantage and saving to the institution for the state of Ohio, It seems like a common sense, sound business proposition.

"Trusting that this may have your favorable consideration and that you will find that it does not interfere or conflict in any way with the state building code, and that the trustees may be privileged to act in accordance with the above statement."

The sections of the General Code applicable to your inquiry are sections 2318 and 2323.

Section 2318 provides in part as follows:

"On the day named in the notice, such officer, board or other authority shall open the proposals and award the contract to the lowest bidder. * * *."

Section 2323 provides as follows:

"No contract shall be made for labor or materials at a price in excess of the entire estimate thereof. The entire contract or contracts, including estimates of expenses of architects and otherwise, shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount authorized by law for such institution, building or improvement, addition thereto or alteration thereof."

Under house bill No. 701, in section 2 thereof, the legislature appropriated to the "Combined Normal and Industrial Department of Wilberforce University" $40,000.00 for "gymnasium completed," and at the beginning of said section 2 it is provided that the sum so appropriated "shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

In the same bill, in section 3 thereof, there was appropriated to said department for "recitation building complete" the sum of $60,000.00, and at the beginning of said section 3 it is provided:

> "The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

Therefore, the appropriation for the recitation building will not become available until July 1, 1916.

The policy of the state in regard to the awarding of contracts for state buildings under the building regulations is shown by an examination of section 2318, foregoing in part quoted, and it appears from said section that the policy is that the bids shall be opened and the contract immediately awarded—on the day named in the notice for awarding the contract. Of course, it is not always possible to immediately award the contract, but it is at least contemplated that the contract shall be awarded as soon thereafter as circumstances will permit, the board to make up its mind as to who is the lowest bidder, or, as soon as the consent of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state can be obtained, to accept a bid other than the lowest bid under the provisions of section 2319.

Section 2323 requires that the entire cost of the building shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount appropriated for such purpose.

The amount appropriated for the recitation building will not become available until July 1, 1916, and, therefore, I do not believe that it would be lawful for the board to now advertise for bids on the recitation building and then hold the bids on said building in abeyance until the first day of July, 1916.

In reaching the conclusion above expressed, I am not unmindful of the economic reason advanced by you. However, it may be with equal propriety also assumed that the successful bidder on the gymnasium building will probably make his bid on the recitation building lower by reason of already having his machinery on the ground, so that the state may not lose by strict compliance with the law. Neither is there any assurance at the present time that the same contractor may be the low bidder on each building, or that the price of materials may not be lower when bids may lawfully be received for the recitation building. I also observe that there is no fund from which the cost of advertising for bids on the recitation building may now be paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF THE OHIO RIVER ROAD IN JEFFERSON COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 8, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 5, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution as to the Ohio river road, Jefferson county, petition No. 1231, I. C. H. No. 7.

I am returning this resolution without my approval for the reason that the county auditor of Jefferson county has not certified that the money required for the payment of the county's portion of the proposed improvement is in the treasury, to the credit of or has been levied, placed on the duplicate and in process of collection for the state and county road improvement fund. The county auditor has duly certified that the money required for the payment of the county's portion of the proposed improvement will be provided for by a bond issue, and such certificate is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of section 5660 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 7730, G. C., AMENDED 106 O. L., 398—DUTY TO SUSPEND SCHOOL—PROVISION TO RE-ESTABLISH DIRECTORY—"SUSPENDED DISTRICT" DEFINED.

The phrase "as herein provided" as used in section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398, modifies the word "suspended" and relates to the authority of the board of education of a rural or village school district to suspend any or all of the schools of its district as well as to the duty of said board to suspend a school where the average daily attendance of the preceding year was below ten, when directed to do so by the county board of education.

The latter provision of said statute is directory rather than mandatory, and the board of education cannot be compelled, upon the filing of the petition as therein provided, to take the necessary steps to re-establish a suspended school if said board finds that the suspended district contains the required number of pupils of lawful school age.

Insofar as rural school districts are concerned, the term "suspended district" as used in said statute relates to a subdivision of the rural school district which, having been established by the board of education of such rural district under authority of sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., has been suspended by said board of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 8, 1915.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 30th, which is in part as follows:

"I am writing you for an interpretation of section 7730 of the General Code of Ohio, as last amended in 105-106 Ohio Laws, page 398.

"I will state the local facts that have made necessary an interpretation of this law, so that in giving your opinion you can make an interpretation applicable to said facts.

"The facts are as follows: In Wadsworth township of Medina county, the board of education, acting under section 7730 of the 1914 law, voted about July 15th, 1915, to suspend all but three schools in said township, and to transport the pupils to a building at the township center, said suspension being perfectly legal. The reason for not suspending all the schools in the township, was lack of funds to properly fit the central building, but the board of education planned on being able to suspend and bring in the other schools before September 1916. Pursuant to the above suspension, the board of education entered into contracts with six haulers to transport the pupils of the suspended districts to said central building for the eight months' school term of 1915-1916. Wagons were purchased for this purpose and all other arrangements completed. And then, in August, the new law, i. e., sections 7730, G. C., as amended in 105-106 Ohio Laws, page 398, took effect, containing a clause for re-establishment. The people of the suspended districts immediately got busy, and on September 14th, 1915, filed separate petitions, signed by more than a majority of the voters, in each of the suspended districts, asking the board of education to re-establish said suspended schools. The board of education thus far have refused to re-establish the schools, and desire to know whether or not they can be forced to re-establish said schools, the people having presented the necessary petitions.

"I desire your interpretation therefore of the terms: 1. 'As herein provided'; 2. 'May'; 3. 'Suspended district', as these three terms are used in that portion of section 7730, as amended in 105-106, Ohio Laws, page 398, which reads as follows:

" 'As herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the voters of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age.' "

Section 7730, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, provided as follows:

"The board of education of any rural or village school district may suspend any or all schools in such village or rural school district. Upon such suspension the board in such village school districts may provide, and in such rural school districts shall provide for the conveyance of the pupils attending such schools to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district. When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below twelve, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to such other school or schools as the local board may direct. No school of any rural district shall be suspended or abolished until after sixty days' notice has been given by the school board of such district. Such notice shall be posted in five conspicuous places within such village or rural school district."

From your statement of facts it appears that the board of education of Wadsworth township rural school district, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of the above statute, suspended all but three schools in said district and let contracts for the conveyance of the pupils who would have attended the schools, suspended by said board, to the school established by said board at the center of the township.

This action was taken subsequent to the passage of the act of the general assembly of May 27, 1915, amending said section 7730, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 398, and prior to August 27, 1915, the date when said act became effective. Said statute as amended now provides:

"The board of education of any rural or village school district may suspend any or all schools in such village or rural school district. Upon such suspension the board in such village school district may provide, and in such rural school district shall provide, for the conveyance of pupils attending such schools, to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district. When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education. No school of any rural district shall be suspended until ten days' notice has been given by the board of education of such district. Such notice shall be posted in five conspicuous places within such village or rural school district, provided, however, that any suspended school as herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the voters of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age."

Under provision of the first part of section 7730, G. C., as found in both of its amended forms, the board of education of any rural or village school district may, in the exercise of its discretion, suspend any or all schools in said rural or village district.

It is evident, that in taking the aforesaid action, the board of education of the rural school district mentioned in your inquiry, exercised the authority conferred by said part of said statute, it being the intention of said board, as stated by you, to suspend the remaining three schools before September, 1916. It further appears from your statement of facts, that on September 14, 1915, separate petitions signed by more than a majority of the voters in each of the suspended districts were filed with said board of education asking for the re-establishment of said schools.

In view of all the facts presented by you, you first inquire whether said board of education may now be compelled to re-establish said suspended schools and in your second question you ask for an interpretation of the terms "as herein provided", 'may" and "suspended district" as the same are used in the latter part of section 7730, G. C., as amended and as now in force.

The interpretation given to the terms mentioned in your second question will determine the answer to your first question.

The phrase "as herein provided," as I understand it, modifies the word "suspended" and relates to the authority of the board of education of a rural or village school district to suspend any or all of the schools of its district as well as to the duty of said board to suspend a school where the average daily attendance of the preceding year was below ten, when directed to do so by the county board of education.

Inasmuch as the action of the board of education of the rural school district referred to in your inquiry was taken after the passage of the act of the general assembly amending said section 7730, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 398, and in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amendment, and in view of the fact that the same authority was conferred on said board of education by the first part of said section as found in both of its amended forms, I am of the opinion that the provision of the latter part of said section as amended and as now in force applies to the suspended schools in question, and that said board of education is authorized within the limitations prescribed by said latter part of said amended statute to re-establish said suspended schools, either upon its own initiative or upon the filing of the petitions as therein provided.

Conceding therefore that said provision of the amended statute is applicable to the schools in question, it becomes necessary in answering your first question to determine whether said provision is mandatory in view of the fact that a majority of the voters of each one of the suspended districts have filed petitions with said board of education asking for the re-establishment of the schools in said districts. In other words, does the term "may" as used in the latter part of said statute have the force of "shall."

In the case of Railroad Company v. Mowatt, 35 O. S., 284, the court in its opinion at page 287 said:

> "Where authority is conferred to perform an act which the public interest demands, "may" is generally regarded as imperative. Whether it is to be so read in another case depends upon a fair construction of the statute."

In vol. 14, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, at page 979, the general rule is expressed as follows:

> "The word 'may' in a statute is sometimes used in a mandatory and sometimes in a directory and permissive sense. It has always been construed as 'must' or 'shall' whenever it can be seen that the legislative intent was to impose a duty and not merely a privilege or discretionary power, and where the public is interested and the public or third parties have any claim de jure to have the power to exercise."

While it may be argued, in view of the foregoing citations, that the latter provision of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398, is mandatory, the fact must not be overlooked that the legislature has itself recognized a distinction between the word "may" and the word "shall" in providing in the first part of said statute, in both of its amended forms that, "upon such suspension the board in such village school district may provide, and in such rural school district shall provide, for the conveyance of pupils attending such schools to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district."

I have already held in a former opinion, that the local board of education is the "suspending authority" referred to in said statute. I think it was the intention of the legislature to vest in said local board the discretion to determine, in view of all the facts and circumstances in each particular case, whether or not a suspended school should be re-established "at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age," even though a petition signed by at least a majority of the voters of the suspended district is filed with said board asking for such re-establishment.

In this connection I call your attention to the provisions of section 7644, G. C., which authorize each board of education to establish a sufficient number of elementary schools to provide for the free education of the youth of school age within the district under its control "at such places as will be most convenient for the attendance of the largest number thereof."

In view of this provision of the statute it would be ureasonable to hold that the term "may" as above used has the force of "shall" and that it becomes the duty of a board of education, upon filing of the petitions as provided in said statute, to take the necessary steps to re-establish a suspended school if said board finds that the suspended district contains the required number of pupils of lawful school age.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the latter provision of said statute is directory rather than mandatory, and that the board of education of the rural school district in question cannot be compelled by writ of mandamus to take the necessary steps to re-establish the schools heretofore suspended by said board.

You further inquire as to the meaning of the term "suspended district" as used in said statute. In this connection I call your attention to the provisions of section 7646, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 228, which are as follows:

> "The board of education of each rural school district shall establish and maintain at least one elementary school in each subdistrict under its control, unless transportation is furnished to the pupils thereof as provided by law."

Under the provisions of this statute, taken in connection with the provisions of section 7644, as above quoted, the board of education of a rural school district has the authority to divide said rural school district into subdistricts and establish and maintain an elementary school in each of said subdivisions.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that insofar as rural school districts are concerned, the term "suspended district" as used in the above provision of section 7730, G. C., relates to a subdivision of the rural school district which, having been established by the board of education of such rural district under authority of sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., has been suspended by said board of education.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—PROVISIONS OF LAW REQUIRING TRANSFER OF TERRITORY IS DIRECTORY—SECTION 4696, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, DISCUSSED.

The provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, that "if at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer," is directory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 8, 1915.

HON. MILTON HAINES, Prosecuting Attorney, Marysville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 23rd, you enclose a letter addressed to me by D. H. Sellers, superintendent of Union county schools, under date of September 22, 1915, in which he states that certain residents of a portion of the territory comprising Mill Creek rural school district, of Union county, have petitioned the board of education of said county to transfer said part of said territory to the Ostrander village school district in Delaware county, and that it is claimed by those persons presenting the petition to said county board that said petition is signed by over eighty per cent. of the electors residing in said part of said territory.

Mr. Sellers requests my opinion as follows:

"Is that portion of section 4696, which reads:

" 'Provided however that if at least 75 per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer,' mandatory upon the county board irrespective of all other provisions of law, and all considerations as to the equitable distribution of territory among the school districts concerned?"

As you are probably acting as the legal adviser of the Union county board of education I deem it proper to address my opinion on the question asked by Mr. Sellers to you.

This question calls for an interpretation of the provisions of section 4696, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397. The material parts of this statute are as follows:

"1. A county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, provided at least fifty per centum of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer.

"2. If at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer.

"3. No such transfer shall be in effect until the county board of education and the board of education to which the territory is to be transferred each pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by the boards of education acting in the transfer."

Under the first part of said statute as above quoted the board of education of a county school district is authorized to transfer territory to an adjoining county school district upon the filing of a petition of at least fifty per cent. of the electors of such territory asking for such transfer.

The second part of said statute by its terms makes it the duty of said county board to make such transfer when said petition is signed, by at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of such territory.

In either event, however, by provision of the third part of said statute, said transfer will not become effective until said county board and the board of education to which the territory is transferred pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of such boards, in favor of such transfer, and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by said boards.

While the second part of said statute as above quoted is mandatory in its terms, and would seem to make it the duty of a county board to transfer territory under the condition therein set forth, especially in view of the provision contained in the first part of said statute, it seems clear that said provision must be considered directory rather than mandatory when the same is taken in connection with the provision contained in the third part of said statute, which modifies said former provision, and makes the passing of resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of the boards of education, favoring such transfer, and an agreement between said boards upon an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness of the district from which such territory is to be transferred, conditions precedent to such transfer becoming effective.

In this connection I call your attention to opinion No. 656 of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, under date of July 27, 1915, in answer to a request for an interpretation of section 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 159, which provides:

"When a despository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, shall dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

I quote the following from said opinion:

"By comparing this section in its present form with the form thereof as it existed prior to the amendment referred to, it is discovered that the only change made therein by the general assembly in 1914, was to substitute the word 'shall' before the word 'dispense' for the word 'may.' This change, together with some of the other provisions of the act in which the amendment is found, 104 O. L., 158, makes it seem as if the intention of the legislature was to make section 4782 mandatory instead of permissive merely, as it had formerly been. But whatever may have been the latent intention of the legislature, it is clear that in order that its enactment might have the effect of imposing a mandatory duty, such intention must have been effectively expressed. The test of whether or not a statute is mandatory is furnished by considering whether or not compliance with it may be effectively enforced by mandamus. The character of the writ of mandamus is such as that it will not issue except where the right thereto is clear, nor in a case where the issuance would not accomplish any practical result.

"It is manifest that mandamus would not lie to compel individual members of a board of education to act under section 4782 of the General Code, because the action therein referred to is to be 'by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members,' from which it clearly follows that the right of the individual members to vote as they see fit, is preserved."

In conclusion it was held that the provision contained in the first part of section 4782, G. C., as above quoted, is directory rather than mandatory.

Inasmuch as said provision of section 4782, G. C., as amended, is similar to the provision contained in the second part of section 4696, G. C., I think the reasoning upon which the conclusion in the aforesaid opinion was based may be applied in determining the proper interpretation to be given to said provision of said section 4696, G. C. I am therefore enclosing a copy of said opinion for your consideration.

Replying to Mr. Sellers' question, I am of the opinion that said provision of said statute must be considered directory rather than mandatory and that under the provision of the latter part of said statute the transfer of the territory in question will not be in effect until the boards of education of Union and Delaware counties pass resolutions and decide upon an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness in compliance with the requirements of said provision of said statute.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CHANGES IN TEXT BOOKS FOR USE IN SCHOOLS—NO AUTHORITY FOR BOARD TO PAY EXCHANGE PRICE BETWEEN OLD AND NEW BOOKS WHEN OWNERSHIP REMAINS WITH PUPILS.

A board of education, in making change in text books for use in the public schools of its district, has no authority in law to pay the exchange price between the old and new books from its contingent fund, the ownership of the newly adopted books remaining with the pupils.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 8, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of September 23rd, you request my opinion on the following questions:

"May boards of education, which make changes in text books for use in the public schools, pay the exchange price between the old and the new books from their contingent fund, the ownership of the newly adopted books remaining with the pupils?

"If you hold such action to be illegal, and in the course of auditing achool accounts, this department finds that such expenditures had been made upon authority of the board, would the members of the board be individually liable?"

Under provision of section 7709, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 225, before a text book can be adopted and purchased by any school board in this state, the publisher must file a copy of such book in the office of the superintendent of public instruction, together with the published wholesale price list thereof. This same condition applies to a revised edition of said text book.

Upon the filing of said text book, or revised edition of the same, together with said wholesale list price thereof, section 7710, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 225, makes it the duty of a commission consisting of the governor, secretary of state and superintendent of public instruction, to immediately fix the maximum price at which such book may be sold to or purchased by boards of education, adopting the same under authority of section 7713, G. C., which price must not exceed seventy-five per cent. of the published list wholesale price, and the superintendent of public instruction must notify the publisher of such book so filed of the maximum price fixed. If the publisher notifies the superintendent in writing that he accepts the price fixed and agrees in writing to furnish such book during a period of five years at said price, such acceptance and agreement gives the publisher the right to offer said book for sale to said boards of education.

Section 7713, G. C., provides:

"At a regular meeting, held between the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August, each board of education shall determine by a majority vote of all members elected, the studies to be pursued, and which of such text books so filed shall be used in the schools under its control. But no text books now in use or hereafter adopted shall be changed, nor any part thereof altered or revised, nor any other text book be substituted therefor for five years after the date of the selection and adoption thereof, as shown by the official records of such boards, except by the consent at a regular meeting, of five-sixths of all members elected thereto. Books so substituted shall be adopted for the full term of five years."

The above provision of the statute, making it the duty of boards of education to adopt text books for terms of five years, was originally enacted by the general assembly April 22, 1896(92 O. L., 283), and required said boards of education, upon receipt of the proper information from the state school commissioner, to meet on the third Monday of August of that year and determine what text books should be used for the term of five years from said date.

In compliance with said requirement of the statute, text books (with the exception of revised editions and books substituted in place of those regularly adopted, which have been adopted at different times within said five year periods), have been adopted by boards of education in the years 1901, 1906 and 1911. It follows that the present term will expire in August, 1916.

Section 7714, G. C., authorizes the board of education of a school district to purchase from the publisher or publishers the number of books required by the schools under its charge.

Section 7715, G. C., provides:

"Each board of education shall make all necessary provisions and arrangements to place the books so purchased within easy reach of and accessible to all the pupils in their district. For that purpose it may make such contracts, and take such security as it deems necessary, for the custody, care and sale of such books, and accounting for the proceeds; but not to exceed ten per cent. of the cost price shall be paid therefor. Such books must be sold to the pupils of school age in the district, at the price paid the publisher, and not to exceed ten per cent. therefor added. The proceeds of sales shall be paid into the contingent fund of such district. Boards also may contract with local retail dealers to furnish such books at prices above specified, the board being still responsible to the publishers for all books purchased by it."

Section 7716, G. C., provides:

"When pupils remove from any district, and have text books of the kind adopted in such district and not the kind adopted in the district to which they remove, and wish to dispose of them, the board of the district from which they remove, if requested, shall purchase them at the fair value thereof, and resell them as other books. Nothing herein shall prevent the board of education from furnishing free books to pupils provided by law."

Under provision of section 7739, G. C., the board of education of a school district may, in the exercise of its discretion, furnish free text books to all the pupils attending the public schools in such district. Said section provides, however, that:

"All school books furnished as herein provided, shall be the property of the district, and loaned to the pupils on such terms and conditions as each such board prescribes."

Your first question relates to text books adopted by boards of education in compliance with the requirements of the statutes as above set forth, and sold to the pupils in compliance with the provisions of section 7715, G. C. The pupils being the owners of said text books, you inquire whether a board of education, in making a change in text books, either at the regular time for adopting the same or at other times, by a vote of five-sixths of all its members, as provided in section 7713, G. C, may pay the exchange price between the old and new books from the contingent fund, the ownership of the newly adopted books remaining with the pupils.

Upon careful examination of the statutes, I find no such authority. I am of the opinion, therefore, that your first question must be answered in the negative.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that, if an audit of the school accounts of the board of education of a school district discloses the fact that such expenditures have been made by said board, the members of said board voting for the same are individually liable for such expenditures, and are subject to findings for the amounts so expended.

I am informed, however, that boards of education have been advised by one of your examiners that such expenditures are legal, and in view of this fact, I doubt whether any court or jury would sustain a finding against the members of a board of education voting for such an expenditure. I suggest, however, in view of the conclusion reached in the above opinion that boards of education be properly instructed so that in the future they may govern themselves accordingly.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

Before the commissioner of the "Blue Sky" law may issue his certificate authorizing the disposal of securities it must affirmatively appear that the proposed disposal of such securities is not on grossly unfair terms, and that the issuer is solvent.

Commissioner herein advised to refuse certificate authorizing sale of $34,000 of the capital stock of The Investment Securities Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 8, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 9, 1915, in which you set forth in full a copy of a letter received by you from Mr. George R. McKay. This letter is very long and, stripped of verbiage in the way of argument and statement of business prospects, reveals the following state of facts:

George R. McKay holds a contract with The Associated Investment Company to sell all of said company's capital stock upon an eight per cent. selling commission basis. McKay represents that The Associated Investment Company is in prosperous condition, paying good dividends, and that he has already sold $150,000.00 of its stock under the terms of his contract. His anticipated net profit for selling the remaining $850,000.00 of its capital stock is $44,000.00, which he has fixed as the value of his stock-selling contract.

A corporation known as "The Investment Securities Company" was incorporated, presumably by McKay himself, with an authorized capital stock of $10,000.00, which has since been increased to $100,000.00. Its purpose is to take over McKay's stock-selling contract and to develop an organization for the purpose of handling the sale of the stock of the said The Associated Investment Company, and of other corporations.

McKay sold and turned over to The Investment Securities Company his stock-selling contract with The Associated Investment Company, and received in consideration all of its capital stock, amounting to $100,000.00 par value. Thereupon he (McKay) voluntarily and without consideration turned back to the said The Investment Securities Company stock of the said company to the amount of $34,000.00 par value, with the understanding and condition that such stock is to be sold at such price as will realize $25,500.00 net, which amount is to be used by the corporation in building up a selling organization and as its working capital.

McKay represents that the anticipated profit of $44,000.00 which will be realized from his stock-selling contract with The Associated Investment Company, which he has turned over to The Investment Securities Company, plus the $25,500.00 to be realized from the sale of the said $34,000.00 of capital stock of The Investment Securities Company, will place in the treasury of the said Investment Securities Company the sum of $69,500.00, thus making all stock actually worth $69.50 per share.

Based upon the facts above set forth, you request my opinion as follows:

> "This department asks the opinion of the attorney general's department as to whether or not, under the circumstances stated in the letter of Mr. McKay, this issue of $34,000.00 of the stock above mentioned, should be certificated."

In enacting the provisions of the blue sky law, sections 6373-1, et seq. of the General Code, the general assembly adopted two methods of accomplishing its purpose of restricting and regulating the sale of securities in Ohio, and thereby protecting the purchasing public; 1st by requiring dealers, with certain exceptions, to be licensed, 2nd by requiring the certification of the securities by the superintendent of banks, as "Commissioner," with certain exceptions, before the same can be sold in Ohio. The law attempts to protect the public not only by eliminating dishonest and irresponsible agents or dealers, but also by preventing the issuance and sale of unsound or worthless securities.

Sections 6373-14 and 6373-16 of the General Code are the sections providing for the investigation and certification of the securities and are in part as follows:

> "Section 6373-14. For the purpose of organizing or promoting any company, or assisting in the flotation of the securities of any company after organization, no issuer or underwriter of such securities, and no person or company for or on behalf of such issuer or underwriter shall, within this state, dispose or attempt to dispose of any security until such commissioner shall issue his certificate as provided in section 6373-16 of the General Code, which shall not be done until, together with a filing fee of five dollars, there be filed with the commissioner the application of such issuer or underwriter for the certificate provided for in section 6373-16, General Code, and, in addition to the other information hereinbefore required by paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of section 6373-9 of the General Code, the following: * * *"
> "Section 6373-16. Said 'commissioner' shall have power to make such examination of the securities or of property named in the next two preceding sections as he may deem advisable, and if it shall appear that the law has been complied with and that the business of the applicant is not fraudulently conducted, and that the proposed disposal of such securities or other property is not on grossly unfair terms, and in the case of securities that the issuer is solvent, upon the payment of a fee of ten dollars, the commissioner shall issue his certificate to that effect, authorizing such disposal. But if it shall not affirmatively so appear he shall so notify the applicant, in writing, and of his refusal to issue such certificate. * * *"

Under the provisions of section 6373-16, above quoted, before the "commissioner" may issue his certificate it must affirmatively appear not only "that the law has been complied with and that the business of the applicant is not fraudulently conducted," but "that the proposed disposal of such securities or other property is not on grossly unfair terms, and in case of securities, that the issuer is solvent."

When an application is presented to him it is the duty of the commissioner to determine from the facts presented and from his investigation whether such affirmative showing has been made. Whether a certificate should in a given instance be granted or not is rather a question of fact than of law. In the present instance, however, sufficient facts appear from the admissions and statements of Mr. McKay's letter to warrant me in expressing my opinion.

He admittedly paid only $44.000.00 for all the $100,000.00 par value capital stock of the said Investment Securities Company, and no part of the $44,000.00 paid for such stock is money, but consists entirely of anticipated profits in a contract to sell, upon a commission basis, the capital stock of another company named "The Associated Investment Company." If this contract to sell the stock of The Associated Investment Company upon a commission basis is of any value, it must necessarily be by reason of Mr. McKay's ability to sell stock, and not by virtue of any intrinsic value in the contract itself. It is to be observed that it does not appear from Mr. McKay's statement that his services in carrying out this stock-selling contract are to be at the disposal of The Investment Securities Company without further compensation, or that they are to be rendered as part consideration for the stock issued to him.

It is to be presumed that if he continues actively to sell the stock of The Associated Investment Company he will receive compensation for his services either in commissions or by way of salary. He therefore is selling to an Investment Securities Company a contract of doubtful value at more than double its anticipated value as fixed by himself, which anticipated value is undoubtedly based largely upon his personal ability to make stock sales.

Not only has Mr. McKay failed to show "that the proposed disposal of such securities * * * is not on grossly unfair terms," but it seems clear to me that his statement of the facts discloses exactly the opposite situation—that the whole scheme is a typical example of watered stock, the sale of which, if permitted, would amount to a fraud.

I also call your attention to a further condition that must affirmatively appear before the commissioner is authorized to issue his certificate under the provisions of section 6373-16, viz.: "that the issuer is solvent." Under the facts presented in Mr. McKay's letter, The Investment Securities Company, to my mind, is insolvent. It has issued all of its stock and in return has no assets except the $34,000.00 of its own stock returned to it by Mr. McKay, and a contract of exceedingly doubtful value, authorizing it to sell upon a commission basis the capital stock of another company.

I therefore advise you that upon the facts stated in Mr. McKay's letter you should not issue a certificate under the provisions of section 6373-16 authorizing the disposal of $34,000.00 of the capital stock of The Investment Securities Company.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO BIND COUNTY BY ANY CONTRACT—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MUST AUTHORIZE OR APPROVE.

The county highway superintendent has no authority under the Cass highway law to bind the county by any contract made by him and not authorized or approved by the county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1915.

HON. JOHN M. MARKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 4, 1915, in which you state that the surveyor of your county is claiming that under the new road law he has the authority to make contracts with reference to bridges and pikes, independent of the county commissioners, and that all the authority the county commissioners have in the matter is to pay the bills for the contracts he makes. Your inquiry is as to whether the claim of the county surveyor is well founded.

By the new road law I understand you to mean the Cass highway law, found in 106 O. L., 574. Chapter VII of the Cass highway law relates particularly to the duties of the county highway superintendent. It is provided by section 155 of the Cass highway law, section 7198, G. C., that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties.

It is provided by section 158 of the act, section 7201, G. C., that the county highway superintendent may lease or hire machinery, tools and equipment for highway, culvert or bridge repair, at a price to be approved by the county commissioners or township trustees. It is provided by section 160 of the act, section 7203, G. C., that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, purchase from any public institution, any road material, machinery, tools or equipment, quarried, mined, prepared or manufactured by said institution, provided the same conform to the standard specifications therefor, for highways, bridge or culvert work in said county.

Section 165 of the act, section 7208, G. C., provides that when lands are entered upon under the provisions of the preceding section, the county highway superintendent shall agree with the owners of such lands, subject to the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, as to the amount of compensation and damages, if any, sustained or to be sustained by the owners. It is provided by section 168 of the act, section 7211, G. C., that the county highway superintendent with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees may construct and maintain watering troughs and drinking fountains along the public highways and contract with property owners to maintain the same. It is provided by section 170 of the act, section 7213, G. C., that where lands are entered for the purpose of constructing a temporary highway, the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, agree as to damages with the owners of such lands.

All of the provisions referred to above are found in the chapter of the act relating especially to the powers and duties of the county highway superintendent, and they point unmistakably to the conclusion that the county superintendent is not authorized to make any contract binding upon the county unless such contract be authorized or approved by the county commissioners. I find no provision either in the chapter referred to or in any other part of the act which would warrant the conclusion that the legislature intended to confer upon the county highway superintendent authority to bind the county by any contract made by him and not authorized or approved by the county commissioners.

Answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that the county highway superintendent has no authority under the Cass highway law to bind the county by any contract made by him and not authorized or approved by the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—APPOINTMENT OF SUPERINTENDENTS AND INSPECTORS SHOULD BE MADE UNDER SECTION 1219, G. C., WHEN COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT HAS CHARGE OF STATE ROADS, OTHERWISE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER APPOINTS UNDER SECTION 1182, G. C.

In those counties in which the county highway superintendent has been designated to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts, within his county under control of the state, such county highway superintendent has the authority under section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., to appoint such superintendents and inspectors as are needed on state work, his action in the premises being subject to the approval of the chief highway engineer.

In those counties in which some engineer other than the county highway superintendent is designated to have charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads under control of the state, the state highway commissioner has the authority under section 175 of the Cass highway law, section 1182, G. C., to appoint the superintendents and inspectors needed on state work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 5, 1915, in which you state that the state highway department has been making appointments of inspectors on state road improvements under authority of the provisions of section 175 of the Cass highway law, section 1182, G. C., to the effect that the state highway commissioner may appoint such superintendents, inspectors and other employes within the limits of appropriations as he may consider necessary to carry out the provisions of the chapter relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department. You further state that your attention has been directed to the provision of section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., to the effect that the county highway superintendent, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, may employ such superintendents and inspectors as may be necessary in the construction of a highway improvement, and you inquire as to whether the state highway commissioner or the county highway superintendent is to be regarded as the appointing officer of the above mentioned employes.

A consideration of certain other provisions of the Cass highway law discloses that any conflict between the provisions referred to by you is only apparent, and that the provisions may be reconciled and effect given to both.

The superintendents and inspectors referred to in both provisions are, of course, such superintendents and inspectors as are required on work carried on by the state highway department. Under the provisions of sections 139 and 142 of the act, being sections 7182 and 7185, G. C., the state highway commissioner may designate the county highway superintendent to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within his county under control of the state, or may under certain conditions designate some other engineer. It is impossible to conclude that the legislature intended by section 1219, G. C., to provide that the county highway superintendent might employ superintendents and inspectors on state work in those counties in which some other engineer had been designated to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within such counties under control of the state.

The provision of the section in question to the effect that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, employ superintendents and inspectors on improvements in the making of which the state participates, must therefore be held to apply only in those counties in which the county highway superintendent has been designated to have charge of the highways under control of the state.

Authority to employ superintendents and inspectors upon state work in those counties in which some other engineer is designated to have charge of the highways under control of the state must, therefore, be found in some other part of the act, and such authority is to be found in the provision of section 175 of the act, section 1182, G. C., to the effect that the state highway commissioner may appoint such superintendents, inspectors and other employes within the limits of appropriations as he may consider necessary to carry out the provisions of law relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department.

It is therefore my opinion that in those counties in which the county highway superintendent has been designated to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within his county under control of the state, such county highway superintendent has the authority to appoint such superintendents and inspectors as are needed on state work, his action in the premises being subject to the approval of the chief highway engineer. In those counties in which some engineer other than the county highway superintendent is designated to have charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads under control of the state, the state highway commissioner has the authority to appoint the superintendents and inspectors needed on state work.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WHERE CONTRACT NOT COMPLETED ON DAY FIXED BY TERMS OF CONTRACT—PART OF INCOMPLETED WORK RE-LET TO SAID CONTRACTOR AND REMAINING PART COMPLETED BY HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—SAME APPROVED.

When a contractor fails to complete the work included in a contract with the state highway commissioner on the day fixed for such completion by the terms of said contract, the state highway commissioner may re-let a part of the uncompleted work to said contractor and complete the remaining part of said work through the forces of the state highway department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 14th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I am submitting herewith contract between the State of Ohio and The Adams Bros. Contracting Company.
> "The agreement to which we wish to call your especial attention is headed—'Proposal for Repairs,' and is as follows:
> " 'The undersigned further propose to furnish all material, all the tools, and do all the work necessary for the repair of bridges, culverts, masonry and drainage structure (approximate estimate of cost of such repairs being $4,700.00), in accordance with the plans and specifications for such repairs for a sum equal to the cost to us for the labor and materials plus 20 per cent. of said cost.'

"This proposal is signed by The Adams Bros. Contracting Company. Work was commenced under this contract and the sum of approximately $5,500.00 expended in an effort toward the completion of the work, but only two-thirds of the repairs have been completed, and partly owing to the fact that the contractor has not been prosecuting the work economically, the state highway department desires to place the work under its own direct control.

"Under date of August 25th, this department wrote The Adams Bros. Contracting Co. as follows:

" 'Regarding the repair of the old stone bridges on the national road in Belmont county, would say that our funds, as appropriated for this work under your contract, were all exhausted some time ago.

"'I now deem it advisable to continue this work through the forces of our own department. Inasmuch as the amount of money required to complete the improvement is indeterminate we will not hold you for the completion of the force account structures, but will do this work ourselves.

"'In carrying on your contract we will expect not to hinder you in doing our work, and request your co-operation that both forces employed on the improvement may go forward as rapidly as possible.'

"The answer of the contractor is dated September 4th, and is also quoted below:

"'We understand from your recent letter that your department claims the right to use your own men in making repairs to bridges and culverts, etc., on our portion of this improvement.

"'Our claim is that your department has not this right. Under our interpretation of our contract we have contracted to do this work on force account and are to receive 20 per cent. profit. If your department insists on doing this work, we shall claim our profit.

" 'Before anything is done in this regard, would like to have a talk with you. Please let us hear from you and let us know when and where we could see you.'

"With the return of the attached contract, I shall be pleased to have your opinion as to what the rights of the state highway department are with relation to this contract, and whether or not it is necessary for the department to pay The Adams Bros. Contracting Co. any percentage of the total cost of the work if completed by force account by the state highway department."

The contract in question contains the following provision:

"The party of the second part further covenents and agrees that the following papers shall be bound with, and be an essential part of this contract: Notice to contractors, instructions to bidders, specifications, proposal for the work and bond for performance of the contract."

In the notice to contractors the date fixed for the completion of said contract was August 1, 1915.

Under the head of "Instructions to Bidders" I find the following:

"Should the contractor fail to complete the work herein contracted for on or before the date agreed upon as mentioned elsewhere in this contract, or a later date set by the commissioner as hereinafter provided, he shall be liable for, and shall pay to the state, an amount of money equal to that which shall have been paid as salaries, wages and expenses to the person or persons employed by the state in engineering, superintending and inspecting the work from the above named date for completion until the same shall actually be completed and accepted.

"If the commissioner decides after due investigation that causes over which the contractor had no control delayed the completion of the work on or before the date specified, the commissioner may grant an extension of time for the completion of said work, but such extension of time shall not relieve the bond annexed to this agreement or the sureties thereon from any of the obligations therein expressed.

"If the contractor has not commenced, or carried forward with reasonable progress, or is improperly performing, or has abandoned, or fails, or refuses to complete the work under the provisions of this contract, the state highway commissioner may re-let the work or he may complete the same by force account, and in either case the highway commissioner may deduct the cost and expense thereof from any moneys that may be due or become due such contractor, and if there is not sufficient moneys due the contractor to pay for said work, the highway commissioner shall require the contractor or his bondsmen to pay for it."

It appears, however, from the statement made in your letter to The Adams Bros. Contracting Company, that it is your desire that said company shall complete all of the work included in items 1 and 2 under the head of "Proposal for the Work," and relating to the paving of the roadway proper and to grading said roadway and constructing new masonry structures, etc., as outlined in said items, and that only the work of completing the repairs of the existing bridges, culverts, masonry and drainage structures shall be taken over by your department and completed by force account.

I do not think you would have the right to take over a part of the work which is included in said contract and which was not completed on August 1, 1915, and at the same time permit the contracting company to complete the remaining part of said work according to the terms of said contract.

As I view it, this would have the effect of granting an extension of time to the contracting company and would recognize said contract as in full force and effect as to the part of the contract to be completed by said company and would give to said company the right to complete the repair work in question according to the terms of said contract, and in case said company would permit your department to complete said repair work by force account it would still be entitled to its percentage of profit according to said terms of said contract. Said company would, of course, be liable to the state for an amount of money equal to that which would be paid as salaries, wages and expenses of the person or persons employed by the state in engineering, superintending and inspecting the work from said date of August 1st until the same would be actually completed and accepted, and said extension would not relieve said company or the sureties on its bond from any of the obligations therein expressed.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that, unless you have granted an extension of time to said contracting company for the completion of the aforesaid contract, you have had the right since said date of August 1, 1915, to take over the work included in said contract and not completed on said date according to the terms of said contract and to re-let said work or complete the same by force account, and in either case, to deduct the cost and expense thereof from any moneys that may be due or become due said company, and if there should not be sufficient moneys due said company to pay for said work you could require said company or its bondsmen to make up the deficit. On the other hand, I am of the opinion that by permitting said company to complete the work of paving the roadway proper and of grading said roadway and constructing new masonry structures you would thereby grant an extension of time to said company, and if said company permitted you to finish the aforesaid repair work it would still be entitled to its profits according to the terms of said contract, subject, however, to the claim of the state for the additional expense caused by the delay in the completion of said contract after date of August 1, 1915.

However, your plan for completing the work may be realized by re-letting that part of said work included in said contract in said items 1 and 2, above referred to, which remains uncompleted, to The Adams Bros. Contracting Company. The repair work in question may then be completed through the forces of your department.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CHATTEL LOAN LAW—LICENSEE CAN ONLY MAINTAIN ONE PLACE OF BUSINESS—CENTRAL LOAN COMPANY, DAYTON, OHIO.

A licensee, under sections 6346-1, et seq., G. C., can only maintain one place of business for the purpose of conducting or assisting in such licensed business.

The Central Loan Company holding a license to carry on a chattel loan business at Dayton cannot, under authority of such license, make loans or renewal of old loans, at Piqua; nor can it maintain a place of business at Piqua for collecting such loans.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 11, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 2, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

"Columbus, O., Oct. 2, 1915.

"DEAR SIR:—We are in receipt of the following enquiry:

" 'Dayton, O., Sept. 25, 1915.

" 'State Banking Department.

" 'GENTLEMEN:—For several years we have maintained an office for making chattel loans at both Dayton and Piqua, Ohio.

" 'We have secured our license to continue business at Dayton, but we have decided to close our Piqua office, therefore, we have not applied for license in that city.

" 'We have about twenty-five accounts in Piqua that are past due, and we want to renew the balance on them for a period of about four months. It is our intention to make the renewals from the Dayton office, as we have a number of other accounts at Piqua still unpaid, but which will be paid at the Piqua office until closed.

" 'We do not intend to make any new loans at that place whatever.

" 'The writer of this letter called on your department at Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 23rd, and I refer you to Mr. F. R. Ambrose, as he will remember our conversation.

" 'Kindly advise as quickly as possible if the loans we wish to renew can be made from the Dayton office and collected at our former Piqua office, until paid. The said loans are not to run over a period of four months.

" '[Signed] CENTRAL LOAN COMPANY.'

"Kindly render us your opinion on the above question at your earliest convenience, and oblige,

Section 6346-1 of the General Code (106 O. L., 281), so far as applicable to the question under consideration, is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, partnership, association or corporation, to engage or continue, in the business of making loans on plain, endorsed, or guaranteed notes, or due bills or otherwise, or upon the mortgage or pledge of chattels or personal property of any kind, * * * at a charge or rate of interest in excess of 8 per cent. per annum, including all charges, without first having obtained a license so to do from the superintendent of banks, and otherwise complying with the provisions of this act. * * *"

Although it is not so stated in the letter of the Central Loan Company, I assume that it is engaged in the business of making chattel loans at a charge or rate of interest in excess of 8 per cent. per annum.

By virtue of the language above quoted, the legislature has made it unlawful "to engage, or continue, in the business of making loans" of certain kinds, and at a rate of interest in excess of 8 per cent. per annum without first securing a license and complying with certain restrictive and regulatory provisions of that and other sections of the act known as senate bill No. 7, (106 O. L., 281), of which said section 6343-1 is a part.

Apparently all of the restrictive and regulatory provisions of the act have been directed toward the loaning end of the business, and the legislature seems to have deemed it unnecessary to restrict or regulate the manner or method of making collections.

It therefore follows that an individual or company, which prior to the taking effect of senate bill No. 7 had made a valid loan of the kind and character sought to be regulated by the act, may continue to make collections upon such old loans until the same are fully paid without the necessaty of securing a license. Such individual or company cannot, however, without first securing a license and complying with the provisions of said act make new loans or a renewal of the old loans without first securing a license.

In view of the fact that the Central Loan Company may lawfully continue to make collections upon loans made in Piqua under its old license until such loans are fully paid, I am at a loss to understand why they desire to make a renewal of said loans from their Dayton office, unless it be for the purpose of securing the inspection charge permitted under section 6343-5 of said act.

Section 6343-3 of the General Code (106 O. L., 282), is, in part, as follows:

"Application for a license shall state fully the name or names, and address of the person or corporation * * * and the location of the office or place of business in which the business is conducted, * * * such license shall be kept posted in a conspicuous place in the office where the business is transacted * * * and not more than one office or place of business shall be maintained under the same license. * * *"

Under the language of this section, a licensee must state in the application for a license "the location of the office or place of business in which the business is conducted," and "not more than one office or place of business shall be maintained under the same license."

The Central Loan Company cannot, therefore, under its license to conduct such business at Dayton, make new loans or renewal loans at Piqua, or, by virtue of its Dayton license, maintain a place of business at Piqua either to assist in securing loans or renewals or to make collections upon any such loans or renewals. It cannot make new loans or renewals at any place other than its place of business at Dayton, nor can it maintain a place of business at any other place to make collections upon such new loans or renewals or to otherwise assist in any manner in the operation of any business undertaken under authority of its Dayton license.

Therefore, specifically answering the question asked by the Central Loan Company, it cannot, under the Dayton license, make renewal of Piqua loans and maintain a place of business at Piqua for the collection of such loans. It may, however, without securing a license to operate at Piqua, continue making collections upon its old Piqua loans made under authority of its former Piqua license, until such loans are fully paid, and, for that purpose alone may maintain a place of business at Piqua.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF WESTERVILLE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 11, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

In Re: Bonds of the village of Westerville, O., in the aggregate amount of $23,000.00, dated July 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and consisting of three separate issues as follows:

$7,500.00 of special assessment bonds for the improvement of Vine street in said village, being fifteen (15) bonds of $500.00 each, payable at stated times between October 1, 1916 and October 1, 1925.

$12,500.00 of special assessment bonds for the improvement of West Homes street in said village, consisting of twenty-five (25) bonds of $500.00 each, payable at stated times between October 1, 1916 and October 1, 1925.

$3,000.00 of special assessment bonds for the improvement of Winter street in said village, consisting of six bonds of $500.00 each, payable at stated times between October 1, 1916, and October 1, 1925.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Westerville relative to the authorization and sale of the above bonds, and I am of the opinion that the same are being issued for a purpose authorized by law; that the proceedings of said council and other officers, as shown by the transcript, have been regular and in conformity with statutory provisions; and that proper pro vision has been made to pay any deficiency which might result from a failure to collect from the property owners assessed for said improvement an amount sufficient to pay said bonds with interest as they severally become due.

I therefore certify that said bonds when properly drawn, executed and delivered will constitute, in the hands of legal holders thereof, valid obligations of the village of Westerville.

As no form of the proposed bonds and coupons was submitted with the several transcripts for my examination, I suggest that when they are delivered that they be submitted to me for further examination as to form and execution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FORT MEIGS PARK COMMISSION—CONSTRUCTION OF A BOULEVARD IN THE FORT—SECTION 2314, G. C., NOT APPLICABLE—COMMISSION SHOULD ADVERTISE FOR BIDS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 11, 1915.

MR. W. H. RHEINFRANK, Secretary, The Ft. Meigs Park Commission, Perrysburg, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—Your telegram of October 8, 1915, is received as follows:

> "Under section 2314, General Code, can the Fort Meigs park commission construct a boulevard in the fort costing over three thousand without four weeks advertising. If negative, can they legally subdivide the contracts for this work to bring each contract under three thousand. Would appreciate early response."

In reply to your foregoing inquiry I beg to say that said section 2314, G. C., does not include the improvement described therein because said section applies only to the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building. The memorial and property of the state at Fort Meigs under your control is not an institution or building within the terms of this statute.

However, the sundry appropriation bill, 106 O. L., 834, which carries the appropriation for the improvement you contemplate, provides in section 2 thereof that:

> "The monies herein appropriated shall be paid upon the approval of a special auditing committee consisting of the major appointee authorized by section 270-5 of the General Code, commonly known as the budget commissioner, the attorney general, the auditor of state, the chairman of the finance committee of the senate and the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives. Such auditing committee is hereby authorized and directed to make careful inquiry as to the validity of each and every claim herein made and pay only so much thereof as may be found to be correct and just."

The special auditing committee referred to in the above quoted section is provided for by section 4 of the general appropriation bill as found in 106 O. L., 825. As it is specially provided in section 6 of said general appropriation bill that all vouchers shall show that competitive bids were secured, "unless otherwise provided by law; or unless in the judgment of the board provided in section 4 herein, it is impracticable because of the peculiar nature or location of the work to be done, in which case the above mentioned board may in writing authorize the department affected to proceed to do the work, or that it was an emergency purchase," it would seem advisable and the better way to advertise for bids in order to meet any criticism or exception that might be made by said auditing committee because of your failure so to do. In view of the requirements in the general appropriation bill to which your attention has been called, I would respectfully suggest that you regard this advice as imperative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—BIDS CALLING FOR CERTAIN IMPROVEMENTS AT VARIOUS STATE INSTITUTIONS RECEIVED PRIOR TO LENGTH OF TIME REQUIRED BY STATUTE—SAID CONTRACTS DISAPPROVED—STATUTE PROVIDES THAT BIDS SHALL NOT BE OPENED UNTIL EIGHTH DAY AFTER FOURTH AND LAST PUBLICATION AND NOTICE SHOULD SO STATE.

Under section 2317, G. C., bids shall not be opened until the eighth day after the fourth and last publication, and the notice should so state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 11, 1915.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of October 5th, your board submitted to this department all the bids received on nine automatic side-feed, self-cleaning stokers for the Institution for the Feeble Minded; also affidavits and proofs of publication, and copies of contract between your board and the Detroit Stoker Company, of Detroit, Michigan, the low bidder.

On said date you likewise submitted all bids received by your board on two 400-H. P., side-feed, self-cleaning automatic stokers for the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics, at Gallipolis, Ohio; also three copies of contract between your board and the American Foundry & Casting Company, of Dayton, Ohio, the low bidder; and affidavits and proofs of publication from the Gallipolis Bulletin and the Cleveland Leader relative thereto, and advised me that the affidavits and proofs of publication from the Cincinnati Enquirer, Toledo Blade and Columbus Dispatch were on file in the office of the auditor of state.

On the same day you submitted to this department all the bids received by your board on two 400-H. P. water tube boilers for the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics, and copies of contract between your board and the Union Iron Works, of Erie, Pennsylvania, the low bidder; the same affidavits and proofs of publication relative to stokers being likewise submitted in regard to the water tube boilers.

You further advised me that all the bids were opened on Friday, September 10, 1915, at two p. m., as advertised, and all the contracts awarded September 27, 1915.

All of the advertisements hereinbefore referred to were begun on the 19th day of August and appeared on said date and the following dates: August 26th, September 2nd and September 9th.

Section 2317 of the General Code, requires notices to be published "weekly for four consecutive weeks next preceding the day named for awarding the contract."

In an opinion rendered to Hon. John E. McGilvrey, president of Kent State Normal School, Kent, Ohio, under date of August 19, 1915, I advised in reference to section 2317 as follows:

> "Said section requires the notice for bids to be published weekly for four consecutive weeks next preceding the day named for awarding the contract. This has not been done in this case. The earliest advertisement made in this case was on the 25th day of May, which was on Tuesday, and called for the opening of bids on June 19th, or twenty-three days prior to the opening of the bids. If the word 'weekly' is to be considered as a calendar week, four full weeks have not elapsed prior to the awarding of the contract. If the word 'weekly' is to be considered as any period of seven consecutive days, the first insertion of the advertisement was not twenty-eight days prior to the opening of the bids. In either interpretation the law has not been complied with. Therefore, I am of the opinion that contracts cannot be awarded under the advertisements made in this matter."

While it is true that in such opinion I stated that four consecutive weeks had not elapsed "prior to the awarding of the contract," yet from the context in which it is used it is apparent that such language should be read "prior to the day named for awarding the contract."

In the case in question, the advertisement has not been made in accordance with the provisions of section 2317, G. C.

If the word "weekly" is to be considered as referring to a calendar week, then the four weeks next preceding the day named for opening the bids would have been the week beginning August 29th; the week beginning August 22nd; the week beginning August 15th; the week beginning August 8th. There was no advertisement during the week beginning August 8th.

If the word "weekly" is to be considered as any period of seven days next preceding the day named for opening the bids, the first advertisement should have been on August 12th.

However, a careful consideration of section 2317, G. C., and the cases bearing upon the question of legal advertisement clearly convinces me that the language of section 2317 requires that bids shall be received up to the eighth day after the fourth and last publication, and that the notice should specify a date not earlier than eight days after the last publication as the date upon which bids will be received.

The law not having been complied with as to the time of advertising required by section 2317, G. C., I am unable to approve the contracts made on bids received under the advertisements.

I am this day returning to you all papers submitted in the above matters.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 12, 1915.

HON. JAMES P. WOOD, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 11th, which is as follows:

"I am in receipt of your favor of September 9, in which you enclose copy of opinion No. 463 in answer to my letter of September 3. This opinion was of very great assistance to me in clearing up the apparent ambiguities in section 4740, 104 O. L., 141, as amended 106 O. L., 398 and 439. However, the exact question with which our county board of education is confronted was not considered in that opinion. May I not ask for your further consideration of the following:

"In your opinion No. 463, at page 9, is the following: 'However, there is no objection to the board of education of such a school district, anticipating an application to the county board of education, entering into negotiations with a suitable person to act as part time superintendent and teacher, under the provisions of section 4740, and the making of complete arrangements, subject only to the making of the application and the establishment of the district as a separate supervision district after senate bill No. 323 goes into effect.' In another part of the opinion you state that senate bill No. 323 will not be in effect until September 2, 1915. In the case under consideration the election of a superintendent by the 'union of districts occurred August 31, an application for exemption was made to the county board of education on the same day, and was subsequently renewed, to wit, on September 9. I concur in your opinion that senate bill No. 323 was not in effect until September 2, and therefore the application made on August 31, was ineffectual. This being true, was there not a vacancy in the original supervision district on September 1st; and did not the county board of education, by virtue of section 4741, 104 O. L., 141, legally appoint a district superintendent for the entire supervision district on that date? If such appointment was legally made, will the application by the 'union of districts' to the county board of education, made subsequent to September 2 and before September 10, have the effect of eliminating the exempted district from the supervision of the district superintendent appointed by the county board of education on September 1?

"There are at present two persons claiming the right to act as superintendent for this 'union of districts,' one elected by the boards of education in said district and another appointed by the county board for the entire supervision district. I would be very glad to have the benefit of your opinion in determining which person is the legally elected superintendent."

In your letter of September 3rd you stated that in June, 1915, your county board of education, acting under authority of section 4738, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 396, divided the county district into supervision districts; that in one of said supervision districts, containing a village district and three rural districts, the presidents of the boards of education of said districts failed to elect a district superintendent as they were authorized and required to do under provision of section 4739, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, and that on September 1, 1915, the county board, acting under authority of section 4741, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, appointed a superintendent for the term of one year. You further stated that on August 31, 1915, the boards of education of the village district and one of the rural districts, above referred to, purporting to act under authority of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., at page 398, and as again amended at page 439, filed with the county board of education a copy of a resolution adopted by the two boards of education, which resolution recited that said districts had united for high school purposes; that a first grade high school was maintained therein; that said district employed a superintendent, and that said boards of education desired that said union of districts be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent.

Before considering the question as to whether or not the proceedings of the county board of education were valid, I deem it advisable to first consider whether the boards of education of the village and rural districts referred to in your inquiry had authority on August 31, 1915, to unite for high school purposes and employ a superintendent.

The answer to this question is found in the opinion No. 463 of this department, referred to in your letter, in which opinion consideration was given to the provisions of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, as amended in 106 O. L., 398, and as again amended in 106 O. L., at page 439, taken in connection with the repeal of the provisions of section 7705, G. C., and the amendments to certain statutes relating to school organization and control as made by the general assembly in 1914.

Without quoting from that part of said opinion most pertinent to your inquiry, I think said opinion taken as a whole makes it clear that while the village and rural districts in question had the authority on August 31, 1915, to unite for high school purposes under provision of section 7669, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 229, which section provides in part:

"The boards of education of two or more adjoining rural school districts, or of a rural and village school district, by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, may unite such districts for high school purposes," the boards of education of said districts comprising such "union of districts" were without authority to employ a superintendent for said union of districts, such authority having been taken away by the repeal of those provisions of the statute granting such authority. (See page 4 of said opinion).

The only union of districts that may continue as a separate district for supervision purposes under authority of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 439, which provides in part:

"Any village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes, which maintains a first grade high school and which employs > a superintendent, shall upon application to the county board of education before September 10, 1915, or before June 1st of any year thereafter, be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent," is that union of districts, which, prior to the repeal of section 7705, G. C., by the act of the general assembly passed in 1914, was united for high school purposes under authority of sections 7669, et seq., of the General Code as then in force, and employed a superintendent and which now maintains a first grade high school.

It follows, therefore, that the statements made in the third paragraph on page 5 of the aforesaid opinion must be modified to conform with the above limitation.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that inasmuch as the union of districts above referred to could not comply with that part of section 4740, G. C., as amended, and as above quoted, said union of districts could not continue as a separate district for supervision purposes under authority of said amended section, and the action of the boards of education of the districts comprising such union of districts, in employing a superintendent, was without authority in law and of no legal effect.

Coming now to a consideration of the question as to whether or not the proceedings of the county board of education were valid, I call your attention to the fact that section 4738, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 396, did not become effective until August 26, 1915. In the opinion hereinbefore referred to it was held that the provisions of said section 4738, G. C., as amended, are mandatory, and that the action of the county board of education required by said section must be taken after said date of August 26, 1915, and before the opening of the school year.

I am of the opinion, however, that, inasmuch as the action of the county board of education, in June, 1915, was taken after the passage of the act amending said section 4738, G. C., and in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amended section, the action of said county board in appointing a district superintendent for the supervision district, above referred to, was a sufficient ratification of their former action re-districting the county district for supervision purposes and that the proceedings of said county board are therefore valid. It follows that the appointment of the district superintendent was lawfully made by said county board under authority of section 4741, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, which provides that "whenever for any cause in any district a superintendent has not been appointed by September 1st, the county board of education shall appoint such superintendent for a term of one year."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—CONSTRUCTION OF SEWERS OUTSIDE OF MUNICIPALITIES—SANITARY ENGINEER CANNOT BE PAID OUT OF COUNTY FUNDS—COST OF CONSTRUCTION NOT PAYABLE BY CERTIFICATE OF INDEBTEDNESS TO BE TAKEN UP BY BONDS ISSUED AT COMPLETION OF IMPROVEMENT.

In proceedings under act found in 103 O. L., 734, sections 6602-1 to 6602-9e, G. C., an engineer cannot be paid out of county funds, to be subsequently reimbursed from money raised under said act.

In such proceedings it is not legal to pay for cost of construction as the work progresses by certificates of indebtedness authorized by section 6602-6, G. C., to be taken up by bonds issued under said section to cover entire cost at completion of the improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 12, 1915.

HON. ROBERT C. PATTERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 30, 1915, you submitted for my opinion the following:

> "I desire an opinion from you upon the authority of the county commissioners to finance the construction of a sewer, under the act providing for the construction of sewers outside of municipalities, 103 O. L., 734.
> "A petition for such an improvement has been filed in this county; and, under the provisions of the act, the first duty of the county commissioners is to employ a sanitary engineer for the preparation of plans, etc. The act provides for the paying of the engineer out of funds raised by assessment upon property benefited, in anticipation of which money may be borrowed either upon bonds or certificates of indebtedness. Can such engineer be paid out of county funds, to be subsequently reimbursed from the money raised under the act, or must the funds for the preliminary expenses be first raised as so provided? Can the construction of the improvement be paid for as the work progresses by certificates of indebtedness, authorized by section 6 of the act, such certificates being issued to mature in a short time; and then, at the completion of the work, bonds be issued to cover the entire cost, including the taking up of the certificates?
> "Unless the engineer and preliminary work can be paid for either out of county funds to be reimbursed or by certificates of indebtedness to be afterwards taken up by bonds, I am unable to see how the improvement can be started, since the first requisite is the engineer and his plans. If the work can be financed along the line suggested in my second question, the improvement could be started as soon as the plans are prepared, and paid for as the work progresses; a saving of both time and interest on bonds."

The statute to which you refer, found in 103 O. L., 734, is entitled:

> "An act authorizing the county commissioners of the several counties of the state for the benefit of public health, convenience, or welfare, to construct, maintain, repair and operate sewer improvements and sewage treatment works outside of municipalities, and to repeal certain sections of the General Code,"

Section 6602-1, G. C., provides that the county commissioners may, by resolution, lay out and establish one or more sewer districts within that portion of their respective counties, that lie within three miles of and outside of any incorporated municipality, and provides further, that the county commissioners may employ a competent sanitary engineer for the purpose, and in counties of over 100,000 they may create an engineering department.

Section 6602-2, G. C., provides that whenever the county commissioners declare the necessity of the construction, maintenance, repair, or operation of a sewer improvement, mentioned in section 1, and declare said improvement is for the purpose of drainage, etc., or when a petition, signed by the freeholders of the majority of the acreage in a sewer district petition, or when a petition signed by the owners of the majority of foot frontage of a proposed local or lateral sewer improvement, then the commissioners shall prepare the necessary plans, specifications and estimates and "as soon thereafter as possible the board of county commissioners shall declare by resolution, the necessity for making such improvements," which resolution shall contain a statement showing whether said sewer improvement is intended to be main, district, or intercepting sewer, the location, etc., a reference to the plans and specifications, the place where the same are on file, "the mode of payment of the cost and expense of the construction of said improvement, and a description of the lots or parcels of land and other property within said district to be assessed for the payment of a part or the whole of the cost and expense of construction and maintenance of said improvement to be paid by assessments." It further provides for the publication of a copy of said resolution and the posting thereof.

Section 6602-3, G. C., provides that after the expiration of ten days, after the completion of said publication and posting of said resolution, the board shall determine whether to proceed, and if it decides to proceed, a resolution for that purpose to be known as the "Improvement resolution" shall be passed by the board. It is provided that said resolution shall contain "a statement of the district or part thereof for which the proposed improvement is to be made, the character of materials to be used, a reference to the plans, specifications and estimates, and mode of payment of the cost and expenses of the construction and maintenance of the proposed improvement and the resolution may provide for assessing any or all of the cost and expense of such improvement to be paid by assessment upon the lots, lands, and other real property in such district as may be specially benefited thereby."

Section 6602-8, G. C., provides as to what may be included as costs, in the following language:

> "The cost herein provided for in addition to the amount of money paid or to be paid for the construction, maintenance, repair, or operation, of any such improvement may include the cost of publication and posting of all resolutions or notices, the cost of inspection, interest on bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of said assessments and the cost of making said assessments, as well as for any money paid for the condemnation or purchase of land or right of way for any such improvement, and the compensation of the sanitary engineer in making plans and specifications for and superintending the construction, maintenance or repair of any such improvement, and for any other expense necessary and proper for the construction, maintenance, repair, or operation of such improvements."

It is clear, therefore, that the cost of the improvement may include all of what has been foregoing stated.

Under section 6602-5, it is provided:

> "The county shall pay such part of the cost and expense of the improvement, maintenance, repairs and operation for which special assessments are levied as the board deems just, but such part shall be not less than two per cent. of all such cost and expense and in addition thereto the county shall pay the cost of intersections."

The first part of section 6602-5, G. C., provides as follows:

"If it deems expedient, the board of county commissioners may, by resolution, assess the real estate as provided in the improvement resolution, and cause such assessment to be collected, or at their option may issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of such assessments before the work is done or contracted for. Or the board of county commissioners may, at its option, defer such assessment until the work is completed, and then upon the certificate of the sanitary engineer in charge showing the completion of the work, by resolution assess the real estate as provided in the improvement resolution."

It is also provided that the assessment shall be payable in annual installments not exceeding ten in number.

Section 6602-6, G. C., provides as follows:

"For the purpose of paying a part or the whole of the cost and expense of the construction, maintenance or repair or operation of any such improvement, or for the purpose of paying the sanitary engineer provided for under the provisions of this act, and for paying for his assistants and of all his other necessary expenses, the board of county commissioners may borrow money at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum on certificates of indebtedness to be signed by its president and clerk; such certificates of indebtedness shall be made payable at a time not more than five years from their date, or the board of county commissioners may issue and sell county bonds as other county bonds are sold to pay the whole or part of the cost of the construction, maintenance, repair or operation of any such improvement, and to pay the sanitary engineer provided for under the provision of this act and for paying his assistants, and all his other necessary expenses. Said bonds shall be signed, issued and sold as other county bonds are signed, issued and sold, and shall run for a period or periods not exceeding eleven years from their date, and shall not bear a greater rate of interest than six per cent., said bonds shall express upon their face the object for which they were issued, and shall be sold for not less than par and accrued interest.

"The board of county commissioners may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law to pay such certificates of indebtedness and the interest thereon, or such bonds and interest thereon. Such levy shall be subject to all the limitations provided by law upon the aggregate amount, rate, maximum rate and combined maximum rate of taxation."

Your first question is whether the sanitary engineer provided for in section 6602-1 can be paid out of county funds, to be subsequently reimbursed from the money raised under the act, or must the funds for the preliminary expenses be first raised as so provided?

Under the provisions of the Smith law, the county commissioners are required to submit a budget each year and to specifically set forth therein the amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year, and under the provisions of said law the county commissioners are required at the beginning of each fiscal half year to make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has been provided, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and the balances thereof; and it is further provided in such law that no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget.

Such being the case, I cannot conceive of any fund in the county treasury which could be used for the payment of compensation or expenses of the sanitary engineer, even though the amount so expended is to be reimbursed from funds raised under the act in question. Consequently, I advise that the sanitary engineer provided for in section 6602-1 cannot be paid out of county funds, to be subsequently reimbursed from the money raised under the act.

Your next question is as follows:

> "Can the construction of the improvement be paid for as the work progresses by certificates of indebtedness, authorized by section 6 of the act, such certificates being issued to mature in a short time; and then, at the completion of the work, bonds be issued to cover the entire cost, including the taking up of the certificates?"

In this connection, section 5660 of the General Code must be considered. Said section provides in part as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county * * * shall not enter into a contract * * * involving the expenditure of money * * * unless the auditor * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation * * * is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund."

This section of the General Code is very similar to section 3806, G. C., relative to municipal corporations, and the decisions of the courts under section 3806 would have some bearing in construing the provisions of section 5660.

It was held in the case of Comstock v. Nelsonville, 61, O. S., 288, that section 2702 R. S. (now section 3806, G. C.), was applicable to so much of the cost and expense of a street improvement as was to be paid by the municipality out of funds arising from a levy on the general tax list, but not applicable to so much of the cost and expense of a street improvement as is to be paid by an assessment on the property bounding and abutting on such improvement or adjacent thereto.

The case of Emmert v. Elyria, 74 O. S., 185, held that sections 45 and 45a of the Municipal Code (1536-205 and 1536-205a, R. S.) (now sections 3806 and 3810, G. C.) do not apply to contracts for street improvements when bonds have been authorized by the municipality to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense of the improvement.

Whatever may heve been the reasoning of the court in such case, and whether or not the said case is in conflict with the case of Village v. Diekmeier, 79 O. S., 323, we are not concerned with in this opinion, for the reason that in the case of Emmert v. Elyria, the bonds had already been authorized, although not yet sold and in process of delivery—and the case of Emmert v. Elyria only goes to the extent of not requiring a certificate when bonds have at least been authorized.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that section 5660 of the General Code must be complied with at the time the contract is made, as provided for in section 6602-4, G. C. Such being the case, the money must be in the treasury or levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection, and not appropriated for any other purpose, or bonds must at least have been duly authorized. The issuing of certificates of indebtedness as the work progresses, in order to take care of the work done under the contract, would be in violation of section 5660, which requires the money to be in the treasury at the time of entering into the contract.

I therefore advise that the construction of the improvement cannot be paid for as the work progresses by certificates of indebtedness authorized by section 6 of the act, but that the entire money called for by such contract, insofar as the county's portion thereof is concerned, must be in the treasury at the time of entering into the contract; the case of Comstock v. Nelsonville, supra—if the same construction is to be given section 5660 as was given by the court in said case in regard to section 3806—being authority that no certificate is required relative to the amount that is to be paid by assessment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—REVENUES DERIVED FROM LEASES, SALES, ETC., ARE TO BE PAID INTO STATE TREASURY—PUBLIC PARK PATROLMEN PAYABLE ONLY FROM FUNDS APPROPRIATED FOR THAT SPECIFIC PURPOSE.

Revenues derived from the lease of land and sales of special privileges by the superintendent of public works are to be covered into the state treasury, and the salaries of the patrolmen of the public parks of the state can only be paid from the funds made available through specific appropriations for that purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "House bill No. 456, O. L., 105-106, page 380, entitled an act to provide for the control and management of the public parks of the state. Section 3 of this act fixes the salary, and evidently intends to provide the salaries from which these payments shall be made.
> "It was the intention of the author of this bill to arrange for the payment of these salaries out of the revenues derived from the lease of lands and the sale of special privileges without the necessity of direct appropriations from the general assembly.
> "This department is greatly limited on account of funds, and if this money is available, it will greatly relieve an embarrassing situation. The statute setting apart these reservoirs, provides that the funds derived from these sources shall be kept in separate books, and the receipts of each reservoir credited to its particular fund, but under the budget system, all these revenues have been paid into the general revenue fund.
> "Kindly advise me whether or not in your opinion we may draw on these funds for the payment of the salaries of the police patrolmen at each of the four state reservoirs, that have been dedicated and set apart for the use of the public as public parks and pleasure resorts.
> "Thanking you in advance for your kindness in this matter, * * *"

Section 3 of the act to which you refer is to be found on page 381, 106 O. L., and is as follows:

> "Rule 3. The superintendent of public works is hereby authorized to employ one police patrolman at each reservoir park, at a salary of nine hundred dollars per year, two assistant police patrolmen at each state reservoir for three and one-half months, prior to and including Labor Day, at the rate of sixty-five dollars per month, and may expend for special patrolmen at each state reservoir during the summer months, a sum not exceeding ninety dollars, at the rate of $2.50 per day for each patrolman employed, all of which expenses shall be paid from the receipts from leases, boat permits and sale of special privileges to be derived from each of the state reservoir parks or funds appropriated for such purposes, but no funds shall be expended for this purpose upon any reservoir in excess of its own earnings, except from funds especially appropriated for such purposes."

It will be noted that the act referred to, which is an amendment to section 479 of the General Code, is simply a code of rules governing the operation of the public parks under consideration. Section 3 of the same, which is characterized as "Rule 3," authorizes the superintendent of public works to employ one police patrolman at each reservoir park at a specified salary, fixes the maximum amount that can be expended for special patrolmen during summer months, the rate of pay per day for such patrolmen, and contains a provision that the expenses of such patrolmen shall be paid from the various receipts to be derived from each of the state reservoir parks, or funds appropriated for such purposes. It also contains a provision to the effect that the expenditures for such purpose for each reservoir shall not exceed its own earnings, except from funds especially appropriated for such purpose.

It is apparent from a reading of section 3 of house bill No. 456, supra, that there was an intention manifested in the act to make an exception to the general rule with reference to turning into the treasury receipts from leases, boat permits, and sales of special privileges, and to permit same to be applied without special appropriation to the payment of the salaries of the police patrolmen.

Sections 477 and 478 of the General Code, to be found on page 129 of 103 O. L., are still in force, and are as follows:

> "Section 477. All revenues derived from the granting of leases of lands, docks, boat landings and other special privileges connected with the state parks or pleasure resorts, shall be covered into the treasury of the state to the credit of the general revenue fund.
> "Section 478. The superintendent of public works shall collect, or cause to be collected, all rentals for leases of state lands, pipe permits, boat licenses, dock licenses in state parks, and moneys for special privileges of any nature in or adjacent to such parks, and shall keep such accounts in separate books to be provided for that purpose, and in transmitting such funds to the state treasurer he shall accompany them with a separate statement, giving the names of persons from whom and for what purpose such moneys were collected, and to what park or pleasure resort such funds are to be credited, and shall furnish a duplicate statement to the auditor of state."

In addition to the provisions contained in sections 477 and 478, which charge the superintendent of public works with the duty of transmitting all receipts from the granting of leases of lands, docks, boat landings, and other special privileges connected with state parks or pleasure resorts to the state treasurer to be covered into the general revenue fund, there is a provision contained in section 24-1 of the General Code, which was approved June 3, 1915, 106 O. L., 500, and which is as follows:

> * * * "and whenever moneys are payable to the state or the superintendent of public works pursuant to any sale or lease of lands or surplus water power and appurtenant rights executed or granted by the superintendent of public works or his predecessors in office, or lease of docks or boat landings or other special privileges granted or executed by the superintendent of public works or his predecessors in office, it shall be the duty of the officer, board or commission ascertaining or fixing such charge or the amount so payable, to certify the same to the auditor of state upon triplicate forms prescribed by such auditor, and at such time or times as he may prescribe, including in such certification such matters and information as he may direct. Within five days next following the receipt by the auditor of state of such certification, and also at the time the auditor of state determines the amount payable by a county pursuant to section 287 of the General Code, or payable by a taxing district pursuant to section 288 of the General Code, the auditor of state shall transmit to the treasurer of state for collection a duplicate of the charges so certified or determined. The treasurer of state shall immediately proceed to the collection of the charges upon such duplicate and shall forthwith notify the person, co-partnership, corporation, county or taxing district so charged upon such duplicate of the amount thereof, by mail to the address of such person, co-partnership, corporation, county or taxing district known to the treasurer of state. The treasurer of state, upon the receipt of any such moneys, shall set up an account thereof as otherwise provided by law, and shall have authority to employ such assistants, clerical and expert help, or other employes as he may deem necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of his office."

The amendment to section 479 of the General Code, contained in house bill 456, referred to by you, was approved May 25, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 28, 1915, whereas the provisions of section 24-1 of the General Code, supra, providing for the payment into the state treasury of the moneys received from any sale or lease of land, or surplus water power, appurtenant rights executed or granted by the superintendent of public works or his predecessors in office, or leases of docks or boat landings or other special privileges granted or executed by the superintendent of public works were contained in amended senate bill No. 297, which was passed June 3, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on the 4th day of June, 1915, subsequent to the passage and filing of house bill 456, supra, showing clearly that as the law stands at present it is the duty of the superintendent of public works fixing such charges or amounts so payable, to certify the same to the auditor of state in triplicate, who, in turn, transmits to the treasurer of state for collection a duplicate of the charges so certified or determined.

In your letter you state that all moneys collected from the sources referred to have been paid into the state treasury, and you enquire whether you may draw on this fund for payment of the salaries of the police patrolmen at each of the four state reservoirs that have been dedicated and set apart as public parks and pleasure resorts.

Section 22 of article II of the constitution of Ohio is as follows:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law, and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

It is my opinion, therefore, that under the existing law all moneys derived from the sources enumerated in your letter must be covered into the state treasury, and in view of the provisions of article II of the constitution, the payment of salaries of the police patrolmen at the state reservoirs which have been dedicated as public parks, under the provisions of section 3 of the amendment to section 479 of the General Code, supra, can only be made from the funds made available through a specific appropriation for that purpose.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—LICENSE FOR SALE OF FEED STUFFS—WHAT CERTIFICATE MUST CONTAIN.

Before license for the sale of feed stuffs can be granted by the board of agriculture, a certificate must be filed showing the minimum percentage of protein, the minimum percentage of crude fat, and the maximum percentage of crude fibre as the constituent parts of the feed stuff; the purpose of the law being to protect the public from the imposition on it of a feed stuff containing a lesser percentage of protein and crude fat or a greater percentage of crude fibre than that stated in the certificate provided for in section 1141, G. C., as amended. There is no penalty provided for failure to state the minimum percentage of crude fibre.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 13, 1915.

Board of Agriculture of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Referring to your request for an opinion as to the requirements of section 1141 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., 156), with reference to the contents of the certificate therein referred to, and as to whether or not the enforcing "feed stuffs" officer of the department has implied authority essential to the execution of the laws covering impractical provisions that are a detriment to their enforcement, permit me to advise that section 1141 of the General Code, as amended, supra, with reference to the particular question involved is, in part, as follows:

> "Such certificate shall contain also a chemical analysis of the product to be sold which shall state the minimum percentage of crude protein, allowing one per cent. of nitrogen to equal six and one-fourth per cent. of protein of crude fat and crude fibre, also the maximum percentage of crude fibre of the product to be sold."

Under a strict reading of the provision just quoted, the only requirement of the law is that the certificate shall contain a chemical analysis of the product to be sold, which shall state the "minimum percentage of crude protein" and the "maximum per cent. of crude fibre" of the product to be sold.

As you have advised me in your letter and personally that it is not only impractical, but of absolutely no benefit to the purchaser to require a showing of the minimum amount of crude fibre, it is necessary, in view of the peculiar wording of the provisions contained in section 1141 of the General Code, which, according to your statement to me, is meaningless insofar as there is no such product as "protein of crude fat and crude fibre," to resort to section 1147 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., 158), to determine just what requirement was in the legislative mind when the law was enacted.

Fibre is of the least value of all the constituents of feed stuffs, and the purpose of the law is to guard against the imposition on the purchaser of feed stuffs which contain a greater percentage of fibre than that certified to under the provisions of section 1141 of the General Code, as amended, supra, or a smaller percentage of protein and crude fat than that certified under the provisions of section 1141 of the General Code, as amended, supra.

That this is the purpose of the law is clearly manifested in the provisions of section 1147 of the General Code, as amended, which section is a penal section and provides, in part, as follows:

> "* * * and whoever sells or offers or exposes for sale any feed stuffs containing a smaller percentage of crude protein and a smaller percentage of crude fat, or a larger percentage of crude fibre than it is certified to contain, and whoever sells or offers or exposes for sale any condimental stock and poultry feeds, animal or poultry regulators, conditioners, tonics, or similar artioles not containing ingredients they are certified to contain, shall be fined, * * *"

In the penalty statute referred to there is no reference made to the requirement for the statement as to the minimum percentage of crude fibre. Section 1147 of the General Code being a penal statute must be strictly construed and is not susceptible of any extension to include a requirement for a showing of the minimum percentage of crude fibre.

In view of the statements contained in your letter and made to me verbally to the effect that the provisions in section 1141 as to the minimum percentage of crude fibre is meaningless from the standpoint of practical operation and is a detriment to the actual operation of the law, it is my opinion that section 1147, as amended, supra, which prescribes the penalty for a violation of the law, should be read in connection with section 1141 of the General Code, as amended, and be taken as a guide, and in doing so the conclusion must be reached that it was the intention of the legislature to exact a showing of the minimum percentage of protein, the minimum percentage of crude fat, and the maximum percentage of crude fibre, and that when such conditions have been met your board is authorized to issue the license for the sale of feed stuffs provided for in section 1143 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., page 157).

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—TRANSFER OF TERRITORY FROM ONE SCHOOL DISTRICT TO ANOTHER—HOW INDEBTEDNESS IS TO BE APPORTIONED—EQUITABLE DIVISION—WHEN TERRITORY ATTACHED TO SCHOOL DISTRICT WILL BE LIABLE FOR BOND ISSUE.

In transferring territory from one school district to another within the county school district, under authority of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, it is the duty of the county board of education at the time of making said transfer to make an equitable division of the indebtedness of the school district from which said territory is transferred, and that part of said indebtedness which said board, in the exercise of its discretion determines shall be assumed by the school district to which said territory is transferred, will become an indebtedness of the entire district as reformed and not merely an indebtedness of the territory transferred thereto.

In case the school district to which said territory is transferred votes in favor of a bond issue under authority of section 7625, G. C., for the purpose therein mentioned, and said territory is thereafter transferred by the county board of education to said school district, said territory will be liable for its share of the bonded indebtedness so created.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 13, 1915.

HON. EARL K. SOLETHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 23rd which is as follows:

"Under the recent law passed by the legislature giving the county board power to transfer territory from one school district to another, our county board is contemplating the transfer of a small portion of the territory of the rural school district of Milton township to the village school district of Weston. The rural school district of Milton township voted about a year ago to issue bonds for the erection of a new schoolhouse. By transferring this small portion of territory from the rural district of Milton township, does this relieve the territory transferred from the payment of its share of the bonded indebtedness?

"If the above question is answered in the negative, then in case the territory to which this territory is transferred should vote on the question of a bond issue, and the same should carry, would this transferred territory then be liable for its share of the bonded indebtedness of the school district to which it was transferred?"

In answer to my request for additional information you state in your letter of October 5th that the Weston village school district is not exempt from county supervision.

The authority of your county board of education to transfer the territory referred to in your inquiry is found in section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, which provides:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. * * * The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory, either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

The Milton township rural school district having a bonded indebtedness you first inquire whether the part of said district which the county board of education contemplates transferring to Weston village school district will, upon being transferred to said village school district, be relieved from the payment of its proportionate share of said indebtedness.

If said county board of education, for the purpose of transferring said territory, complies with the requirements contained in the first part of the statute as above set forth, and no remonstrance is filed with said board by a majority of the qualified electors residing in said territory, within the time limit therein prescribed, the legal title of the school property of the board of education of Milton township rural school district, located in said territory, will pass to and vest in the board of education of Weston village school district. Under provision of the latter part of said statute it will be the duty of the county board of education at the time said terirtory is transferred to make an equitable division of the school funds of said territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection, also an equitable division of the indebtedness of said territory.

In determining what proportion of the funds in the treasury of Milton township rural school district or in the process of collection shall be paid over to the treasurer of the Weston village school district, the county board of education will doubtless take into consideration the tax duplicate of the territory transferred as compared with the tax duplicate of the original district as it existed prior to said transfer, due allowance being made for the economy in administration which will be effected by said transfer of territory.

Likewise, in determining what proportion of the indebtedness of said rural township district shall be assumed by said village school district, the county board of education will take into consideration various factors upon which an equitable division of such indebtedness must be based. The question of what will constitute an equitable division of indebtedness in case of the transfer of territory from one rural or village school district to another was considered in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. Frank W. Miller, superintendent of public instruction, under date of October 8, 1914.

I quote the following from said opinion:

> "The situation presented, then, is that the rural district as originally constituted has no bonded indebtedness, whereas the district from which the territory is transferred is burdened with an indebtedness.
> "In such a situation the statute requires that a proportional part of the indebtedness of the old district, from which the territory was transferred, shall be assumed by the new district. What proportion shall be thus assumed depends upon various factors. If, for example, a school house, on account of which a bonded indebtedness has been incurred, is located in the transferred territory, then the new district should assume the entire indebtedness, allowance being made for the exclusion from the territory transferred of any territory formerly tributary to such school house. If, on the other hand, the indebtedness is not on account of any building which is located in the transferred territory, the assumption of indebtedness, if deemed equitable, should be made only on the basis of the fact that the new district will reap some benefit from the use of public buildings, i. e., that territory in the former township district and outside of the territory transferred will be served by the school house thus acquired. If no school building is acquired by transfer, then such portion of the bonded indebtedness of the old district should be assumed by the new district to which the transfer is made as will be equitable, having regard to the tax duplicate of the transferred territory, as compared with the tax duplicate of the original indebted district as it existed prior to the transfer, due allowance being made for whatever economy in the administration of the schools of the indebted district may be effected by detaching that territory from it and whatever additional burden the new district to which the transfer is made will assume by reason of the addition of such territory, in the administration of its schools.
> "In any event, if the school district which is indebted has accumulated money in a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds, such portion of such sinking fund should be paid to the board of education of the new district to which the transfer of territory was made, as corresponds to the proportion of the indebtedness assumed.
> "The indebtedness so transferred becomes an indebtedness of the whole district thus formed and is not to be met by levies upon the transferred territory only.

"In all such cases there is no hard and fast rule to be applied. The statute requires an equitable division of property and indebtedness, and this requirement has the effect of reposing in the county board of education making the transfer, a sound discretion with respect to the determination which it is required to make, which will only be disturbed by the courts in case of its abuse."

I concur in the reasoning above expressed and I therefore enclose a copy of said opinion.

Replying to your first question I am of the opinion that if the board of education of your county, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4692, G. C., as amended, transfers a part of Milton township rural school district to Weston village school district, it will be the duty of said board, at time of making said transfer, to make an equitable division of the indebtedness of said rural school district, and that part of said indebtedness which said board, in the exercise of its discretion, determines shall be assumed by said village school district, will become an indebtedness of the entire village school district as reformed and not merely an indebtedness of the territory transferred thereto, it being understood that if the Milton township rural school district has accumulated money in a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds, such portion of said sinking fund should be paid to the board of education of Weston village school district, as corresponds to the proportion of the indebtedness assumed by said village school district.

It follows, therefore, that the territory which the county board of education contemplates transferring from said rural school district to said village school district will not, upon such transfer being made, be relieved from its burden on account of said indebtedness, but the rate of the tax levy for the payment of that part of said indebtedness transferred to said village school district, as made by the board of education of said village school district, and applied to the territory of said district as reformed, would be changed, and would, in all probability, be decreased.

You further inquire whether, in case said village school district as it now exists should vote in favor of a bond issue under authority of section 7625, G. C., for the purposes therein mentioned, and the territory in question is thereafter transferred by the county board of education from said rural school district to said village school district, said territory will be liable for its share of the bonded indebtedness so created. Upon the transfer of said territory to said village school district the same will become a part of said village school district for all school purposes. In view of the reasoning offered in support of the answer to your first question it would be unreasonable to hold that said territory would, upon being transferred to said village school district, be entitled to the benefits resulting from said bond issue without being liable for its share of said bonded indebtedness, even though the question of issuing said bonds be submitted to a vote of the electors of said village school district prior to the time said territory will be transferred.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your second question must be answered in the affirmative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ORIGINAL BONDS, VILLAGE OF HUDSON, OHIO, ISSUED IN ANTICIPATION OF COLLECTION OF SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1915.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I hereby certify that I have examined the original bonds of the village of Hudson, issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessment for the improvement of Aurora and Streetsboro streets, respectively, and to pay the village's portion of the expense of paving such streets, opinion with respect to the proceedings for the issuance of which has been heretofore given by me to the industrial commission of Ohio, and that the form of said bonds is, in my opinion, sufficient in law.

BANKS AND BANKING—TREASURER OF BANK INCORPORATED UNDER LAWS OF OHIO—MUST BE STOCKHOLDER OF SAID CORPORATION IN SUCH AMOUNT AS MAY BE FIXED BY CORPORATION'S BY-LAWS—SEE SECTION 8661, G. C.

The treasurer of a bank incorporated under Ohio laws must be a stockholder of the corporation in such amount as is provided by the corporation's by-laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 6, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We have had submitted to us the question as to whether or not the treasurer of a bank incorporated under the laws of this state is required to be a stockholder in the corporation."

In the General Code relative to the organization and powers of banks no specific provision has been made relative to the necessary qualifications of a bank treasurer or its other executive officers. Section 9731 of the General Code provides that every director must be the owner and holder of at least five shares of stock in his own name and right, unpledged and unincumbered in any way.

Section 9714 of the General Code, which is one of the sections relative to the organization and powers of banks, provides as follows:

> "In all other respects, such corporation shall be created, organized, governed and conducted in the manner provided by law for other corporations in so far as not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter."

Section 8661 of the General Code, which is a part of the law relative to the organization and powers of corporations generally provides as follows:

"A majority of such directors must be citizens of this state. All directors and executive officers shall be holders of stock of the company for which they are chosen, in an amount to be fixed by the by-laws, and trustees of corporations must be members thereof."

The treasurer of a corporation is an executive officer, and since the sections of the General Code particularly applicable to banks are silent upon the subject of the necessary qualifications of officers of a banking corporation, it follows that the provisions of section 8661 of the General Code, above quoted, are applicable.

I therefore advise you that the treasurer of a bank incorporated under the laws of this state must be a stockholder of said banking corporation in such amount as may be fixed by the corporation's by-laws.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HOSPITAL—IN ORDER TO COMMIT A PERSON TO A HOSPITAL FOR INSANE, A "LEGAL SETTLEMENT" MEANS THAT THERE MUST HAVE BEEN A CONTINUOUS RESIDENCE IN COUNTY OF TWELVE MONTHS—AS TO NON-RESIDENTS, BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION IS DIRECTING POWER.

Residence of twelve months in county is necessary to establish the legal settlement required to make applicant for admission to insane hospital eligible therefor, except in case of non-residents of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK DELAY, Probate Judge, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 19th of September, in which you ask for an opinion on a question which is as follows:

"Will you kindly give me your opinion upon the following question:

"Where a person who has resided in this state for more than a year removes from one county to another, and there becomes insane, how long must he have resided in the latter county in order to justify his commitment to an insane hospital from said latter county?"

Section 1818 of the General Code is as follows:

"When application to a judge of the probate court is made for the commitment of a person to a hospital for insane, a hospital for epileptics or the institution for feeble minded, or whenever application to the superintendent of any other benevolent institution is made for the admission of a person thereto, such judge or superintendent shall require answers to the following questions:

"1. Where was the person born?

"2. When did he become a resident of this state?

"3. When did he become a resident of the county?

"4. If not a legal resident of the state and county, on what grounds is the application made."

One of the requirements of the section is the information as to when the person who is an applicant for admission to an insane hospital became a resident of the county?

Section 10492 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Except as hereinafter provided the probate court shall have exclusive jurisdiction * * *.

* * * * * * *

"6. To make inquests respecting lunatics, insane persons, idiots, and deaf and dumb persons, subject by law to guardianship."

Section 10989 of the General Code, in part, is as follows:

"Upon satisfactory proof that a person resident of the county or having a legal settlement in any township thereof, is an idiot, imbecile, or lunatic, the probate court shall appoint a guardian for such person, who by virtue of such appointment shall be the guardian, etc. * * *"

Section 3477 of the General Code is as follows:

"Each person shall be considered to have obtained a legal settlement in any county in this state in which he or she has continuously resided and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months, without relief under the provisions of law for the relief of the poor, subject to the following exceptions:

"First. An indentured servant or apprentice legally brought into this state shall be deemed to have obtained a legal settlement in the township or municipal corporation in which such servant or apprentice has served his or her master or mistress for one year continuously.

"Second. The wife or widow of a person whose last legal settlement was in a township or municipal corporation in this state, shall be considered to be legally settled in the same township or municipal corporation. If she has not obtained a legal settlement in this state, she shall be deemed to be legally settled in the place where her last legal settlement was previous to her marriage."

It will be observed that in section 10492 of the General Code, supra, the probate court is given jurisdiction to hold lunacy inquests, and that the jurisdiction of the court to hold a lunacy inquest is limited to such cases wherein the person is subject by law to guardianship. Again in section 10989, supra, will be found the provision to the effect that it is jurisdictional that a person be a resident of the county or have a legal settlement in a township thereof before he is subject to action on the part of the probate court towards the appointment of a guardian.

Section 1953 of the General Code is as follows:

"For the admission of patients to a hospital for the insane, the following proceedings shall be had. A resident citizen of the proper county may file with the probate judge of such county an affidavit, subsequently as follows:

"The State of Ohio_____County, SS:

"_____the undersigned, a citizen of _____County, Ohio, being sworn, says, that he believes _____is insane (or, that in consequence of his insanity, his being at large is dangerous to the community). He has a legal settlement in_____township, this county.

"Dated this_____day of_____A. D_____"

This section prescribes the requisites of an application for the admission of patients to a hospital for the insane, among which will be found a necessity for a showing as to a legal settlement in a township of the county.

The question propounded by you is, how long must a person have resided in a county to justify his commitment to an insane hospital from the county of his residence.

The question of legal settlement was considered in the case of In re Clinton Canady by J. M. Canady, vol. VII, Ohio Decisions, at page 285. This was a case involving the appointment of a guardian for an idiot, and the court in passing on the question of legal settlement, at page 286 ,says:

> "A legal settlement as in section 6203 used, in my opinion, means a continuous residence within the county for the period of twelve consecutive months. It is so defined in section 1492, in relation to pauper relief, and being an old phrase, for many years found in our statute law, it is fair to presume that the legislature intended it to have the meaning here that they elsewhere declared it to have."

It is my opinion, that under the existing statutes, a legal settlement for the purpose referred to can only be said to have been acquired only after a continuous residence of twelve months in the county, except in the case of a non-resident of the state, who, under the provisions of section 1950 of the General Code, as amended, page 447 of 103 O. L., may be admitted upon the authority of the Ohio board of administration irrespective of such non-residence.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—AUTHORITY TO RE-IMBURSE SHERIFF FOR REWARD PAID BY HIM FOR APPREHENSION OF A FELON IN SISTER STATE—REWARD.

County auditor is legally authorized to pay to the sheriff of the county the sum authorized by resolution of the county commissioners for the reimbursement of said sheriff for a reward paid by him for the apprehension of a felon in a sister state; such reward having been paid by the sheriff pursuant to an expressed willingness of the county commissioners to pay a reward for the apprehension of the aforesaid felon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 13, 1915.

HONORABLE F. C. GOODRICH, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "Enclosed please find a resolution, which is self-explanatory, and I desire to know whether or not the commissioners can pass this resolution and make the payment of this award legal by the auditor. As stated in the resolution, at the time the sheriff offered the reward the county commissioners did not by their minutes authorize him to do so, but it was satisfactory with them, and they now desire to fix their records so that the sheriff may be reimbursed for the money he has paid out of his own pocket.

"Thanking you for an early opinion, I am, etc."

With your letter you enclose draft of a resolution which your county commissioners propose to pass, which is as follows:

"RESOLUTION

"WHEREAS, Sheriff, Joseph Barnett and Chief of Police, Frank Gehle, of Piqua, Ohio, consulted with the commissioners of Miami county, Ohio, in reference to the offering of a reward of $100.00 for the capture and return of Giles Joiner, and

"WHEREAS, the said county commissioners of Miami county, Ohio, expressed to the said sheriff and chief of police their willingness to offer said reward upon being advised before said reward was offered, and

"WHEREAS, said sheriff and chief of police offered said reward, but neglected to so advise said county commissioners beforehand, and by means of the offering of said reward said Giles Joiner was captured and returned to this county for prosecution, and said Giles Joiner was convicted of the crime of murder in the first degree with a recommendation for mercy, and said reward was duly paid by the said sheriff to the chief of police of Winston-Salem, N. C.,

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the commissioners of Miami county, Ohio, that the said action of the said sheriff and chief of police in offering and paying said reward be, and the same is hereby ratified and approved, and the county auditor is hereby authorized to draw his warrant in favor of Joseph Barnett, sheriff of Miami county, for the sum of $100.00 to reimburse him for the payment of said reward."

Section 2489 of the General Code is as follows:

"When they deem it expedient, the county commissioners may offer such rewards as in their judgment the nature of the case requires, for the detection or apprehension of any person charged with or convicted of felony, and on the conviction of such person, pay it from the county treasury, together with all other necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for by law, incurred in making such detection or apprehension. When they deem it expedient, on the collection of a recognizance given and forfeited by such person, the commissioners may pay the reward so offered, or any part thereof, together with all other necessary expenses so incurred and not otherwise provided for by law."

The provisions of the section just quoted afford ample authority for the commissioners in the first instance to have offered the reward had action been taken to that end. No particular form of procedure is laid down in the statute, and under the circumstances if the question of reward was considered by the commissioners and action taken towards its offer, the action should have been taken under and pursuant to the provisions of section 2405 of the General Code, which provides that all proceedings of the board shall be public, etc., and the record of the action should have been made by the clerk of the board as provided in section 2406 of the General Code.

It appears from your letter, however, that the matter was only informally considered by the commissioners with the sheriff and chief of police, and that no record of any action that was taken was made by the clerk. While this, in a strict sense, would be a non-compliance with the statutes, sections 2504 and 2506 of the General Code, above referred to, it would not necessarily make invalid the action of the commissioners in adopting a suitable resolution for the reimbursement of an officer acting in good faith basing his action upon a previously expressed intention of the commissioners in paying a reward personally.

From other information than that contained in your letter received at this office and at the office of the auditor of state it appears that the sheriff in proceeding to pay a reward for the apprehension of Giles Joiner did so upon the clear belief that he had been so authorized by the county commissioners, and the fact that the county commissioners in the resolution submitted recite that a consultation was held on the subject and they now stand ready to adopt a resolution providing for the reimbursement of the sheriff would seem to bear out his contention. As above stated, there is no specified form of procedure laid down for the offering of a reward other than that it shall be made a part of the records of the office of the county commissioners, under the provisions of sections 2405 and 2406.

It is my opinion that if the commissioners should adopt a resolution providing for the reimbursement of the sheriff, the auditor would have authority to draw his warrant for the payment of the amount appropriated.

I understand that the auditor of state has had this matter before him officially, and he has indicated that no question would be raised as to the payment for the purpose referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF PEACE—AUTHORITY TO SUSPEND SENTENCES AND FINES—CAN ONLY REMIT FINE OR SENTENCE BEFORE SAME HAS GONE INTO OPERATION AND THEN ONLY WITHIN LIMITS AUTHORIZED BY LAW—AUTHORITY TO SUSPEND AFTER EXECUTION OF SENTENCE BEGUN—HAS LOST ALL JURISDICTION—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY PAROLE PRISONERS CONFINED IN COUNTY JAIL FOR NON-PAYMENT OF FINES—COUNTY AUDITORS MAY DISCHARGE PRISONERS INSOLVENT.

1. The authority to suspend sentences and fines in criminal cases, delegated to magistrates under the provisions of section 13711, G. C., is not abrogated by any provisions in section 1445, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 173, and may be exercised in convictions under said last named statute and in all other cases of misdemeanors when not prohibited by law.

2. The jurisdiction of a magistrate to suspend a sentence or fine in criminal cases is not a continuing one and must be exercised before execution thereof has begun and the defendant committed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. JOHN H. SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 27, 1915, bearing the following inquiries:

> "1. Has a justice of the peace, upon a plea of guilty, under section 1445 of the G. C., the right to remit or suspend part or all of the sentence imposed, either before or after the defendant has been committed to jail?

"2. Has a justice of the peace in criminal cases where he has final jurisdiction, the right to remit or suspend part or all of the sentence imposed?

"3. If a justice of the peace in a criminal case where he has final jurisdiction has imposed a fine or a fine and jail sentence, and committed the defendant to the county jail or to the work house in default of payment of fine, and the defendant has served part of the time required, then, at that time has the justice the right to remit or suspend the remainder of the fine or term and order the defendant discharged."

In your letter you connect the word "remit" with the word "suspend" in each set of facts upon which an inquiry is based. In order to simplify what hereafter may be said it is well to suggest that the two words "remit" and "suspend" cannot be used synonymously, and that a justice of the peace can only remit a fine or a sentence before the same has gone into operation or any action taken thereon, and then only within the limits authorized by law. In other words, it is only before the execution of a sentence has begun that a justice may amend, revise or vacate it and render a new sentence, which must impose at least the minimum penalty provided by law in such case. Lee v. State, 32 O. S., 113. Tracy v. State, 8 C. C. (N. S.), 357.

With the foregoing observations we will consider your inquiries as based only on the question of the right to suspend under the facts as presented in each case. While there is a great conflict in opinion in many jurisdictions, the prevailing authority in Ohio sanctions the inherent right of all courts to suspend a sentence in criminal cases, at least during the term at which sentence was passed. It was held in the case or Webber v. State, 58 O. S., 616, that:

"In a criminal case the court has the power to suspend the execution of the sentence, in whole or in part, unless otherwise provided by statute, and has the power to set aside such suspension at any time during the term of court at which sentence was passed."

This principle seems to have had the approval of the same court in the recent unreported case of State v. Whiting, 83, O. S., 447, even to a greater extent than in the case of Webber v. State, supra.

However, it is immaterial in this inquiry whether this right may be exercised independent of statutory law or not, because under the particular facts stated by you the power to suspend is expressly delegated or prohibited by statutory law; that is to say, under the facts presented by you, if the authority exists to suspend the sentence, it is granted by statutory law, and if it cannot be exercised under said facts it is because the statute law prohibits such exercise.

The statutory authority granted to a justice of the peace to suspend a sentence is found in section 13711, G. C., which is a part of what is commonly known as the "probation law" of this state. Said section provides as follows:

"When the sentence of the court or magistrate is that the defendant be imprisoned in a workhouse, jail, or other institution, except the penitentiary or the reformatory, or that the defendant be fined and committed until such fine be paid, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of said sentence and place the defendant on probation, and in charge of a probation officer named in such order, in the following manner:

"1. In case of sentence to a workhouse, jail or other correctional institution, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and direct that such suspension continue for such time, not exceeding two years, and upon such terms and conditions as it shall determine;

"2. In case of a judgment of imprisonment until a fine is paid, the court may direct that the execution of the sentence be suspended on such terms as it may determine, and shall place the defendant on probation to the end that said defendant may be given the opportunity to pay such fine within a reasonable time; provided, that upon payment of such fine, judgment shall be satisfied and the probation cease."

The provisions of this section confer upon justices of the peace full authority to suspend sentences under the conditions therein named. This authority may be exercised in any case in which the justice has final jurisdiction, unless its exercise is prohibited by other provisions of law applying to the particular case in question, and it may be said that it was intended to and does apply in a general way to every case coming within the final jurisdiction of a justice of the peace.

It is provided in section 13717, G. C., that when a fine is the whole or a part of a sentence, the court or magistrate may order the person sentenced committed to jail until such fine and costs are paid, provided that such person shall receive credit upon such fine and costs at the rate of sixty cents per day for each day's imprisonment. Again, by the provisions of sections 12386 and 12387, G. C., where a fine may be imposed, and the court or magistrate may order such person to stand committed to the jail until such fine and costs of prosecution are paid, the court or magistrate may order that such person stand committed to a workhouse until such fine and costs are paid, or until he is discharged therefrom by allowing a credit of sixty cents per day on the fine and costs for each day of confinement in the workhouse.

It is apparent, therefore, that in all cases, unless the statute covering the case provides otherwise, a justice may commit a defendant to the county jail or workhouse in default of payment of fine and costs, and that the provisions of said section 13711 will apply when such action is taken by the justice.

Referring now to your first inquiry, section 1445, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 173, provides as follows:

"Whoever violates any provisions of sections 1409 to 1444, both inclusive, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and the costs of prosecution, and upon default of payment of fine and costs shall be committed to the jail of the county or to some workhouse and there confined one day for each dollar of the fine and costs against him. He shall not be discharged or released therefrom by any board or officer except upon payment of the portion of the fine and costs remaining unserved or upon the order of the board of agriculture."

There is nothing in this section which, in my judgment, is in conflict with section 13711, supra. While it is true that this section makes it mandatory to commit to a jail or workhouse in default of payment of fine and costs, that authority under the statutes heretofore noted is already vested in the court to be exercised, at its discretion and this provision has no more force than any other provision of law fixing a definite penalty in any criminal case. It certainly could not be said that it should be given any more effect than a provision which makes confinement in a jail or workhouse the penalty or a part of the penalty in the first instance. The last clause of said section prohibiting any board or officer from discharging the defendant before payment of fine and costs, clearly refers to the board of county commissioners and the county auditor. The former under the provisions of section 12382, G. C., may parole prisoners confined in the county jail for non-payment of fines and costs, and the latter under section 2576, G. C., may discharge prisoners from the county jail upon proof of their insolvency. It may be said further that the authority to discharge from the county jail delegated to the board of agriculture cannot be said to reflect upon the right of the trial court to suspend the payment of the fine in the first instance. This provision of law I think can only be considered as intended to be effective in the event of actual confinement in the jail or workhouse.

I conclude, therefore, that the right to suspend a sentence under section 1445 supra, is not abrogated by its provisions. In reaching this conclusion I am not unmindful of the opinion of the assistant attorney general, reported at page 221 of the attorney general's reports for the year 1908. It must be remembered, however, that the probation law at that time had just gone into effect and no opportunity had been given to know anything of the results to be accomplished under it or of its application as defined by the courts under other statutes. I do not believe that the learned writer of that opinion would reach the same conclusion at this time.

The latter part of your first inquiry and the whole of your last are limited to the question of the right of a justice of the peace, after execution of sentence has begun and the defendant is confined in the jail or workhouse, to suspend the remainder of such sentence. The authority to so suspend a sentence under such circumstances is one of great doubt, and while supported by some courts the tendency of modern decisions is against it. It seems now to be the prevailing opinion that after a court has sentenced a prisoner, and execution of said sentence has begun, the court has lost all jurisdiction. This conclusion may be due to the fact that under our recent statutory laws ample provisions for parole and other similar measures have been made, which, to a great extent, supply the loss of such authority by the trial court.

In the case of State v. Perrill, 59 law bulletin, 371, it was held that after a sentence to the penitentiary or reformatory the entire jurisdiction and control of the prisoner rests with the board of management of those institutions. The opinion of the court in this case may with equal reason be applied to the case presented by your inquiry.

As before noted, county commissioners have authority to parole prisoners confined in the county jail for non-payment of fines and costs, and county auditors may discharge prisoners under like circumstances upon proof of insolvency. Workhouse directors are also authorized under their general powers to parole prisoners. In view of these considerations I incline to the opinion that justices of the peace do not have a continuing jurisdiction and therefore cannot modify, change or suspend any sentence imposed by them after the same has gone into effect and the prisoner has been committed to a county jail or workhouse and thereby placed under the control of other authority.

I conclude, therefore, that justices may suspend the payment of fines imposed under section 1445, and that they may suspend any sentence in the cases named by you in your second inquiry unless in a case where such right is expressly prohibited, but that no suspension of any sentence may be made in any case after execution thereof has begun and the prisoner committed to the control of other authority.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CENTRALIZATION—TWO OR MORE SCHOOL DISTRICTS LOCATED IN SAME TOWNSHIP MAY SUBMIT QUESTION OF CENTRALIZATION TO ELECTORS OF DISTRICT—RESOLUTION DETERMINES WHETHER QUESTION SHALL BE SUBMITTED AT GENERAL OR SPECIAL ELECTION—CLERKS OF SAID BOARDS MAY PUBLISH NOTICE OF SUCH ELECTION.

Under the provisions of section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and section 4726-1, G. C., as found in school districts located in a township may, by resolution passed by each of said boards, determine to submit to the electors of said school districts the question of centralizing the schools of said districts, and in said resolution determine whether said question shall be submitted at the general election or at a special election called for that purpose. Pursuant to said resolution the clerks of said boards of education, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4839, G. C., may publish in their respective districts a notice which shall specify the time and place of holding said election and the nature of the question to be voted upon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. ARCHER L. PHELPS, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 8th you state that prior to the enactment of the new school code there existed in Bristol township, Trumbull county, a township school district and also a special school district under the old law; that after the new school code became effective the question of centralization was submitted to the electors of the old township district, exclusive of the old special school district, which was defeated; that the question of taking a vote under the new school code was considered, but owing to the fact that neither board of education was willing to relinquish the control of the schools in its district without first having determined whether or not the township as a whole including both of said districts (now known as rural school districts under provisions of section 4735, G. C., 104 O. L., 138) would centralize; that a bill was therefore prepared and submitted to the legislature by the terms of which separate rural school districts in a township would be authorized to vote on the question of centralization without interfering with the existing school districts unless the vote would be in favor of centralization and that said bill as submitted to the legislature was enacted into a law, and is now known as section 4726-1 of the General Code, 106 O. L., 442.

You quote a part of said section 4726-1, G. C., as follows:

> "In townships in which there are one or more school districts, the qualified electors of such school districts may vote on the question of centralizing the schools of said township districts, or of special school districts therein, without interfering with the existing school district organization until the result of the election shall have been determined."

You request my opinion on several questions which for the sake of brevity may be stated in one question as follows: Inasmuch as section 4726-1, G. C., does not provide for holding an election on the question of centralizing school districts of a township, how shall said question be submitted to the electors residing in the rural districts above referred to?

Section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, provides:

> "A rural board of education may submit the question of centralization, and, upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such rural district, or upon the order of the county board of education, must submit such question to the vote of the qualified electors of such rural district at a general election or a special election called for that purpose. If more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, such rural board of education shall proceed at once to the centralization of the schools of the rural district, and, if necessary, purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon. If, at such election, more votes are cast against the proposition of centralization than for it, the question shall not again be submitted to the electors of such rural district for a period of two years, except upon the petition of at least forty per cent. of the electors of such district."

Under provision of the first part of section 4726, G. C., as above quoted, the board of education of a rural school district may submit the question of centralization to a vote of the qualified electors of said district, and upon the petition of at least one-fourth of the qualified electors of such district, or upon the order of the board of education of the county school district, must submit such question to the vote of said electors, at the general election or a special election called for that purpose.

I have already held in a former opinion rendered to Hon. D. F. Mills, prosecuting attorney of Shelby county, under date of March 30, 1915, that if the rural board of education determines to submit said question at the special election called for that purpose the same may be done under the above provision of section 4726, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 4839, G. C., which makes it the duty of the clerk of each board of education to publish a notice of all school elections in a newspaper of general circulation in the district or post written or printed notices thereof in five public places in the district at least ten days before the holding of such election. Said statute further provides that "such notices shall specify the time and place of the election, the number of members of the board of education to be elected, and the term for which they are to be elected, or the nature of the question to be voted upon."

It was evidently the intention of the legislature in supplementing said section 4726 by the enactment of section 4726-1, G. C., to extend the authority to submit the question of centralization to cover the situation confronting the boards of education of the school districts referred to in your inquiry and to make possible the centralization of the schools of two or more school districts located in the township without interfering with the organization of said districts until the result of the vote on said question shall be determined.

The provisions of said supplemental section must therefore be read in connection with the provisions of said section 4726, G. C., for the purpose of determining the answer to the question presented by you. Under the well settled rules of statutory construction said supplemental statute must be construed, if possible, so as to give effect to the legislative intent in the enactment of said statute.

While the county board of education has authority under provision of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, to transfer one of said rural school districts to the other and by so doing said county board could then direct the board of education of the entire rural school district as reformed to submit said question of centralization to the electors therein under authority of the above provision of section 4726, G. C., and it would then be mandatory on said board of education of said rural school district to submit said question to a vote of said electors, this plan meets with the same objection raised when the plan, referred to in your statement of facts, was considered, viz., dissolving one of said rural districts and joining it to the other under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4735-1, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 138.

I am of the opinion therefore that under the provisions of said sections 4726 and 4726-1, of the General Code, the boards of education of the rural school districts referred to in your inquiry may, by resolution passed by each of said boards, determine to submit to the electors of said school districts the question of centralizing the schools of said districts, and in said resolution determine whether said question shall be submitted at the next general election or at a special election called for that purpose. Pursuant to said resolution the clerks of said boards of education acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4839, G. C., may publish in their respective districts a notice which shall specify the time and place of holding said election and the nature of the question to be voted upon. A copy of said resolution should be certified to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county in order that said board may prepare the ballots and make the necessary arrangements for the submission of said question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—TRANSFER OF PART OF COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT TO AN ADJOINING COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT—EQUITABLE DIVISION OF FUNDS OR INDEBTEDNESS MUST BE AGREED UPON BY BOTH COUNTY BOARDS.

Section 4692, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 135, and as in force prior to August 27, 1915, the date when said statute as amended in 106 O. L., 397, became effective, authorized the transfer of part of a county school district to an adjoining county school district according to the terms of an agreement to be entered into between the boards of education of said county school districts, in the manner provided in said section, it being essential under provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 135, that in said agreement an equitable division of funds or indebtedness of the local school district from which said territory was to be transferred should be agreed upon by said county boards of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 14, 1915.

HON. JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 4th, you request my opinion as follows:

"On June 25, 1915, the board of education of Lucas county, Ohio, agreed with the board of education of Wood county, Ohio, to the transfer of certain territory from the Ludwig school district of Providence township, Lucas county, Ohio, to the Grand Rapids village school district of Wood county, Ohio. At the time of the transfer the county board of education of Lucas county, Ohio, made an equitable division of funds and determined that the proportion of funds of the Ludwig school district of Providence township, Lucas county, Ohio, to be turned over to the Grand Rapids village school district of Wood county, Ohio, to be 11.6 per cent. of the total funds of said Ludwig school district.

"Query: Did the Lucas county board of education have the power to make the transfer of territory and the power to make the division of funds?

"This transfer was made under section 4692 of the General Code, 104 Session Laws, page 135, which section recites that the transfer shall be made by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts.

"Section 4696 of the General Code, 104 Session Laws, page 135, recites that at the time of transfer the division of funds shall be made.

"Section 4728 of the General Code, 104 Session Laws, page 136, recites that each county school district shall be under the supervision and control of a county board of education.

"In my opinion, the construction of the words, 'the board of education having control of such districts,' in section 4692 of the General Code, refer to the board of education of the rural school district, and not to the county board of education, for the reason that section 4696 provides that the division of funds must be made at the time of the transfer. Therefore, it must be made by the board of education having the control, and the only board of education having control of the funds of the rural school district is the rural board of education. If the county board of education had the power to make the transfer and the power to proportion the division of funds, there would be no way of compelling the rural board of education to turn over that proportionment of the division of the funds."

Section 4692, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 135, and as in force prior to August 27, 1915, the date when said statute as amended in 106 O. L., 397, became effective, provided as follows:

"Part of any county school district may be transferred to an adjoining county school district or city or village school districts by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts. To secure such consent, it shall be necessary for each of the boards to pass a resolution indicating the action taken and definitely describing the territory to be transferred. The passage of such a resolution shall require a majority vote of the full membership of each board by yea and nay vote, and the vote of each member shall be entered on the records of such boards. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, is placed upon the records of such boards and copies of the resolution certified to the president and clerk of each board, together with a copy of such map are filed with the auditors of the counties in which such transferred territory is situated."

You do not state in your letter that the Grand Rapids village school district is subject to county supervision. I am informed, however, by Mr. Clifton, assistant superintendent of public instruction, that said district is subject to such supervision, and this fact is material in determining what boards of education were in control of the school districts in question on June 25, 1915, the date when the board of education of Lucas county school district secured the consent of the board of education of Wood county school district to the transfer of the territory in question.

While the language of the first part of section 4692, G. C., as above quoted, is somewhat ambiguous, I think it was the intention of the legislature, in enacting said statute, to authorize the transfer of a part of a county school district to an adjoining county school district or city or village school district, by the mutual consent of the board of education of such county school district and the board of education of the adjoining county school district, or city or village school district as the case might be, and to limit the term "village school district" as used in said part of said statute to village districts exempt from county supervision.

In this connection I call your attention to the fact that the above provision of section 4692, G. C., authorizing said transfer of territory was re-enacted in section 4696, G. C., as amended by the general assembly in 1915, and as found in 106 O. L., 397, said section 4696, G. C., as amended and as now in force, providing in part as follows:

> "A county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, provided at least fifty per centum of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer."

Said section further provides:

> "No such transfer shall be in effect until the county board of education and the board of education to which the territory is to be transferred each pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of each board and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by the boards of education acting in the transfer; also a map shall be filed with the auditor or auditors of the county or counties affected by such transfer."

This section clears up the ambiguity in section 4692, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., and evidences the above expressed legislative intent in enacting said provision of said section 4692, G. C.

Under provision of section 4728, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 136, each county school district is under the supervision and control of the county board of education of such district.

Under provision of section 4736, G. C., as found in 104, O. L., 138, and as in force prior to the date when said provisions as re-enacted in section 4692, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, became effective, the county board of education clearly had the authority to change district lines within the county school district and to transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another, and an order of said county board of education transferring territory from one rural or village school district to another within said county school district, made under authority and in compliance with the requirements of said section 4736, G. C., was binding on the boards of education of the local districts affected by said transfer of territory.

It seems equally clear that a part of a county school district could be transferred to an adjoining county school district by mutual consent of the boards of education of such county school district, under authority and in compliance with the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as above quoted and the further provision of section 4696, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 135, which required that:

> "When territory is transferred from one school district to another, the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer," and that the action of said county boards of education would be binding on the boards of education of the local school districts affected by such transfer.

Inasmuch as the Grand Rapids village school district is not exempt from county supervision, I am of the opinion that the transfer of the territory referred to in your inquiry would be a transfer of a part of the territory of Lucas county school district to the adjoining county school district of Wood county, within the meaning of the above provision of section 4692, G. C., and that the boards of education having control of said districts would be the county boards of education of said county school districts.

However, in order to effect a transfer of the territory in question it was necessary:

(1) That the board of education of Lucas county school district should secure the consent of the board of education of Wood county school district to the transfer of the territory in question, and for this purpose it was necessary for each of said boards to pass a resolution indicating the action taken and definitely describing the territory to be transferred, the passage of such resolution requiring a majority vote of the full membership of each board by yea and nay vote entered on the records of such boards.

(2) That a map showing the boundaries of the territory transferred be placed upon the records of such boards and that copies of said resolutions certified to by the president and clerk of each board, together with a copy of said map, be filed with the auditors of said counties.

(3) That at the time of said transfer the boards of education of said county school districts should agree upon an equitable division of funds or indebtedness of the local school district from which said territory was to be transferred.

While it appears from your statement of facts that the board of education of Wood county consented to the transfer of said territory, it does not appear that the other requirements of the statutes as above set forth were complied with. On the contrary, you state that at the time said transfer was attempted to be made, the board of education of Lucas county school district made an equitable division of funds and determined that the proportion of funds of the Ludwig school district of Providence township, in Lucas county, to be turned over to the Grand Rapids school district in Wood county should be 11.6 per cent. of the total funds of said Ludwig school district.

The above requirements of the statutes are mandatory, and inasmuch as said division of funds was not agreed upon by said county boards of education, I am of the opinion that your question must be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BALLOT—THERE SHOULD BE LEFT AT END OF LIST OF CANDIDATES WHOSE NAMES ARE PRINTED UPON BALLOTS AS MANY BLANK LINES OR SPACES AS THERE ARE ELECTORS AUTHORIZED TO BE ELECTED TO THE DESIGNATED OFFICE OR OFFICES—ELECTORS MAY WRITE IN NAMES AND PLACE CROSS MARK IN FRONT OF NAMES SO WRITTEN IN.

Upon the ballot for township officers, in townships in which no primary elections have been held, there should be provided at the end of the list of candidates for each particular office a number of blank lines or spaces equal to the number of electors authorized to be elected to the designated office and electors may vote for such electors, other than those whose names are printed upon the ballot, as they may choose by writing in the blank space or spaces the name of their choice and placing a cross mark in front of the name so written in.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON OTHO W. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of October 11, 1915, requesting my opinion, is as follows:

"I desire your opinion as to the right of voters to write in the name of a candidate or candidates on the ballot on election day. There seems to be no doubt but that such can be done at the primary election. To be sure, it requires a certain per cent. to affect the nomination.

"I have been asked this question by two different townships. In the one township, there were nominated one democrat and two republicans, as trustees. The question is: Can the republicans write in a third name, and can the democrats write in two additional names? In the other township, the socialists, only, nominated a candidate for township trustee, both the republicans and democrats having failed to make any nomination for this position. Now, the question is: Can either the democrats or republicans, or both, write in names on election day?

"The difficulty in this situation, it seems to me, is found in that the candidates for township officers will all be on one ballot, as provided in section 5028 of the General Code, as amended in the 103 O. L. at page 520.

"Section 5070 of the General Code, among other things, provides:

" '6. If the elector desires to vote for a person whose name does not appear on the ticket, he can substitute the name by writing it in black lead pencil or in black ink in the proper place, and making a cross mark in the blank space at the left of the name so written.'

"Section 5071, General Code, provides:

" 'If there was no nomination for a particular office by a political party, or if by inadvertence, or otherwise, the name of a candidate regularly nominated by such party is omitted from the ballot, and the elector desires to vote for some one to fill such office, he may do so by writing the name of the person for whom he desires to vote in the space underneath the heading or designation of such office, and make a cross mark in the circle at the head of the ticket, in which case the ballot shall be counted for the entire ticket, as though the name substituted had been originally printed thereon.'

"Now these last two sections, to wit, sections 5070 and 5071 are very clear upon ballots where all parties have their respective tickets, but under section 5028, all candidates are grouped under the designation or title of the office for which nominated, in alphabetical order, according to surnames. This resolves the township election into a non-partisan election, in fact.

"In the two cases above cited, you will note that there are three nominations for trustees in the one case, and in the other case, there is one nomination for treasurer, and so far as the ballot is concerned, there is no politics indicated. Under the facts as above stated, I wish you would give me your early opinion as to whether or not other or additional names may be written in by voters on election day for these respective offices, or whether or not they will be obliged to vote for the person whose name is now on the ticket, or not vote at all for that office."

The question submitted by you involves a consideration of section 5028 of the General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 520, in addition to the sections referred to by you.

Section 5028 provides as follows:

"The names of candidates for municipal offices and the names of candidates for township offices shall be printed upon separate ballots, unless the corporate limits of the municipalities are identical with those of a township. Separate ballots shall be provided in all townships and in municipalities having a population of less than two thousand in which no primary is had for making nominations, which ballots so intended for the use of voters shall be so arranged and printed that the names of all candidates, whose nominations for any offices specified in the ballot have been duly made, will be grouped under the designation or title of the office for which nominated, in alphabetical order according to surnames. A single blank line or space shall be left at the end of the list of candidates for each different office."

This section governs the form of ballot in all those townships in which no primary election has been held. It will be noted that by the last sentence of this section it is provided:

"A single blank line or space shall be left at the end of the list of candidates for each different office."

It was clearly the purpose of this provision to give opportunity to every elector to vote for such person as he desired for any office, other than those candidates whose names are printed upon the ballot. With this purpose of the provision in view, it should be given such construction as will effectively accomplish that purpose, if the same may be done, within the reasonable significance of its terms.

While it is provided that a single space shall be left for each different office, I am inclined to the view that "office," as here used, is not limited in its meaning to the name of the position to be filled but that where there is more than one position to be filled, although designated as the same office, the purpose of the provision requires that equal opportunity be given to vote for a person to fill each of such anticipated vacancies in office. For instance, where there are to be elected three township trustees there are within the meaning of the term "office," as here used, in my opinion, three offices to be filled.

It would therefore follow that in the preparation of the ballot for township officers, in the case of all those offices in which there is to be elected but one such officer, a single blank line or space should be left at the end of the list of candidates for that office, and in those cases in which there are to be elected more than one officer for a particularly designated office there should be provided at the end of the list of candidates whose names are printed upon the ballot a number of blank lines or spaces equal to the number of persons to be elected to that office.

That is to say, answering your question specifically, with reference to the election of township trustees, a case in which three persons may be elected to that office at the coming election, in my view of the meaning of the last sentence of section 5028, there being three different offices, there should be left at the end of the list of candidates whose names are printed upon the ballot three blank lines or spaces, that electors may have opportunity to vote for three persons other than those whose names so appear upon the ballot.

No purpose for providing blank spaces at the end of lists of candidates can be suggested other than that electors may write therein the names of such electors as they may desire to be elected to that office and express their choice for that elector by placing a cross mark in front of the name so written on the ballot, and I am therefore of opinion that electors may lawfully write in the names of electors and vote for the person whose name is so written in the manner suggested.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

THE CITIZENS TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK COMPANY OF COLUMBUS, OHIO—LIMITATION AS TO AMOUNT OF ITS CAPITAL AND SURPLUS WHICH MAY BE INVESTED IN REAL ESTATE AND BUILDINGS.

The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company of Columbus, Ohio, a corporation organized as a commercial bank, a savings bank, a safe deposit company and a trust company, is limited in the amount which it may invest in real estate and building or buildings thereon used for the transaction of its business to fifty per cent. of its paid in capital and surplus.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 28, 1915, in which you request my opinion relative to a situation presented in a letter to you from Mr. Walter English, Cashier of The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank, of Columbus, Ohio, which letter you quote in full and is as follows:

"September 16, 1915.

"DEAR SIR:—In 1906, The Ohio Trust Company (now The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank) purchased a perpetual lease on the property at the southwest corner of High and Gay Streets as a site for its permanent home. This leasehold stands on our books at $130,000, and we pay an annual ground rent of $11,000 with the privilege of purchase of the fee in 1932 for $230,000. In case the privilege of purchase is not exercised, the ground rent of $11,000 remains unchanged perpetually. The lease contains a clause as follows:

" 'Said party of the second part for himself, his personal representatives, heirs and assigns, covenants and agrees with the parties of the first part, to erect on said real estate, in place of the building now on said real estate, a fireproof building, the same to be not less than twelve stories high, and to keep same in good repair and to promptly restore same to its former condition in case of partial or complete destruction.'

"We now desire to erect a banking and office building on the property and have negotiations on with the trustees of the estate of Mr. McCune, (who executed the lease) for a waiver of the above referred to clause, which waiver will enable us to erect a building of five stories in height with foundations, steel work, etc., strong enough to carry seven additional stories in case we should decide at some future time to add them to the five story building. Our counsel advises us that the trustees will agree to this modification. Will you therefore please give us a ruling as to the limit of investment we are allowed to make in a banking house. Are we permitted to invest sixty per cent. of our capital and surplus of $850,000, or fifty per cent., of our capital and surplus of $850,000., including, of course, the $130,000, at which the property now stands on our books. As we read the law, commercial banks, trust companies, and savings banks are restricted to sixty per cent., and safe deposit companies to fifty per cent., and, as you are aware, we carry on all four classes of business. Will the fact that we purchased the lease containing the above twelve story clause before the passage of the banking act permit us to exceed the limitation of investment, provided in the act on account of the fact that we purchased the lease subject to all of its terms and provisions before the law limiting the amount of banking house investment was passed?

"Very truly yours,

(Signed) "WALTER ENGLISH,

"Cashier."

Upon an examination of the records in the office of the secretary of state I have secured the following supplemental information:

The Ohio Trust Company filed its original articles of incorporation November 20, 1900. Under date of October 30, 1909, The Ohio Trust Company filed its election to avail itself of the benefits and powers conferred by the act relating to the organization of banks and the inspection thereof, approved May 5, 1908. (99 O. L., 276—section 36).

Upon the same date (October 30, 1909), The Ohio Trust Company filed a certificate amending its articles of incorporation, changing its name to "The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank;" availed itself of the privileges and powers conferred by "An act relating to the organization of banks and the inspection thereof," approved May 5, 1908; and in addition to the powers conferred by its original articles, it acquired authority "to establish and be a 'commercial bank, a savings bank, a safe deposit company, and a trust company, as defined and provided for in said act,' having departments for all of said classes of business."

The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company is, therefore, a corporation organized and authorized to carry on four classes of business, viz.: a commercial banking business, a savings bank business, a safe deposit company business, and a trust company business.

Although I have not had an opportunity to examine the perpetual lease referred to in the letter of Mr. English, I have been orally informed by him that no definite time is fixed by its terms for erecting the twelve-story building mentioned in the lease, so that so long as the present building remains on the premises there is no obligation on the part of The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company to erect the new building, and the time of such erection is optional with the bank.

Under the banking act of 1908 (99 O. L., 269—sections 46, 54 and 66), commercial banks, savings banks and trust companies are limited in the amount they may invest in real estate and the construction of buildings thereon for the transaction of business to sixty per cent. of their paid in capital and surplus (General Code, sections 9753, 9762 and 9774). Under section 65 of the same act, being section 9772 of the General Code, safe deposit companies are limited in the amount they may invest for such purpose to fifty per cent. of their paid up capital and surplus.

I will first consider the second question asked in the letter of inquiry, as to whether The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank is relieved from the necessity of complying with the limitations and restrictions imposed by a law enacted after its purchase of the lease in question, under the terms of which it assumed an obligation of constructing, at some future time, an improvement which will require an expenditure of money in excess of such limitation.

Section 9741 of the General Code, which was part of section 36 of the banking act referred to, is as follows:

> "Banks, savings banks, savings societies, societies for savings, savings and loan associations, safe deposit companies, trust companies, savings and trust companies, and combinations of any two or more of such corporations, heretofore incorporated in this state which have paid in the amount of capital stock required by this chapter to enable them to commence business, if they so elect, may avail themselves of the privileges and powers herein conferred, by signifying such election and declaration under their seal, attested by the signature of the president and secretary to the secretary of state and the superintendent of banks, which such secretary shall record, and his certificate be evidence thereof. When such election and declaration is so recorded, it shall confer all the privileges and powers conferred by this chapter, and from that time such association or corporation shall be governed by its provisions."

As stated above, the records in the office of the secretary of state disclose the fact that The Ohio Trust Company, under date of October 30, 1909, acted under authority of the above section and elected to avail itself of all the privileges and powers conferred by said act. The Ohio Trust Company was therefore, from the time of such election, and The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank is now, by virtue of such election and the law itself, subject to all the limitations and restrictions of the act.

The fact that a strict observance of all the limitations and restrictions of the law under which it has elected to act may necessitate the disposition of its lease under certain contingencies, will not be sufficient to relieve the bank from complying with such limitations and restrictions.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company is not relieved from the necessity of complying with the limitations imposed by said banking act, relative to the investment of its capital in real estate to be used as its place of business, by the fact that its purchase of the lease referred to and its assumption of the obligations therein contained was prior to the enactment of such act.

The further question remains as to what specific limitations upon the per cent. of its capital stock and surplus invested must be observed by The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company in erecting a building upon the premises leased by it.

As stated above, savings banks, commercial banks, and trust companies are permitted to invest sixty per cent. of their capital stock and surplus for such purpose, while safe deposit companies may only invest fifty per cent. of their paid in capital stock and surplus for such purpose.

The Citizens Trust and Savings Bank Company is organized to do four classes of business. It cannot be said that its capital stock is divisible, or that any part of its capital stock and surplus belongs or may be attributed to any of its four departments. It is a single corporation organized to do four classes of business, and if it is subject to any one of the limitations above referred to it is subject to all of them, or, in other words, it is subject to the most stringent of the several limitations placed upon the different kinds of business conducted by it.

Since the most stringent of such limitations is that inposed upon safe deposit companies by section 9772 of the General Code, limiting the amount which such company may invest in buildings and real estate for its own use to fifty per cent. of its paid up capital and surplus, it follows that The Citizens Trust and Savings Company must limit its investment for such purposes to fifty per cent. of its paid up capital and surplus.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUVENILE COURT FUNDS—NOT AVAILABLE TO PAY EXPENSES OF JUVENILE COURT JUDGES FOR ATTENDING BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES CONFERENCES.

No part of juvenile court funds are available for payment of expenses of juvenile court judges for attending board of state charities conferences to be held at Dayton, Ohio, November 3 to 5, 1915, under authority of section 1356, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. SAMUEL L. BLACK, Judge of the Probate Court, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR JUDGE:—Permit me to acknowledge your request for an opinion as to the authority of the juvenile judges to have their expenses paid in connection with attendance at the twenty-fifth annual conference of charities and correction to be held at Dayton, Ohio, November 3 to 5, 1915, your request arising out of a letter addressed to you by the secretary of the board of state charities, in which reference is made to sections 1656 and 1657 of the General Code. I find upon examination that the reference to the sections above referred to is incorrect, inasmuch as it should have stated sections 1356 and 1357 of the General Code, and I am informed that a supplemental notice has been sent out by the board of state charities making the correction.

Sections 1356 and 1357 of the General Code are as follows:

"Section 1356. At such times and places as it deems advisable, the board of state charities may hold conferences of the officers of state, county and municipal benevolent and correctional institutions, officials responsible for the administration of public funds used for the relief and maintenance of the poor, and members of boards of county visitors. Such conferences shall consider in detail questions of management of such institutions, the methods to secure their economical and efficient conduct, the most effective plans for granting public relief to the poor, and similar subjects.

"Section 1357. The necessary expenses of all the persons invited to such conferences shall be paid from any fund available for their respective boards and institutions provided they shall first procure a certificate from the secretary of the board of state charities that they were invited to and were in attendance at the sessions of such conferences."

Under date of November 9, 1914, the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices advised the probate judge of Highland county, Ohio, in answer to a similar question. A copy of the letter is to be found on page 34 of opinion book No. 31 of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, and is as follows:

"November 9, 1914.

"MR. J. B. WORLEY, Probate Judge, Hillsboro, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—In reply to yours of the 7th inst.

"We are of the opinion now that juvenile judges have the statutory right to fix mothers' pensions, they become eligible to an invitation to attend the annual conferences of the state board of charities, because the juvenile judge is now an official who is responsible for the administration of public funds used for the relief and maintenance of the poor, as provided in section 1356, General Code. So, if you have a proper invitation from the secretary of the board of state charities, this department will not criticize payment of your expenses in attending said conference, as provided by section 1357 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
"Bureau of Inspection, etc."

Upon an examination of the statutes referred to, including the juvenile court law of which the mothers' pension law is a part, it is to be observed that while the position of the bureau of inspection, as reflected in the letter quoted above, is correct insofar as it relates to the status of a judge of the juvenile court with reference to his being an official responsible for the administration of public funds used for the relief and maintenance of the poor referred to in section 1356 of the General Code, supra, and his eligibility as such to receive an invitation to the conference of the board of state charities, there is nowhere to be found in the juvenile court law, including the mothers' pension act, any provision for the appropriation of funds which may be used for the purpose of making payment of the expenses for attending the conference as provided in section 1357 of the General Code, supra. In fact, there is no provision of the law making available any funds to be used by the judge of the juvenile court for his expenses incurred by him personally.

In view of the foregoing, it is my opinion that there are no funds available to pay the expenses of juvenile court judges who may attend the conference of charities and correction, referred to, and in addition thereto section 1357 provides that the expenses shall be paid from any funds available for the respective "boards" and "institutions" in neither of which classes can it be said may be included a "Court."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—INSPECTORS APPOINTED BY SUCH BOARD—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PUNISH FOR CONTEMPT, A PERSON WHO DISOBEYS SUMMONS ISSUED BY SUCH INSPECTOR.

Inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board have no power to punish as for contempt a person who disobeys a summons issued by such inspector, under authority of section 6087, G. C., 104 O. L., 166.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 14, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours under date of September 25, 1915, as follows:

"Section 6087 of the Revised Statutes, as amended February 6, 1914, and contained on page 166 of vol. 104, Laws of Ohio, provides:

'In the performance of the duties imposed by this section on the inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board, said inspectors may summon and compel the attendance of witnesses before them to testify in relation to any matter which by law is a subject of inquiry and investigation, and require the production of any book, paper or document which they deem pertinent. They shall have authority to administer an oath to any person appearing as a witness before them. They may at all reasonable hours enter into all buildings and upon all premises within their jurisdiction for the purpose of examination.'

"In the performance of their duties, certain inspectors of this department, in the village of Greenfield, Highland county, Ohio, recently served several subpoenas through the marshal of the village, upon citizens of that village, on a Saturday, requiring their attendance on the following Monday. At the time designated in the subpoenas, three of the parties so served refused to appear and testify, on the ground that they had been advised by counsel not to appear for the reason that no penalty was attached to their refusal to obey said summons.

"Will you please advise this board in writing fully as to the power of the inspectors of this department under this provision of the statutes, and oblige * * *."

It may be first observed that whether or not section 6087, G. C., 103 O. L., 338, conferred upon inspectors of the agricultural commission power to punish for contempt, is immaterial here, since the same was repealed by the amendment of said section 6087, G. C., 103 O. L., 442, which conferred upon inspectors appointed by the state liquor license board no authority to administer oaths or to prosecute or punish for contempt, the authority of such inspectors being there limited to making certain investigations. It would not be seriously contended that the power to make investigations alone would carry with it the power to prosecute or punish for contempt.

Section 6087, G. C., was again amended in 104 O. L., 166, as suggested by you, to read as follows:

"The inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board, in addition to any other duties, by personal visitation or otherwise, shall make investigations to secure the names of all persons, firms or corporations liable to such assessment or increased assessment, whose names are not already on the duplicate, and report such names to the state liquor licensing board. In the performance of the duties imposed by this section on the inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board, said inspectors may summon and compel the attendance of witnesses before them to testify in relation to any matter which by law is a subject of inquiry and investigation and require the production of any book, paper or document which they deem pertinent. They shall have authority to administer an oath to any person appearing as a witness before them. They may at all reasonable hours enter into all buildings and upon all premises within their jurisdiction for the purpose of examination."

While it might be maintained that it is within the inherent power of courts to punish as for contempt, for a disregard of their lawful authority, it can certainly not be maintained that such power rests in officers or inquisitorial bodies whose authority is limited to administering oaths and summoning and compelling the attendance of witnesses in the absence of statutory authority therefor. The general power to compel the attendance of witnesses has little, if any, force in the absence of jurisdictional authority to inflict a penalty upon those who may choose to disregard the requirements of a summons. In re Heffron, 16 W. L. B., 285.

A careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose authority anywhere lodged for the enforcement of the power to compel attendance of witnesses above conferred by special provision, and it is not believed that the general provisions applicable to proceedings in contempt of court are applicable to the present case.

Section 12137, G. C., provides in part:

> "A person guilty of any of the following acts may be punished as for a contempt:
> "1. Disobedience of, or resistance to, a lawful writ, process, order, rule, judgment, or command of a court or an officer."
> * * * * * * *

If, however, an inspector appointed by the state liquor licensing board may be said to be an officer, it is not conceived that he is an officer in contemplation of that term as used in said section 12137, G. C., supra. This section assumed its present form in the revision of 1880, and the numerous provisions since enacted, conferring special authority to punish for contempt, disobedience of the orders and disregard of the authority of various officers, clearly indicates the interpretation given to the term "officer," as found in said section by the legislature, to have been limited to officers of the court therein referred to.

I am therefore of the opinion that there is no authority to punish, for contempt, persons who disobey summons issued by inspectors appointed by the state liquor license board.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ACTING THROUGH TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT HAVE AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE ROAD MATERIALS TO REPAIR TOWNSHIP ROADS—ALSO EMPLOY NECESSARY LABOR FOR SUCH WORK.

Under the Cass Highway Law, township trustees, acting through the township highway superintendent, have authority to purchase stone, gravel or other road materials to be used in the repair of township roads, and to pay for the hauling of such materials and employ the labor necessary in such work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. GEORGE W. PORTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 9, 1915, in which you refer to the following provision found in section 61 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C.·

> "The proceeds of such levy may be used to purchase stone, gravel, or other road material to be hauled by donation, or to pay for labor and hauling when the material is donated."

In your communication you allude to the sweeping repeal of township road laws by the Cass highway law, and state that under the former law the township trustees in your county always purchased stone and gravel and paid for the labor and the hauling of the same out of the township road funds, and you observe that if the provision of the Cass highway law quoted above is to be given a literal interpretation, it would be impossible for township trustees to purchase stone, gravel, or other road materials, unless the same be hauled by donation, and likewise impossible for them to pay for the labor and hauling unless the materials be donated. You further state that if such a construction of the law be correct, it would be impossible in your county to have any stone or gravel placed upon the roads by the township trustees, and you therefore inquire as to whether under the Cass highway law township trustees are authorized to purchase stone and gravel and pay for the labor and hauling of such material to be placed upon the roads.

I assume that the operation to which you refer, that is, the purchase of stone, gravel or other road materials, and the placing of the same on the roads of a township, is in the nature of a repair of existing roads, and that you do not intend to refer to the construction of new roads, and will therefore in this opinion deal only with the repair of roads by township trustees.

Section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "Township roads shall include all public highways of the state other than state and county roads as hereinbefore defined, and the trustees of each township shall maintain all such roads within their respective townships."

The term "maintain," as used in the above provision, is synonymous with or at least was intended by the legislature to include the term "repair." It will thus be seen that it is mandatory upon the township trustees of a township to keep in repair the township roads within their township, the term "township roads" being defined by section 241 of the Cass highway law.

Machinery for the performance of this duty is provided by section 75 of the act, section 3370, G. C., which reads as follows:

> "For the purposes of this act there shall be in each township not less than one nor more than four road districts, as the township trustees may determine.
> "The district or districts shall include all the territory in such township. The trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent who shall be known as township highway superintendent and who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. Under the direction of the township trustees he shall have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair. He may be removed by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty."

Having in mind the fact that it is the duty of the township trustees to keep the township roads in repair, and that machinery is provided to enable them to discharge this duty, it cannot be assumed, in the absence of a positive and unequivocal provision in the law, that the legislature intended to prohibit action in the matter unless the citizens of a township or those interested in the repair of its township roads should donate either the labor or the material needed for such repair.

To reach such a conclusion would be to deny to township trustees the right to carry out the duty imposed upon them by section 241 of the act, unless they were able to secure donations either of labor or of materials, and I am of the opinion that the language referred to by you does not require or warrant such a conclusion and is to be construed as a grant of power rather than as a limitation upon the general authority of the township trustees in the premises. In other words, the legislature in using such language did not intend to circumscribe the general authority of the township trustees to repair township roads and to do all things reasonably necessary in the premises, the real intention of the legislature being to confer upon the township trustees in express terms the additional authority to accept donations, either of labor or of materials, and to use public funds to provide the things not donated and necessary to a given repair.

I therefore conclude, in answer to your specific question, that under the Cass highway law the township trustees, acting through the township highway superintendent, have authority to purchase stone, gravel or other road materials to be used in the repair of township roads and to pay for the hauling of such materials and employ the labor necessary in such work.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ELECTION—NOMINATION PAPERS—MUST BE FILED ACCORDING TO PROVISIONS OF SECTION 5004, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, WHICH ARE MANDATORY—TIME LIMIT—CERTIFICATE OF NOMINATION.

The provisions of section 5004, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, prescribing the time within which certificates of nomination and nomination papers may be filed, are mandatory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 14, 1915.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of yours under date of September 15, 1915, in which you make inquiry as to whether certain provisions of section 5004, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, are mandatory or directory only. The provisions of said section to which your inquiry has reference, is as follows:

> "Certificates of nomination and nomination papers of candidates shall be filed as follows: * * *
> " 'For township or municipal offices, justices of the peace or members of the board of education, with the board of deputy state supervisors of the county, not less than sixty days previous to the day of election.' "

As bearing upon the question thus submitted, you call attention to the case of State ex rel v. Deputy State Supervisors of Elections, 17 C. C., 396. This case was decided by the circuit court of Licking county at the March term, 1898. This was an action in mandamus to require the board of deputy state supervisors of elections to print upon the ballot the name of one Fulton, as a candidate for city solicitor, upon a certificate of nomination filed with the city board of elections on March 20th or 21st, previous to an election to be held on April 3rd, next ensuing, under a statute which required in that particular case that "the nomination of city officers shall be filed with the city board of elections not less than fifteen days previous to the date of such election."

Under the facts above set forth, the court held that this provision was directory only, and a writ of mandamus was issued requiring the election officers to print the names of the candidates on the ballot.

The court in its opinion gave consideration to the fact that no objection in writing, or otherwise, to the certificate of nomination of the relator had been filed with the election officers and concluded that the same was, therefore, subject to the provision of section 10 of the act of April 18, 1892, as amended in 90 O. L., 269, that:

> "The certificates of nomination and nomination papers being so filed, if in apparent conformity with the provisions of this act, shall be deemed to be valid, unless objection thereto is duly made in writing, within five days after the filing thereof."

When is a certificate of nomination in "apparent conformity" with the law? I can conceive of no other meaning which may in reason be given to this phrase "apparent conformity" than that the petition or certificate of nomination is, upon its face, in every respect in conformity with the legal requirement. Or, stated conversely, a nomination paper may be said to be apparently in conformity with the law when it does not show upon its face that it does not meet, in all respects, those legal requirements. If, then, a certificate of nomination or petition, when speaking the truth, must show upon its face that a requirement of law has not been complied with, that it is in violation of an unequivocal mandate of law, it cannot in any sense be said to be in apparent conformity to such law, and the statutory provision above quoted, therefore, loses all application. That is to say, when a petition or nomination paper is presented to the proper officer for filing, and he endorses thereon the true date of filing in the customary form, such petition, if filed after the expiration of the statutory limit therefor, must then show upon its face that it is not in conformity with the statutory requirement as to the time of filing, and not within the statutory provision referred to by the court.

True, as stated by the court, this provision does not require exact conformity. Equally true is it that a thing may have apparent conformity and at the same time not be in exact conformity, and to just such case is the statute here under consideration applicable. It will be observed, however, that this statute does demand that the petition appear regular and that it cannot do so and speak the truth when filed after the expiration of the time limited by statute.

The court in discussing this question says:

> "If the purposes of the law are, as we have intimated and supposed, primarily to secure: First, an honest and fair nomination for public offices; and, second: fairness and honesty as a result of an election, a question may be presented in this form; should this object of the statute be defeated by a mere irregularity, it would not and could not make the result of the election doubtful. We think it should not receive such construction unless the language of the statute is so explicit that the intention of the legislature can only be ascertained by giving it this mandatory construction."

This statement of the court clearly discloses a misconception of principle. While the primary purpose of legislation relative to elections may be said to be the preservation of the secrecy of the ballot and a fair and honest election, it cannot be said that no provision thereof may have any other purpose. It seems, however, that such was one of the purposes, at least, of the legislature in fixing a limit on the time of filing nomination papers by which the rights of all might be fully protected, rather than to leave the conflicting interest of those directly concerned subject to the caprice of designing individuals, and involved in interminable doubt, and thus open wide the door to fraud. The first step toward honesty and fairness in elections is the establishment of plain and unequivocal rules of procedure giving equal security to the rights of all, free from individual choice or influence. That is to say, one of the purposes of fixing a limit beyond which petitions may not be filed, was to prevent the opportunity for fraud in leaving the same subject to the action of persons who are, of necessity, more or less interested therein on one side or the other. It was therefore manifestly the purpose of the legislature to make time the essence of the validity of such petitions. No other purpose can be suggested, for, had the legislature contemplated that such provision might be ignored at the convenience of individuals, its enactment was an idle performance. What purpose can be served by such provision if it be interpreted to mean that it was subject to the action of election officers in having tickets printed and that petitions may be filed at any time until the tickets are actually printed. Such construction would enable election officers to indulge in preferences and grossly fraudulent practices to the prejudice of the rights of indivuals and against public interest.

The holding of the court in the case of State ex rel. v. Supervisors of Elections, supra, is manifestly against the weight of authority in other jurisdictions upon the question. The rule is laid down in 15 Cyc., 338, as follows:

> "Statutory provisions in regard to the time of filing certificates of nomination are mandatory, and a certificate offered after the time limit is properly rejected."

And in 10 Am. & Eng. Ency., 368, 2nd Edition:

> "Statutory provisions as to time, place and manner of filing nomination papers are mandatory and a strict compliance with them is necessary to make a valid nomination."

The above statements of the rule are fully supported by the following cases:

> Donahoe v. Johnson, 8 Pa. Dist., 316;
> In re McDonald, 54 N. Y., Supp. 690;
> In re Cudderback, 39 N. Y. Supp., 388;
> Griffin v. Dingley, 114 Cal., 481;
> Hallon v. Center, 102 Ky., 123.

The court in the opinion in 54 N. Y. Supp., 690, says:

> "The time within which certain acts are required to be done under the election laws is an essential and all-important element in the orderly conduct of nominating and electing public officers. To permit a departure from the law in this respect would lead to the greatest confusion and to the subversion of the plain purposes of the law. The provisions of the statute with respect to the time of filing the certificates are clear. The certificate in question here, being for independent nominations, was required to be filed, if at all, 'at least twenty-five, and not more than forty days' before the election. * * * These provisions are mandatory, and must be complied with, and, after the time has passed, the secretary has no right to receive and file any certificate."

Indeed, the decision of the circuit court, 17 C. C., 396, supra, seems clearly to be overruled in the case of State v. Stewart, 71 O. S., 55, though reference thereto is not made. The third branch of the syllabus in the case of State v. Stewart is as follows:

> "The requirement of section 2966-22, Revised Statutes, which provides that certificates of nomination and nomination papers of candidates for offices to be filled by the electors of a district, etc., shall be filed with the chief deputy state supervisor of the county in the district, etc., containing the greatest number of inhabitants, as ascertained by the last federal census, not less than twenty-five days previous to the day of election, is a limitation upon the power to so file, and is not intended to require that objections and other questions arising in the course of nominations of candidates shall be kept open and undecided until twenty-five days before the day of the election."

And at page 73 of the opinion the court, referring to the provision of section 2966-22, R. S., requiring that certificates of nomination or nomination papers must be filed not less than twenty-five days previous to the day of election, said:

"The latter provision does not authorize the chief deputy state supervisors of elections and the clerks of the election boards of the several counties of the district to keep open more than a reasonable time and until twenty-five days before the election a controversy which has been properly submitted to it, but is a limitation on the power to file such certificates and nomination papers, requiring that they shall be filed not later than twenty-five days before the election; and it is only intended to indicate to conventions and others who seek to make nominations and get them upon the ballot that they must take action in proper time before that date in order to make the nomination effectual."

To hold that an election may not be declared to be null and void on account of mere precedent irregularities is upon an entirely different principle than that here involved, and it is well established that an election will not be avoided for such irregularities except upon showing that upon fraud or such irregularity the result was effected or that by reason thereof illegal votes have been cast or the casting of legal votes prevented.

The right of an elector to have his name placed upon a ticket as a candidate for public office is subject to all the statutory requirements and limitations. That is to say, the nomination of candidates for public offices has become a purely statutory proceeding and, under a familiar rule of construction, to acquire rights thereunder there must be a strict compliance with such statutes.

To hold an entire election a nullity after the same has been fully consummated, of necessity affects the public interest, while to defeat the purpose of an elector to become a candidate for office can affect only a qualified or conditional individual right or privilege.

In 36 Cyc., 1159, in reference to directory and mandatory provisions of statutes, it is said:

"When the statutory provision relates to acts or proceedings immaterial in themselves, but contains negative or exclusive terms; either express or implied, then such negative or exclusive terms clearly indicate a legislative intent to impose a limitation, and therefore the statute becomes imperative, and requires strict performance in the manner prescribed."

And on page 1160:

"Under statutes conferring privileges upon private individuals for a certain period of time, such privileges cannot be exercised after the lapse of the time allowed."

That the state of facts under consideration is within this rule is beyond question. It cannot be maintained that there is not at least by implication those negative terms contemplated by this rule when consideration is given to the term "not less than," nor can it be questioned that this is a statute conferring privileges on private individuals to the exclusion of every one who does not conform to the provisions thereof. Then, under this rule, the statute under consideration must be held to be imperative in its terms.

In view of these considerations, I am unable to agree with the conclusion of the learned circuit court, and am therefore of the opinion that the provisions of section 5004, G. C., above quoted, and to which you refer in your inquiry, are mandatory.

The case of the State of Ohio ex rel. Thomas R. Jones v. The Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections of Montgomery County, Ohio, has been decided, but the opinion of the supreme court in that case has not yet been prepared.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES —IT IS THEIR DUTY TO MAINTAIN AND KEEP IN REPAIR TOWNSHIP ROAD LAID OUT BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES AND WHICH EXTENDS FROM DWELLING PLACE TO ANOTHER PUBLIC ROAD—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS HAVE RIGHT TO ASSIST IN MAINTENANCE OF ROAD.

Under the Cass highway law, it is the duty of the township trustees to maintain and keep in repair a township road laid out by the township trustees and which extends from a dwelling place to another public road, subject to the right of the county commissioners to assist the township trustees in such maintenance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 1, 1915, in which you inquire as to whose duty it is to keep in repair a township road which was laid out by the township trustees under favor of section 6958, G. C., and which extends from a dwelling place to another public road.

Section 6958, G. C., which was a part of the law relating to township roads and which was repealed by the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 574, read as follows:

> "A person, desiring to have a township road laid out from a plantation, dwelling place, mill or house of public worship, or to a cemetery, burial ground or public road, or from one public road to intersect another, or from a tract of wild land or timber land, stone quarry, coal mine or mineral land, other than petroleum or natural gas land, to a railroad or railroad station, or from a railroad station to a township, county or state road, or sawmill, shall petition the trustees of the proper township, after giving thirty days' previous notice thereof, by advertisement posted up in three public places within the township, setting forth therein the time when the petition is to be presented, the place of beginning of such road, the intermediate points, if any, and the place of termination thereof."

The sections of the General Code immediately following section 6958 and which were in force prior to the passage of the Cass highway law, provided for the giving of a bond by the petitioner, the appointment and duties of viewers, claims for damages, the report of the viewers and the proceedings of the township trustees upon such report.

Section 6965, G. C., after providing for an order by the trustees upon the clerk of the township to enter the report on record and an order to the petitioners, or any one of them, or to the proper superintendent in the case of the granting of the petition to open the road petitioned for, further provided:

> "Such road shall be a township road, subject to be kept open and in repair at the expense of the applicants for it, or otherwise as provided y law."

From the above quoted provision it appears that not every township road established under the provisions of sections 6958, G. C., et seq., was required to be kept in repair by the township. On the other hand, the provision of the statute was that such roads were to be kept open and in repair at the expense of the applicants therefor, unless otherwise provided by law.

As pointed out by you in your communication to me, there was a provision of law prior to the passage of the Cass highway law providing for the keeping in repair of certain township roads at the expense of the township, such provision being found in section 6967, G. C., which section read as follows:

> "A township road which commences in a state, turnpike, township, or county road, or at a railroad station, and is not less than thirty feet in width, and passes on and intersects another state, turnpike, county or township road, shall be opened, and kept in repair by the road superintendent in whose district it is situated, in whole or in part, and the costs of the view and survey of such road shall be paid out of the township treasury."

An examination of the above quoted section discloses the fact that under the law relating to township roads, as such law stood prior to the passage of the Cass highway code, it was not the duty of the township, under section 6967, G. C., to keep in repair a township road laid out by the township trustees, under favor of sections 6958, G. C., et seq., and which extended from a dwelling place to another public road. That being true, it was the duty of the applicants for such road to keep the same open and in repair at their expense, under the provisions of section 6965, G. C.

You call attention to the third paragraph of section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C., which reads as follows:

> "Township roads shall include all public highways of the state other than state or county roads as hereinbefore defined, and the trustees of each township shall maintain all such roads within their respective townships; and provided further, that the county commissioners shall have full power and authority to assist the township trustees in maintaining all such roads, but nothing herein shall prevent the township trustees from improving any road within their respective townships, except as otherwise provided in this act."

You correctly observe that the Cass highway law does not make any exception as to the maintenance and repair of township roads and this fact, coupled with the further fact that sections 6965 and 6967, G. C., referred to above, were repealed by the Cass highway law, gives rise to your question, which is as to whether it is the duty of township trustees to keep in repair a township road extending from a dwelling place to another public road, or whether such a road is to be maintained by the original applicants therefor or by those who have the use of the same and for whose benefit it was originally laid out.

Under section 6975, G. C., as that section stood before the passage of the Cass highway law, township roads, whether laid out before or after the passage of such section, were declared to be public highways. Roads of the character referred to by you, that is roads laid out by the township trustees and extending from a dwelling place to another public road, are not either state roads or county roads within the definitions of such terms as set forth in section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C.

Since roads of the character referred to by you were, prior to the passage of the Cass highway law, declared by the legislature to be public highways, and since township roads, as defined in section 241 of the Cass highway law, include all public highways of the state other than state or county roads, and since it is provided in section 241 of the Cass highway law that the trustees of each township shall maintain all township roads within their respective townships and since the Cass highway law contains no exceptions which would excuse township trustees from maintaining township roads extending from a dwelling place to another public road, it therefore follows that in the present state of the law it is the duty of the township trustees to maintain and keep in repair a road laid out by the township trustees under favor of sections 6958, G. C., et seq., and which extends from a dwelling place to another public road, subject to the right of the county commissioners to assist the township trustees in such maintenance, as provided in section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM ACT—ORDINANCE CHANGING SALARY OF OFFICER OF A MUNICIPALITY PRIOR TO HIS ENTERING UPON HIS TERM—BY REASON OF INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM SAID ORDINANCE WILL NOT GO INTO EFFECT UNTIL AFTER OFFICER ENTERS UPON HIS DUTIES —HOW SALARY DETERMINED.

If council of a municipality, by ordinance, changes the salary of an officer prior to such officer entering upon his term and the legislation therefor is fully completed prior to such time, but by reason of the initiative and referendum act said ordinance will not go into effect until after the officer enters upon the duties of his office, such officer will be entitled to the salary as fixed by the prior ordinance until the new ordinance goes into effect, and then under the new ordinance. The inhibition contained in sections 4213 and 4219, G. C., is against action by council only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of September 15th you referred to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, to Honorable H. W. Houston, City Solicitor of Urbana, under date of December 29, 1911(Report of attorney general for that year at page 1619), and requested me to advise you whether or not I agree with said opinion.

The opinion referred to considered the question as to whether or not an officer of a city or village would be entitled to an increase in salary provided for by ordinance, the action on which was fully completed prior to the officer entering upon his term of office, but the ordinance not going into effect, by reason of the initiative and referendum act, until after the officer has entered upon his term; and the opinion held that if the action of council on the ordinance was fully completed prior to the officer entering upon his term of office, but the ordinance not going into effect by reason of the initiative and referendum act until after the officer had entered upon his term, the officer would be entitled to the increase in salary after the ordinance went into effect, the officer's salary being fixed when he went into office under the former ordinance until the new ordinance went into effect, and thereafter under the new ordinance.

I assume that the question which you desire answered is this:

> "If council by ordinance changes the salary of an officer prior to such officer entering upon his term, and the legislation therefor is fully completed, but by reason of the initiative and referendum act said ordinance will not go into effect until after the officer enters upon the duties of his office, will such ordinance operate as to such officer during such term?"

Section 4213 of the General Code, relative to cities, provides:

> "The salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed, and, except as otherwise provided in this title, all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury."

Said section is a codification of section 126 as found in 96 O. L., at page 61, which then read as follows:

> "Council shall fix the salaries of all officers, clerks and employes in the city government, except as otherwise provided in this act * * *. The salary of any officer, clerk or employe so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he may have been elected or appointed."

Section 4219 of the General Code, relative to villages, provides:

> "Council shall fix the compensation and bonds of all officers, clerks and employes in the village government, except as otherwise provided by law, * * * The compensation so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which any officer, clerk or employe may have been elected or appointed. * * *"

It is to be seen that the original of section 4213 was practically in the same language as section 4219 of the General Code. The duty in both instances is placed upon council to fix the salary of the officer or employe, and the inhibition against the increase or diminishing of such salary is the salary "so fixed"—meaning, of course, so fixed by council; and the provision, as I see it, is directed against council, prohibiting it from in any way endeavoring to increase or diminish the salary of any officer or employe in the municipal government, the salary of whom is to be fixed by council, during the term of the officer or employe.

The original initiative and referendum act was passed in 1911 (102 O. L., 521, section 4227-2, G. C.). Said act provided that no ordinance involving the expenditure of money should become effective in less than sixty days after its passage, and the courts of Ohio have declared that an ordinance fixing salaries is an ordinance involving the expenditure of money.

Said section was amended in 103 O. L., page 211, and provided that no ordinance or other measure should go into effect until thirty days after it shall have been filed with the mayor, except certain ordinances—the exception, however, not including a salary ordinance.

Said section was again amended in 104 O. L., at page 238, providing that no ordinance or other measure shall go into effect until thirty days after it shall have been filed with the mayor of a city or passed by the council of a village, except certain ordinances, which did not include the salary ordinance.

It has been held by this department at various times that an ordinance fixing salaries is an ordinance of a general nature, and, under the provisions of section 4227, G. C., requires publication. Said section further provides:

> "No ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice."

Hon. U. G. Denman, former attorney general of Ohio, in an opinion dated January 10, 1910, to Hon. Van A. Snider, city solicitor of Lancaster, Ohio, held that an ordinance fixing salary which, by reason of the above provision as to publication, did not become effective until the officer had entered upon his term would not affect the salary of such officer during such term.

This is at variance with the opinion of Mr. Hogan, hereinbefore referred to, and also at variance with the case of Stuhr v. Hoboken, 47 N. J. L., 147, the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "(1) The intention of the legislature in borbidding, under the charter of Hoboken, that the salary or compensation of an officer which has once been fixed shall not be increased during the continuance of his term, was to prevent council from giving to an officer during his term a larger salary or more compensation than that which was fixed for his office when his term began.

"(2) Where, after an ordinance is passed fixing a salary for the next ensuing term, an officer is elected, the ordinance will fix the salary for that term, although it did not, because of the necessity of publishing it, take effect until after the term began."

In the above case the court goes so far as to permit the officer to have his increase of salary from the beginning of his term, although the ordinance did not become effective until several days after the term had begun. This I do not believe to be the proper construction. I concur with Mr. Hogan in his opinion foregoing mentioned, to the effect that an ordinance, the legislation on which has been fully completed but which will not go into effect until after the beginning of the term of an officer, by reason of the provisions of the initiative and referendum act or by reason of the filing of a referendum petition thereunder, will, when said ordinance does go into effect, regulate the salary of said officer during the balance of his term; but that before said ordinance goes into effect the officer is entitled to the salary as fixed by a former ordinance fixing the salary. In other words, as I view it, the salary was fixed at the beginning of his term by the former ordinance until the new ordinance becomes effective and thereafter by the new ordinance, since no action of council is taken in the matter after the officer enters upon his term.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

NO LIEN CAN BE OBTAINED BY CONTRACTORS OR SUB-CONTRACTORS ON STATE BUILDINGS—NO DUTY UPON A DEPARTMENT OR INSTITUTION ERECTING A STATE BUILDING TO RETAIN ANY MONEYS FROM CONTRACTORS IN ANTICIPATION OF LIEN.

Sections 8310 to 8323-10, G. C., do not apply to construction of state buildings.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 14, 1915.

HON. J. E. SHATZEL, Sec'y Board of Trustees, Bowling Green State Normal College, Bowling, Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 9, 1915, you inquire as follows:

"By direction of our board of trustees I am writing you to get authentic information upon a point not clear to us.

"The general contractor is about through with his work on the administration building and dormitory and the question is: Should we require him to file a statement of all he owes for labor and material used on these buildings before we allow his final estimates? Are we under any obligation to protect creditors?"

I know of no provisions of law that require a statement from contractors and subcontractors other than the act found in 103 O. L., 369, entitled:

"AN ACT

"To create a lien in favor of contractors, sub-contractors, laborers and material men."

and the amendments thereto in 106 O. L., 522.

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, August 25, 1913, to Hon. Byron L. Barger, secretary of the Ohio state armory board, volume I, attorney general's report for 1913, page 515, it was held, referring to the act found in 103 O. L., 369, as follows:

"An examination of this legislation as to mechanics' liens enacted at the last session of the legislature discloses that no provisions were made therein with reference to liens on public buildings or improvements of any kind, or against public funds that may become due and payable on account of their erection or construction. Sections 8324 and 8325, General Code, still stand as the sole authority for liens or claims against public funds on account of material or labor furnished in the erection or construction of public buildings or improvements. As before noted, these sections have no application to buildings or improvements erected or constructed by the state, * * *"

I concur in Mr. Hogan's opinion and therefore answer your inquiry in the negative. In so answering I am fully cognizant of the provision contained in the uniform blank for state contracts, as follows:

"If at any time there should be any evidence of any lien or claim for which, if established, the owner of the said premises might become liable and which is chargeable to the contractor, the owner shall have the right to retain out of any payment then due or therafter to become due, an amount sufficient to completely indemnify him against such claim or lien. Should there prove to be any such claim after all payments are made, the contractor shall refund to the owner all moneys that the latter may be compelled to pay in discharging any lien on said premises made obligatory in consequence of the contractor's default."

There can be no lien obtained by contractors or sub-contractors on state buildings. Consequently, there is no duty devolving upon a department or institution erecting a state building to retain any moneys from the contractor in anticipation of a lien on the premises in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TRUSTEES OF UNION CEMETERY—NOT AUTHORIZED TO FIX AND PAY THEIR OWN COMPENSATION—UNLESS SALARY FIXED FOR PERFORMANCE OF CERTAIN DUTIES, SUCH SERVICES ARE CONSIDERED AS PERFORMED GRATUITOUSLY.

Trustees of a union cemetery under section 4189, G. C., are not authorized to fix and pay compensation to themselves.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 15, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of September 15th you wrote me as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion as regards the legality of the findings for recovery made against the trustees of Woodland cemetery, Van Wert county, Ohio, by state examiner Will E. Heck, in his report of examination, filed August 27, 1914, and herein ask consideration of the brief submitted by E. C. Stitz, city solicitor and legal adviser of said board. If the findings are collectible at law, we believe the same should be enforced. We might add that said findings were returned by the department after consultation with the attorney general, and we believe that they are legally and justly due from said parties."

Your letter to me is because of the fact that in taking up with the city solicitor of Van Wert, Ohio, the question of findings against the trustees of Woodland cemetery for drawing salaries illegally, as was found by one of your examiners, said solicitor advised me by letter that the said payments were made upon his advice as city solicitor. In the course of said letter he states:

> "When the bureau makes these findings, it says, on page 149 (of the report made in regard to the matter), 'that it is against public policy for an officer to participate in fixing his own compensation,' and 'the courts have held that when an official duty is imposed upon a public officer and no compensation provided therefor, that such service must be deemed to be gratuitously rendered.'
> "If that is the law, then all the city councils in the state have been receiving illegal salaries. There is no authority in the statutes for their compensation. General Code, section 4209, provides that 'The compensation of members of council, if any is fixed,' shall not exceed $150.00, etc.
> "The council has the inherent right to fix the compensation of its members. The legislature has no power to take away that right, but it may limit the same; which it has done.
> "I am enclosing my brief on this question of the right of the joint board of union cemeteries to fix their compensation."

Section 4209, G. C., is authority, as I see it, granted by the legislature to council to fix the compensation of the members thereof.

Section 4189, G. C. (103 O. L., 272), provides in regard to union cemeteries the following:

> "The cemetery so owned in common, shall be under the control and management of the trustees of the township or townships and the council of the municipal corporation or corporations and their authority over it and their duties in relation thereto shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation."

Said section is an amendment of a former section bearing the same number, which provided that the cemetery so owned should be under the control and management of trustees to be chosen in accordance with section 4184, G. C., which was repealed by the act found in 103 O. L., 272.

Union cemeteries are provided for in section 4183, et seq., but nowhere in any of said sections am I able to find any authority whatever for the fixing of any compensation for the joint board composed of the trustees of a township and the members of council of a municipality; and it is a well established principle in law, for which there are many authorities in Ohio, that unless the salary is fixed for the performance of certain duties no salary may be paid, and that services performed under such circumstances are considered as performed gratuitously.

Consequently, I am clearly of the opinion that the resolution No. 1 which was presented and unanimously adopted by the joint board of trustees of Woodland union cemetery making rules and regulations for the control and management of said cemetery, said joint board being composed of council of the city of Van Wert and the trustees of Pleasant township, insofar as it purports to fix a salary for the members of such joint board, is without authority of law. The said provision is found in section 6 of said rules, as follows:

> "Each councilman and township trustee shall receive a salary of forty dollars per year for his services as a member of this board."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the findings made by your department against the members of the board who receive salary under the resolution foregoing mentioned are correct.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

MATRON OF CHILDREN'S HOME—EXPENSES FOR ATTENDING STATE CONFERENCES OF BENEVOLENT INSTITUTIONS NOT LEGAL.

Matrons of children' homes cannot be allowed expenses for attending state conferences of benevolent institutions held under authority of section 1356, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 15, 1915.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion on the question of payment of expenses of a matron of a children's home received and is as follows:

> "I write to enquire whether or not a matron of a county children's home or county infirmary may be reimbursed for expenses incurred in attending state conferences of benevolent institutions as held under the provisions of sections 1356 and 1357.
> "I understand that on November 6, 1913, your predecessor, General Hogan, in an opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, held that they could not, and I am writing to ask if you concur in this opinion."

As stated by you, this question was considered by my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, and in an opinion, No. 583, rendered by him to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, under date of October 30, 1913, he held that the expenses referred to could not be allowed and paid from public funds. The opinion of Mr. Hogan was based on the fact that the duties of a matron of a children's home as outlined in section 3085 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 889), did not bring her within the class of officials designated in section 1356 of the General Code. I concur in the opinion referred to, which is to be found at page 382, vol. 1, of the report of the attorney general for 1913.

It is my opinion, therefore, that a matron of a children's home cannot be allowed her expenses for attending state conferences of benevolent institutions held under authority of section 1356 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VICTOR RUBBER COMPANY—CERTIFICATES AUTHORIZING INCREASE OF ITS CAPITAL STOCK—COMMON AND PREFERRED, APPROVED.

Two certificates presented for filing to the secretary of state by the Victor Rubber Company, authorizing an increase of its capital stock from $150,000 to $300,000 by the issuance of $50,000 preferred stock and $100,000 of common stock, approved, and the secretary of state advised to accept and file the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 16, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 15, 1915, with enclosures, in which you request me to advise you as to whether or not you should accept and file two certificates presented to you by The Victor Rubber Company, of Springfield, Ohio, both purporting to authorize an increase of its capital stock, one by the issuance of preferred stock to the amount of $50,000.00, and the other by the issuance of common stock to the amount of $100,000.00.

You enclosed the two certificates, a check for $150.00 to pay the required filing fee, two 10-cent revenue stamps, and a letter from Messrs. Bowman & Bowman, attorneys for the Victor Rubber Company, in which they set forth a statement of the facts and their reasons for urging the acceptance of the said certificates.

The facts revealed by the two certificates and by the letter of Messrs. Bowman & Bowman are as follows: On the 28th day of September, 1915, the authorized capital stock ($150,000.00) of the said Victor Rubber Company was fully subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. paid on each share. On said date, at a meeting of the stockholders at which all were present in person or by proxy, and waived in writing the notice by publication and letter required by statute, all agreed in writing to an increase in the capital stock of said company from $150,000.00 to $300,000.00, of which increase $50,000.00 was to be preferred stock and $100,000.00 common stock, and the president and secretary were authorized to certify such increase to the secretary of state.

Upon the same date, under authority of the action of the stockholders' meeting just referred to, the directors of said company adopted a resolution authorizing an increase of capital stock of said company from $150,000.00 to $300,000.00, and that $50,000.00 of such increase be issued and disposed of as preferred stock; in such resolution, also, provision was made as to the designations, preferences, voting powers, redemption, etc., of said preferred stock.

It is apparent from the recitals contained in the two certificates presented for filing that the provisions of sections 8698 and 8699 of the General Code, relative to the increase of capital stock of corporations have been complied with. Although it is true that each of the certificates recite that the capital stock is increased from $150,000.00 to $300,000.00, yet the certificate relative to the increase by the issuance of common stock recites the amount of common stock to be issued and shows compliance with the provisions of section 8698 of the General Code; and that the certificate relative to the increase by issuance of preferred stock recites the amount of preferred stock to be issued and shows compliance with the provisions of section 8699 of the General Code.

The fact that each certificate recites more than is required by statute is of no consequence so long as each certificate shows full compliance with the law. Neither are the two certificates, to my mind, objectionable to the extent of justifying a refusal to file the same even though it be granted that the contents of both certificates might properly have been embodied in a single certificate.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the two certificates presented by the Victor Rubber Company, one authorizing the increase of its capital stock by the issuance of $100,000.00 of common stock, and the other authorizing an increase of the capital stock by the issuance of $50,000.00 of preferred stock, show that the action of the corporation and its directors has been in compliance with the General Code and should be accepted and filed by the secretary of state.

I return herewith the two certificates, the check for $150.00, the two 10-cent revenue stamps and the letter from Messrs. Bowman & Bowman, submitted with your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SHERIFFS—PROCLAMATIONS—NOT REQUIRED TO GIVE NOTICE OF ELECTION TO BE HELD ON NOVEMBER 2, 1915.

Sheriffs of the several counties are not required by law to give notice, by proclamation, of the election to be held on November 2, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1915.

HON. D. M. CUPP, Prosecuting Attorney, Delaware, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of October 11, 1915, is as follows:

"I am requesting an opinion from your office as to the duty of the sheriff to issue a proclamation of the coming November election.

"Section 4827, General Code, provides for such a proclamation for the election in the even numbered years, or for what might be termed general elections; I am well aware that the statutes provide the manner of giving notice for township, school district and municipal elections; but the sheriff of our county has suggested that inasmuch as there are a number of constitutional amendments to be voted for at this coming election, a proclamation might be necessary; he appealed to secretary of state Hildebrant, and received an answer unsatisfactory; my own opinion is that such proclamation is not necessary, and I have so advised the sheriff, on the grounds that I find no statutory authority for such proclamation, and further there are other means of giving publicity to such proposed amendments."

It may be observed that only such duties relative to giving notice of holding elections are enjoined upon the sheriff as are imposed by statute.

Section 4824, G. C., makes provision for the election of electors of president and vice-president of the United States, and section 4825, G. C., provides as follows:

"At least fifteen days before the time for holding the election provided for in the preceding section, the sheriff shall give public notice by proclamation through his county of the time and place of holding such election and the number of electors to be chosen. A copy of such proclamation shall be posted at each of the places where elections are appointed to be held and inserted in a newspaper published in the county."

Section 4826, G. C., 103 O. L., 23, prescribes the time for holding all general elections for elective, state and county offices and for judges of the court of appeals.

Section 4827, G. C., provides as follows:

"At least fifteen days before the holding of any such general election, the sheriff of each county shall give notice by proclamation throughout his county of the time and place of holding such election, and the officers at that time to be chosen. One copy of the proclamation shall be posted at each place where elections are appointed to be held, and such proclamation shall also be inserted in a newspaper published in the county."

Section 4829, G. C., requires the sheriff to give notice of the time and places of holding special elections for filling a vacancy in the office of representative to congress or representative to the general assembly.

Section 4840, G. C., provides for notice of the submission of questions at a regular election as follows:

"Unless a statute providing for the submission of a question to the voters of a county, township, city or village provides for the calling of a special election for that purpose, no special election shall be so called. The question so to be voted upon shall be submitted at a regular election in such county, township, city or village, and notice that such question is to be voted upon shall be embodied in the proclamation for such election."

No further statutory provision is found touching the duty or authority of the sheriff to give notice of elections. It will be observed that no provision is made for proclamation of holding elections by the sheriff, except when electors of president and vice-president, or elective state and county officers and judges of courts of appeals, or representatives in congress or representatives to the general assembly, are to be elected. None of the foregoing officers can, under the law, be elected at the coming

November election, since no special election under the provisions of section 4829, G. C., has been directed by the governor. Since then, no proclamation of the election to be held November 2nd, next, is authorized to be made by the sheriff, section 4840, supra, can not operate to require such proclamation, for the clear import of its terms limits its operation to the incorporation of notice of questions to be submitted into a proclamation otherwise authorized or required to be made.

I am therefore of the opinion that no proclamation of the election to be held November 2, 1915, is required to be made by the sheriffs of the several counties of the state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—FORM OF BOND FOR DIVISION ENGINEERS IN SAID DEPARTMENT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWAN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 11, 1915, transmitting to me bond of Robert N. Waid, newly appointed division engineer in your department, for my approval as to form in accordance with section 1183 of the General Code of Ohio.

The bond which you have transmitted to me and which has been executed by the principal and surety is in the following terms, to wit:

"OFFICIAL BOND.

"STATE OF OHIO.

"KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS:

"That we, ROBERT N. WAID, of Columbus, Ohio, as principal, and AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK, of No. 100 Broadway, New York City, New York, are held and firmly bound unto the STATE OF OHIO, in the penal sum of FOUR THOUSAND ($4,000) DOLLARS, for the payment of which, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, administrators, assigns and successors, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

"The condition of the above obligation is such, that: WHEREAS, the said ROBERT N. WAID has been duly and in accordance with law appointed division engineer of the state highway department of the State of Ohio, to serve from the 15th day of October, 1915, and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified;

"Now, if the said ROBERT N. WAID shall, during his term of office, faithfully discharge the duties imposed upon him by law, then this obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect.

"WITNESS, our hands and seals, this 11th day of October, 1915.

"ROBERT N. WAID. (Seal.)
"AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
"(Seal.) "By PHIL. S. BRADFORD,
"Resident Vice-President.
"ATTEST: THOS. J. DAVIS,
"Resident Assistant Secretary."

Attached to the bond is an oath of office executed by Mr. Waid.

Referring first to the form of the bond, it should be noted that it is recited in the body of the bond that Mr. Waid is "to serve from the 15th day of October, 1915, and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified." The expression "until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified" is not in accord with the section of the General Code creating the position of division engineer and defining the tenure of an appointee to such position.

Section 175 of the Cass highway law, section 1182, G. C., provides that the state highway commissioner may also, within the limits of the appropriations made by the general assembly, appoint as many division engineers as may become necessary to carry out the provisions of the chapter relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department. It will thus be seen that the number of division engineers in the service of your department depends upon the appropriations for their salaries, made by the general assembly, and the period of service of one or more division engineers may be terminated by the failure of the legislature to make a salary appropriation. Under the existing civil service laws, a division engineer may be removed for certain causes and, furthermore, there is no provision of law to the effect that a division engineer shall serve until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified. The expression above referred to should, therefore, be stricken from the bond, and there might be properly substituted therefor the expression "until his incumbency in said position shall have been terminated according to law."

The bond alludes to Mr. Waid's term of office, and therefore implies that he is an officer. To constitute a public office it is essential that certain independent public duties, as part of the sovereignty of the state, should be appointed to it by law, to be exercised by the incumbent, in virtue of his election or appointment to the office thus created and defined, and not as a mere employe, subject to the direction and control of some one else. State ex rel. v. Jennings, 57 O. S., 415.

Under the statutes relating to the state highway department a division engineer is in effect an employe and is subject to the direction and control of the state highway commissioner, and no independent public duties are assigned by law to a division engineer to be exercised by him without the control and direction of the state highway commissioner. He is not, therefore, strictly speaking, an officer, and should not be so designated in his bond.

Relative to the taking of an official oath by Mr. Waid, your attention is directed to section 2 of the General Code of Ohio, which reads in part as follows:

> "Each person chosen or appointed to an office under the constitution or laws of the state, and each deputy or clerk of such officer, shall take an oath of office before entering upon the discharge of his duties."

A division engineer, not being an officer and not being either a deputy or a clerk of any other officer, and the statutes relating expressly to the position of division engineer not requiring an appointee to such position to take oath, it follows that the execution of an official oath on the part of Mr. Waid is not required, although there could be no objection to the taking of an oath on his part, should you so desire.

The statutory provision relating to the bond of a division engineer is section 176 of the Cass highway law, section 1183, G. C., which reads as follows:

> "Each of said employes appointed by the state highway commissioner, may be required to give bond in such sum as the state highway commissioner may determine. Such bonds shall be conditioned upon the faithful discharge of the duties of their respective positions, and such bonds shall be approved by the state highway commissioner. These bonds, with the approval of the state highway commissioner, as to sureties, and the approval of the attorney general as to form, shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state. If the bond furnished by such officers or employes is a surety bond, the premium thereon shall be paid out of the contingent expense fund or other funds of the department."

It will be noted that under the above quoted section, the amount of the bond of a division engineer, when he is required to give a bond, is to be fixed by the state highway commissioner, who is also required to approve the bond as to sureties, and the approval of the attorney general goes only to the form of the bond. These observations suggest the form which should be taken by the approval endorsed on the bond by the state highway commissioner and attorney general respectively.

In view of the above considerations, I suggest the following as a proper form of bond to be furnished by Mr. Waid, and the proper form of oath to be taken by him, should you desire him to take an oath:

"BOND.

"STATE OF OHIO.

"KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS:

"That we, ROBERT N. WAID, of Columbus, Ohio, as principal, and AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK, of No. 100 Broadway, New York City, New York, as surety, are held and firmly bound unto the STATE OF OHIO, in the penal sum of FOUR THOUSAND ($4,000) DOLLARS, for the payment of which, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, administrators, assigns and successors, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

"The condition of the above obligation is such, that: WHEREAS, the said ROBERT N. WAID has been duly and in accordance with law appointed division engineer of the state highway department of the State of Ohio, to serve from the 15th day of October, 1915, and until his incumbency in said position shall have been terminated according to law;

"Now, if the said ROBERT N. WAID shall, during his incumbency in said position of division engineer, faithfully discharge the duties of said position, then this obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect.

"OATH.

"STATE OF OHIO, FRANKLIN COUNTY, ss:

"I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States of America and the Constitution of the State of Ohio, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the position of division engineer of the state highway department of the State of Ohio, to which I have been appointed, and otherwise, according to the best of my ability, promote the interest of the state, so far as the same may be lawfully in my power.

"The within bond is approved as to amount and sureties.

Opinion of attorney general Hogan, vol. II, page 1281, report for the years 1911-1912 concurred in.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 16, 1915.

HON. OTHO W. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 13, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "At the request of the treasurer of Crawford county, Ohio, I am writing you relative to a certain opinion rendered by your predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, on August 30, 1911, to my predecessor, Honorable W. J. Schwenck. This opinion is found in vol. II, at page 1281, of the years 1911-12 of the attorney general's opinions. This opinion states the facts, and the only question I desire your opinion on is as to whether or not you concur with your predecessor in the construction he placed on section 6252 of the General Code, in reference to the advertising of the notice of the rates of taxation in the city of Galion, Ohio.
> "An early reply will be very much appreciated."

I have carefully considered the opinion of my predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, referred to in your letter, and concur in the conclusions therein expressed by him.

Respectfully,

"BLUE SKY LAW"—CORPORATIONS ORGANIZED IN OHIO AND ENGAGED SOLELY IN BUSINESS OF MANUFACTURING OR COAL MINING AND QUARRYING MAY DISPOSE OF THEIR SECURITIES WITHOUT HAVING SAME CERTIFIED—DEALERS' LICENSE MUST BE SECURED BEFORE CORPORATIONS OR THEIR AGENTS CAN LAWFULLY SELL SUCH SECURITIES.

A corporation organized in Ohio and engaged solely in the business of manufacturing or coal mining and quarrying may dispose of its securities without the necessity of having the same certified under the provisions of sections 6373-14 and 6373-16, G. C. (sections 14 and 16 of the blue sky law), but said corporation or any agent, in order to lawfully dispose of said securities in Ohio, must secure a dealer's license in accordance with the conditions and requirements of the blue sky law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 16, 1915.

HON. A. L. DUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Port Clinton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letters of September 15th and 23rd, 1915, in which you call my attention to the provisions of the blue sky law, and request my opinion as to whether or not a corporation organized under the laws of Ohio, owning property in Ohio, and which is engaged solely in manufacturing, mining and quarrying, "may sell its securities without filing application with the 'commissioner,' and may such securities be sold by agents who have not been licensed under this act."

I assume, in answering your questions, that the mining referred to as a part of the business of the corporation is coal mining.

Section 6373-14 of the General Code (section 14 of the blue sky law), so far as applicable, is as follows:

> "For the purpose of organizing or promoting any company, or assisting in the flotation of the securities of any company after organization, no issuer or underwriter of such securities and no person or company for or on behalf of such issuer or underwriter shall, within this state, dispose or attempt to dispose of any such security until such commissioner shall issue his certificate as provided in section 6373-16 of the General Code, which shall not be done until, together with a filing fee of five dollars, there be filed with the commissioner the application of such issuer or underwriter for the certificate provided for in section 6373-16, General Code, and, in addition to the other information hereinbefore required by paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d), of section 6373-9 of the General Code, the following:
> "This section shall not apply where * * * the securities are those of a common carrier or of a company organized under the laws of this state and engaged principally in the business of manufacturing, transportation, coal mining, or quarrying, and the whole or a part of the property upon which such securities are predicated is located in this state. * * *"

Section 6373-16, as amended, vol. 106 O. L., 363, provides as follows:

> "Said commissioner shall have power to make such examination of the issuer of the securities, or of the property named in the two next preceding sections, at any time, both before and after the issuance of the certificate hereinafter provided for, as he may deem advisable. * * * And if it shall > appear that the law has been complied with and that the business of the applicant is not fraudulently conducted, and that the proposed disposal of such securities or other property is not on grossly unfair terms, and that the issuer or vendor is solvent, upon the payment of a fee of ten dollars, the commissioner shall issue his certificate to that effect, authorizing such disposal. But if it shall not affirmatively so appear he shall so notify the applicant, in writing, and of his refusal to issue such certificate. * * *"

The securities of an Ohio corporation engaged principally in the business of manufacturing, coal mining or quarrying are specifically exempted from the requirements of said section 6373-14, and there is no requirement that such securities be certified by the commissioner of the blue sky law, as provided in section 6373-16 of the General Code, before the same can be disposed of.

Two distinct methods or means of control have been adopted by the Ohio blue sky law in seeking to regulate the sale of "securities:" First, by requiring dealers in certain securities to be licensed; second, by requiring the certification of certain of the securities to be sold. From the fact that the securities of a corporation are exempted from the necessity of certification, it does not, however, necessarily follow that the same may be disposed of in Ohio by an unlicensed dealer.

Section 6373-1, which prescribes generally who shall be licensed, is as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this act, no dealer shall, within this state, dispose or offer to dispose of any stock, stock certificates, bonds, debentures, collateral trust certificates or other similar instruments (all hereinafter termed 'securities'), evidencing title to or interest in property, issued or executed by any private or quasi-public corporation, copartnership or association (except corporations not for profit), or by any taxing subdivision of any other state, territory, province or foreign government, without first being licensed so to do as hereinafter provided."

Under the provisions of section 6373-2 of the General Code, certain securities are exempted and may be sold by an unlicensed dealer. The securities under consideration, however, do not fall within any of the exceptions set forth in said section 6373-2. The same section defines the term "dealer" as follows:

> "The term 'dealer,' as used in this act, shall be deemed to include any person or company, except national banks, disposing, or offering to dispose, of any such securities, through agents or otherwise, and any company engaged in marketing or the flotation of its own securities either directly or through agents or underwriters, or any stock promotion scheme whatsoever, except * * *." (Here follows a list of certain described persons and corporations selling securities who are excepted from the definition of the term "dealer," above quoted.)

The corporation under consideration cannot fall within any of these defined exceptions unless under the language of exception (f):

> "* * * Where the disposal, in good faith, and not for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of this act, is made for the sole account of the issuer, without any commission and at a total expense of not more than two per centum of the proceeds realized therefrom plus five hundred dollars, and where no part of the issue to be disposed of is issued, directly or indirectly, in payment for patents, services, good will, or for property not located in this state, provided that * * *."

Unless, therefore, the corporation proposes to sell its stock upon the terms and conditions described in the language just quoted it cannot escape the definition of the word "dealer" as used in the act.

I therefore advise you that a corporation organized in Ohio and engaged solely in the business of manufacturing or coal mining and quarrying may dispose of its securities without the necessity of having the same certified under the provisions of sections 6373-14 and 6373-16 of the General Code (sections 14 and 16 of the blue sky law), but that said corporation or any agent, in order to lawfully dispose of said securities in Ohio, must secure a dealer's license in accordance with the conditions and requirements of the blue sky law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE—SUPERINTENDENT OF COUNTY INFIRMARY IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE—MAY ONLY BE REMOVED FOR CAUSE—DEPUTY SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE—MAY BE REMOVED AT PLEASURE OF APPOINTING AUTHORITY.

The position of superintendent of a county infirmary is in the classified service as defined by the civil service law, 106 O. L., 400, and the incumbent thereof when classified under the provisions of said law may not be removed except for cause.

The deputy sealer of weights and measures, appointed under the provisions of section 2622, G. C., is in the unclassified civil service list, and may be removed at the pleasure of the appointing authority.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 16, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—By inadvertence your letter of September 20, 1915, was overlooked, hence the delay in answering.

You submit for consideration the following questions:

> "1. Is the position of superintendent of the county infirmary under either the unclassified or classified service, and can the county commissioners remove any incumbent from this office without cause?
> "2. Is the position of deputy sealer of weights and measures under either the unclassified or classified service and can the county auditor remove the present incumbent without cause?"

In an opinion reported in the attorney general's report for 1914, at page 376, it is held by my predecessor that the superintendent of a county infirmary is within the classified service and cannot be removed except for cause. While this holding was made under the civil service act as found in vol. 103, O. L., 698, there is no change in the present law, 106 O. L., 400, which in any manner affects in this respect the status of such superintendent. I concur in the foregoing opinion and in its conclusions.

It might be well to observe in this connection, however, that the non-competitive examination provided for in the last clause of section 10 of the act found in vol. 103 is no longer a protection to any officer claiming to have qualified by reason thereof.

This provision of the former law is expressly abrogated by section 486-16, G. C., 106 O. L., 418. If the superintendent involved in your question qualified by a non-competitive examination, he is not now under the protection of the civil service law, nor does the application of the civil service law to this position serve to extend the term of any incumbent thereof when such term is fixed by contract with the board of county commissioners. State ex rel. v. Schneller, 15 N. P. (n. s.) 438.

If, however, it becomes necessary to fill the position from an eligible list secured under a competitive examination, and the present incumbent held the position on August 31, 1915, he may be certified with three others on the eligible list for appointment, as provided by section 486-31, G. C., 106 O. L., 418.

Referring to your second question, a deputy sealer of weights and measures is a deputy of the county auditor, who by virtue of his office is county sealer of weights and measures. Section 2615, G. C. The former is appointed under the provisions of section 2622, G. C., which considered in connection with the provisions of section 2616, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 169, gives him ample authority to act for and in the place of the county auditor in all matters relating to weights and measures, and as to such transactions his relation to the county auditor is a fiduciary one coming clearly within the provisions of paragraph 9 of section 486-8, as amended 106 O. L., 404, which latter section defines and specifies the positions in the unclassified service. Said paragraph 9 provides as follows:

> "The deputies of elective or principal executive officers authorized by law to act for and in place of their principals and holding a fiduciary relation to such principals."

Under the provisions of this paragraph and the sections noted above I conclude that the deputy sealer of weights and measures is in the unclassified service and not protected by civil service laws. This conclusion also is in harmony with a former opinion of Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, reported at page 911 of the attorney general's reports for the year 1914.

You further inquire, however, if said deputy sealer of weights and measures may be removed without cause. As before observed the position not being within the protection of civil service laws and the statutes authorizing the appointment thereto not fixing any term of service, it must be held to be included within the provisions of section 9, G. C., and may be concluded at the pleasure of the appointing power. I therefore hold, in answer to the latter inquiry, that the county auditor may remove the deputy sealer of weights and measures at his pleasure and without cause.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CERTIFICATION TO COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF AN ESTIMATE FOR INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT PRIOR TO TAKING EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW—EXPENDITURES FOR ENGINEERING LIMITED TO ORIGINAL ESTIMATE FOR THAT PURPOSE—DIFFERENCE BETWEEN ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AND CONTRACT PRICE MAY THEREAFTER BE USED FOR OTHER PROPER HIGHWAY WORK.

Where, under the statutes in force prior to September 6, 1915, the state highway commissioner certifies to county commissioners an estimate showing the total estimated cost and expense of an inter-county highway improvement, and further showing a division of such total estimated cost and expense into two items, one item being the estimated cost of construction and the other being the estimated cost of engineering, and such estimate is approved by the county commissioners, and thereafter the contract is let for less than the estimated cost of construction, the state highway commissioner is not authorized to expend for engineering the difference between the estimated cost of construction and the contract price, but is limited in his expenditures for engineering to his original estimate for that purpose, and the difference between the estimated cost of construction and the contract price may thereafter be used for other proper highway work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 14, 1915, enclosing a letter addressed to you by Mr. John R. Chamberlain, deputy state highway commissioner in charge of the bureau of bridges, your communication and Mr. Chamberlain's letter relating to the matter of the improvement of the Urbana-Marysville road in Union county.

It appears that on December 9, 1914, the commissioners of Union county petitioned the state highway department for the improvement of the Urbana-Marysville road from the Champaign county line to Marysville, this section of highway passing through the village of Milford Center. Plans and estimates were prepared for that portion of the above mentioned highway lying between Milford Center and Marysville, a distance of 4.27 miles. This section of highway crosses Buck Run, at which crossing there is at present a narrow dilapidated bridge, which, though serving present needs, should properly be renewed. The estimated cost of improving this section of road, exclusive of the bridge, was $59,525.44, not including the cost of engineering, and the total estimated cost and expense of the improvement exclusive of the bridge but including the engineering expenses, was $62,000.00, the estimated cost of a new bridge over Buck Run being $4,500.00. The amount available for use by the state for road construction in Union county was $31,000.00. The county commissioners of Union county sold bonds in the amount of $31,000.00 for the construction of the section of highway in question, and the contract for constructing the improvement, exclusive of the bridge, at an estimated cost of $59,525.44, was advertised, the difference between $59,525.44 and $62,000.00 representing the estimated engineering expense on the road improvement, exclusive of the bridge. The contract was let for $7,535.44 less than the estimated cost of $59,525.44. You now inquire whether, in view of the above facts, the highway department is free to let a contract for the bridge improvement and pay for the same out of said sum of $7,535.44.

It should first be observed that the contingent liability on the contract for the construction of the road is now fixed at $51,990.00 to be paid to the contractor, plus not more than $2,474.55 to be paid for engineering expense, making a total of not more than $54,464.56.

It is true that the original agreement between the state and county, as evidenced by the so-called final resolution adopted by the county commissioners of Union county, involved the possible expenditure of $62,000.00, half to be expended by the state and half by the county. It should be noted, however, that under the provisions of section 1193, G. C., as that section stood at the time this improvement was projected, the state highway commissioner, upon the completion of the maps, plans and specifications of the proposed improvement, was required to cause estimates to be made of the cost and expense of its construction, and transmit to the county commissioners, together with his certificate of approval thereof, copies of such maps, plans and specifications. Upon receipt of the maps, plans and specifications of the proposed improvement, with the approval thereof, by the state highway commissioner, the county commissioners were required by section 1194, G. C., as that section then stood, before any further action could be taken by the state highway commissioner, to adopt a resolution that such highway be constructed and certify a copy of this resolution to the state highway commissioner. All of the above requirements were strictly complied with in the case now under consideration.

While it was not expressly required by the statutes as they stood at the time this improvement was projected that the state highway commissioner should certify his estimate to the county commissioners, and that the county commissioners should approve the same, yet such action was in effect required by the provision of section 1212, G. C., as it then stood, to the effect that no contract should be let by the state highway commissioner for the improvement of an inter-county highway, unless the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement was to be made should make a written agreement to assume in the first instance the share of the cost and expense over and above the amount to be paid for the state, and the provision of section 5660, G. C., to the effect that the commissioners of a county should not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, unless the auditor first certified that the money required for the payment of such obligation was in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it was to be drawn, or had been levied and placed on the duplicate, and was in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. The written agreement of the commissioners to assume in the first instance the share of the cost and expense over and above the amount to be paid by the state was an agreement involving the expenditure of money, and the commissioners could not enter into the same until the auditor first made the certificate required by section 5660, G. C. The auditor could not make such a certificate unless the agreement involved the expenditure of a definite sum of money and it is, therefore, manifest that the estimate made by the state highway commissioner must be certified to the county authorities, although such action was not in terms required by the statutes in force at the time the improvement now under consideration was projected.

It is unnecessary to discuss in this connection the question of whether it was necessary to itemize such estimate to show the estimated cost of construction, and the estimated cost of engineering. In the case now under consideration, the state highway commissioner did certify to the county commissioners an estimate showing the estimated cost of construction to be $59,525.44, and the estimated engineering expense to be $2,474.56, a total of $62,000.00, and this estimate was approved by the county commissioners and formed the basis of and was one of the inducements to the agreement adopted by them to proceed with the improvement and assume a certain share of the cost and expense. In the view that I take of the law, in the absence of a supplementary agreement on the part of the county commissioners to assume a further part of the cost and expense above $31,000.00 appropriated by them, the facts above set forth created a situation where the state highway commissioner was not only limited to a total expenditure of $62,000.00, but where he was also limited in the division of that sum between construction and engineering cost. In effect, the contract between the state and the county was for the construction of a highway to cost not more than $62,000.00, and the construction work thereon was not to cost more than $59,525.44 and the engineering expense thereon was not to exceed $2,474.56, having in view of course the right of the parties to increase either or both items by a later and supplementary contract.

This rule has the support of reason in that the county commissioners might be willing to expend $31,000.00 of county funds in the construction of a road where a certain proportion was to be observed between construction expense and engineering expense, and might be unwilling to make the expenditure if such proportion were to be disturbed and the engineering expense substantially increased with a corresponding reduction in the amount to be expended for construction work. In the present case, as before observed, the state highway commissioner certified to the county commissioners an estimate showing the estimated cost of construction to be $59,525.44 and the estimated engineering expense to be $2,474.56. With this estimate before them the county commissioners agreed to proceed with the improvement and pay one-half the cost thereof, or $31,000.00. All subsequent proceedings rested entirely with the state highway commissioner and it would be unconscionable to hold that because he subsequently was able to let the contract for a sum of $7,535.44 below the estimated cost of construction, he was therefore authorized to expend for engineering not only his estimate for engineering expense amounting to $2,474.56, but also said sum of $7,535.44.

I am of the opinion that no such conclusion can be reached, and that under the facts in this case the amount that can be expended for engineering is in the absence of a supplementary agreement limited to the estimate of $2,474.56. Any other conclusion would be unfair to the county authorities and would open the door to extravagance in the handling of the engineering work.

As the original amount set aside for the construction of this road was $62,000.00, this as suggested by you leaves a balance of $7,535.44, against which no contingent liabilities exists. Half of this $7,535.44 represents state funds and half represents funds raised by the county by a bond issue. As to the half represented by state funds, no contingent liability existing against it, it can be used for proper inter-county highway work any place in Union county. Through the courtesy of Mr. Milton Haines, prosecuting attorney of Union county, I have been furnished with a copy of the resolution providing for the county's bond issue of $31,000.00. I have examined the resolution and find that the bonds were issued for the purpose of paying the county's share of the cost and expense of improving that part of the Marysville and Urbana highway between Marysville and Milford Center under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231, inclusive, of the General Code. Inasmuch as the renewing of the bridge over Buck Run is a part of the improvement of the road in question under the sections of the General Code referred to in the bond resolution, and was covered by the original application of the county commissioners, and inasmuch as no contingent liability exists against the county's half of the sum of $7,535.44, I am of the opinion that the county may properly apply its half of said sum toward the construction of the bridge in question.

It is therefore my opinion, in answer to your question, that upon the approval of the plans and specifications for the bridge in question, by the county commissioners of Union county, and upon their proper determination to proceed with its construction, and upon their agreeing to pay the county's portion of the cost and expense, that is to say, upon the county commissioners adopting a so-called final resolution covering the matter, you are authorized to enter into a contract for the construction of the bridge in question, the state's portion of the cost to be paid from its half of the sum of $7,535.44 referred to by you, and the county's portion of the cost to be paid from its half of the same sum.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—COLLECTION OF DELINQUENT TAXES—NOT ENTITLED TO AN ALLOWANCE IN ADDITION TO SALARY FOR PROSECUTIONS BROUGHT BY COUNTY TREASURER UNDER FAVOR OF SECTION 2667, G. C.—STATUTORY SALARY IS FULL PAYMENT FOR ALL SERVICES REQUIRED BY LAW TO BE RENDERED IN AN OFFICIAL CAPACITY ON BEHALF OF COUNTY OR ITS OFFICERS, WHETHER CRIMINAL OR CIVIL MATTERS—MONEY ILLEGALLY DRAWN CAN BE COLLECTED FROM AN ATTORNEY WHO HAS BEEN EMPLOYED BY COUNTY TREASURER.

The county treasurer may not contract with an attorney to collect delinquent taxes on real estate, or employ a collector to collect delinquent personal taxes.

The expenditure of public funds for such purpose would be illegal, and if such expenditure has been made it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney, under provision of section 2921, G. C., to bring an action in the name of the state to recover for the use of the county such funds so illegally drawn from the county treasury. In case a finding is made by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, it becomes the duty of the prosecuting attorney, under provision of section 286, G. C., to institute in the proper court, within ninety days from the receipt of such finding, a civil action on behalf of the county, and promptly prosecute the same to final determination to recover funds so illegally expended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 18, 1915.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 12th you request my opinion on the following questions:

> "FIRST: Can the county treasurer contract with an attorney other than the prosecuting attorney of the county to collect delinquent and forfeited real estate taxes under the provisions of section 2672 of the General Code of Ohio?
> "SECOND: If the county treasurer has employed an attorney in accordance with the foregoing provisions of the statutes, who has filed suit in the court of common pleas of his county and enforced the payment of said taxes by an action at law, and the same has been paid into the county treasury, and he has duly presented his bill to the county commissioners and the same has been allowed and paid from the county treasury, can said money be collected back from the attorney who has enforced the payment of the same, under the provisions of the foregoing statute and the preceding statutes relating thereto?
> "THIRD: When a prosecuting attorney has been requested and directed to collect delinquent and forfeited real estate taxes under the provisions of section 2673 of the General Code of Ohio, can he collect a fee of 25 per cent. as provided therein in addition to his regular salary?

"FOURTH: Under the provisions of section 5696 of the General Code of Ohio, can a collector be appointed to collect personal taxes as therein provided?"

You call my attention to sections 2672 and 2673 of the General Code which provide:

"Section 2672. When lands or lots or parcels thereof, advertised for and offered at both delinquent and forfeited tax sales, and returned as unsold at both, have become forfeited to the state by reason of the unpaid taxes thereon, the county treasurer may contract with a suitable person to collect the taxes or assessments thereon at a compensation deemed just and proper, subject to the approval of the county commissioners, but not to exceed twenty-five per cent. of the amount collected and shall be payable therefrom. Such allowances shall be apportioned ratably by the county auditor, among the funds entitled to share in the distribution of such taxes, and the expense of collection under the contract shall be borne by the person so contracting, who may proceed under this and the preceding sections, or as otherwise provided by law.

"Section 2673. When requested so to do by the auditor of state, if a county treasurer refuses or neglects to enforce a lien for such taxes and assessments, or either, and penalty thereon by civil action as hereinbefore provided, the auditor of state may direct the prosecuting attorney of the county to enforce such lien, in a civil action in the name of the state. Such suit shall be brought and prosecuted as hereinbefore provided. For such services the prosecuting attorney shall be allowed by the county commissioners from the amount collected not to exceed twenty-five per cent. thereof. The expense of such collection shall be borne by the prosecuting attorney, and all allowances shall be apportioned ratably by the county auditor, among all the funds entitled to share in the distribution of such taxes."

It becomes necessary, however, in determining the answers to the several questions submitted by you, to consider the provisions of other statutes relating to the collection of delinquent taxes on real and personal property.

Section 2658, G. C., relates to the collection of delinquent personal taxes and provides:

"When taxes are past due and unpaid, the county treasurer may distrain sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person charged with such taxes, if found within the county, to pay the taxes so remaining due and the costs that have accrued. He shall immediately advertise in three public places in the township where the property was taken the time and place it will be sold. If the taxes and costs accrued thereon are not paid before the day appointed for such sale, which shall be not less than ten days after the taking of the property, the treasurer shall sell it at public vendue, or so much thereof as will pay such taxes and the costs."

If the county treasurer is unable to collect by distress the taxes assessed to a person or corporation or an executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, accounting officer, agent or factor, section 2660, G. C., provides that he shall apply to the court of common pleas in his county at any time after his semi-annual settlement with the county auditor, and the clerk shall cause notice to be served upon such corporation, executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, accounting officer, agent or factor, requiring him forthwith to show cause why he should not pay such taxes. If he fails to show sufficient cause, the court at the term to which such notice is returnable shall enter a rule against him for such payment and the costs of the proceedings, which rule shall have the same force and effect as a judgment at law and shall be enforced by attachment or execution or such process as the court directs.

Sections 2662, 2663 and 2664 of the General Code provide ample authority on the part of the county treasurer for the collection of delinquent personal taxes from a person who has removed from the county in which the personal property was listed and who resides in another county in the state.

Section 2665, G. C., provides:

> "If a person charged with a tax has not sufficient property which the treasurer can find to distrain to pay such tax, but has moneys, or credits due, or coming due him from any person within the state, known to the treasurer, or if such tax payer has removed from the state or county, and has property, moneys, or credits due, or coming due him in the state, known to the treasurer, in every such case the treasurer shall collect such tax and penalty by distress, attachment, or other process of law. He may make affidavit that the residence of such tax payer is to him unknown, or that he is not a resident of the county where such property is found or where such debtor resides, or that such tax payer has not property in the county sufficient to distrain to pay such tax. Thereupon an attachment, with garnishee process, shall be issued and such proceedings had, and such judgment rendered for taxes, penalty, and costs, as are lawful in other cases of attachments. If the treasurer serves upon any person indebted to such tax payer a written notice, stating the amount of delinquent tax and penalty due, such debtor may, after the service of such notice, pay such tax and penalty to the treasurer, whose receipt therefor shall be a full discharge of so much of the indebtedness as equals the tax and penalty so paid."

Section 5694, G. C., provides:

> "Immediately after each semi-annual settlement in August, the county auditor shall make a tax list, and duplicate thereof, of all the taxes on personal property remaining unpaid, as shown by the treasurer's books, and the delinquent record as returned by him to the auditor. Such tax list and duplicate shall contain the name, valuation, and amount of personal property taxes, with ten per cent. penalty thereon, due and unpaid. He shall deliver the duplicate to the treasurer on the fifteenth day of September, annually."

Section 5695, G. C., makes it the duty of the county treasurer forthwith to collect the taxes and penalty on the duplicate by any of the means provided by law. Said section further provides that the funds so collected shall be distributed in proper proportions to the appropriate funds.

Section 5697, G. C., provides:

> "When personal taxes stand charged against a person, and are not paid within the time prescribed by law for the payment of such taxes, the treasurer of such county, in addition to any other remedy provided by law for the collection of personal taxes, shall enforce the collection thereof by a civil action in the name of such treasurer against such person for the recovery of such unpaid taxes. It shall be sufficient, having made proper parties to the suit, for the treasurer to allege in his bill of particulars or petition that the taxes stand charged upon the duplicate of the county against such person, that they are due and unpaid, and that such person is indebted in the amount appearing to be due on the duplicate, and the treasurer need not set forth any other or further special matter relating thereto. The tax duplicate shall be prima facie evidence on the trial of the action, of the amount and validity of the taxes appearing due and unpaid thereon, and of the non-payment thereof, without setting forth in his petition any other or further special matter relating thereto."

The constitutionality of these statutes was upheld by the United States supreme court in the case of Insurance Co. v. Bowland, 196 U. S., 111. The court in its opinion said:

"The collection by distraint of goods to satisfy taxes lawfully levied is one of the most ancient methods known to the law, and in this case the law of Ohio authorizing it does not violate the constitutional right of a foreign company and deprive it of its property without due process of law."

Section 2667, G. C., relates to the collection of delinquent taxes on real estate and provides:

"When taxes or assessments, charged against lands or lots or parcels thereof upon the tax duplicate, authorized by law, or any part thereof, are not paid within the time prescribed by law, the county treasurer, in addition to other remedies provided by law may, and when requested by the auditor of state, shall enforce the lien of such taxes and assessments, or either, and any penalty thereon, by civil action in his name as county treasurer, for the sale of such premises, in the court of common pleas of the county, without regard to the amount claimed in the same way mortgage liens are enforced."

Section 2669, G. C., provides:

"Having made the proper parties, it shall be sufficient for the treasurer to allege in his petition that the taxes and assessments, or either, are charged on the tax duplicate against such premises, the amount thereof, and are unpaid, and he shall not be required to set forth in the petition any other or further special matter relating thereto. On the trial a certified copy of the entry on the tax duplicate shall be prima facie evidence of such allegations and of the validity of such taxes and assessments."

Section 2670, G. C., provides:

"Judgment shall be rendered for such taxes and assessments, or any part thereof, as are found due and unpaid, and for penalty and costs, for the payment of which the court shall order such premises to be sold without appraisement. From the proceeds of the sale the costs shall be first paid, next the judgment for taxes and assessments, and the balance shall be distributed according to law. The owner or owners of such property shall not be entitled to any exemption against such judgment, nor shall any statute of limitations apply to such action. When the lands or lots stand charged on the tax duplicate as forfeited to the state, it shall not be necessary to make the state a party, but it shall be deemed a party through and represented by the county treasurer."

The authority of the county treasurer to collect delinquent taxes on real and personal property is clearly defined by the above provisions of the statutes. His duty to make such collections is clearly determined by the mandatory provisions of sections 2665 and 5695 of the General Code. His broad power to distrain goods and chattels to satisfy delinquent personal taxes under the provisions of section 2698, et seq., of the General Code, his duty to enforce the lien of taxes and assessments on real estate by an action in court, when requested to do so by the auditor of state under provision of section 2667, et seq., of the General Code, taken in connection with the provisions of section 2917, G. C., which make the prosecuting attorney the legal adviser of the county treasurer, and require said officer to prosecute and defend all suits and actions which such county treasurer may direct or to which he is a party, and prohibit said county treasurer, as such, from employing other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county, compel me to conclude that the county treasurer may not contract with an attorney, other than the prosecuting attorney of the county, to collect delinquent taxes on real estate or employ a collector to collect delinquent personal taxes.

This conclusion, insofar as the collection of delinquent personal taxes is concerned, is supported by the decision of the court of common pleas of Franklin county in the case of the state of Ohio on the relation of Edward C. Turner as prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, Ohio, plaintiff, v. James T. Lindsay as treasurer of Franklin county, Ohio, defendant.

This was an action in mandamus to compel the said James T. Lindsay, as treasurer of said county, by any of the means provided by law, to collect the delinquent personal taxes and penalty as shown by the tax list delivered to him by the county auditor, without a collector. Upon a hearing of this case on the merits the court held that under the above provisions of the statutes relating to the collection of delinquent taxes on personal property it is the plain duty of the county treasurer, himself, to make the collections therein provided for, and a peremptory writ of madamus was issued directing and requiring said treasurer to proceed forthwith to make said collections.

Said conclusion, insofar as the collection of delinquent taxes on real estate is concerned, is in harmony with an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. A. A. Slaybaugh, prosecuting attorney of Putnam county, under date of November 7, 1914. In this opinion, your first and third questions were considered by Mr. Hogan, the questions asked by Mr. Slaybaugh reading as follows:

> "I would like an opinion as to whether or not the county treasurer has the right to employ an attorney in actions commenced by him under the provisions of section 2667, General Code, and if so, would the provisions of section 2672 govern the amount of the fees for such attorney?
> "Is the prosecuting attorney compelled to act as attorney in cases commenced under section 2667 without compensation? What is meant by the word 'expenses' in sections 2672 and 2673?"

After quoting the provisions of sections 2667, 2672, 2673 and 2917, G. C., Mr. Hogan called attention to section 2912, G. C., which provides for the filling of a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney, and for the appointment of an assistant prosecuting attorney to perform the duties of said office in case the prosecuting attorney is unable to perform said duties on account of sickness or other disability, and held that the county treasurer has no right to employ an attorney to prosecute actions brought under section 2667, G. C.

In answer to the second question asked by Mr. Slaybaugh, Mr. Hogan called attention to the last paragraph of section 3003, G. C., which provides:

> "No prosecuting attorney shall receive a salary in excess of five thousand five hundred dollars. Such salary shall be paid in equal monthly installments, from the general fund, and shall be in full payment for all services required by law to be rendered in an official capacity on behalf of the county or its officers, whether in criminal or civil matters."

Consideration was given to that part of section 2673, G. C., which provides:

"For such services the prosecuting attorney shall be allowed by the county commissioners from the amount collected, not to exceed twenty-five per cent. thereof."

It was noted, however, that the last paragraph of section 3003, as above quoted, was first found in the codification of 1910 in the following language:

"Such salary is to be paid in equal monthly installments, out of the general fund. Such salary shall be in full and in lieu of all compensation consisting of salaries and fees heretofore paid to prosecuting attorneys for their services as such, and in full payment for all services required by law to be rendered in an official capacity on behalf of the county or its officers, whether the same relates to either criminal or civil matters."

In conclusion Mr. Hogan said:

"This language is clear, free from all doubt or ambiguity, and of such character that it must be concluded that if the language last above copied from section 2673 was then in the Revised Statutes, its provisions were superseded by the amendment of section 1297, made March 31, 1906. So far as I have been able to ascertain, the language above quoted from section 2673, first found a place in our laws in section 1104, R. S., when amended on April 23, 1904, 97 O. L., 402.

"This makes the language of the act of March 31, 1906, as codified in 3003, G. C., the latter enactment and controlling, which compels the conclusion that the prosecuting attorney is not entitled to an allowance, in addition to his salary for prosecuting actions brought by the county treasurer, under favor of section 2667."

I concur in this opinion, and therefore enclose a copy of the same for your consideration.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your first, third and fourth questions must be answered in the negative.

Inasmuch as I have held that the county treasurer is without authority in law to employ a person to collect delinquent taxes on real or personal property, it follows that the expenditure of the public funds for this purpose would be illegal, and if you find that such expenditure has been made it is your duty, under provision of section 2921, G. C., to bring an action in the name of the state to recover for the use of the county such funds so illegally drawn from the county treasury. In case a finding has been made by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices that such illegal expenditure has been made, it becomes your duty, under section 286, G. C., to institute in the proper court within ninety days from the receipt of such finding, a civil action in behalf of your county, and promptly prosecute the same to final determination to recover funds so illegally expended.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your second question must be answered in the affirmative.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—EFFECT OF AMENDED SECTIONS OF GENERAL CODE ON TERMS OF ITS MEMBERS IS TO CONTINUE THEM UNTIL THEIR SUCCESSORS ARE APPOINTED AND QUALIFIED AND TO FIX DEFINITE DATE FOR BEGINNING OF TERMS OF SAID MEMBERS HEREAFTER APPOINTED.

1. When an amendatory act includes all of the original act, and incorporates new provisions, the effect is not to repeal and then re-enact the original law, but it speaks from the date of its first enactment, while the new provisions become operative at the time the amendatory act goes into effect.

2. The only effect of the amendments made in section 1079, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 555, is to continue the term of each member of the state board of agriculture theretofore appointed under the provisions of said section, as found in 106 O. L., 144, until his successor is appointed and qualified, and to fix a definite date for the beginning of the terms of said members hereafter appointed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 18, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 14th, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "On April 22, 1915, there was filed in the office of the secretary of state an act creating the board of agriculture of Ohio, and in pursuance of such act on the 22nd day of July, 1915, the ten members of such board as provided for under said act were duly appointed and commissioned by the governor.
> "On June 5, 1915, there was filed in the office of the secretary of state an act amending sections 1079 and 1083 of the act creating the board of agriculture of Ohio.
> "In appointing the members of the board of agriculture of Ohio, as provided for under the act filed with the secretary of state, as of date June 5, 1915, your official opinion is requested as to the legal date of the beginning of the services of such members under said amended act."

The act which was filed June 5, 1915, to which you refer, is now the controlling law, and is found in 106 O. L., page 555, and provides as follows:

> "Section 1079. There shall be a board of agriculture of Ohio and by that name the board may sue and be sued. The board of agriculture shall consist of ten members to be appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, two to serve for one year, two for two years, two for three years, two for four years and two for five years, and until their successors are appointed and qualified; and thereafter two members shall be appointed each year to serve for a term of five years, commencing on the first Thursday after the second Monday in January. Vacancies shall be filled in the same manner for unexpired terms. Not more than five of the members of the board shall at any time be of the same political party, and not less than six such members shall be practical farmers.
> "Section 1083. Immediately following the appointments of the members of the board of agriculture of Ohio, and annually on the first Thursday after the second Monday in January thereafter, the members of the board shall meet at their office and elect a president who shall serve for one year and until his successor is elected."

I have italicized the amendments made in the foregoing law so as to indicate and bring directly to your attention the changes made by said law. It appears therefrom that the law re-enacted all of the old sections and in addition thereto the matter which I have italicized.

The only effect of the changes thus made is to continue the term of each member until his successor is appointed and qualified, and to make the beginning of the term of each member definite by fixing it as of the date of the first Thursday after the second Monday in January.

It is a familiar canon of interpretation of amendatory acts that all portions of of an original statute which are retained by the amended act are not to be construed as a new enactment, but are to be considered as remaining in force from the time of their original enactment and as being continued in operation by the amendatory enactment.

> "Where an amendment is made by declaring that the original statute 'shall be amended so as to read as follows,' retaining part of the original statute and incorporating therein new provisions, the effect is not to repeal, and then re-enact, the part retained, but such part remains in force as from the time of the original enactment, while the new provisions become operative at the time the amendatory act goes into effect, and all such portions of the original statute as are omitted from the amendatory act are abrogated thereby and are thereafter no part of the statute."
> Black on Interpretation of Laws, Rule 133.

In the present instance, all of the original section is re-enacted in the amended section, with the additions italicized to which your attention has already been directed. It follows from this that all of the provisions of the original law remain in force and are continued in operation by the amendatory act above quoted.

This being so, each member of the board will continue to serve under his original appointment made on July 22nd, subject, however, to the new provisions of the amended statute. As before noted, these require, first, that each member shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified, and secondly, that the term of each member shall begin on the first Thursday after the second Monday in January. By virtue of these provisions, therefore, the members appointed on the 22nd of July, 1915, for the term of one year will have their terms extended from the 22nd of July, 1916, to the first Thursday after the second Monday in January, 1917, and this rule will apply to the terms expiring in July of each succeeding year.

Giving a direct answer to your specific question, the services of the members of this board will not begin under the new act until the expiration of the terms for which they were appointed under the original law. Then by reason of the clause in the new law extending their terms until their successors are appointed, the term of each member will be extended from the date it ends in July of each year to the first Thursday after the second Monday in the following January, at which time the term of his successor will begin. The first appointments to be made will be the successors to the members who were appointed for one year. As before observed, the terms of said members will not end until the first Thursday after the second Monday in January, 1917, when the terms of their successors will begin under the amended law.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CONTRACT—LOWEST RESPONSIBLE BIDDER—HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER MAY USE SOUND DISCRETION.

Where the state highway commissioner is required to let a contract to the lowest responsible bidder, it is his power and duty to look not only to the size of the bids but also to the pecuniary ability of the bidders and to their skill, experience, integrity and judgment. If in the exercise of a sound discretion he determines that the lowest bidder is not responsible, it is his right and duty to reject the lowest bid and award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder, and in the absence of fraud or bad faith his decision upon a matter of this kind is final and not subject to review by the courts. A similar but somewhat broader construction is to be given to a statute requiring the letting of a contract to the lowest and best bidder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 18, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 14, 1915, which reads as follows:

"Under date of October 8th, this department received bids, among others, for the improvement of section 'O' of the Newark-New Lexington road in Perry county, and section 'R' of the Cleveland-Kent road in Portage county.

"Upon each of these sections, the firm of Parrish & Bales, of Dayton, Ohio, were low bidders, the total of their bids on both jobs approximating $49,000.00. The resolutions anticipatory to the reception of these bids were filed in this department prior to September 6th of this year.

"The above named firm is at present engaged in work on three small contracts under the supervision of this department. The firm, to the best of my knowledge, is not strong financially, nor are they particularly experienced in highway construction work. For these reasons I hesitate to enter into contracts with Messrs. Parrish & Bales for the above mentioned work.

"As it is highly desirable that I make a decision at a very early date, I would request a comprehensive opinion from your department as to my rights in the awarding of these particular contracts, interpreting for me the terms 'lowest responsible bidder', and also advise me of the meaning of the term 'lowest and best bidder' as used in amended senate bill No. 125."

I understand that both of the projected improvements, for the completion of which Parrish & Bales have submitted bids, are inter-county highway improvements and are being made in co-operation with county commissioners, and that the final resolutions of the county commissioners of the two counties, determining to proceed with the improvements, were adopted and certified copies thereof filed in your office, with the approval of the attorney general endorsed thereon, prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915.

Section 1201, G. C., as that section stood prior to September 1, 1915, required the state highway commissioner to award contracts of this class to the lowest responsible bidder.

Section 199 of the Cass highway law, section 1206, G. C., requires the state highway commissioner to award such contracts to the lowest and best bidder. In determining whether the provision requiring the state highway commissioner to let contracts of this character to the lowest responsible bidder, or the provision requiring him to let such contracts to the lowest and best bidder, is the governing provision in the letting of the contracts referred to by you, it is necessary to consider certain of the saving provisions of the Cass highway law.

Section 302 of that act reads as follows:

"This act shall not affect pending actions or proceedings, civil or criminal, pertaining to the construction, improvement, maintenance, supervision or control of highways, bridges or culverts, brought by or against the county commissioners, county surveyor, township trustees, or road superintendent under the provisions of any statute hereby repealed, but the same may be prosecuted or defended to final determination in like manner, as if such statute had not been repealed."

Section 303 of the Cass highway law contains the following provision:

'This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, or right acquired of any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect, under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, enforced, prosecuted or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the commissioners of any road district prior to the time of the taking effect of this act."

Inasmuch as the proceedings for these improvements were begun, the applications of the county commissioners made and approved, plans and specifications prepared and approved, and the final resolutions by the boards of county commissioners adopted prior to September 6, 1915, it is clear that under the above quoted provisions the statutory requirement, to the effect that the contracts must be let to the lowest responsible bidder, is the one which governs in this matter.

It may first be observed, however, that a board or official charged with the letting of a contract is not required, under all circumstances, to let such contract to the lowest bidder where the statute requires either that the contract be let to the lowest responsible bidder or that it be let to the lowest and best bidder. Under either provision of law the board or official is authorized and required to take into consideration, in the awarding of the contract, certain factors other than the size of the bid. Any other rule would result in reading out of the statute in the one case the word "responsible" and in the other the word "best."

I will consider first the legal effect of a statutory requirement that a contract must be let to the lowest responsible bidder, since that is the requirement which will govern you in the letting of the contracts referred to in your communication.

In the case of Hubbard v. Sandusky, 9 O. C. C., 638, 6 O. C. D., 786, the court was called upon to construe a statute requiring that as to certain city improvements and under certain conditions, none of the lowest responsible bid should be accepted. The court held as follows:

> "The authority is vested in the council to decide which is the lowest responsible bid and that authority or power will not be interfered with by the courts except upon a clear showing of fraud, or gross abuse of authority practically amounting to a fraud, and the question of responsibility must enter largely into all decisions of the council in accepting bids. The court will presume always that the council acted rightfully in making a decision until the contrary is shown."

In the case of Carmichael v. McCourt, 17 O. C. D., 775, 6 O. C. C.(n. s.) 561, the court in construing a statute relating to the state board of public works and requiring that contracts should be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder (Bates R. S., section 218-44) held that such statute must be held to afford a latitude of discretion as to awards greater than that afforded by the public buildings code, but did not undertake to define that latitude.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Columbus Board of Education, 9 O. D., N. P., 336, 6 O. N. P., 347, the court was called upon to construe a statutory provision to the effect that none but the lowest responsible bid should be accepted by a board of education. The suit was one in mandamus and the relators alleged in their petition that they were the lowest responsible bidders and that their bid was $155.00 lower than the one accepted by the board of education. The board admitted that the relators were the lowest bidders, but denied their responsibility and the court in refusing a writ of mandamus used the following language:

> "The board was called upon to determine whether bidders were responsible, but the responsibility of a bidder does not rest upon his ability or inability to give adequate security for the performance of the contract. This term is given a much broader meaning when used in connection with the powers of officers and boards in the making of contracts. It includes pecuniary ability to perform the contract, skill, integrity and judgment."

In the case of Commonwealth v. Mitchell, 82 Pa. State, 343, the court in construing a statutory provision requiring a contract to be given to the lowest responsible bidder held that the word "responsible," when applied to contracts requiring for their execution not only pecuniary ability but also judgment and skill, imposes not merely a ministerial duty upon the city authorities such as would result did their powers extend no further than to ascertain whose was the lowest bid, and the pecuniary responsibility of the bidder and his sureties, but also duties and powers which are deliberative and discretionary.

It was further held in this case that the writ of mandamus would not lie to control the exercise of such deliberation and discretion in the absence of a positive showing of fraud or corruption.

In the case of State ex rel. v. McGrath, et al. 91 Mo., 386, the statute required a contract for printing to be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. Two bids were filed, one by the relator and one by another printing concern, the relator's bid being the lower and the commissioners charged with the letting of the contract awarded the same to the higher bidder. The court held that the authority to let the contract to the lowest responsible bidder relieved the commissioners of public printing from the duty of letting the contract to the lowest bidder, and that the commissioners had a right to consider the responsibility of the bidders and that this duty involved the exercise of such a degree of official discretion as to place the commissioners beyond the control of the courts by mandamus, that the award to the higher bidder was valid and that the courts could not interfere.

I therefore conclude, that as to the contracts about which you inquire, and which you are required to let to the lowest responsible bidder, you are not required under all circumstances to award such contracts to the lowest bidders, and are in fact not permitted to award such contracts to an irresponsible bidder. It is your power and duty in the letting of such contracts to look to the responsibility of the bidders, and in determining whether a bidder is responsible, you have a right to consider his pecuniary ability to perform the contract in question and his skill, experience, integrity and judgment. If, in the exercise of a sound discretion, you determine that the lowest bidder is not responsible, it is your right and duty to reject his bid and award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder, and in the absence of fraud or bad faith your decision upon a matter of this kind is final and not subject to review by the courts.

A mass of authorities might be cited in support of the proposition that a statute which confers upon a board or public officer authority to award a contract to the lowest and best bidder confers upon the board a discretion with respect to awarding the contract, which discretion cannot be controlled by mandamus.

See State ex rel. v. Hermann, 63 O. S., 440;
State ex rel. v. Board of Public Service, 81 O. S., 218;
Scott v. Hamilton, 7 O. C. C. (n. s.) 495; 19 O. C. D., 652;
Yaryan v. Toledo, 18 O. C. D., 259.

The term "lowest and best bidder" seems to be given a somewhat wider meaning by the courts than the term "lowest responsible bidder," although the distinction between the meaning of the two terms is somewhat vague. In determining which of several bids is the lowest and best, you have a right to look to the pecuniary ability of bidders to perform the contract and to their skill, experience, integrity and judgment, and to any other similar consideration affecting their power to carry out a contract entered into by them and the probability of their being able to execute the contract in a workmanlike manner within such time as it may be proper to allow for the completion of the same.

Looking to all these considerations, it is your duty to determine which bid it would be for the best advantage of the state to accept, and the person filing that bid is to be regarded by you as the lowest and best bidder within the meaning of the statute and is to be awarded the contract. After you have exercised your discretion in determining which of several bidders is the lowest and best, the courts will not interfere with or review your decision in the absence of a showing of fraud or bad faith.

Answering specifically your question as to your right to reject the bids of Parrish & Bales for the construction of highways in Perry and Portage counties, I advise you that you have a right to consider the financial strength of this firm and its experience in highway work, and if upon a fair consideration of the same you determine that such firm is not responsible, and there are other bidders for such work, which bidders you determine by the same test applied to Parrish & Bales to be responsible, then it is within your power, and is indeed your duty, to reject the bids of Parrish & Bales, and to award the contracts to the lowest of the responsible bidders.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—APPLICATION FOR STATE AID BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS PRIOR TO TAKING EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW—HOW APPLICATIONS CAN BE APPROVED—MAY BE WITHDRAWN AND NEW APPLICATIONS FILED.

Applications for state aid made by county commissioners prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915, are still valid. If such applications are now approved by the state highway commissioner, all subsequent steps in the improvement of the highways covered by such applications are to be had under the law in force at the time such applications were made. As a matter of sound public policy and in order to speedily bring the operations of the state highway department entirely under the provisions of the Cass highway law, such applications should be withdrawn and new applications made under the existing statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 18, 1915, you addressed to me a communication in which you submitted a number of questions relative to the Cass highway law. An answer to the sixteenth and last of those questions has been delayed pending the submission of additional facts by your department, and from communication above referred to and from the statements of certain members of your department I now understand the facts to be as follows:

There are on file in the office of the state highway department a number of applications which were properly signed and executed by boards of county commissioners applying for state aid on inter-county highways, under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio and the amendments thereto. These applications were made during the years 1913 and 1914, and most of them were made prior to January 1, 1914. The applications recite that the public interest demands the improvement, under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231 and the amendments thereto of the General Code of Ohio, of certain inter-county highways therein described, that no part of such highways are situated within the limits of any municipality, that the commissioners making application to the state highway commissioner for aid from an appropriation by the state or from any fund available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways, and that the commissioners agree for and on behalf of their respective counties to pay in the first instance from the funds of such counties not less than fifty per cent. of the cost and expense of surveys and other expenses preliminary to the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such highways.

Some of these resolutions were adopted by boards of county commissioners in response to letters addressed to them by the then state highway commissioner. These letters pointed out that as to approximately seventy-five per cent. of the inter-county highway mileage of the state county commissioners had already applied for state aid and that it was desired to have every mile applied for by January 1, 1915. The following is a quotation from the letters referred to above:

> "By signing all resolutions, it will place your county in a position where it can co-operate with or receive aid from the state, for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair, of any inter-county highway, or part thereof, when funds are available, without any delays. You merely commit your county to the policy of wanting all the inter-county highways improved and placed under state maintenance and repair just as fast as funds are available for the same.
> "Signing the resolutions will not be considered, by this department, an obligation for your county to appropriate any moneys for surveys; in case the county will be required or expected to share in the expense of any surveys, this department will not order any surveys, or incur any other preliminary expense, until a special authorization for the same is received from the board of commissioners of your county for each specific improvement."

The applications referred to above were made under authority of section 1185, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 451, which section read in part as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from an appropriation by the state or from any fund available for the construction, improvement, maintenance, or repair of 'inter-county' highways. Such application shall be filed prior to January 1st of the calendar year in which such appropriation may be made or become available. If the county commissioners have applied prior to January 1st, and upon examination of the application by the state highway commissioner, it is found to be irregular, it shall be his duty to immediately notify the board of county commissioners and request that they make the proper correction or amend the petition and return the same to the office of the state highway commissioner on or before the first of February next succeeding. * * *"

Section 1189, G. C., 102 O. L., 333, which was in force prior to the passage of the Cass highway law, contained the following provisions:

> "An application or part thereof not approved or withdrawn may be considered as an application for the apportionment of state aid moneys to a county for any succeeding year."

Having in mind the above facts you call my attention to the following provision found in section 303 of the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 663:

> "The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, * * * prior to the time of the taking effect of this act."

You now inquire as to whether the applications above referred to are to be considered as valid or whether they are null and void, and whether if valid they are operative only under the old highway laws or only under the Cass highway law which became effective September 6, 1915. You further inquire as to whether if they are valid and operative only under the old laws repealed by the Cass highway law, county commissioners are thereby prevented from making new applications covering the improvement of the same inter-county highway described in the old applications, such new applications to be operative under the Cass highway law.

I understand that your inquiry concerns only such applications as have not yet been acted upon and either approved or rejected by the state highway commissioner. As to these resolutions it could not be said that any act has been done under or in pursuance of the same, and in one sense of the word no right has been acquired under these resolutions making application for state aid, but in another and broader sense the county commissioners have acquired a right under their resolutions making application to the state highway commissioner for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways, that right being to have the state highway commissioner act upon said resolutions and either approve or reject the applications thereby made. No action having been taken by the state highway commissioner approving or disapproving the applications referred to by you, it is my opinion that such applications are to be considered as still valid and of full force and effect.

These applications were the first step in the proceedings by which, under the law in force prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, county commissioners co-operated with the state in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways. It therefore becomes important to consider the effect of certain saving provisions of the Cass highway law, one of which is referred to by you and quoted in part in your communication.

> "This act shall not affect pending actions or proceedings, civil or criminal, pertaining to the construction, improvement, maintenance, supervision or control of highways, bridges or culverts, brought by or against the county commissioners, county surveyor, township trustees, or road superintendent under the provisions of any statute hereby repealed, but the same may be prosecuted or defended to final determination in like manner, as if such statute had not been repealed."

Section 303 of the act contains the following provisions:

> "This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, or right acquired of any penalty, forfeitures or punishment incurred prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect, under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, enforced, prosecuted or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the commissioners of any road district prior to the time of the taking effect of this act."

In view of the provisions above quoted, it is my opinion that if the applications referred to by you are approved by the state highway commissioner, his approval constituting the second step in the proceedings by which, under the old law, counties co-operated with the state in inter-county highway improvement, then all subsequent steps in the improvement of the highways covered by such applications are to be had under the law in force at the time such applications were made. As previously pointed out, however, section 1189, G. C., 102 O. L., 333, indicates that applications of the character referred to by you may be withdrawn, and in answer to the last branch of your question it is my opinion that as a matter of sound public policy, and in order to speedily bring the operations of your department under the provisions of the Cass highway law and thus avoid the necessity of operating under two sets of statutes, you should not approve any applications made by county commissioners for state aid, which applications were made prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, but should require all boards of county commissioners in the state to withdraw all applications for state aid made prior to September 6, 1915, and make new applications under the existing statutes. If the course above suggested is followed by you, all necessity for your department referring to the statutes in force prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law will be avoided, as soon as proceedings started under the old law, and in which the application of the county commissioners was approved by the state highway commissioner prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, have been completed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—THE WORDS "IMPROVEMENTS" AND "ROAD IMPROVEMENT" DEFINED—ANSWERS TO SIXTEEN QUESTIONS AS TO THE INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES AS ENACTED IN HIGHWAY LAW.

1. The scope of the word "improvement" or "improvements" occurring in the Cass highway law cannot be indicated in general terms, and the meaning of the word as used in any particular section must be determined from the context.

2. The expression "road improvement" in section 208 of the Cass highway law, section 1215, G. C., may be read "highway improvement," and the expression "inter-county roads" in section 226 of the act, section 1231, G. C., may be read "inter-county highways."

3. The provisions of the Cass highway law relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county highways apply in all respects to the letting of contracts for the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of main market roads.

4. In disbursing the funds derived from the registration of automobiles, it is the duty of the state highway commissioner, under the Cass highway law, to expend one half of such funds in the maintenance and repair of inter-county highways not designated as main market roads and the other half in the maintenance and repair of main market roads without reference to whether or not such main market roads are also inter-county highways.

5. Where work is done by the state highway department without the co-operation of a county or some township thereof, and such work includes any expenditure for bridge and culvert construction, the state is required to pay the full cost of such bridge and culvert work.

6. When an improvement is sought by township trustees under the provision of section 185 of the Cass highway law, section 1192, G. C., and work that does not sell is re-estimated, the amended estimate is to be referred to the township trustees for approval.

7. The services required by section 180 of the Cass highway law, section 1887, G. C., are to be regarded as a part of the regular duties of the county highway superintendent.

8. Insofar as sections 217 and 242 of the Cass highway law, sections 1224 and 7465, G. C., are in conflict, the latter is to govern.

9. Insofar as trees or shrubbery may be planted along inter-county highways, such planting is under the supervision and control of the state highway department. The planting of trees or shrubbery should not be included, however, in the plans for any proposed improvement unless the consent of the abutting land owners be first obtained.

10. The change of existing lines authorized by section 189 of the Cass highway law, section 1196, G. C., is not the change in existing inter-county or main market roads referred to in section 182 of the act, section 1189, G. C. It is impossible to lay down any general rule by which to determine whether a proposed change falls under one or the other of these heads.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 18, 1915, in which you submit a number of questions relative to amended senate bill No. 125, known as the Cass highway code, and found in 106 O. L., 574.

You first inquire as to what is to be understood as the definition of the word "improvement" when used in connection with the words "construction," "maintenance" and "repair," in the sense in which it is used in the first sentence of section 177, and the third line of section 214 of the Cass highway law. The first sentence of section 177 of the Cass highway code, being section 1184, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner shall have general supervision of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all inter-county highways and main market roads and the bridges and culverts thereon."

The first five lines of section 214 of the Cass highway code, being section 1221, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The state highway improvement fund produced by the levy hereinafter provided for, shall be applied to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the inter-county and main market road systems as follows:"

The second use of the word "improvement" in the last quoted provision is the one about which you inquire. It should first be observed that any definition of the word "improvement" herein undertaken is to be limited strictly to the word as used in the sentence under discussion. In other words, the context must always be considered and the fact that the word has a certain meaning when used in one connection, does not indicate that it is to be given the same meaning when used in another and different connection.

It will be noted that in both the parts of sections referred to by you and quoted above, the expression "construction, improvement, maintenance and repair" is used. This is not a new expression in the law of the state applicable to the activities of the state highway department. The expression was used repeatedly in the act passed in 1911, reorganizing the highway department and found in 102 O. L., 333, and in the amendatory act found in 103 O. L., 449, and is also found in many sections of the Cass highway law. While somewhat at a loss to understand the necessity for drawing any fine distinctions between the words "construction," "improvement," "maintenance" and "repair" as found in the two parts of sections referred to by you, and quoted above, it is my opinion that in a general way at least the legislature has in the two sections in question used the words "construction" and "improvement" as synonymous terms and as indicating the building of new roads; and that likewise the words "maintenance" and "repair" are used as synonymous terms and as indicating operations designed to keep up to their present standard roads that have already been built. Answering your question specifically, the word "improvement" as used in the two parts of sections to which you refer is to be understood as in a general way synonomous with the word "construction;" those two terms being used to designate one class of operations as distinguished from another class designated by the terms "maintenance" and "repair."

While as above observed, the words "construction" and "improvement" are in a general way used synonymously in the language referred to by you, and while the same may also be said of the words "maintenance" and "repair," yet there are certain slight distinctions which under some circumstances it might be proper and even important to observe between the meaning of the words "construction" and "improvement" and between the meaning of the words "maintenance" and "repair." The word "construction" as here used expresses more exactly the idea or notion of the building of a road in a location where no improved road previously existed, while the word "improvement" as here used may be said to imply the reconstruction of a road formerly improved, which reconstruction is so extensive as not to be fairly denominated a repair. The shade of distinction between the words "maintenance" and "repair" may be best indicated by observing that while many operations may be properly classified either under the head of maintenance or under the head of repair, yet there are some operations of which this is not true. The application of oil or other dust preventatives furnishes an excellent illustration, for while such application properly falls under the head of maintenance, yet it could not be said to constitute a repair.

Your second inquiry is as to what is to be understood as the definition of the word "improvement" or "improvements" in the sense in which it is used in the third sentence of section 177, in section 229, section 245, section 247, in the last paragraph of section 210, and in the first line of section 214 of the Cass highway code. The third sentence of section 177 of the act, being section 1184, G. C., reads as follows:

> "He (the state highway commissioner) shall cause plans, specifications and estimates to be prepared for the construction, maintenance or repair of bridges and culverts when so requested by the authorities having charge thereof, and he shall cause to be made surveys, plats, profiles, specifications and estimates for improvements, whether upon state, county or township roads."

An examination of the sentence under consideration discloses the fact that the expression "he (the state highway commissioner) shall cause to be made surveys, plats, profiles, specifications and estimates for improvements, whether upon state, county or township roads" must be read in connection with the expression "when so requested by the authorities having charge thereof" found in the first part of the sentence. In other words, the state highway commissioner must, when requested by the local authorities having charge of a road or having the right to improve the same, cause to be made surveys, plats, profiles, specifications and estimates for any improvement of the road in question projected by the local authorities. This sentence furnishes an excellent illustration of the fact that the meaning of the word "improvement" depends upon the connection in which the word is used. As used in the sentence under consideration, it is manifest that the word "improvement" is to be taken as meaning any sort of road work requiring the making of surveys, plats, profiles, specifications and estimates, and the word therefore may include not only the building of a new road, but also the making of a repair if the repair be of such a character as to require the making of surveys, plats, profiles, specifications and estimates.

> "The state highway commissioner may extend a proposed road improvement into or through a village when the consent of the council of said village has been first obtained, and such consent shall be evidenced by the proper legislation of the council of said village duly entered upon its records and said council may assume and pay such proportion of the cost and expense of that part of the proposed improvement within said village as may be agreed upon between said state highway commissioner and said council. The state highway commissioner may also enter into an agreement with the council of said village to improve any part of the road within said village to a greater width than is contemplated by the proceedings for said improvement, and the state highway commissioner and the council of said village shall be governed as to all matters in connection with said improvement within said village by the statutes relating to road improvements through municipalities by boards of county commissioners."

Any doubt as to the proposition that the word "improvement," as used in the section quoted above, is to be given a broad meaning and is to be taken as including not only the building of new roadways, but also the repair of existing roadways is removed by the provisions of section 244 of the act, section 7467, G. C., to the effect that the state, county or township, or any two or more of them, may by agreement expend any funds available for road construction, improvement or repair upon roads inside of a village. This provision clearly indicates that the state may, by agreement with a village, engage in road repair as well as road construction within the limits of a village. The word "improvement" as found in section 229 of the Cass highway law, section 1231-3, G. C., must, therefore, be held to include both the construction of new roadways and the repair of existing roadways.

Sections 245 and 247 of the act, being sections 7468 and 7470, G. C., read as follows:

> "Section 245. The state highway commissioner, county commissioners or township trustees or other proper officials may, as a part of the plans or specifications for a proposed improvement, provide for the planting of trees or shrubbery along or upon the public highway embraced within the proposed improvement. The state highway commissioner, county commissioners or township trustees or other proper official may provide for the planting of trees or shrubbery along any public highway."
> "Section 247. The state highway commissioner, county commissioners or township trustees, may, in connection with any improvement, appropriate any drainage rights outside of the line of said highway or any easement, right or interest whatever in any property desired for any proposed improvement, and in case such official or either of them desire to appropriate such drainage right, easement, right or interest in any property in connection with any existing highway, the same may be done in the manner hereinbefore specified for the condemnation of road materials. Any land or property rights, required for the construction of a new bridge or for any additions to, or repairs to any existing bridge, may be acquired in like manner."

Having regard to the objects sought to be accomplished by the two sections quoted above, it is my opinion that the word "improvement" where it occurs in such sections, is to be given a broad and comprehensive meaning and that it includes all operations having for their object the construction, reconstruction, maintenance or repair of highways. No opinion is herein expressed, however, as to the validity of the provisions of section 245 of the act, in so far as they seek to authorize the planting of trees on highways where the public has only an easement for the purposes of travel and the fee is in the owners of the abutting land.

The last paragraph of section 210 of the act, being section 1217, G. C., reads as follows:

> "Where the application for said improvement is made by the township trustees, the state may assume all or any part of the county's proportion of the cost of said improvement. In no case shall the property owners abutting upon said improvement be relieved by the state, county or township, from the payment of ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, provided the total amount assessed against any abutting property does not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation."

The above provision is a part of chapter VIII of the Cass highway code, relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department, section 184 of the act, being section 1191, G. C., and being found in said chapter, provides that the commissioners of any county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from any appropriation by the state from any fund available for this construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways. Section 185 of the act, section 1192, G. C., provides that in case the county commissioners do not file any application for state aid before January first of any year in which the funds will be available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of some one or more of the inter-county highways or main market roads, then the board of township trustees of any township within the county may file such application. It thus appears that counties and townships may apply for state aid not only in the construction and improvement of highways, but in their maintenance and repair as well.

The first sentence of the paragraph about which you inquire relates by its terms to road work for the accomplishment of which township trustees apply for state aid. The language used in the second sentence of the paragraph relative to the state, county or township relieving property owners from assessment, indicates that the sentence in question is intended to apply to any improvement for the accomplishment of which either county commissioners or township trustees apply for state aid. Having in mind the fact that both county commissioners and township trustees may apply for state aid not only in construction and improvement work, but also in maintenance and repair work, I therefore conclude that the word "improvement" as it occurs in the first sentence of the paragraph referred to by you, means either the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a highway as petitioned for by township trustees under this and the preceding sections, and the word "improvement" as it occurs in the secomd sentence of the paragraph referred to by you means either the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a highway as petitioned for by either county commissioners or township trustees under this and the preceding sections.

The word "improvement" as found in the first line of section 214 of the act, section 1221, G. C., is a part of the expression "state highway improvement fund." It is difficult to define the word "improvement" as here used, apart from the expression in which it is used, and it is sufficient to observe that the expression "state highway improvement fund" is the expression used by the legislature to describe the fund produced by the levy provided by section 223 of the act, section 1230, G. C.

I do not understand that you are inquiring as to the proper disposition to be made of the state highway improvement fund and will therefore not touch upon that matter in this opinion.

Your third question is as to whether the word "improvement" or "improvements" when used alone, includes any or all of the terms "construction," "reconstruction," "maintenance," "repair," "planting of trees" and "renewing of bridges." Enough has been said in answer to your first and second questions to indicate that your third question cannot be answered in general terms. The scope of the word "improvement" or "improvements" occurring in the Cass highway code cannot be indicated in general terms applicable under all conditions, and the meaning of the word as used in any particular section of the law must be determined from an examination of the context.

In your fourth question, you refer to the word "road" as used in section 208 of the act and to the word "roads" as used in section 226 of this act in the term "inter-county roads," and inquire whether these words "road" and "roads" are to be given any different meaning from the terms "highway" and "highways" generally used throughout the act.

> "Where property is separated from a road improvement by a canal, street railway, steam railway or in any other similar manner, such property shall be regarded for the purposes of assessment under the provisions of this chapter as property bounding and abutting upon said improvement, and both such strip of land owned or occupied by such street railway or steam railway and the land lying back thereof shall be assessed on account of said improvement as provided herein."

The pertinent sentence of section 226 of the act, section 1231, G. C., reads as follows:

> "When contracts are let for the construction of main market roads, the provisions of this chapter relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county roads shall apply in all respects to letting of contracts for such main market roads."

I am unable to say that section 208 of the act has any different meaning by reason of the use of the word "road" before the word "improvement" than it would have if the word "highway" were substituted for the word "road."

So far as the use of the word "roads" in the expression "inter-county roads" in that part of section 226 of the act quoted above is concerned, it is manifest that the legislature intended to indicate inter-county highways, and it is therefore my opinion that in construing both sections, the word "road" or "roads" is to be given the same meaning as the word "highway" or "highways." In other words, the expression "road improvement" in section 208 may be read "highway improvement" and the expression "inter-county roads" in section 226 of the act may be read "inter-county highways."

Your fifth inquiry is as to whether the provisions relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county highways apply in all respects to the letting of contracts for the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of main market roads. Section 226 contains the following provision:

> "When contracts are let for the construction of main market roads, the provisions of this chapter relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county roads shall apply in all respects to letting of contracts for such main market roads."

Having expressed the opinion, in answer to your fourth question, that the word "roads" as found in the expression "inter-county roads" in the sentence above quoted, is to be read "highways" it follows that the provisions relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county highways apply in all respects to the letting of contracts for the construction of main market roads. It is further my opinion that the word "construction," as found in the provision above quoted, is not to be given any narrow or technical meaning, but is to be taken as including any operation in connection with a main market road, which operation the state highway commissioner may undertake to carry out by contract. If, therefore, the state highway commissioner undertakes to carry out by contract any operation looking toward the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a main market road, he is to be governed in the letting of such contract by the provisions of law relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county highways.

Your sixth question is as to whether the term "inter-county highways" found in the third sub-division of section 214 of the act, section 1221, G. C., is meant to include the main market roads of the state. The third sub-division of the section in question reads as follows:

> "The funds derived from the registration of automobiles shall be equally divided and one-half shall be applied, and used, as provided in this section, in the maintenance and repair of the inter-county highways and one-half in the maintenance and repair of the main market roads of the state. From the part of the funds appropriated for use on the main market roads the state commissioner is empowered to establish a system of maintenance to be organized in such manner as the state highway commissioner may provide."

Your question evidently arises out of the situation that many of the main market roads of the state are also inter-county highways, having been designated as inter-county highways before the passage of the main market road law. If it were to be held that the term "inter-county highways," as found in the provision quoted above, included main market roads that were also inter-county highways, the result of such a holding would be to enable the state highway commissioner to spend all of the funds derived from the registration of automobiles in the maintenance and repair of main market roads. It is manifest from an examination of the provisions quoted above, that such was not the intention of the legislature and indeed that the legislature intended to guard against such a consequence and to insure by the enactment of the provision in question that only one-half of the so-called maintenance and repair fund should be spent in the maintenance and repair of main market roads, and that the other half should be spent in the maintenance and repair of inter-county highways not designated as main market roads. It is therefore my opinion that the term "inter-county highways," as found in the provision above quoted, does not include main market roads even where such main market roads are also inter-county highways, and that it is the duty of the state highway commissioner, in disbursing the funds derived from the registration of automobiles, to expend one-half of such funds in the maintenance and repair of inter-county highways not designated as main market roads and the other half in the maintenance and repair of main market roads without reference to whether or not such main market roads are also inter-county highways.

Your seventh question is as to whether the state is required to pay the full cost and expense of the bridge and culvert work done under the provisions of the fourth sentence of section 184 of the act, section 1191, G. C. The sentence to which you refer reads as follows:

> "If the county commissioners or township trustees do not make application for the apportionment to such county on or before the first day of May, then the state highway commissioner shall enter upon and construct, improve, maintain, or repair any of the inter-county highways or parts thereof in said county, either by a contract, force account or in such manner as the state highway commissioner may deem for the best interests of the public, paying the full cost and expense thereof, except that portion to be assessed against abutting property owners, from the apportionment of the appropriation due said county and unused or unapplied for by said county or any board of trustees thereof, as hereinafter provided."

While it is true that section 219 of the act, being section 1226, G. C., provides that the word "highway" as used in the chapter relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department includes an existing causeway or bridge or a new causeway or bridge, or a drain or watercourse, which forms a part of a road authorized by law, and while it is provided in section 184 of the act, section 1191, G. C., that when a part of the inter-county highway system or main market road system of the state is improved by the state, by contract or force account, without the co-operation of a county or some township thereof, ten per cent. of the cost of said construction or improvement shall be assessed against the land abutting thereon, according to the benefits, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation, yet reference must be had to the provision relating to assessment against the owners of abutting property in those cases in which a county or township co-operates in the making of the improvement.

In those cases where there is co-operation by a county or township, it is provided by section 207 of the act, section 1214, G. C., that ten per cent. of the cost and expense of an improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation. No good reason can be suggested why, where the state highway department makes the improvement without co-operation, a different rule of assessment should prevail from that which prevails where there is co-operation by a county or township. On the other hand, reason would seem to require that the same rule of assessment should prevail in both cases and it is my opinion that the legislature has not indicated an intent to apply a different rule in the two cases and that where work is done by the state highway department without the co-operation of a county or some township thereof, and such work includes any expenditure for bridge and culvert construction, the state is required to pay the full cost and expense of such bridge and culvert work.

Your eighth question reads as follows:

> "When an improvement is sought by the township trustees, under the provisions of section 185, and work that does not sell is re-estimated, is the amended estimate referred to the county commissioners, as provided by section 200? Or does the last clause of section 185 imply that such amended estimate shall be referred to the township trustees for their approval?"

Section 185 of the act, being section 1192, G. C., reads as follows:

> "In case the county commissioners do not file any application for state aid before January first of any year in which the funds will be available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of some one or more of the inter-county highways or main market roads, then the board of township trustees of any township within the county may file such application, and the state highway commissioner may co-operate with such trustees in the construction or improvement of such highway in the manner hereinafter provided in cases where the county commissioners make such application."

Section 200 of the act, being section 1207, G. C., relates to the letting of contracts by the state highway commissioner, and provides, among other things, that:

> "If no acceptable bid is made within the estimate, the state highway commissioner may either re-advertise the work or amend the estimate, and certify the same to the county commissioners, and upon their adoption of the amended estimate, again proceed to advertise for bids, and award the contract as provided in the preceding section."

This provision of section 200 of the act, requiring the state highway commissioner, in case he amends an estimate, to certify the same to the county commissioners for their approval, is manifestly intended to apply to those cases in which the state highway commissioner and the county commissioners are co-operating in the making of the improvement and has no application in so far as it requires the approval of the county commissioners to the amended estimate in those cases in which township trustees, rather than county commissioners, are co-operating in the making of the improvement. As indicated in your question, the last clause of section 185 of the act, which provides in effect that where the state highway commissioner and township trustees co-operate in the making of an imptovement, such co-operation shall be had in the manner provided in cases where the county commissioners apply for the improvement, is sufficient to indicate the proper procedure in the case presented by you. Where township trustees, rather than county commissioners, are co-operating with the state highway commissioner and no acceptable bid is made within the estimate, and the state highway commissioner elects to amend the estimate it is then his duty to certify the amended estimate to the township trustees for their approval.

Your ninth inquiry is as to whether the state or the county pays for the services provided for in section 180 of the act, being section 1187, G. C. The section in question reads as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer, may call upon the county highway superintendent, at any time to furnish a map or maps of the county showing distinctly the location of any rivers, railroads, streams, township lines, cities, villages, public highways and deposits of road material, together with any other information that may be required by said commissioner or engineer. Such information shall be furnished in such form as the state highway commissioner may require. A copy of such maps, plats or other information shall be kept on file in the office of the county highway superintendent."

The services required by this section are to be distinguished from those required by section 212 of the act, being section 1219, G. C. The services required by section 212 of the act consist of making surveys and plans for proposed improvements and supervising and inspecting improvements under process of construction. It is provided by section 212 that the expense of surveys and plans shall be equally divided between the state and county and that the expense of supervision and inspection shall be apportioned between the state and county on the same basis as the cost of construction. No provision is found in section 180 providing for a division or apportionment of the cost and expense of furnishing a map or maps, and such information as may be required by the state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer. I therefore conclude that the services required by section 180 of the act are to be regarded as a part of the regular duties of the county highway superintendent and that in so far as he may require assistants or may be compelled to incur traveling or other expenses, the compensation of such assistants and the expenses thus incurred are to be met by the county. The assistants which he would be entitled to use in such work, if required, would be those provided by section 138 of the act, section 7181, G. C.

The tenth question propounded by you relates to certain apparently conflicting provisions of sections 242 and 217 of the act. Section 242 of the act, being section 7465, G. C., reads as follows:

> "In all cases where a county or township has constructed or improved any main market or inter-county road, the state highway commissioner, upon request, shall, within sixty days indicate what changes, or improvements, will be required in said road in order to bring the same up to the approved standard of construction of such road, or in any case where such road is about to be constructed, reconstructed, or improved, the state highway commissioner shall, upon application, indicate within sixty days what changes will be required in the plans and specifications therefor, to bring said road up to the standard required by the state for the construction of inter-county highways and main market roads. Whenever the changes so specified by the state highway commissioner have been made, or when such roads have been constructed according to the plans and specifications so approved by the state highway commissioner, such roads shall at once become state roads."

Section 217 of the act, being section 1224, G. C., contains the following provision, which provision is found at the end of the section:

> "Inter-county highways or main market roads on which no state aid money has been expended, if improved with construction equal to that specified by the state highway commissioner shall be taken over by the state, and shall thenceforth be maintained as prescribed herein for inter-county highways and main market roads. Upon application by the county commissioners or township trustees the chief highway engineer shall, within sixty days, specify what changes are required in any portion of an existing inter-county highway or main market road to bring it up to the standard required by the state, and on application, the chief highway engineer shall furnish specifications for the construction of such road up to the standard required by the state."

The provisions of the two sections, as quoted above, are in conflict in that section 217 requires the chief highway engineer, under certain conditions, to specify what changes are required in an inter-county highway or main market road to bring it up to the standard required by the state, while under section 242 the same action is required of the state highway commissioner. The question therefore arises, as indicated by you, whether the action referred to above is to be taken by the chief highway engineer or the state highway commissioner. It is to be noted in this connection that the state highway commissioner is superior in authority to the chief highway engineer and has general supervision of the activities of the state highway department. The chief highway engineer is an appointee of the state highway commissioner and acts under the supervision and direction of the latter. In view of the above facts, it is my opinion that in so far as the two sections are in conflict, section 242 of the act, section 7464, G. C., is to govern, and that the action in question is to be taken by the state highway commissioner.

Your eleventh question is as to whether the provision of the first sentence of section 177 of the act gives the state highway commissioner power and authority in all cases to regulate and supervise the planting of trees or shrubbery along and upon inter-county highways and as to whether section 141 of the act gives the state highway commissioner authority to prescribe and enforce rules and regulations covering the provisions of section 245 of the act.

Section 245 of the act, being sections 7468, G. C., reads as follows:

"The state highway commissioner, county commissioners or township trustees or other proper officials, may, as a part of the plans and specifications for a proposed improvement, provide for the planting of trees or shrubbery along or upon the public highway embraced within the proposed improvement. The state highway commissioner, county commissioners or township trustees or other proper official may provide for the planting of trees or shrubbery along any public highway."

The first sentence of section 177 of the act, being section 1184, G. C., reads as follows:

"The state highway commissioner shall have general supervision of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all inter-county highways and main market roads, and the bridges and culverts thereon."

Section 141 of the act, being section 7184, G. C., reads as follows:

"The county highway superintendent shall have general charge, subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department, of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, whether known as township, county or state highways, and such county highway superintendent shall see that the same are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law, and shall have general supervision of the work of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing the highways, bridges and culverts in his county, subject, however, to the provisions hereinafter made for the designation, by the state highway commissioner, of an engineer, other than the county surveyor, to have charge of state work in such county."

It is obvious from a reading of the provisions of the act quoted above, that it was the intention of the legislature to confer authority for including the planting of trees or shrubbery in the plans for proposed road improvements and authority to provide for the planting of trees or shrubbery along the public highways upon the state highway department as to main market roads and inter-county highways, upon the county commissioners as to other highways which might be improved by them and upon the township trustees as to other highways which might be improved by them. The sentence of section 177 of the act, quoted above, gives the state highway commissioner general supervision of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all inter-county highways and main market roads, and the provision of section 141 of the act quoted above, makes the county highway superintendent subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all the highways within his county, subject to certain exceptions which it is not necessary to note in this connection.

It is true that under section 196 of the act, being section 1203, G. C., county commissioners or township trustees may construct, improve, maintain or repair inter-county highways, but in such cases the plans and specifications for the proposed improvement must first be submitted to the chief highway engineer and approved by him. From a consideration of the above provisions, it follows that it was the intention of the legislature to give the state highway commissioner authority to regulate and supervise the planting of trees or shrubbery along and upon inter-county highways and to prescribe and enforce rules and regulations covering the planting of such trees and shrubbery in all cases except those in which counties or townships construct, improve, maintain or repair inter-county highways, in which cases the plans for such work, including any planting of trees or shrubbery that may be projected are subject to the approval of the chief highway engineer. In other words, it was the intention of the legislature to make the planting of trees or shrubbery along and upon inter-county highways as a part of the improvement of the same, subject under all conditions and circumstances to the approval either of the state highway commissioner or the chief highway engineer.

I have already referred in this opinion to the fact that, in so far as most of the highways of this state are concerned, the fee is in the owners of the abutting land and the public has only an easement for the purposes of travel. In view of this fact I would not advise any effort to include the planting of trees or shrubbery in the plans and specifications for proposed improvements unless the consent of the abutting land owners be first obtained. In so far as trees or shrubbery be planted along inter-county highways, such planting will, however, be under the supervision and control of the state highway department.

Your twelfth inquiry is as to whether the words "change" and "changes," used in section 182 of the act, include minor changes of route, and as to whether they include changes of location, and you also inquire what must be the extent of the deviation of the proposed improvement from the original traveled road in order that such deviation may come within the meaning of the word "change" and "changes" as used in section 182 of the act.

> "The inter-county highways and main market roads heretofore established by law, shall continue to be and remain a part of the system of inter-county highways and main market roads of the state unless changed in the manner hereinafter provided. In addition to the inter-county highways and main market roads heretofore established under authority of law, and as shown by the records in the office of the state highway department, and by the reports filed with the governor relating thereto, the state highway commissioner shall have authority to designate additional inter-county or main market roads or change existing inter-county roads after hearing and notice as hereinafter provided. Before establishing any additional main market or inter-county roads or making any changes in existing inter-county or main market roads, the commissioner shall give notice by publication in two newspapers of general circulation in each of the counties in which said inter-county or main market road or some part thereof is located, by publication, at least once each week, for three successive weeks. Such notice shall state the time and place of such hearing, which shall be held in the county or one of the counties in which said road or some part thereof is situated, and shall further state the route of the proposed inter-county or main market road or the change proposed to be made in an existing inter-county or main market road. Any changes made in existing inter-county or main market roads or any additional inter-county or main market roads established by the commissioner shall be certified to the counties interested therein, and the report of the commissioner making such change or establishing such road shall be placed in file in the office of the department."

This section must be read in connection with section 189 of the act, section 1196, G. C., which reads as follows:

"If the state highway commissioner approves the application or part thereof, he shall, if necessary, cause a map of the highway in outline and profile to be made and indicate thereon any change of existing lines if he deems it of advantage to make such change. He shall cause to be made plans, specifications, profiles, and estimates for said improvement."

It is my opinion that the "change of existing lines" authorized by section 189 of the act, is not the "change in existing inter-county or main market road" referred to in section 182 of the act, but it is impossible, nevertheless, to answer your question by laying down any general rule by which it would be possible to determine in all cases whether a proposed change constituted a "change of existing lines" within the meaning of section 189 or a "change in existing inter-county or main market roads" within the meaning of section 182. Such a question can be answered only by reference to the particular facts of each case, and it is only possible to observe at the present time that if the change is a slight one and not such as to affect the termini or general course and direction of a road, then it is a "change of existing lines" within the meaning of section 189 of the act. If the change is substantial, however, or such as to affect the termini or general course and direction of the highway, then the change is to be regarded as a "change in existing inter-county or main market roads" within the meaning of section 182 of the act.

"Is it necessary for a road or street within the limits of an incorporated village (being a continuation of an inter-county highway) to be officially designated as an extension of, or a part of, such inter-county highway, before state aid can be granted on the same? If so, shall such designation be made in accordance with the provisions of section 182? If such official designation is not necessary, is the term 'state highway,' as defined in section 219, meant to include state aid improvements hereafter made or taken over within incorporated villages? If such official designation is not necessary, is the term 'state roads' as defined in section 241, paragraph (a), meant to include state aid improvements hereafter made or taken over within incorporated villages?"

It is my opinion that the first branch of this question must be answered in the negative, and that it is not necessary for a road or a street within the limits of an incorporated village, being a continuation of an inter-county highway or main market road, to be officially designated as an extension of or a part of such inter-county highway or main market road before state aid can be granted on the same.

Prior to the passage of the Cass highway law, there were no inter-county highways or main market roads within the territorial limits of municipal corporations, and I find nothing in the act to warrant the inference that the legislature, by the passage of the Cass highway law, has sought to change the policy of the state in this direction. While it is true that the activities of the state highway department, in the construction and maintenance of roads, are in a general way limited to inter-county highways and main market roads, yet it is provided by section 229 of the act, being section 1231-3, G. C., that the state highway commissioner may extend a proposed road improvement into or through a village when the consent of the council of said village has been first obtained. I find no provision in the act to warrant the view that the street or streets within the village, over which such proposed improvement is to extend, must be first designated as inter-county highways or main market roads. On the other hand, section 229 of the act seems to create an exception to the general rule that the state highway commissioner may improve only inter-county highways and main market roads.

I therefore conclude, as above stated, that no designation of the street or streets within the village and over which the proposed improvement is to extend as inter-county highways or main market roads is necessary, either under section 182 of the act or otherwise. It is further my opinion that the term "state highway" as defined in section 219 of the act, does not include state aid improvements hereafter made or taken over within incorporated villages. Under section 241 of the act, section 7464, G. C., state roads are to be maintained by the state highway department. As was pointed out by this department in an opinion rendered September 21, 1915, to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, No. 847, no authority is given either the state, county or township to do anything on the roads of a village without the consent or agreement of the village council. The general control of roads within municipalities is still left with the municipalities.

Section 3714, G. C., which was left unrepealed, provides:

> "Municipal corporations shall have special power to regulate the use of the streets, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council shall have the care, supervision and control of public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds, bridges, aqueducts, and viaducts, within the corporation, and shall cause them to be kept open, in repair, and free from nuisance."

If a state aid improvement made within an incorporated village be held to be a state highway, then the state would be charged with its maintenance and repair and the state has no authority to repair such an improvement except by agreement with the village.

From the foregoing it follows that a state aid improvement made within an incorporated village is not to be regarded as a state highway within the meaning of section 219 of the act, or a state road within the meaning of paragraph (a) of section 241 of the act, and the duty of maintaining and repairing such an improvement rests upon the village, subject to the provision of section 244 of the act, permitting the state to expend funds appropriated for road repair upon roads inside a village, provided an agreement to that effect be made between the state and the village.

As I understand your fourteenth question, it is as to whether the improvement of a road inside of an incorporated village, made under the provisions of section 229 and 244 of the act, by the state highway department, may include a causeway or bridge or a drain, culvert or watercourse which forms a part of such road. While the terms "road" and "highway" are not in all cases used synonymously in the act now under consideration, yet in many instances an interchangeable use is made of the two words. It is provided by section 219 of the act, being section 1226, G. C., that the word "highway," as used in the chapter of which section 229 of the act is a part, includes an existing causeway or bridge, or a new causeway or bridge, or a drain or watercourse which forms a part of a road authorized by law. I therefore conclude that an improvement of a road inside of an incorporated village, made by the state highway department by virtue of the provisions above referred to, may or may not include a causeway or bridge, or a drain, culvert or watercourse, as may be agreed between the state highway commissioner and the council of the village in question.

Your fifteenth inquiry is as to whether village roads or streets come within the meaning of the provisions of the last two sentences of section 217 of the act, being section 1224, G. C. The part of the section to which you refer reads as follows:

> "Inter-county highways or main market roads on which no state aid money has been expended, if improved with construction equal to that specified by the state highway commissioner, shall be taken over by the state, and shall thenceforth be maintained as prescribed herein for inter-county highways and main market roads. Upon application by the county commissioners or township trustees the chief highway engineer shall, within sixty days, specify what changes are required in any portion of an existing inter-county highway or main market road to bring it up to the standard required by the state, and on application, the chief highway engineer shall furnish specifications for the construction of such road up to the standard required by the state."

For reasons sufficiently indicated in my answer to your thirteenth question, it is my opinion that this question must be answered in the negative, and that village roads or streets do not come within the meaning of the provisions above quoted. The duty of keeping the roads and streets of a village in repair, as before pointed out, is by section 3714 G. C., cast upon the council of the village, and in the absence of an agreement between the council and the state highway commissioner, the latter would have no authority to make any repairs whatever upon the roads or streets of a village.

Your sixteenth question involves a consideration of a number of facts not set forth in your communication to me, and an opinion covering the same will be prepared as soon as I am in possession of such facts.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT AT WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—PROPOSED CONTRACTS FOR WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM —PROPOSAL BLANKS SHOULD BE FURNISHED TO BIDDERS FREE OF CHARGE.

Proposed contracts for water supply system at combined normal and industrial department at Wilberforce University passed on.

If proposal blanks are prepared for use of bidders, they should be furnished to those desiring to bid on state work free of charge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 20, 1915.

Board of Trustees of the Combined Normal and Industrial Department at Wilberforce University, Xenia, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—A few days ago you submitted for my approval certain contracts which were awarded in pursuance of the action of your board on October 1st on advertisements for water supply system for your normal and industrial department.

I have examined the advertisements and find that they have been made for the proper time, in the proper newspapers, and that the said advertisements called for the bids to be received on a proper day.

An examination of the advertisements for sealed proposals discloses that the bids were to be received on the contemplated improvements to the water supply system in five several items, as follows:

"Item 1. 80,000 gallon steel tank and tower.
"Item 2. 8-inch well complete, 80 feet deep.
"Item 3. Two steam pumps.
"Item 4. One hot water storage heater.
"Item 5. Water softening plant; plumbing, steam fitting, water mains, miscellaneous."

The architect's estimates on the above, per item, and the bids are as follows:

"Item 1—Architect's estimate, $4,300.00.

Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Co., Pittsburgh, Pa	$3,436 00
Memphis Steel Construction Co., Pittsburgh, Pa	3,544 00
Chicago Bridge & Iron Works, Chicago, Ill	3,850 00
Shartle Machine Works, Columbus, Ohio	3,997 60

"Item 2—Architect's estimate, $322.50.

Chas. M. Kelso Co., Dayton, Ohio	$340 00
S. H. Barnes, Dayton, Ohio	365 00

"Item 3—Architect's estimate, $550.00.

Shartle Machine Works, Columbus, Ohio	$584 00
Columbus Steam Pump Works Co., Columbus, Ohio	412 50
Weinman Pump Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio	529 00
Blake-Knowles Co., Cincinnati, Ohio	740 00
American Steam Pump Co., Battle Creek, Mich	766 00
Epping-Carpenter Pump Co., Pittsburgh, Pa	1,040 00

"Item 4—Architect's estimate, $300.00.

Shartle Machine Works, Columbus, Ohio	$287 60
Chas. M. Kelso Co., Dayton, Ohio	475 00
The Sims Co., Erie, Pa	300 00
Griscom-Russell Co., New York City	316 00
Whitlock Coil Pipe Co., Hartford, Conn	325 00

"Item 5—Architect's estimate, $3,769.10.

Shartle Machine Works, Columbus, Ohio ..... $4,125 00"

It will be seen by comparison of the bids of the lowest bidders with the architect's estimates on the above items that as to item 2 and item 5 the same are in excess of the architect's estimate, and, therefore, under the provisions of section 2323 of the General Code, to the effect that no contract shall be made for labor or material at a price in excess of the entire estimate thereof, bids cannot be accepted and contracts awarded for said items.

You submitted a report of your engineer on the above items, which is as follows:

"Board of Trustees, The C. N. & I. Dept. at Wilberforce University.

"ENGINEER'S REPORT

"On bids submitted October 1, 1915, on water supply system.

"Item 1. It is recommended that the bid of the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Co. be accepted, as they are the lowest responsible bidders, subject to the approval of the attorney general.

"Itm 2. It is recommended that the bid of the Kelso Co. be rejected as they are not responsible bidders on this class of work; and that the bid of S. H. Barnes be accepted subject to the approval of the attorney general.

"Item 3. It is recommended that the bid of the Columbus Steam Pump Works Co., the lowest bidder, be rejected as the pumps offered do not comply with the specifications, in that, according to their catalogue there is not provided 'removable bronze lining for water cylinder;' 'hand hold plates for ready access to both suction and discharge valves;' and from the price quoted it is not considered they can furnish pumps 'of a heavy rigid design.' It is therefore recommended that the bid of the next lowest bidder, the Weinman Pump Mfg. Co., be accepted, subject to the approval of the governor, auditor of state, secretary of state, and the attorney general.

"Item 4. It is recommended that the bid of the Shartle Machine Co. be accepted, subject to the approval of the attorney general, as they are the lowest responsible bidders.

"Item 5. It is recommended that the bid of the Shartle Machine Co. be accepted, subject to the approval of the attorney general, as they are the lowest responsible bidders.

"Respectfully submitted,

"RICHARDS ENGINEERING COMPANY,

"Per Arthur Richards.

"Board of trustees accepted bids as recommended above."

There have been no minutes of your board presented to me to show what the action of your board upon the various bids was.

As to item 1, the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the lowest bidder, and a contract has been submitted, showing that the said bid has been accepted.

As to item 3, a contract has been submitted on the bid of the Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, in the amount of $529.00. Upon an examination of the list of bids hereinbefore set out it will be seen that the said Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company is not the lowest bidder, and, therefore, under the provisions of section 2319, G. C., in order to accept the bid of the Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company over the bid of the Columbus Steam Pump Works Company, the lowest bidder, it will be necessary for the board to make application, in writing, to the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state for their written consent to accept said bid in place of the bid of the Columbus Steam Pump Works Company.

As to item 4, a contract has been submitted between the Shartle Machine Company, of Columbus, Ohio, and your board covering both item 4 and item 5. As the bid on item 5 is above the estimate the same cannot be accepted, and a contract covering item 4 alone will have to be submitted, and I shall not pass upon item 4 until a proper contract is submitted.

The contract covering item 1, entered into between the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and your board of trustees shows that the said contract is signed on behalf of the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company by W. H. Jackson and E. W. Crellen. It will be necessary that I have in writing the authorization of the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company for W. H. Jackson and E. W. Crellen not only to sign the contract, but the bond on behalf of said company. The Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company offer as surety the Globe Indemnity Company, of New York City, N. Y. The bond given was entered into in Pennsylvania. However, from a certificate of the superintendent of insurance I learn that such company is duly authorized to transact business in Ohio. The bond does not have the financial statement of the company attached thereto, and such statement should be furnished.

As heretofore stated, before I can pass on the contract between the Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, and your board of trustees, it will be necessary that I have the written consent of the acceptance of said bid by the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state before me. The bond of the Maryland Casualty Company which was submitted by the Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company with its bid does not have a certified copy of power of attorney to agent to sign such bond nor a financial statement of the company attached thereto. Both of these should be furnished.

As I have already stated, the contract relative to item 4 will have to be reformed. I desire further to call your attention to the fact that the bond submitted by the Shartle Machine Company with its bid does not have the financial statement of the company attached thereto. This should be attached to the bond.

There is another thing that I desire to say to your board in passing. It appears from the advertisement as follows:

> "Copies of the plans and specifications may be seen at the offices of the superintendent Wilberforce university, the auditor of state and the consulting engineers and may be obtained from the consulting engineers for five ($5.00) dollars per set."

An examination of the printed pamphlet containing copies of the plans and specifications referred to shows that there was incorporated therein a proposal blank, and I am informed that there were no other proposal blanks printed separate and apart from those printed in the pamphlet. This required, of course, that all the bidders should purchase from the engineers a copy of the pamphlet at a cost of $5.00.

There should always be proper proposal blanks prepared for free distribution to those who wish to bid upon state contracts and also blank contract bonds for free distribution, and no bidder should be required to pay to get the necessary blanks in order to bid upon state contracts. A bidder should be allowed at all reasonable times to see the plans and specifications and be furnished with proposal blanks and blank forms of contract bond in order that he may submit his bid without being required to purchase anything with which so to do.

I have this day delivered to your engineer, the Richards Engineering Company, of Columbus, Ohio, all the papers submitted in order that those not necessary in the matter may be retained and those which call for correction may be corrected. As soon as the corrections are made, the contracts entered into with the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company, the Weinman Pump Manufacturing Company and the Shartle Machine Company as to item 4, together with the bonds, should be submitted for my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—WHO SHOULD APPROVE PAY ROLL OF EMPLOYES BETWEEN TIME OF TAKING EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW AND TIME WHEN COUNTY SURVEYOR IS DESIGNATED TO HAVE CHARGE OF STATE ROADS.

Where a county surveyor was not designated to have charge of state work in his county until October 2, 1915, and the former resident engineer continued in charge in the meantime, the pay rolls of employes for the period between September 6 and October 2 should be approved by such resident engineer or the county surveyor may approve the same if able to satisfy himself by personal investigation as to their correctness.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 20, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 12, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon a question submitted to the state highway department by Mr. John Peake, county surveyor of Franklin county. Mr. Peak's question is as to whether he should approve the pay rolls of employes of the state working under section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., for the period subsequent to the going into effect of the Cass highway law and prior to his designation by the state highway commissioner to have charge of state work. The Cass highway law became effective September 6, 1915, and Mr. Peake was designated under authority of section 139 of that act, section 7182, G. C., to have charge of state work on October 2, 1915.

The above question is somewhat broader than its terms indicate and involves certain collateral matters to which I deem it proper to allude. In opinion No. 845 of this department rendered to you on September 21, 1915, it was held that the county surveyor does not have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state and within his county until designated by the state highway commissioner to so have charge, and that the state highway commisioner may not appoint any engineer other than the county surveyor to have charge of state work in the county of said surveyor except as provided in section 142 of the Cass highway law, section 7185, G. C.

In view of the above it will be seen that immediately upon the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915, it was your duty either to designate the county surveyor to have charge of state work within any given county or to designate some other engineer as provided in section 142 of the act; and until you acted in one of these two ways it could not be said, strictly speaking, that any one was in charge of state work within that particular county under the terms of the Cass highway law. Your failure to act on September 6 was, however, entirely excusable and was due to the confusion necessarily incident to the putting into operation of a new code of highway laws for the state and to the fact that at least a short time was required to master all the changes in the law and reorganize your department to conform to its provisions, and the further fact that owing to the large number of inquiries submitted relative to the new highway code, this department was unable to prepare an opinion advising you of your duties in the premises until September 21. Some slight indulgence must be extended to administrative officials under such circumstances, when the extending of such indulgence does not inflict any loss upon the public, and in view of all the facts, I am of the opinion that no question should be raised in the several counties as to the payment of compensation of resident engineers, so-called, or of employes working under their supervision for the period from September 6 until the time when either the county surveyor or some other engineer was regularly designated under the Cass highway law to have charge of state work.

In the particular instance about which you inquire, the employes referred to by Mr. Peake did not work under his supervision or direction during the period between September 6 and October 2, but were during that period under the supervision and control of the person who had been acting as resident engineer under the old law. Such resident engineer is or should be in possession of all the information necessary in order to intelligently pass upon the pay rolls in question, and I therefore conclude that he is the proper person to approve the same. There would be no objection, however, to Mr. Peake passing upon these pay rolls if he is able to satisfy himself by personal investigation that the services were properly performed by the several employes, and that they are entitled to the amounts called for by the pay rolls in question. It may properly be added that the method of procedure herein pointed out meets with the approval of Mr. E. N. Halbedel, deputy supervisor in the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

WHEN A PROBATE COURT HOLDS AN INQUEST FOR AN APPLICANT TO STATE HOSPITAL, IT SHOULD BE DETERMINED WHETHER OR NOT THE PERSON HAS EVER BEEN ACQUITTED IN A CRIMINAL COURT ON GROUND OF INSANITY—WHEN SUCH CONDITION IS FOUND THE PERSON SHOULD BE COMMITTED TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL—IF ACQUITTAL BE HAD IN UNITED STATES COURT, THAT FACT WOULD NOT DEPRIVE PROBATE COURT OF JURISDICTION.

A person acquitted of a criminal charge on the ground of insanity should be sent to the Lima State Hospital. If acquittal on the ground of insanity be had in a United States court that fact would not deprive a probate court of jurisdiction in an otherwise proper case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 20, 1915.

HON. WILLIAM H. LUEDERS, Probate Judge, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

> "This day the probate court of Hamilton county, Ohio, received a request from the district attorney's office 'southern district of Ohio,' federal court to issue a warrant of lunacy for Orange H. Flower.
> "Accompanying said request is a certificate of the clerk of the United States district court, southern district of Ohio, as to the verdict of the jury, finding the defendant insane.
> "Under section 13612 of the General Code: 'When a person tried upon, and indicted for an offense, and acquitted on the sole ground that he was insane, such fact shall be found by the jury in the verdict, and certified by the clerk to the probate court. Such person shall not be discharged, but forthwith delivered to the probate court, to be proceeded against upon the charge of lunacy, and the verdict shall be prima facie evidence of his insanity.'
> "Orange H. Flower was charged in an indictment filed in the United States district court, southern district of Ohio, western division, on October 6th, 1915, with having violated section 211 of the penal code of the United States, for sending through the United States mail obscene cards and photographs.
> "The finding of the jury on the 12th day of October, 1915, after a trial, was in the words following:
> "'We, the jury, herein do find the defendant not guilty in manner and form as charged in the two counts of said indictment on the ground the defendant was insane.'
> "First question: 'Does section 13612 of the General Code of the state of Ohio apply to persons indicted, tried and acquitted on the sole ground of insanity in the federal court?'
> "The district attorney, through his assistants, holds that it does. I am very much in doubt, therefore my inquiry to you.
> "Second question: 'In case this section does apply to persons indicted and tried in the federal court, can the person under section 1985, sub-section 5, "Persons acquitted because of insanity," be sent by this court to the Lima state hospital?'

"Enclosed please find copy of certificate of clerk of the United States district court.

"An early reply will be greatly appreciated."

With your letter you enclose a certificate of the clerk of the United States district court, southern district of Ohio, western division, as to the verdict of the jury finding the defendant insane in the case of The United States of America v. Orange H. Flower, which certificate is as follows:

"UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO, WESTERN DIVISION.

CERTIFICATE OF CLERK AS TO THE VERDICT OF THE JURY FINDING DEFENDANT INSANE.

"I, B. E. Dilley, clerk of the United States district court in and for the southern district of Ohio, do hereby certify:

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said court this 14th day of October, 1915, in the 140th year of the independence of the United States of America.

"B. E. DILLEY,
"Clerk of U. S. District Court, S. D. O."

For your information your attention is invited to the provisions of section 9319, of the compiled statutes of the United States of 1913, which section is as follows:

"If any person charged with crime, be found in the court before which he is so charged, to be an insane person, such court shall certify him to the secretary of the interior, who may order such person to be confined in the hospital for the insane, and if he be not indigent he or his estate shall be charged with the expense of his support in the hospital."

Section 9319, supra, was modified by an act of June 23, 1874, as amended, by an act of August 7, 1882, which is known as section 9321, of the compiled statutes of the United States, and which is as follows:

"Upon the application of the attorney general, the secretary of the interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transfer to the government hospital for the insane in the district of Columbia all persons who, having been charged with offenses against the United States or in actual custody of its officers, and all persons who have been or shall be convicted of any offense in a court of the United States and are imprisoned in any state prison or penitentiary of any state or territory, and who during the term of that imprisonment has or shall become insane.''

Sections 9319 and 9321, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, supra, contain provisions for the care of insane persons, accused of crime, in the custody of the United States, such persons having been found by court to be insane; and it would appear from a reading of the sections that sufficient authority is contained therein for the transfer of such persons to the hospital for the insane located in the district of Columbia. However, Honorable Wayne B. McVeigh, attorney general of the United States, in an opinion addressed to the secretary of the interior, dated August 22, 1881, to be found on page 211, Vol. XVII, of the opinions of the attorneys general, referring to the provisions of section 9319 of the compiled statutes, says:

''The language of the section is general, inasmuch as it speaks of any person charged with crime being found in the court before which he is so charged to be an insane person, but I have no doubt that the generality of this language is, by the force of the title and the accompanying provisions, limited to courts in this district. Sufficient reasons will suggest themselves to every mind why congress should make such provision for the insane of the army and navy and of this district, as the states are expected to make for the insane persons residing within their borders; but no reason can be suggested why an insane resident of Texas should be brought and maintained here.

''In the case you have submitted it is evidently supposed that the mere fact that an insane resident of Texas has been indicted for an offense in a court of the United States renders him a proper subject for the issue of an order by you for his maintenance in the hospital under your charge. I am unable to concur in that view.''

Section 13612, of the General Code of Ohio, is as follows:

''When a person tried upon an indictment for an offense is acquitted on the sole ground that he was insane, such fact shall be found by the jury in the verdict, and certified by the clerk to the probate court. Such person shall not be discharged, but forthwith delivered to the probate court, to be proceeded against upon the charge of lunacy, and the verdict shall be prima facia evidence of his insanity.'

There is no question in my mind but that the ''court'' in the section just quoted is limited to state courts, hence, in my opinion, it is not to be considered as an anomaly in the determination of the question under consideration. However, upon referring to section 1985, of the General Code provisions will be found as follows:

''The Lima state hospital shall be used for the custody, care and special treatment of insane persons of the following classes: * * *

''5. Persons acquitted because of insanity.

''6. Persons adjudged to be insane who were previously convicted of crime. * * *''

It is admittedly a fact that the primary purpose for the erection of the Lima State Hospital was for the segregation of the criminal insane, there being several reasons which will at once suggest themselves for the segregation of such insane persons; among them may be mentioned the better care of such persons as a particular class of insane, the safety and comfort of insane persons in other hospitals which might be endangered through the indiscriminate placing there of the criminal insane, and the concentration of an effort to make a particular study of that particular class of insanity.

When an inquest is held in the probate court concerning an applicant for admission to a state hospital one of the things to be determined by the probate judge is whether or not the subject of the inquest has ever been acquitted in a criminal court on account of insanity. This, with other features in the history of the case, is to be considered by the probate court in the commitment of the applicant, and under the provisions of section 1985 of the General Code, supra, it is my opinion that when such a condition is found to exist, the subject of the inquest should be committed to the Lima state hospital. The fact that the acquittal on the ground of insanity was in a United States court would not deprive a probate court of jurisdiction.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING — COUNTY COMMISSIONERS — DEPOSITORY OF PUBLIC FUNDS—SECTION 744-12, G. C., NOT INTENDED TO GIVE BANKS LOCATED WITHOUT COUNTY THE RIGHT TO BID FOR FUNDS OF SAID COUNTY THE SAME AS BANKS OF THIS CLASS LOCATED WITHIN SUCH COUNTY—RIGHT OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO RECEIVE BIDS UNDER SECTIONS 2715, G. C., AND 744-12, G. C.—IF BANKS WITHIN COUNTY FAIL TO BID FOR INACTIVE FUNDS, COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY RECEIVE BIDS FROM BANKS WITHOUT SAID COUNTY.

A board of county commissioners, in its advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds, should invite proposals under both section 2715, G. C., and 744-12, G. C., and the advertisement should be so worded as to invite bids from the classes of banking concerns mentioned in both of said sections, either by appropriate language or by express reference to said sections.

Under the provisions of said section 2715, G. C., as modified by the provisions of section 744-12, G. C., said county commissioners may receive bids for inactive funds from one or more banking institutions located within the county and belonging to either of the classes mentioned in said statutes, and may receive bids for active funds from one or more of said banking institutions located in the county seat of said county, if such there be. If in said county no such banking institution exists, or if the bank or banks or banking institutions belonging to either of the above mentioned classes and located within the county fail to bid for inactive funds in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing such proposals, then and in that event only would the commissioners of said county be authorized to receive bids from banking concerns belonging to either of said classes and located without said county; provided, however, that when the aggregate amount placed with the banking concerns qualifying for the same within the county does not equal the amount that may be placed into inactive depositaries, the county commissioners may, under said section 2715-1, G. C., and in the manner provided by the statutes governing the designation of depositaries, designate one or more banking concerns belonging to either of the above mentioned classes and located without the county, for the deposit of such excess funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 20, 1915.

HON. GEO. C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of October 15, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Our board of county commissioners are very anxious to dispose of at once the question of awarding to the proper bank or banks the funds of of Lake county under the provisions of the depositary laws of the state of Ohio.
> "The advertisement for proposals invites 'all banks legally qualified to bid' to submit proposals.
> "The first question, therefore, is whether such an advertisement is sufficient, or should the country commissioners invite proposals in accordance with the provisions of sections 2715 and 744-12 of the General Code of Ohio? It is our opinion, since this advertisement does not refer to either section to the exclusion of the other, that it is a sufficient notice.

"In the second place, we have this additional question, which is the one causing all the difficulty.

"Referring to your opinion No. 627, under date of July 20, 1915, rendered at the request of and to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, does section 744-12 of the General Code of Ohio permit every kind of bank mentioned in section 2715 to bid for and to be awarded funds irrespective of whether they are located within or without the county?

"In other words, is it your opinion that all banks mentioned in 2715 are entitled to submit proposals and to receive the funds of the county in accordance with the provisions of law, even though there be banks within the county incorporated under the laws of this state or organized under the laws of the United States?

"To make the proposition still more clear, if possible, if a bank incorporated under the laws of this state or organized under the laws of the United States, but situated without the county, bids a higher rate for either inactive or active funds than does such a bank situated within the county, is it the duty of the county commissioners to award these funds, either inactive or active, to such a bank without the county, or may they award such funds to such bank or banks without the county, only in the event that no bank situated within the county submits proposals?"

Section 2715, G. C., relates to the designation of active and inactive depositaries for the money of the county by the county commissioners and provides as follows:

"The commissioners in each county shall designate in the manner hereinafter provided a bank or banks or trust companies, situated in the county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as inactive depositaries, and one or more of such banks or trust companies located in the county seat as active depositaries of the money of the county. In a county where such bank or trust company does not exist or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, the commissioners shall designate a private bank or banks, located in the county as such inactive depositaries, and if in such county no such private bank exists or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, then the commissioners shall designate any other bank or banks incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as such inactive depositaries. If there be no such bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of the state, or organized under the laws of the United States, located at the county seat, then the commissioners shall designate a private bank, if there be one located therein, as such active depositary. No bank or trust company shall receive a larger deposit than one million dollars."

Section 744-12, G. C., is section 13 of the act of the general assembly as found in 103 O. L., 379-385, and entitled, "An act to provide for the examination, regulation, supervision and dissolution of certain bank concerns." This section is amended in 106 O. L., 505, and as now in force, provides:

"That whenever any of the funds of the state, or any of the political subdivisions of the state, shall be deposited under any of the depositary laws of the state, every corporation, person, partnership and association coming within the purview of this act shall be permitted to bid upon and be designated as depositaries of such funds, upon furnishing such surety or sureties therefor as is prescribed by the laws of the state of Ohio; provided, however, that there shall not be deposited with any such corporation, person, partnership, or association by any such political subdivision an amount in excess of five hundred thousand dollars."

In opinion No. 627, of this department, referred to in your inquiry, reference was made to the provisions of section 2715, G. C., in the following language:

"Under the provisions of this section the authority of the commissioners of a county, in designating inactive depositaries for the public funds of such county, is limited to banks and trust companies situated in said county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state or organized under the laws of the United States, if such there be. In designating acting depositaries, said commissioners are limited to banks and trust companies of the above class, if such there be, located in the county seat of said county. If there is in fact no institution of this class located in such county, and eligible to bid as an inactive depositary, and if there is no institution of said class located in the county seat and eligible to bids as an active depositary, said commissioners may call for proposals from private banks located in the county or the county seat, for inactive and active depositaries, respectively.

"It is evident that under the provisions of section 2715, G. C., corporations, persons, partnerships or associations, coming within the purview of the act of the general assembly, as found in 103 O. L., 379-385, would not be eligible to bid for the public funds of a county, except in the case where no bank or trust company, organized under the laws of the state or the United States, is located in the county as to inactive depositaries and in the county seat as to active depositaries."

Reference was also made to those provisions of section 744-12, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 384, which were carried into said section, as amended in 106 O. L., 505, as follows:

"The effect of the provisions of this section is to place banking concerns, coming within the purview of this act, on a par with banks and trust companies organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, in so far as their eligibility to bid for public funds of the state, or any political subdivision, is concerned. It follows, therefore, that those provisions of section 2715, G. C., limiting county commissioners in designating depositaries of public funds to banks and trust companies, organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, are repealed by implication by the provisions of section 744-12, G. C."

The opinion held that a board of county commissioners, in its advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds, should invite proposals under both section 2715, G. C., and 744-12, G. C., and that if the advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds of the county is not so worded as to invite bids from the classes of banking concerns mentioned in both of said sections, either by appropriate language or by express reference to both sections, said advertisement is not sufficient in law. It was further observed in said opinion that an express reference to either of said sections, without referring to the other, would be misleading and would tend to defeat the plain provision of the law governing the deposit of public funds, viz., to secure full publicity and the greatest possible competition in bidding. It appears, however, from your statement of facts, that the commissioners of Lake county invited "all banks legally qualified to bid" to submit proposals.

As observed by you, the advertisement for bids does not, by its terms, refer to either of the above quoted sections to the exclusion of the other.

I thinks said advertisement conforms to the holding in the opinion above referred to, in that it is so worded as to invite bids from the classes of banking concerns mentioned in both of said statutes and I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that the notice contained in said advertisement is sufficient in law.

You further inquire whether section 744-12, G. C., permits banks, organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, mentioned in section 2715, G. C., to bid for and to be awarded funds irrespective of whether they are located within or without the county. In other words, you inquire whether, in case a bank, organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, but located without the county, offers a higher rate of interest for either active or inactive funds than is offered by the same kind of a bank located within a county, it is the duty of the county commissioners to make an award on the bid of said bank without the county or may they make such award only in the event that the bank or banks organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, and located within the county, fail to submit bids in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing such proposals.

As has already been stated, it was held in the former opinion above referred to, that the effect of the provision of section 744-12, G. C., is to place banking concerns coming within the purview of the act of the general assembly, as found in 103 O. L., 379-385, on a par with banks and trust companies organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, in so far as their eligibility to bid for public funds of the state or any political subdivision is concerned, and that those provisions of section 2715, G. C., limiting county commissioners in designating depositaries of public funds to banking institutions of the latter class, are repealed by implication.

I do not think, however, that it was the intention of the legislature, in enacting the provisions of section 744-12, G. C., to give to banking concerns coming within the purview of the act above referred to, but located without a county, the right to bid for the funds of said county the same as banking institutions of this class located within such county. It follows, therefore, that in answering your second question, the provisions of section 2715 G. C., and 744-12, G. C., must be taken together.

In keeping with the former holding above referred to, I am of the opinion, in answer to said question, that the commissioners of a county may, under the provision of said section 2715, G. C., as modified by the provision of section 744-12, G. C., receive bids for inactive funds from one or more banking institutions located within the county and belonging to either of the above mentioned classes, and may receive bids for active funds from one or more of said banking institutions located in the county seat of said county, if such there be. If in said county no such banking institution exists, or if the bank or banks or banking institutions belonging to either of the above mentioned classes and located within the county fail to bid for inactive funds in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing such proposals, then and in that event only would the commissioners of said county be authorized to receive bids from banking concerns belonging to either of said classes and located without said county, provided, however, that when the aggregate amount placed with the banking concerns qualifying for the same within the county does not equal the amount that may be placed into inactive depositaries, the county commissioners may, under authority of section 2715-1, G. C., and in the manner provided by the statutes governing the designation of depositaries, designate one or more banking concerns belonging to either of the above mentioned classes and located without the county, for the deposit of such excess funds.

It will be observed that the statutes make no provision for designating an active depositary in case no banking institution of either class is located at the county seat of a county. It is hardly probable, however, that such a condition exists in any county in the state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WHERE MONEY COMES INTO COUNTY TREASURY WHICH BELONGS TO NO PARTICULAR FUND, COMMISSIONERS HAVE AUTHORITY TO DETERMINE AND DIRECT FUND TO WHICH SUCH MONEY SHALL BE CREDITED—BRIDGES AND CULVERTS.

Where money comes into the county treasury, which belongs to no particular fund, the board of county commissioners has the authority to determine and direct the fund to which such money shall be credited. (See State ex rel. Board of County Commissioners of Marion County v. Charles L. Allen, County Auditor, 86 O. S., 244.)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21, 1915.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of October 14th, which is as follows:

> "I am sending you a copy of a letter that I received from the county commissioners today in reference to $20,000 that we compelled the two street car companies to pay in order to go over the new Sixth street bridge. I advised the commissioners in this instance and also the auditor that this money should be paid into the sinking fund, of the emergency fund so as to take care of the interest and bonds that were issued to build the bridge.
> "Am I right in my interpretation? The commissioners think I am wrong. An early reply to this will be greatly appreciated."

The letter of the commissioners of Muskingum county, above referred to, reads as follows:

> "Zanesville, Ohio, October 13, 1915.
> "Perry Smith, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.
> "Dear Sir:—We wish to write you asking that you take the matter of transferring the $10,000.00 from the Southeastern Light & Power Company and the $10,000.00 from the Ohio Electric Company received for the franchise for crossing the new Sixth street bridge to the emergency sinking fund to the attorney general for a final decision in the matter.

"The people and property holders on each side of the South River road desire that this road be improved and the only way said road can be improved is from money in the emergency fund. Unless this money from the two railroad companies returns back to the emergency fund, these road repairs cannot be made, as there is no other money available for this purpose.

"Your ruling as per letter is that this money should go to the emergency sinking fund, but the commissioners desire that we get the attorney general's ruling in this matter so that we may explain the matter to these property holders why this repair is not made.

"Please take this matter up with the attorney general and get his decision at your earliest convenience and oblige.

"Yours respectfully,
"MUSKINGUM COUNTY COMMISSIONERS,
By Fred C. Werner, Clerk."

In building the bridge referred to in your inquiry the commissioners of Muskingum county evidently proceeded under the so-called flood emergency act as found in 103 O. L., 141-147.

I do not deem it necessary to quote the various provisions of said act vesting in said county commissioners ample authority to permanently repair, re-construct and replace public property or public ways injured or destroyed by floods occurring in March and April of the year 1913, and to provide the necessary funds for such purpose.

It is sufficient to observe that if said county commissioners with the requirements of said act in issuing bonds for the purpose of establishing a flood emergency fund out of which to construct said bridge, and at the time such indebtedness was incurred, provided for levying and collecting annually by taxation a sufficient amount to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, as required by the provisions of section 6 of said act, the emergency sinking fund, thus created, should be sufficient to pay the interest and to retire said bonds as the same shall become due.

In the event of a deficiency in said emergency sinking fund, section 6 of said act provides that,

"When in any year, through miscalculation or inadvertence the amount of the tax originally certified to the county auditor, as herein provided, is insufficient to provide for the payment of the interest and the maintenance of the sinking fund as required by this section, such * * * commissioners (county commissioners) * * * shall compute and ascertain the necessary amount and shall certify same to the county auditor, who shall compute and ascertain the rate of levy necessary to provide therefor, instead of the rate necessary to provide for the amount originally certified, and place the same upon the duplicate of the proper taxing district for such year."

From the facts submitted it appears that after the bridge in question was constructed, the commissioners of your county granted a franchise to the Southeastern Light & Power Company, according to the terms of which said company, in consideration of the payment to said county commissioners of the sum of $10,000, was given the right to lay its tracks on said bridge and to run its street cars thereon as soon as said bridge was completed, and that at or about the same time a similar franchise was granted by said county commissioners to the Ohio Electric Company, on the same terms and conditions and for the same purpose.

If said county commissioners had entered into an agreement with said companies, prior to the time of issuing the bonds for the construction of said bridge, according to the terms of which each of said companies would have had to pay the sum of $10,000 in consideration of the granting of franchises to said companies to use said bridge for the above mentioned purpose, when the same should be constructed, the money so paid by said companies could have been placed in the county treasury to the credit of the flood emergency fund and used as a part of the cost of building said bridge.

However, said plan was not adopted by said commissioners and you inquire whether, as a matter of law, said sum of $20,000 should now be paid into said emergency sinking fund.

While considerations of sound public policy and economic administration might require said commissioners to apply said sum of money to the discharge of said bonded indebtedness, I find no provision of law compelling them to so dispose of said money.

I am compelled to conclude that as a matter of law said county commissiners are not required to place said money in the county treasury to the credit of said emergency sinking fund.

In the letter of the county commissioners, above quoted, said commissioners state that the people and property holders on each side of the South River road desire that this road be improved and that the only way said road can be improved is from money in the emergency fund; that unless this money received from the two railroad companies can be placed in the treasury to the credit of the emergency fund said road repairs cannot be made as there is no other money available for this purpose.

It must be observed in this connection that the flood emergency fund, as created by the county commissioners under the provisions of the aforesaid flood emergency act, can only be used in so far as permanent improvements made under the provisions of said act are concerned, for the permanent repair, reconstruction or replacement of public property or public ways destroyed or injured in the manner and at the time described in section 1 of this act,'' which section by its terms limits such improvements to public property or public ways which were destroyed or injured by floods occurring in March and April, 1913. Unless the repair of the road in question comes within the meaning of the above provision of section 3 of said act, the cost and expense of making such repair should properly be paid out of the road repair fund and not out of said flood emergency fund.

It remains to be determined, therefore, whether said county commissioners may, in the exercise of their discretion, place the aforesaid sum of $20,000 in the county treasury to the credit of said flood emergency fund or to the credit of the road repair fund, depending on the nature of the repair work which they desire to make.

While it may be argued that, inasmuch as the disposition of the money in question is not governed by any provision of the statute, said money should be paid into the general county fund, I find that the right of the county commissioners to determine the fund to the credit of which a sum of money in a case of this kind may be placed is recognized by the supreme court in the case of the State ex rel. Board of County Commissioners of Marion County v. Charles L. Allen, County Auditor, 86 O. S., 244.

The third branch of the syllabus provides:

> ''Where funds reach a county treasurer, either by gift or otherwise, that belong to no particular fund, or where there is nothing whatever to show in which fund the money belongs, the board of county commissioners has authority to determine and direct the fund to which such moneys shall be credited."

From the statement of facts in this case it appears that an unknown person forwarded by mail to the county treasurer of Marion county the sum of $500.00 and requested that said sum be placed in the county treasury. The matter was called to the attention of the county commissioners of said county and that board entered on its journal an order directing the county auditor to certify said sum into the county treasury of said county to the credit of the pike fund of said county. The county auditor refused to do this and an action in mandamus was brought to compel him to comply with the order of the county commissioners so made in reference to this fund.

At page 251 the court in its opinion said:

"This money is now the property of the county. It should be returned to the particular fund from which it was withdrawn, but it is impossible from the evidence at hand to determine that fund. The suggestion found in the brief of counsel for the auditor that in that case it should pass into the general fund, would appeal very strongly to this court if it had the authority to determine the question, but in the absence of any proof whatever as to the fund from which it was withdrawn, its legal status is the same as if it had never been the property of the county, and never had been withdrawn from its treasury. It is now money belonging to the county, to be expended by the county for any lawful purpose, and that purpose must be determined by the county itself, or by those officers representing the county and authorized to act for it. In Ohio that authority is the board of county commissioners, in whom is vested by law the title to all the property of the county.

"It is the duty of this board, and the authority of this board, to determine and direct into which fund this money shall be placed, and, having so determined that question, it becomes the duty of the auditor under section 2567, General Code, to certify this money into the fund designated by the county commissioners to the credit of that fund, and charge the treasurer accordingly. He has no power or authority whatever to deal with the money of the county, except as directed by law, or by those having lawful authority and discretion to make such orders and directions."

I am of the opinion therefore that the county commissioners have the right, in the exercise of their sound discretion, to determine that the money, received from the aforesaid companies as a consideration for the franchise rights granted to said companies by said county commissioners, shall be placed in the county treasury to the credit of the flood emergency fund or to the credit of the road repair fund according to the nature of the improvement of the road in question, for the cost and expense of which it is desired that said sum of money shall be applied.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SECRETARY OF STATE—ST. URSULA LITERARY INSTITUTE OF BROWN COUNTY—TRANSCRIPTS FROM RECORDS OF RECORDER OF BROWN COUNTY ARE AUTHORIZED TO BE FILED IN OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

The secretary of state is authorized to receive and record certified transcripts from the records of county recorders of proceedings filed in their office prior to the adoption of the present constitution relative to the formation and authorization of corporations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 18, 1915, enclosing a certified transcript from the records of the recorder of Brown county, Ohio, containing what purports to be a copy of the proceedings filed with the recorder of that county August 17, 1846, by virtue of which the St. Ursula literary institute of Brown county, Ohio, secured its corporate authorization.

This corporation was created prior to the adoption of the present constitution, and under authority of an act of the general assembly passed March 8, 1845 (43 O. L., 70).

From the statement attached to the transcript enclosed in your letter it appears that the St. Ursula literary institute of Brown county has never elected under section 8732, General Code, to be governed by the provisions of laws enacted under authority of the new constitution, but is still, under section 8731, General Code, "governed and controlled by the laws in force" at the time of its organization; and it is specifically stated that it does not now desire to accept and be governed by the provisions of the present laws.

The certificate presented by the St. Ursula literary institute of Brown county neither adds to nor detracts from its corporate power and authority, and apparently the corporation's sole object is to secure the recording of its corporate authorization or franchise in the office of the secretary of state.

I am unable to find any provision of the General Code which makes it the duty of the secretary of state either to accept and record or to reject a certificate of the character of the one enclosed in your letter.

Section 8626, General Code, provides:

> "* * * Articles of incorporation shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, who shall record them, and shall also record certificates relating to that corporation, thereafter filed in his office."

Although this section, when strictly construed, is probably applicable only to corporations organized since the adoption of the present constitution, yet it indicates the general legislative policy that all evidences of corporate authority shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state.

I find, also, upon investigation that it has heretofore been the custom of the secretary of state to record certified copies of articles of incorporation of church and similar organizations taken from records in offices of county recorders.

In view of this custom and the expressed legislative policy, at least as to corporations organized under the present constitution, that all articles of incorporation and certificates relative thereto shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state, I am of the opinion that you should accept and record the certificate presented for record by the St. Ursula literary institute of Brown county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

"BLUE SKY LAW"—WHEN IT IS DUTY OF COMMISSIONER TO REVOKE DEALER'S LICENSE—NO AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENT OF ANY KIND WITH OFFENDING DEALER.

Under section 6373-6, G. C., when facts warranting the revocation of a dealer's license have been established to the satisfaction of the "commissioner," it is the duty of the "commissioner" to revoke such license.

The "commissioner" has no authority to enter into an agreement of any kind with an offending dealer.

The motive of a person preferring charges is material only when the testimony of such person is to be weighed against the testimony of the person accused. When facts are established otherwise than by the evidence of the complainant, the motive of the complainant is immaterial. The "commissioner" is concerned only with the truth or falsity of the charges.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your request for opinion, under date of October 18, 1915, reading as follows:

> "Section 6373-6, Revised Statutes of Ohio, reads:
> "'Section 6373-6. Such "commissioner" may at any time revoke any such license, or refuse to renew the same, upon ascertaining that the licensee:
> "'a. Is of bad business repute;
> "'b. Has violated any provision of this act, or
> "'c. Has engaged, or is about to engage, under favor of such license, in illegitimate business or in fraudulent transactions.
> "'No dealer whose license has been revoked shall be relicensed within six months from the date of such revocation.
> "'The "commissioner" shall at once lay before the prosecuting attorney of the proper county any evidence which shall come to his knowledge of criminality under this act.'
> "The section above quoted is one in a complete legislative enactment known as the Ohio blue sky law.
> "(1) Taking the law in its entirety, is the section above quoted mandatory upon the 'commissioner?'
> "(2) Does said section compel the 'commissioner' to revoke a dealer's license when facts warranting such revocation are established to his satisfaction?

"(3) Does said section lodge in the 'commissioner' a discretion empowering him to revoke or to refuse to revoke a dealer's license when facts warranting such revocation are established to his satisfaction?

"(4) What, under the provisions of the law above mentioned, should be the controlling purpose of the 'commissioner?'

"(5) Granting that facts warranting the revocation of a dealer's license have been established to the satisfaction of the 'commissioner,' and it is also established to his satisfaction that, if the dealer's license is revoked, the investors of the state will suffer a greater financial loss than they would suffer if a revocation was denied, has the 'commissioner' power under the law, and is it his first duty under the law, to assume, by agreement, such regulatory control of the offending dealer that abuses, in the future, will be impossible and the interests of prospective investors fully safeguarded?

"(6) Granting that facts warranting the revocation of a dealer's license have been established to the satisfaction of the 'commissioner' and it is also made to appear to his satisfaction that the investigation, resulting in the establishment of such facts, was inaugurated by individuals who seek to profit financially by the depreciation in the prices of the securities marketed by the offending dealer, but which are at present held by innocent investors throughout the state, and upon such investors and not upon the offending dealer will fall the burden of the financial loss, and to the individual instigators of the investigation will pass the financial profits, what, in the spirit of the whole law are the powers of the 'commissioner' and what is his duty on such a state of facts?

"I respectfully request your opinion on each one of the above questions."

For convenience in reference hereafter, I have taken the liberty of numbering your questions consecutively and shall refer to them hereinafter by number.

The nature of the questions you have propounded suggest a brief outline of the conditions sought to be corrected by the blue sky law.

The sole purpose of the blue sky law is the protection of the prospective investor. The enactment of such a law in Ohio and other states grew out of pressing necessity. The vulturous tribe, whose members have come to be known as "Wallingfords," had so successfully preyed upon society that the checking of their activities became imperative.

Men and women, who, by industry, thrift and economy, had been able to accumulate modest amounts of money from time to time, were being continually and continuously fleeced out of their savings through the glowing promises of absolutely safe returns on their investments.

Through the cupidity of men of apparently good standing in various communities, these vultures were able not only to find who had saved a little money for a "rainy day" but to get these same informants to quietly and "confidentially" "recommend" their so-called securities in institutions whose statements had been grossly padded and whose dummy directorates consisted of apparently respectable citizens.

The average small investor knows little or nothing about Dun or Bradstreet and, even if one had thought of getting such a report, the local "capper" who had furnished the "tip" would have advised against it.

Persons having but a few hundred or a few thousand dollars to invest could not afford to go to the expense of having an independent audit and appraisal made, even if they had thought of such a thing; besides, they were always furnished with expensively printed prospectuses setting forth an alleged impartial audit and appraisal.

Thus the savings of the people were being coaxed from the banks and building and loan associations and exchanged for beautifully engraved or lithographed certificates of stocks and bonds, which soon proved worthless. Many of these investors, in middle life or old age, found themselves destitute not only of worldly goods, but of courage to continue the fight.

It was such conditions as I have outlined that led the legislative bodies of the various states to take some action. Hence the state of Ohio stepped in and for the protection of its citizens said:

(1) That, excepting public service company securities authorized by some public service commission, securities purchased in good faith by an underwriter at not less than ninety per cent. of the price afterwards to be charged the public, or the securities of a going manufacturing, coal mining or quarrying concern in this state, the sale of all securities is prohibited, even by a licensed dealer, until a certificate has been obtained from the state; that before such certificate may issue full detailed information concerning the institution must be furnished and it must affirmatively appear that the law has been complied with, that the business is not fraudulently conducted, that the issuer or vendor is solvent, and that the disposal is not on grossly unfair terms. Inquisitorial powers are given the "commissioner" to insure his possession of the necessary information, and the right is reserved the state to revoke the certificate.

(2) That, with certain exceptions, no person may dispose of securities evidencing title or interest in property without being first licensed.

(3 That, before such license to a dealer in securities may issue:

(a) The applicant must furnish full information concerning not only his business, but himself and his agents;

(b) The state, however, is not bound to be satisfied with the claims of the applicant in this respect, but the legislature went further and placed the positive duty upon the "commissioner" to confirm, by such investigation as may be necessary to establish, good repute in business of all concerned;

(c) The notice of the application for a license must be published and no action taken by the "commissioner" until a definite time thereafter has elapsed;

(d) If, after all this, the "commissioner" be satisfied of the good repute in business of the applicant and his agents, a license to sell securities may issue;

(4) That any person who, without disclosing that he is to profit thereby, advises or procures any person to purchase any security shall be liable in damages to the person so purchasing such security.

As stated above, the nature of your questions has called forth this epitome of the reasons for the blue sky legislation and a brief outline of the law, and these seem to me clearly to suggest the proper answer to each of your questions.

Taking up your first three questions: Section 6373-6 of the General Code of Ohio (not Revised Statutes, as stated by you) places a mandatory duty upon the "commissioner" to revoke a dealer's license when facts warranting such revocation are established to his satisfaction. The "commissioner's" failure to revoke a license, when facts warranting such revocation are established to his satisfaction, would be misconduct in office on the part of the "commissioner," for which he should be removed from office.

To hold otherwise would be not only to repeal the blue sky law, but to place the stamp of approval on illegitimate business and fraudulent transactions and to say that the "commissioner" had the right to protect a person, firm or corporation, after the obtaining of a license, under the same facts and circumstances that would have prevented the "commissioner" from issuing the license in the first place.

The statute also provides the only condition upon which such licensee may resume business, in the following language:

> "No dealer whose license has been revoked shall be relicensed within six months from the date of such revocation."

In answer to your fourth question: The controlling purpose of the "commissioner" should be to protect the investors of the state by driving out of business every person, firm, or corporation that conducts the business of selling securities unfairly or fraudulently, to the end that when the citizens of this state deal with persons or concerns holding a license from your department to sell securities, they may rely upon the truth of the representations made as to existing facts and the promises made as to what shall obtain in the future in concerns whose securities are being offered.

In answer to your fifth question: In the first place, I do not know by what process of reasoning you can arrive at the conclusion that investors of the state who have purchased their securities from a concern against whom it has been clearly established that it has been conducting its business illegally and necessarily to the detriment of investors, are to suffer a greater financial loss by revocation of the dealer's license than they would suffer if a revocation was denied. I know of no authority for you to enter into any agreement of any kind with an offending dealer. The general answer to this question is in the negative.

Being at a loss to know how you have figured out the hypotheses contained in your sixth question, it is difficult to discuss said question. The first assumption you make in this question, as in all others, is: "Granting that facts warranting the revocation of a dealer's license have been established to the satisfaction of the 'commissioner,'" should be the end of the inquiry. When facts have been established to your satisfaction, you have a clear duty to perform and no consideration of any kind should swerve you.

The motive of the person or persons who prompted the investigation can become material only where his or their word, or the evidence offered by him or them, is to be weighed against the evidence offered by the licensee as to the truth or falsity of the charges. Where the truth of the charges is proven otherwise than by evidence of the complainant, the motive of the complainant is immaterial. You are concerned only with the truth or falsity of the charges; if false, you should say so; if true, you should act promptly, to the end that no other innocent person may suffer. I am unable, without more facts than contained in your letter, to see how investors are going to suffer by revocation of a license thus preventing a dealer from selling more securities, unless it be upon the theory that the losses will then be distributed over a greater number of persons.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COUNTY SURVEYOR—WHEN APPOINTED TAX MAP DRAUGHTSMAN UNDER SECTION 5551, G. C.—NO ASSISTANT PROVIDED—SURVEYOR NOT AUTHORIZED TO APPOINT AN ASSISTANT UNDER SECTION 2788, G. C., OR SECTION 7181, G. C.

Where county commissioners appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman under section 5551, G. C., and provide him no assistant as such, the county surveyor is not authorized to detail an assistant appointed under section 2788, G. C., or 7181, G. C., to do any of the tax map work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of October 18, 1915, in which you inquire as follows:

> "In the event that the county commissioners appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman in accordance with the provisions of section 5551, General Code, and provide him no assistant as such, can the county surveyor detail an assistant in his office who has been appointed under the provisions of section 138 of the Cass highway law to do any of such tax map work?"

In order to fully answer your question, it should first be noted, as pointed out in an opinion rendered to you by this department on September 20, 1915, that section 2788, G. C., which authorizes the county surveyor to appoint such assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks and employes, as he deems necessary for the proper perforance of the duties of his office, and fix their compensation within certain limits, was not repealed by the Cass highway law. It was indicated in that opinion that while it may not be essential in practice to preserve for all purposes the distinction between the assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks and other employes necessary to enable the surveyor to properly perform such of his duties as are not connected with his work as county highway superintendent on the one hand, and the assistants necessary to enable him to properly perform his duties as county highway superintendent on the other hand, and while it may even be convenient and proper to disregard the distinction for certain purposes, yet such a distinction clearly exists.

Section 2788, G. C., is the governing section as to the assistants necessary to enable the county surveyor to properly perform the duties of his office other than those duties devolving upon him as county highway superintendent, while as to the assistants necessary to enable the county surveyor to properly perform his duties as county highway superintendent, the controlling law is section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C. In answering your question I will therefore consider whether, under the circumstances mentioned by you, the county surveyor can detail an assistant in his office who has been appointed either under the provisions of section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., or under section 2788, G. C., to do any of the tax map work.

It should first be noted that section 5551, G. C., is not mandatory, and that as the law now stands the county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman, or they may decline to take any action whatever as to the making, correcting and keeping up to date of tax maps. As pointed out in the opinion referred to above, the county commissioners may, after January 1, 1916, have the tax maps made either by the county surveyor and his assistants provided for that purpose, or by outside parties, but not by both. It will also be noted that under section 5552, G. C., the county commissioners, if they appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman, are required to fix the number of his assistants, not to exceed four, and also to fix the salary of such assistants at not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per year. As the law stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, section 2787, G. C., required the county commissioners to fix an aggregate compensation to be expended during the year by the county surveyor for necessary assistants, etc. These assistants were manifestly those necessary to enable the county surveyor to discharge the duties cast upon him by law without any reference to his work as tax map draughtsman, and in acting under section 2787, G. C., the county commissioners were not warranted in taking into consideration, in the making of an allowance to the county surveyor for the compensation of assistants, etc., any assistants which he might require in the making of tax maps, if appointed to do that work, for the reason that authority to determine the number of assistants necessary in tax map work and to fix their compensation was conferred upon the county commissioners by a separate section of the General Code, to wit, 5552, G. C.

Since the going into effect of the Cass highway law, the commissioners, in acting under section 138 of that act, section 7181, G. C., in fixing the aggregate compensation to be expended for assistants by the county highway superintendent, are allowed to take into consideration only the number of assistants which the county surveyor will require to properly perform his duties as county highway superintendent. In other words, the county commissioners will not, when acting either under section 2787, G. C., or under section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., be warranted in taking into consideration the number of assistants which the county surveyor will require as tax map draughtsman, in case he is appointed to that position by the county commissioners, for the reason that section 5552, G. C., which relates especially to the position of tax map draughtsman, provides a method by which the county commissioners are to determine the number of assistants to be allowed to the tax map draughtsman and the compensation of such assistants.

I am of the opinion that said section 5552, G. C., must be taken as furnishing the only method by which the county surveyor, acting as tax map draughtsman, can be allowed any assistants for tax map work and that if the county commissioners fail to act under section 5552, G. C., and do not fix any number of assistants for the tax map draughtsman, it must be presumed that the county commissioners, in the exercise of their discretion, determined that no assistants were necessary.

I therefore conclude, in answer to your specific question, that in the event that the county commissioners appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman, in accordance with the provisions of section 5551, G. C., and do not, under the provisions of section 5552, G. C., allow any assistants to the tax map draughtsman, then the county surveyor must himself perform the duties of tax map draughtsman and cannot detail to assist him in his work as tax map draughtsman any assistant in his office appointed under section 2788, G. C., or under section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C. To hold otherwise would be to take from the county commissioners the discretion imposed in them by section 5552, G. C., of determining whether or not the county surveyor, acting as tax map draughtsman, is to be allowed any assistants, and would enable a county surveyor to use funds allowed to him for one class of assistants in compensating another and different class of assistants engaged on work which the county surveyor was required to personally perform.

I understand that a situation has been presented to you in which it is desired to appoint the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman and then detail an assistant appointed under either section 2788, G. C., or section 7181, G. C., to take care of the tax map work, the assistant in question being especially skilled in such work. I desire to suggest that the matter might under such circumstances, be worked out by appointing the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman, giving him only a nominal compensation sufficient to recompense him for supervising the work and allowing him one assistant under section 5552, G. C., at a substantial compensation to be fixed by the commissioners within the statutory limit.

The assistant in question upon resigning his position under section 2788, G. C., or 7181, G. C., could be appointed assistant to the tax map draughtsman and paid the compensation fixed by the commissioners for such assistant.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—WHEN SECTIONS 9880 AND 9884, G. C., ARE COMPLIED WITH, IT IS THE DUTY OF COUNTY AUDITOR UPON PRESENTATION OF CERTIFICATE IN PROPER FORM TO DRAW ORDER ON COUNTY TREASURER—WHEN REQUEST FOR LEVY IS MADE BY ONE SOCIETY, COMMISSIONERS CANNOT DESIGNATE THE USE OF SAME BY ANOTHER SOCIETY.

1. When an agricultural society is organized in any county in this state under the provisions of section 9880, G. C., and receives a certificate from the president of the state board as therein provided and continues to receive said certificate annually thereafter under the provisions of section 9884, G. C., it is the duty of the county auditor, upon presentation of said certificate in proper form, to draw an order on the treasurer of his county for the per capita tax as provided in said section 9880, G. C.

2. The agricultural society authorized by section 9894, G. C., to request a levy of one-tenth of one mill as therein provided is the society recognized by the state board under sections 9880 and 9884, G. C., supra, and a board of county commissioners is without authority to make a levy as provided by said section 9894 upon the request of any society other than the one above designated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1915.

HON. LEVI B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 11, 1915, as follows:

"Pike county has two fair companies, each claiming to be the Pike County Agricultural Society recognized by the state board of agriculture, and each claiming the money levied by the county commissioners for agricultural purposes. The Pike County Agricultural Society of Piketon, Ohio, has received all moneys levied for agricultural purposes up to the present time, including the per capita tax.

"Since the August settlement, 1915, the Pike County Agricultural Society of Waverly, Ohio, have been claiming the money coming in for agricultural purposes on the strength of the enclosed resolutions heretofore passed by the county commissioners.

"Our county auditor refuses to turn over the August draw until he has your opinion as to which of these societies is entitled to receive it. I am also sending you a letter from the state board of agriculture in regard to the matter. Will you kindly return this letter to me together with your direction as to which one of these societies should receive this money? Your direction in the matter will settle the controversy."

It appears, from the statements in your foregoing letter, that two agricultural societies in your county are claiming a right to the funds provided by law for the assistance of a county agricultural society. It becomes necessary, therefore, to refer to the law under which agricultural societies may claim any public funds.

Your attention is first directed to section 9880, G. C., which provides as follows:

"When thirty or more persons, residents of a county, or of a district embracing one or more counties, organize themselves into an agricultural society, which adopts a constitution and by-laws, selects the usual and proper officers, and otherwise conducts its affairs in conformity to law, and the rules of the state board of agriculture, and when such county or district society has held an annual exhibition in accordance with the three following sections, and made proper report to the state board, then, upon presentation to the county auditor, of a certificate from the president of the state board attested by the secretary thereof, that the laws of the state and the rules of the board have been complied with, the county auditor of each county wherein such agricultural societies are organized, annually shall draw an order on the treasurer of the county in favor of the president of the county or district agricultural society for a sum equal to two cents to each inhabitant thereof, on the basis of the last previous national census. The total amount of such order shall not in any county exceed eight hundred dollars, and the treasurer of the county shall pay it."

Inasmuch as you state in your letter that the Piketon society has been receiving all moneys levied for agricultural purposes up to the present time, including the per capita tax, it must be assumed that it has in the past complied with the provisions of the foregoing statute and has received from the president of the state board the proper certificate entitling it to the payment of the funds so as aforesaid received by it. This being true and this society having first established its identity as the county agricultural society of Pike county, I incline to the opinion that so long as it observes and follows the statutory requirements and obtains from the state board the proper certificate it may continue so to receive said money, but the certificate mentioned and defined in the foregoing section is not continuing and does not serve to authorize but the one payment, as specified therein, and a succeeding section, viz., 9884, G. C., makes provisions for subsequent payments, as follows:

"County and district societies annually shall publish a list of awards, and an abstract of the treasurer's account, in a newspaper of the district, and make a report of their proceedings during the year, and a synopsis of the awards for improvement in agriculture and household manufactures, together with an abstract of the several descriptions of these improvements; also make a report of the condition of agriculture in their county or district, which shall be made in accordance with the rules and regulations of the state board of agriculture, and be forwarded to the state board at its annual meeting in January of each year. No subsequent payment shall be made from the county treasury unless a certificate be presented to the auditor, from the president of the state board, showing that such reports have been made."

It will be observed that the foregoing statute expressly provides that no subsequent payment shall be made from the county treasury unless a certificate be presented, from the president of the state board, showing that the reports named in the foregoing statute have been made.

The letter from the state board to your county auditor, to which you refer and which purports to be an order or certificate from the state board to said auditor, is as follows:

"September 18, 1915.

"HON. L. B. EYLAR, County Auditor, Waverly, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—The records of this department show that the agricultural society operating at Piketon, Ohio, is the legally recognized fair for Pike county, and you are instructed to pay to this society whatever funds there are for distribution in Pike county for fair purposes.

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed) JOHN BEGGS,
"President.

"(Signed) R. W. DUNLAP,
"Secretary."

The foregoing falls very far short of the requirements for a certificate as provided in the section above quoted and your county auditor cannot legally pay any money thereon.

If this society has complied with the requirements specified in said section 9884, G. C., then, upon a proper certificate thereof from the president of the state board, your county auditor would be authorized to pay to said society the per capita money now in your county treasury for agricultural purposes. In this connection, however, I desire to call your attention to the provisions of a supplementary section to said section 9880, supra, as found in 106 Ohio laws, page 273, and which provides that:

"When thirty or more persons, residents of a county * * * * are organized into an independent agricultural society that has held annual fairs for agricultural advancement previous to January first, 1915, in a county wherein is located a county agricultural society, and when such independent society has held an annual exhibition in accordance with the three following sections, and made proper report to the state board, then, upon presentation to the county auditor of a certificate from the president of the state board attested by the secretary thereof, that the laws of Ohio and the rules of the board have been complied with, the county auditor of the county, if the fair board be residents of one county, shall draw an order in favor of the president of the independent agricultural society for a sum equal to the amount paid to the county fair and the treasurer shall pay said order."

Under the provisions of the foregoing supplementary statute, if the agricultural society of Waverly has complied with the requirements of the sections heretofore noted and receives from the president of the state board the certificate specified in said last named section, on presentation of said certificate to the county auditor it would be his duty to pay to said Waverly Agricultural Society a sum equal to the amount paid to the Piketon Agricultural Society. An inspection of the records of the state board of agriculture shows, however, that no reports as required by law or any reports have ever been filed by the Agricultural Society of Waverly and until the law in this regard has been observed, I am unable to see upon what legal ground said society may claim the benefit of any county fund.

Attached to your letter also are certified copies of an application made on January 13, 1913, by the Waverly society to your county commissioners to make a levy for its benefit of not to exceed one-tenth of a mill upon the taxable property of the county as provided by section 9894, G. C., and a similar application of the date of March 15, 1915. Attached to these applications are certified copies of resolutions adopted by said board of county commissioners recognizing the Waverly society as the county agricultural society and entitled to receive the aid contemplated by section 9894, and requesting the state board of agriculture to direct that said society receive the per capita tax.

You state in your letter that the Piketon society has heretofore received all funds levied for agricultural purposes in your county. You do not state, however, whether that society made application for a levy under said section 9894, or whether the levy was made on the application of the Waverly society, as hereinbefore noted.

Section 9894, G. C., provides as follows:

> "When a county or county agricultural society, owns or holds under a lease, real estate used as a site whereon to hold fairs, and the county agricultural society therein has control and management of such lands and buildings, for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs, the county commissioners shall on the request of the agricultural society annually levy taxes of not exceeding a tenth of one mill upon all taxable property of the county, but in no event to exceed the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars, which sum shall be paid by the treasurer of the county to the treasurer of the agricultural society, upon an order from the county auditor duly issued therefor. Such commissioners shall pay out of the treasury any sum from money in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, in anticipation of such levy."

A careful consideration of the provisions of the foregoing section convinces me that the county agricultural society therein authorized to apply for a county levy must be a society which has complied with all the provisions of law and has the official recognition of the state board of agriculture, and holds the certificate of said board for the per capita tax, under said section 9880. While there seems to be no express provision of law regulating the mode and manner by which the status of an agricultural society may be legally fixed, as the county agricultural society, yet the administration of the law as an entirety is inconsistent with any other procedure than to recognize as the county society the society adopted by the state board under the provisions of said section 9880, supra.

I am also convinced that the application of a county society under the above statute, namely 9894, G. C., is, in connection with the other qualifications therein named, a jurisdictional matter and necessary to authorize the county commissioners to make the levy therein specified, and that a levy made upon the application of any society other than such county society is void, and money paid under such appropriation is illegally expended.

Upon these considerations I conclude that no money appropriated under the application of the Waverly society, made on March 15, 1915, can be expended in behalf of any agricultural society, and your county auditor should be directed to regard and treat such appropriation as wholly void.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION — SCHOOLS — TRANSPORTATION — WHERE IN RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT AVERAGE DAILY ATTENDANCE WAS BELOW TEN FOR PRECEDING YEAR, SUSPENSION FOLLOWED, AND PUPILS OF SAID DISTRICT ASSIGNED TO ANOTHER DISTRICT— DUTY OF LOCAL BOARD OF EDUCATION TO PROVIDE TRANSPORTATION FOR ONLY THOSE PUPILS RESIDING IN SAID SUSPENDED DISTRICT WHO LIVE MORE THAN TWO MILES FROM SCHOOL TO WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN ASSIGNED.

Where the average daily attendance of a school in a rural school district was below ten for the preceding year and said school has been suspended by the board of education of said rural school district on the order of the board of education of the county school district directing such suspension and the pupils of said suspended district have been assigned to another school in the same rural district or to a public school in another district, it is the duty of said local board of education, under the provision of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, to provide transportation for those pupils only, residing in said suspended district, who live more than two miles from the school to which they are assigned.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1915.

HON. F. J. STALTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of October 16th, which is as follows:

> "Section 7730, G. C., provides for the suspension of schools by the board of education. It also provides for the transportation of pupils.
> "In opinion number 1355, 1914, you hold that where a school is suspended because attendance is below twelve (104 O. L., 139) and the board of education annexes territory to contiguous district the rule for transportation is 7731 and the board is only compelled to haul the pupils who live more than two miles.
> "Where the average daily attendance is below ten and the school of a rural district is suspended (104 and 105 O. L., 398) and the board of education assigns the pupils of said district to another school in the same rural district but said territory of said suspended district is not annexed to another district does the rule then for transportation as provided in 7730 apply or the rule for transportation as provided in section 7731 apply?"

Section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398 provides in part as follows:

> "The board of education of any rural or village school district may suspend any or all schools in such village or rural school district. Upon such suspension the board in such village school district may provide, and in such rural school district shall provide, for the conveyance of pupils attending such schools, to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district."

Under the above provision of the statute the board of education of a rural or village school district may, in the exercise of its discretion, suspend any or all of the schools of its district.

When the board of education of a rural school district suspends a school in its district, under authority of said provision of said statute, and transfers the pupils of said suspended school to another public school in its district or to a public school in another school district, it becomes the duty of such board to provide conveyance for the pupils of said suspended district to the school or schools to which they are transferred.

It will be observed that the legislature in amending section 7730, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 139, carried the above provisions of said statute into the amendment without change. It follows, therefore, that the authority of the board of education of a rural school district to suspend a school in its district and to transfer the pupils to another school, and the duty of said board to provide transportation for such pupils is the same under said provisions of section 7730, G. C., as found in both of its amended forms.

Said section as amended in 106 O. L., further provides:

"When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education."

Under provision of said statute as amended in 104 O. L., it was made the duty of the local board of education to suspend a school in its district and transfer the pupils to another school or schools as said board might direct, when the average daily attendance of such school for the preceding year was below twelve.

It will be observed that while the amended provision of the statute, as above quoted, changes the corresponding provision of said statute as amended in 104 O. L., by reducing the minimum average daily attendance from twelve to ten and vests in the board of education of the county school district the discretion to direct the suspension of a school when the average daily attendance for the preceding year has been below ten, said changes, in so far as the question of the authority or duty of the local board of education to provide for the transportation of the pupils is concerned, are not material.

In the opinion referred to in your inquiry, rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to Hon. Allen T. Williamson, prosecuting attorney of Washington county, under date of December 31, 1914, the question asked by Mr. Williamson was as follows:

"Under sections 7730 and 7731, General Code, where a school has been suspended because the average daily attendance during the preceding school year was less than twelve, and the territory comprising said district has been annexed to contiguous districts, is the board of education compelled to transport all pupils within the suspended district regardless of the distance they may reside from the school to which they are assigned, or is the board required to transport only those pupils residing in such suspended district where they live more than two miles from the school to which they are assigned?"

After quoting the provisions of sections 7730 and 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., at pages 139 and 140, and as then in force, Mr. Hogan observed that under the provisions of said section 7730, G. C., no reference is made relating to or requiring conveyance when a school is suspended because the average daily attendance of such school for the preceding year was below twelve, and that the provision as to conveyance in said section relates only to the suspension of a school by a board of education in the exercise of its discretion under authority of the provision contained in the first part of said statute.

Reference was made to the provision of section 7731, G. C., in the following language:

> "Said section 7731 provides in effect that in all rural or village school districts, where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such schools and that transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education."

In conclusion it was held that when a school has been suspended because the average daily attendance for the preceding year was less than twelve, and the territory comprising said district has been annexed to a contiguous district, the board of education is compelled to furnish transportation to the pupils of such suspended district in accordance with the requirements of section 7731, G. C. In other words, such board is required to furnish transportation only to those pupils residing in such suspended district, who live more than two miles from the school to which they are assigned.

I concur in said opinion as I think it affords the proper construction of the provisions of section 7730, G. C., as found in both of its amended forms when taken in connection with the provisions of section 7731, G. C., and lays down the correct rule to be applied in determining the liability of the board of education of a rural or village school district to furnish transportation to pupils where a school of such district is suspended on the order of the county board of education acting under the above provision of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L.

While in the case under consideration in said opinion it appears that after the suspension of the school in question the territory of the suspended school district was annexed to contiguous districts, it is evident that this fact was not material to the conclusion therein reached.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your question that, where the average daily attendance of a school in a rural school district was below ten for the preceding year and said school has been suspended by the board of education of said rural school district on the order of the board of education of the county school district directing such suspension, and the pupils of said suspended district have been assigned to another school in the same rural district or to a public school in another district, it is the duty of said local board of education, under the provision of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, to provide transportation for those pupils only, residing in said suspended district, who live more than two miles from the school to which they are assigned.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—SCHOOL HOUSE ERECTED UPON LEASED LAND IS WITHIN RULE OF LAW APPLICABLE TO TRADE FIXTURES AND MAY BE REMOVED BY SAID BOARD BEFORE EXPIRATION OF ITS LEASE.

A school house erected by a board of education upon leased land is within the rule of law which controls as to trade fixtures and may be removed by said board before the expiration of its lease. Wittemeyer v. The Board of Education of Brooklyn, 10 C. C., 119.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 2, 1915, as follows:

> "On the 10th day of January, 1862, a contract was entered into between the board of education of Chesterfield township, Fulton county, Ohio, and George P. Clark of same place. The contract reads as follows:
> " 'Article of agreement made this 10th day of January, 1862, by and between the board of education of Chesterfield township, Fulton county, Ohio, and George P. Clark of same place.
> " 'The said George P. Clark hereby agrees to lease for the time the said board of education shall desire to use it the (description of land), for the sum of ten dollars, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, for a school house site. To have and to hold said premises with the appurtenances unto the said board of education and their successors in office during the occupancy of said premises by said board of education.
> " 'GEORGE P. CLARK.
> " 'ATTEST:
> " 'A. C. HOUGH,
> " 'D. C. GILLIS.'
> "QUERY: The board of education under the terms of this lease wishes to remove the school building which stands upon the above mentioned land. Can it dispose of the building at public sale before returning the land to the owner?"

While your letter does not so state, it will be assumed that the school building in question was erected subsequent to the making of the contract aforesaid, upon the lands therein described, by the board of eduction named in said contract.

It is a familiar rule of the law that whatever becomes fixed to the realty thereby becomes accessory to the freehold and cannot be severed therefrom without the consent of the owner of the realty. In other words, personal property which becomes fixed to realty thereby loses its character as personal property and becomes realty and cannot be severed therefrom without the consent of the owner, or under some express agreement whereby it is to be removed at the end of the term of the lease. In the case presented, there being no such condition in the contract, and the school building in question being affixed to the land, it cannot be removed without the consent of the owner of the realty, unless it comes within some exception to the general rule above stated.

There are four exceptions to this general rule as follows:

> "1. Additions made by the tenant in the aid of his trade, called 'trade fixtures.'
> "2. Additions for ornament or more convenient use of the premises.
> "3. Additions made under contract with right of removal.
> "4. Additions removable by statute.
> "19 Cyc. 1065."

The only exception to said rule which may be applied in this case is that which is recognized in favor of what is termed "trade fixtures." As to such fixtures, although they may be securely fastened to the realty, they continue as the personal property of the lessee and may be removed by him at the end of the term of the lease, if such removal can be effected without material injury to the freehold.

It is said by the court in 142 U. S., 416, that:

> "Whatever is affixed to the land for the purposes of trade, whether it be made of brick or wood, is removable at the end of the term. Indeed, it is difficult to conceive that any fixture, however solid, permanent or closely attached to realty, placed there for the sole purposes of trade, may not be removed at the end of the term."

It was held in Wagner v. Railroad Company, 22 O. S., 563, that:

> "Stone piers built by a railroad company as a part of its railroad, on lands over which it has acquired the right-of-way for its road, do not, though firmly imbedded in the earth, become the property of the owner of the lands as a part of the realty and, on the purpose of completing the railroad being abandoned, the company may remove such structures as personal property."

The courts are extremely liberal in their interpretation of what constitutes "trade fixtures" and in their application of the rights of the tenant to remove the same at the end of his term. It is observed by Ewell on Fixtures, page 157, that:

> "In determining what is a trade within the meaning of the rule in question, the word is not used in a strict and literal signification but in a very liberal sense, and has been extended to include various occupations having an affinity or resemblance to trade, though hardly included in the usual definitions of that term."

The references above noted are made by way of explanation to the observations of the court in the case of Wittenmeyer v. The Board of Education of Brooklyn, Ohio, 10 C. C., 119, wherein it is held:

> "A building erected upon leased land by a lessee for use as a school house is, as to the right of removal, governed by the same rules of law which govern in the case of buildings erected by a lessee for the purposes of trade."

Without attempting to quote in full the remarks of the court in this case, it is sufficient to say that it is there held that the board of education, as lessees, had the right to remove a school building which it had erected upon the premises leased because the same, as a trade fixture, came within that exception to the general law.

I therefore hold, upon the authority of this case, that under the agreement aforesaid the board of education may remove said building, but if it desires to dispose of the same at public sale, such sale and removal should be made before it surrenders the land to the lessor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PRINCIPAL OR TEACHER IN PUBLIC SCHOOL IS EMPLOYED FROM DATE OF ACCEPTANCE OF APPOINTMENT BY BOARD AND FOR FULL TERM FOR WHICH SUCH APPOINTMENT IS MADE—CANNOT THEN ACT AS SALES AGENT FOR SCHOOL TEXT BOOKS WHICH ARE FILED WITH SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

A principal or teacher in a public school is employed within the meaning of the provision of section 7718, G. C., from the date of his acceptance of his appointment by the board of education of the school district and for the full term for which such appointment is made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 18, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Under Sec. 7718, of the General Code, no superintendent, supervisor, principal or teacher employed by any board of education in the state shall act as sales agent for any firm or corporation whose school text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction as provided by law.
> "Query: As applied to this section, is a teacher or principal who was hired in June, but whose services are to begin September 1st following, considered as an employe of the board of education from the date on which he was hired to September 1st?
> "In other words, is a teacher or principal considered as 'employed' only during the months for which he is paid to teach or is he also considered as 'employed' during the interregnum from the date on which his contract is made to the date when his services actually begin?"

Section 7718, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 447, provides as follows:

> "A superintendent, supervisor, principal or teacher employed by any board of education in the state shall not act as sales agent, either directly or indirectly, for any person, firm or corporation whose school text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction as provided by law, or for school apparatus or equipment of any kind for use in the public schools of the state. A violation of this provision shall work a forfeiture of their certificates to teach in the public schools of Ohio."

Under provision of section 7690, G. C., each board of education may appoint a superintendent of the public schools of its district and fix his salary. Section 7702, G. C., provides in part:

> "The board of education in each city school district at a regular meeting, between May 1st and August 31st, shall appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than five school years, beginning within four months of such appointment and ending on the 31st day of August."

Section 7703, G. C., provides that:

> "Upon his acceptance of the appointment, such superintendent, subject to the approval and confirmation of the board, may appoint all the teachers, and for cause suspend any person thus appointed until the board or a committee thereof considers such suspension, but no one shall be dismissed by the board except as provided in section 7701."

This section further provides that any city board of education, upon a three-fourths vote of its full membership, may re-employ any teacher whom the superintendent refuses to appoint.

Section 7701, G. C., provides that each board may dismiss any appointee or teacher for inefficiency, neglect of duty, immorality or improper conduct, but no teacher shall be dismissed by a board unless the charges are first reduced to writing and an opportunity be first given for defense before the board, or a committee thereof, and a majority of the full membership of the board vote upon roll call in favor of such dismissal.

Section 7705, G. C., 104 O. L., 133, provides:

> "The board of education of each village and rural school district, shall employ the teachers of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than three school years, to begin within four months of the date of appointment. The local board shall employ no teacher for any school unless such teacher is nominated therefor by the district superintendent of the supervision district in which such school is located except by a majority vote. In all high schools and consolidated schools one of the teachers shall be designated by the board as principal and shall be the administrative head of such school."

Section 7699, G. C., provides:

> "Upon the appointment of any person to any position under the control of the board of education, the clerk promptly must notify such person verbally or in writing of his appointment, the conditions thereof, and request and secure from him within a reasonable time to be determined by the board, his acceptance or rejection of such appointment. An acceptance of it within the time thus determined shall constitute a contract binding both parties thereto until such time as it may be dissolved, expires, or the appointee be dismissed for cause."

It seems clear to my mind that under the provisions of section 7699, G. C., taken in connection with the above provisions of the statutes authorizing the employment of a superintendent, principal or teacher, such employment dates from the acceptance of the appointment of such superintendent, principal or teacher by the board of education of the school district and under the provision of section 7718, G. C., as above quoted, said superintendent, principal or teacher may not act as a sales agent, either directly or indirectly, for any person, firm or corporation whose school text books are filed with the superintendent of public instruction, as provided by law, or for school apparatus or equipment of any kind for use in the public schools of the state during such employment.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your question, that a principal or teacher is employed within the meaning of the provision of said section 7718, G. C., from the date of his acceptance of his appointment by the board of education of the school district and for the full term for which such appointment is made.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—ALLOWANCE OF BILLS FOR TREATMENT OF RABIES IS DISCRETIONARY WITH SUCH BOARD.

The allowance of an account presented to a board of county commissioners under the provisions of section 5852, G. C., is discretionary with said board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1915.

HON. JOHN M. MARKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion relative to the payment of a bill for medical services incurred on account of being bitten by a dog afflicted with rabies, your letter being as follows:

> "Sometime ago a man and his children, living in this county, were bitten by a dog afflicted with rabies. They took treatment at Columbus and sometime ago presented to the commissioners of this county bills for said treatment aggregating $500.00. These bills are presented under sections 5851 and 5852 of the General Code of Ohio.
> "Upon the authority of Attorney General Hogan's opinion as found at page 1163 of the attorney general's report of the year 1913, I have advised the commissioners that the question of payment of these bills is purely discretionary with them. The parties presenting the bills are reputed to be worth from ten to fifteen thousand dollars.
> "Kindly advise me at once whether they are within their rights in refusing to pay these bills."

Section 5852 of the General Code, which provides for the payment of the claims to which you refer, is as follows:

> "The county commissioners not later than the third regular meeting, after it is so presented, shall examine such account, and, if found in whole or part correct and just, may order the payment thereof in whole or in part, out of the general fund of the county; but a person shall not receive for one injury a sum exceeding five hundred dollars."

The section above quoted is a part of an act passed April 9, 1908, entitled

"An act to provide for the protection of persons injured by a mad dog" and is found in Vol. 99, O. L., page 82. That portion of the original act which now appears in the section above quoted provided as follows:

> "The county commissioners shall within a reasonable time, and not later than the third regular meeting after the presentation of said verified account as aforesaid, examine the same, and, if found in whole or in part correct and just, may in their discretion order the payment thereof, or such parts as they may have found in their judgment correct and just, to be paid out of the general fund of the county; but no person shall receive for any one injury under this act a sum exceeding five hundred dollars."

In your letter you state that upon the authority of Attorney General Hogan's opinion, found at page 1163 of the attorney general's report of the year 1913, you have advised the commissioners that the payments of the bills in the case under consideration is purely discretionary.

It is sufficient to say that I am in harmony with said opinion and hold that the payment of such claims, under the provision of said section 5852 as above quoted, is discretionary with the board of county commissioners. This conclusion is reached because: (1) The language of said section 5852 authorizing such payment is ordinarily to be construed as permissive, and (2) because said law in its original form, as hereinbefore quoted, expressly provided that the commissioners "in their discretion" may order the payment thereof. The revision of this law by the codifying commission and the omission of the phrase just quoted, when considered in connection with the law as it now stands, does not make it manifest that the legislature intended any change in its application or construction in this regard.

It follows, therefore, under the familiar rules of interpretation of revised laws that the same construction must be given this law now as obtained before its revision. State v. Wiehle, 78 O. S., 41, and cases there cited.

Upon these considerations I therefore hold that the payment of claims under section 5852, supra, is within the discretion of the board of county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—COMPULSORY EDUCATION LAW—BOY BETWEEN AGES OF FOURTEEN YEARS AND FIFTEEN YEARS WHO HAS PASSED FIFTH GRADE AND WHO NEGLECTS TO ATTEND SCHOOL BUT INSTEAD ASSISTS HIS FATHER ON FARM SHOULD BE DISPOSED OF UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 7773, G. C.—MATTER ADJUSTED OUT OF COURT IF POSSIBLE.

Case of boy between age of fourteen and fifteen years who has passed the fifth grade, and who neglects to attend school, but instead thereof assists his father on the farm, should be disposed of under provisions of section 7773, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 233. A case of the kind under consideration should only be taken into the courts as a last resort.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion on the question of compulsory attendance at school of a boy between the ages of fourteen and fifteen years, under conditions described in your letter, which is as follows:

> "A boy who is between the ages of fourteen and fifteen years is helping his father on his farm. Can the boy, who has completed the work in the fifth grade, be compelled to go to school?
> "Can a fine or prison sentence be imposed upon either the father or the boy for refusing to attend school?
> "If no fine can be imposed upon either father or son, what means could be adopted to force the son to go to school?"

Section 7768, of the General Code, 103 O. L., 902, is as follows:

> "Every child between the ages of eight and fifteen years, if a male, or between the ages of eight and sixteen years, if a female, and every male child between the ages of fifteen and sixteen not engaged in some regular employment, who is an habitual truant from school, or who absents itself habitually from school, or who, while in attendance at any public, private or parochial school, is incorrigible, vicious or immoral in conduct, or who habitually wanders about the streets and public places during school hours having no business or lawful occupation, or violates any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed a delinquent child, and shall be subject to the provisions of law relating to delinquent children."

The section just quoted fixes the status of truants as delinquent children and brings them within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. However, in my mind, in the absence of a showing to the effect that the boy referred to rebelled against attending school, it would do violence to reason to assume that he was in any sense a truant as contemplated by the statute, especially when we find him at home assisting his father on the farm. In order to bring the matter under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as suggested by you personally, it would be necessary to make a showing of delinquency, and then follow up that feature of the case by showing that the delinquency was aided, caused, abetted, induced, encouraged or contributed to by the father, before he could be held liable therefor in juvenile court.

However, if the child be willing to attend school and he is prevented from so doing by the father, then complaint made to the juvenile court under the provisions of section 1654 of the General Code, on the ground that such action tended to cause delinquency, would in all probability result in an order of the court which would result in the school attendance required by section 7763 of the General Code, 104 O. L., 232, which is as follows:

> "Every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of eight and fifteen years of age if a male, and sixteen years of age, if a female, must send such child to a public, private or parochial school, for the full time that the school attended is in session, which shall in no case be for less than twenty-eight weeks. Such attendance must begin within the first week of the school term, unless the child is excused therefrom by the superintendent of the public schools, or by the principal of the private or parochial school, upon satisfactory showing either that the bodily or mental condition of the child does not permit of its attendance at school, or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such superintendent or clerk, as the case may be, to teach the branches named in the next preceding section.''

My predecessor, Mr. Hogan, dealt with this same question in opinion No. 611, to be found in volume II of the 1913 report of the attorney general, at page 1588, which opinion was addressed to Hon. David H. James, city solicitor, Martins Ferry, Ohio, and I suggest that it be considered by you in connection with the question under consideration.

In the opinion referred to Mr. Hogan directed attention to section 12983 of the General Code, which is a general provision relative to violations of the compulsory education law, and the reference is pertinent here in view of the fact that no penalty is provided in section 12977 which will apply to a boy who is between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, and, as in this case, has passed a satisfactory fifth grade test.

''On the request of the superintendent of schools or the board of education or when it otherwise comes to his notice, the truant officer shall examine into any case of truancy within his district, and warn the truant and his parents, guardian or other person in charge, in writing, of the final consequence of truancy if persisted in. When any child between the age of eight and fifteen years, or between the ages of fifteen and sixteen years, in violation of the provisions of this chapter is not regularly employed and is not attending school, the truant officer shall notify the parent, guardian or other person in charge of such child, of the fact, and require such parent, guardian or other person in charge, to cause the child to attend some recognized school within two days from the date of the notice; and it shall be the duty of the parent, guardian or other person in charge of the child so to cause its attendance at some recognized school. Upon failure to do so, the truant officer shall make complaint against the parent, guardian or other person in charge of the child, in any court of competent jurisdiction in the city, village or rural district in which the offense occurred for such failure.''

It is my opinion in the case presented that every effort should be exerted to the end of adjusting the matter without resorting to the courts, and if unable to induce the attendance of the boy at school, action may be taken as provided in section 7773, G. C., as amended supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—SECRETARY APPOINTED UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 871-14, G. C.—BEING ONE OF TWO SECRETARIES, IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE OF CIVIL SERVICE—MAY BE REMOVED AT PLEASURE OF INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

A secretary appointed by the industrial commission under the provisions of section 871-14, G. C., 103 O. L., 99, and being one of the two secretaries in the unclassified service as provided by paragraph 8 of section 486-8, G. C., 106 O. L., 405, may be removed by said commission at its pleasure.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 25, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of October 22d, in which you make the following statement and inquiry:

> "Would like your opinion on the status of Lloyd Teeters, assistant secretary to our commission. Mr. Teeters has held this position for a year or so, having been appointed by the old board. Do we have to take action to remove him if we so desire, or is his position such that automatically under the new law it will be necessary to reappoint or fill. Under the new civil service law his position is exempt."

The authority to appoint and to remove the secretary in question is found in section 14 of the act creating the industrial commission of Ohio, found on page 95, et seq., Vol. 103, O. L. Said section is now section 871-14, G. C., and provides as follows:

> "The commission is authorized and empowered to employ, promote and remove a secretary, or secretaries, deputies, clerks, stenographers, and other assistants, as needed; to fix their compensation, and to assign to them their duties. Such employments and compensation to be first approved by the governor.''

You state in your letter that said secretary is not under the protection of the civil service law and in connection with that statement I learn from you further that he is one of the two secretaries specified in paragraph 8 of section 486-8, 106 O. L., 405, and the position held by him therefore is in the unclassified service. This being so and the law under which he was appointed not fixing any term or tenure of office, there is nothing to limit or qualify its provisions which empower you to appoint, promote and remove a secretary, which in effect makes such appointment and removal a matter subject entirely to your will and pleasure, the appointment, however, being subject to the approval of the governor.

While there is full authority under the statute quoted to authorize you to remove the secretary in question, yet the fact as before observed that no term of service is fixed by law in his case is sufficient in itself to authorize his removal. In other words, the rule would apply which makes the power to remove incident to the power to appoint in cases where no tenure of office is fixed.

I know of no law that automatically or in any other way relates to the position in question except the provisions of the civil service law above quoted.

In answer, therefore, to your inquiries I can only say that said secretary may retain his position until removed by your commission, which removal may be made by you upon your own motion and at your pleasure.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"September 8, 1915.

"Dear Sir:—At a meeting of our board last night we considered the relation of house bill No. 154 to senate bill No. 297, which appear on pages 558 and 500, respectively, of Ohio Laws, 106.

"You will note that the first mentioned act was filed in the office of the secretary of state one day after the other was filed.

"Section 2068, as amended, provides for the advance payment of five dollars each week by patients at the state sanatorium, seemingly intended to those who volunteer to do so.

"Section 1815-13 seems to imply that it is the duty of this board to make collections for the support of all patients, whether received at the institution on voluntary agreement to pay, or upon order to pay after investigation by agents of this board.

"It seems to be very definite from the terms of senate bill No. 297, that the board of state charities cannot receive funds except as provided in sections 1352-5 and 1653, unless you hold that house bill No. 154, because of later legal enactment takes precedence over senate bill No. 297.

"Further, section 1816 seeks to make certain changes in the practice, common for many years, in regard to incidental and other expenses of inmates of state institutions.

"We desire to ascertain from you the following:

"1. Have officers of the state sanatorium the right, or is it their duty to accept payments under section 2068?

"2. If you hold that they have no such right or duty, and inasmuch as it seems desirable in some cases to secure payment in advance, would it be legal or practicable for the treasurer of state to designate some officer of the said institution to act as agent for him in making advance collections each week?

"3. If either of the above are not possible, has the state by certification to the treasurer of state by this board through the office of the auditor of state the right to render bills in advance of service rendered to carry out the provisions of section 2068?

"4. Do you consider the provisions of section 1815-9, in regard to liability for support, to apply to house bill No. 154? If this section does not apply, in what manner can you construe the expression: 'Person legally responsible for his support,' as found in sections 1815-13 and 1815-14?

"5. If house bill No. 154 is construed as amending or repealing certain portions of senate bill No. 297, please set forth as fully as possible the extent to which the latter act repudiates or changes the provisions of the former.

"Inasmuch as these acts are already in effect, but we have not been able to satisfactorily reconcile the same to some of the seeming conflicts either before or at the meeting of the board, it is important that as early a reply as possible be made, consistent with a thorough study of the whole situation.

"Yours very truly,

"H. H. SHIRER, Secretary."

Section 2068 of the General Code, as amended, page 558 of 106 Ohio Laws, is as follows:

"Any citizen of this state of more than seven years of age, suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis in the incipient or early stage, as determined by the superintendent, may be admitted to the sanatorium upon payment in advance of five dollars each week, which charge shall fully cover all expenses for medical treatment, medicine, nursing, board, lodging and laundry. Payment for the support of patients in the sanatorium shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 1815-13, 1815-14, and 1815-15 of the General Code."

Sections 1815-13, 1815-14 and 1815-15, which are supplemental provisions to be found on page 559 of 106 Ohio Laws, are as follows:

"Sec. 1815-13. It shall be the duty of the board of state charities to make collections for the support of patients at the Ohio state sanatorium. When the superintendent of the Ohio state sanatorium shall report to the board of state charities that an applicant for admission to or an inmate of that institution or any person legally responsible for his support is not financially able to pay the amount fixed by section 2068 of the General Code, it shall be the duty of the board of state charities by its authorized agents to make a thorough investigation as is provided by law for such investigations in other institutions.

"Sec. 1815-14. If after the investigation provided in the next preceding section it shall be found that said applicant or inmate or any person legally responsible for his support is unable to pay the amount fixed by law, said board of state charities shall determine what amount, if any, said applicant or inmate or any person legally responsible for his support shall pay. The difference between the amount so determined and the amount fixed by section 2068 of the General Code shall be paid by the county in which said applicant or patient has a legal residence. The amount so determined to be paid by the county shall be paid from the poor fund on the order of the county commissioners."

"Sec. 1815-15. No county that is maintaining a county tuberculosis hospital or has joined in the erection or maintenance of a district tuberculosis hospital or has contracted with the proper authorities of a county, district or municipal tuberculosis hospital for the care and treatment of residents of that county suffering from tuberculosis shall be compelled to support patients in the Ohio state sanatorium, but the county commissioners of any such county may agree to support or aid in the support of a resident of that county in the Ohio state sanatorium."

To arrive at a proper solution of the questions propounded it will be necessary to review briefly the history of the law with reference to the duties cast on the board of state charities to investigate as to the financial condition of inmates of benevolent institutions of the state, and also as to the financial condition of those persons liable for their support.

Prior to the enactment of house bill No. 108 (sections 1815 to 1815-10 of the General Code), to be found at page 157 of the 101 O. L., inmates of benevolent institutions were maintained by the state as a general proposition.

House bill 108, referred to above, had for its purpose the inauguration of a plan whereby either the estate of the inmate or other person liable for his support should be charged for said support not to exceed a fixed maximum amount.

Machinery was provided for the carrying out of the purpose of the act by providing that the board of state charities, through its authorized agents, should conduct the necessary investigations so that the information as to the financial conditions of the inmates or persons liable for their support might be available as the basis of an order for payment for support either from the estate of the inmate or by some other person liable for his support. Upon receipt of a copy of the order the proper superintendent was charged with the duty of collecting the amount fixed in the order.

Section 2068 of the General Code, as amended, supra, provides for the payment in advance of five dollars per week as a condition for the admission of a patient to the Ohio state sanatorium, and your first question is as to the right or duty of the officers of the sanatorium to collect the amount stated.

Reference is made to section 1815-13 as amended, supra, and it is observed by you that the section referred to seems to imply that the board of state charities is to make collections for the support of all patients whether received at the institution on voluntary agreement to pay, or upon order to pay after investigation by agents of the board.

Section 2068 of the General Code, as amended, supra, provides, among other things, that "payments for the support of patients in the sanatorium shall be made in accordance with the provisions of sections 1815-13, 1815-14 and 1815-15."

Under the provisions of section 1815-13 of the General Code, supra, it is provided that "it shall be the duty of the board of state charities to make collections for the support of patients at the Ohio state sanatorium," however, the question that suggests itself is when should that duty attach. It seems to be clear that the duty of the board of state charities to act only attaches under the further provisions of the statute which are as follows:

> "When the superintendent of the Ohio state sanatorium shall report to the board of state charities that an applicant for admission to or an inmate of that institution or any person legally responsible for his support is not financially able to pay the amount fixed by section 2068 of the General Code, it shall be the duty of the board of state charities by its authorized agents to make a thorough investigation as is provided by law for such investigations in other institutions."

Upon inquiry I find that the practice is and has been for the managing officer of the sanatorium to make the collection of the amount fixed by statute in cases where the patient is able to pay, and I am of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that so long as the patient applying for admission is financially able to pay and until the superintendent report inability to so pay, that the board of state charities has no function to perform, and that the superintendent has the authority, and it is his duty, to collect in advance the charges stipulated as a weekly charge for the support of a patient.

The answer to your first question obviates the necessity of further consideration of your second and third questions.

Your fourth question is as follows:

> "Do you consider the provisions of section 1815-9, in regard to liability for support, to apply to house bill No. 154? If this section does not apply, in what manner can you construe the expression: 'Person legally responsible for his support,' as found in sections 1815-13 and 1815-14?"

Section 1815-9 of the General Code is as follows:

> "It is the intent of this act that a husband may be held liable for the support of a wife while an inmate of any of said institutions, a wife for a husband, a father or mother for a son or daughter, and a son or daughter, or both, for a father or mother."

In answer to your fourth question it is my opinion that section 1815-9 is to be read in connection with house bill No. 154, the last three paragraphs thereof, namely, sections 1815-13, 1815-14 and 1815-15, being supplements to section 1815 of the General Code. Section 1815-9 of the General Code, supra, provides a guide for the state board of charities in fixing the responsibility of the proper persons in such cases as an investigation may be made necessary for that purpose, and in the present case such a condition would only arise when the superintendent of the sanatorium made the report provided for in section 1815-13 of the General Code, supra.

Your Mr. Shirer has asked that the fifth question in your letter be withdrawn, hence no attention will be given the same.

It is my opinion, therefore, that under section 2068 of the General Code, as amended, supra, patients may be admitted to the Ohio state sanatorium and maintained there on payment in advance of five dollars per week, and in case the superintendent of the sanatorium reports to the board of state charities that an inmate or an applicant for admission, or anyone legally responsible for his support is not financially able to pay the amount fixed by law, it then becomes the duty of the board to investigate, as provided in section 1815-13 of the General Code, supra. Sections 1815-13 and 1815-14 of the General Code are to be read in connection with section 1815-9 of the General Code, supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION—FORM OF BOND—DEPUTY STATE WARDENS—SPECIAL WARDENS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. JOHN C. SPEAKS, Chief Warden, Fish & Game Department, Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to this department a form of bond, with the request that I advise you as to certain language therein.

In answering your letter I have deemed it more proper to prescribe a form of bond to be used under sections 1391 and 1392, of the General Code (106 O. L., 170), for deputy state wardens and special wardens.

Section 1391, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The board of agriculture shall appoint a chief warden and such number of deputy state wardens and special wardens as it deems necessary. The chief warden and each deputy state warden shall hold his office for a term of two years unless sooner removed by the board. Each special warden shall have the same powers and perform the same duties as a deputy state warden."

Section 1392, G. C., provides as follows:

> "Before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, each warden shall give bond to the state; the chief warden in the sum of two thousand dollars, each deputy state warden in the sum of two hundred dollars, and each special warden in the sum of five hundred dollars, with two or more sureties approved by the board of agriculture, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. Such bond, with the approval of the board and the oath of office indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the board and kept in its office."

The following form of bond will comply with the statutes foregoing quoted:

"'DEPUTY STATE WARDEN'S BOND.

"(Section 1392, 106 O. L., 170.)

"KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That we,---------- ---------- as principal, and ---------- ---------- ---------- as sureties, are held and firmly bound unto the STATE OF OHIO in the penal sum of two hundred dollars ($200.00), for the payment of which well and truly to be made we jointly and severally bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns.

"Signed by the said---------- as principal and by the said---------- ---------- as sureties, and their seals attached, this -------- day of ----------, 19---.

"The condition of the above obligation is such that, whereas, the said ---------- ----------has been duly appointed by the board of agriculture of Ohio under the provisions of section 1391, of the General Code of Ohio, a deputy state warden for a term of two years, commencing on the -------- day of----------, 19---.

"NOW, THEREFORE, if the above named---------- shall faithfully perform his duties as such deputy state warden, then this obligation to be void, otherwise, to be and remain in full force and virtue in law.

----------(Seal)
Principal.
----------(Seal)
----------(Seal)
----------(Seal)
Sureties.

Approved: ----------19---.

Board of Agriculture."

"OATH OF OFFICE OF DEPUTY STATE WARDEN

"I, ----------
do solemnly swear (affirm) that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Ohio, and will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of deputy state warden during my continuance in office to the best of my skill and ability.

"Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence this ---------- day of ----------, 19---.

(Title of officer.)"

"The bond must be approved by the state board of agriculture. If personal bond is given there must be at least two sureties so approved.

"If surety company bond is given, the authority of the agent to sign such bond must be attached thereto, and likewise the last financial statement of the surety company."

The above bond is prescribed for the deputy state warden. If a special warden is appointed, the amount of the bond should be $500.00, and the condition of such bond should read as follows:

"The condition of the above obligation is such that, whereas, the above named ----------has been duly appointed by the board of agriculture of Ohio under the provisions of section 1391, of the General Code of Ohio, a special warden,

"NOW, THEREFORE, if the above named---------- ----------shall faithfully perform his duties as such special warden, then this obligation to be void, otherwise to be and remain in force and virtue in law."

and the oath of office should be as follows:

"OATH OF OFFICE OF SPECIAL WARDEN

"I, ---------- do solemnly swear (affirm) that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of Ohio, and will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of special warden during my continuance in office to the best of my skill and ability."

The rest of the two bonds, except as otherwise mentioned, is identical.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—COMPENSATION PAID TO EMPLOYES OR THEIR DEPENDENTS—SECTION 41, OF ACT, NOT ONLY PROHIBITS ATTACHMENT OF COMPENSATION DUE EMPLOYE BY HIS CREDITORS, BUT ALSO PREVENTS VOLUNTARILY ASSIGNING HIS RIGHT TO RECEIVE COMPENSATION TO ANOTHER—DUPLICATE WARRANTS CAN ONLY BE ISSUED TO INJURED EMPLOYE.

1. An employe entitled to compensation from the state insurance fund cannot assign his right to receive such compensation.

2. The industrial commission of Ohio cannot issue duplicate warrants in payment of compensation out of the state insurance fund to any person other than the injured employe or the dependents of a killed employe.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This will acknowledge receipt of a communication under date of October 20, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Section 41 of the workmen's compensation act provides as follows:
> " 'Compensation before payment shall be exempt from all claims or creditors and from any attachment or execution, and shall be paid only to such employes or their dependents.'
> "On the 11th day of August, 1913, the state liability board of awards made an award amounting to the sum of $10.29 to one John Gordan. Prior to this date, it was necessary that Mr. Gordan go to New York city. He was without funds, and his employer paid to him a sum of money equivalent to the award made in his claim by the liability board of awards. The employer took from this employe a receipt or assignment, which reads as follows:
> " 'August 11th, 1913.
> " 'Received from B. F. Smith, $10.29, payment in full.'
> "Warrant covering the award made by the commission was forwarded to the employer in order that he might have same endorsed by the claimant so that it could be cashed by him. However, he has been unable to locate Mr. Gordan, and has made application to the commission for the issuance of another warrant to replace the one sent him.
> "Your opinion is desired as to whether, in view of the provisions of section 41 above quoted, the commission can properly issue a duplicate warrant in favor of the employer, in the same amount as the warrant issued in this case in favor of the claimant."

The question which you propound is as to whether, in view of the provisions of section 41 of the workman's compensation law, or section 1465-88, G. C., the commission can properly issue a duplicate warrant in favor of the employer in the same amount as the warrant issued in this case in favor of the claimant.

I beg to call your attention to section 21 of the workman's compensation law, or section 1465-68 of the General Code, in which the following language is used, referring particularly to the second paragraph of this section:

*"Every employe mentioned in subdivision two of section fourteen hereof, who is injured, and the dependents of such as are killed in the course of employment, * * * shall be entitled to receive, either directly from his employer as provided in section twenty-two hereof, or from the state insurance fund, such compensation for loss sustained on account of such injury or death."*

I also refer to section 25 of the workmen's compensation law, or section 1465-72, G. C., from which the following is quoted:

"The state liability board of awards shall disburse the state insurance fund to such employes of employers as have paid into said fund the premiums applicable to the classes to which they belong, who have been injured in the course of their employment."

These sections clearly set forth the intent and spirit of the workmen's compensation law in that it would appear from the reading of the two sections above referred to that it was the purpose and intent of the legislature, in the enactment of this law, to have compensation paid only to the injured employe or to the dependents of a killed employe. Nowhere can it be found in this statute where any other person or persons are authorized to receive the benefits under the workmen's compensation law other than the employe or his dependents in case he is killed.

Section 41 of the workmen's compensation law, section 1465-88, G. C., provides as follows:

"Compensation before payment shall be exempt from all claims or creditors and from any attachment or execution, and shall be paid only to such employes or their dependents."

The language used in section 41 is clear, plain and explicit and provides that compensation shall be paid only to such employes or their dependents.

In view of section 41, and the sections referred to above, I am constrained to the belief that compensation can be paid only to the injured employe himself or to his dependents in case he is killed.

I call your attention to the case of in re Berg, claim No. 47,170, which was decided by the industrial commission of Ohio on August 24th, 1914, containing a construction and interpretation of section 41, the section in question in your inquiry. This case is reported in 6 N. C. C. A., page 1238. The commission, in passing upon section 41, used the following language:

"This section seems to not only prohibit the attachment of compensation due to an injured employe by his creditors, but to prevent the applicant from voluntarily assigning his right to receive compensation to another. The provision with reference to the payment of compensation, that it shall be paid only to such employes or their dependents, would seem to preclude the commission from authorizing such payment even in cases in which voluntary assignment of their rights are made by injured employes. We feel there is no doubt about the construction we have given this section being the correct one. The assignment of claimant's right to Mrs. Bevington will not be recognized, but compensation due to claimant will be paid direct to him, as the statute directs."

I concur with your commission in its interpretation of section 41, supra. My conclusion, therefore, is that the commission does not have authority to issue a duplicate warrant in payment of compensation to any person other than to the injured employe.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—HAS AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER PUPILS IN ANY GRADE FROM ONE SUBDISTRICT SCHOOL TO ADJOINING SUBDISTRICT SCHOOL WITHIN SAID RURAL DISTRICT SUBJECT TO PROVISIONS OF SECTIONS 7731, G. C., AND 7735, G. C.—RIGHT OF BOARD TO ASSIGN EIGHTH GRADE PUPILS TO ADJOINING SCHOOL—PUPILS LIVING MORE THAN ONE AND A HALF MILES CANNOT DEMAND SUCH GRADE BE MAINTAINED IN NEARER SCHOOL—RIGHT OF PUPILS WHO LIVE MORE THAN TWO MILES—WHEN TRANSPORTATION DEMANDED, PUPILS MAY NOT DEMAND THAT SAID GRADE BE MAINTAINED IN SUBDISTRICT—SECTION 7731-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 496, DOES NOT REPEAL BY IMPLICATION SECTION 7731, G. C., 104 O. L., 140.

Under the provisions of section 7684, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., the board of education of a rural school district has authority, in the exercise of its discretion, to transfer all the pupils in any grade from one subdistrict school to an adjoining subdistrict school within said rural district by giving sufficient notice to said pupils of such assignment, subject, however, to the provision of the first part of section 7731, G. C., and to the further provisions of section 7735, G. C. If, however, said board of education, acting under authority of section 7731, G. C., provides transportation for all of the pupils affected by such order of assignment, said pupils may not exercise the right conferred by the provisions of section 7735, G. C.

Where the board of education of a rural school district assigns the pupils of the eighth grade in one school to the same grade in an adjoining school within said rural school district the pupils of said grade, living more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned, have not the right to demand that such grade be maintained in the school nearer to them in their own subdistrict, but said pupils may exercise the right conferred by the provisions of section 7735, G. C., unless transportation be provided by the board of education to the school to which said pupils have been assigned.

If any of the pupils of said grade live more than two miles from the school to which they are assigned, section 7731, G. C., makes it mandatory on said board of education to furnish transportation for such pupils.

If transportation is provided for the pupils of said grade said pupils may not demand that said grade be maintained in the school in the subdistrict in which they reside.

The provisions of section 7731-1, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 496, do not repeal by implication the provision of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, which requires that where transportation is provided the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. GEORGE C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of October 15th you state that in one of the rural school districts of your county the board of education of said district has discontinued the first four grades in one of the subdistrict schools and the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades in the school in the adjoining subdistrict; that the pupils in said first four grades in the former school have been assigned to the latter school and the pupils in the last four grades of the latter school have been assigned to the former school, and that transportation has been provided for said pupils in accordance with such assignment, the purpose being to give the teacher in each of said subdistrict schools four grades.

You further state that in another rural school district the board of education of such district has discontinued the eighth grade in one of the subdistrict schools and has assigned the pupils of such grade to a consolidated school in an adjoining subdistrict, each teacher in said consolidated school having charge of only two grades.

You request my opinion on several questions which may be stated as follows:

> "1. Had the board of education of the rural school district, first above referred to, authority to make such an assignment of the pupils residing in the subdistricts under its control?
> "2. In the case in which the pupils of the eighth grade in one school were assigned to the same grade in an adjoining consolidated school, have those pupils of said grade living more than one and one-half miles from said consolidated school the right to demand that said grade be maintained for them in the school nearer to them in their own district or may they attend the nearest school in another school district under provision of section 7735, G. C.?
> "3. If any of the pupils of said grade live more than two miles from the school to which they have been assigned, is it mandatory on said board of education to furnish transportation for such pupils?
> "4. May said pupils demand that an eighth grade be maintained in the school in the subdistrict in which they reside, even though transportation should be provided for them?
> "5. Do the provisions of section 7731-1, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 496, repeal by implication the provision of section 7731, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 140, which requires that where transportation is provided, the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road?"

Preliminary to a consideration of the questions submitted by you I wish to note that section 4716, G. C., was repealed by the act of the general assembly as found in 104 O. L., 133-145, which became effective May 20, 1914. This statute provided in part as follows:

> "The division of township school districts into subdistricts as they exist shall continue and be recognized for the purpose of school attendance, but the board of education may increase or diminish the number or change the boundaries of the subdistricts at any regular meeting."

It must be observed, however, that while these provisions of section 4716, G. C., were not re-enacted, section 7646, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 225, is still in force and provides:

> "The board of education of each rural school district shall establish and maintain at least one elementary school in each subdistrict under its control, unless transportation is furnished to the pupils thereof as provided by law."

Section 7644, G. C., provides:

> "Each board of education shall establish a sufficient number of elementary schools to provide for the free education of the youth of school age within the district under its control, at such places as will be most convenient for the attendance of the largest number thereof. Every elementary day school so established shall continue not less than thirty-two nor more than forty weeks in each school year. All the elementary schools within the same school district shall be so continued."

It seems clear, therefore, that while the provisions of section 4716, G. C., requiring that the subdistricts of a township school district (now known as rural school districts under provision of section 4735, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138), as established at the time said section as amended in 97 O. L., 343, became effective, be continued and recognized for the purpose of school attendance, but authorizing the board of education of such township district to increase or diminish the number or change the boundaries of the subdistricts at any regular meeting, are no longer in force, it was the intention of the legislature in re-enacting the provisions of section 7646, G. C., as above quoted, that the subdistricts of a township district as established under authority of section 7644, G. C., prior to the enactment of the so-called new school code in 1914, should continue as subdistricts or subdivisions of the rural school district and be recognized for the purpose of school attendance, until such time as the schools in such subdistricts should be centralized under provision of section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and as supplemented in 106 O. L., 444, or suspended by the board of education of such rural school district in the exercise of its discretion under provision of the first part of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and as again amended in 106 O. L., 396; or until such school or schools should be suspended by said local board of education under the mandatory provision of the latter part of said section 7730, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., when the average daily attendance for the preceding year was below twelve, or upon the order of the county board of education directing such suspension under said provision of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 396, when the average daily attendance for the preceding year has been below ten.

Section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., further provides that:

> "Any suspended school as herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the voters of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age."

The term "suspended district" as above used clearly refers to the subdistrict of the rural school district and is evidence, I think, of the legislative intent hereinbefore referred to.

It should be observed in this connection that since the new school code has been in force the county board of education has had authority, under provisions of section 4736, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 138, and as carried into section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, to change district lines and transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another, and under provision of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, the county board may create a new school district from one or more rural or village school districts or parts thereof. In making such changes the county board is not confined to the boundary lines of subdistricts heretofore established.

However, until such changes have been made in the manner above set forth, either by the local board of education or by the county board, it seems clear that the subdistricts of the rural school district as established by the board of education of said rural district under provision of section 7644, G. C., are still recognized as the basis in determining the residence of pupils for the purpose of school attendance.

Coming now to a consideration of your first question it is necessary to determine the proper construction to be given to the provisions of section 7684, G. C., having in mind the provisions of sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., as above quoted.

Section 7684, G. C., provides:

> "Boards of education may make such an assignment of the youth of their respective district to the schools established by them as in their opinion best will promote the interests of education in their districts."

In view of the provisions of section 4726, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 139, and section 4726-1, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 442, authorizing the centralization of schools in the manner therein provided, and in view of the provisions of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and as again amended in 106 O. L., 398, authorizing the suspension of any or all of the schools of a rural or village district and making such suspension compulsory under the conditions therein provided in so far as the local board of education is concerned, taken in connection with the provisions of sections 4735-1 and 4735-2, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 138, authorizing the dissolution of a rural school district in the manner prescribed by said sections, it seems clear that it was the intention of the legislature in the enactment of the so-called new school code to give ample authority to county boards of education to change district lines and to combine territory, and to local boards of education to combine the schools of their respective districts and to assign the pupils of said districts to said schools as combined or as centralized in the manner hereinbefore provided, to the end that said schools may be standardized and that educational advantages may be made as nearly uniform as possible throughout the state.

The provisions of section 7684, G. C., as well as the provisions of sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., must be so construed as to give effect to said legislative intent.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your first question that, under the provisions of said section 7684, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of said sections 7644 and 7646, G. C., the board of education of the rural school district first referred to in your inquiry had authority in the exercise of its discretion to transfer all the pupils of any grade from one subdistrict school to an adjoining subdistrict school within said rural district, by giving sufficient notice to said pupils of such assignment, subject however to the provisions of section 7735, G. C., that:

> "When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer school in the same district, or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school," and the further provision of section 7731, G. C.:

> "In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school."

Section 7731, G. C., further provides that:

> "The transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house, by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education."

Inasmuch, however, as the board of education of said rural school district, acting under authority of section 7731, G. C., provided transportation for all of the pupils affected by this order of assignment, I do not think any of said pupils could exercise the right conferred by the provision of section 7735, G. C., as above quoted.

I am of the opinion, however, in answer to your second question that while the eighth grade pupils, therein referred to, living more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they were assigned, would not have the right to demand that such grade be maintained in the school nearer to them in their own subdistrict, nevertheless said pupils may exercise the right conferred by the above provision of section 7735, G. C., unless transportation be provided by the board of education to the school to which said pupils have been assigned.

From what has already been said it follows that if any of the pupils of said grade live more than two miles from the school to which they have been assigned, section 7731, G. C., makes it mandatory on said board of education to furnish transportation for such pupils. Your third question must, therefore, be answered in the affirmative.

If transportation is provided for the pupils of said eighth grade, it follows from my holding in answer to your first question that said pupils may not demand that said grade be maintained in the school in the subdistrict in which they reside and this is especially true in view of the provisions of the first part of section 7730, G. C., as found in both of its amended forms, authorizing said board of education in the exercise of its discretion to suspend all of the grades of said subdistrict school and requiring said board, in case of such suspension, to provide transportation for the pupils of such school to another school in the district or to a school in another district. I am of the opinion, therefore, that your fourth question must be answered in the negative.

Your fifth question calls for a proper construction of that part of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, which provides that:

> "When transportation of pupils is provided, the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road," taken in connection with the supplement to said section as found in 106 O. L., 496, which provides:

> "Sec. 7731-1. The boards of education of city, village or rural school districts may by resolution designate certain places as depots from which to gather children for transportation to school, when such districts provide transportation. The places designated as depots shall be provided with a shelter and be made comfortable during cold and stormy weather. Such depots shall in no case be more than one and one-half miles from any home having children within such district."

As I view it there is nothing in the provisions of section 7731-1, G. C., which in any way contradicts or is inconsistent with the above provision of section 7731, G. C.

The effect of the provision of section 7731-1, G. C., is to merely give to the board of education of a school district, in carrying out the mandatory provision of section 7731, G. C., the right, in the exercise of its discretion, to establish depots at certain points along the route of transportation for shelter for the pupils during cold or stormy weather while waiting for the conveyance.

The provision of said section 7731-1, G. C., that:

"Such depots shall in no case be more than one and one-half miles from any home having children within such district," fixes the maximum distance as a condition to the establishment of such depots and in no way modifies the above provision of section 7731, G. C.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your fifth question, that the provisions of said section 7731-1, G. C., do not repeal by implication the above provision of said section 7731, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO LEVY TAX FOR ANY PURPOSE—NOR HAS SAID BOARD AUTHORITY TO BORROW MONEY TO PAY TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS.

A county board of education has no authority in law to levy a tax for any purpose and may not, therefore, borrow money under section 5656, G. C., for the purpose of paying for the transportation of pupils, furnished by said county board under provision of the latter part of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of October 21st, which is as follows:

"Our county board of education has asked me to submit to you, for your opinion, the following question:

"Has a county board of education authority to borrow money for the purpose of paying for the transportation of pupils to school where the local board has refused both to transport such children and to pay for the same?

"Our county board of education at the beginning of the current school year entered into a contract for the transportation of certain children of school age living more than two miles from the nearest school. This contract was not made until after the local board had refused to haul such children to school, and now when there is one month's pay due the persons who have been hauling these children, the local board refuses to take any steps towards the payment of the sums due for transportation, and the question is now up to the county board as to whether they have the right to borrow money, not having any funds on hands for that purpose, to pay the persons whom they have employed to transport these children or whether they should bring suit in mandamus to compel the local board to pay these charges.

"The latter part of section 7731 provides that:

" 'When local boards of education neglect or refuse to provide transportation for pupils, the county board of education shall provide such transportation and the cost thereof shall be charged against the local school district.'

"Your department has already held in opinion No. 1226 and in a letter to me of July 15th, that a board of education may borrow money under section 5656, General Code, to pay for the transportation of pupils, but the opinion in that case related only to the right of a rural district to borrow money for that purpose. It seems to me that a county board would have the right to borrow money under section 5656, G. C., to carry out a contract which the law made it obligatory upon such board to make and, particularly so, since a person who has been hired to transport children to school has been held by your department to be an 'employe of a board of education.' "

In case the board of education of a rural or village school district neglects or refuses to provide transportation for pupils living more than two miles from the nearest school in such rural or village district, as required by the first part of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, which provides that:

> "In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school," the above provision of said statute, as quoted by you, makes it the duty of the board of education of the county school district to provide such transportation and charge the cost thereof against the local school district.

From your statement of facts it appears that after the local board of education of one of the school districts within your county school district refused to provide transportation for those pupils residing in said school district entitled to such transportation under provision of the first part of said section 7731, G. C., the county board of education entered into a contract for the transportation of said pupils and that said local board of education now refuses to take any steps toward the payment to the person or persons furnishing such transportation of the amount due for the first month according to the terms of said contract.

You inquire whether said county board of education may, under authority of section 5656, G. C., borrow money for this purpose.

The only fund under the control of the county board of education is the "county board of education fund" established under authority of section 4744-3, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 143, which section prior to its amendment in 106 O. L., 399, provided as follows:

> "The county auditor when making his semi-annual apportionment of the school funds to the various village and rural school districts shall retain the amounts necessary to pay such portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents as may be certified by the county board. Such amount shall be placed in a separate fund to be known as the 'county board of education fund.' The county board of education shall certify under oath to the state auditor the amount due from the state as its share of the salaries of the county and district superintendents of such county school district for the next six months. Upon receipt by the state auditor of such certificate, he shall draw his warrant upon the state treasurer in favor of the county treasurer for the required amount, which shall be placed by the county auditor in the county board of education fund."

The only change made in said statute as amended in 106 O. L., is to make it the duty of the county auditor, when making his semi-annual apportionment of the school funds to the various village and rural school districts, to retain, in addition to the amount necessary to pay such portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents as may be certified by the county board, the amount necessary for the contingent expense of the county board of education as certified by said board to said county auditor.

That part of said county board of education fund retained by the county auditor out of the school funds of the local school districts for the payment of that portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents, as certified by the county board of education to said county auditor, may only be applied to that purpose.

The contingent fund of said county board of education fund, as above established, may be increased by the surplus transferred from the dog tax fund under provision of section 5653, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 145, and by fees collected from applicants for examination by the board of county school examiners, paid into the county treasury by the clerk of said board and set apart by the county auditor to the credit of the county board of education fund under provision of section 7820, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 104.

If, therefore, there was money in the contingent fund of the county board of education fund available for the purpose mentioned in your inquiry, I am of the opinion that said money could be applied by the county board of education to the discharge of the obligation of said county board according to the terms of its contract with the person or persons furnishing said transportation. It would still be the duty of said county board, however, to charge the amount so expended against the local board of education and require said local board to reimburse the county board of education fund in said amount.

The county board of education has no authority in law to levy a tax for any purpose. The only sources of the county board of education fund as provided by statute are those above set forth.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your question that the county board of education may not borrow money under provision of section 5656, G.

C., for the purpose of paying for the transportation of the pupils, referred to in your inquiry according to the terms of the aforesaid contract.

In opinion No. 612 of this department, rendered to you under date of July 15, 1915, it was held that a contract for furnishing transportation is a contract of employment within the meaning of te latter part of section 5661, G. C., and is therefore exempt from the provision of section 5660, G.C., which requires the filing of a certificate of available funds by a board of education as a condition precedent to the making of a contract, and that the board of education of a rural school district may borrow money under authority of section 5656, G. C., to pay the charge against said district made by the county board of education, in case said county board furnishes transportation to pupils of said district as required by section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, when said local board fails or neglects to furnish such transportation, or to pay for services actually rendered in a contract of employment for this purpose.

In keeping with my former holding I am of the opinion that it would clearly be the duty of the local board of education of the school district, referred to in your inquiry, to reimburse the county board of education fund of your county school district in an amount equal to the sum which the county board would expend from month to month out of its contingent fund for the transportation of the pupils residing in said local school district and entitled to such transportation under the above provision of section 7731, G. C., according to the terms of its contract with the person or persons providing said transportation, if there were money in said fund available for said purpose.

Inasmuch as said county board has no money in said contingent fund available for said purpose, and may not borrow money for said purpose, I am of the opinion that said county board has authority, under provision of the latter part of said section 7731, G. C., to demand from said local board of education payment of the amount now due under the terms of the aforesaid contract and if said local board has funds available for said purpose and refuses to make said payment, or if said local board is without available funds and refuses to borrow money, under authority of said section 5656, G. C., for the purpose of providing the necessary fund to make such payment, said county board of education may, by an action in mandamus compel said local board to take such action as may be necessary to make said payment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—WHEN TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES HAVE ISSUED BONDS OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT CREATED UNDER SECTION 7033, G. C., BEFORE ITS REPEAL AND WHERE ON SEPTEMBER 6, 1915, A PART OF PROCEEDS OF SAID BONDS REMAINS UNEXPENDED, TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ARE AUTHORIZED TO EXPEND SAID BALANCE AS THOUGH SECTIONS 7033 TO 7052, G. C., HAD NOT BEEN REPEALED.

Where township trustees have issued the bonds of a road district created under section 7033, G. C., and where, on the sixth day of September, 1915, a part of the proceeds of such bond issue remains in the treasury unexpended, the right of the township trustees to expend said balance in the same manner as though sections 7033 to 7052, G. C., inclusive, had not been repealed is preserved by the saving provisions of the first part of section 303 of the Cass highway law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. ARCHER L. PHELPS, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 19, 1915, in which you state that in Trumbull county there are ten or twelve townships organized into road districts under the provisions of sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code; that these townships have, by a vote of the electors, authorized and sold bonds for road improvements, running in amounts from twenty-five thousand dollars to one hundred thousand dollars; that prior to September 6, 1915, on which date the Cass highway law went into effect, the majority of these townships had expended the amount of their bond issues, but some of them had not and had balances remaining from said bond issues ranging in amounts from five thousand dollars to twenty thousand dollars. You also call attention to the fact that sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, were repealed by the Cass highway law, and you inquire as to the effect, under the above stated circumstances, of the following provision found in section 303 of the Cass law:

> "* * * wherever under any law repealed by this act any organization now exists for the purpose of improving, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads, such organization shall not be affected by this act and all officers of such organization or organizations shall continue to hold office and exercise the powers heretofore exercised by them. Their successors in office with like powers shall be elected or appointed as heretofore till all contracts and obligations of such organization shall be fully met and complied with and all rights fully conserved. For such purposes such organization or organizations shall have all the rights heretofore exercised by them to hire necessary assistance, clerical or otherwise; to fund or refund any indebtedness and to levy and collect taxes or certify the same for levy and collection; to pay such debts and expenses together with salaries and other expenses of such organization or organizations; but no such organization or organizations shall contract any new obligation or obligations after the taking effect of this act, for the construction or repair of additional road or roads or the maintenance or repair of roads already improved. When all obligations existing at the time of the taking effect of this act have been fully met and complied with, such organization or organizations shall cease to exist and all property or funds of such organization or organizations shall be and become a part of the road fund of the county in which such organization or organizations exist."

You express the view that under the above quoted provision a road district organized under sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, might be prohibited from contracting any new obligation for the construction or repair of roads, remaining in existence solely for the purpose of levying taxes and paying its bonds. Assuming that such is the effect of the language above quoted and found in section 303 of the Cass highway law, you inquire as to whether the provision of section 303, transferring balances in a township road district fund to the county road fund, is constitutional and, if not constitutional, as to what is to be done with these balances.

A discussion of this matter is best introduced by a reference to sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law.

Section 7033, G. C., authorized township trustees to create a township, or that part of a township not included within the limits of a municipal corporation therein situated, or an election precinct or part thereof within a township, into a road district. Subsequent sections provided that the road district so created should be given an appropriate name and that the township trustees might issue bonds of the road district, within a certain limitation as to amount, provided a favorable vote of the electors of the road district be first had upon the question of improving the public ways of the district and of issuing bonds. In the event of a favorable vote, the trustees were not only authorized to issue bonds, but also to employ a competent engineer and necessary assistants, determine the order and manner of the improvement, let contracts for furnishing materials and performing the labor, make payments upon the same and levy taxes to meet the bonds and interest thereon. The trustees were also authorized to designate one of their number to supervise the improvement of each working section of the public ways. Bonds issued by the township trustees were to be signed by them and attested by the township clerk.

It will be noted that the portion of section 303 of the Cass highway law referred to by you and quoted above refers to an "organization" existing "for the purpose of improving, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads." I am unable to say that sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, provided for an organization within the meaning of the provision referred to by you. The work of improving roads under sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, was carried on by the township trustees, and the scheme of road improvement in question did not require or authorize the appointment of road commissioners or the creation of an organization other than the regular township organization consisting of the township trustees, township clerk, etc. To my mind the organization referred to in the language quoted is such an organization as was provided by sections 7095, et seq., of the General Code, as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law. Under those sections not less than two nor more than four adjacent townships were authorized to organize into road districts and a separate and distinct organization for such road districts was required by the statutes. One road commissioner was appointed by the county commissioners for each township, and these road commissioners were required to take an oath of office and give a bond. All proceedings for the improvement of roads within the district, including the issue of bonds, were placed in the hands of the road commissioners appointed by the county commissioners. It will thus be seen that under sections 7095, et seq., of the General Code, an organization was created with its own officers, while under the sections referred to by you no such organization is created, all the duties to be performed in connection with the road districts referred to by you being enjoined upon the regular township officials.

I am therefore of the opinion that the provision of that part of section 303 of the Cass highway law, above quoted, has no application to the state of facts set forth in your letter, and that as to such state of facts the controlling provision is to be found in the first part of section 303 of the Cass highway law, which reads as follows:

> "This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, or right acquired of any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect, under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, enforced, prosecuted or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the commissioners of any road district prior to the time of the taking effect of this act, * * *"

It is my opinion that under the above quoted provision the right of the township trustees, under the circumstances set forth by you, to expend, in accordance with the provisions of sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, as those sections stood prior to September 6, 1915, any balances remaining in the treasury and derived from a bond issue under section 7035, G. C., is fully preserved. It therefore becomes unnecessary to consider, in this connection, the further questions raised by you.

Answering your specific question, it is my opinion that where township trustees have issued the bonds of a road district created under section 7033, G. C., and where, on the sixth day of September, 1915, a part of the proceeds of such bond issue remains in the treasury unexpended, the township trustees are authorized to expend said balance in the same manner as though sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, had not been repealed. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION; BOARD PRODUCING PAVING BRICK BY CONVICT LABOR AND SELLING SAME IN OPEN MARKET—CONVICT LABOR.

The Ohio Board of Administration is prohibited by section 41 of article II of the constitution of Ohio from producing paving brick by convict labor and selling the same in the open market.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under dates of October 4th and October 23rd, 1915, I have two communications from Mr H M Sharp, chief highway engineer, relative to certain matters that have developed in connection with the construction of the Lancaster-New Lexington Road, I. C. H. No. 357, section "I," in Perry county.

In Mr. Sharp's first communication it is stated that the contractors for this road, Beatrice & Kinear, had ordered brick from the state brick plant at Junction City, Ohio, under the control of the Ohio Board of Administration, the brick in question to be used in the construction of this road. It was further stated that, in the opinion of some of the men at the highway department, the purchase price of the brick in question must be paid directly from the highway department to the Ohio Board of Administration and that the contractors could not pay the Ohio Board of Administration directly for the brick. Mr. Sharp further stated that he wished to be advised as to what arrangements the highway department should make with the Ohio Board of Administration in paying for these brick; that the contract was let in the regular way; that, in so far as he was advised, the state highway department was not informed at the time the contract was negotiated with the Ohio Board of Administration for the brick and that the board of administration is asking that the state highway department make payment upon the brick delivered to the contractors.

In his communication of October 23rd Mr. Sharp, in reply to a request for additional information, states that the contract between the state highway department and Beatrice & Kinear requires the contractors to furnish the brick to be used in building the road in question. In other words, the contractors are required to do all the work and furnish all the materials for the road in question, and the consideration named in their contract covers all labor and all materials. Mr. Sharp states that the state highway department has no knowledge of any arrangement, either verbal or written, with the board of administration, for the purchase of brick for the road in question and that the contractors were not given permission to purchase brick from the board of administration upon the understanding that the same should be charged to and paid by the state highway department and that the cost of the brick should be deducted from the contract price, which would otherwise be payable to the contractors. It is further stated that the state highway department has not placed with the board of administration an order for any brick to be delivered to Beatrice & Kinear for use on the road in question.

I am informed by an employe of the Ohio Board of Administration that the board received an order for the brick in question from some inspector or other employe of the state highway department and that an inspector, claiming to represent the state highway department, inspected the brick in question, at the state brick plan at Junction City, Ohio. There is no claim made, however, so far as I have been able to learn, that the state highway commissioner or any of his deputies authorized or knew of the order in question, or directed the inspection made at the plant. I am informed by the contractors that the brick in question, about ninety thousand, have been shipped to and delivered upon the site of the improvement and that the concrete base has been laid, so that the removal of these brick and the delivery of other brick would be a somewhat difficult operation.

The facts above set forth raise a question as to the right of the Ohio Board of Administration to produce, through convict labor, and sell paving brick and other similar materials. A well-nigh identical question was passed upon by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion rendered to the Ohio Board of Administration on August 27, 1913, and found at page 989 of the attorney general's report for that year.

The question passed upon in that opinion was as to the right of the board of administration, under section 2235-1, G. C., to produce and sell, through convict labor, road building and other similar materials in the open market. Section

It was held that this statute, in so far as it sought to authorize the sale of convict-made articles in the open market, was rendered inoperative by the amendment of section 41 of article II of the constitution of Ohio, adopted September 3, 1912, which amendment reads as follows:

> "Laws shall be passed providing for the occupation and employment of prisoners sentenced to the several penal institutions and reformatories in the state; and no person in any such penal institution or reformatory while under sentence thereto, shall be required or allowed to work at any trade, industry or occupation, wherein or whereby his work, or the product or profit of his work, shall be sold, farmed out, contracted or given away; and goods made by persons under sentence to any penal institution or reformatory without the state of Ohio, and such goods made within the state of Ohio, excepting those disposed of to the state or any political subdivision thereof or to any public institution owned, managed or controlled by the state or any political sub-division thereof, shall not be sold within this state unless the same are conspicuously marked 'prison made.' Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the passage of laws providing that convicts may work for, and that the products of their labor may be disposed of to, the state or any political subdivision thereof, or for or to any public institution owned or managed and controlled by the state or any political subdivision thereof."

I concur in the opinion expressed by my predecessor upon the facts presented to him, and it is my opinion that under the constitutional amendment referred to above the Ohio Board of Administration is not authorized to sell in the open market brick manufactured at its plant at Junction City, and that it is limited in the sale of such brick to the state and its several political subdivisions and the public institutions owned, managed or controlled by the state and its political subdivisions.

It remains to determine whether the sale referred to in Mr. Sharp's communication is a sale in the open market or a sale to the state. Inasmuch as the contract between the state highway department and Beatrice & Kinear, contractors, requires the latter to furnish all the materials for the road in question, I am of the opinion that the sale in question cannot be regarded as a sale to the state but must be regarded as a sale in the open market and that such sale is prohibited by section 41 of article II of the constitution of Ohio. I am further of the opinion that to sanction an arrangement by which a contractor required to furnish road building materials might purchase the same from the Ohio Board of Administration and have the materials billed to the state highway department, the state highway department to deduct the contract price thereof from the amount due the contractor and pay the same to the Ohio Board of Administration, would be illegal and a manifest effort to avoid the effect of the constitutional provisions above quoted, and that such an arrangement should not be sanctioned by your department.

In other words, under the facts set forth by you, the Ohio Board of Administration is without authority to sell the brick in question to the contractors, Beatrice & Kinear, for the reason that such sale would be a sale in the open market and not a sale to the state and, therefore, in violation of section 41 of article II of the constitution of Ohio. Furthermore, your department should not make itself a party to any arrangement designed to circumvent the constitutional provisions in question and should not recognize any contract between the Ohio Board of Administration and Beatrice & Kinear by the terms of which the latter are to purchase brick from the former, the brick to be billed to you and paid for by your department and the cost thereof deducted from any sums due to the contractors.

I understand from the contractors that they have been notified by the Ohio Board of Administration not to lay the brick in question until this matter is determined and that they do not intend to lay the brick until advised that the board of administration can lawfully sell the same to them and will, if advised that no such right exists, remove the brick in question and purchase other brick from private manufacturers.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—BONDS AUTHORIZED BY VOTE OF ELECTORS OF TOWNSHIP PRIOR TO TAKING EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE SAME BY SAVING CLAUSE, SECTION 303 OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW.

The township trustees of Washington township, Belmont county, Ohio, are authorized by the saving clause of section 303 of the Cass road law, 106 O. L., 663, to sell bonds of the said township, the issuance of which was authorized by a vote of the electors of the said township taken May 5, 1915, under authority of sections 7033 to 7052, G. C., which sections were repealed by the provisions of said Cass highway law, which went into effect September 6, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. GEORGE THORNBURG, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your request for my opinion, dated September 3, 1915, which request is as follows:

> "Under the provisions of sections 7033 to 7052, of the General Code, inclusive, on May 5, 1915, Washington township, Belmont county, Ohio, voted to sell $50,000.00 worth of bonds for the improvement of the roads of that township. On June 15, 1915, a resolution was passed by the trustees authorizing the sale of $10,000 worth of bonds under said vote, and they have advertised said $10,000 worth of bonds for sale on September 8, 1915.
> "Since the passage of the new Cass road law, which goes into effect on September 6th, the trustees of Washington township desire to know whether they have authority to sell the $10,000 worth of bonds, advertised, and to then advertise and sell the balance of $40,000 worth of bonds, all voted for at the election on May 5, 1915, and use the proceeds of the $10,000 worth of bonds and the remaining amount unsold for the purpose of improving the roads of Washington township.
> "In other words, have they gone far enough with their procedure to permit them to carry out the intention of the people under their vote, or does the change of the law prevent it?

"Please reply to this at once, as they would like to know before the sale of their bonds on September 8, 1915."

Section 303 of the Cass road law, to which you refer, (106 O. L., 663) is, in part, as follows:

"This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, or right acquired of any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect, under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, enforced, prosecuted or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the commissioners of any road district prior to the time of the taking effect of this act. * * *"

By virtue of the vote of the electors of Washington township on May 5, 1915, as stated in your letter, the township trustees of that township acquired the right to sell bonds to the amount of $50,000.00. Authority to exercise that right and to carry out the will of the electors has been specifically preserved by the language of the section above quoted.

I am therefore of the opinion, and advise you, that the township trustees may sell the $10,000 of bonds which were authorized by them to be sold under the resolution of June 15, 1915, and that they may also proceed, at least within a reasonable time, to sell the remaining $40,000 of the said bonds. This opinion is of course based on the assumption that the board of trustees of Washington township, prior to May 5, 1915, regularly created the township into a road district under section 7033 of the General Code, that the election held on May 5, 1915, was properly conducted, and that the amount of the proposed bond issue added to the amount of any bonds previously issued by such road district and still outstanding does not exceed one hundred thousand dollars, as provided by section 7036 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION—HOW DISPOSITION MAY BE MADE OF FURNITURE IN OHIO BUILDING.

The furniture at the Ohio building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition should be sold by the commission representing the state in its participation in said exposition and the proceeds thereof turned into the state treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. NEWTON M. MILLER, Directing Commissioner, Ohio Building, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, Cal.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of October 8, 1915, as follows:

"Kindly inform me whether the furniture at the Ohio State House, P. P. I. E., can be sold by the members of the commission, or whether the same will have to be turned over to the adjutant general?

"We are having inquiries for furniture and many of the buildings are now contracting for the sale of theirs."

A careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose specific authority conferred upon any public official to sell the furniture in question or any part thereof.

Upon investigation, however, it is learned that there has been established a uniformly observed rule in similar cases, which is in every way consistent with sound business sense and the proper protection of the public interest. It has heretofore been the practice for the commission representing this state, when participating in expositions of a character similar to that to which you refer, to sell the building and its equipment at the close of such exposition and to turn the proceeds thereof into the state treasury.

Since, as stated above, this course would seem to be clearly in accord with the dictates of sound business judgment and a proper regard for economy, I suggest that it be followed in the matter of disposing of the furniture belonging to the state now in the Ohio state building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, California, and that the same be sold by the commission and the proceeds thereof turned into the state treasury.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARDS OF DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS—LIMITED TO RATE OF ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH FOR TIME ACTUALLY EMPLOYED FOR NECESSARY TEMPORARY ASSISTANTS TO ITS CLERK—MAXIMUM COMPENSATION OF DEPUTY CLERK OF BOARD.

Boards of deputy state supervisors and boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections are not authorized to pay for necessary temporary assistants to the clerk in excess of the rate of one hundred dollars per month for the time actually employed.

The maximum compensation of the deputy clerk of boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors authorized by law is one hundred and fifty dollars per month as prescribed by section 4799, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your request for opinion, which is as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"What is the meaning of the language used in section 4877, General Code, as amended 103 O. L., page 544, which reads:

"'At a salary of not to exceed the rate of one hundred dollars per month each.'

"Does this mean that where persons are temporarily employed as assistants to the clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, that the sum of one hundred dollars should be divided by the total number of days, or the number of working days, of the month in which temporary employment of the assistants is made in order to get a per diem rate to apply to the number of days less than a month that the temporary assistants work; or may it be construed so as to permit the deputy state supervisors of elections to pay the full one hundred dollars, notwithstanding that said assistant clerk serves only a part of said month?

"Does section 4877, as amended 103 O. L., 544, repeal by implication because of being later legislation on the subject, the salary provided for deputy clerk as stated in section 4799, G. C.?

"Because our examiners are now working on election matters in Hamilton county, we would appreciate an early reply to the above questions."

Section 4877, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., page 544, and section 4799, G. C., to which you refer, provide as follows:

"Section 4877. When necessary, the board may employ a deputy clerk and one or more clerks as temporary assistants of the clerk at a salary of not to exceed the rate of one hundred dollars per month each and prescribe their duties. * * *

"Section 4799. The deputy clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors shall perform such duties and receive such compensation, not exceeding one hundred fifty dollars each month, as shall be determined by the board."

Your second inquiry relative to the repeal of section 4799, G. C., invites first a consideration of the act of April 23, 1904, 97 O. L., 185.

Prior to the passage of this act, the provisions of section 4877, G. C., then section 2926-c, R. S., were applicable only to city boards of elections. By this act city boards of elections were abolished and there was created in all counties containing cities in which annual registration was required, boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections (97 O. L., 192).

In this act (97 O. L., 220) it was provided that:

"The board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections shall also appoint a deputy clerk who shall perform such duties and receive such compensation, not exceeding one hundred dollars per month, as shall be determined by the board," and in the same section the manner of selecting such deputy clerk was prescribed. This provision was amended in 98 O. L., 290, in one particular only, viz.: the maximum compensation was there increased to one hundred fifty dollars and in this form this provision was carried into the General Code as section 4799.

In the act first authorizing the selection of a deputy clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, (97 O. L., 194) section 2926-c, R. S., clearly including within its terms deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and relating thereto, provided in part as follows:

"When necessary, they may employ a deputy clerk and one or more clerks as temporary assistants of their clerk, at a salary not to exceed the rate of $100.00 per month and prescribe their duties. The period for which they are employed must always be fixed in the order authorizing their employment, but they may be discharged sooner at the pleasure of the board. Such deputy clerk and all such assistants shall take the same oath for the faithful performance of their duties as required of the clerk of such board."

This provision, it will be observed, was carried into the General Code as section 4877, supra. If this latter provision, when originally enacted and as carried into the General Code, be construed to apply only to boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and that is a question not necessary of determination at this time, it cannot be said to be at all inconsistent with the provision requiring the selection and fixing the compensation of a deputy clerk by such boards, merely by reason of that part thereof which provides that: "they may employ a deputy clerk." It seems clear that a court in construing these provisions of the same act together would, of necessity, hold either that as to boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections this provision—"they may employ a deputy clerk"—was only surplusage or that it gave authority to employ an additional temporary deputy clerk whose compensation would be governed by the provisions of this section as distinguished from the compensation of the permanent deputy clerk provided for under section 4799, G. C. That is to say, prior to the amendment of section 4877, G. C., 103 O. L., 544, the appointment and compensation of a permanent deputy clerk of boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections was authorized and governed solely by the provisions of section 4799, G. C. No change whatever was made in the provisions of section 4877, G. C., by the amendment in 103 O. L., 544, except to add thereto the following:

"The compensation of the deputy clerk and the assistant clerks shall be equally divided between the city and county."

There was in this amendment manifestly no purpose to effect a change in the application of the original provisions of this section, nor was there any purpose to in any way thereby affect the operation or to repeal the provisions of section 4799, G. C., which are applicable only to the permanent deputy clerk required to be chosen at the organization of the board, under the provisions of the act of April 23, 1904, 97 O. L., 220, as amended by the act of April 2, 1906, 98 O. L., 290-291, which were carried into and now constitute section 4795, G. C. From this it follows that the permanent deputy clerk of boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, chosen under authority of section 4795, G. C., may receive compensation to be fixed by the board, not in excess of one hundred fifty dollars per month, under the provisions of section 4799, G. C.

Answering your second inquiry specifically, I am of the opinion that section 4799, G. C., is not repealed by the provisions of section 4877, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 544.

You first inquire as to the construction of the provisions of section 4877, G. C., as amended, supra, relative to the compensation of the deputy clerk and clerks therein authorized to be employed, fixing the same "at a salary not to exceed the rate of one hundred dollars per month each." This phrase, it seems, is quite clear and unambiguous, and to my mind imposes upon the board making such temporary employment, the duty of fixing a monthly compensation of all persons employed under authority of section 4877, G. C., 103 O. L., 544, at a rate not in excess of one hundred dollars per month, and it is the purpose and intent of this provision that such employe shall be paid only for the time actually employed, at a rate not in excess of one hundred dollars for a full month's service. That is to say, if the service of such cerk or deputy clerk is required for only a part of a month, he would be entitled to only such proportion of his monthly salary as the time of his actual service bears to one month. More specifically answering your question, if the board in making such employment determines that the compensation shall be the maximum of one hundred dollars per month, and the service of such clerk or deputy clerk is required for only one-third of a month, he would then be entitled to receive for such services but one-third of one hundred dollars and the board of elections would not, therefore, be authorized to pay one hundred dollars or any other such sum by it so fixed, as the monthly compensation of such clerk or deputy clerk, except when the services of such clerk or deputy clerk are rendered for the full period of one month.

The calculation of the portion of the monthly compensation which may be paid for a period of less than a month should be based upon the actual number of days in the calendar month in which such service is rendered.

A further question suggests itself, however, as to whether deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections and deputy state supervisors of elections may employ expert help outside of the authority and limitations upon compensation found in section 4877, G. C., supra. This question involves a consideration of the act of April 23, 1904, in the light of the state of the law upon this subject at that time.

Without undertaking an exhaustive review of the history of the legislation upon this subject, it is sufficient to observe here that in 83 O. L., 211, city boards of elections were authorized to be appointed in certain cities. In this act and on the same page, and as applicable only to such boards of elections, was originally enacted the provision of section 4877, G. C., in exactly the same language as appears in the General Code except that "secretary" was used instead of "clerk." In that act and on the same page will also be found the following provision:

> "The costs and charge of salaries of members of such boards of elections in any such city, and the secretary and his deputy and assistants, and all necessary expenses of the board for the purposes herein authorized," shall be borne by the city, etc.

This provision was carried into the act found in 86 O. L., 84, and was, as above stated, clearly applicable only to city boards of elections. It seems conclusive that the enactment of the provisions of section 4877, G. C., in 83 O. L., 211, in view of a contemporaneous provision for the payment of "all necessary expenses of the board" can be based upon no other than one or both of two reasons. Manifestly the legislature either conceived that the employment of temporary clerks and assistants did not come within the authority to pay "all necessary expenses of the board," or if such employment was within the authority to pay all necessary expenses, the sole purpose of the enactment of what is now section 4877, G. C., was to limit the expenditure for such temporary clerks and assistants.

These provisions as to city boards of elections continued without substantial change until 1904. At this time it was provided as to boards of deputy state supervisors of elections that:

> "The compensation above provided for, and all proper necessary expenses in the performance of the duties of such deputy supervisors, shall be defrayed out of the county treasury as other county expenses and the county commissioners shall make the necessary levy to meet the same." (93 O. L., 178 and 353.)

There was previous to 1904 no provision other than this applicable to boards of deputy supervisors of elections for the employment of temporary assistants or clerks for such boards.

Under this provision it was held in the case of State ex rel. v. Craig, 21 C. C., 180, that:

> "The compensation for a necessary assistant to the board of deputy supervisors of elections may be allowed and paid as necessary expenses."

Now it is believed that this construction would, with equal force, reason and aptness, attach to the provision for the payment of all necessary expenses of city boards of elections and from this it follows that, as above suggested, the sole purpose of the original enactment of the provisions of section 4877, G. C., was to limit the amount of expenditures for such temporary clerks and assistants to such city boards. Under these statutes as construed by the circuit court in the case above cited, we find that immediately prior to the passage of the act of April, 1904, 97 O. L., 185, et seq., city boards of elections and boards of deputy supervisors of elections were authorized to employ temporary clerks and assistants when necessary, and that city boards were limited to the payment of such employes at a rate not in excess of one hundred dollars per month, while boards of deputy supervisors were limited only by the allowance of the county commissioners for such expenses.

With this state of the law the legislature passed the act of April 23, 1904, above mentioned, abolishing city boards of elections and creating in counties in which annual registration was required, boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and from the provisions of this act the codifying commission incorporated into the General Code the provisions of section 4821 and section 4877, G. C. In this act it was provided also that "deputy state supervisors of elections" should, in all cases where not otherwise provided, be construed to include "deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections." (97 O. L., 220.)

At page 222 of 97 O. L., in the same act, the provisions found in section 4821, G. C., were enacted verbatim and by virtue of 2966-3, R. S., therein (97 O. L., 220) were equally applicable to boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections and to deputy state supervisors of elections.

Under the construction given this language by the circuit court in the case of State ex rel. vs. Craig, supra, both deputy supervisors and deputy supervisors and inspectors of elections were authorized to employ necessary clerks and assistants, and without further provision relative thereto would have been limited in their expenditures for such purposes only by the discretion of the county commissioners in allowing claims therefor. We find, however, carried into this act, 97 O. L., 195, the provisions of the act found in 83 O. L., 211, above quoted, and applicable to city boards only, that "all necessary expenses of the board" should be paid by the city, etc. Since there was then full authority in the act for the employment and payment of necessary clerks and assistants to all boards, no purpose could have prompted the contemporaneous enactment of the provisions which were afterwards incorporated in section 4877, G. C., as appear at page 194 of 97 O. L., other than to put a limitation upon the expenditures for that purpose. To what does this limitation apply?

> "The members of the board of deputy state supervisors shall meet within fifteen days after their appointment, and organize by the election of a chief deputy and clerk as provided in section 4 of the supervisory election law, section 2966-4 of the Revised Statutes. No order, resolution or action of such board shall be valid without the vote of three of the four members. Such board shall appoint all registrars of electors, judges and clerks of election and other clerks, officers and agents herein provided for, and designate the ward and precinct in which each shall serve. All deputy clerks, assistants, registrars and judges and clerks of election, now in office, in registration cities, shall remain in their respective offices and employments and continue to perform the several duties thereof and receive the compensation therefor, under existing laws, and under the direction and control of the board of deputy state supervisors, or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors, as the case may be, until their successors are chosen or appointed and qualified or until removed by the proper authority in accordance with the provisions of this act. The board of deputy state supervisors shall also appoint the places of registration of electors, and holding elections in each ward or precinct, and provide suitable booths or hire suitable rooms for such purpose and for their own office, at such rents as they deem just; they shall also provide the necessary and proper furniture and supplies for such rooms, and for the purchase, preservation and repair of all booths and ballot boxes, necessary for use at elections in such city, and all books, blanks, and forms necessary for the registrations and elections herein designated, and for duly issuing all notices, advertisements or publications required by law. The board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, of counties containing registration cities and the clerk thereof shall, upon the taking effect of this act, have the custody, care and control of all registers, lists, books, maps, forms, oaths, certificates, blanks, booths, and ballot boxes, and all other property and supplies heretofore under the custody and control of the city boards of elections and the secretary thereof.

"The board may, from time to time, make and issue all such rules, regulations and instructions, not inconsistent with law, as they shall deem necessary for governing and guiding their clerk and his deputy or assistants, and the registrars of electors and judges, and clerks of elections, or other persons under their control in the proper discharge of their respective offices and duties. They shall divide, define and proclaim the election precincts of such city, authorized in section two thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, and the boundaries thereof, and provide for furnishing to each registrar of electors and judges of elections a map and pertinent description of such divisions and boundaries, and of any changes which from time to time are made by them. When necessary, they may employ a deputy clerk and one or more clerks as temporary assistants of their clerk, at a salary not to exceed the rate of one hundred dollars per month, and prescribe their duties. The period for which they are employed must always be fixed in the order authorizing their employment, but they may be discharged sooner at the pleasure of the board. Such deputy clerk and all such assistants shall take the same oath for the faithful performance of their duties as required of the clerk of said board."

This section is not altogether free from ambiguity, but after a careful consideration of the same I am inclined to the view that in the last paragraph thereof the phrase "the board" and the term "they" include within their meaning deputy supervisors as well as deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, except in such cases as the act in its entirety renders that contruction inapplicable.

That is to say, since this enactment that provision of section 2926-c supra, which is introduced by the phrase "when necessary" is applicable to boards of deputy state supervisors of elections, as well as to boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and the purpose in its enactment was, and its force and effect is, to limit the amount such boards may lawfully pay to persons employed as temporary clerks and assistants. The view that this provision applies to boards of deputy state supervisors of elections since the act of April 23, 1904, above referred to, is supported by the inclusion of "a deputy clerk" therein, when it is remembered that at that time, as now, there was no other authority for a deputy clerk of boards of deputy state supervisors of elections, and in the same act (97 O. L., 220) there was an imperative requirement of the selection of a permanent deputy clerk of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections. That is, the purpose of this particular phrase was to authorize supervisors of elections to employ, when necessary, a temporary deputy clerk in the absence of authority to make such employment permanent.

I am therefore of opinion that section 4877, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 544, since that amendment did not affect its application, is equally applicable to boards of deputy state supervisors of elections and boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and that under its provisions the compensation of all temporary clerks and assistants of either of such boards is limited to the rate of not to exceed one hundred dollars per month for the time actually employed, to be computed upon the basis of the actual number of days in the calendar month in which such services are rendered.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT AT WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—BIDS RECEIVED ON DIFFERENT ITEMS—SOME ABOVE AND BELOW ESTIMATE—CONTRACTS MAY BE AWARDED ON BIDS BELOW ESTIMATE—REJECT THOSE ABOVE—WHEN NEW ESTIMATE MAY INCLUDE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN ESTIMATE AND BIDS BELOW ESTIMATE.

If bids are received on different items of an improvement under section 2314, et seq., G. C., and as to certain items the bids were below the estimate and as to certain other items above the estimate, contracts may be awarded on those bids below the estimate, but those bids above the estimate must be rejected.

A new estimate as to those bids which were above the estimate may be filed, and may include the difference between the estimate and the bids below the estimate, if contracts are awarded on such bids.

No contract should be awarded until it is definitely ascertained that the cost of the entire improvement, including architect's fees, etc., will be within the appropriation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your department has submitted to me a certain statement of facts which I will hereinafter set forth and requested my opinion thereon.

The combined normal and industrial department at Wilberforce University advertised for bids on a certain water supply system, the plans, specifications and estimates having been theretofore approved and placed on file in your office. The engineer in charge of the work divided the said work into five different items, and when bids were received and opened it was found that on three of the items the amounts bid were below the estimate, but that on two of such items the amounts bid exceeded the estimate. It became necessary, therefore, in view of the provision of section 2323 of the General Code that "no contract shall be made for labor or material at a price in excess of the entire estimate thereof," that the bids on the two items foregoing mentioned should be rejected. Subsequently, the engineer submitted a new estimate on said two items, increased in amount by the amount that was saved on the difference between bid and estimate of the other three items. In submitting the new estimate the engineer submitted a new estimate on all five items, reducing the estimate on the three items to the exact amount of the bid theretofore received and increasing by such amount the estimate on the other two items, and your department has taken exception to receiving such new estimate, on the ground that it is not proper to amend a former estimate on which bids have been received and contracts on a part of the work entitled to be let; that if new estimates are received no contract should be let on the former estimate, but the work should be readvertised in its entirety.

This brings us to a general running commentary on the statutes governing building regulations for public buildings, found in sections 2314, et seq., of the General Code.

Section 2314 provides that before entering into a contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, costing in the aggregate more than three thousand dollars, the board or other authority having the supervision of such building shall make or cause to be made full and accurate plans, accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction under such plans, full and complete specifications of the work and a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and the aggregate cost thereof.

After the board or other authority has prepared such plans, the same are then submitted to a board consisting of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state for its approval. This board is to look over the papers so submitted, including the plans, and ascertain that the building to be constructed is reasonably adapted for the uses to which it is to be put and for which the legislature has appropriated, and should at that time consult the appropriation in order to see how much construction is to be done under such appropriation. Having so determined that matter, the said board should see whether or not the building called for by the plans, specifications, etc., can according to the estimate, be constructed within the amount provided therefor. Thereupon, said plans, etc., should be approved and filed in your office.

As I view said statutes, the above board was constituted a board to see to it that the intent of the legislature is carried out in the plans, etc., for the construction of the improvement appropriated for, provided, of course, that the cost of the improvement exceeds three thousand dollars.

After the approval has been made it is then the duty of the board, department or institution that is to construct the building or improvement to advertise for bids, and on the day named said board, or other authority, is to open the proposals and award the contract to the lowest bidder. After having accepted a proposal and entered into a contract, the same is not to be binding until certified to by the attorney general.

However, under the provisions of section 2323, G. C., no contract shall be made for labor or materials at a price in excess of the entire estimate thereof; and the section further provides that the entire contract or contracts, including estimates of expenses for architects and otherwise, shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount authorized by law for such institution, building or improvement, addition thereto or alteration thereof.

As soon as the proposals are opened, therefore, it becomes the duty of the board to examine the estimates to see whether or not the bids are in excess of such estimates. If the estimates are divided, as in the case in question, each estimate should be considered as a separate matter and the bid upon any item thereof should be measured by the estimate of such item.

Now in the case in question that has been done, and it has been determined that as to two of the items bid upon the bids are in excess of the estimate, but that as to the remaining three items the bids are not in excess of the estimate.

The provision that the awarding of the contract shall not be in excess of the estimate is a limitation on the right of the board to award contracts, but when said board has received a bid on a particular item below the estimate thereof, I can see no reason why the money thus released may not be used in increasing the estimate on other parts of the work, without the necessity of having to reject all the bids and re-advertise the work in its entirety, but may retain the bids on those items which were below the estimate.

It is provided, however, that all the contracts taken together, including the estimates of expenses for architects and otherwise, shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount authorized by law for the particular improvement, and, therefore, a board should not enter into a contract for that part of the work which it is entitled to let until it definitely ascertains that the entire work can be let within the appropriation.

Of course, in submitting the new estimate the same must receive the approval of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state and, therefore, if the same is grossly in excess such estimate should not be approved.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

FOREIGN CORPORATION — SECTION 183, G. C., HAVING BEEN COMPLIED WITH CORPORATION NOW OFFERS TO FILE CERTIFICATE INCREASING CAPITAL STOCK, ASSERTING NO PART OF SUCH INCREASE IS REPRESENTED BY PROPERTY OWNED AND USED AND BUSINESS TRANSACTED IN OHIO—CERTIFICATE INSUFFICIENT.

Such certificate is not sufficient under section 185, G. C., but should show the amount of the company's property and business in Ohio and the total amount of the company's property and business everywhere at the time of the increase in the authorized capital stock.

Where the proportion of the capital stock of a foreign corporation, represented by property owned and used and business transacted in Ohio, is not increased, but the company has increased its total authorized capital stock, the secretary of state may accept and file a certificate showing the facts and charge the minimum fee therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 28, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of October 22nd, requesting my opinion upon the question presented by the tender to you of a certificate of The May Department Stores Company, in which it is recited that said company has increased its issue of preferred stock from the sum of $5,000,000.00 to the sum of $8,250,000.00, and that no portion of the said increase of capital stock was or is represented by property owned or used or business done or transacted in the state of Ohio.

Stated as a question of law the facts present the following issue:

> "Where a foreign corporation which has complied with section 183 of the General Code of Ohio increases its total authorized capital stock, but is able to certify that no part of the increased capital stock is represented by property owned and used and business transacted in the state of Ohio, is the company liable to compliance with section 185, G. C., and, if so, how should the fee payable under that section be computed?"

This question is answered by proper application of the principles laid down in opinion No. 699 sent to you under date of August 6, 1915. In that opinion it was held that the word "proportion" as used in sections 183 and 185, G. C., means an amount ascertained by applying to the total authorized capital stock of the company, at a given time, the percentage indicated by dividing the business transacted and property owned and used by the company in the state of Ohio by the total business and property at such time. That is to say, if at a given time the total authorized capital stock of the company is $1,000,000.00 and the company's business and property everwhere is $500,000.00 and its business and property in Ohio is $50,000.00, then the "proportion" for the purposes of these sections is 50/500 of $1,000,000.00, or $100,000.00.

In said opinion it was also held that if a foreign corporation should increase its total authorized capital stock, the question of its liability to comply with section 185, G. C., and the calculation of the fee thereunder would both be determined by applying the aforesaid formula. That is to say, taking the property and business of the company everywhere and dividing it into the property and business of the company in Ohio as of the date of the increase of the total authorized capital stock, and then taking the resultant percentage of the new total authorized capital stock, is the amount thus obtained greater than the amount similarly calculated at the time of the company's original compliance? If it is, then the certificate under section 185 should be filed and the basis of the computation of the fee is the difference between the two amounts.

It will be observed that the question of liability and that respecting the computation of the fee are both based upon the authorized capital stock—not the actually issued stock. A company may have an authorized capital stock of $10,000,000.00 and never have issued more than half of that amount in par value—that is, though the stock which it is authorized to issue is $10,000,000.00, the capital actually going into the property and business of the company may be much less than that sum; nevertheless, the liability of the company and the fee are alike determined on the basis of the authorized capital stock, and not on the basis of the stock actually issued or the capital actually employed.

These things being true, it follows, I think, that the certificate which has been tendered to you by The May Department Stores Company cannot be accepted by you because its recitals are not sufficiently specific for you to determine whether or not there has been an actual increase within the meaning of section 185 of the General Code, and what the amount of that increase, should it exist, is; for it is not enough to certify that no part of the new authorized capital has gone into the property and business in Ohio. Indeed, the newly authorized capital stock may not have been issued at all, and yet the facts might be such as to necessitate the filing of a certificate of increase and the payment of a substantial fee therefor.

The facts which such a certificate should disclose, in a word, are those showing the total value of the property of the company owned and used in Ohio and the value of the property owned and used outside of Ohio, and the proportion of the new total authorized capital stock—not the new issue itself, but the whole stock as thus increased— represented by property owned and used by business transacted in Ohio at the date of the increase in authorized capital stock.

If the certificate thus properly filled out shows that at the time of the increase of the authorized capital stock, the result arrived at by applying to the authorized capital stock, as increased, the percentage ascertained by dividing the Ohio property and business by the total property and business of the company is no greater than the result similarly arrived at at the time of the initial compliance of the company with the laws of Ohio, then, technically, no certificate is due, but I would be of the opinion, as contended for by counsel representing the company, that a certificate might lawfully be received and filed by you as a certificate of increase upon the payment of the minimum fee for filing such certificate, so that your records might show the exact effect of the company's increase of its authorized capital stock.

Should such certificate so properly filled out, however, show that the amount arrived at by going through the calculations above described, based upon the total authorized capital stock as enhanced by the increase thereof, is greater than the amount representing the "proportion" ascertained at the time of the original compliance or the last previous increase under section 185 of the General Code, then the difference between the two amounts, which constitute the respective "proportions" for the purposes of the related statutes, would represent the "increase" in "the proportion of its capital stock represented by property used and business done in this state," within the meaning of section 185, G. C., and the fee payable in such case should be computed on this difference.

This opinion is based upon principles which are more fully disclosed in opinion No. 699, above referred to.

I herewith return the correspondence submitted to me, with the check of Mr. Nathan Loeser for $5.00 attached thereto, advising that the certificate of The May Deparment Stores Company is not sufficiently specific to permit you to receive and file it for any purpose, and that, of course, it is impossible to determine therefrom what, if any, fee is due to the state of Ohio from The May Department Stores Company on account of the increase of its total authorized capital stock.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE CLERK—COMPENSATION—CANNOT RECEIVE ANY COMPENSATION FOR ACTING AS LEGAL ADVISER TO VILLAGE IN ADDITION TO AMOUNT RECEIVED BY HIM AS CLERK.

A village clerk cannot be employed and paid compensation for acting as legal adviser to the village in addition to the compensation received by him as clerk of the said village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 28, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Is it legal for the village clerk to be employed by council as legal adviser to village officials?
> "The council of the village of Bratenahl desires to employ their clerk, who is an attorney at law, as their legal adviser if there be no incompatibility."

Section 4279 of the General Code, which refers to the election of a clerk of a village, is as follows:

> "The clerk shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the corporation."

Under the terms of the section just quoted, the clerk of a village is an officer of the corporation.

Section 3808 of the General Code, which relates to municipal corporations, is as follows:

> "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any provision of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other things he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, and if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom."

The relations existing between the legal adviser of a village and the village is contractual and is provided for in section 4220 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"When it deems it necessary, the village council may provide legal counsel for the village, or any department or official thereof, for a period not to exceed two years, and provide compensation therefor."

It will be noted from reading of section 3808 of the General Code, supra, that an officer of a village is prohibited from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation.

It is my opinion therefore that while there is no incompatibility between the office of village clerk and the legal adviser of the village on account of conflicting duties of the two positions, yet in view of the provisions of section 3808 of the General Code, supra, a village clerk could not receive any compensation for acting as legal adviser to the village in addition to the compensation received by him as clerk of the village.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE MEDICAL BOARD—FEE OF TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS SHOULD BE CHARGED FOR EACH EXAMINATION REQUIRED TO QUALIFY APPLICANT FOR CERTIFICATE TO PRACTICE ANY BRANCH OF MEDICINE OR SURGERY REGARDLESS OF GROUPING OF BRANCHES THAT BOARD MAY INCLUDE IN ONE CERTIFICATE—WHERE SEPARATE EXAMINATIONS ARE REQUIRED IN SEPARATE BRANCHES, FEE OF TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS MUST BE CHARGED FOR EACH BRANCH.

The provisions of section 1277, G. C., apply to and control examinations for a certificate to practice one or more limited branches of medicine and surgery as defined in section 1274-1, et seq., G. C., 106 O. L., 202, and require a fee of twenty-five dollars for each examination, whether the subjects of such examination are appropriate to only one limited branch or more than one.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1915.

The State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of October 22, 1915, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

"Acting under section 1274-1 of the General Code, the state medical board has established rules and regulations to govern those who practice any limited branch or branches of medicine or surgery in Ohio. The limited branches of medicine or surgery recognized by the board, in the rules and regulations, have been grouped and the groupings explained as follows:

"The following groups of such limited branches have been adopted:

"(1) Chiropractic, naprapathy, spondylotherapy, electro-therapy, hydro-therapy, mechano-therapy and neuropathy, or any other similar branch of medicine or surgery that may now or hereafter exist, and not here specified.

"(2) Suggestive-therapy, psycho-therapy, magnetic healing, or any other similar branch of medicine or surgery that may now or hereafter exist and not here specified.

"(3) Massage, Swedish movement, or any other similar limited branch of medicine or surgery which involves manual, physical or mechanical methods of exercise or operation, appliance or treatment that may now or hereafter exist and not here specified.

"(4) Chiropody.

"(5) Optometry.

"Certificates will be issued to those qualifying in any of the limited branches mentioned in any single group:

"(Example) A certificate will be issued to one who qualifies to practice 'chiropractic' or 'chiropratic and spondylotherapy' (group 1), or to practice 'suggestive-therapy' or 'suggestive-therapy and magnetic healing' (group 2).

"A certificate will not be granted to practice chiropractic and suggestive-therapy. In other words, to practice more than one group, more than one certificate will be required for those who qualify.

"A fee of $25.00 will be required for each certificate granted.

"The first group includes those practices which involve the doing of material things, or the use of something material as a therapeutic measure. The second group involves those branches which have to do with the treatment of the mind.

"Both the first and second group will permit applicants to examine and diagnose. Those practicing in the third group will not be permitted to examine and diagnose. All concede that chiropody and optometry should stand alone upon their own merits.

"In adopting these groupings, the board believes that it can more intelligently regulate the various practices.

"It will be observed that a certificate is required to practice any branch or branches specified in a single group, and that a fee of $25.00 is required for each certificate granted.

"Please advise whether the board's action in requiring the fee of $25.00 for each certificate, in case an applicant qualifies to practice in more than one group, is proper."

The question presented by you involves a consideration and construction of the following sections of the General Code as found in house bill No. 220, 106 O. L., 202, et seq.

"Section 1274-1. The state medical board shall also examine and register persons desiring to practice any limited branch or branches of medicine or surgery, and shall establish rules and regulations governing such limited practice. Such limited branches of medicine or surgery shall include chiropractic, naprapathy, spondylotherapy, mechano-therapy, neuropathy, electro-therapy, hydro-therapy, suggestive-therapy, psycho-therapy, magnetic healing, chiropody, Swedish movements, massage, and such other branches of medicine or surgery as the same are defined in section 1286 of the General Code that may now or hereafter exist, except midwifery and osteopathy.

"Section 1274-2. For the purpose of establishing the practice of such limited branches the state medical board shall call to its aid the designated persons as provided in section 1274-3 of the General Code, and such designated persons shall examine any person who has practiced any such branch in Ohio for a period of at least one year prior to June first, 1915, and who makes application prior to October first, 1915, on a form prescribed by the board, in those subjects only which are appropriate to the limited branch of medicine or surgery, for a certificate to practice which his application is made. No such applicant shall be required to comply with the preliminary educational qualifications provided for in section 1274-5 of the General Code. Any person, practicing in Ohio who at the time of the passage of this act shall actually be engaged in this state for a period of five years continuously prior to October first, 1915, in the practice of any one or more of the limited branches of medicine or surgery hereinbefore enumerated, and who shall present to and file with the state medical board an affidavit to that effect after the passage of this act shall be exempted from the examination, and shall be entitled to receive from said board a license to practice, upon the payment to said board of a fee of twenty-five dollars. The examination of all other applicants shall be conducted under rules prescribed by the board and at such times and places as the board may determine. Such examination shall be given in anatomy, physiology, chemistry, bacteriology, pathology, hygiene, diagnosis, and in such other subjects appropriate to the limited branches of medicine or surgery, certificate to practice which is applied for, as the board may require; provided, however, that applicants for certificates to practice massage or Swedish movements shall not be examined in pathology and diagnosis.

"Section 1274-3. For the purpose of conducting such examinations the state medical board shall call to its aid any person or persons of established reputation and known ability in the particular limited branch in which the examination is being held; and in the event that there is in existence a state association or society of practitioners of any such limited branch of medicine or surgery, such association or society, except a state association or society of chiropodists, shall recommend the person or persons to be designated for this service by the board. Any person called by the state medical board to its aid, as provided in this section, shall receive for his services not more than ten dollars per day and his actual and necessary expenses to be fixed and allowed by the state medical board.

"If the applicant passes such examination and has paid the fee of twenty-five dollars as required by law, the state medical board shall issue its certificate to that effect. Such certificate shall authorize the holder thereof to practice such limited branch or branches of medicine or surgery as may be specified therein, but shall not permit him to practice any other branch or branches of medicine or surgery nor shall it permit him to treat infectious, contagious or venereal diseases, nor to prescribe or administer drugs, or to perform major surgery."

You state in your letter that your board has divided the limited branches of medicine and surgery, named in section 1274-1, supra, into five groups and divisions and that it is your purpose to include in one certificate any one or all the branches named in a single group and to charge therefor a fee of twenty-five dollars, but that an applicant desiring to practice two branches, one of which is in one group and the other in another group, must procure a certificate for each branch and pay for each certificate the sum of twenty-five dollars. To state the matter more concisely you propose to charge a fee of twenty-five dollars for a certificate for each group, which certificate may authorize its holder to practice one or any number of branches included in that group.

The matter of dividing the various limited branches aforesaid into said groups or divisions is within the discretion of your board, under the provisions of section 1274-1, supra, and is to be determined by a professional and technical knowledge of the relation between said branches included in each group. The question, therefore, of the appropriateness of this division is one of fact and for the purposes of this opinion said division must be regarded as properly made. The question, however, of the charge to be made for certificates to practice is a question of law to be determined by the statutory provisions above quoted and by section 1277, G. C., which is the general section fixing the charge of twenty-five dollars. This section provides as follows:

> "Each applicant for a certificate to practice medicine or surgery in this state shall pay a fee of twenty-five dollars for an examination. On failure to pass such examination the fee shall not be returned to the applicant, but within a year after such failure he may present himself and be again examined without the payment of an additional fee. All fees for examination shall be paid in advance to the treasurer of the board and by him paid into the state treasury to the credit of a fund for the use of the state medical board."

It must be observed that under the provisions of the foregoing section each applicant for a certificate to practice medicine or surgery in this state shall pay a fee of twenty-five dollars for an examination. Clearly this provision makes the examination and not the certificate the basis for the charge of twenty-five dollars. An applicant must pay twenty-five dollars for an examination. If he passes successfully the certificate follows; if he fails to pass said examination, nevertheless, he pays the charge of twenty-five dollars subject to his right to take another examination within a year after such failure without payment of an additional fee.

Keeping the provisions of this section in mind, we will now consider the later sections first above quoted. It is provided in section 1274-2, supra, that any person who has practiced any branch named in section 1274-1, supra, for at least one year prior to June 1, 1915, and who makes application prior to October 1, 1915, shall be examined in those subjects only which are appropriate to the limited branch of medicine or surgery for a certificate to practice which his application is made. Here again it is manifest that the examination therein provided for must be confined to those subjects only which are appropriate to the branch for which the applicant asks a certificate. If such examination may apply to two or more branches, that is, if the subjects covered by said examination are appropriate to two or more branches, and an applicant may qualify by passing said examination to practice in two or more branches, I know of no legal objection to his certificate so authorizing him and for a single fee of twenty-five dollars.

It is also provided in this section for the examination of all other applicants under such rules as may be prescribed by the board.

It is then provided in section 1274-3, supra, that if an applicant passes and has paid the fee of twenty-five dollars as required by law the said board shall issue its certificate to that effect, which shall authorize the holder thereof to practice such limited branch or branches as may be specified therein. I am convinced, however, that the reference here made to the payment of twenty-five dollars as required by law is directed to the provisions of section 1277, G. C., and that under these statutes, as well as under section 1277, it is the examination and not the certificate which determines the fee.

The only exception to this application and construction of the law is found in those provisions of section 1274-2, supra, by which under certain conditions a certificate to practice in one or more branches may be issued without examination upon payment of twenty-five dollars. These provisions, however, not involving any examination, cannot overcome the plain purpose of the law as declared in section 1277, supra.

For the foregoing considerations I, therefore, conclude that it is the purpose of the law to require a fee of twenty-five dollars for each examination and that a certificate may be issued for each examination which may include one or more branches, but where separate examinations are required in separate branches a fee of twenty-five dollars must be charged for each examination.

Coming now to consider your specific question, it is apparent that unless one examination may cover all the limited branches which you have included in one group, a fee of twenty-five dollars as proposed by you will not meet the requirements of the law. I learn from you in this connection that as a matter of fact it will require a separate examination in practically every limited branch named in each of the groups specified by you. This being so, it is my opinion that a fee of twenty-five dollars should be charged for each examination required to qualify an applicant for a certificate to practice any branch regardless of the grouping or divisions made by your board or the number of branches you may include in one certificate.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—FEES AND MILEAGE OF WITNESSES APPEARING IN HEARINGS BEFORE SUCH COMMISSION —FUND MUST BE APPROPRIATED FOR THAT SPECIFIC PURPOSE.

The fees and mileage of witnesses attending under the provisions of section 486-7, G. C., 106 O. L., 403, when duly certified and audited may be paid by the state treasurer only from a fund appropriated for that specific purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of October 22, 1915, as follows:

> "The fifth paragraph of section 486-7 provides that—
> "'Fees shall be allowed to witnesses, and on their certificate, duly audited, shall be paid by the state treasurer, * * * for attendance and traveling, as is provided in section 3012 of the General Code.'
> "Query: From what fund shall these fees be paid?"

Section 3012, G. C., which is referred to in the statute quoted by you, is the general section of the code providing for the fees and mileage of witnesses attending in civil cases in any court of record in this state. The provisions of section 486-7, supra, make such fees and mileage, as fixed by section 3012, supra, upon your certificate duly audited, payable by the state treasurer. It appears, however, that no appropriation has been made by the general assembly for this purpose and in consequence thereof there is no fund in the state treasury legally available for the payment of these claims. This is so because under section 22 of article II of the constitution, it is provided that:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law."

Answering your question specifically said witness fees, mileage and costs are payable from a fund appropriated by the legislature for that specific purpose, and as such fund has not been so provided, there is no money in the state treasury now available for the payment of such claims.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TRUSTEES OF COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME—NOT AUTHORIZED TO BE APPOINTED UNTIL BUILDINGS ARE PROVIDED (SEE SECTION 3081, G. C.)—SAID BUILDINGS MUST BE READY FOR OCCUPANCY BEFORE APPOINTMENTS ARE MADE—IF MADE PRIOR, ACTION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS VOID.

1. A necessary site and buildings are provided within the provisions of section 3081, G. C., when they are ready for use and occupancy as a children's home, and until so provided, the appointment of trustees as therein prescribed is not authorized by the provisions of said statute.

2. The appointment of trustees of a children's home under section 3081, G. C., supra, before the neccssary buildings and site are provided as required by the said statute, if made by county commissioners, whose terms expire before said buildings and site are or may be provided, is without authority of law and is void.

The State ex rel. Morris v. Sullivan, 81 O. S., 79.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1915.

HON. CHARLES L. BERMONT, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 26th as follows:

> "On August 23, 1915, the commissioners of Knox county, appointed a board of trustees for the new County Children's Home, under the provisions of section 3081, G. C.
> "At the time this appointment was made it was thought that two Democrats and two Republicans were being appointed, but it was later ascertained that three of them were from the same political party.
> "On September 20, 1915, the board of county commissioners changed, two old members retiring, which also changed the politics of the board.
> "A short time after the new board of commissioners took office, one of the appointed trustees, about whose politics there was some question, came to the commissioners and requested that he be relieved from further service upon said board.

"At the time, August 23, this board of trustees was appointed the children's home was not ready to be turned over to them and probably will not be ready before November 15, 1915. The building itself was completed, but it was not furnished ready for occupancy.

"The board of county commissioners as now constituted, is insisting upon appointing an entire new board of trustees on the ground that the action of the former board of commissioners was premature and further that because three of the members of the board of trustees belonged to the same political party that the appointment of the whole board would be void.

"I therefore desire your opinion upon the question as to whether the appointment by the former board of county commissioners was made before it should be and therefore void, and whether the mistake in selecting three from the same political party would render the action void?"

Section 3081 of the General Code, to which you refer in your letter, provides in part as follows:

"When the necessary site and buildings are provided by the county, the commissioners shall appoint a board of four trustees, as follows: One for one year, one for two years, one for three years, and one for four years, from the first Monday of March thereafter. Not more than two of such trustees shall be of the same political party."

From your statements it appears that your board of county commissioners on August 23, 1915, under the provisions of the foregoing section, appointed a board of trustees for your children's home, which said home will not be ready for occupancy before November 15, 1915.

It further appears that on September 20, 1915, two members of the board making said appointments aforesaid retired from office and were succeeded by two new members thereby changing the political complexion of said board, which fact affords very potent reasons for the apparent haste shown in making said appointments.

You now inquire if the appointment of said trustees so made on August 23rd is valid. The answer to your question depends entirely upon the fact whether or not the provisions of section 3081, above quoted, required said appointments to be made prior to or on that date, or at any time before said two members retired from the board of county commissioners on September 20, 1915. The provisions of said section require the county commissioners to appoint a board of trustees when the necessary site and buildings are provided by the county. The requirement in this behalf is as definite and specific as it would be if the statute named and fixed a certain calendar date for said appointment. The commissioners, therefore, could not appoint before that date in anticipation of their leaving office, nor could they make a valid appointment until the actual necessity for the appointment existed as provided by said law.

State ex rel. v. Sullivan, 81 O. S., 79.
State ex rel. v. Ernston, 14 C. C., 614.

The difficulty in this matter is not so much to determine upon what date said appointment shall be made as it is to determine when the proper conditions exist which under the statute aforesaid fix that date. Manifestly the providing of a site and buildings, as defined in section 3081, supra, means more than procuring a plat of land upon which stands a building with bare walls and empty rooms. It means a site upon which stands a structure furnished and equipped for the care and entertainment of the unfortunate waifs for whom it is to be a home.

It was held in an opinion to you under date of June 16, 1915, that it was the duty of your board of county commissioners to furnish and equip the home in question with furniture. I desire now to make it plain that the building is not "provided" as required by section 3081, supra, until it is equipped and furnished and ready for use and occupancy.

From your statements it appears that at this time said home is not ready for occupancy and will not be until about November 15, 1915. No building, therefore, as yet has been provided as required by section 3081, supra. No building having been provided, the appointment of trustees even at this time is not required by the provisions of said section and the appointments made on August 23, 1915, were made wholly without warrant or authority of law, and were and are void. Said appointments being void in the first instance, it is not necessary to notice the other phases of the matter as presented in your inquiry.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION—CONTRACT FOR LEASE OF MACHINERY FOR USE OF HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT CONSTRUED—DEFECTIVE CONDITION OF LEASED MACHINERY.

One who leases machinery to the state highway commissioner and agrees to furnish an expert engineer to operate the same, is not entitled to full compensation for those days on which the machinery is not in use for eight hours, where the failure to use the machinery during an entire day is due to its defective condition or to lack of skill on the part of the engineer furnished by the lessor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 19, 1915, transmitting to me copy of agreement dated September 7, 1915, between C. Taylor Handman and the state highway commissioner, covering the rental, by your department, of certain machinery the property of Mr. Handman.

So much of said agreement as is pertinent to your inquiry reads as follows:

> "The contract price per day on this equipment is fifteen dollars ($15.00) net for every day that the machinery is in operation or even when steam has been gotten up in the morning with the expectation of running."

The agreement also bound Mr. Handman to furnish an expert engineer to have charge of the leased machinery.

Attached to your communication is a statement showing the number of hours during which the machinery referred to in the agreement with Mr. Handman was operated, together with the reasons for the failure to perform eight hours' work with the machinery on several of the days during which the machinery was in use.

From this statement it appears that the leased machinery was used by your department on twelve days. On five of these days the machinery was used for eight hours each day; on seven of these days the machinery was used less than eight hours, and the fact that the machinery was in use for less than eight hours on each of the seven days in question is set forth in the statement as being due to several different causes, to wit:

> Late arrival of the machinery on the site of the work;
> Inability to get sufficient steam pressure in the engine;
> Breaking of a stone bin; and > Engine trouble.

It does not appear that in any instance where the engine was used for less than eight hours on any given day the fault was that of the employes of the state highway department, but in every instance such failure was due to the defective condition of the leased machinery, or to the breaking of the same, or its late arrival, or to lack of skill on the part of the engineer furnished by Mr. Handman.

You state that in endeavoring to settle with Mr. Handman you allowed to him the full contract price of fifteen dollars for each day on which the machinery was used for eight hours and made him a pro rata allowance for the days on which the machinery was used less than eight hours, and that you forwarded to him a voucher covering the compensation so calculated, said warrant calling for $155.63, but that Mr. Handman refuses to accept this warrant and demands compensation at the full rate of fifteen dollars for each day on which the machinery was used for any number of hours. He bases his claim on the provision in his contract that he is to receive "fifteen dollars ($15.00) for each day that the machinery is in operation or even when steam has been gotten up in the morning with the expectation of running."

You request my opinion as to whether Mr. Handman's contention is correct or whether you have properly computed his compensation.

It is impossible to reach the conclusion that a man who contracts to furnish machinery and who also contracts, as Mr. Handman did, to furnish an expert engineer to take charge of such machinery and operate the same, is entitled to full compensation for those days on which the machinery is not operated during the entire day, when the failure to operate is due to the defective condition of the machinery or to lack of skill on the part of the engineer in charge of the same.

I therefore conclude that you have offered Mr. Handman the most favorable settlement to which he is entitled in any possible view of the facts and that his claim for any sum in excess of $155.63, covered by the warrant which you have tendered him, is not well founded.

Another question presented by this contract is not considered above. The contract provides that it is for a period of not less than eighteen days. Under this provision Mr. Handman would be entitled to an opportunity to furnish the machinery for the full eighteen days and to be compensated accordingly in case he fulfilled his contract, subject, of course, to the right of the parties to the contract to modify or terminate the same by a subsequent agreement.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—SUBORDINATES IN STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT WHO HAVE FAILED TO FURNISH BONDS IN REGULAR FORM—REQUIRED TO FURNISH PROPER ONES.

Where deputies and employes of the state highway department have failed to furnish bonds in regular form, the deputies should be required and the employes may be required to furnish proper bonds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 22, 1915, you addressed a communication to me as follows:

> "In looking over the surety bonds of appointees in this department given under my predecessor, I note that some of these bonds are not signed by the principal and do not bear the approval of the then highway commissioner.
> "Would it be proper for these appointees to attach their signatures to these bonds at this time and for the present state highway commissioner to attach his approval to same, or will it be necessary to have these appointees furnish new bonds in accordance with form which you prescribe in your opinion No. 940?"

Under date of October 26, 1915, supplementing your previous communication, you submitted for my examination the bonds in question, being the bonds of the following officers and employes, to wit:

H. M. Sharp.....Deputy Construction
A. H. Hinkle.....Deputy Maintenance and Repair
Jno. R. Chamberlin.....Deputy Bridges and Culverts
Walter G. Smith.....Division Engineer
T. T. Richards.....Division Engineer
D. W. Seitz.....Division Engineer
N. Koehler.....Division Engineer
H. D. Bruning.....Division Engineer
H. Lersch.....Division Engineer
J. R. Burkey.....Engineer
R. H. Spidel.....Engineer
Glenn R. Logue.....Engineer
Frank Withgott.....Engineer
P. K. Scheidler.....Engineer
Abel S. Rea.....Testing Engineer
Wm. Paullin.....Superintendent
A. L. Fuestal.....Superintendent
W. W. Deitrich.....Bookkeeper

I have examined the bonds in question and find that the bond of Mr. Sharp is signed by the principal and bears your approval. This bond, however, recites that Mr. Sharp was appointed for a term commencing on the first day of April, 1915, and continuing until his successor is appointed and qualified. Deputy highway commissioners are not appointed for any definite term and there is no provision of law authorizing them to hold office until their successors are appointed and qualified. This is true both under the Cass highway law and under the former statute, it being provided that deputy highway commissioners shall hold office during the pleasure of the highway commissioner.

The bonds of Messrs. Chamberlain and Hinkle also refer to those appointees as having a term of office. The bonds of Messrs. Chamberlain, Richards, Seitz, Koehler, Spidel, Logue, Withgott, Scheidler and Fuestal have been signed by the principals, but have never been approved by the state highway commissioner.

The bonds of Messrs. Hinkle, Smith, Bruning, Lersch, Burkey, Rea, Paullin and Deitrich not only lack the approval of the state highway commissioner, but they have never been signed by the principals. I have already alluded to certain inaccurate expressions in the bonds of Messrs. Sharp, Hinkle and Chamberlain, deputy highway commissioners, who are properly styled officers but who do not have any definite term of office. All of the bonds other than those of Messrs. Sharp, Hinkle and Chamberlain contain references to the principals as officers, whereas such principals are, properly speaking, employes and not officers.

In view of the above considerations and bearing in mind the conclusions expressed in opinion No. 940 of this department relating to the bond of Robert N. Waid, division engineer, rendered to you on October 16, 1915, it will be seen that all of the bonds referred to by you contain recitals that are incorrect and therefore none of the bonds would, strictly speaking, be entitled to approval as to their form. I therefore advise you that your proper course of procedure in the matter is to require the execution of new bonds by the deputies and employes of your department referred to by you.

The three deputy highway commissioners are each required to give a bond in the sum of $5,000, with such sureties as you approve, but the statute does not require my approval as to the form of these bonds. The bonds of all employes, where you require such employes to give bond, should be approved by you as to the amount and sureties and submitted to this department for approval as to form. The form of bond suggested for a division engineer in opinion No. 940 of this department, referred to above, will serve as a guide in the preparation of these bonds, although some changes will be required to meet the particular situation existing as to each one of the employes referred to by you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

SECRETARY OF STATE—THE PERFECTION SPRING COMPANY—PERMISSION GRANTED TO WITHDRAW CERTIFICATE INCREASING CAPITAL STOCK AND TO FILE INSTEAD TWO CERTIFICATES INCREASING PREFERRED STOCK AND COMMON STOCK, IRRESPECTIVELY—NOT PERMITTED NOW TO INCREASE CAPITAL STOCK BY AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

Upon the facts shown, the secretary of state may permit The Perfection Spring Company to withdraw a certificate increasing its capital stock from $1,000 to $2,500,000, and to file instead a certificate increasing preferred stock from $1,000 to $1,499,000, and certificate authorizing issuance of $1,000,000.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 30, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 29th, with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith enclosing a communication from Gage, Day, Wilkin and Washburn and Bennett and Westfall, relative to a certificate of increase of capital stock of THE PERFECTION SPRING COMPANY, filed in this office on the morning of October 27, 1915, increasing the stock of said company from $1,000 to $2,500,000.00, all common stock.
> "In the afternoon of October 27, 1915, after the aforesaid certificate of increase of capital stock had been recorded and the certified copy made, all records being complete, and a check for $2,499.00 entered on the fee book, said company attempted to file a certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation for the purpose of changing $1,000,000 of said common stock of said company into preferred stock, and under a ruling of the attorney general we refused to accept and file said amendment.
> "On the 28th day of October, 1915, said company again presented said amendment to the office of the secretary of state and requested us to submit the same to the attorney general for a ruling, which we agreed to do.
> "On the 29th day of October, 1915, Mr. Westfall, one of the attorneys for the aforesaid company, requested us not to submit said amendment to the attorney general, and has requested us to submit the enclosed communication to you for an opinion as to the duties of the secretary of state in the aforesaid matter.
> "Will you please give us your opinion on the question submitted in the enclosed communication as to whether or not the secretary of state is authorized to permit the withdrawal of said certificate of increase of capital stock of the aforesaid company and cancel the record of said increase of capital stock and allow said company to file certificates of increase of capital stock, to wit: $1,400,000.00 common, and $1,000,000 preferred, and consider the proper fee as already paid for the filing of said certificates to have been made without any additional fee whatsoever?"

The letter of Messrs. Gage, Day, Wilkin and Washburn, and of Messrs. Bennett and Westfall, enclosed and referred to in your communication, contains a further statement of the facts pertinent to the question asked, and is as follows:

> "On the morning of the 27th inst., we filed with you a certificate of increase of the capital stock to The Perfection Spring Company authorizing and providing for an increase of the capital stock of that company to $2,500,000. On the afternoon of the same day, namely, the 27th inst., we offered to you for filing and record an amendment to the articles of incorporation of the same company, making preferred stock of $1,000,000 of the aforesaid $2,500,000 of capital stock provided for in said certificate of increase.

"This certificate of increase and amendment was for the purpose of making the capital stock of said company consist of $1,500,000 common, and $1,000,000 of preferred stock, and was done pursuant to the practice and procedure which has been observed, followed and sanctioned by your department since the opinion of attorney general Ellis rendered to the secretary of state on the 21st day of November, 1904. You now advise us that such a plan is not now sanctioned in your office and decline to accept for record the amendment as aforesaid, which provides for the change to preferred stock of $1,000,000 of the $2,500,000 authorized capital stock of the company, and suggest that in order to accomplish our purpose as hereinbefore indicated that we should have filed two certificates of increase,—one under the provisions of G. C., 8698, authorizing an increase of common stock, and another under the provisions of G. C., 8699, authorizing an increase of preferred stock.

"In view of the fact that our procedure in this matter was taken under a misapprehension of the present ruling in your department we respectfully request that we be permitted to withdraw the certificate of increase filed on the 27th inst., as the same is hereinbefore referred to, together with our check covering filing fee for the same, in order that we may pursue the plan provided for under the present ruling of your department.

It is entirely agreeable to us that you retain the check of $2,499.00 and apply proceeds of same against fees for filing documents pursuant to the plan suggested by you."

It is apparent from the facts stated in the two letters above quoted that the intention and purpose of The Perfection Spring Company was to increase its capital stock by the issuance of $1,499,000 par value of common stock and $1,000,000 of preferred stock. To accomplish this result it followed a policy approved and followed for a number of years of making the entire increase common stock and then by subsequently filing a certificate of amendment to change such portion of the increased common stock as desired to preferred stock. Under the rule recently adopted in your office, at my advice and at present being followed, a corporation cannot change common stock to preferred stock by an amendment of its articles of incorporation. The Perfection Spring Company, in ignorance of this ruling and change of policy, proceeded under the old plan and filed a certificate of increase, making the entire issue common stock, and paying therefor the required fee of $2,499.00. It now finds that it cannot, under your present ruling, by amendment change $1,000,000 common stock to preferred stock, and requests that it be permitted to withdraw its certificate of increase and proceed in accordance with the present ruling to accomplish its original purpose.

Upon enquiry I find that the $2,499.00 filing fee paid by the company has not been paid into the state treasury, but still remains in your hands.

Under the facts presented it is certainly a matter of justice, at least, to comply with the request made by The Perfection Spring Company. If its request be refused the company it will result in a complete loss to it of $1,000.00 of its fees heretofore paid, for which the company would receive no return. In other words, the company would be compelled to bear a penalty of $1,000.00 by reason of attempting to follow the ruling and policy of your office of long standing which has but recently been changed and of which change the company evidently had no notice.

I therefore advise you, under the facts presented in your letter and in the letter of Messrs. Gage, Day, Wilkin and Washburn, and Bennett and Westfall, that you should as a matter of justice comply with the request made to you and permit The Perfection Spring Company to withdraw the certificate of increase of its capital stock filed on October 27th, 1915, and permit the company to accomplish its purpose by following the procedure suggested in your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Prosecuting Attorney.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE FOR VILLAGE OF CENTERBURG, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 1, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE: Bonds of the village of Centerburg, Ohio, conditionally purchased by the Industrial Commission of Ohio under resolution adopted June 21, 1915.

Issue of $3,400.00 of bonds, dated April 1, 1915, being ten bonds of $300.00 each, and one bond of $400.00, falling due one each year from April 1, 1916, to April 1, 1926. Issue of $350.00, dated October 1, 1915, being three bonds of $100.00 each and one of $50.00, falling due one year each from October 1, 1916, to October 1, 1919.

I have examined the transcript submitted by the clerk of the village of Centerburg relative to the proceedings of council and other officers of the said village in the issuance of the two series of bonds above described, and I find that the purpose for which said bonds are issued is authorized by law; that the proceedings of the said village council and other officers relative thereto have been regular and in conformity with statutory requirements; that the amount of said bonds and the tax levy which will be necessary to pay interest thereon and create a sinking fund for their redemption when due exceeds no statutory limitation; and that the bond forms, as indicated by the specimen copies attached to said transcript, are properly drawn.

I therefore certify that the said bonds, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid obligations of the village of Centerburg.

My delay in reporting to you relative to these bonds is due to the fact that information which I requested from the clerk of the village of Centerburg was not furnished until October 29, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC AUCTIONS—INTERPRETATION OF LAW WHICH LICENSES AUCTIONEERS AND IMPOSES DUTIES UPON PROPERTY SOLD AT AUCTION—SAID LAW CONSTITUTIONAL FOR REASON THAT SUCH IMPOSITION OF DUTIES UPON GOODS SOLD AT AUCTION IS BASED UPON POLICE POWER OF STATE.

The imposition of duties upon goods sold at auction, as provided in section 5870, G. C., and related sections, is based upon the police and not the taxing power of the state and is not in contravention of the provisions of section 2 of article XII of the constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 4, 1915.

HON. ROBERT P. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 27, 1915, as follows:

"The attention of this office has very recently been called in a concrete way to the question of the constitutionality of certain provisions in the General Code relating to the matter of auction sales. The provisions in question are contained in chapter 3 of title II of the Code, which embraces sections 5866 to 5882, inclusive.

"Briefly, sections 5866 to 5869, inclusive, prohibit the exercise of the occupation of auctioneer and sales by public auction otherwise than by virtue of judicial process, unless the person conducting such auction be licensed as an auctioneer, as provided by these sections, which likewise prescribe the manner of his appointment and qualification. I do not understand that any question is made with reference to the constitutionality of these particular statutory provisions providing for the licensing of auctioneers, as it seems this is a matter quite clearly within the police power of the state.

"The particular provisions to which objection is made are those of section 5870 providing that property exposed to sale at public auction, otherwise than in the execution of judicial process, shall be subject to certain rates or duties, which rates or duties vary according to the classification of the property. Sections 5875 and 5876 provide for quarterly accounts to be filed by licensed auctioneers, setting forth a full and true statement and exhibit of all property of every class sold or struck off by them, and further provide that within fifteen days from the date of any such account so filed the auctioneer shall pay to the county treasury the duties accruing on the sales mentioned in such account according to the provisions of said section 5870; while section 5877 makes the auctioneer liable to penalty for neglecting or refusing to file said account or refusing to pay the duties provided for.

"It seems that not much attention has been paid by the administrative officers of this county to the provisions of section 5870, and upon consultation with Mr. Halbedel of the county department of the bureau of inspection, and upon examination, in company with Mr. Halbedel, of returns made to the state auditor, the same situation is more or less apparent with respect to the non-observance of this law in all the other counties of the state.

"Taking the view that if the provisions of section 5870 and related sections of the General Code are constitutional they should be enforced, and deeming the question one of statewide importance, Mr. Halbedel expressly requested me to put to you the question as to the constitutionality of these provisions. I am aware that it is not the policy of your office to invite inquiries which do not call for the construction of application of statutes, but which present bare questions as to their constitutionality. However, as Mr. Halbedel, as I have before stated, has expressly requested me to submit this matter to you, I do not feel that I can do otherwise than accede to his request.

"Without discussing the matter at length, I suppose the first question presented is whether the rates or duties provided for in section 5870 are to be considered a tax upon the property sold or an occupational tax upon the auctioneer (97 U. S., 566; Cooley on Taxation, 1106). If the former, it will be manifestly difficult to sustain the constitutionality of the statute in face of the provisions of section 2 of article XII of the constitution, which provides that laws shall be passed taxing by uniform rule all real and personal property according to its true value in money. If, on the other hand, these duties are to be considered a tax on the occupation of the auctioneer, the question as to the constitutionality of these provisions may be more open.

"Historically, it may be noted that the statutory provisions in question were originally enacted March 16, 1840, taking effect March 1, 1841. Thereafter this act of the legislature was published in Swan's Revised Statutes, page 56, but later intentionally omitted from Swan & Critchfield's statutes. On April 3, 1867, the legislature by joint resolution declared this law valid and directed said act as originally enacted to be brought forward and republished in volume 64 Ohio Laws. Subsequent to this, the act was incorporated in Swan and Sayler's supplement to the Revised Statutes of Ohio, and since that time has found a place in our published statutory law. The existence of these statutes was recognized by the supreme court in the case of Sipe v. Murphy, 49 Ohio St., 536, but as far as I know, the constitutionality of any of the provisions of this act has never been presented as a question in any reported case."

As your letter contains a complete history of the law involved in your inquiry, it is not necessary to more than observe that since it appears that it was enacted in 1840, and no question of its constitutionality having heretofore been raised, it would seem to be rather late now to question its validity. The provisions of this law which I desire to consider in connection with my answer to your inquiry are sections and parts of sections 5866, 5870, 5876 and 5877 of the General Code.

It is provided in section 5866 aforesaid that a person shall not exercise the occupation of auctioneer or sell by public auction, vendue or outcry, any property or effects, except utensils of husbandry, household furniture, real estate, produce, horses, sheep, hogs and neat cattle, without a license as herein provided.

It is further provided in said section that whoever exercises such occupation or attempts to sell, by public vendue, auction or outcry, any property or effects, except as herein provided, without such license, shall forfeit and pay not more than five hundred dollars or less than one hundred dollars, to be recovered in the name of the state.

Section 5870 aforesaid, under which your question is directly raised, provides as follows:

"Property exposed to sale by public auction with the exceptions mentioned in sections fifty-eight hundred and sixty-six and fifty-eight hundred and sixty-seven, shall be subject, each time they are struck off, to duties at the following rates, calculated on the sums for which such property is struck off, namely:

"1. Sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, spice, salt, fish, oil and wine, at the rate of seventy-five cents for each hundred dollars.

"2. Vessels and boats, including engines, tackle, apparel, and furniture belonging to boats and vessels, at the rate of one dollar for each hundred dollars.

"3. Queensware, glassware and ardent spirits, at the rate of one dollar and fifty cents for each hundred dollars.

"4. Dry goods, hardware and cutlery, and other articles not included in the foregoing classes, at the rate of two dollars for each hundred dollars."

It is further provided in section 5875 aforesaid, that a licensed auctioneer shall make a written quarterly account, dated on the first days of March, June, September and December in each year, in which he shall state in detail: (1) The sums for which property has been sold at each auction held by him from the date of his license, or from the date of his last quarterly account, the names of the persons on whose account the sale was made, the day of sale, and the amount of each day's sale. (2) The amount of other sales made by him, or any person associated with him or in his employ, of property liable to auction duties. (3) The amount of duties chargeable under the provisions of this chapter on sales, public and private, of property subject to duties under the provisions of this chapter.

Section 5876 provides in what manner said account shall be verified and then provides that said auctioneer, within fifteen days from the date of such account, shall deliver to the county treasurer, and a duplicate copy thereof to the county auditor, and, at the same time, shall pay to such treasurer the amount of duties accruing on the sales mentioned in such account.

By the provisions of the succeeding section, 5877, any auctioneer neglecting or refusing to exhibit his quarterly account and deliver it properly verified, or who neglects or refuses to pay the duties required to the treasurer of the proper county within the time required, shall forfeit his license and not exceeding one thousand dollars, with the costs of prosecution, and be liable for such duties, to be recovered by an action in the name of the state.

It appears from your letter that you have some doubts as to the constitutionality of the foregoing provisions of the law regulating auctions and especially of the provisions of section 5870, supra.

I learn in this connection that a matter is now pending before you involving the imposition of the duties provided for in said section and the collection thereof by your office, and in which it is contended that said provisions are in conflict with section 2 of article XII of the constitution, which provides, among other things, that:

"Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money."

The real and only question to be considered in this connection is whether the foregoing provisions of section 5870, considered and interpreted in connection with the other provisions of law above quoted, are based upon the police power of the state or its taxing power. In other words, do the provisions of said section impose a tax upon said property therein specified for the purpose of raising a general revenue, or are the provisions of said section intended to regulate the auction of goods under the police power of the state? Manifestly if the duties imposed by said section are intended for the purpose of revenue in the exercise of the taxing power of the state, they are unconstitutional under section 2 above quoted. It is immaterial under what name the money specified in said section is levied upon the property therein described. As has been frequently observed by our courts, "there is no magic in names." If this money is charged against the property described in said section as property to raise a revenue for general purposes, it is a tax notwithstanding the legislature has denominated it a duty. Upon the other hand, if it is an exercise only of the police power of the state as a matter of regulation of auction sales and as a means of safeguarding the public against any fraud and deception that may be practiced in such sales, or for any reason which may substantially affect public interest, in the judgment of the law making power, it is not a tax and does not come within the inhibition of section 2 of article XII of the constitution. It may be stated as a general rule of law that the legislature has the discretion to levy license taxes upon any occupation it may select and it has the right to classify occupations and businesses and license some while omitting others and providing for a different amount assessed against each class. All vocations within the state may be licensed or some may be spared. Some may be required to pay a small fee and others a heavy license. The legislature has a wide discretion in this matter and the courts will not review its action unless the classification is arbitrary and unreasonable or in effect no classification.

"The constitutional rule that taxes shall be equal and uniform is regarded as having no direct application to license or occupation tax, or if applicable at all, as not depriving the legislature of the power of dividing the subject of license taxation into classes. The only constitutional limitation upon the imposition of license taxes, so far as it concerns their equality and uniformity, is that they shall be equal and uniform on all persons and subjects within a certain class. A license tax is uniform and equal when it bears equally upon each individual belonging to a described class upon which the tax is imposed. Constitutions do not require that all occupations, professions and businesses be taxed equally and uniformly; they simply require that all persons or subjects within the same class be taxed equally and uniformly." Hager v. Walker, 129 American State Report, 255, note "B" and cases there cited.

It has long and frequently been decided by the supreme court of this state that occupations may be regulated by license with the exception, until recently, of the liquor traffic, which until 1914 was specially exempted by schedule 18 of the constitution. The right to so license occupations is perhaps more exhaustively discussed in Marmet v. The state, 45 O. S., 63, than in any other reported case, and I am convinced that a careful consideration of the conclusions reached by the court in this case and of the reasons as therein given for such conclusions will furnish a solution for the question now before us.

This was a case in which a law imposing a license fee on the occupation of the keepers and owners of livery sale or boarding stables and the owners of all vehicles used upon the streets, and other occupations, in cities of the first grade of the first class in this state, was under consideration. In that case the court expressly held, that:

> "The general assembly has power to regulate occupations by license, and to compel, by imposition of a fine, payment of a reasonable fee, where a special benefit is conferred by the public upon those who follow an occupation, or where the occupation imposes special burdens on the public, or where it is injurious to or dangerous to the public."

Commenting upon the provision of this law in connection with the claim that its provisions were in conflict with section 2 of article XII of the constitution, the court said:

> "It is further urged that the sections quoted are in conflict with section 2, of article XII, of the constitution, which provides that 'laws shall be passed taxing by a uniform rule all moneys,' etc., 'according to its true value,' and is an attempt, under form of license, to raise money for general revenue. Section 20, if regarded as imposing a tax, does not purport to tax property; neither does it. An owner may use upon his own premises, and he may manufacture, and may sell any number of vehicles without coming within the provisions of this section. Only when he desires to use such vehicles upon the streets must he pay the annual license fee. * * * The power to tax or regulate by license arises from the general legislative power given by section 1, of article II of the constitution, and is not derived from section 2, of article XII. The latter section is but a limitation upon the taxing power, and it has been often held that the requirement of this section is simply that taxes upon property, as such shall be by a uniform rule, but that this does not impair the power of the general assembly to use its discretion when the burden is not placed upon property."

The court, in considering the question of whether the money received for licenses under this law could be considered as money raised for general revenue, further says:

> "So other moneys arising from licenses, though required to be placed to the credit of the general fund, do not, by reason of that fact, become general revenue. If revenue is necessarily beneficial to all the people within the jurisdiction in which it is raised, it may then be classed as general revenue; otherwise, it is special."

Manifestly the foregoing remarks of the court apply with equal force to the provisions of section 5870, supra. The duty imposed upon the property specified therein is not levied upon it as property, nor does it purport so to do. If it was a tax upon the property as such, it would be immaterial where or how or in what manner it was offered for sale or sold, or whether it was offered for sale or sold at all. The statute, however provides that it is to be levied only when it is sold at auction. So long, therefore, as it remains in the hands of its owner or so long as it is not sold at auction it is not subject to the payment of any of the duties imposed by the provisions of said section. What then is the basis of the charge, or what is the condition which brings into force the provision of this law? It is the selling at auction and it alone which invokes the application of the duty, and the tax thus imposed is not upon the property but upon the selling of the property.

As the court remarked in Marmet v. The State, supra, the owner of a vehicle may use it upon his own premises without a license. It is only when he desires to use it upon the street that he must pay a fee. A very familiar illustration of this distinction may be found in the law requiring the registration of automobiles. The owner of an automobile is not required to register and procure a license unless he intends to operate and drive his machine upon a public highway. So long as it remains upon the owner's premises it is not subject to the registration law and no one for a moment would contend that this law imposed a tax upon the machine itself.

If, however, there were any doubts remaining regarding this feature of this section, its provisions when considered in connection with the other provisions herein quoted are wholly inconsistent with the theory that the duties imposed thereon are a tax. It is apparent that this section was enacted by the legislature as a basis or measure by which it undertook to make an assessment against the auctioneer and his business in addition to the license required by section 5866. There are no provisions to be found in this law whereby the property or the owner of the property may be held for the duties imposed by section 5876. Upon the contrary, it is expressly provided by section 5876 that the auctioneer shall report and pay the amounts due under the provisions of this section and, in the event of his failure so to do, it is further provided by the succeeding section that he shall not only forfeit his license, but in addition a sum of not to exceed one thousand dollars and that duties so assessed may be recovered from him by an action in the name of the state. Here is a clearly expressed purpose to make the auctioneer responsible, and him only, for the payment of these duties. This method of assessing occupations has been universally approved by the courts and it may be stated as a general rule that capital invested, the amount of stock in trade, or the monthly or annual sales, or the receipts of business constitute a proper basis for graduating license taxes.

It is said in Hager v. Walker, 129 American State, Report, 255, that:

> "No constitutional objection can be urged against such classification, when reasonably made. Taxes thus imposed are none the less occupation taxes as distinguished from property taxes because graduated according to the magnitude of the business done or capital invested."

In the case of Kittaning Coal Co. v. Commonwealth, 79 Pa. St. 100, it was held that a tax of three cents for every ton of coal mined by every company incorporated or organized by or under any law of the state was not a tax on the coal but on the business.

In Sacremento v. Crooker, 16 Cal. 119, it was held that a tax based upon the monthly sales of retail merchants was a tax upon the business and not upon the property used in such business.

In Goldsmith v. Huntsville, 120 Ala. 182, it was held:

> "A tax on the gross amount of sales of a retail merchant, imposed by ordinance of the city, is not a tax on the goods themselves or on the fruits of the sale, but upon the business of selling and is not therefore a property tax but an occupation or privilege tax."

In view of the foregoing considerations I conclude that the duties imposed by section 5870, supra, are a tax upon the business of selling the property specified in said section and not upon said property.

While it is not necessary to consider further elements involved in the determination of the question submitted, yet I do not hesitate to say that the elements of intention to produce a general revenue by the provisions of the law in question is also wholly lacking and therefore necessarily fatal to the claim that the law imposes a tax. This conclusion is based upon the authority of Cincinnati Gas Light & Coke Co. v. State, 18 O. S., 238, in which a law providing for the inspection of gas meters, the protection of gas consumers and the protection and regulation of gas and light companies was under consideration by the court. This law provided for an assessment upon the several gas companies of the state in proportion to the amount of capital invested. The court in considering the claim that this law was in contravention of section 2 of article XII, said:

"It is settled by the repeated decisions of this court, in Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St., 243; Reeves v. The Treasurer of Wood Co., 8 Ohio St., 333; and Baker v. the City of Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St., 534, that the section of the constitution just referred to is only applicable to, and furnishes the governing principle for, all laws levying taxes for general revenue, whether for state, county, township, or municipal corporation purposes.

"Now, although the assessment or charge upon the gas companies of the state imposed by the statute in question may be a tax, in the widest import of the word, it certainly is not a tax for purposes of general revenue. It is the assessment of a charge for a special purpose growing out of the exercise of the supervisory power of the government over the business in which these companies are engaged. The above section of the constitution is, in effect, a mandate upon the legislature that all property, of every nature, shall be taxed by a uniform rule; but the charge or assessment here complained of is not a tax on property, but rather a charge upon individual corporations—artificial persons—and the business in which they are engaged; and it by no means follows, that because the state is compelled to tax all property by a uniform rule, that it is therefore cut off from all power to lay assessments and charges for exceptional and special purposes coming clearly within the general legislative power conferred by the constitution upon the general assembly.

"It is settled by authoritative decision that, under the present constitution of the state, local assessments may be made to pay for lands appropriated for streets within the limits of municipal corporations, and for their improvement and repair; for the making of ditches and drains, and free turnpike roads outside of such corporations; and that charges may be imposed for licenses to theaters. We have several other laws imposing and authorizing charges on particular branches of business, through the medium of licenses, which can be obtained only by paying for them; which laws are supposed to be in full force, and the validity of which, so far as I know, have never been questioned. And the same may be said of the levying of duties on auction sales."

We have in this case not only authority for the proposition that the duty imposed in section 5870, supra, is not for general revenue as required in the case of the levying of a tax as contemplated by the constitutional provision in question, but we have in the concluding remarks of the court an express reference to the law we are now considering, by which the court indicates that it is an illustration of the levying of a duty for a special purpose. This reference, while not conclusive of the question before us, indicates very strongly the view entertained by the court of the object and purpose of section 5870 and related sections.

One more proposition may be important in connection with this discussion, although not adverted to in your inquiry: Are the duties imposed by section 5870 a reasonable exercise of the police power of the state? Again, it may be stated as a general rule of the law that when police regulation is the object of a license, the nature of the business or occupation upon which the burden is laid must necessarily to a great degree determine the reasonableness of the amount charged. Ordinarily the amount so charged is determined by the relation any business or occupation may bear to the general public good or interest of the community. The cost of police surveillance as well as the expense of issuing a license and the keeping of official records thereof are material items to be considered, and usually furnish the basis of the charge made. In cases where the business is admittedly harmful to the public or may become a nuisance by affording a means of deceiving and defrauding the public, a charge may be made which tends to limit and discourage the business. Gray on Limitations of Taxing Power, section 1452; Cooley on Taxation, section 1142.

Without any reflection upon the integrity or reputation of the high-class firm of auctioneers, whose case you have under consideration, it may be said that in many instances auction sales are conducted in the cities of this state by non-resident auctioneers and fake bidders, who depend largely upon the "stranger within the gates" for business and who would certainly come within the extreme requirements of the rule I have just stated.

In view of these considerations, therefore, I am not prepared to say that as a police regulation the duties imposed by said section 5870 are unreasonable. However, this is properly a question for judicial determination and until so determined it is the duty of administrative officers to enforce the law as they find it.

I conclude, therefore, that the duties imposed by section 5870, supra, are based upon the police and not the taxing power of the state and are not in contravention of section 2 of article XII of the constitution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—MAYOR—DUTY OF SUCH OFFICER IS TO CARRY OUT MANDATE OF APPELLATE COURT TO CARRY SENTENCE IMPOSED BY FORMER MAYOR INTO EXECUTION—NO AUTHORITY TO REMIT OR SUSPEND FINE.

A mayor has no duty to perform except to carry out mandate of appellate court to carry sentence imposed by former mayor into execution. No authority vested in him to remit or suspend fine.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 4, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to refer to your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "In 1912 the mayor imposed a fine of $100.00 and costs against a party for violation of the Sunday closing law. The case was appealed to the common pleas and appellate courts. Said courts confirmed the judgment of the mayor's court, the appellate court remanding the case back to the mayor's court for execution. The present mayor refuses either to commit the defendant to prison for non-payment of fine and costs, or to take any action looking to the collection of said fine and costs.
> "What, if any, legal procedure may be invoked by the city solicitor, or the council, to compel said mayor to perform his official duty?"

In addition to your letter I am in receipt of a copy of the Bill of Exceptions in the case of the State of Ohio v. Jerome Shine, signed by C. N. Shook, mayor, whose term of office expired under date of December 31, 1913; also a copy of the journal entry in the error proceedings in the court of appeals of Allen county, Ohio, in the case of Jerome Shine v. The State of Ohio, which journal entry is as follows:

COURT OF APPEALS—ALLEN COUNTY, OHIO.

CERTIFIED COPY OF JOURNAL ENTRY.

"At a former day of the January term of court for said year, this cause came on to be heard upon the petition in error, bill of exceptions, original papers, pleadings and the transcripts of the journal and docket entries of the Allen county court of common pleas, and the court of the mayor of the city of Lima, Ohio, was argued by counsel and taken under advisement by the court.

"Thereafter, this 30th day of June, 1915, and at the January term of court for said year, coming further to consider said cause and being duly advised in the premises and in consideration of the petition in error, bill of exceptions, original papers, pleadings and the transcripts of the journal and docket entries of the Allen county court of common pleas and the court of the mayor of the city of Lima, Ohio, and the arguments of counsel, the court finds no error apparent in the record of said proceedings and judgment.

"It is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged that the said judgment of the Allen county court of common pleas and the said judgment of the court of the mayor of the City of Lima, Ohio, be, and the same are hereby affirmed and that the defendant in error recover of said plaintiff in error its costs herein expended for all of which execution is hereby awarded.

"It is further ordered that a special mandate be sent to the court of the mayor of the city of Lima, Ohio, to carry this judgment and order into execution and the plaintiff in error, Jerome Shine, is remanded to the custody of the city of Lima, Ohio, to all of which the plaintiff in error excepts.

"O. K. John H. Klatte,
"Counsel for Plaintiff in Error.
"O. K. W. S. Jackson,
"Counsel for Defendant in Error."

In view of the question presented I communicated with the mayor of the city of Lima, with a view to ascertaining why he did not carry out the mandate of the court of appeals of Allen county, and under date of October 20th, he advised me as follows:

> "Answering your esteemed favor of recent date in which you ask for further data concerning the case of the State of Ohio v. Jerome Shine, permit me to say that I went into the fullest detail with State Inspector Will E. Heck, who notified me that he preferred to take the legal end of the subject up with you, as to what my official rights are. Have I the right to suspend a fine or not, that is what I want to know. If not, I will proceed at once to issue execution against all of the defendants in the cases now pending, and in case they can not pay I will commit them to the county jail. There are six cases pending, one of the defendants, Charles Athy, is dead. Three of them have no money, and the other two have no real estate. Athy, Shine and Ryan were bartenders. Awaiting an early reply, I am,

"Respectfully,

"(Signed) Miles O. Standish,
"Mayor of the City of Lima."

Since the conviction of the defendant involved in the case under consideration the city of Lima has had two mayors, and the question presented by the present mayor is whether or not he has the right to suspend the fine imposed by Mayor C. N. Shook in 1912, he stating that if he has not such right he will proceed to issue execution without delay.

Nowhere in the law do I find any provision which authorizes the mayor to remit a fine in whole or in part. In the case under consideration, which appears to be one of a number of cases of a similar character now before the mayor of Lima, the jurisdiction of the upper courts was invoked in accordance with law, and the intention of the mayor in assessing the fine of one hundred dollars and costs as a sentence was clearly manifested as a final order by the signing of the Bill of Exceptions; and it is my opinion that the present mayor of the city of Lima has no further power to exercise nor duty to perform than to carry out the mandate of the court of appeals, which is to carry the judgment of the mayor's court of the city of Lima into execution.

The question of legal procedure which might be invoked by the city solicitor or the council has not been gone into in view of the statement of the mayor as to his being in readiness to issue execution in case he has no right to suspend the fine.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT FOR SEVERAL BOND ISSUES, CITY OF MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 4, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE: Bonds purchased by the Industrial Commission from the city of Middletown, Ohio, aggregating $47,000, consisting of three issues as follows:

$7,000.00 of park bonds, being fourteen bonds of $500 each, falling due two each year on the first day of October from 1916 to 1922, both inclusive.

$25,000.00 of waterworks bonds, being fifty bonds of $500 each, falling due two each year on the first day of October from 1916 to 1939, both inclusive.

$15,000.00 of sewer bonds, being thirty bonds of $500 each, falling due two each year on the first day of October from 1916 to 1925, both inclusive.

I have examined the several transcripts of the bond issues above described and I find that the purposes for which the several issues are made are authorized by law; that the proceedings of the city commission of Middletown and other officers relative thereto have been regular and in conformity with statutory and charter requirements; that the total amount of said bonds and tax levy which will be necessary to pay interest thereon and create a sinking fund for their redemption when due exceeds no statutory or charter limitation.

I therefore certify that said bonds, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid obligations of the city of Middletown.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—COUNTY'S SHARE OF EXPENSE OF MAINTAINING CHILDREN COMMITTED BY JUVENILE COURT TO SAID BOARD FOR PLACING IN HOMES TO BE PAID FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND.

The county's share of expense of maintaining children committed by the juvenile court to the Ohio Board of State Charities for placing in homes to be paid from general county fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 5, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Section 1352-3 permits the Ohio Board of State Charities to receive under its care for placement in family homes, certain children.
> "Section 1352-4 provides that the county from whence the child came, shall be responsible for actual maintenance and necessary personal expenses until his placement in a suitable family home.
> "Will you kindly advise us from what fund the county treasurer is to pay for his service in respect to children committed under the following conditions:
> "1. When children are committed by the juvenile court judge from a county where there is no county children's home.
> "2. Where children are committed from a county where there is a county children's home, but where for various reasons the child may not be eligible for admission to that home."

Section 1653 of the General Code, as amended, (103 O. L., page 872) is as follows:

> "When a minor under the age of eighteen years, or any ward of the court under this chapter, is found to be dependent or neglected, the judge may make an order committing such child to the care of the children's home if there be one in the county where such court is held, if not, to such a home in another county, if willing to receive such child, for which the county commissioners of the county in which it has a settlement, shall pay reasonable board; or he may commit such child to the board of state charities or to some suitable state or county institution, or to the care of some reputable citizen of good moral character, or to the care of some training school or an industrial school, as provided by law, or to the care of some association willing to receive it, which embraces within its objects the purposes of caring for or obtaining homes for dependent, neglected or delinquent children or any of them, and which has been approved by the board of state charities as provided by law. When the health or condition of the child shall require it, the judge may cause the child to be placed in a public hospital or institution for treatment or special care, or in a private hospital or institution which will receive it for like purposes without charge. The court may make an examination regarding the income of the parents or guardian of a minor committed as provided by this section and may then order that such parent or guardian pay the institution or board to which the minor has been committed reasonable board for such minor, which order, if disobeyed, may be enforced by attachment as for contempt."

This section provides for the commitment of certain dependent or neglected children to the Board of State Charities for the purpose of having them placed in suitable homes under the direction and control of the board.

Section 1352-3 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 866) authorizes the board to receive children committed to it by the juvenile court; and section 1352-4 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 867) which provides for the payment of expenses in placing such child and one-half of the amount of board, if any, paid by said Board of State Charities by the county in which the child had legal residence when received by the State Board of Charities, is as follows:

"The actual traveling expenses of such child and that of the agents or visitors of said board in connection with placing such dependent or neglected child in a home and of subsequent visitation of such child, together with half the amount of board, if any, paid by said board on account of the child to the owners of such home shall be charged by the board of state charities to the county in which the child had a legal residence when received by such board. The treasurer of each county shall pay the quarterly draft of the board of state charities for the amount so chargeable against such county for the preceding quarter. The sums so received as well as payments for board as provided by sections 1352-5 and 1653 of the General Code, shall not be turned into the state treasury but shall be credited to a fund to be known as the child placing fund to be used to maintain the child-placing work of the board as provided by this chapter, but such money received for children's board shall be used only to pay the board of the child for which it may be paid by the individuals liable therefor."

"In any county where such home has not already been provided, the board of commissioners shall make temporary provision for destitute children by transferring them to the nearest children's home where they can be received and kept at the expense of the county, or by leasing suitable premises for that purpose, which shall be furnished, provided and managed in all respects as provided by law for the support and management of children's homes, but if such child be not abandoned or surrendered by its parents, a complaint must first be filed with the juvenile court setting forth the facts as to such children, and if such court commits such children to an institution or agency for the care of children, then said commissioners may pay reasonable board for such child, whether placed in an institution or with a private family. But the commissioners may provide for the care and support of such children within their respective counties, in the manner deemed best for the interest of such children, which may include the payment of board for such children in a private home, when placed therein by an institution or society certified by the board of state charities as provided by section 1352-1 of the General Code, and they shall levy an additional tax, which shall be used for that purpose only."

By referring to the latter part of section 3092, as amended, supra, it will be noted that provision is made for the creation of a fund to be used by the county commissioners to provide for the care and support of neglected or dependent children in counties where no children's home has been provided when such care and support is provided within the county. The case presented, however, deals solely with the payment of expenses incurred in connection with children committed to the care of the State Board of Charities in the first instance where there is no county children's home, and in the second place, for various reasons, the child may not be eligible for admission to the county children's home which has been provided. The fund appropriated for a county children's home may not be used for such purpose in view of the provisions of section 3105 of the General Code, which provides that the expenditure of such fund shall be on the order of the trustees of the home, whereas under the provisions of section 1352-4 of the General Code, supra, the payment of the amount chargeable against the county is made to the Board of State Charities direct, there being no provision for the approval of the trustees of the children's home.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the expenditure for the care and support of children committed by the Board of State Charities by the juvenile court in the county where there is no children's home or in a county where the child may not be eligible to admission to the children's home is to be paid out of the general county fund, attention, however, being directed to the provisions of section 1653 of the General Code, as amended, supra, to the effect that an order may be made by the court directing the parents or guardian to pay to the Board of State Charities reasonable board for the minor committed, under pain of attachment or contempt proceedings.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE ARMORY BOARD—APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE FOR REAL ESTATE IN ZANESVILLE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 5, 1915.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary, Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—At your request I have examined the abstract of title to the following described real estate situated in the county of Muskingum and in the city of Zanesville, and bounded and described as follows:

> "Being lots 18, 19 and 20 of Van Horne's addition to the city of Zanesville, as the same is recorded in vol. V, page 504 of the deed records of Muskingum county, and being situated in Elberon avenue in said city."

The abstract of title shows an estate in fee simple in said premises in the city of Zanesville as of the date when said abstract was made.

In addition to the abstract you also submitted two transcripts of the minutes of the board of education of Zanesville, Ohio, the first of said transcripts being of date August 30, 1915, and the second, October 20, 1915. In addition to these transcripts you submitted two deeds, one from the board of education of the Zanesville city school district to Charles Underhill, which deed is dated October 21, 1915, and the other deed from Charles E. Underhill and Myrtle Underhill, his wife, to the state of Ohio.

An examination of the transcripts above referred to shows that in the sale of the premises by the board of education of the Zanesville city school district all provisions of law relative to such sales have been carefully complied with.

The deeds above referred to have been properly executed, and when the same are placed on record will convey to the state of Ohio an estate in fee simple to the premises hereinbefore described. The deed from the board of education to Charles E. Underhill should be placed on record before the deed from Charles E. Underhill to the state is filed for record.

I am returning herewith the abstract of title, the transcripts and the deeds above referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE—FILING OF FORMAL APPLICATION WITHIN A REASONABLE TIME PRIOR TO PROPOSED EXAMINATION IS MANDATORY—IF APPLICANT PERMITTED TO TAKE EXAMINATION, BOARD CANNOT SUBSEQUENTLY QUESTION HIS RIGHT.

The provision of section 486-11, G. C., 106 O. L., 407, requiring an applicant to file a formal application within a reasonable time prior to a proposed civil service examination, considered in connection with other provisions of said section, is mandatory.

When, however, the commission permits an applicant to take the examination without filing his application as so required, and accepts his application during said examination, it cannot thereafter question his right to be examined or withhold from him the benefits thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 6, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your favor of November 5, 1915, as follows:

"On September 29th, we conducted an examination for superintendent of the women's reformatory at Marysville.

"The board of administration urged that this examination be conducted at the earliest possible date. A special bulletin was issued advertising this examination, but the time within which applications could be received prior to the date of the examination was so short that the commission felt it advisable, in order to secure as large a number of applicants as possible, to waive an established rule in regard to the filing of applications. One application was filed at noon on the day of the examination; two applications were filed on October 1st, and one application on October 4th, by persons who stated at the time that they had not understood the rule of the commission.

"When the results of this examination were made known, it appeared that certain individuals who stood high on the list had not filed applications before the date of the examination, and a question has been raised as to the legality of their standing in view of this fact.

"Pursuant to section 486-11 of the civil service law, the commission has been acting in accordance with the rule established by the former civil service commission under the same section of the former law, requiring that all applicants shall file applications not less than three days prior to the date of examination. However, since the time for filing such application was short, the commission felt it advisable to receive the applications that came in late. No formal action was taken, or minutes made, authorizing the filing of late applications."

Section 486-11 of the General Code, 106 O. L., page 407, to which you refer in your letter, provides as follows:

> "The commission shall require persons applying for admission to any examination, provided for by this act or by the rules of the commission prescribed thereunder, to file with the commission within a reasonable time prior to the proposed examination a formal application in which the applicant shall state under oath or affirmation:
> "(1) Full name, residence and postoffice address.
> "(2) Nationality, age and place and date of birth.
> "(3) Health and physical capacity for the public service sought.
> "(4) Business and employments and residences for five previous years.
> "(5) Such other information as may be reasonably required touching the applicant's merit and fitness for the public service sought; but no inquiry shall be made as to any religious or political opinions or affiliations of the applicant."

It is further provided in the last clause of the said section that blank forms for applications shall be furnished by the commission and that it may require in connection with the application certificates of persons having knowledge of the applicant as the good of the service may demand. It further provides that the commission may refuse to examine an applicant, or after an examination to certify an eligible, who is found to lack any of the preliminary requirements for the examination or who is physically so disabled as to be rendered unfit for the performance of the duties of the position which he seeks, or who is addicted to the habitual use of intoxicating liquors or drugs to excess, or who has been guilty of any crime or of infamous or notoriously disgraceful conduct, or who has been dismissed from either branch of the civil service for delinquency or misconduct, or who has made false statements of any material fact, or practiced or attempted to practice any deception or fraud in his application or in his examination, in establishing his eligibility or securing his appointment. The requirement that the application shall be filed within a reasonable time prior to a proposed examination I regard as mandatory when considered in connection with the other provisions of the section in question. The plain purpose of the law in this regard is to require the application to be filed at such a time prior to the examination as to afford the commission the opportunity to examine it and to investigate as fully as it may deem proper regarding the applicant in connection with the other requirements of this section.

You state in your letter that under the rules established by the commission applicants have heretofore been required to file their applications not less than three days prior to the date of examination, but in the examination in question this provision was waived by the commission. In view of the mandatory provisions of the law, it is apparent that the reasonable time as therein required may not depend upon the exigencies that may arise in any particular examination. Regardless, however, of these facts, it appears from your communication that the commission, in the examination in question, with full knowledge of all the facts, permitted applicants to take the examination without complying with the foregoing requirements as to the time of filing their applications. The commission thereby not only recognized their right to take the examination without complying with such requirements, but it dealt with them in the capacity, character or status of persons duly qualified to take said examination. The commission is, therefore, now estopped to deny that such applicants had this right or that they had the capacity or status of duly qaulified applicants, it must continue to recognize the qualifications it attributed to them in the first instance and cannot now deprive them of the benefits they have earned and must certify them as eligibles in the order of their standing as a result of such examination. If other applicants feel that they have any rights which are inconsistent with this attitude or course of the commission, they must appeal to some authority other than the commission for relief.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—FOLLOWING FORMS APPROVED—(a) PETITION OF LAND OWNERS—(b) RESOLUTION AND APPLICATION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—(c) APPLICATION FOR STATE AID FUNDS—(d) RESOLUTION OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—(e) RESOLUTION AND APPLICATION OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES (f) FINAL RESOLUTION, TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 6, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 22, 1915, in which you submit for approval a number of forms for the use of your department, which forms you have designated as follows, to wit:

"(1) Petition of land owners.
"(2) Resolution and application of county commissioners.
"(3) Application for state aid funds.
"(4) Resolution of township trustees.
"(5) Resolution and application of township trustees, and
"(6) Final resolution (township trustees)."

The first form referred to by you and of which you submit a draft is that required under section 197 of the Cass highway law, section 1204, G. C., where the owners of land abutting on an inter-county highway or main market road petition county commissioners for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the same under the provisions of the chapter of the Cass highway law relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department.

Section 1204, G. C., insofar as it is pertinent, reads as follows:

> "If the owners of twenty-five per cent. or more of the lineal feet abutting on an inter-county highway or main market road, petition the county commissioners for its construction, improvement, maintenance or repair under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners shall grant the petition if they are of the opinion that the improvement will be for the best interest of the public, and shall thereupon make application to the state highway commissioner for state aid as hereinbefore provided."

The form submitted by you is applicable only to inter-county highways and not to main market roads, and certain changes in the phraseology suggest themselves as desirable, in view of the language of section 1204, G. C., I therefore suggest the following as a proper form for use under the section in question:

RECEIVED _____
Pet. No. _____
Name of Road_____

PETITION OF LAND OWNERS TO COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.
(Sec. 1204, G. C.)

Form 1.—To be used by land owners when petitioning the county commissioners to apply for state aid.

We, the undersigned, being the owners of real estate situated in _____ County, State of Ohio, and said real estate so owned by us being at least twenty-five per cent. of the lineal feet abutting on that part of {inter-county highway / main market road} No. _____ hereinafter described, hereby respectfully petition your honorable board for the {construction / improvement / maintenance / repair} under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231-4 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio of the following described portion of said {inter-county highway / main market road} No. _____, to wit:

in _____ Township _____, in all a distance of _____miles.

We hereby respectfully represent that the {construction / improvement / maintenance / repair} of said portion of highway above described will be for the best interest of the public, and request that your board makes application to the state highway commissioner for state aid in the {construction / improvement / maintenance / repair} of said above described portion of highway as provided by law.

We further represent, each for himself, that the real estate owned by us as aforesaid abuts on said described portion of said {inter-county highway / main market road} No. _____ for the number of lineal feet set opposite our respective signatures.

Names.	Lineal feet abutting.	Names.	Lineal feet abutting.

The second form referred to by you is that required where county commissioners apply for state aid. The draft submitted by you is applicable only to intercounty highways, whereas county commissioners may now apply for state aid on both intercounty highways and main market roads. The pertinent provisions of law are now found in sections 184, 186 and 197 of the Cass highway law, being sections 1191, 1193 and 1204, G. C. Said sections in so far as they relate to this matter read as follows:

"Section 184. The commissioners of any county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from any appropriation by the state, from any fund available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways. * * *

"Section 186. Each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county or main market roads, shall be accompanied by a properly certified resolution of the county commissioners * * * stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the inter-county or main market roads therein described, which may include any portion of a highway in the limits of any village, when the same is a continuation of the proposed improvement and the consent of the village has been first obtained. * * * Each application for state aid shall also contain an agreement on the part of the county commissioners * * * to pay one-half of the cost and expense of surveys and other expenses preliminary to the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of said highway.

"Section 197. * * * The county commissioners may, without the presentation of any petition, make application to the state highway commissioner for aid in the construction of inter-county highways or main market roads under the provisions of this chapter and nothing herein shall in any way restrict their right to make such application."

"In case the county commissioners do not file any application for state aid before January first of any year in which the funds will be available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of some one or more of the inter-county highways or main market roads, then the board of township trustees of any township within the county may file such application, and the state highway commissioner may co-operate with such trustees in the construction or improvement of said highway in the manner hereinafter provided in cases where the county commissioners make such application."

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—FAILURE OF CONTRACTOR TO COMPLETE A ROAD IMPROVEMENT—HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER UNABLE TO COMPLETE WORK OUT OF MONEYS DUE CONTRACTOR—CONTRACTOR'S BONDSMEN SHOULD FURNISH ADDITIONAL FUNDS, OTHERWISE LIABILITY SHOULD BE ENFORCED BY SUIT.

Where a contractor on state highway work has abandoned or failed or refused to complete his contract and the state highway commissioner is unable to complete the work out of moneys due or becoming due the contractor, the highway commissioner should require the contractor or his bondsmen to furnish such additional funds as are needed. If they fail so to do the first step to be taken is to attempt to enforce their liability by suit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 8, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of September 2, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "On the 11th day of October, 1912, a contract was entered into between the state and A. Fry for the construction of Pike county state highway 'E' of the Big Basin road in Newton township under petition No. 651, of the commissioners of Pike county. The amount of contract was $2,800.29. Bond for the performance of the contract, in the amount of $2,800.29, was executed by Charles Ault and N. E. Ice, of Gillespieville, Ohio, as sureties.
> "Mr. Fry started the work on the road late in the season of 1912, and continued to work spasmodically until October 15, 1913, on which date he wrote the following communication to this department:

"'I have this day, October 15, 1913, notified your resident engineer, Harold McCormick, in person that I have given up my contract and abandoned my work on the Big Basin road, petition No. 612.'

"On October 17, 1913, the following letter was sent to bondsmen of Mr. Fry:

"'You are bondsmen for Mr. A. Fry for the proper completion of the construction of the Big Basin road, state highway "E," petition 651, in Newton township, Pike county. We have a letter from Mr. Fry, dated October 15th, in which he states that he has abandoned this contract.

"'It is imperative that this work be completed at an early date, and as Mr. Fry has abandoned the work, we do hereby extend to you as bondsmen the privilege of taking over the contract and completing the same in accordance with the plans and specifications. This communication is being sent by registered letter and we shall expect a reply as to your pleasure in the matter not later than October 22nd.

"'Should you decide to take over the contract and complete the same, future estimates will be sent to you as surety for Mr. A. Fry.

"'Hoping you will be able to undertake the work at once and prosecute it to an early completion, we are,'

"To the above letter, Mr. Ice replied on October 21st, as follows:

"'Yours of the 17th inst. at hand. Would like to know the amount of money still back on the Big Basin job. I put in several days' work on the job after Mr. Fry quit, and Mr. McCormick, the engineer at Waverly, informed me that he was going to give it to another man and wouldn't allow me any estimation on the work I did. I will go ahead and finish the job. Let me know at once what to do. Is Mr. McCormick the one to give the estimation of work done?'

"On October 23, 1913, the following letter was written to Mr. Ice:

"'In reply to yours of October 20th, must say that you have probably misunderstood Mr. McCormick when he is quoted as having said that he was going to give the work of the contract to another man. Undoubtedly Mr. McCormick would not assume to take such authority as it really is not within his power and he well knows the same.

"'We will be pleased to have the bondsmen complete the contract and I assure you that if you can undertake it and will do so, we will pay to the bondsmen, as surety, the balance still due on the contract. This balance amounts to $2,070.39.

"'Please understand that we will not allow any partial estimate or pay any money until the work is completed in its entirety. If you are not in a position to undertake the work according to this proposition, please let us know at once and we will proceed to have the work done at the expense of the contractor and his bondsmen if there is not sufficient in the funds to complete it.'

"After that no work was accomplished and both contractor and bondsmen abandoned the work.

"On November 10, 1913, the following proposal was submitted to Mr. Marker by Galbraith and Shoemaker, contractors of Piketon, Ohio:

"'Pursuant to your request of a few days ago, I hereby submit my proposal for the completion of the Big Basin state aid road in Pike county.

"'I will take the work as it is at present, and complete it in every detail in accordance with the plans and specifications for the sum of $2,070.39.

"'It is to be distinctly understood that I do not assume any outstanding obligations which may have been incurred in the construction of the work to the present time.'

"No signed agreement with Galbraith and Shoemaker is on file and contractor cannot produce any. We have on file, however, original and duplicate bond in the sum of $2,000.00 signed by Galbraith and Shoemaker as principals, and Royal Indemnity Co. (by John A. Detmars, attorney in fact) as surety, under date of November 22, 1913.

"The work on the road was carried to completion by Galbraith and Shoemaker, and final estimate issued July 21, 1915.

"Galbraith and Shoemaker now claim that they are entitled to $2,070.39 for all work performed by them, while only $1,694.41 was available from original contract price of $2,800.29 after deducting payments made to A. Fry.

"Following is a statement of estimates issued:

"Est. No. 1 issued Dec. 5, 1912, to A. Fry in amount of	$381.60
"Est. No. 2 issued Feb. 24, 1913, to A. Fry in amount of	348.30
"Est. No. 3 issued June 1, 1913, to A. Fry in amount of	375.98
"Est. No. 4 issued July 1, 1914, to Galbraith and Shoemaker	401.62
"Est. No. 5 issued Nov. 16, 1914, to Galbraith and Shoemaker	660.02
"Est. No. 6 issued July 21, 1915, to Galbraith and Shoemaker	632.77
"Total	$2,800.29

"With the above facts before you, I ask for your opinion in the following:

"1st. Have Galbraith and Shoemaker a just claim for the amount of $375.98, which they claim is due them?

"2nd. If above claim is due them, from what source and how must the claim be satisfied?"

I have ascertained from the files in your office that the original final resolution providing for the construction of this road was adopted by the county commissioners of Pike county, September 10, 1912, and provided for an expenditure of $3,220.00, one-half of which was to be paid by the state and one-half by the county. On May 5, 1913, a supplementary final resolution was adopted providing for an additional expenditure of $200.00 to be divided equally between the state and the county, making a total of $3,420.00 available for the construction of the road. Prior to November 10, 1913, the date upon which Galbraith and Shoemaker submitted their proposition, the sum of $1,105.88 had been paid to the original contractor, A. Fry, and $471.55 had been expended for engineering expense, making a total expenditure prior to November 10, 1915, of $1,577.43. Inasmuch as the total amount available for the construction of the road was $3,420.00, there was left in the fund applicable for the completion of the road on November 10, 1913, only $1,842.57. The state highway commissioner, in his efforts to complete the road, found it necessary, however, to enter into a contract with Galbraith and Shoemaker for an amount not only in excess of the unpaid balance of the original contract price, but also in excess of the amount left in the fund available for the completion of the road.

Section 1203-1, G. C., as that section stood at the time the original contract was entered into, provided among other things that if the contractor abandoned or failed or refused to complete a contract, the state highway commissioner should re-let the work or complete the same by force account and in either case deduct the cost and expense thereof from any moneys due or becoming due the contractor and in case there were not sufficient moneys due the contractor to pay for the work, it became the duty of the highway commissioner to require the contractor or his bondsman to pay for it.

I am advised by a representative of Galbraith and Shoemaker that as a matter of fact no written contract was ever executed between the State of Ohio and Galbraith and Shoemaker for the reason that when Galbraith and Shoemaker filed their bond they were under the impression that they had filed all the documents required by the department. It appears from your files that Galbraith and Shoemaker made a written proposition to the state highway commissioner and that they thereafter filed a bond covering the faithful performance of the work which they had offered to do and that the state highway department thereafter recognized the existence of a contract between the state and this firm, and paid a number of estimates on account of the same.

In view of all these circumstances it is my opinion that the first step to be taken in this matter is to make an effort to collect from A. Fry, the original contractor, and his bondsmen, the difference between the amount due or becoming due to them and the cost of completing the work. In case the contractor and his bondsmen should prove insolvent, or for any other reason it should be found impossible to enforce the obligation on the part of the contractor and his bondsmen, I am of the opinion that an appropriation by the general assembly will be necessary before the claim of Galbraith and Shoemaker can be paid. Their claim is a just one and, upon being furnished with the necessary facts, this department will undertake to enforce the obligation of the contractor and his bondsmen. In case that obligation cannot be enforced on account of insolvency, or for any other cause, the facts should be brought to the attention of the general assembly at its next session in order that an appropriation may be made and that justice may be done to the contractors in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DENTAL BOARD—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO REINSTATE DENTIST WHEN LICENSE HAS BEEN REVOKED FOR CAUSE—HOW PERSON MAY BE RESTORED TO RIGHT TO PRACTICE DENTISTRY.

1. The state dental board is without authority to reinstate a dentist in practice or restore his license when it has revoked the same as provided by law for a cause or causes specified in section 1325, G. C.

2. Said board, however, after a reasonable time has elapsed and upon satisfactory proof of the complete reformation of the party in question and that he now possesses a good moral character, may permit him to take an examination as provided in section 1321, G. C., and succeeding sections, and may again grant him a license if he successfully passes said examination.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 8, 1915.

The Ohio State Dental Board, Toledo, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of November 1, 1915, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

"We have before the Ohio State Dental Board the case of Dr. T. H. R., asking for reinstatement into the practice of dentistry.

"His license was revoked five years ago by the board, upon the charge of using intoxicants to excess and immoral conduct.

"Will you please give us your opinion as to whether the board can legally reinstate or restore him back into the practice of dentistry again and thus give him another chance?"

The sections of the General Code under which the license named in your letter was prevoked provided at the time of said revocation as follows:

"Sec. 1325. The state dental board may revoke a license obtained by fraud or misrepresentation, or if the person named therein uses intoxicants or drugs to such a degree as to render him unfit to practice dentistry, is guilty of immoral conduct, or has been convicted of a felony subsequent to the date of his license. If such conviction is vacated, reversed or set aside, or the accused pardoned, his license shall be operative from the date of the vacation, reversal or pardon.

"Sec. 1326. No action to revoke a license shall be taken until the accused has been furnished a statement of the charges against him and notice of the time and place of a hearing thereof. The accused may be present at the hearing in person, by counsel, or both. The statement of charges and notice may be served personally upon such person or mailed to him at his last known address at least twenty days prior to the hearing. If upon such hearing the board finds the charges are true, it may revoke the license. Such revocation shall take from the person named in a license all rights and privileges acquired thereby."

It was further provided in the succeeding section for a stenographic report of the proceeding and a review of the same by the governor and attorney general and their decision affirming or overruling the action of the board was made final.

While the state dental board, in proceeding under the foregoing provisions of law, may be said to act quasi-judicially, it is not a judicial tribunal and has no inherent common law powers, and is only an administrative board, and can revoke a certificate for the causes provided for in the statute and for no other cause. Further, it can only administer the law as it finds it and can exercise no authority except as provided in the law which constitutes and establishes it as a board and prescribes its duty and authority. There was no provision in said law at the time the certificate named in your letter was revoked, nor is there now any provision whereby the state dental board may set aside its action in revoking a certificate for the causes named in the statute. It follows, therefore, that it is wholly without such authority.

As the law now stands, in sections 1326 and 1327 of the General Code, (106 O. L., 299) the stenographic record of the proceedings when a certificate is revoked is made reviewable by the court of common pleas, and the judgment of that court may be reviewed in the court of appeals. This now gives the action of your board, when affirmed by the courts named, all the force and effect of a judgment of a court of final jurisdiction. It also indicates that it was the purpose of the legislature, when a person whose certificate was revoked by you had exhausted all his legal rights, to regard the revocation as final.

I conclude, therefore, that your board is without authority to reinstate the party named in the practice or restore to him his certificate.

I desire, however, to observe further in this connection that I know of no statutory provisions precluding the party in question from making an application for a license to practice dentistry as provided by section 1301, G. C., and related sections. If upon such application the applicant, in view of the lapse of time since the revocation of his former license, can satisfy your board of his complete reformation and that he now possesses a good moral character, his application may be treated by your board as an original application. If, under these conditions, he successfully meets the requirements of the law entitling him to a license, it may be granted to him as and for an original license.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARMORY BOARD—CITY NOT AUTHORIZED TO DONATE SITE TO STATE FOR PURPOSE OF ERECTING AN ARMORY THEREON—AKRON AUDITORIUM ARMORY.

A city is not authorized to donate site on which to erect armory to state, in spite of provisions of section 3631, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 9, 1915.

Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of November 3, 1915, you advise me that your board had duly advertised for bids for the construction, complete, of the auditorium armory at Akron, to be paid for from the following funds:

"Appropriation, see page 844, Vol. 105-6 O. L.----------$75,000
"Appropriation, see page 711, Vol. 105-6 O. L.,---------- 40,000
"Donation through Akron Chamber of Commerce---------- 50,000"

You further advise me as follows:

"This armory is proposed to be built upon the site referred to in your opinion to this board dated April 28, 1915."

You then set forth the various bids that were received by your board for the construction, complete, of said armory, and also set forth in your letter of transmission the minutes of your board of October 22, 1915, and October 30, 1915, as follows:

"AKRON ARMORY: The adjutant general made a statement covering the history of the appropriation now available for the Akron armory and the condition upon which same were approved by the governor, and thereafter the question of action on said bids was discussed by members at length with reference to reducing cost; action of the state inspector of workshops and factories and other details, it was then

"RESOLVED: That the board recess until Saturday, October 30, 1915, in order to give the architects time to make certain investigations with reference to reducing the cost of said armory."

"AKRON, OHIO, AUDITORIUM ARMORY: That board again considered in detail the bids for the Akron, Ohio, auditorium armory and found that the firm of The Clemmer & Johnson Co., of Hicksville, Ohio, was the lowest bidder in every detail and every alternate that complied with the plans and specifications and therefore approved the award of a contract if made to them, based upon the examination of tabulation of bids. It was thereupon unanimously

"RESOLVED: That the bid of The Clemmer & Johnson Co., of Hicksville, Ohio, for the Akron, Ohio, auditorium armory being the lowest bid which complies with the plans and specifications and being regular in form and in accordance with the advertisement for said bids be accepted; and that a contract for the construction of said armory be awarded said The Clemmer & Johnson Co., at the lowest price including alternates D-E-F-G-H, namely one hundred forty-two thousand, one hundred ninety-four dollars ($142,194.00) on condition that said bidder file with said contract a good and sufficient bond in the sum of seventy-two thousand dollars ($72,000.00) conditioned according to law and its faithful performance of said contract, IT IS EXPRESSLY UNDERSTOOD that this acceptance of bid and award of contract are both conditioned upon the approval of the attorney general of Ohio."

With your letter you transmit the papers and request my approval or disapproval of the conditional award of contract made October 30, 1915, and request me, if the award is approved, to prepare contract and contract bond as prescribed by section 5259, of the General Code.

I have examined the advertisement for bids and the action of your board in letting the contract to The Clemmer & Johnson Co., of Hicksville, Ohio, and find that all steps necessary to the letting of said contract have been followed, and that said The Clemmer & Johnson Co. are, under the terms of the letting, the lowest bidders.

Section 5259 of the General Code, provides that the attorney general shall prepare the contract and bond. This I decline to do, for the following reasons:

In your letter you state that the armory is proposed to be built upon the site referred to in my opinion to your board under date of April 28, 1915. Said opinion, being No. 299, discloses that the city of Akron is the owner of the premises described, with power to convey the same in fee simple, and that a deed is tendered by said city to the state of Ohio for said premises. Under the provisions of section 3631 of the General Code, the municipality is authorized "to acquire by purchase, lease, or lease with privilege of purchase, gift, devise, condemnation or otherwise and to hold real estate or any interest therein and other property for the use of the corporation and to sell or lease it, or to donate the same by deed in fee simple to the state of Ohio as a site for the erection of an armory."

However, I am clearly of the opinion that under the decisions of the supreme court the said section, insofar as it authorizes a municipality to donate a piece of property owned by it to the state of Ohio as a site for the erection of an armory, is unconstitutional. See Wasson v. Commissioners, 49 O. S., 622.

Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, 57 O. S., 436.

Such being the case, I am of the opinion that the city is not authorized to donate the site mentioned to the armory board for the purpose of erecting an armory and, consequently, no contract for the erection of an armory upon said site should be awarded.

Another reason why I refuse to prepare the contract and contract bond is the following: The contract is to call for the payment to the contractor of the sum of $142,194.00; this amount is to be paid by the donation of $50,000.00 to the armory board by the citizens of Akron, and the balance is to be paid from the appropriation made for the use of your board. In section 2 of the house bill No. 701, passed May 27, 1915, $40,000.00 is appropriated to your board for the purpose of building an armory at Akron; in house bill No. 721, passed May 27, 1915, 106 O. L., page 844, the sum of $75,000.00 is appropriated to your board for such purpose, in the following language:

"Adjutant general—to construct, enlarge and furnish an armory building in the city of Akron, $75,000.00.

"Provided however, that the above sum shall not be available until the citizens of Akron shall have deeded to the state of Ohio a lot suitable for a site for such armory and until the state board shall have accepted the same; and provided further that the above sum shall not be available until the citizens of Akron shall have contributed $50,000.00 toward the construction, enlargement and furnishing such armory."

It is to be seen that the above appropriation of $75,000.00 is conditioned upon the citizens of Akron deeding to the state of Ohio a lot suitable for an armory site.

As I have said in the earlier part of this opinion, it appears that the site in question does not come from "the citizens of Akron," but from the city itself. Therefore the $75,000.00 appropriation could not be available. As the contract with The Clemmer & Johnson Co. calls for the sum of $142,194.00, it will require at least a part of the above appropriation to pay the contract price provided for in this contract and, as the $75,000.00 would not be available, I refuse to prepare a contract calling for a sum which would include a part of the above appropriation.

I am herewith returning to you the papers which you left with me.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

VILLAGE OF MENTOR—BONDS DISAPPROVED—AUTHORIZATION BY COUNCIL IN EXCESS OF SMITH ONE PER CENT. LIMITATIONS.

Bonds of the village of Mentor disapproved because the amount of the issue, $25,000 authorized by vote of council and without a vote of the electors, is in excess of one per cent. of the total tax valuation of the municipality.

Bonds issued by a municipal corporation to pay its share of street improvements are subject to the one per cent. limitation provided in section 3940, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE:—Bonds of the village of Mentor, Ohio, in the sum of $25,000.00, purchased by the Industrial Commission of Ohio under resolution dated October 15th, 1915.

The transcript of the proceedings of the village of Mentor relative to the issuance of the said bonds submitted to me for examination reveals that the total value of all property of said village assessed for taxation in the current year is $2,168,830.00. The bonds under consideration amounting to $25,000.00 are in excess of one per cent. of the total value of all property in such village as listed and assessed for taxation. The transcript shows that these bonds are authorized by the action of council and without a vote of the electors of the corporation.

Municipal corporations are authorized to issue bonds for the purpose of paying the corporation's share of the cost of a street improvement under the provisions of either section 3821 of the General Code, or of section 3939, of the General Code. Bonds issued under section 3821 of the General Code, cannot be issued until an ordinance to proceed with the improvement has been passed, but for the issue under section 3939 such ordinance is not necessary. (Heffner v. City of Toledo, 75 O. S., 413.) The transcript does not state under which of the two sections above named the bonds in question are being issued, but I assume that they are issued under section 3939, because the transcript does not set forth nor refer to the ordinance to proceed with the improvement for the partial cost of which the bonds are issued.

Section 3940 of the General Code, provides that:

> "* * * the total indebtedness created in any one fiscal year by the council of a municipal corporation under the authority conferred in the preceding section (Sec. 3939, G. C.) shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation. * * *"

The language just quoted, standing alone, would indicate that only bonds issued under the authority of section 3939 of the General Code, were subject to the limitations of section 3940, General Code. In view, however, of the language of section 3949 of the General Code, which specifically mentions certain bonds as not coming within such limitation, a part of which excepted bonds are authorized by sections other than section 3939 of the General Code, I am of the opinion that it was the legislative intent that all bonds issued by a municipal corporation other than those specifically excepted under the language of section 3949 of the General Code, come within the limitation of one per cent. prescribed in section 3940, supra.

This conclusion is, supported, I think, by the case of Smith v. Rockford, 9 C. C., N. S., 465, affirmed without report, 81 O. S., 516.

I therefore advise you that the council of the village of Mentor acted beyond their authority in attempting to issue bonds to the amount of $25,000.00, for the purpose indicated, in the fiscal year of 1915, and that the bonds are for that reason invalid and should not be accepted by you.

I am informed by Mr. T. P. Cadle, solicitor of the village of Mentor, that action will probably be taken by the village authorities to correct the proceedings and authorize the issuance of bonds in an amount which comes within the limitations of section 3940 of the General Code, in which event the bonds will again be offered for sale to your commission.

I am returning to Mr. Cadle, solicitor of the village of Mentor, the transcript submitted to me.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE SUPPLIES FOR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT—SUPERVISORY AND CLERICAL WORK OF SUCH OFFICES DISTINGUISHED—MOVING PICTURE MACHINE EXAMPLE OF FORMER—SAME MAY NOT BE PURCHASED FROM "COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION FUND."

The county board of education is without authority in law to purchase supplies, including a moving picture machine, for the purpose of aiding the county superintendent in his official supervisory work and pay for the same out of the "county board of education fund."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1915.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of November 4, 1915, which is as follows:

> "The school code seems to be silent upon the question of to what extent county boards of education may purchase supplies for the county superintendent.
> "Has a county board of education the implied authority to purchase for the county superintendent any and all supplies which may be aids in his official supervisory work, limited of course by funds on hand applicable to such purpose? If so, does that authority extend to their purchasing a moving picture machine for the use of the county superintendent of schools, in his travels over the county, to be used for the purpose of instructing the pupils and patrons along his line of work?
> "It seems to me the county board has this implied authority, if it deems it necessary and expedient so to do, but I do not feel at liberty to so advise them without first having your opinion."

I do not deem it necessary to quote the various provisions of the statutes of the so-called new school code relating to the election and qualification of the members of the county board of education, the organization of said board, its powers and duties, the election of the county superintendent, his powers and duties, and the establishment of the county board of education fund.

It is sufficient to observe that the county board of education, in the organization of the schools of the county school district, has power to change district lines and to transfer territory from one school district to another within said county school district, and to supervise and control the schools of said district.

In the exercise of its supervisory power, said county board is required to publish, with the advice of the county superintendent appointed by it under authority of section 4744, G. C., 104 O. L., 142, a minimum course of study which shall be a guide to local boards of education in prescribing the courses of study for the schools under their control, and said county board may publish different courses of study for village and rural school districts. (See section 4737, G. C., 104 O. L., 140.)

Under provision of said section 4744, G. C., the county superintendent is made the executive officer of the county board of education and is required to attend all meetings of said board for the purpose of informing the members thereof of the needs of the schools of the county school district and of advising said members so that they may, from time to time, take such action as will further the best interests of the schools.

It is the further duty of the county superintendent, acting under the direction of the county board of education and with the assistance of the district superintendents elected under authority of and in the manner provided by section 4739, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, to carry into effect the orders, rules and regulations of the county board of education.

However, the statutes nowhere provide that the county board of education or the county superintendent, acting as the executive officer of said board, may purchase books, apparatus, equipment or supplies of any kind for the use of the schools of the county school district, and pay for the same out of the county board of education fund.

I find upon investigation that the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, in a letter to Mr. Charles Barthelmeh, your county superintendent of schools, under date of September 14, 1915, advised that the county board of education acts simply in a supervisory capacity and that it has no legal power whatever to furnish anything for the schools of the county school district. Mr. Barthelmeh was further advised by the bureau that the county board may purchase such supplies, stationery, etc., as may be needed in the office of the board and county superintendent, who is the clerk of the board, but that the statutes nowhere authorize anything to be furnished to the schools under the supervision of said county board from the county board of education fund, and that supplies needed by a school in any local district should be paid for out of the funds of such district.

The question raised by Mr. Barthelmeh was practically the same as the one now presented by you, and I am of the opinion that the ruling made by the bureau, in answer to said question, is correct.

Said ruling, in so far as it applies to the purchase of supplies, stationery, etc., for the office of the county superintendent, is based on opinion No. 144, of this department, rendered to Hon. A. L. Duff, prosecuting attorney of Ottawa county, under date of March 17, 1915, in which it was held that bills for stationery, telephone services and other expenses incident to the clerical work of the office of the county superintendent may, when approved by the county board of education, be paid out of the county board of education fund on the warrant of the county auditor.

While section 4744-3 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., 143, was again amended in 106 O. L., 396, so as to provide for a contingent as well as a tuition fund in the "county board of education fund," I am of the opinion that, in the absence of any provision of the statutes authorizing an expenditure from said contingent fund for the purchase of supplies referred to in your first question, your county board has no implied authority to make such expenditure, and it follows that said county board has no implied authority to purchase a moving picture machine to be used by the county superintendent for the purposes mentioned in your second question and pay for the same out of said contingent fund.

In keeping with my former holding, I am of the opinion, in answer to both of the questions submitted by you, that the authority of the county board of education to purchase supplies for the county superintendent and pay for the same out of the county board of education fund must be limited to those items mentioned in the aforesaid opinion, and that said county board is without authority to make expenditures out of said county board of education fund for the purposes mentioned in your inquiry.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE FOR ARMORY AT HICKSVILLE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1915.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On September 21, 1915, you submitted to me an abstract of title for certain premises situated in Hicksville, Defiance county, Ohio. It became necessary for me to return the abstract to Mr. L. L. Hoff, who compiled the same, for certain additions thereto. On November 8, 1915, I again received the abstract from Mr. Hoff and since that time have carefully examined the same. The premises are described as follows:

> "Situated in the village of Hicksville, county of Defiance, and state of Ohio, and known as the whole of lots Nos. 145 and 146, and a part of lots Nos. 147 and 148 of the original plat of the village of Hicksville, Defiance county, Ohio; also a part of lots Nos. 143½ and 144½ of the vacated streets of said village of Hicksville as numbered on the auditor's plat thereof; also a part of lots Nos. 14, 15 and 16 of the first addition of said village of Hicksville, and which said entire premises are described by metes and bounds as follows, to wit:
> "Commencing at a point on the northwesterly line of High street in said village of Hicksville, 23 feet distant northeasterly from the most southerly point of lot No. 147 of the original plat of said village and which point is 27 feet southwesterly from the most northerly point of said lot on said street; thence from said point of beginning, northeasterly along the northwesterly line of said high street, 127 feet to a point 10 feet southwesterly from the most northerly point on said street of said lot No. 143½ of the vacated streets, aforesaid; thence northwesterly at right angles with High street and on a line parallel with the northeasterly line of lots Nos. 143½ and 144½ of said vacated streets, and in continuation thereof, 260 feet; thence southwesterly and parallel with High street 127 feet; thence, southeasterly and in a direct line, 260 feet to the place of beginning. Said premises being 27 feet off from the northeasterly sides of lots Nos. 147 and 148, the whole of lots Nos. 145 and 146, and 50 feet off from the southwesterly sides of said lots Nos. 143½ and 144½ of the vacated streets of said village, and sufficient off from the rear ends of lots Nos. 14, 15 and 16 of said first addition to make the entire premises herein conveyed 127 feet frontage on High street by 260 feet back therefrom northwesterly at right angles."

From my examination I am satisfied that on November 3, 1915,—the date when said abstract was re-certified,—Lucy A. Pugh was seized of an estate in fee simple to said premises, and that the same were free of all incumbrances whatsoever except taxes for the year 1915, the amounts of which is not shown in the abstract.

I have also examined a deed for said premises, executed by Lucy A. Pugh and Edwin J. Pugh, her husband, on May 29, 1915, and find said deed regular in form, containing also necessary revenue stamps. This deed covenants that said premises are clear and free from all incumbrances, and you should see that the taxes above referred to are paid by the grantors.

I am herewith returning both deed and abstract of title.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HAYES COMMEMORATIVE LIBRARY AND MUSEUM BUILDING—COVENANT IN CONTRACT TO COMPLETE IT WITHIN SPECIFIED TIME—FAULT OF CONTRACTOR MUST BE PROXIMATE CAUSE OF DELAY.

A covenant in a contract with the state to complete a building within a specified time or forfeit $15.00 per day for each and every day thereafter, becomes operative and may be enforced against the covenantor only when his fault or failure is the proximate cause of the delay. If such delay is caused by a change of plans and other interferences with the work of construction for which the state is responsible it may not enforce said covenant.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1915.

HON. E. O. RANDALL, Secretary Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 6th bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "The trustees of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, September 24th, accepted from the hands of the building committee, the building known as the 'Hayes Commemorative Library and Museum Building,' but declined to authorize the final payment by the society, in settlement with the contractor, the Steinle Construction Company. There was due at that time, on the two separate contracts made with the Steinle Construction Company, the total amount of $2,355.50.
> "In the contract made with the Steinle Construction Company there was a penalizing clause, by which the contractor was to forfeit $15.00 a day for delay in not completing the building within the specified time, viz., by July 1, 1913.
> "The question we desire the attorney general to answer is:
> "Is it at the option of the society whether it enforces the penalizing clause or not?
> "It is but justice to all parties to say that the excessive delay in the completion of the building was caused partially by the change of plans on the part of the society, and strikes by the laborers on the building, and inability on the part of the contractor to secure material as per agreement with subcontractors. The Steinle Construction Company is prepared to make stated and itemized claims in justification of the delay, should the society endeavor to enforce the penalizing features of the contract."

In connection with the information given in your letter I learn from other sources that on August 19, 1912, a contract was entered into between the construction company named in your letter and your society for the construction of the building described at a cost of $36,656.00. In this contract it was stipulated that the contractor was to complete all work contemplated under said contract on or before July 1, 1913.

I learn further that another contract was made by your society with the same contractor on September 19, 1913, for the sum of $4,760.00, which contract was for the specific purpose of making certain changes in the construction of said building named in your letter. This contract was to be completed on or before January 1, 1914.

As this last contract provided for changes in the original plans and specifications covered by the original contract, it necessarily follows that the completion of the building covered by both contracts was thereby extended to January 1, 1914. If, therefore, any liability attaches to the contractor in this case, it must begin after said date of January 1, 1914.

Both contracts contain precisely the same provision requiring the payment of fifteen dollars a day for each and every day after the time fixed in the contract said work remains unfinished. Said conditions are found in article 6 thereof which provides as follows:

> "The contractor is to complete all work contemplated under this contract on or before January 1, 1914. Upon failure to have all work fully completed by the date above mentioned, the contractor shall forfeit and pay or cause to be paid to the owner the sum of fifteen dollars per day for each and every day thereafter the said work remains in an unfinished condition for and as liquidated damages, and to be deducted from any payments due or to become due to said contractor."

Preliminary to a discussion of the provisions of article 6 of the foregoing contract, it must be observed that the direct or approximate cause of any delay in the completion of said building must be the fault of the contractor to give your society any right of action upon said covenants to complete within the specified time. Therefore, I am not so much concerned with the question whether your society may waive the foregoing provisions of your contract as I am as to whether it may enforce, under the admitted facts in this case, said provisions against the contractor. If under the law and the facts here your society has no legal right it may enforce, it has nothing to waive. In other words, if you have no substantial rights involved under the covenant aforesaid, you have no option to exercise in reference thereto. The facts, as disclosed by your letter and correspondence thereto attached, show that after the first contract was made the building committee became dissatisfied with the original plans and specifications, and especially as to the appearance of the rotunda, and asked the contractor to delay the work until the matter could be presented to the legislature. This was done and an additional appropriation of $5,000 was made by the legislature with which to complete the building under the amended plans and specifications. Then followed the making of the second contract, dated September 19, 1913. However, it then appeared that this sum of $5,000 was not sufficient to complete the building in the manner desired and a further sum of $1,252.00 was contributed by a private party to the building fund, and a separate contract was made for the expenditure of this last amount. These various arrangements interrupted the regular process of the work of the contractor and they were followed by other delays for which, under the statements made in the correspondence attached, he was not responsible. It is admitted also that while the building was not finaly accepted until September 24, 1915, it was ready for acceptance long prior to that date, but on account of the absence in Europe of the contributor of the private fund aforesaid, the building committee did not wish to accept it until his return. It further appears that as a matter of fact the building was actually occupied and in use by the state for more than a year prior to its formal acceptance.

Taking into consideration all these facts, as well as the attitude of all the parties concerned toward each other in the matter of the changes made in the contracts and in the plans and specifications, and especially with reference to the time so taken when considered with reference to the covenant to complete within a specified time, I am compelled to conclude that you have no claim here which could be established at law. Having, therefore, no right of action under this covenant to complete, you have nothing to waive.

Answering your question specifically, my conclusion is that while your society may waive no provisions of said contract, yet under all the facts, circumstances and surroundings in this case, the covenant to complete within the time specified in the contract is not operative against the contractor and your society has nothing in that behalf to waive.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

THE HOTEL SAVOY COMPANY—CERTIFICATE OF REDUCTION OF STOCK DISAPPROVED—NOMINAL VALUE OF ALL SHARES OF STOCK NOT REDUCED.

The secretary of state advised to refuse to file and record certificate of reduction of the stock of The Hotel Savoy Company, because the provisions of section 8700, G. C., were not complied with by reducing the nominal value of all shares of stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 11, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 6th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We are enclosing ten cent internal revenue stamp uncanceled, check of five dollars, and certificate of reduction of capital stock of THE HOTEL SAVOY COMPANY, also communication from Frank J. Dorger.
> "The certificate of reduction reduces the capital stock of the above corporation without reducing the nominal value of all of the shares thereof, which in our opinion does not conform with section 8700 of the General Code. We would like your opinion on whether the enclosed certificate is in proper form."

The pertinent part of the certificate of reduction of capital stock enclosed in your letter is as follows:

> "THE HOTEL SAVOY COMPANY hereby certifies that at a meeting of the directors of said company, held on July 28, 1915, the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of the capital stock of said company stood on the books of the company having first been obtained, the capital stock of said company was reduced from one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) to eighty-five thousand dollars ($85,000.00) by redeeming, retiring and cancelling fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) of the preferred stock and fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000.00) of the common stock."

You also enclose a letter from Mr. Frank J. Dorger, attorney at law, Cincinnati, Ohio, which adds additional information to that contained in the letter and the certificate of reduction.

The information furnished does not reveal by what authority or how the $50,000.00 of preferred stock has been retired. I assume that it was done in pursuance of a provision for its redemption at a certain date made under authority of section 8669 of the General Code, at the time this preferred stock was issued. So far, therefore, as concerns the $50,000.00 of preferred stock the certificate of reduction is unnecessary as the reservation of the right to redeem the same followed by actual redemption accomplished its retirement and a consequent reduction of the entire capital stock of the corporation to that extent without further action.

As to the $15,000.00 of common stock, however, the situation is materially different, because no right to redeem or retire such stock was or could have been reserved when it was issued and authority for any subsequent action to accomplish its reduction must be found elsewhere.

Apparently, from the information furnished, the corporation has simply purchased from some of its stockholders $15,000.00 of its common stock and now seeks to reduce its authorized capital stock to that extent.

Quoting from "Thompson on Corporations," section 3661:

> "It is a fundamental rule that the capital stock of a corporation cannot be reduced except by express statutory authority."

Again, at section 3663:

> "As there can be a reduction of the capital stock of a corporation only on express statutory authority, the method prescribed by the statutes must be followed."

The only statutory authority in Ohio to reduce the capital stock of a corporation is found in section 8700 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "With the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of the capital stock thereof stands on its books, the board of directors of such a corporation may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, and issue certificates therefor. The rights of creditors shall not be affected thereby; and a certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

The certificate presented by The Hotel Savoy Company does not comply with the above quoted section in that no provision is made for a reduction of the nominal value of all the shares of said company's stock. If the corporation desires to avail itself of the privilege of reducing its capital stock under the above quoted section, it must follow the method prescribed by the statute.

I therefore advise you that you should refuse to file and record the certificate of reduction of capital stock under consideration.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WITHOUT AUTHORITY IN DECEMBER, 1914, TO PAY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ANY PART OF COST OF CONSTRUCTING INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAYS UNDER CONTRACT LET BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Under the statutes in force in December, 1914, the state highway commissioner was not authorized to pay to county commissioners any part of the cost of constructing inter-county highways under contracts let by the county commissioners, even where the plans were approved by the state highway commissioner and the state highway department exercised some supervision over the work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 11, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of October 20 and November 4, 1915, relating to an arrangement which the state highway commissioner endeavored to enter into with the commissioners of Erie county during the latter part of 1914, relating to certain inter-county highway improvements in that county. In your communication of October 20th you stated merely that you were forwarding to me a copy of what purported to be an agreement on the part of the state highway department to pay ten per cent. of the cost of construction of certain sections of inter-county highways in Erie county, together with copies of the correspondence relating thereto. You requested me to examine the papers submitted and advise you as to what action could properly be taken by the state highway department.

From the attached correspondence it appears that on December 11, 1914, Mr. H. M. Adams, county auditor of Erie county, transmitted to the then highway commissioner, Hon. James R. Marker, a document which the county auditor described as an agreement for the state highway department as to bearing a portion of the cost of certain road improvements in Erie county. This agreement was evidently transmitted in duplicate and the state highway commissioner was asked to sign and return one copy for the files of the Erie county commissioners. The document in question reads as follows:

"AGREEMENT OF STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT.

"The highway department of the state of Ohio hereby ratifies and approves the plans and specifications for the construction of certain sections of inter-county highway, in Erie county, to wit:

"I. C. H. 276 in Margaretta township ---------- 6,336 feet
"I. C. H. 294 in Milan township, ---------- 9,783 feet
"I. C. H. 294 in Perkins township ---------- 6,500 feet

"The estimated and actual cost of which are:

"I. C. H. 276, Margaretta township ----------$15,266.00
"I. C. H. 294, Milan township ---------- 6,508.78
"I. C. H. 294, Perkins township---------- 3,111.25

"The state of Ohio, through its highway department, agrees to pay 10 per cent. of the cost of said road construction and agrees to supervise the construction thereof.

"----------
State Highway Commisioner."

It further appears that on December 19, 1914, the then state highway commissioner approved the so-called agreement and returned a copy thereof to the board of commissioners of Erie county. On July 16, 1915, the county auditor of Erie county made demand upon you for ten per cent. of the cost of improving one of the roads in question, the amount demanded being $1,576.18, and on October 19, 1915, this demand was repeated. It seems that in answer to the first demand for payment an employe of your department dictated a letter to the county auditor of Erie county to the effect that as soon as the work was completed, it would be inspected by a representative of the state highway department, and payment of the state's share would be promptly made. Certain reports by one of your division engineers were also attached to your first communication as was also a report by a bookkeeper in your department to the effect that he knew nothing of the agreement until payment thereunder was demanded. It also appears that a division engineer connected with your department inspected the work on the roads in question some seven or eight times.

In your communication of November 4, 1915, you state that part of the work in question consisted of construction and part of re-construction, and that the contracts for the improvements were let by the county commissioners and not by the state highway department.

From the above state of facts it follows that the question now presented for determination is as to the authority of the state highway commissioner, under the statutes in force in December, 1914, to enter into a contract with the commissioners of a county, by the terms of which contract the commissioners undertake the improvement of a section of inter-county highway and the state highway commissioner agrees to pay to them a certain proportion of the cost and expense of such improvement. I have carefully examined all the statutes in force at the time the state highway commissioner endeavored to enter into this arrangement with the county commissioners of Erie county, and can find no authority whatever for any agreement of this particular character.

Sections 1218 and 1219, G. C., as found in 99 O. L., 318, were as follows:

> "Section 1218. If permanent roads of not less than standard width have been constructed prior to the establishment of the state highway department and the materials thereof are gravel, brick, telford, macadam, or material of like quality, the county commissioners may make application to the state highway commissioner on or before January 1st of each year, for the amount of state funds apportioned to such county. Thereupon the amount so apportioned shall be paid to the county treasurer, if the county commissioners of such county have levied or will levy a tax on the duplicate of the county sufficient to equal the amount so appropriated. Such appropriation and levy shall become a part of the pike repair fund of the townships, and be apportioned to the townships or road districts of not less than one township each in proportion to the amount of the fund collected by such levy in each such township or road district. Township trustees or other authorities having charge thereof shall apply such fund to the repair of improved roads in the same manner as other pike repair funds are applied, but the material used therefor shall be equal to the material used in the original construction of such road.
> "Section 1219. If a township of a county specified in the preceding section has no improved roads as provided therein, it shall not use its portion of such funds for any other purpose than the construction of improved highways in the manner provided by this chapter. A county may use moneys lawfully transferred from another fund in place of the tax required by such section, but the county commissioners, with the consent of the state highway commissioner, may use a part of such apportionment for construction, and the remainder thereof for repairs,"

A repeal of these sections was contained in 102 O. L., 333, section 58, but said section 58 was not approved by the governor. It is unnecessary in this connection to consider, however, the question of whether or not sections 1218 and 1219 were repealed by implication by the act found in 102 O. L., 333, for the reason that under no possible construction can it be said that the alleged agreement now under consideration falls within the purview of the two sections in question or was authorized by them even if they were in force in December, 1914.

It is provided by section 1225, G. C., 103 O. L., 459, that the state highway commissioner may enter into a contract with * * * the county commissioners of any county for the repair and maintenance of inter-county highways and main market roads constructed by the state by the aid of state money or taken over by the state. It appears, however, from your statement of facts, that the operations carried on by the county commissioners of Erie county were in the nature of construction or re-construction, and were not in the nature of maintenance or repair work and it does not appear that the highways improved by the commissioners had been constructed by the state by the aid of state money or taken over by the state. The only possible theory upon which the contract now being considered might be sustained as valid would be that the highways covered by the improvements had been previously constructed by the state by the aid of state money or had been taken over by the state, and that the operations of the county commissioners consisted of maintenance and repair work. While the alleged agreement is informal in character and while the only evidence of its acceptance by the county commissioners of Erie county is the fact that they acted under it, yet it is my opinion that if the roads covered by the improvements had been previously constructed by the state by the aid of state money, or had been taken over by the state, then it would be your duty to recognize the contract in question as valid if the operations carried on by the county commissioners might properly be regarded as in the nature of maintenance and repair work. From your statement of facts, however, it appears, as before stated, that the work in question is in the nature of construction or re-construction and it does not appear that the roads covered by the work in question were ever improved or taken over by the state.

Basing my conclusions upon the state of facts set forth above and limiting it to the same, it is my opinion that the alleged contract between the state highway department and the commissioners of Erie county is invalid for lack of authority in law to make the same, and that you cannot recognize this agreement or make any payments to the county commissioners of Erie county from the funds of your department on account of the same. I reach this conclusion with some regret for the reason that the county commissioners of Erie county seem to have acted in the best of faith and to have made a large expenditure in reliance upon the agreement of the state highway commissioner to the effect that the state would meet a share of the expense, but I am unable to arrive at any other or different conclusion on account of the total lack of any statutory authority for such an agreement, especially in view of the provision of section 1222, G. C., 103 O. L., 458, to the effect that moneys appropriated by the state for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of law relating to the state highway department should not be used in any manner or for any purpose except as provided by law.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP BOARDS OF EDUCATION—UNCOUNTED BALLOTS FOR MEMBERS OF SUCH BOARD SHOULD BE RETURNED WITH RETURNS OF ELECTION TO CLERK OF SUCH BOARD OF EDUCATION AND SUCH BOARD SHALL COUNT AND TALLY SUCH BALLOTS, IF ABLE TO DETERMINE VOTERS' CHOICE.

Ballots for members of township rural district boards of education upon which the judges of elections are unable to agree as to how they should be counted should be sealed in an envelope for that purpose and returned with the returns of the election to the clerk of the board of education of the district for which such election is held.

The board of education of the district in canvassing the returns and determining the result of such election should open and count such ballots if the choice of the voter can be determined therefrom, and preserve the same for further judicial or other investigation. If it is impossible for the board of education to determine the choice of the voter from the ballot the result of the election should then be determined exclusive of such ballots and the same preserved in like manner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 11, 1915.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion under date of November 8, 1915, may be summarized as follows:

> "The judges of elections for Monroe township, Adams county, Ohio, were unable to agree as to how certain ballots for members of the township board of education should be counted, and you make inquiry (1) to whom should these ballots be returned, (2) should they be counted except in case of contest of election, and (3) if so, by whom?"

Section 5003, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "In the event the judges do not agree as to how any part of the ballot shall be counted, such ballot shall not be counted but shall be placed in an envelope provided for the purpose."

Section 5090, G. C., 103 O. L., 266, referred to in your inquiry, provides as follows:

> "If there are any ballots placed in the envelopes for uncounted ballots, such envelopes shall be sealed and returned to the deputy state supervisors with the returns of the election, to be by him counted. At least one day before the beginning of the official count, the board of deputy state supervisors, in the presence of one person duly authorized by the chairman of each county controlling committee and the chairman of the committee of each set of candidates nominated by petition, shall open the envelopes containing the uncounted ballots and determine what part and for whom each such ballot shall be counted, and proceed to count and tally the same. Said ballots shall be further preserved for such judicial or other investigation as may be necessary."

In consideration of the first question above stated, it will be noted that under the provisions of section 5090, G. C., supra, it is required that if any ballots are placed in the envelope for uncounted ballots, such envelope shall be sealed and returned to the deputy state supervisors "with the returns of the election to be by them counted," and it is therein further specifically provided that such ballots shall be counted, tallied and "preserved for such judicial and other investigation as may be necessary."

From a consideration of this section little difficulty, if any, will be met in those elections, the returns of which are required to be made to the deputy state supervisors of elections. The difficulty of your question arises, however, from the application of the provisions of section 5111 and section 5120, G. C., as follows:

> "Section 5111. In November elections held in odd numbered years for township officers, justices of the peace, municipal officers and members of boards of education, the judges and clerks of elections in each precinct shall make and certify the returns to the clerk of the township or the clerk or auditor of the municipality in or for which the election is held or the clerk of the board of education of the school district, respectively, instead of to the boards of deputy state supervisors of the county. This provision shall not apply to the returns of elections for assessors of real property.
> "Section 5120. In school elections, the returns shall be made by the judges and clerks of each precinct to the clerk of the board of education of the district, not less than five days after the election. Such board shall canvass such returns at a meeting to be held on the second Monday after the election, and the result thereof shall be entered upon the records of the board."

The provisions of these sections give rise to an apparent conflict or inconsistency, in the provisions of section 5090, G. C., supra, that the envelopes shall be "returned to the deputy state supervisors" and the further requirement that they shall be returned "with the returns of the election." Since under sections 5111 and 5120, G. C., supra, the returns of the election about which you inquire are not made to the deputy state supervisors of elections, it follows that in the very nature of things such envelopes cannot be returned to the "deputy state supervisors" and "with the returns of the election" at one and the same time.

The question as to whom the return of such envelope shall be made, under a similar state of facts, was considered in opinion No. 577 of this department, rendered to Hon. Irving Carpenter, prosecuting attorney, under date of July 2, 1915, a copy of which is herewith enclosed, in which opinion it was held that as to those elections, returns of which are not made to the deputy state supervisors, the provision for the return of such envelopes "with the returns of the elections" will control to the exclusion of the provision that the same shall be returned "to the deputy state supervisors."

On the reasoning of that opinion I therefore hold that the envelopes containing uncounted ballots for members of township boards of education should be returned with the returns of the election to the clerk of the board of education of the township rural school district in which such elections are held.

Coming to a consideration of the second question stated, it seems manifest from the provisions of section 5090, G. C., 103 O. L., 266, that it was the legislative intent that these ballots should be counted, in officially determining the result of the election and canvassing the returns thereof, in every election without awaiting a contest or other investigation.

The board of education is charged with the duty of canvassing the returns of the election about which you inquire, under the provisions of section 5120, G. C., supra. Since such ballots are required to be counted and the board of education must canvass the returns and determine the results of the election, it of necessity becomes the duty of the board of education to open the envelopes referred to, count the ballots and tally the same in so determining the result of such election.

The board of education in counting such ballots shall be governed by subdivision 9 of section 5070, G. C., which is as follows:

> "No ballot shall be rejected for any technical error which does not make it impossible to determine the voter's choice."

Whether or not these ballots shall be ultimately counted then depends upon the facts in each particular case and no more definite rule for the determination of that question can be laid down than to state that if it is not impossible for the board of education canvassing the returns to determine the voter's choice from the ballots in question, it is their duty to count and tally such ballot in accordance with the choice of the voters as determined by the board. After the opening and counting of these ballots they should be preserved for the purpose of such judicial or other investigation as may be necessary.

Boards of education under section 4752, G. C., in the general rule of law governing boards or public officers and deliberative bodies, act by or through a majority vote of a quorum, except in case of special provision to the contrary.

If, then, a majority of a quorum of such board fails to agree as to how ballots returned as above set forth shall be counted, the effect of such action would be a determination that such ballots should not be counted at all and therefore conclude the question as to all parties in so far as election officers, or those charged with the duty of determining the result of the election in the first instance, is concerned.

Answering then your inquiry more specifically, I am of the opinion that envelopes containing uncounted ballots for members of township boards of education should be returned to the clerk of the board of education of the rural township school district in which such election is held and that such board of education, when canvassing the returns of such election should open such ballots and if from the same they are able to determine the voters' choice, such ballots should be counted and tallied in accordance with such determination and all such ballots preserved for the purposes of such judicial or other investigation as may be necessary. In the event that the board of education is unable to determine from the ballots the voters' choice, the result of the election should be by such board determined, exclusive of such ballots and the same in like manner preserved.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO MAKE DONATION TO VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT.

County commissioners have no authority to make a donation to the volunteer fire department for the purpose of providing a fund with which to buy rubber coats and helmets.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 11, 1915.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 8, 1915, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "I submit the following facts for an opinion: The court house and jail for Medina county are located in Medina village. Medina village has a volunteer fire department. In case of fire this volunteer fire department would protect the county buildings. This fire department is now circulating a subscription paper to raise funds with which to purchase rubber coats and helmets. Can the county commissioners donate money from the county funds to the volunteer fire department for this purpose?"

For your information I will state that there is no provision of law which authorizes the county commissioners to make donations for the purpose mentioned in your letter, and I am therefore of the opinion that it cannot be done.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES—WHEN BOYS OVER AGE OF FIFTEEN YEARS AND UNDER AGE OF SIXTEEN YEARS MAY BE EMPLOYED —GIRLS UNDER AGE OF TWENTY-ONE YEARS MAY NOT BE EMPLOYED IN TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES—AGE AND SCHOOLING CERTIFICATE.

Boys over the age of fifteen years and under the age of sixteen years may be employed in the transmission of messages, provided an age and schooling certificate be secured as required under the provisions of section 12994, G. C., amended, 103 O. L., 907.

Girls under the age of twenty-one years may not be employed in the transmission of messages.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Department of Inspection, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 6th, requesting an opinion as follows:

"Sections 12993 and 12994 of the General Code seem to be in conflict. You will note that section 12993 provides, among other things, that no female under twenty-one years shall be employed in the transmission of messages. (103 O. L., 907.)

"Section 12994 conflicts in that it permits females under eighteen years of age to be employed in the transmission of messages if the employer first procures from the proper authority the age and schooling certificate provided by law. (103 O. L., 907.)

"I should thank you for an opinion for the guidance of this department."

Sections 12993 and 12994 of the General Code, as amended (page 907 of 103 O. L.), are as follows:

"Section 12993. No male child under fifteen years or female child under sixteen years of age shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any (1) mill, (2) factory, (3) workshop, (4) mercantile or mechanical establishments, (5) tenement house, manufactory or workshop, (6) store, (7) office, (8) office building, (9) restaurant, (10) boarding house, (11) bakery, (12) barber shop, (13) hotel, (14) apartment house, (15) bootblack stand or establishment, (16) public stable, (17) garage, (18) laundry, (19) place of amusement, (20) club, (21) or as a driver, (22) or in any brick or lumber yard, (23) or in the construction or repair of buildings, (24) or in the distribution, transmission or sale of merchandise, (25) nor any boy under fifteen or female under twenty-one years in the transmission of messages.

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to employ, permit or suffer to work any child under fifteen years of age in any business whatever during any of the hours when the public schools of the district in which the child resides are in session.

"Section 12994. No boy under sixteen years of age and no girl under eighteen years of age shall be employed or permitted to work on or in connection with the establishments mentioned in section 12993 of the General Code, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages unless such employer first procures from the proper authority the age and schooling certificate provided by law."

A reading of the two sections quoted shows that while under the provisions of the first a boy under the age of fifteen or a female under the age of twenty-one years may not be employed in the transmission of messages, an exception is made in the second relative to the employment of a boy under the age of sixteen years and an apparent exception as to the employing of a girl under the age of eighteen years in connection with employment in the distribution and transmission of merchandise or messages. The exceptions which are made in section 12994 of the General Code, supra, are dependent upon the procuring by the employer from the proper authorities of an age and schooling certificate. The issuance of an age and schooling certificate is provided in section 7765 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 899), and is based on certain conditions imposed under section 7766 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 899), which, in part, is as follows:

"An age and schooling certificate shall be approved only by the superintendent of schools, or by a person authorized by him, in city or other districts having such superintendent, or by the clerk of the board of education in village, special and township districts not having such superintendent, upon satisfactory proof that such child, if a male, is over fifteen years of age, or, if a female, is over sixteen years of age and that such child has been examined and passed a satisfactory sixth grade test, if a male, and seventh grade test, if a female, in the studies enumerated in section seventy-seven hundred and sixty-two, provided, that residents of other states who work in Ohio must qualify as aforesaid with the proper school authority in the school district in which the establishment is located, as a condition of employment or service, and that the employment contemplated by the child is not prohibited by any law regulating the employment of such children. Every such age and schooling certificate shall be signed in the presence of the officer issuing the same by the child in whose name it is issued. * * *"

It will be noted from a reading of section 7766 of the General Code, as amended, supra, that one of the conditions provided for the issuance of an age and schooling certificate is that the employment contemplated by the child is not prohibited by any law regulating the employment of such children. Under the provisions of the law an age and schooling certificate may be issued to a boy between the age of fifteen and sixteen years, and it will be noted that under the provisions of section 12993 of the General Code, as amended, supra, a boy between the age of fifteen and sixteen years is not prohibited from engaging in the business of transmitting messages; and under the provisions of section 12994 of the General Code, as amended, supra, a boy under sixteen years of age may be employed in the transmission of messages, provided the age and schooling certificate referred to above be secured by the employer. In other words, there is no law prohibiting a boy between the age of fifteen and sixteen years being engaged in the transmission of messages, provided he has the age and schooling certificate referred to.

On the other hand it will be observed the positive prohibition of section 12993 of the General Code is that no girl under the age of twenty-one years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in connection with the transmission of messages, and while under the provisions of section 12994 of the General Code, as amended, supra, a girl under the age of eighteen years may be employed in the transmission of messages, provided certain conditions have been met, namely, the procuring of an age and schooling certificate, it will be at once observed that as section 12993 of the General Code prohibits such employment, it would be impossible for a girl under the age of eighteen years to secure an age and schooling certificate for the employment referred to, and there is no provision of law for the procuring of an age and schooling certificate over the age of eighteen years and under the age of twenty-one years.

In view of the positive prohibition contained in section 12993 of the General Code, as amended, supra, which would render section 12994 of the General Code, as amended, supra, ineffective as affording any relief for a female under the age of eighteen years, it is my opinion that while a boy under the age of sixteen and over the age of fifteen years, supra, upon procuring an age and schooling certificate, may be employed in the transmission of messages, that field of work is closed to females under the age of twenty-one years.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ASSESSOR—AN ELECTOR OF A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION LOCATED WITHIN A TOWNSHIP IS NOT AN ELECTOR OF SAID TOWNSHIP AS CONTEMPLATED BY SECTION 3349, G. C., 106 O. L., 250.

An elector of a municipal corporation located within a township is not an elector of said township as contemplated by the following provision of section 3349, G. C., 106 O. L., 250, viz.:

"An assessor shall be a citizen possessing the qualifications of an elector of such ward, district, city, village or township" and may not qualify as an assessor of said township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. D. F. MILLS, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 9, 1915, containing the following statement and inquiry:

> "The village of Jackson Center, a municipal corporation, is located in Jackson township, Shelby county, Ohio.
> "Two persons filed their petitions, as required by law, as candidates for assessor in the township. One of these candidates lived within the municipal corporation. The names of both candidates were printed on the township ballot. The person who lived within the corporation received the highest number of votes and the clerk of the township has certified his name to the county auditor as being the duly elected assessor for Jackson township outside of the municipal corporation. The candidate who lived within the municipal corporation has lived there for several years and possesses the necessary qualifications of an elector of a township for any other office.
> "I would like to have your opinion as to whether or not this party can hold the office of assessor, or if it is necessary that the man who is elected must live outside of the corporation."

A complete answer to your question is found in the provisions of section 3349, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., page 250. This section, among other provisions, provides that in villages one assessor shall be elected; in townships not having a municipal corporation therein one assessor shall be elected in such township; in townships composed in part of a municipal corporation one assessor shall be elected in the territory outside such municipal corporation. The section further provides:

> "An assessor shall be a citizen possessing the qualifications of an elector of such ward, district, city, village or township."

While the party named in your inquiry may have the qualifications of an elector of the township as to some township offices, he did not, as stated in your letter, possess the qualifications of an elector for the office to which he now claims election. This fact alone completely impeaches his claim to the qualifications of an elector as required by the provisions quoted aforesaid. The plain import of the law in this respect requires an assessor to be an elector for all purposes of the ward, city, village or township in which he serves. His qualifications as an elector may not be limited. Not only, as stated by you in your letter, is the party in question disqualified as an elector of the township in the election of a township assessor, but he may not vote for members of the township board of education; and other examples might be given of elections held in the township under the laws of this state in which he could not participate as an elector.

Further, a consideration of all the provisions of said section 3349 shows that it is the manifest purpose of this law to give to each taxing district an assessor of its own selection, who is a citizen and elector of said district. This purpose is not met in the case named in your letter.

I conclude, therefore, that an elector of a municipal corporation within a township is not an elector of said township as contemplated by the provisions of section 3349, supra, which requires that an assessor in said township shall possess the qualifications of an elector thereof, and therefore he may not qualify as assessor for said township.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROCEEDINGS UNDER SECTIONS 3399 TO 3402, G. C.—AN AFFIRMATIVE VOTE OF TWO-THIRDS OF THOSE VOTING IN INCORPORATED VILLAGE AND AN AFFIRMATIVE VOTE OF TWO-THIRDS OF THOSE VOTING IN TOWNSHIP OUTSIDE OF VILLAGE ARE REQUIRED FOR SUCH PROCEEDINGS.

Under the provisions of sections 3399 to 3402, G. C., inclusive, it is required that there shall be an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting in the incorporated village and an affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting in the township outside of the village to authorize further proceedings thereunder for enlargement, improvement or erection of a public building.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. FRANK L. JOHNSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Xenia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion under date of November 8, 1915, is as follows:

> "Section 3399, General Code, provides as follows:
> "'The electors of a township in which a village is situated, and the electors of such village may if both so determine, as hereinafter provided, unite in the enlargement, improvement or the erection of a public building.'
> "Then sections 3400 and 3401 provide as to how an election shall be called to determine the question, and section 3402 provides:
> "'If at such election two-thirds of the electors of the township and of the village voting, vote in favor of such improvement, the trustees of such township and the council of the village shall jointly take such action as is necessary to carry out such improvement.'
> "The question then is this: Does it take two-thirds of the electors of a township and two-thirds of the electors of the village voting or is it only necessary to have two-thirds of the total vote of the township and village to authorize the township trustees and the council of the village to proceed with the improvement?
> "Sugarcreek township this county and the village of Bellbrook voted under this section, and two-thirds of the electors in the village favored the improvement, but it didn't receive a two-thirds vote in favor of the improvement in the township but the total affirmative vote of the village and the township is two-thirds of the total vote.
> "I am of the opinion that it is necessary to have an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the township and two-thirds of the village before they are authorized to go ahead with the improvement for the reason that the statute specifically provides for two-thirds of the electors of the township and of the village, and if it meant two-thirds of the total vote all that would have been necessary to have provided in the statutes would have been two-thirds of the total vote. You will also notice that in section 3399 provides if both so determine, etc.
> "The township trustees have a meeting on November 20, 1915, and if possible I would like to have your opinion on the matter by that time."

Sections 3399 and 3402, G. C., to which you refer, were originally enacted as sections 1 and 4 of house bill No. 560, 97 O. L., 483, in the following form:

"Sec. 1. The electors of an incorporated village and the electors of the township in which the village is situated may, if both so determine, as hereinafter provided, unite in the enlargement, improvement or erection of a public building.

"Sec. 4. If at such election two-thirds of the electors of said village and township voting, vote in favor of such improvement, the council of such village and the trustees of said township shall jointly take such action as is necessary to carry out the improvement contemplated."

The slight changes in phraseology to be observed were made in the codification of 1910 and are not deemed to have in any way affected the meaning or construction to be given the provisions of the statutes under consideration.

It will be observed that in the original enactment, as well as in the code form of these two sections, some degree of care is manifest on the part of the legislature to maintain a clear distinction and separate designation of the "electors of the township" and "the electors of the village."

Such purpose is further emphasized in section 2 of the original act, being section 3400 of the General Code, wherein it will be noted that it is required that there shall be filed with the trustees an application "signed by not less than twenty-five resident freeholders of such township who are not residents of the village," and an application filed with the mayor of the village "signed by not less than twenty-five resident freeholders of the village."

The legislative intent that there should be a complete and independent application on the part of the citizens of each political subdivision could not be more clearly expressed. It seems that the reason and purpose which prompted the requirement of an independent application of freeholders of each subdivision, would apply with even stronger force to the approval of the scheme by the electors. Indeed, it would be idle to prescribe with particularity an independent action in application, if the ultimate approval were to be considered as a joint action.

There is much force also in your suggestion as to the language of section 3402, G. C., supra. The terms of that section to my mind indicate a careful avoidance of the use of the language suggested by you, which would have so aptly expressed the legislative will to make two-thirds of the joint vote of the village and township sufficient, had that been the end sought.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your question, in consideration of the context of the whole act in which the provisions especially referred to are found, that it was the legislative intent to require an affirmative vote by two-thirds of those voting in the incorporated village, and an affirmative vote by two-thirds of those voting in the township outside of such incorporated village, in order to authorize further proceedings under sections 3399 to 3402.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY ISSUE BONDS TO REFUND TURNPIKE AND BRIDGE BONDS, NOTWITHSTANDING TAX RATE OF COUNTY HAS REACHED LIMIT PROVIDED BY SMITH LAW.

A county in which original turnpike and bridge bonds in the amount of twenty thousand dollars are soon to become due may refund said bonds under the provisions of sections 5656, G. C., et seq., and this may be done without regard to the fact that the tax rate in said county has reached the limit of fifteen mills. The levy to provide a sinking fund for said bonds so refunded is controlled by sections 5649-1 and 5649-1*a, G. C., as amended and supplemented in* 104 O. L., 12.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 8, 1915, containing the following inquiry:

> "In a short time $20,000.00 of turnpike and bridge bonds of this county will become due. These bonds are the original issue. Can redemption bonds be issued to take care of these original bonds when they become due, in face of the fact that Gallia county is already taxed to the limit under the Smith 1½% law?
> "Can bonds be issued without submitting the question to the electors of the county, when the county commissioners under the provisions of the Smith law, can make no provision by tax levy to take care of the principal and interest of said bonds?"

It appears from your letter that turnpike and bridge bonds of your county to the amount of $20,000 will soon become due. You inquire if these bonds may be refunded by issuing redemption bonds in face of the fact that the tax rate in your county has reached the limit of fifteen mills.

I will first consider the question whether said bonds may be refunded, and in that connection desire to call your attention to the provisions of the following sections of the General Code:

> "Section 5656. The trustees of a township, the board of education of a school district and the commissioners of a county, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such township, district or county is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said trustees, board or commissioners deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."
> "Section 5658. No indebtedness of a township, school district or county shall be funded, refunded or extended unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such township, school district or county by a formal resolution of the trustees, board of education or commissioners thereof, respectively. Such resolution shall state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, refunded or extended, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of their maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear and the place of payment of principal and interest.

"Section 5659. For the payment of the bonds issued under the next three preceding sections, the township trustees, board of education or county commissioners shall levy a tax, in addition to the amount otherwise authorized, each year during the period the bonds have to run sufficient in amount to pay the accruing interest and the bonds as they mature."

Under the provisions of the sections aforesaid ample authority is conferred upon your board of county commissioners to refund the bonds in question by issuing redemption bonds therefor. It would seem unnecessary to discuss in this connection in further detail the provisions of the sections above quoted. It appears, however, from your inquiry that the rate of taxation in your county has reached the limit of fifteen mills, and that by reason of that fact you inquire whether said bonds may be refunded. A complete answer to your inquiry in this regard is found in the provisions of sections 5649-1 and 5649-1a, G. C., as amended and supplemented in 104 O. L., page 12.

"Section 5649-1. In any taxing district, the taxing authority shall, within the limitations now prescribed by law, levy a tax sufficient to provide for sinking fund and interest purposes for all bonds issued by any political subdivision, which tax shall be placed before any in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof.

"Section 5649-1a. All bonds heretofore issued by any political subdivision for a lawful purpose which have been sold for not less than par and accrued interest and the proceeds thereof paid into the treasury, shall be held to be legal, valid and binding obligations of the political subdivision issuing the same."

By the provisions of the foregoing sections a levy for a sinking fund and interest purposes takes precedence over all other levies and in effect makes it mandatory upon the proper authority to provide a sinking and interest fund for all bonds, even to the extent of precluding levies for other purposes altogether.

In your case, therefore, the fact that your rate of taxation has reached the limit as provided by the Smith law presents no obstacle to the refunding of the bonds named in your letter. Reductions should be made in other levies sufficient to provide a sinking fund for the payment of these bonds and the interest thereon.

In view of the situation in your county, it would be advisable for you to refund the bonds in question by issuing redemption bonds in small amounts and payable at such times and in such amounts as not to seriously affect the levies made by you for other purposes.

Your second question, being simply a re-statement of the matters contained in your first inquiry, is fully answered by the observations heretofore made.

I conclude, therefore, under the facts stated in your letter, that the $20,000 of turnpike and bridge bonds of your county, soon to become due, may be refunded by issuing redemption bonds to the same aggregate amount as the bonds so to become due and that this may be done without regard to the fact that the tax rate in your county has reached the limit provided by the so-called Smith law.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE AND DEED FOR CONVEYING CERTAIN LAND IN TOLEDO, OHIO, TO STATE OF OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 4, 1915, you transmitted to me a deed executed in behalf of the city of Toledo to the state of Ohio, conveying said land in the city of Toledo, together with an abstract of title for said property. Said premises are described as follows:

> "Situated in the state of Ohio, county of Lucas and city of Toledo, and described as follows:
> "All that part of the new side cut canal constructed by the city of Toledo, extending from the northeasterly line of Clayton street, extended, to the southeasterly line of St. Clair street, and the entire width thereof, including the usual width for a towing path on the southerly side of said cut-off canal being fifteen and sixty-eight hundredths feet (15.68) in width and the usual width for a berme bank embankment on the northerly side of said cut-off canal, being twelve and twelve-hundredths (12.12) feet along the entire length of said cutoff; said cutoff canal being constructed upon lands, parts of which were comprised in the former cut-off canal constructed by the state of Ohio, parts of lots number 112, 113, 114, 115, 116 and 117, Oliver's division to the city of Toledo, Lucas county, Ohio, and the triangular piece of land lying between the southerly line of the ten (10) acre tract in the northeast corner of River Tract No. three (3) of the United States Reserve, the dock line of Swan Creek and the side cut of the Miami and Erie Canal * * *."

I have carefully examined said abstract of title, and from such examination I am of the opinion that on October 2, 1915, the date of said abstract, the city of Toledo, Ohio, was seized of an estate in fee simple in said premises, and from the abstract of proceedings contained in said abstract I am of the opinion that on the 3rd day of November, 1915, Carl H. Keller, mayor, and Albert Neukom were fully authorized to execute and deliver on behalf of said city of Toledo a deed of said premises conveying the same to the state of Ohio in fee simple.

I have also carefully examined the deed above referred to, which was executed on November 3, 1915, for the city of Toledo by Carl H. Keller as mayor, and Albert Neukom as director of public service. I find that said deed is regular in form and conveys to the state of Ohio an estate in fee simple to the premises described therein, which premises are the same as those described in said abstract.

Said deed contains all the conditions and covenants provided for by the act of the general assembly passed May 27, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 4, 1915, which is found in 105-106 O. L., at page 499.

Said abstract and deed are herewith returned to you with my approval.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—ACT OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY FOUND IN 106 O. L., 498, INVALID—SUPERINTENDENT WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO SELL LAND THEREIN DESCRIBED.

The act of the general assembly, found in 106 O. L., 498, is invalid and confers no authority on the superintendent of public works to sell the land therein described.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 27, 1915, in which you submit certain resolutions looking to the sale of a state lot in the city of Cleveland now held under a lease by one C. H. Gale. You state that this lot is to be sold in accordance with the terms of the special act of the general assembly of Ohio, passed May 27th, 1915, and found in 106 O. L., 498. The following is quoted from your communication:

> "This act provides that the lot shall be sold at public sale after due advertisement. The lot must be sold subject to the existing leasehold, which expires on the 10th day of October, 1925. The appraisement I think is all that the land is worth even if it has a lease which runs for practically ten years. This lot is an isolated tract and is all that the state has left of the abandoned portion of the Ohio canal through the city of Cleveland."

The act referred to by you and found in 106 O. L., 498, reads in part as follows:

> "Section 1. The superintendent of public works, subject to the approval of the governor and attorney general, is hereby authorized to sell at private sale to the highest responsible bidder, after having caused notice of said sale to be given at least thirty days prior thereto in a newspaper printed and of general circulation in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, the following described real estate, situated in the city of Cleveland, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, bounded and described as follows: * * * the two tracts above described being the same property that was leased by the state of Ohio to Mary Ann Manning by lease, dated April 1, 1882, and re-leased to Daniel Connelly by the state of Ohio, by lease dated October 11, 1910.
> "Section 2. As a preliminary to such sale, the superintendent of public works shall appraise said land in accordance with the provisions of section 13971 of the General Code, and if such appraisement is satisfactory to the governor and attorney general, and provided said real estate is sold for not less than the appraised value thereof, the governor, upon payment of the purchase money into the state treasury, shall execute a deed therefore to the purchaser.
> "Section 3. Upon the consummation of the sale of said land and the execution of a deed therefor by the governor, the superintendent of public works is hereby authorized to cancel the existing lease for said land, that is now held by the said C. H. Gale."

You observe in that part of your communication quoted above that the land in question must be sold subject to the existing leasehold which expires on the 10th day of October, 1925. This observation runs counter to the provisions of section 3 of the act authorizing the superintendent of public works to cancel the existing lease upon the consummation of the sale of the land. The observation that the land must be sold subject to the existing leasehold is also out of harmony with your statement that the appraisement made by you is all that the land is worth, in view of the information furnished me by Mr. Booton to the effect that the appraisement made by your department was intended to represent the full value of the land without any reference to the existing lease; or, in other words, that the land was not appraised subject to the lease held by Mr. Gale, who is the assignee of Daniel Connelly. I am of the opinion, however, that your observation to the effect that the land must be sold subject to the existing leasehold is correct to this extent: that if the act found in 106 O. L., 498, confers any authority whatever, to sell the land in question, then the sale is to be made subject to the leasehold estate of Mr. Gale.

This brings me to a consideration of the validity of the act in question, and to the question of whether the act can be so construed as to confer any authority whatever upon you to make a sale. The land in question is under lease, the rent being calculated at a six per cent. basis upon the valuation and therefore cannot be sold under the general provisions of section 13971 of the appendix of the General Code of Ohio, which is referred to in the act as section 13971 of the General Code. If any authority whatever to sell the land in question is lodged in you, the same must therefore be derived from the act in 106 O. L., 498. The first section of this act, while in terms authorizing a private sale of the land in question, nevertheless requires notice of the sale, and further requires that the land be sold to the highest responsible bidder. It cannot be assumed, as a matter of law, that the present lessee will be the only bidder, or that he will be the highest responsible and therefore the successful bidder. The act must be construed with reference to the contingency that the highest responsible and therefore the successful bidder may be some person other than the holder of the existing lease, Mr. Gale. It therefore becomes important to consider the effect of section 3 of the act, conferring authority upon the superintendent of public works to cancel the existing lease of Mr. Gale upon the consummation of the sale. Mr. Gale is the holder of the lease by assignment from Daniel Connelly, the original lessee, which assignment was assented to by the state of Ohio acting by and through your department. This lease was made for the statutory term of fifteen years and therefore constitutes a contract between the holder of the lease and the state of Ohio. So long as the lessee pays the rents and observes the other covenants contained in the lease, he is entitled to the peaceable possession and occupancy of the leased premises for the full statutory term of fifteen years. This contract is as sacred as though made between two private individuals, or, in other words, the fact that the state of Ohio is a party to the contract does not change the situation.

It is provided by section 10 of article 1 of the constitution of the United States that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, and it therefore follows that the general assembly of Ohio was without authority to pass a law providing for the cancellation, without the consent of the lessee, of a lease made to a private individual for a definite term of years. In other words, section 3 of the act under consideration, is unconstitutional and void for the reason that it is in contravention of section 10 of article I of the Federal constitution. No question of the inability of the holder of the lease to enforce his rights on account of his incapacity to bring a suit against the state either in the state or Federal courts arises, for the reason that he is in possession of the premises, and any litigation would have to be brought by either the state or the purchaser, and in such litigation the defense of the unconstitutionality of section 3 of the act, under consideration, would be available to the holder of the lease.

It remains to consider whether sections 1 and 2 of the act can be sustained as a valid enactment in view of the manifest unconstitutionality of section 3. It is apparent from a consideration of the entire act that the legislature had in mind and intended that the premises in question should be appraised at their full value without any reference to the existing lease thereon, and that the successful purchaser—be he the present lessee or a stranger—would, upon the payment of the purchase price and the receipt of a deed, be entitled to the immediate possession of the premises. It cannot be assumed, and indeed could scarcely be true, that the same considerations which would move the legislature to authorize the sale of a parcel of canal land free of incumbrances and for full value and in a manner conveying the right of immediate possession to the purchaser, would also operate to induce the legislature to authorize a sale of such land if the land were under an existing lease and the purchaser could acquire only such title as would give him the right of possession after the expiration of ten years. In other words, while it might be highly advantageous to the state to sell an unincumbered piece of real estate, yet common business prudence would not dictate the sale of land under an existing lease where the purchaser could acquire immediate possession only by thereafter dealing with the lessee and procuring an assignment of his lease and the assent of the superintendent of public works to such assignment.

I am unable, upon a consideration of the entire act, to reach the conclusion that the legislature would have passed sections 1 and 2 of the act had it been advised of the unconstitutionality of section 3, and am therefore of the opinion that the entire act is without force and effect, and that you should not attempt to exercise the authority therein conferred.

While every presumption is in favor of the constitutionality of a law duly passed by the general assembly, and while administrative officials should ordinarily be slow to raise any question as to the constitutionality of a measure duly enacted by the legislature, yet where the defect is so patent as in the present case, it would be unsafe and unwise to make any effort to exercise the authority which it was attempted to confer in the act herein considered. Another valid reason against proceeding under the act is found in the fact that the purchaser might be led to believe he would be entitled to immediate possession, only to find after parting with his money that he could not obtain possession for some ten years. The state ought not to make a sale which might result in deceiving or defrauding the purchaser.

I am, therefore, returning without my approval the resolutions submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—CANNOT EMPLOY ATTORNEY TO ASSIST PROSECUTING ATTORNEY, EXCEPT UPON WRITTEN REQUEST OF LATTER—SEE SECTION 2412, G. C.—RESOLUTION OF SUCH EMPLOYMENT SHOULD BE ADOPTED AND ENTERED UPON JOURNAL AT TIME OF EMPLOYMENT, BUT COMPENSATION MAY BE FIXED AT A LATER DATE.

The written request of the prosecuting attorney specified in section 2412, G. C., is a condition precedent to the employment of legal counsel, without which the county commissioners may not employ such counsel as therein provided.

When counsel is employed to assist the prosecuting attorney as provided in said section, a resolution of such employment should be adopted by the county commissioners and entered upon their journal. It is not necessary at the time of said employment to fix the compensation of said counsel but the matter of compensation may be left to the future consideration and determination of the county commissioners. When, however, the compensation is fixed, it may also be done by resolution entered upon the journal of the county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of November 8, 1915, enclosing the following inquiries:

> "When an attorney is employed to represent a county officer, or to assist the prosecuting attorney, is it essential to the validity of his employment and payment that said employment be made upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, and when such employment is made, is it necessary that the compensation to be paid be fixed at the time of the employment, and that said employment and compensation to be paid be entered upon their journal at the time of said employment? See section 1274, R. S., and sections 2412, 2413 and 2917, General Code."

The sections of the General Code under which your inquiries arise provide as follows:

> Section 2412. If it deems it for the best interests of the county, upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, the board of county commissioners may employ legal counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution or defense of any suit or action brought by or against the county commissioners or other county officers and boards, in their official capacity.
> "Section 2413. The board of county commissioners shall fix the compensation of all persons appointed or employed under the provisions of the preceding sections, which, with their reasonable expenses shall be paid from the county treasury upon the allowance of the board. No provisions of law requiring a certificate that the money therefor is in the treasury shall apply to the appointment or employment of such persons."

In an opinion of this department, under section 2412 above quoted, reported at page 500 of the attorney general's report for the year 1909, it was held as follows:

"The above quoted section only authorizes the county commissioners to employ legal counsel upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney. It follows therefore that the county commissioners are without authority to employ legal counsel, as provided in said section, until a written request for such employment is first made by the prosecuting attorney."

This opinion was quoted with approval and adopted by my predecessor in an opinion under date of August 14, 1911, and reported at page 347 of the reports of this department for the years 1911-1912.

I am not in conflict with the conclusion stated in the foregoing opinion, and therefore advise you that the "written request" specified in said section 2412 is a condition precedent to said employment, without which county commissioners may not employ legal counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney.

Your second inquiry involves a consideration of the provisions of both sections. It is provided in section 2412, as above noted, that county commissioners may employ counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney and by the provisions of section 2413 they are authorized and empowered to fix his compensation. When an employment is made under the first section, a resolution to that effect must be spread upon the commissioners' journal. This is required to consummate the contract and to make the employment valid. The compensation, however, which may be fixed under the provisions of section 2413, is not required to be fixed at that time, nor be made a part of the resolution of employment. The matter of compensation may in some cases depend upon contingencies that may subsequently arise in the course of the employment, and the section does not specify the time when said compensation shall be fixed.

It is also expressly provided in the last clause of said section 2413, that employments of the kind under consideration here are excepted from the operation of the law requiring a certificate that the money is in the treasury for the payment therefor.

In view of these considerations, I am therefore of the opinion that while a resolution of employment should be adopted and entered upon the journal of the county commissioners at the time said employment is made, it is not necessary at said time to fix the compensation, but said last named matter may be left to the future consideration and determination of the board of county commissioners. When, however, the compensation is fixed, a resolution should be entered upon the journal showing that fact.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MIAMI UNIVERSITY—APPROVAL OF CONTRACT FOR CENTRAL PAVILION OF OHIO STATE NORMAL COLLEGE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1915.

HON. R. M. HUGHES, President Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The board of trustees of Miami University, through its special building committee, presented to me for approval the contract entered into between the board of trustees of Miami University and A. W. Sims and Andrew Benzing, of Hamilton, Ohio, doing business as Sims & Benzing, for the construction and completion of the central pavilion of the Ohio State Normal College to be erected on the college campus at the Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, together with bond to cover such contract, the proofs of publication of notice to bidders, and the bids received from various contractors for such work.

An examination of the proofs of publication shows that the advertisements for bids were published weekly for four consecutive weeks in the proper newspapers. Said advertisements were published five times. I do not believe that it is necessary to publish the same five times, and that the fifth and last publication was not required. However, due notice was given of the date on which bids were to be received.

From an examination of the bids received it is clear that the firm of Sims & Benzing was the lowest bidder on the work specified in the specifications, as well as the alternates which were exercised by the board of trustees.

On examination of the specifications I note that bids were called for on alternates, which alternates were lettered and numbered as follows: B-C-D-G and G1; also Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

On examination of the estimates filed by the architect I do not find that any of the alternates were estimated. However, alternate "B" asks that the bidder state the additional cost, as do alternates "C" and "D." Alternates "G" and "G1" simply request a statement of the difference in cost, and do not indicate whether or not the exercising of such alternates would result in an addition to or a deduction from the original estimate. Alternates Nos. 1, 2 and 4 desire a statement as to the difference in cost; and alternates Nos. 3 and 5 call for additional plumbing fixtures.

On examination of the various bids offered I do not find that any of the bidders deducted anything from the original price for the various alternates. In all of them where the figures were placed on the proposal blank after the alternate, the figures were placed as additions.

The entire estimated cost of the building, exclusive of "420 lineal feet blackboards," which was not bid upon, the estimate of which was $335.00, was $50,522.00. The bid of Sims & Benzing, including all of the alternates exercised by the board of trustees, was $44,537.10. It can be readily seen, therefore, that the contract let, including all the alternates, does not exceed the estimate of the architect for the work.

The bond presented by the contractors is a personal bond in the sum of $22,275.00, which is more than fifty per cent. of the contract price, but not quite equal to fifty per cent. of the bid submitted when the alternates are included therein. We assume, of course, that the board has duly investigated as to the responsibility of the sureties offered on the bond.

I have carefully examined the contract as submitted, and find that the same is in all respects proper. In accordance with an opinion rendered by this department to Hon. Carl E. Steeb, secretary board of trustees Ohio State University, under date of September 8, 1915, being opinion No. 805, the $15,000 appropriated in section 2 of house bill No. 701, and the $38,500 appropriated in section 3 of said bill are both now duly appropriated for the purpose, and a contract can be entered into covering both appropriations. However, the money appropriated under section 3 of said bill, will not be available until after July 1, 1916.

I have approved the contract, in triplicate, and have filed the original, together with the bond, in the office of the auditor of state, and have delivered the balance of the papers submitted to your architect, Mr. Frank L. Packard, of Columbus, Ohio, who handed the papers to me.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

FOREIGN CORPORATION—SECTION 8628, G. C., NOT APPLICABLE TO SUCH CORPORATION—SECRETARY OF STATE WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO REFUSE CERTIFICATE FOR REASON THAT CORPORATION'S NAME IS SIMILAR TO EXISTING CORPORATION.

The provisions of section 8628, G. C., are not applicable to a foreign corporation seeking admission to do business in Ohio, and the secretary of state has no authority to refuse such corporation a certificate under the provisions of sections 178 and 179 upon the ground that its name is that of an existing corporation or so similar thereto as to be likely to mislead the public.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 8th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Mr. W. B. Cockrell, of Columbus, Ohio, submitted statement of a foreign corporation desiring to do business in Ohio under section 178 of the General Code, which was not filed by us for the reason that the name of the corporation conflicted with that of a domestic corporation now in existence.
> "He requested us to submit the question to you for an opinion as to whether the statement of a foreign corporation under section 178 of the General Code, should be filed by us although the name conflicts with that of a domestic corporation now in existence."

Sections 178 and 179 of the General Code, providing the method or proceedings by foreign corporations for profit by which they may be admitted to do business in Ohio, are as follows:

> "Sec. 178. Before a foreign corporation for profit transacts business in this state, it shall procure from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with the requirements of law to authorize it to do business in this state, and that the business of such corporation to be transacted in this state is such as may be lawfully carried on by a corporation organized under the laws of this state for such or similar business by two or more corporations so incorporated for such kinds of business exclusively. No such foreign corporation doing business in this state without such certificates shall maintain an action in this state upon a contract made by it in this state until it has procured such certificate. This section shall not apply to foreign banking, insurance, building and loan, or bond investment corporations.
> "Sec. 179. Before granting such certificate, the secretary of state shall require such foreign corporation to file in his office a sworn copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation, and a statement under its corporate seal setting forth the following: The amount of capital stock of the corporation, the business in which it is engaged or in which it proposes to engage within this state: the proposed location of its principal place of business within this state; and the name of a person designated as provided by law, upon whom process against the corporation may be served within this state. The person so designated must have an office or place of business at the proposed location of the principal place of business of the corporation."

Although you do not so state in your letter, yet I infer that you refused to file the statement of the foreign corporation in question and to issue to it the certificate mentioned in section 178 under authority of the provisions of section 8628 of the General Code, which latter section is as follows:

"The secretary of state shall not file or record any articles of incorporation wherein the corporate name is likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business its charter authorizes, nor if such name is that of an existing corporation, or so similar thereto as to be likely to mislead the public, unless the written consent of the existing corporation, signed by its president and secretary, be filed with such articles."

A careful examination of the language of this last section, together with other related sections, leads to the certain conclusion that its provisions were intended to apply only to domestic corporations. It is a part of the chapter relative to the organization and powers of domestic corporations; it deals with the filing and recording of articles of incorporation which are an essential step in the formation of a corporation, and can have no relation to the admission to do business in Ohio of a foreign corporation which has of necessity received its corporate existence and authorization from another state. The discretion conferred upon the secretary of state by the provisions of sections 8628, G. C., relative to the name which may be adopted by a corporation is to be exercised by him before the proposed corporation has acquired any legal existence or standing, and while it is yet possible to so change its proposed name so as to conform to the ruling of the secretary of state. In the admission of a foreign corporation for profit to do business in Ohio, however, no discretion is given to the secretary of state, but upon the filing of the statement provided in section 179 of the General Code, (assuming that such statement is true) it becomes the ministerial duty of the secretary of state to issue the certificate for its admission.

The language of section 8628, G. C., I think, clearly indicates this legislative intent. It provides that the secretary of state shall not file or record any articles of incorporation where the corporate name is likely to mislead the public, etc. This discretion conferred upon him relative to the name of the corporation only exists when articles of incorporation are presented to him for filing and recording. A foreign corporation for profit seeking admission does not file articles of incorporation, nor does it receive from the secretary of state a certified copy of articles of incorporation; instead, it files a sworn copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation and a statement setting forth the facts required in section 179 of the General Code, and it then receives from the secretary of state a certificate authorizing it to engage in business in Ohio.

I therefore advise you that it is your duty to file the statement of the foreign corporation referred to in your letter and issue the certificate of admission provided for in section 178 of the General Code, assuming, of course, that such statement complies with and contains the information required in section 179 of the General Code, and that the proper fee is tendered.

In giving my opinion upon the question asked, I have assumed the truth of the information furnished me by Mr. Cockrell, that the foreign corporation seeking admission is an Alabama corporation which has been incorporated and has been doing business for a number of years, and that the similarity of its name to that of an Ohio corporation is not due to fraudulent design but is merely a coincidence.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHERE CONTRACTOR HAS AN UNLIQUIDATED DEMAND AGAINST STATE AND ACCEPTS FINAL PAYMENT TENDERED HIM, THE TRANSACTION AMOUNTS TO AN ACCORD AND SATISFACTION—CONSTITUTIONAL INHIBITION AGAINST ALLOWING ANY EXTRA COMPENSATION TO CONTRACTOR.

Where a contractor has an unliquidated demand against the state and accepts a final payment tendered to him, the transaction amounts to an accord and satisfaction, and the general assembly is prohibited by section 29 of article II of the constitution of Ohio from thereafter allowing any extra compensation to the contractor in question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 21, 1915, in which you call attention to an opinion of this department rendered to your predecessor in office, Hon. John I. Miller, on June 21, 1915, being opinion No. 524, in which opinion it was held that the amount still due from the state on a contract with Frank J. Davis, of Middletown, Ohio, was $1,958.78, the contract in question being one for the furnishing of material and the building of an extension dam and buttress to the Middletown dam near Middletown, Ohio. You state you have offered the contractor's assignee, as a final settlement, said sum of $1,958.78, and that the assignee is willing to accept this sum provided it can be paid to him without affecting his right to take the matter before the next legislature and ask for further relief. You further state that you are anxious to have the matter settled in some way and have agreed with the contractor's assignee to submit the proposition to this department for an opinion.

Your statement that you have offered the contractor's assignee a definite sum as a final settlement is highly pertinent, and this action on your part is in full accord with the law applicable to the situation. The work has been fully completed and the only payments which you have any authority to make to the contractor's assignee is a payment in full satisfaction of the claims of the contractor or his assignee. The law attaches to any payment which you may now make to the contractor's assignee the condition that it shall be in full satisfaction of the debt claimed to be due. The question therefore is as to whether the contractor's assignee can accept such a payment from you and still have a claim against the state which it would be lawful for the legislature to allow.

It becomes important in this connection to consider whether the claim which the contractor's assignee now has against the state is liquidated or unliquidated, for different rules have been applied by the courts to these two classes of claims. The payment of a sum less than the amount due upon a liquidated demand does not satisfy it even though accepted as such, because there is no consideration.

Insurance Company v. Burke, 69 O. S., 294. On the other hand, where a payment is made on an unliquidated demand, upon condition that such payment shall be in full satisfaction of the claim, and the debtor accepts such payment, the entire demand is satisfied, the transaction being regarded as an accord and satisfaction. Grain and Hay Company v. Conger, 83 O. S., 169.

> "Where the debt or demand is liquidated or certain and is due payment by the debtor and receipt by the creditor of a less sum is not a satisfaction thereof, although the creditor agrees to accept it as such, if there be no release under seal or no new consideration given." (1 Cyc., 319.)
> "Where a claim is unliquidated or in dispute, payment and acceptance of a less sum than claimed, in satisfaction, operates as an accord and satisfaction, as the rule that the receiving of a part of the debt due under an agreement that the same shall be in full satisfaction, is no bar to an action to recover the balance, does not apply where the plaintiff's claim is disputed or unliquidated." (1 Cyc., 329.)

The word "liquidated" is defined in 25 Cyc., 1444, as follows:

> "LIQUIDATED—adjusted, certain, settled in respect to amount, that which is made certain and manifest."

In the case now under consideration it is agreed by both parties that something is due to the contractor's assignee, but the amount due is in dispute, the state claiming that it owes one sum and the contractor's assignee claiming that the state owes another and larger sum. The rule applicable in such a situation is well stated by the court in the case of Nassoly v. Tomlinson, 148 N. Y., 326, as follows:

> "A demand is not liquidated even if it appears that something is due, unless it appears how much is due, and when it is admitted that one of two specific sums is due but there is genuine dispute as to which is the proper amount, the demand is regarded as unliquidated."

I therefore conclude that the claim of the contractor's assignee must be regarded as unliquidated, and that if the contractor's assignee receives the amount tendered to him by you, the transaction will be an accord and satisfaction, for the reason that you have no authority to make any payments to him other than a final payment, and the law therefore attaches to your tender the condition that the amount which you have offered to pay shall be in full satisfaction of the debt claimed. If, therefore, the contractor's assignee accepts the amount tendered by you to him, said payment will extinguish all obligation on the part of the state to him on account of the contract in question.

It remains to consider whether in view of the above the legislature would, after a tender of the amount in question by you and the acceptance of the same by the contractor's assignee be warranted in making a further allowance to the contractor's assignee should it determine that such action ought to be taken. I am of the opinion that this question must be answered in the negative in view of the provision of section 29 of article II of the constitution of Ohio to the effect that no extra compensation can be made to any contractor after the contract has been entered into. This provision prohibits the allowing of extra compensation to a contractor for services which, under the terms of his contract, he was required to perform for an agreed compensation, and in view of the accord and satisfaction which would result in case the contractor's assignee accepted the $1,958.78 which you have tendered to him, any allowance thereafter made to him by the legislature would be in the nature of extra compensation, the allowance of which is prohibited by the constitutional provision referred to above.

Answering your question generally, it is my opinion that if the contractor's assignee accepts the sum which you have tendered to him, the general assembly would thereafter be prohibited from allowing him any other and further compensation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—MIAMI AND ERIE CANAL—LEASE OF SURPLUS WATER IN CANAL WHICH LEASE CONTAINS NO PROVISION AS TO ITS DURATION IS ONE FROM YEAR TO YEAR—HOW TERMINATED.

Where the department of public works is authorized to lease water from the canals either in perpetuity or for a limited number of years and makes a lease containing no provision as to its duration, but providing for an annual rental, such lease is a lease from year to year and may be terminated by the superintendent of public works at the end of any year by giving notice to the lessee.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 22, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Rasche Brothers at Cincinnati, Ohio, are using water from the Miami and Erie Canal under authority of a certain permit granted them by the board of public works, under date of August 7, 1877. The following is a copy of their permit, as taken from the minutes of this department:
> "'Office of the Board of Public Works.
> "'Columbus, Ohio, August 7, 1877.
> "'Ordered, That Messrs. Rasche Brothers, proprietors of the "Mohawk Tannery," in the city of Cincinnati, be, and they are hereby authorized and permitted to reopen a two-inch pipe, (which was inserted in the bank of the Miami and Erie Canal, some years ago, by former proprietors of the "Mohawk Tannery") and use the water flowing through the same at their tannery, located between Findlay and Stark streets, in said city; and, be it understood, that the said Rasche Brothers are hereby held responsible for damages to the canal, if any should occur, by reason of the re-opening of said pipe, and shall be required to immediately repair the same. For the privilege hereby granted, the said Rasche Brothers shall pay an annual rent of sixty dollars to the collector of canal tolls in Cincinnati, semi-annually, in advance. A failure to comply with foregoing conditions shall work a forfeiture of this permit.'
> "Since the readjustment of water rates, several demands have been made of Rasche Brothers that they enter into a lease with the department for water and pay the new rate, which for a two-inch pipe is $96.00

instead of $60.00. This they have refused to do, claiming that their right to the use of a two-inch pipe is perpetual under the old permit of August 7, 1877.

"The question I wish decided is whether or not this department can revoke the permit under which they are claiming perpetual rights."

The law of Ohio relating to the sale or lease of surplus water in the canals of the state in force at the time of the alleged lease to Rasche Brothers is found in the act passed March 28, 1840. See 38 O. L., 87; section 7775, of the Appendix to the Revised Statutes of Ohio, edition of 1880.

The pertinent section of the act in question reads as follows:

"Whenever, in the opinion of the board of public works, there shall be surplus water in either of the canals, or in the feeders, or at the dams erected for the purpose of supplying either of said canals with water, or for the purpose of improving the navigation of any river, and constructed at the expense of the state, over and above the quantity of water which may be required for the purpose of navigation, the said commissioners may order such surplus water * * * to be sold for hydraulic purposes, subject to such conditions and reservations as they may consider necessary and proper, either in perpetuity or for a limited number of years, for a certain annual rental, or otherwise, as they may deem most beneficial for the interests of the state."

While the above quoted provision refers to the sale of surplus water, yet such transaction is more properly denominated a lease and later statutes refer to the disposal of surplus water from the canals of the state as a lease. It appears that the board of public works, acting under the above quoted authorization, granted to Rasche Brothers the right to re-open a certain pipe in the bank of the Miami and Erie canal, subject to certain conditions as to the payment of an annual rental and otherwise. It does not appear that Rasche Brothers ever executed a formal written instrument, but it does appear from your communication, and from certain correspondence had with Rasche Brothers, that both the board of public works and its successor in authority, the superintendent of public works, on the one hand, and Rasche Brothers on the other hand, have regarded the action taken in 1877 as in effect a lease to the latter. The question presented may therefore be stated as follows:

Where a lease is authorized to be made either in perpetuity or for a limited number of years, and the lease contains no provision as to its duration, is it to be regarded as a lease in perpetuity or for a limited number of years, and if for a limited number of years how is its duration to be determined?

This question is answered by the general proposition of law well stated in 24 Cyc., 1028, as follows:

"A lease for no definite term with an annual rental which may be payable quarterly or monthly, is a lease from year to year. The fact that rent is payable monthly does not make it any the less a yearly holding."

The above quoted statement of the law is supported by a large number of authorities cited in the volume of Cyc. from which the same is quoted. Applying this principle to the facts now under consideration, it follows that the lease of Rasche Brothers is a lease from year to year, not being made for any definite term and containing a stipulation for an annual rental, and this conclusion is not affected by the fact that the rent is payable semi-annually.

It is therefore within your power as superintendent of public works to terminate the lease in question at the end of any year, by giving notice to the lessees.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—A PUBLIC INSTITUTION OF LEARNING OF ANOTHER STATE RECEIVING PROPERTY UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 5331, G. C., IS REQUIRED TO PAY INHERITANCE TAX—PROSECUTING ATTORNEY CANNOT SETTLE CLAIM FOR SUCH TAXES FOR SUM LESS THAN AMOUNT TAXABLE.

In receiving property in the manner provided by section 5331, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 463, a public institution of learning, incorporated under the laws of another state, is not exempt from the collateral inheritance tax provided in said statute, following Humphrey v. State, 70 O. S., 67.

The prosecuting attorney of a county is without authority in law to settle a claim for collateral inheritance taxes for a sum less than the amount taxable.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of November 3d, which is as follows:

> "We desire to submit for your opinion the following question arising under collateral inheritance tax law of this state:
> "'Is a bequest or devise under a last will and testament of a resident of Ohio, of property to a non-resident institution of learning, assuming the devisee to be an institution created and maintained by private endowments, though public in character in that the institution is open to all, taxable under the collateral inheritance tax law of this state?
> "'Has the prosecuting attorney the right to settle claims for collateral inheritance tax, for a sum less than the amount taxable, where there is a dispute as to the liability of the person sought to be taxed, assuming the liability of the person to be doubtful, where the meaning of the statute is doubtful or the construction thereof has not been settled?'
> "In connection with the above permit me to say that under the will of a person a resident of Ohio there is bequeathed and devised certain property to a college in Kentucky. Counsel for the devisee is claiming that the exemption from the tax provided for in the statute 'or public institutions of learning' is not limited to public institutions of learning in this state but applies to all public institutions of learning within or without the state of Ohio.
> .... "The estate is an old one, the decedent dying before the passage of the late amendment to the collateral inheritance tax law and counsel in view of the unsettled construction of the statute offered to settle and requests that we write you for an opinion as to our authority in the premises."

In your letter of November 9th you state that the college, above referred to, is an incorporated institution under the laws of the state of Kentucky.

Your first question calls for a proper construction of the first part of section 5332, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 5331, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 463.

Section 5331, G. C., as amended, provides:

"All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, or by deed, grant, sale or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor, to a person in trust, or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant or adopted child, shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value above the sum of five hundred dollars. Fifty per cent. of such tax shall be for the use of the state; and fifty per cent. of such tax shall go to the city, village or township in which said tax originates. All administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance made during the grantor's life, shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest as hereinafter provided, until they have been paid, as hereinafter directed. Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid."

The first part of section 5332, G. C., provides as follows:

"The provisions of the next preceding section shall not apply to property, or interests in property, transmitted to the state of Ohio under the intestate laws of the state, or embraced in a bequest, devise, transfer or conveyance to, or for the use of the state of Ohio, or to or for the use of a municipal corporation or other political subdivision thereof for exclusively public purposes, or public institutions of learning, or to or for the use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes."

From your statement of facts it appears that the college in question, while created and maintained by private endowments, is public in character in that said institution is open to all on the same conditions.

Inasmuch as it does not appear that the devise, mentioned in your inquiry, is for a particular purpose other than the maintenance of said college, I think the same may be regarded as one to or for the use of a public institution of learning; the word "public" as used in this connection being merely descriptive of the use to which the property of said college is applied and not to the ownership of said property. (See second branch of syllabus in case of Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229.)

It remains to be determined whether the devise in question, being one to or for the use of a public institution of learning incorporated under the laws of the state of Kentucky, is subject to the provisions of section 5331, G. C., as above quoted. In other words does the provision of section 5332, G. C., that "the provisions of the next preceding section (5331, G. C.) shall not apply to property

* * * embraced in a bequest, devise, transfer or conveyance to or for the use of * * * public institutions of learning," limit the right of a public institution of learning to receive property in the manner set forth in said statute and exempt from the provisions of said section 5331, G. C., all public institutions of learning within the state of Ohio, or does said exemption apply to property so received by a public institution of learning regardless of whether the same is within or without the state?

In view of the repeated use of the words "to or for the use of" as they appear in said section 5332, G. C., it seems clear that the phrase "in this state" modifies the word "institution" as found next preceding said phrase, and that said phrase has no relation to, and in no way modifies the word "institutions" as the same appears in the phrase "to or for the use of * * * public institutions of learning". In other words the aforesaid exemption would seem to apply, in so far as the plain reading of the statute is concerned, to devises made to or for the use of public institutions of learning without the state as well as to such institutions within the state.

However, I call your attention to the holding of the supreme court in the case of Humphrey, executor et al. v. The State of Ohio, et al., 70 O. S. 67, which I think determines the answer to the question.

Upon a careful consideration of the facts appearing in the record of that case the court found that by the last will and testament of a person residing in this state bequests were made to certain institutions incorporated under the laws of other states and organized for the purposes of purely public charity or other exclusively public purposes, and that said institutions were not "institutions within this state" within the meaning of the latter part of section 2731-1, of the Revised Statutes (now section 5332 of the General Code). Two questions were passed upon by the court, one of these being "whether the legacies are taxable." As stated by the court at page 75:

> "The words in the exemption clause, 'to or for the use of any institution in this state for purposes of purely public charity or other exclusively public purposes,' are the subject of the present controversy."

Numerous authorities are cited by the court in support of its conclusion that:

> "The exemptions of charitable institutions, would relate only to domestic institutions of that class, even if the words 'in this state' had been omitted from the statute. It is not a tax upon property, but upon the right to receive property and have it transferred. Our statute does not impose the tax upon the property directly, because it provides that 'all administrators, executors and trustees * * * shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest, as hereinafter provided.'"

One of the authorities cited by the court was the case of Matter of Estate of Prime, deceased, 136 N. Y., 347. From the statements of fact in that case it appeared that Prime, a resident of the state of New York, died in the state of New York on April 7, 1891, leaving a will disposing of real and personal property. By the terms of said will certain legacies were left to The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and the Presbyterian Board of Relief for Disabled Ministers. A collateral inheritance tax was levied against said legacies by the taxing authorities, which tax the legatees refused to pay and the controversy finally reached the court of appeals.

The court quoted from the opinion of Andrews, C. J.:

> "The claim that the test of liability of foreign corporations to a legacy tax is the liability of a domestic corporation of the same character to the payment of such tax, and that if one is exempt, the other is exempt also, has, we think, no foundation. In both cases, the question is the same; has the statute made the legacy taxable? * * * The argument that gifts for the promotion of charity, education and religion should be encouraged and should not be diminished by exactions of the state, presents a moral and political rather than a judicial question. It is the duty of courts in the interpretation of statutes, to declare the law as it is, and the interests of society are best subserved by a close adherence by courts to what they find to be their plain meaning, neither narrowing the application on one hand, nor extending the meaning on the other, to meet a case not specified, which may be within the reason of the law. * * * It is the policy of society to encourage benevolence and charity. But it is not the proper function of a state to go outside its own limits and devote its resources to support the cause of religion, education or missions for the benefit of mankind at large."

The court also quoted from the opinion of the same court of appeals in the case of Matter of Balleis, 144 N. Y., 132, where the Prime case was considered and its principles unanimously approved, as follows:

> "A statute of a state granting powers and privileges to corporations must, in the absence of plain indications to the contrary, be held to apply only to corporations created by the state and over which it has the power of visitation and control. The legislature in such cases is dealing with its own creations, whose rights and obligations it may limit, define and control."

In answer to the argument that the conclusion, above expressed, is in conflict with that part of section 2 of the bill of rights, which provides:

> "* * * and no special privileges, or immunities shall ever be granted, that may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the general assembly."

and that portion of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States which provides:

> "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; * * * nor deny to any person the equal protection of the laws", the court said:

> "Very much that we have already said and quoted, bears upon the interposition of these provisions, and we still fail to see how the statute under consideration discriminates against the institutions complaining here.
> "Section 2 of the bill of rights interdicts the conferring special privileges and immunities beyond the power of the general assembly to alter, revoke, or repeal. There is nothing occult or mysterious about this language in our declaration of fundamental principles.

"Our constitution was adopted by the people of Ohio as their charter of rights and restraints, and it is not charged with the care of non-resident persons or corporations; and the statute in question creates no privileges or immunities in favor of charitable institutions within the state, which the general assembly may not alter, revoke, or repeal; and surely it is competent for it to exempt the property of institutions, corporations, which it has created, which property is devoted to purely religious or charitable purposes. There are no Ohio institutions here complaining of any discrimination against them.

"Nor do we see any help for plaintiff in error, in the fourteenth amendment to our federal constitution. The statute we are considering, does not abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of other states, nor does it deny to any person the equal protection of the laws.

"Within the meaning of this clause a foreign corporation is not a citizen, and cannot invoke its protection. By judicial construction of the constitution of the United States and the federal judiciary act, a corporation is a citizen for the purposes of federal jurisdiction, of the state by which its charter has been granted, and this without reference to the residence of the members or shareholders who compose the corporation. When a corporation chartered by or created under the laws of a foreign state is sued in a state court, it may remove the cause to the circuit court of the United States in like manner as a non-resident citizen may, without regard to residence of its members or shareholders. But it is a settled principle of constitutional law that a corporation is not a citizen within the meaning of that clause of the constitution of the United States which declares that 'the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states.' 10 Cyc., 150; Ducat v. Chicago, 48 Ill., 172; Tatem v. Wright, 23 N. J. Law, 429; Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall., 410."

It will be observed that the court held that:

"The exemptions of charitable institutions would relate only to domestic institutions of that class, even if the words 'in this state' had been omitted from the statute."

While the phrase "to or for the use of * * * public institutions of learning," as found in section 5332, G. C., was not before the court for interpretation in the case of Humphrey v. State, supra, it is clear that the reasoning and conclusions of the court apply with equal force to said phrase.

Therefore, under the reasoning of the supreme court in the Humphrey case above referred to, I am compelled to advise you that the devise in question is taxable under the provisions of section 5331, G. C.

I do not deem necessary, in answering your second question, to quote the various provisions of the statutes governing the collection of collateral inheritance taxes, as found in sections 5335 to 5348, both inclusive, of the General Code. Section 5335, G. C., provides that if such taxes are not paid within one year after the death of the decedent interest at the rate of eight per cent. shall thereafter be charged and collected thereon, and if not paid at the expiration of eighteen months after such death, the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein said taxes remain unpaid shall institute the necessary proceedings to collect the taxes in the court of common pleas of the county, after first being notified in writing by the probate judge of the county, of the non-payment thereof.

Under provision of section 5344, G. C., the probate court, having either principal or auxiliary jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the decedent, is given jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions in relation to such tax that arise, affecting any devise, legacy or inheritance under the subdivision of the chapter relating to collateral inheritance taxes, subject to appeal as in other cases, and said statute makes it the duty of the prosecuting attorney to represent the interests of the state in such proceedings.

In view of the provisions of the statutes, above referred to, taken in connection with the provision of the latter part of section 5331, G. C., as above quoted, it seems clear to my mind that the prosecuting attorney is without authority in law to settle claims for collateral inheritance taxes for a sum less than the amount taxable under the circumstances mentioned in your inquiry.

As has been already noted, section 5344, G. C., makes it the duty of the probate court to determine in the first instance all questions that arise in relation to said taxes, subject to appeal as in other cases.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your second question must be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE—LABORERS EMPLOYED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS UPON HIGHWAYS ARE WITHIN UNSKILLED LABOR CLASS OF CIVIL SERVICE—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS.

Laborers employed by county commissioners upon public highways are within the unskilled labor class as defined in paragraph 2 of subdivision (b) of section 486-8, G. C., of the civil service law, 106 O. L., 400.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 16, 1915.

HON. EARL K. SOLETHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 13, 1915, as follows:

> "I desire your opinion as to the construction of certain sections of the civil service statutes recently enacted by our legislature, and in particular, section 486-8, G. C. (b), paragraph 2.
> "We have in this county extensive stone road repairing and at the present time the commissioners are employing about one hundred men, consisting of teamsters, laborers and superintendents, who are engaged in the improvement of our stone roads.
> "Our auditor has asked me as to whether the civil service act, especially the paragraph above mentioned, will apply to the laborers above mentioned."

While you do not make the direct inquiry yourself, it appears from your letter that the question under consideration by you applies to the employment of certain laborers upon the public highways of your county, said employment being made by the county commissioners. It further appears from your letter that the county auditor has asked you whether the civil service law of the state applies to the employment of said laborers.

Taking this inquiry as your question in this matter, we must observe in the first place that under the provisions of paragraph 1 of section 486-1, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 400, the term "civil service" includes all offices and positions of trust or employment in the service of the state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof. It may be said, therefore, as a general proposition that all employments by the state or county authorities are covered by and included within the scope of the foregoing provisions.

It is further provided in paragraph 8 of said section that the term "employe" signifies any person holding a position subject to appointment, removal, promotion or reduction by an appointing officer.

It is manifest then as a basic proposition that the laborers in question are within some class of the civil service of the state, which class, I think, is defined in paragraph 2 of subdivision (b) of section 486-8 as amended in 106 O. L., 406, being the same section referred to in your letter. Without quoting this last named paragraph in full, it provides a method of administering civil service in the employment of the unskilled labor class, which it expressly provides shall include unskilled laborers. This class, while in the classified service, is not designated as a competitive class under the classification made in subdivision (b) of said section 486-8 aforesaid. This subdivision provides that the classified service shall be designated as the competitive, and the unskilled labor class thereby dividing the classified service into two classes. It is, however, provided in paragraph 12 of subdivision (a) of said section that such unskilled labor positions as the state or any municipal commission may find it impracticable to include in the competitive classified service, may be included in the unclassified service. It would seem from this provision of the civil service law that the legislature contemplated that some of the unskilled labor class was included within the competitive classified service, while under the provisions of subdivision (b), just quoted, it is clear that the unskilled labor class is excluded from the competitive class.

The result of these apparently inconsistent and conflicting provisions is to render the provisions of paragraph 12 aforesaid, wholly ineffective and inoperative if interpreted literally. This, however, should not be permitted if under any possible construction it can be given operative force and effect, and for this reason I conclude that the term "competitive classified service," as used in said paragraph 12 aforesaid, was intended to and does mean simply the "classified service."

It follows, therefore, that applying all the provisions of the law under this interpretation to the case presented the laborers in question are within the unskilled labor class as defined by paragraph 2 of subdivision (b) and subject to the provisions of said paragraph, unless they have been included in the unclassified service by order of the state commission. In other words, the laborers named by you in your letter are included in the unskilled labor class, as provided in paragraph 2 of subdivision (b) of section 486-8 aforesaid, and must remain there unless upon application to the state civil service commission they are ordered to be included in the unclassified service.

If, therefore, it should be deemed impracticable to apply the civil service provisions aforesaid to the employment of the laborers aforesaid, application should be made to the state civil service commission for an order exempting said laborers from said provisions, and including them in the unclassified service.

I conclude, therefore, in answer to the inquiry specified in your letter, that the laborers named and described therein are within the unskilled labor class as defined in paragraph 2 of subdivision (b) of section 486-8 aforesaid.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—A TEACHER WHILE EMPLOYED BY BOARD OF EDUCATION MAY NOT BE ELECTED AS CLERK OF SUCH BOARD.

A teacher may not, while employed by the board of education of a school district, as a teacher in the schools of said district, be elected to the position of clerk of said board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 16, 1915.

HON. GEORGE THORNBURG, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of November 9th you request my opinion as follows:

> "On November 3rd E. E. Jackson was elected clerk of Smith township, Belmont county, Ohio, and on the same day was appointed clerk to fill the unexpired term of Oscar W. Gladden, who that day resigned.
> "Section 4747, G. C., provides that the clerk of the township shall be clerk of the board of education. E. E. Jackson is a teacher in the Smith township public schools. The board of education of Smith township refuses to permit Mr. Jackson to serve as clerk of the board of education, and base their decision upon an opinion of Attorney General Hogan, rendered in 1913, at page 1097.
> "Since that time a new school code has been enacted, and the clerk has nothing whatever to do with approving reports of teachers, that work all being done by the district superintendent of schools. Since this change in the law we see no reason why the clerk of the board of education may not be a teacher of the public schools of that township.
> "I would like to have your opinion upon the above matter answering the question, 'Can a teacher in the schools of a school district be the clerk of the board of education of the district in which he teaches?'"

Section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104, O. L., 139, provides:

> "The board of education of each city, village and rural school district shall organize on the first Monday of January after the election of members of such board. One member of the board shall be elected president, one as vice-president, and a person who may or may not be a member of the board shall be elected clerk. The president and vice-president shall serve for a term of one year, and the clerk for a term not to exceed two years. The board shall fix the time of holding its regular meeting."

You will observe that under the above provision of the statute as amended the township clerk is no longer ex-officio clerk of the board of education of the township rural school district. It follows therefore that the teacher, referred to in your inquiry, having been appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of township clerk of Smith township in Belmont county, is not on this account entitled to serve as clerk of the board of education of Smith township rural school district.

Under the above provision of section 4747, G. C., as amended said board of education had authority to organize on the first Monday of January, 1914, by electing one of its members as president, one as vice-president and a member or other person as clerk.

From your statement of facts it appears that said board of education failed to exercise its authority to elect a clerk and that there is now a vacancy in said position. You inquire whether a teacher in the schools of said school district may hold the position of clerk of said board of education.

Under provision of section 4747, G. C., as in force at the time the opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, referred to in your inquiry, was rendered, i. e., on January 30, 1913, the clerk of the township was ex-officio clerk of the board of education of the township rural school district, and one of the questions, in answer to which said opinion was rendered, was whether the township clerk, who has qualified both as township clerk and as clerk of the township school district might be employed as a sub-district teacher in said township school district by the board of education thereof.

Attention was called to that part of section 4757, G. C., which provides that:

> "No member of the board shall have directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any contract of the board, or be employed in any manner for compensation by the board of which he is a member, except as clerk or treasurer."

It was assumed however, in answering the question above stated, that the clerk referred to in said inquiry was not a member of the board of education, but that he was clerk of said board by virtue of his qualification as township clerk under provision of section 4747, G. C., as then in force.

It was therefore held that said clerk did not come within the purview of said section 4757, G. C.

It was further observed that, inasmuch as there was no statute which expressly prohibited a clerk of the board of education, as such, from being employed as a teacher by said board, unless there was a conflict between the duties of the two positions, they could not be considered inconsistent.

Reference was made, however, to that part of section 7786, G. C., as then in force, which provided as follows:

> "No clerk of a board shall draw an order on the treasurer for the payment of a teacher for services until the teacher files with him such reports as are required by the state commissioner of common schools and the board of education, a legal certificate of qualification, or a true copy thereof, covering the entire time of the service, and a statement of the branches taught."

It was observed that the above provisions of section 7786, G. C., made it the duty of the clerk of the board of education to require teachers employed by the board to make the reports therein enumerated before an order might be drawn by the clerk for the payment of their salaries; that the clerk was the sole judge of the performance of said duties and that it would be within his power to draw an order for his own salary without having made such report and thereby violate the plain provisions of said statute. In conclusion the opinion held that one person may not be the clerk of the board of education of a school district and at the same time a teacher in the schools of said district.

You will observe that the above provision of section 4757, G. C., is still in force and, by its terms, prohibits a member of the board of education of a school district from serving as a teacher of said district. It still remains to be determined, however, whether a person other than a member of the board of education of a school district may, while teaching in the schools of said district, be elected to the position of clerk of said board of education.

While it is true that since the time said opinion was rendered the new school code has been enacted and that some of the duties formerly performed by the board of education are now performed by the district superintendent, I call your attention to section 7786, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 225, and as now in force, which provides in part as follows:

> "No clerk of a board shall draw an order on the treasurer for the payment of a teacher for services until the teacher files with him such reports as are required by the superintendent of pubic instruction, and the board of education, a legal certificate of qualification, or a true copy thereof, covering the entire time of the service, and a statement of the branches taught."

In an opinion rendered by Mr. Hogan to Hon. G. A. Starn, prosecuting attorney of Wayne county, under date of November 27, 1914, the question asked by Mr. Starn, and in answer to which said opinion was rendered, was as follows:

> "Can a teacher or principal of a high school as designated in section 7705, of the General Code, as amended Vol. 104 O. L., at page 144 thereof, be elected and act as clerk of the board of education as provided in section 4747 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., at page 139?"

Reference was made to the provisions of said section 4747, G. C., as hereinbefore quoted and as now in force, as well as to section 7705, G. C., as amended and as now in force, which provides:

> "The board of education of each village, and rural school district shall employ the teachers of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than three school years, to begin within four months of the date of appointment. The local board shall employ no teacher for any school unless such teacher is nominated therefor by the district superintendent of the supervision district in which such school is located except by a majority vote. In all high schools and consolidated schools one of the teachers shall be designated by the board as principal, and shall be the administrative head of such school."

It was observed that the foregoing provisions of the statutes do not, by their terms, prohibit a person while teaching in a school district, from serving as clerk of the board of education of such district; that the provisions of no other statute express such a prohibition, and that unless there is a conflict between the duties of the two positions, the same are not incompatible. Attention was called, however, to the provisions of section 7786, G. C., as above quoted, and it was observed that the provisions of said section make it the duty of the clerk of the board of education to require teachers employed by the board to make the reports therein enumerated, and to file the same with him before an order may be drawn by such clerk for the payment of the salaries of such teachers; that the clerk is the sole judge of the performance of his duty and that, if he were employed as a teacher in the schools of the district, it would be within his power to draw an order for the payment of his own salary without having made such report, and thereby violate the plain provisions of said section 7786, supra.

In conclusion the opinion held that one person may not be clerk of the board and teacher at the same time.

I concur in this opinion, and therefore hold that the teacher, referred to in your inquiry, may not, while employed by the board of education of Smith township rural school district, as a teacher in the schools of said district, be elected to the position of clerk of said board.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SECTIONS 2609 AND 2441, G. C., NOT IN CONFLICT—COUNTY TREASURER MAY NOT WITHDRAW UPON WARRANT OF COUNTY AUDITOR ANY MONEY IN COUNTY TREASURY EXCEPT FOR PAYMENT OF CLAIMS COVERED BY SAID WARRANT AND NOT THEN UNTIL CLAIMS ARE DUE AND PAYABLE—WHEN TREASURER IS LIABLE UPON HIS BOND FOR FUNDS OF COUNTY PLACED IN BANK OF HIS OWN CHOOSING TO REDEEM BONDS AND INTEREST COUPONS COMING DUE—SEE OPINION NO. 1086, DECEMBER 9, 1915.

1. There is no conflict between the provisions of sections 2609, et seq., and section 2441, G. C.

2. A county treasurer may not withdraw upon the warrant of the county auditor any money from the county debt fund in the county treasury or its depositary except for the payment of claims covered by said warrant, and not then until said claims are due and payable.

3. When a county treasurer, upon the warrant of the county auditor drawn upon the county debt fund of the county in anticipation of the maturity of a funded debt or interest thereon, withdraws the amount covered by said warrant from the treasury or its depositary, and thereafter deposits the same in a bank of his own choosing to his individual credit, said funds are not then trust funds within the provisions of section 12875, as amended 106 O. L., 556, but are and continue to remain a part of the county debt fund of the county for which the treasurer is liable upon his bond.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 16, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of November 8, 1915, containing the following inquiries:

> "Is there any conflict between sections 2609, General Code, et seq., and section 2441, General Code?
> "In a certain large county of this state, the county treasurer is allowed, e. g., $800,000.00, at each semi-annual bond and interest period to redeem bonds and interest coupons maturing upon their dates of maturity. The county treasurer, allowed this sum upon the auditor's warrant, withdraws the money from the depositary and places it in a separate bank of his own choosing, and as the bonds and interest coupons are presented he issues his check against the fund as deposited by him. He requires the particular bank in which he makes this deposit to give security to him as county treasurer.
> "The question is, when he draws these funds and handles them in this manner, do they not become trust funds in his hands that he may deposit under the amendment of section 12875, General Code, as amended 106 O. L., 556? Should the bank, with which such deposit is made, default, would not the treasurer and his bondsmen be liable?
> "Should the county commissioners require the county treasurer to give additional bond sufficiently large to cover this kind of a fund, over and above his regular bond as county treasurer?"

Section 2609, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

"The auditor of a county owing a funded debt, bearing interest payable at stated periods, shall draw at the proper times, his warrants upon the treasurer of the county for the payment of the gross sum of such installments of interest as may be then due, or for such sum of money in the treasury as may be applicable to that purpose, and deliver them to the treasurer of the county. Upon receipt of any such warrant, the treasurer shall pay the installment of interest of such debt, at the times and places of payment specified in the security therefor, from any money in his hands applicable to that use. Upon payment of the installment of interest, the treasurer shall take up and hold the interest warrant so paid until it is cancelled, as herein provided. If the interest is provided for in the obligation, and not by separate warrants, he shall indorse the payment thereof on the obligation and take from the holder a separate receipt, specifying the date, amount, number and time of maturity of the obligation, the date of the maturity of the installment so paid, and amount and date of the payment."

The succeeding section 2610, G. C., provides as follows:

"If such installment of interest is not paid at the time and place of maturity, the county treasurer, at any time afterward, shall pay it, as funds in his hands applicable to that purpose admit. If the treasurer was ready with funds, at the time and place of maturity thereof, to make payment of any installment of interest thereon, and the holder of the evidence thereof did not have it then and there present and in readiness to be surrendered, or to have the payment indorsed thereon, the county shall not thereafter be bound to pay interest thereon until payment is afterward demanded at the office of the county treasurer, and refused."

It is provided further in section 2614, G. C., as follows:

"If the principal of any of the obligations of the county is, by its terms, payable elsewhere than at the county treasury, payment thereof may be provided for and made by the means and in the manner prescribed for the payment of interest, and preparation shall be made by the treasurer for the payment at such place. Money provided or deposited at such place for that purpose, shall not be left there more than ten days after the maturity of such principal, but shall be replaced in the treasury, and thereafter such obligations shall be payable at the county treasury, and no interest shall be paid after maturity."

Section 2441, G. C., provides:

"All bonds issued shall be correctly numbered in the order in which issued, and registered by the county auditor in a book by him to be provided and kept in his office. All warrants drawn upon the treasurer for the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds shall specify the fund on which they are drawn. Upon delivering to the holder of any such bond a warrant upon the treasurer for its redemption, the auditor shall receive the bond and forthwith write across the face of it, in red ink, the word 'Redeemed,' with the proper date, and sign his name thereto.

> Upon receiving the warrant which contains the number of the bond for the redemption of which it is drawn, the treasurer shall proceed forthwith to the office of the auditor, and there, in the presence of the auditor, write in red ink across the registry of the bond the word 'Redeemed,' with the proper date, and sign his name thereto. Thereupon the auditor shall deliver to the treasurer the original bond, for which he shall be credited in his semi-annual settlements with the auditor and commissioners."

It must be observed that sections 2609 and 2610, G. C., aforesaid, relate only to the payment of interest on a funded debt, which interest may or may not be payable at the county treasury. Ample provision is made in said sections for the payment of interest made payable at places other than the county treasury. Section 2614, aforesaid, expressly provides for the payment only of principal sums made payable elsewhere than at the county treasury. Section 2441, G. C., makes special provision for the payment of bonds at the county treasury.

Keeping this distinction in mind a careful consideration of all the provisions of the section aforesaid and those of related sections impels me to conclude that there is no conflict between section 2609, et seq., and section 2441.

You further state in your letter that in a certain county of this state the county auditor at each semi-annual bond and interest period issues his warrant to the county treasurer for $800,000.00, which sum is thereupon withdrawn by the county treasurer from the depositary and placed in a bank of his own choosing, and as the bonds and interest coupons are presented to him thereafter he issues his personal check against the fund as deposited by him. You then inquire whether this money when so appropriated by him becomes a trust fund within the provisions of section 12875, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 556.

I must advise in the first place that the issuing of the auditor's warrant before maturity of any bond or interest thereon, for the payment of such bond or interest, is, to say the least, irregular. None of the provisions of the sections hereinbefore quoted contemplate the issuing of a warrant for the redemption of a funded debt, or the interest thereon, until said debt or interest is due. The fact that the auditor in question issues one warrant for the gross amount due and to become due within a certain succeeding period does not in the least change the character of the fund in the treasurer's hands upon which such warrant is issued. It yet remains a county fund and will continue so to remain until paid to the county's creditors entitled to receive it. It does not and cannot become a trust fund within the provisions of section 12875, G. C., to which you refer.

It is expressly provided in section 2614, G. C., that money withdrawn from the county treasury by the treasurer for the payment of a funded debt, made payable elsewhere than at the county treasury and deposited at such place by the county treasurer, shall not remain there more than ten days after maturity of said debt, but shall be replaced in the treasury. This provision evidences the purpose of the law to require the county debt fund to remain in the county treasury, or its depositary, until needed for the payment of claims against it. In the event said claims are not presented at the place of payment the money must be returned to the treasury or its depositary and cannot be returned to the private account of the treasurer, as appears to be the practice under the facts stated by you in this case.

It follows, therefore, that when the county treasurer in question, upon the warrant issued by the county auditor, withdraws from the county depositary or depositaries the amount covered by the warrant, for any purpose other than to pay the debt for which it is intended, he does so illegally. When he thereafter deposits it to his individual credit in a separate bank of his own choosing he becomes criminally liable therefor under the provisions of section 12873, G. C. If thereafter the bank so selected by him should default he would be civilly liable for the amount so withdrawn from the treasury or depositary less any amount he may have paid therefrom on maturing bonds and interest claims.

You further inquire whether the county commissioners, under the facts stated in your letter, should require an additional bond from the treasurer sufficiently large to cover the amount of money so withdrawn. To this inquiry I must reply that the transaction being unlawful, it is the duty of the county commissioners to have such fund promptly returned to the county treasury, or its depositary or depositaries, and thereafter kept there.

I conclude, therefore, in answer to your several inquiries:

(1) There is no conflict between the provisions of sections 2609 et seq., and section 2441, G. C.

(2) A county treasurer may not withdraw upon the warrant of the county auditor any money from the county debt fund in the county treasury or its depositary except for the payment of claims covered by said warrant, and not then until said claims are due and payable.

(3) When a county treasurer, upon the warrant of the county auditor drawn upon the county debt fund of the county in anticipation of the maturity of a funded debt or interest thereon, withdraws the amount covered by said warrant from the treasury or its depositary and thereafter deposits the same in a bank of his own choosing to his individual credit, said funds are not then trust funds within the provisions of section 12875, as amended 106 O. L., 556, but are and continue to remain a part of the county debt fund of the county for which the treasurer is liable upon his bond.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUVENILE COURT—EXPENSES OF REQUISITION IN APPREHENDING A PERSON CHARGED WITH COMMISSION OF FELONY WHO PROVES TO BE A JUVENILE AND IS TRIED IN JUVENILE COURT AND SENTENCED TO OHIO STATE REFORMATORY, SUCH EXPENSES CANNOT BE PAID BY STATE, BUT ARE PAID BY COUNTY.

Expenses of requisition in juvenile court case to be paid from county treasury. Costs in a criminal case may be paid by the state only in felony cases when a conviction has been secured.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. J. H. MUSSER, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "Some time ago an affidavit was filed before a justice of the peace, and a warrant issued, charging a person with felony. The defendant absconded, and requisition papers were secured from the governor of the state, and defendant was extradicted from Kansas. Upon investigation it was found that the defendant was under the age of eighteen years, and the case was transferred to the juvenile court, under the law.

"Thereupon the defendant entered a plea of guilty, in the juvenile court, and was sent to the Ohio State Reformatory, at Mansfield.

"The county commissioners of our county allowed the expense bill of the agent, who went after the defendant and returned him to the state, and when the defendant was conveyed to the reformatory by our sheriff, the sheriff was informed by the officials that the expense of the agent in securing the prisoner's return to Ohio could not be paid by the state.

"In such a case if execution is issued and returned unsatisfied, are the expenses of the agent a part of the costs which should be re-paid by the state of Ohio?"

In a subsequent letter you advised that the action of the Ohio State Reformatory officials was taken for the reason that the defendant was committed by a juvenile court. The status of the prisoner in this case is that of a delinquent, it being provided in section 1652 of the General Code (103 O. L., 872):

"Where it appears at the hearing of a male delinquent child that he is sixteen years of age or over, and has committed a felony, the juvenile court may commit such child to the Ohio State Reformatory."

It is well understood that when a boy, under the provisions of section 1652 of the General Code, referred to above, is committed to the Ohio State Reformatory by the juvenile court judge he is committed as a delinquent, such commitment of course being based upon the fact that he has committed a felony; and it is only under the theory that he is in the juvenile court under a charge of delinquency that the juvenile court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the cause.

Sections 3016 and 3017, of the General Code, are as follows:

"Sec. 3016. In felonies, when the defendant is convicted, the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected, and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from the county treasury.

"Sec. 3017. In no other case whatever shall any cost be paid from the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, or constable."

It will be noted from a reading of the sections above quoted that the authority for the payment of the costs by the state in this connection is limited to felony cases only when the defendant is convicted. The law relative to the payment by the state of costs in criminal cases has not been changed materially since 1871, and based upon the law at that time Hon. John Little, attorney general, under date of February 21, 1874, rendered an opinion to Hon. S. B. Robinson, prosecuting attorney of Washington county, Marietta, Ohio, in which he held as follows:

"The state pays the costs and expenses incurred in apprehending fugitives from justice on requisitions of the governor only in cases of felony, and then only after conviction and sentence to the penitentiary—the same to be taxed and paid as other costs."

The payment of fees and costs in juvenile court cases is provided for in section 1682 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Fees and costs in all such cases with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court."

Sections 1682 and 1683 of the General Code, have been made up from section 40, of an act approved April 24, 1908, to be found on page 202, Vol. 99, of the Ohio Laws. In its codified form section 1682 of the General Code, supra, omits the word "all" preceding the words: "fees and costs in all such cases."

On December 14th, 1908, Hon. U. G. Denman, then attorney general, rendered an opinion to Hon. E. M. Fullington, deputy auditor of state, on a matter very similar to the case under consideration, the question arising over the payment of costs in a prosecution in juvenile court on a charge of failure to support minor children. It was held in that opinion that the costs should be paid by the county owing to the fact that the prosecution was under the juvenile court law as distinguished from the other provisions of law punishing the same crime as a felony. The opinion is to be found at page 119 of the attorney general's report for 1908.

Under the provisions of section 2491 of the General Code, the county commissioners are authorized to pay requisition expenses from the county treasury.

I am therefore of the opinion that there is no provision of law authorizing the payment by the state of the costs in the case under consideration, in view of the fact that there has been no conviction for a felony.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JURY COMMISSIONERS—APPOINTED IN MAY, 1915, UNDER SECTION 11421, G. C., 106 O. L., 106, MAY SERVE NOT TO EXCEED TWENTY DAYS IN THE OFFICIAL YEAR WITHOUT REFERENCE TO PROVISIONS OF SECTION 3007, G. C., 106 O. L., 534—IF TWENTY DAYS HAVE BEEN SERVED BEFORE AMENDMENT BECAME EFFECTIVE, TEN ADDITIONAL DAYS CANNOT BE SERVED—SEE OPINION NO. 1030, NOVEMBER 17, 1915.

In counties having but one judge of the court of common pleas, jury commissioners appointed in May, 1915, to serve for the ensuing year, may be employed not to exceed twenty days in such year and are controlled in this behalf by the law in force at the date of their appointment, being section 3007, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 512.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your request of September 24, 1915, as follows:

"(1) In counties where only one judge of the court of common pleas holds court, may jury commissioners, appointed under section 11421, G. C., (as amended 106 O. L., 106) be employed during this official year to exceed ten days in such year in view of the provisions of section 3007, G. C., (as amended 106 O. L., 534) in the following instances:

"(a) Where they were so employed prior to the going into effect of the amendment of section 3007, foregoing mentioned?

"(b) Where they had been employed, but not in excess of ten days prior to the going into effect of section 3007?

"(2) If such jury commissioners have been employed the full twenty days prior to the going into effect of section 3007, as amended, can they still serve an additional ten days under section 3007 as amended?"

Under the facts stated in your foregoing letter the same construction must be given the sections to which you refer as was applied to section 4715, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 135, in opinion No. 570 of this department, dated July 1, 1915, and addressed to Hon. Hugh F. Neuhart, prosecuting attorney, Caldwell, Ohio, a copy of which said opinion is hereto attached.

While the questions presented are not without difficulty, the only practical solution requires an extension of the old law, or the law in force at the time of the appointment of jury commissioners, to the end of the year or term for which they were appointed. This would give the jury commissioners appointed on or before the fourth Monday in May, 1915, under the provisions of section 11421, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 106, the benefit of the provisions of section 3007, G. C., as then in force. These provisions allowed jury commissioners not to exceed twenty days' employment in any year, and must be held to apply without reference to the amendment of said section which became effective September 4, 1915, and which limits their employment to ten days in any one year. 106 O. L., 534.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your first inquiry must be answered in the affirmative and your second in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JURY COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED IN MAY, 1915—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION FOR TWENTY DAYS—SEE OPINION NO. 1029, NOVEMBER 17, 1915.

Jury commissioners appointed in May, 1915, in counties having but one common pleas judge are compensated under the provisions of section 3007, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 512, until the expiration of their term in May, 1916.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 13, 1915, submitting the following inquiry:

"The two jury commissioners of Clark county, Ohio, began their duties as such commissioners in May, 1915. How should said jury commissioners be paid, under the provisions of section 3007, G. C., (105-106 O. L., 534) or under the provisions of section 3007, G. C. (103 O. L., 512)?"

In answer to your foregoing inquiry I must advise that in my opinion the only practical solution of the difficulty presented by the conflicting provisions in the sections named in your letter is to hold that said jury commissioners may be paid under the provisions of the law in force at the date of their appointments, being section 3007, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 512.

The question involved here was fully considered in opinion No. 1029 to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, a copy of which I enclose herewith.

I also desire to direct your attention in this connection to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. T. S. Hogan, reported at page 1510 of the attorney general's report for the year 1914, in which opinion precisely the same question is considered in reference to the compensation to be paid to members of township boards of education, and the same conclusion reached as I announce in this opinion.

I therefore conclude that jury commissioners, appointed in May, 1915, may be compensated for services under the provisions of section 3007 as found in 103 O. L., 512, until the expiration of their terms in May, 1916.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE WITH SECTION 4740, G. C., BY VILLAGE BOARD OF EDUCATION EXEMPTS SUCH BOARD FROM PAYING A SHARE OF DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT'S SALARY—ACTION OF COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION IN ATTEMPTING TO RE-DISTRICT SO AS TO INCLUDE SAID VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT WITHOUT EFFECT.

Where the board of education of a village school district in July, 1915, certified to the board of education of the county school district in which said village school district is located, that said village school district maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent, and made application in writing to said county board to be exempt from district supervision and to have said village school district continue as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent, such action was in substantial compliance with the requirements of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 439, and the county board cannot require said board of education of said village school district to pay a proportionate share of the salary of the superintendent of the supervision district which said county board attempted to establish by its action in June, 1915, redistricting the schools of said county school district under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4738, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, and which was intended to include said village school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. EARL K. SOLETHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of October 21st you request my opinion as follows:

"I desire your opinion on a question arising under section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 v. 141.

"We have in this county the Bloomdale village school district which maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent as required in section 4740. In July, 1915, the board of education of the Bloomdale village school district, notified the county board of education in writing that they desired to be exempt from district supervision, and wished to constitute a separate district under the district supervision of the county superintendent.

"In June, 1915, the county board of education acting under section 4738, 104 v. 140, redistricted Wood county into supervision districts, and included the Bloomdale village school district in one of these supervision districts.

"The county board of education have refused to consider the application of the Bloomdale village school district for a separate supervision district, and are insisting that this village board pay its share of the salary of the district superintendent.

"The village board of education claim that by reason of their notice to the county board that they are not liable for any part of the district superintendent's salary.

"Will you kindly give me an opinion as to the law involved in this matter?"

In your letter of November 13th you state that your county board of education acted under provision of section 4738, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, when they redistricted the county school district in June of this year. Said section as amended and as then in force provided:

"The county board of education shall within thirty days after organizing divide the county school district into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable, and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than twenty nor more than sixty.

"The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts."

I assume, therefore, that said action was taken upon the application of three-fourths of the presidents of the boards of education of the rural and village school districts within said county school district and that, in redistricting said county school district, the requirements of said statute were complied with.

However, section 4738, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 396, provides as follows:

"The county board of education shall divide the county school district, any year, to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty. The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the vilage and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts. The county board of education may at their discretion require the county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village or rural schools of the county. This shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools."

In opinion No. 463 of this department, a copy of which was enclosed in my letter to you under date of October 27, 1915, it was held that the above provisions of said section 4738, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., are mandatory, and that when the act amending said section would become effective (August 27, 1915) it would be the duty of the county board of education to divide the county school district into proper supervision districts in accordance with the terms of said provisions. It follows, therefore, that unless the action of your county board of education, in redistricting said county school district, was taken in anticipation of the probable going into effect of said section 4738, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., and in compliance with the requirement of said amended statute that:

"The number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty," the supervision districts resulting from said action of the county board of education redistricting said county school district, are not lawfully established.

In your letter of October 21st you refer to section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, which as in force prior to August 27, 1915, the date when said section as amended in 106 O. L., 398, became effective, provided as follows:

"Any village or rural district or union of school districts for supervision purposes which already employs a superintendent and which officially certifies by the clerk or clerks of the board of education on or before July 20, 1914, that it will employ a superintendent who gives at least one-half of his time in supervision, shall upon application to the county board of education be continued as a separate supervision district so long as the superintendent receives a salary of at least one thousand dollars and continues to give one-half of his time to supervision work. Such districts shall receive such portion of state aid for the payment of the salary of the district superintendent as is based on the ratio of the number of teachers employed to forty, multiplied by the fraction which represents that fraction of the regular school day which the superintendent gives to supervision. The county superintendent shall make no nomination of a district superintendent in such district until a vacancy in such superintendency occurs. After the first vacancy occurs in the superintendency of such a district all appointments shall be made on the nomination of the county superintendent in the manner provided in section 4739. A vacancy shall occur only when such superintendent resigns, dies or fails of re-election.

"Any school district or districts, having less than twenty teachers, isolated from the remainder of the county school district by supervision districts provided for in this section shall be joined for supervision purposes to one or more of such supervision districts, but the superintendent or superintendents already employed in such supervision district or districts shall be in charge of the enlarged supervision district or districts until a vacancy occurs."

However, from your statement of facts it clearly appears that the board of education of Bloomdale village school district, in certifying to the county board of education in July, 1915, that said village school district maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent, and in notifying the county board of education in writing that they desired to be exempt from district supervision, and to have said village school district continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent, were attempting to comply with the provisions of said statute as amended in 106 O. L., 439, and as now in force, which are as follows:

"Any village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes which mantains a first grade high school and which employs a superintendent, shall upon application to the county board of education before September 10, 1915, or before June 1st of any year thereafter, be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent. Such district shall continue to be under the direct supervision of the county superintendent until the board of education of such district by resolution shall petition to become a part of a supervision district of the county school district. Such superintendents shall perform all the duties prescribed by law for a district superintendent, but shall teach such part of each day as the board of education of the district or districts may direct. Such districts shall receive no state aid for the payment of the salaries of their superintendents, and the salaries shall be paid by the boards employing such superintendents."

In said opinion No. 463 careful consideration was given to the changes in section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, effected by the act of the general assembly amending said section as found in 106 O. L., 396, as well as to the changes made in said statute as amended in 106 O. L., 398, effected by the amendment to said statute as found in 106 O. L., 439. It was held in said opinion that in view of the changes effected by the last amendment to said statute, it was the intention of the general assembly that the amendment to said section as found in 106 O. L., 398, should never become effective.

It was further held in said opinion that as to a village or rural school district, or union of school districts, for high school purposes which maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent, it makes no difference when the contract for the employment of the superintendent is made, because such a contract would be valid under section 4740 in any of its forms except that application for continuance as a supervision district should be made after said statute as last amended should become effective and prior to September 10, 1915.

I am of the opinion, however, that the action of the board of education of Bloomdale village school district in July, 1915, in certifying to the county board of education that said village school district maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent, and in making application in writing to said county board to be exempt from district supervision and to have said village school district continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent, was a substantial compliance with the requirements of said section 4740, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 439, and as now in force, and that the request of the board of education of said village school district should have been granted by the county board.

It follows, therefore, that the county board cannot require the board of education of said village school district to pay a proportionate share of the salary of the superintendent of the supervision district, which said county board attempted to establish by its action in June, 1915, and which was intended to include said village school district. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 6948, G. C.—EXTRA WORK IN CONNECTION WITH UNIT PRICE CONTRACT.

The provision of section 127 of the Cass highway law, section 6948, G. C., to the effect that no contract shall be awarded for extra work at any price in excess of the original contract unit price for the same kind or class of work, if such there be, in connection with the original contract, applies only in those cases where the original contract was let on a unit price basis and where the estimate for the extra work is within such limits that the contract for the extra work may be and is let without advertisement and competitive bidding.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This department is in receipt of a communication from Mr. Charles A. Groom of your office, under date of November 5, 1915, in which Mr.

Groom inquires as to the proper construction to be placed upon the following language found in section 127 of the Cass highway law, section 6948, G. C., to wit:

> "* * * but no contract shall be awarded for such extra work at any price in excess of the original contract unit price for the same class or kind of work, if such there be, in connection with such contract."

The following is quoted from Mr. Groom's letter:

> "We have an instance of extra work in connection with a contract and would like to know whether your department has decided whether the foregoing clause applies merely to the letting of a contract for extra work to the original contractor, or whether it prohibits the letting of a contract for extra work to any person whomsoever, if the price for such extra work is in excess of the original unit price specified in the successful bid. In the particular case I refer to the successful contractor refuses to do extra work at the unit price for grading on account of an unanticipated long haul and the language above quoted, apparently at least, prohibits contracting with any one for a greater price, and in this instance will prevent the completion of the work made necessary through change of grade of adjoining streets in a village abutting on the improvement."

Section 127 of the Cass highway law, referred to by Mr. Groom, reads as follows:

> "In case of an unforeseen contingency not contemplated by the contract, allowance for extra work may be made by the county commissioners, but they must first enter into a new contract in writing for such extra work. In all cases where the amount of the original contract price is less than ten thousand dollars, and the amount of the estimate for such extra work exceeds five hundred dollars, the preceding sections relating to advertising for bids shall apply to the letting of contracts for such extra work. If the amount of the original contract price is ten thousand dollars or more, the preceding sections relating to advertising for bids shall apply to all cases where the estimate for such extra work exceeds five per cent. of the original contract price for such work. If the estimate for such extra work is less than five hundred dollars, in all cases where the amount of the original contract price is less than ten thousand dollars, or if the estimate for such extra work is less than five per cent. of the original contract price in all cases where the original contract price is ten thousand dollars or more, the contract for such extra work may be let by the county commissioners at private contract without publication or notice, but no contract shall be awarded for such extra work at any price in excess of the original contract unit price for the same class or kind of work, if such there be, in connection with such contract. In case of any new class or kind of work the county commissioners and contractor shall agree as to the price to be paid. The contractor shall submit his bid in writing, and if accepted by the commissioners they shall immediately enter their acceptance on the journal. The costs and expenses of such extra work shall be paid by the county commissioners out of any funds available therefor, and the amount shall be charged to the cost of construction of said improvement and apportioned as the original contract price for the said improvement."

It will be noted that under the provisions of the above quoted section a contract for extra work may, under certain conditions, be let without competitive bidding, while under other conditions competitive bidding is required. The provision quoted by Mr. Groom to the effect that no contract shall be awarded for extra work in excess of the original contract unit price for the same class or kind of work, if such there be, in connection with such contract, is found in the sentence of the section in question relating to the letting of contracts for extra work without advertisement and was manifestly intended by the legislature to apply only in those cases in which it is permissible to let a contract for extra work without advertisement and the securing of competitive bids. This conclusion is supported not only by the language of the section in question, but also by the fact that the reason for such a rule does not exist where competitive bids are secured.

It is therefore my opinion that in all those cases where advertisement must be made and competitive bids secured for extra work on a road contract, the provision that the contract shall not be awarded for such extra work at any price in excess of the original contract unit price for the same class or kind of work, if such there be, in connection with the original contract, does not apply. It is only in those cases where the original contract was let on a unit price basis and where the estimate for the extra work is within such limits that the contract for the extra work may be and is let without advertisement that the phrase referred to by Mr. Groom has any application, and of course in such cases the unit price for the extra work cannot exceed the unit price for the same class or kind of work, if such there be, in connection with the original contract.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—REMONSTRANCE AGAINST TRANSFER OF TERRITORY—TERM "QUALIFIED ELECTORS" FOR SUCH PURPOSE DOES NOT INCLUDE WOMEN—SECTION 4692, G. C., CONSTRUED—COUNTY BOARD MAY TRANSFER PART OR ALL OF SCHOOL DISTRICT TO AN ADJOINING DISTRICT OF SAME COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT.

The phrase "qualified electors" as found in that part of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, relating to the filing of a remonstrance against the transfer of territory by the board of education of the county school district, does not include women.

The county board of education may, under authority and in compliance with all the requirements of said section 3692, G. C., as amended, transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of such county school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 8, 1915, which is as follows:

"During the summer of 1915, the county board of education transferred territory from Addison township county school district to Cheshire special county school district. The board of education of Addison township and Cheshire special district had previously failed to agree on the transfer, and the transfer was violently opposed by the board of education of Addison township, and in my opinion it is in fact inequitable.

"After the county board by resolution made the transfer, a map was filed with the county auditor, and notice given as required by law. Within thirty days after the filing of the map with the county auditor, a remonstrance was presented to the county board of education signed by four of the eight male electors residing in the territory sought to be transferred, and six of the eight women electors of that territory. Women are entitled to vote for boards of education, sign petitions for nominations for members of the board, and hold some offices by election in school matters, and may have other rights as electors and tax payers in school affairs.

"Does the phrase 'qualified electors,' as used in section 4692, G. C., (O. L. 106 v. 396) include women who are entitled to vote in school matters? No resolution has been passed by the county board of education or the Cheshire special board as to division of funds as required by section 4696, G. C. What is your opinion as to whether or not this transfer can be made under the facts submitted?"

In your letter of November 13th you state that the transfer of territory above referred to was made on October 9, 1915.

Section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, provides:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. If an entire district be transferred the board of education of such district is thereby abolished, or if a member of the board of education lives in a part of a school district transferred the member becomes a non-resident of the school district from which he was transferred and ceases to be a member of such board of education. The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

From your statement of facts it appears that on October 9, 1915, the board of education of Gallia county school district, acting under authority and in compliance with the above provisions of the statute, passed a resolution transferring territory from Addison township rural school district to Cheshire rural school district within said county school district, filed a map with the county auditor and gave the notice of the proposed transfer as required by said statute.

It further appears that within the thirty-day period prescribed by said statute, a written remonstrance against the proposed transfer was filed with the county board of education. You state that said remonstrance was signed "by four of the eight male electors residing in the territory sought to be transferred, and six of the eight women electors of that territory." You first inquire whether the phrase "qualified electors" as found in section 4692, G. C., as above quoted, includes women.

Section 4862, G. C., provides:

> "Every woman, born in the United States or who is the wife or daughter of a citizen of the United States, who is over twenty-one years of age and possesses the necessary qualifications in regard to residence hereinafter provided for men shall be entitled to vote and to be voted for for member of the board of education and upon no other question."

In view of the plain provision of section 4862, as above quoted, I am of the opinion that your first question must be answered in the negative. It follows that inasmuch as the remonstrance in question was not signed by a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory sought to be transferred, said remonstrance failed to comply with the requirement of said section 4692, G. C., and was therefore without effect.

While you state that the boards of education of the rural school districts in question failed to agree on the transfer of the territory referred to in your inquiry, that the transfer of territory was violently opposed by the board of education of Addison township rural school district, that in your opinion said transfer is in effect inequitable, and that no resolution has been passed by the county board of education or by the board of education of Cheshire rural school district, as to the division of funds, it must be observed that the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, relating to the transfer of territory from a county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, and have nothing to do with a transfer of territory by the board of education of the county school district from one school district to another within said county school district.

It follows therefore that the consent of the boards of education of the rural school districts in question to the transfer of the territory referred to in your inquiry is not jurisdictional of the right of the county board of education to make such transfer, nor does section 4692, G. C., as amended, require that the board of education of Cheshire rural school district shall agree with the county board of education as to the division of funds. However, under provision of the latter part of section 4692, G. C., as amended, the county board of education has authority, when transferring territory from one school district to another within the county school district, to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection, and also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory.

Inasmuch as your county board of education has not as yet made such a division of funds or indebtedness, I am of the opinion that such action may still be taken by said county board and that the transfer of the territory referred to in your inquiry will not be completed until such division of funds or indebtedness is made.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that upon the facts stated by you the proceedings of your county board of education have been legal, and that upon complying with the requirement of the latter part of said section 4692, G. C., the transfer of the territory in question will be lawfully effected.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—ONE-FIFTH PART OF SALARY TO BE PAID BY STATE—STATE LIABLE FOR ITS PROPORTION OF COMPENSATION OF ASSISTANTS EMPLOYED UNDER SECTION 1219, G. C.—ANY APPROPRIATION FOR INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY WORK SHOULD BE DIVIDED EQUALLY BETWEEN COUNTIES—STATE'S PROPORTIONATE SHARE OF SALARY OF EACH COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT SHOULD BE PAID FROM AMOUNT APPORTIONED TO HIS COUNTY.

The liability of the state highway department for salaries for engineering work in each county, is for the one-fifth part of the county highway superintendent's salary and the state's proportion of the compensation of assistants, superintendents and inspectors employed under section 1219, G. C.

Any sum appropriated for inter-county highway work should be equally divided between the counties of the state, and the state's proportion of the salary of each county highway superintendent should be paid from the amount apportioned to his county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 10, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Under date of September 24th this department outlined to the county highway superintendents throughout the state the system it proposed to follow in operating under the Cass highway act. I quote you this letter in full:
> "'In response to an inquiry from this department relative to the method to be pursued in making payments to county highway superintendents for services under the provisions of amended senate bill No. 125, an opinion has been received from the attorney general of Ohio to the effect that payment is to be made directly from the county treasury, and that the county treasury is to be reimbursed by warrant drawn by the state highway commissioner upon the treasury of the state of Ohio. In accordance with this opinion, therefore, warrants will be forwarded monthly to your county treasurer in the sum of one-fifth of your monthly salary as county highway superintendent, pro rated upon the basis of the amount of your yearly salary as computed by your board of county commissioners.
> "'Experience in all phases of constructive work has proven conclusively that the amount of the net return from an active investment is proportionate to the check kept upon the overhead expense. As the tax levy of the state for road improvement is the investment of its people in good roads, it is our joint duty to secure the greatest net return upon that investment. With this in mind, the state highway department maintains a record of each piece of work done under its supervision, showing all expenses incurred from the commencement of the preliminary survey to the payment of the final estimate to the contractor upon the completion of the work. This department will continue this system under the law recently enacted and has determined upon the following plan of operation.

"'While the salary of the county highway superintendent will be paid in the manner stated in the first paragraph of this letter, he will nevertheless submit a monthly payroll for each piece of state work being improved under his supervision showing the number of days actually spent by him and his assistants on the work at the following rates per diem; with actual and necessary expenses:

"'County highway superintendent or deputy	$6.00
"'Instrument men	3.50
"'Rodmen, chainmen and flagmen	2.50
"'Laborers	2.00

"'The total payroll will be regarded as engineering expense and the state's proportionate share charged against the county, but when an amount equal to one-fifth of the county highway superintendent's salary has been charged against the county in the above manner, after such time the state and county will proportionately share such expense at the same per diem rates.

"'The provisions of section 1219 of the General Code of Ohio, are to be remembered in the appointment of necessary assistants on state work.

"'With best wishes for a successful administration, I remain,'

"The above letter was supplemented under date of October 12th, by the following letter, sent to all county highway superintendents:

"'Kindly refer to your letter under date of September 24th, in which we outlined the method of making up payrolls, the rates per diem, etc., of state work.

"'It is to be understood that the rates per day designated in our letter are the maximum rates allowed by this department, the minimum rate for each position being determined by you in the exercise of sound judgment as a representative of the state highway department.'

"This system was adopted with a view towards securing value received for the state's proportion of the salaries of county highway superintendents and for the purposes which our letter of September 24th patently indicates.

"I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to whether or not there are any legal difficulties in the path of such a system of accounting and use of the state's proportionate share of the salaries of the county highway superintendents as indicated in our letters.

"I also respectfully request an opinion from you on the following question:

"Is the state to divide the total sum available for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways by the number of counties in the state, thus arriving at the amount due each county, and then deduct from such county's proportion the state's share of the salary of its county highway superintendent, or is the total of the state's share of the salaries of all county highway superintendents to be deducted from the total amount available for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways and an equal division then made among the 88 counties in the state?"

Your first inquiry involves a consideration of sections 138, 139 and 212 of the Cass highway law, being sections 7181, 7182 and 1219, G. C.

Before referring to the provisions found in the above mentioned sections, it will be well to attempt a concise statement of the plan which your department has proposed to follow relative to the matter covered by your inquiry. Pursuant to opinion No. 844 of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, on September 20, 1915, it is your plan to make payment monthly to the several counties of the state of sums equal to one-fifth of the monthly salary of the county highway superintendents of the various counties. It is further proposed by you to require the county highway superintendent to submit a monthly payroll and to include therein his own time spent upon state work, making a charge therefor at the rate of $6.00 per day. The entire monthly payroll is to be paid by the county, under the plan proposed by you, until an amount equal to one-fifth of the county highway superintendent's salary, being the amount of his salary paid by the state, has been charged against the county, after which time the plan suggested provides for the state and county sharing proportionately in the payment of such payroll. You state that this system was adopted with the view of securing value received for the state's proportion of the salaries of county highway superintendents and also in order to keep accounts of the total engineering expenses upon all state work. I can readily understand the motives which have led you to propose this arrangement and the possible abuses which you seek to avoid, but am of the opinion that the plan is not authorized by the pertinent provisions of the Cass highway law, and that other methods will have to be devised by you in order to accomplish the result which you seek to obtain.

Under sections 138 and 139 of the Cass highway law, the county highway superintendent is given an annual salary, and no place in the act is there any provision for compensating him upon a per diem basis. The salary of the county highway superintendent varies in the different counties of the state, being dependent upon their population and the mileage of their roads, and I understand that the compensation received by county highway superintendents under the law will, in some counties, fall below $6.00 per day, while in other counties it will be substantially in excess of that amount. In those counties in which the county highway superintendent is designated to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under the control of the state, and therefore receives the full salary fixed by section 138 of the Cass highway law, it is provided that one-fifth of his salary shall be paid by the state but, as pointed out in the opinion referred to above, this one-fifth of the county highway superintendent's salary is paid by the state to the counties by way of reimbursement, inasmuch as it is provided that his compensation shall be paid to him out of the county treasury.

Under section 212 of the act, the county highway superintendent, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, may employ assistants in the preparation of plans, and superintendents and inspectors on construction work. This section further provides that the expense of plans and surveys shall be equally divided between the state and county, and that the expense of supervision and inspection shall be apportioned on the same basis as the cost of construction. It therefore follows that at the end of every month there will be due and owing from your department to the county in which the highway superintendent has been designated to have charge of state work a sum equal to one-fifth of the highway superintendent's salary for the month. In case the county highway superintendent, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, has employed assistants in the preparation of plans, one-half of the payroll for such assistants will have to be met by your department and the other half by the county. In case the county highway superintendent, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, has during the month employed superintendents and inspectors on state work, the payroll for such superintendents and inspectors will be the obligation of the state highway department and the county, to be met in the same proportion as that previously agreed upon for the cost of construction. In other words, if the state and county have agreed to meet in equal proportions the cost of construction, then the payroll of superintendents and inspectors employed on construction work is to be met by the state and county, share and share alike.

The manifest object of the arrangement suggested by you is to insure that the county highway superintendent will, each month, spend such time upon state work as that his compensation for such time, figured on the arbitrary basis of $6.00 per day, will equal the fifth part of his salary paid by the state. In other words, you are seeking to avoid an increase of overhead expenses in your department by prescribing a system which is designed to secure from the county highway superintendent each month such attention to state work as could be secured by an expenditure of the fifth part of his salary at the rate of $6.00 per day. While this purpose is a laudable one, the machinery for carrying it into effect is not provided by the Cass highway law, and indeed the plan suggested by you runs counter to the provisions of that act, and would in many instances produce a division of the cost of engineering between the state and the several counties different from that contemplated by the Cass highway law.

As an illustration let it be assumed that in a given county the salary of the county highway superintendent is $3,000.00 per year, and that the payroll of assistants, inspectors and superintendents employed under section 212 of the Cass highway law is $100.00 per month or $1,200.00 for the entire year, and that the facts require an equal division of this latter payroll between the state and the county. Let it be further assumed that the county highway superintendent devotes five days of each month to state work, that being approximately one-fifth of his time. Under the provisions of the Cass highway law, above quoted, the obligation of the state highway department for salaries for engineering work in such county during the year would consist of two items, one of $600.00, being one-fifth of the highway superintendent's salary, and the other of $600.00 being one-half the payroll of assistants, superintendents and inspectors, a total of $1,200.00. Under the plan suggested by you you would charge the county with $600.00 at the beginning of the year and credit the county at the end of each month thereafter with $65.00, being one-half the payroll for assistants and one-half of the county highway superintendent's per diem of $30.00. At the end of the ninth month the total credits to the county would amount to $585.00. At the end of the tenth month the county would be credited with the remaining $15.00 and your department would pay $50.00, being one-half of the payroll for assistants, superintendents and inspectors for that month. At the end of the eleventh and twelfth months your department would pay one-half of the payroll referred to above, making a total expenditure for that purpose during the two months of $100.00, and would pay to the county one-half of the county highway superintendent's per diem allowance for the two months, or a total of $30.00. A monthly payment of $50.00, making a total for the year of $600.00, being an amount equal to one-fifth of the county highway superintendent's salary, would also be paid by your department to the county. By adding together the above items, it will be seen that whereas under the assumed facts the state highway department should, under the statutes, expend $1,200.00 for salaries for engineering work in the county in question, yet under the plan suggested by you its expenditure would be limited to $780.00, even though under the assumed facts the county highway superintendent devoted practically one-fifth of his time to state work. I therefore advise that no effort be made to carry out the plan suggested by you and that payment of the state's portion of the salaries of county highway superintendents and assistants and inspectors be made in accordance with the suggestions herein contained. If any county highway superintendent should evince a disposition to neglect state work and to endeavor to cast the state work within his county upon assistants, one remedy for such a situation is suggested by the provision of section 212, to the effect that assistants, superintendents and inspectors on state work may be employed by the county highway superintendent only upon the approval of the chief highway engineer. Should the remedy suggested by the above provision prove inadequate, and should the neglect of a county highway superintendent in charge of state work be continued in defiance of the request and instructions of your department, ample remedy is provided by the provision of section 142 of the Cass highway law, section 7185, G. C., to the effect that if in the opinion of the state highway commissioner the county surveyor of any county neglects to perform his duties as county highway superintendent, the state highway commissioner shall file a written statement with the commissioners of such county, stating that in his judgment such surveyor has neglected to perform his duties as county highway superintendent, and upon the filing of such statement with the county commissioners the state highway commissioner may terminate the connection of the county highway superintendent with state work and designate some other engineer to have charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the roads within the county under the control of the state.

The provisions of the Cass highway law also afford ample authority for you to obtain full and complete information as to the activities of the county highway superintendent and as to the amount of time employed by him upon state work. Under section 145 of the act, the county highway superintendent is required to make reports from time to time to the state highway commissioner in respect to such matters, as may be specified by the latter. Under this provision you have full authority to require the county highway superintendent to make a monthly report to you, showing the exact amount of time devoted by him to state work within his county. While the Cass highway law does not definitely fix the proportion of his time which the county highway superintendent must devote to state work, yet it is manifest from a consideration of the entire act that it was the intention of the legislature that the county highway superintendent, when designated to have charge of state work, should devote thereto all the time required for the proper handling of state work, having due regard to the rights of the county and townships. It is therefore apparent that a county highway superintendent, designated to have charge of state work, would be guilty of neglect to perform his duties within the meaning of section 142 of the act, if he did not each month devote to any state work on hand such time as might be required therefor, having due regard to the rights of his county and of the several townships thereof.

While unable to sanction the plan suggested by you, I am in full sympathy with the purposes you seek to accomplish and am confident that the provisions of sections 212 and 142 of the act referred to above, will enable you to secure value received for the outlay by the state necessary to meet the one-fifth part of the salaries of county highway superintendents.

Coming now to consider the second inquiry contained in your communication, your attention is directed to opinion No. 847, of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, on September 21, 1915, a copy of which has been forwarded to you, in which it was held that moneys appropriated by the legislature for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways and equally divided among the counties of the state in accordance with the provisions of section 214 of the Cass highway law, section 1221, G. C., are available for the payment of the state's portion of the salaries of county highway superintendents for the reason that the state's portion of such salaries is to be regarded as a part of the cost and expense of construction, improvement, maintenance and repair. In accordance with that opinion and with the provision of section 214 of the Cass highway law therein quoted, it is my opinion that any sum appropriated for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways should be divided into 88 equal parts, corresponding to the number of counties in the state, and that the state's proportion of the salary of each county highway superintendent should be paid from the amount apportioned to that county as above suggested. To follow the other course and to pay the total of the state's share of the salaries of all county highway superintendents out of the total amount appropriated for inter-county highway construction, improvement, maintenance and repair before making an equal division among the counties of the state, would be to violate the statutory provision requiring that inter-county highway funds be equally divided among the counties of the state, for the reason that the salaries of county highway superintendents vary in the several counties and it is possible, under the law, that in some counties no part of the salary of the county highway superintendents will be paid by the state for the reason that such county highway superintendents will not be designated to have charge of state work or will be removed from their control over the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LIMA STATE HOSPITAL—COMMITMENT OF PERSONS ACCUSED OF CRIME FOUND BY GRAND JURY TO BE INSANE BEFORE INDICTMENT AND REPORTED TO COMMON PLEAS COURT, MAY BE MADE BY SECTION 13577, G. C.—CASE NEED NOT PASS THROUGH PROBATE COURT.

Commitment to the Lima State Hospital of persons accused of crime found by the grand jury to be insane before indictment and reported to the common pleas court may be made under provisions of section 13577, G. C., without certifying matter to probate court as in other cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 19, 1915.

DR. CHARLES H. CLARK, Superintendent, Lima State Hospital, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR DOCTOR:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion as to the regularity of the commitment of one Steve Kohler to the Lima State Hospital, which is as follows:

> "I desire an opinion from your office as to the legality of the commitment of one Steve Kohler from Ashtabula county. This man was arrested on the charge of burglary and indicted by the grand jury. During the investigation of the grand jury they found the accused to be insane and certified their findings to the common pleas court. The common pleas court then impaneled a jury and the accused was given a trial to determine his mental status. The jury returned a verdict of insanity. A copy of the journal entry in this case, together with copy of the findings of the grand jury, were furnished me on admission of patient to this hospital. The case was not certified to the probate court and no further proceedings were held.

"Personally, I believe that the commitment was irregular and not in strict accordance with the statutes governing the proceedings for insane criminals. Enclosed you will find the following copies:

"Certified copy of the journal entry.

"Findings of the grand jury.

"Copy of my letter to the prosecuting attorney and his reply to the same.

"An early opinion would be greatly appreciated."

With your letter you enclosed copy of the journal entry finding the prisoner insane by the jury impaneled under the provisions of section 13577 of the General Code; copy of the findings of the grand jury declaring the prisoner insane and reporting said finding to the common pleas court of Ashtabula county; in addition to copies of correspondence between the prosecuting attorney of Ashtabula county and yourself.

Section 13577 of the General Code, which prescribes the proper procedure in connection with the disposition of a case wherein the accused is found to be insane before indictment, is as follows:

"If a grand jury upon investigation of a person accused of crime finds such person to be insane, it shall report such findings to the court of common pleas. Such court shall order a jury to be impaneled to try whether or not the accused is sane at the time of such impaneling, and such court and jury shall proceed in a like manner as provided by law when the question of the sanitay of a person indicted for an offense is raised at any time before sentence. If such person is then found to be insane, he shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital until restored to reason. This section shall not be in force and effect until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates as certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

It will be noted that the section, among other things, provides that:

"such court and jury shall proceed in a like manner as provided by law when the question of the sanity of a person indicted for an offense is raised at any time before sentence."

In the case of a verdict of insanity rendered by a jury on the trial of a person indicted, and before trial on the indictment, it is provided in section 13610 of the General Code, that proceedings shall be had as follows:

"* * * If the jury find him to be not sane, that fact shall be certified by the clerk to the probate court, and the accused, until restored to reason, shall be dealt with by such court as upon request had. If he is discharged, the bond given for his support and safe-keeping shall contain a condition that, when restored to reason, he shall answer to the offense charged in the indictment, or of which he has been convicted, at the next term of the court thereafter and abide the order of such court."

A reading of section 13610 of the General Code, supra, will show that it purpose of certifying the case to the probate court as provided is that the court may exercise its discretion as to the disposition of the prisoner, whereas in section 13577 of the General Code, supra, it is specifically provided that:

> "if such person is then found to be insane he shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital until restored to reason."

Section 13577 of the General Code, supra, under its terms provides that it shall not be in force until a certificate has been made to the courts by the governor and secretary of state that the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates. Such certificate having been made under date of October 1, 1915, the section is in full force and effect.

Among the provisions of section 10492 of the General Code, is to be found the following:

> "Except as hereinafter provided, the probate court shall have exclusive jurisdiction: * * *
> "6. To make inquests respecting lunatics, insane persons, idots, deaf and dumb persons, subject by law to guardianship. * * *"

In the case of State ex rel. Palmer v. South, sheriff, decided in the Clinton county common pleas court, in 1898, to be found on page 442 of volume VII of the Ohio Nisi Prius Reports, it was held that where a person is indicted for crime the court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for lunacy inquest over him before trial, that his sanity can only be determined by a jury in the common pleas court as provided by statute. This was a case wherein Palmer, who had been indicted for forgery, was brought before the probate court after indictment, adjudged insane by the court and the sheriff commanded to convey Palmer to the Athens State Hospital, and upon the refusal of the sheriff to convey the prisoner on the ground that he, the sheriff, was answerable to the common pleas court for the body of Palmer to answer for forgery, mandamus proceedings were instituted to compel the sheriff to carry out the mandate of the probate court; this the court refused to do, holding that the statutes provided that where a person is alleged to be insane and under indictment for a criminal charge he can have his sanity investigated by a jury in the common pleas court rather than in the usual manner in the probate court.

The same principle applies when a person is bound over to a common pleas court and whose case is to be considered by the grand jury, so that the question as to whether or not the probate court would have jurisdiction before the indictment by the grand jury would rest upon the same reasoning as the Palmer case, above referred to.

The provisions of law relating to the holding of an inquest in the probate court are to safeguard the liberty of persons so that they may not be committed to an institution without due process of law. The proceedings in the common pleas court as provided for in section 13577 of the General Code, supra, are formal and include the finding of a court and jury and when, after such procedure has been followed, a verdict of insanity has been rendered and commitment to the Lima State Hospital ordered there is no cause to complain that the rights of the person affected have in any manner been invaded.

While, under the provisions of section 13610 of the General Code, as stated above, some action is necessary by the probate court after the finding of the jury that the person is insane, such action is wholly unnecessary and unauthorized under the provisions of section 13577 of the General Code, supra, by reason of the fact that the statute expressly provides that when under its provisions the person is found insane he shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital.

It is my opinion therefore that the proceedings in the case of Steve Kohler in Ashtabula county common pleas court were regular, and that it is unnecessary to have the case pass through probate court for commitment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT IS REQUIRED TO PAY TUITION OF PUPIL WHO ATTENDS HIGH SCHOOL MAINTAINED IN AN ADJOINING DISTRICT WHEN PUPIL HAS BEEN CERTIFIED AS ELIGIBLE FOR SUCH WORK—LOCAL BOARD MAINTAINS A COURSE OF STUDY EQUIVALENT TO FIRST YEAR OF HIGH SCHOOL AND PUPIL COMPLETES COURSE AND IS THEN CERTIFIED.

The board of education of a rural school district, which maintains a school in which a course of study equivalent to the work in the first year of a high school is offered, may, under provision of section 7747, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 125, be required to pay the tuition of a pupil residing in said district who attends a high school maintained by the board of education of an adjoining school district, and who, having completed the course prescribed for the first year in said high school, has been certified as eligible for the second year's work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 19, 1915.

HON. C. H. CURTISS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of November 10th you request my opinion on a question which may be stated as follows:

> May the board of education of Nelson township rural school district in Portage county, which maintains a school in which a course of study equivalent to the work in the first year of a high school is offered, be required to pay the tuition of a pupil residing in said district who attends a high school maintained by the board of education of the adjoining village school district of Garrettsville, in said county, and who, having completed the course prescribed for the first year in said high school, has been certified as eligible for the second year's work?

I do not deem it necessary to quote the various provisions of the statutes respectively defining an elementary school and a high school and the different grades of high schools having statutory recognition.

It is sufficient to observe that under provision of section 7655, G. C., high schools of a less grade than the third grade high schools defined by provisions of section 7654, G. C., "shall be denominated as elementary schools."

Section 7654, G. C., provides that a high school of the third grade shall cover a period of not less than two years of not less than twenty-eight weeks each, in which not less than eight courses of study are required for graduation.

It is evident that the school in Nelson township rural school district, referred to in your inquiry, being a school of less grade than a third grade high school, as defined by section 7654, G. C., is an elementary school within the meaning of section 7655, G. C.

It follows, therefore, that in so far as the payment of the tuition of the pupil in question is concerned, the board of education of said rural school district is governed by that part of section 7747, G. C., as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, 125, which provides:

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repair, by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district."

The above provision of the statute makes it the duty of the board of education of said rural school district to pay the tuition of the pupil referred to in your inquiry residing in said district and attending the Garrettsville village high school.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your question must be answered in the affirmative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MECHANICS' LIENS—CANNOT BE PERFECTED AGAINST STATE FUNDS DUE CONTRACTORS ENGAGED IN CONSTRUCTION WORK OF STATE.

Inasmuch as the state cannot be sued, mechanics' liens cannot be perfected against funds in the hands of the state, and due or to become due to contractors engaged in the construction of state work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 5, 1915, enclosing a copy of a letter received by your department from Messrs. Hayes & Hayes, attorneys-at-law, of Wilmington, Ohio. In their letter they state that they enclose eleven notices of mechanics' liens asserted against The Ironton Transfer & Storage Company. They further state that these several liens are asserted against all payments due or unpaid and owing to The Ironton Transfer & Storage Company, by reason of or growing out of the contract for the building of a state road in Warren county. You state in your communication that these liens which it is sought to assert grow out of the furnishing of teams, wagons and drivers for hauling material on an improvement being constructed by The Ironton Transfer & Storage Company under contract with the state highway department, and request my opinion as to what action, if any, may properly be taken by you in the premises.

Replying to your inquiry, I beg leave to direct your attention to opinion No. 16 of this department, rendered by me to the Ohio Board of Administration on January 19, 1915, a copy of which opinion is herewith enclosed. In the opinion in question it was held that inasmuch as the state cannot be sued, mechanics' liens cannot be perfected against funds in the hands of the state and due or to become due to contractors engaged in the construction of state work. The following is quoted from the opinion to the Ohio Board of Administration:

> "Inasmuch as a suit may not be brought against the state for the enforcement of a mechanics' lien, there is no method by which a court can decree its enforcement, and in the absence of a law to enforce the same, the auditor of state cannot recognize this lien."

In view of the above, I advise you that there is nothing which you can do towards affording relief to the creditors of The Ironton Transfer & Storage Company, and that you cannot recognize the liens asserted in favor of these creditors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 49, 106 O. L., 499—SALE OF REAL ESTATE UNDER THIS ACT BY SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS TO CITY OF TOLEDO—APPROVAL OF SALE BY GOVERNOR AND ATTORNEY GENERAL—AUDITOR OF STATE REQUIRED TO DRAFT CONVEYANCE.

A sale of land to the city of Toledo under amended senate bill No. 49, 106 O. L., 499, is to be made by the superintendent of public works. While the sale is subject to the approval of the governor and attorney general, they are not to join in making the same.

The auditor of state is required to draft conveyance of real estate sold on behalf of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 22, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 6, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Herewith I transmit resolutions preliminary to carrying out the exchange of land between the state of Ohio and the city of Toledo, as provided for in the act of the general assembly of Ohio, passed May 27, 1915, (105 and 106 O. L., page 499).
> "You have before you a deed and abstract conveying certain lands to the state of Ohio. The resolution herewith enclosed together with the deed which I herewith submit to you, for approval as to form, is intended to carry out the state's part of the contract entered into between the state board of public works and the city of Toledo, dated December 14, 1912."

It should be noted that the deed from the city of Toledo to the state of Ohio, together with abstract of title covering the property conveyed by said deed, have been submitted to this department and that the same were approved by me in opinion No. 1016, rendered to you on November 12, 1915.

Under the terms of amended senate bill No. 49, found in 106 O. L., 499, the consideration for the deed from the city of Toledo to the state of Ohio is to be the transfer by the state to the city of Toledo of certain real estate described in the act in question, and the proceeding which you now seek to carry out is the consummation of the sale by the state to the city and the execution of the proper deed. For that purpose you have used a form of proceeding previously approved by this department where lands were sold by you, together with the governor and attorney general, this proceeding being authorized by section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio. That section required the governor and attorney general, in certain instances, to join in making the sale, whereas amended senate bill No. 49, 106 O. L., 499, now under consideration, provides that the superintendent of public works shall make the sale and that the sale shall be approved by the governor and attorney general. I therefore suggest that the expression "join with me in selling" be stricken out of the third paragraph of the document which you have submitted in duplicate, and which you style a record of proceeding, and that in place of said expression "join with me in selling" there be substituted the expression "approve of the sale by me of." In view of the above, there will be no necessity for the adoption of a resolution by the governor, superintendent of public works and attorney general, and I suggest that the form of resolution which you have attached to your record of proceedings be detached therefrom, and that the following be endorsed at the end of your record of proceedings:

> I hereby approve of the sale by the superintendent of public works to the city of Toledo of the real estate described in the foregoing record of proceedings of the department of public works.
> Dated---------- ----------,
> Governor of Ohio.
> Dated---------- ----------,
> Attorney General of Ohio.

Upon the return to you of your record of proceedings, with the written approval of the governor and attorney general, you should add thereto the following entry:

> OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.
> COLUMBUS, OHIO, ----------1915.
> The sale to the city of Toledo of the real estate described in the foregoing record of proceedings having been approved by the governor and attorney general, I have this day sold said real estate to the city of Toledo.
> Superintendent of Public Works.

I note that you attach to your communication a form of deed. The first paragraph of this deed is open to the same objection as the record of proceedings, and instead of reciting a sale by the governor, attorney general and superintendent of public works, should recite a sale by the superintendent of public works with the approval of the governor and attorney general.

I deem it proper, however, in this connection, to call your attention to the provision of section 8523 of the General Code of Ohio, to the effect that a conveyance of real estate or any interest therein sold on behalf of the state in pursuance of law, shall be drafted by the auditor of state. I therefore suggest the advisability of requesting the auditor of state to prepare the conveyance for execution by the governor.

For the reasons above stated, I am returning the record of proceedings without my approval, but will be glad to approve the same when you have complied with the suggestions herein made.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BONDS FOR CITY OF CONNEAUT, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 24, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE:—Bonds of the city of Conneaut, Ohio, in the sum of $31,320.00, dated November 1, 1915, being thirty bonds of $1,000 each, three falling due each year from November 1, 1916, to and including November 1, 1925, and one bond of $1,320, falling due on November 1, 1925.

I have examined the transcript of the above mentioned bonds submitted by the city auditor relative to the proceedings of council and other officers of said city, and find that the purpose for which said bonds are issued is authorized by law; that the proceedings of said city council and other officers relative thereto have been regular and in conformity to statutory requirements; that the amount of said bonds and the tax levy which will be necessary to pay the interest thereon and create a sinking fund for their redemption when due exceeds no statutory limitation.

I have examined the first twenty-nine bonds of $1,000 each of the issue above described, which have been delivered to the treasurer of state, and find that the same are properly drawn and executed. The absence of the two remaining bonds, viz.: No. 30 for the sum of $1,000, and No. 31 for the sum of $1,320, is due to the fact that a portion of the assessment levy for the improvement of said streets has been paid to the treasurer of the city of Conneaut, and the necessity for the issuance of said bonds no longer exists, and it is the intention of the city officers to deliver only the first twenty-nine bonds.

I therefore certify that the twenty-nine bonds in the hands of the treasurer of state constitute valid obligations of the city of Conneaut, and I approve the purchase of the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE AND DEED OF REAL ESTATE TO BE PURCHASED FOR MANSFIELD REFORMATORY—APPROPRIATION TO PURCHASE H. L. PEEKE LAND.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 26, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In house bill No. 721, making sundry appropriations (106 O. L., 834), there appears the following appropriation: (Page 840.)

> "To purchase H. L. Peeke 9-13/100 acres of land for the uses and purposes of the Mansfield reformatory, $2,000.00."

In section 2 of said appropriation bill it is provided that the moneys so appropriated shall be paid upon the approval of a special auditing committee consisting of the budget commissioner, the attorney general, the auditor of state, the chairman of the finance committee of the senate and the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives.

Upon examination of the records of the committee constituted as above, I find the following entry:

> "It was moved by Mr. Ballard, seconded by Mr. Wise, that for the sum of $2,000.00 to be paid to H. L. Peeke for 9-13/100 acres of land, the auditor of state be authorized to issue his warrant when the title to said property has been approved by the attorney general and deed delivered to the auditor of state; all members voting aye."

Mr. H. L. Peeke has submitted to this department an abstract of title to the premises in question, as well as a deed covering the same, said premises being described as follows:

> "Situated in the township of Madison, county of Richland, and in the state of Ohio, and more particularly described as being situated in sections nine (9) and sixteen (16), range eighteen (18), township twenty-one (21), Richland county and state of Ohio. Being a strip of land one hundred

(100) feet wide, being fifty (50) feet on either side of the center line of The Chicago Short Line Railway Company, as now staked across the land heretofore owned by Roberta E. J. Buckley. Said center line is described as follows: Beginning at a stake or point two hundred (200) feet south of the center line of section nine (9) measured on half section line; thence with a curve line to the right with a radius four thousand, five hundred and eighty-three and seven-tenths (4,583.7) feet for a distance of five hundred and seventy-six and five-tenths (576.5) feet; thence with a tangent in a southeasterly direction a distance of three thousand, four hundred and eighty-nine (3,489) feet to the center of Nelson street, in New Trenton addition, in Madison township. The center of said street being the southerly line of said strip of land, containing in all nine and thirteen one-hundredths acres of land more or less, according to a tracing which is recorded on page 16, volume 8, of the plat records of Richland county, Ohio.

I have carefully examined the abstract and find that the title now in Mr. Peeke, after the said title had been quieted in him in the case of H. L. Peeke v. The Columbus Savings & Trust Company et al., No. 12864, Richland county court of common pleas, is a good, merchantable title, and that there are now no incumbrances against the same, Mr. Peeke having submitted to me receipted tax bills for the taxes for the year 1915 covering said property, which I herewith hand to you for your files.

I have likewise examined the deed and find the same to be properly executed and stamped in accordance with the federal income tax law.

I herewith enclose you the deed in question and the abstract pertaining thereto. I also enclose you a map outlining the premises conveyed, as well as an abstract of title to 189.20 acres of land purchased by the state from Roberta E. J. Buckley for the use of the Mansfield Reformatory, which abstract was handed to me by the Board of Administration.

The title to the premises sought to be conveyed by the deed heretofore referred to having been approved by me and the deed delivered to you, a voucher may be issued by you to the order of H. L. Peeke, Sandusky, Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LEASES OF CANAL LAND AT DAYTON AND BALTIMORE, OHIO, DISAPPROVED—RESOLUTION OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE DAVIS AND SHERRER COMPANY AUTHORIZING LEASE SHOULD ACCOMPANY CONTRACT—LEASE EXECUTED BY VILLAGE OF BALTIMORE SHOULD BE SIGNED BY MAYOR AND CLERK.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 26, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 12, 1915, transmitting to me for examination the following leases of canal lands:

The Davis & Sherrer Co., M. & E. canal lands at Dayton, valuation	$3,333.33
The village of Baltimore, Ohio, canal lands, valuation	200.00

Attached to the lease to The Davis & Sherrer Company is a certified copy of section 3 of the code of regulations of that company, which section is to the effect that all written contracts entered into on behalf of the company shall be signed by both the president and secretary and sealed with the corporate seal. This provision has reference to the mode of execution of contracts rather than to the authority to make the same, and there should be attached to the triplicate copies of the lease in question certified copies of a resolution of the board of directors of The Davis & Sherrer Co., authorizing the leasing of the lands in question.

The lease to the village of Baltimore is signed by B. B. Holland, as mayor. Section 4221, G. C., provides that all contracts made by the council of a village shall be executed in the name of the village and signed on behalf of the village by the mayor and clerk. The council of the village of Baltimore should pass a resolution or ordinance providing for the leasing of the land in question, which resolution or ordinance should contain a description of the land. The lease should then be signed in the name of the village by its mayor and clerk.

For the reasons above stated I am returning these leases without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General

MAPLE PRODUCTS—WHEN COMPOUND OF MAPLE AND CANE SYRUPS IS PERMITTED BY SECTION 5785, G. C.—HOW LABELED.

Compound of syrup composed of unadulterated "cane" syrup and unadulterated "maple" syrup may be sold if the package containing same bears label "cane and maple syrup," and said label contains the percentage of the ingredients making up the compound in terms as prescribed by section 5785, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 26, 1915.

The Board of Agriculture, Dairy and Food Department, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "There has been some controversy in regard to the labeling maple products when mixed with some other syrup, and I would ask you to kindly give a ruling on the following:
> "Would it be permissible to label syrup composed of cane or sugar syrup and maple, as 'cane' and 'maple syrup' without giving the percentage of each contained therein?"

Section 12763, 12764 and 12765 of the General Code, are as follows:

> "Sec. 12763. Maple sugar or pure maple sugar and maple syrup or pure maple syrup are the unadulterated product by the evaporation of pure sap from the maple tree. The standard of weight of a gallon of maple syrup of two hundred and thirty-one cubic inches shall be eleven pounds. A substance purporting to be maple syrup or maple sugar not made in compliance with this section shall be an adulteration of maple syrup or maple sugar, and maple syrup of less weight than herein required shall be an adulteration of maple syrup.

"Sec. 12764. Whoever manufactures for sale, offers for sale, has in in his possession with intent to sell, or sells or delivers, as and for maple syrup or maple sugar, an adulteration thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars.

"Sec. 12765. Whoever offers for sale, has in his possession with intent to sell, sells or delivers an adulteration of maple syrup or maple sugar in a box, can, bottle, or other package having the word 'maple,' or a compound thereof, as the name or part of the name of the contents thereof or a device or illustration suggestive of maple syrup or sugar or the manufacture thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars."

Section 5785 of the General Code, is, in part, as follows:

"Food, drink flavoring extracts, confectionery or condiment shall be misbranded within the meaning of this chapter * * *

"(2) if it is labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser. * * *

"(5) if the package containing it or a label thereon bears a statement, design or device regarding it or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which is false, or misleading in any particular; provided, that this section shall not apply to mixtures or compounds recognized as ordinary articles of food or drink if each package sold or offered for sale is distinctly labeled in words of the English language as mixtures or compounds, with the name and percentage, in terms of one hundred per cent. of each ingredient therein. The word 'compound' or 'mixture' shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-half the largest letter upon any label on the package, and the formula shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-fourth the largest upon any label on the package, and such compound or mixture must not contain an ingredient that is poisonous or injurious to health."

Section 12763 of the General Code, supra, is specific and precise in its declaration as to just what shall be considered as pure maple syrup and brands every other product purporting to be maple syrup as an adulteration thereof.

Section 12764 of the General Code, supra, provides a penalty for the manufacturing for sale, offering for sale, having in possession with intent to sell, selling or delivering any adulteration of maple syrup as maple syrup. This section clearly prohibits the sale of any product as maple syrup which does not meet the requirements of section 12763 of the General Code, supra.

Section 12765 of the General Code, supra, goes still farther in protecting the public from being imposed upon by manufacturers or vendors of maple products by providing that the use of the word "maple" or a compound thereof as the name or part of the name indicating or suggesting the contents of the package to be a maple product, shall be subject to the penalty therein provided if the contents of the package be an adulteration of maple syrup or maple sugar.

I am inclined to agree with you that the mixing of pure maple syrup with pure cane sugar syrup would not constitute an adulteration of maple syrup such as is contemplated in the provisions of section 12765 of the General Code, supra, but under the provisions of section 5785, General Code, supra, the result of the mixture would be a compound which could be offered to the public for sale provided that the package containing it bears a label, statement, design or device regarding it, which is not misleading and there is distinctly stated in words of the English language the name of the compound and the percentage in terms of one hundred per cent. of each ingredient therein. The word "compound" or "mixture" shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-half the largest letter of any label upon the package, and the formula shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-fourth the largest letter of any label upon the package, it being assumed, of course, that the mixture of pure maple syrup with pure cane or sugar syrup would not result in a compound or mixture containing any ingredient that is poisonous or injurious to health.

It is my opinion therefore that it is permissible to label syrup composed of cane or sugar syrup or maple syrup as "cane and maple syrup," provided the requirements of section 5785, General Code, are complied with strictly, it being understood, of course, that such a compound could not, under section 5785 of the General Code, supra, be labeled "cane" or "maple syrup" even though the percentage of ingredients was stated as referred to above,—such label would be misleading and constitute a misbranding of the article.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—ROAD PETITIONS—WHEN FILED AND FAVORABLY ACTED UPON PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 6, 1915, WHEN CASS HIGHWAY LAW BECAME EFFECTIVE, ROADS SHOULD BE IMPROVED UNDER LAW THEN IN EFFECT.

Where road petitions were filed under section 6956-1, G. C., and the county commissioners under section 6956-2, G. C., acted favorably thereon prior to September 6, 1915, the roads covered by such petitions should be improved under the law in force at the time such petitions were filed and acted upon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. F. J. BISHOP, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 9, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon the following facts:

Prior to the taking effect of the Cass highway law, petitions had been filed with the commissioners of Ashtabula county, asking for the building of roads in different parts of the county. These petitions were filed under section 6956-1, G. C., and in response to such petitions the commissioners, acting under section 6956-2, G. C., then in force, went upon the line of the proposed roads and duly determined the routes and termini of the same, the kind and extent of the improvements, etc., and appointed the county surveyor to go upon the lines of such roads and make surveys, plats, profiles, etc., which duty was performed by the county surveyor, all of the above occurring prior to September 6, 1915, upon which date the Cass highway law went into effect. The question now is as to the right of the county commissioners to proceed under the old law to complete the roads in question.

As bearing upon this question, you cite the curative provisions of section 300 of the Cass highway law, which section reads as follows:

> "All proceedings for the construction, improvement or repair of stone, gravel or other roads in this state under the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-16 inclusive, of the General Code, has since May 10th, 1910, and all petitions granted, bonds issued, taxes and assessments levied or to be levied on account of such roads, and all contracts made or entered into, under the provisions of said sections, and any and all steps taken thereunder, are hereby declared and held to be valid, and boards of county commissioners or other officials shall have full power and authority to complete all roads in process of construction under said sections, and shall have full power and authority to levy taxes and assessments for such roads, and to sell bonds, to pay for the construction and improvement of all such roads, and to do any and all things contemplated by the provisions of said sections.
> "All petitions granted, bonds issued, contracts let, taxes and assessments levied or to be levied, on account of such roads, shall be deemed and held to have been done under the provisions of said section 6956-1 to 6956-16 inclusive, notwithstanding any irregularity in said petitions, contracts, bonds, levies or assessments, and the proceedings had in connection therewith, and notwithstanding said proceedings may not have been had in strict conformity to the provisions of the sections above referred to; and all proceedings for the construction of stone, gravel or other roads which have not been had in conformity to any valid existing law, shall be deemed and held to have had under the provisions of sections above referred to, and such proceedings and all the steps thereunder are hereby declared and held to be valid, notwithstanding any defect or irregularity therein, or any failure to conform strictly to the provisions of the above mentioned sections."

Without discussing fully the scope of section 300 quoted above or the intention of the legislature in enacting the same, it is sufficient for the purposes of this opinion to observe that the same was intended, as is indicated by its chapter heading, to be principally a curative and not a saving provision, and that in so far as it is a saving provision, it was intended to apply only to invalid proceedings, the defects in which were cured by the section in question.

The saving provision applicable to the state of facts presented by you is contained in the following language found in section 303 of the Cass highway law.

> "This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, or right acquired of any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect, under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, enforced, prosecuted or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the commissioners of any road district prior to the time of the taking effect of this act, * * *"

Under the state of facts presented by you, the county commissioners must, prior to the taking effect of the Cass highway law, have found and determined by resolution that the public utility and convenience required that the roads in question be laid out, constructed, repaired, improved, altered, straightened or widened, as petitioned for, and they must further have determined by resolution the routes and termini of such roads, if the petitions were for the laying out of new roads, and the kind and extent of the improvements or repairs and the alterations in the lines and changes of grades of said roads, if any. Having determined these facts by resolution duly adopted and entered on their journal, it follows that the case presented is one where a right has been acquired under or in pursuance of resolution adopted by a board of commissioners of a county. In other words, the commissioners, having made a favorable finding upon the petitions presented to them, a right now exists in the petitioners to have the improvements completed, and it is therefore my opinion, in answer to your specific question, that under the saving provision of section 303 of the Cass highway law, quoted above, it is the duty of the county commissioners to proceed with the construction of the improvements in question and to prosecute the work to completion under the law in force at the time the petitions were filed, and the resolutions making a favorable finding thereon adopted by the board of county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—CANAL LANDS SOLD AT PUBLIC SALE—PARTICIPATION IN SALE OF CANAL LANDS BY ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Where canal lands are sold at public sale the participation of the attorney general in the making of the sale is not required or warranted by law, and his only function in such a transaction is as one of the commissioners of the sinking fund in fixing the terms of payment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 18, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Herewith I enclose duplicate copies of resolution providing for the sale of certain state lands therein described to Martin D. Kuhlke, of Akron, Ohio, for your approval. This land has been advertised and bids received, Mr. Kuhlke being the highest and only bidder therefor, his bid being $8,700.00, which is an excellent price for the land."

Section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio, which is the section relating to the sale of canal lands, reads as follows:

> "Any land or lands belonging to the state of Ohio, near or remote from the line of any canal in this state, that cannot be leased so as to yield six per cent. on the valuation thereof, as determined by said commission, may be sold by said commission at not less than three-fourths of such valuation, upon such terms of payment as may be fixed by the commissioners of the sinking fund, and such land shall be offered for sale at public vendue, at the court house in the county where the same is situated, after at least thirty days' notice given by publication in two papers of opposite politics of general circulation in such county; provided, however, that said commission, together with the governor and attorney general of the state of Ohio, shall have power to sell any such land or lands which are appraised at five hundred dollars or less at private sale, at a price not less than the appraised value thereof; the governor to execute deeds to purchasers of any such lands, whether sold at public or private sale; provided, further, that such land or lands shall not be sold or offered for sale unless the said commission, board of public works, and the chief engineer of the board of public works shall have, by a majority vote in joint session, determined that such land or lands are not necessary or required for the use, maintenance, and operation of any of the canals of this state."

Under the terms of an act passed on March 6, 1913, and found in 103 O. L., 119, the word "commission," as found in the section of of the Appendix to the General Code quoted above, is to be read "superintendent of public works." It will be noted that under the terms of the section above quoted, the participation of the governor and attorney general in a sale of canal lands is limited to those cases in which the lands are appraised at $500.00 or less, and are sold at private sale. In the case now under consideration, the lands were appraised at more than $500.00 and were sold at public sale. It therefore follows that my participation in the making of the sale is not required or warranted by law. Where canal lands are sold at public sale, the only function to be discharged by the attorney general is as one of the commissioners of the sinking fund. It is required by section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code, quoted above, that where canal lands are sold at public sale, the terms of payment are to be fixed by the commissioners of the sinking fund. Under section 8 of article VIII of the constitution of Ohio, the auditor of state, secretary of state and attorney general are the commissioners of the sinking fund. From the above it will appear that my participation in or approval of the sale made by you is not required or warranted by the statutes, but that before consummating the sale you should submit the terms of payment to the commissioners of the sinking fund, consisting of the auditor of state, secretary of state and myself, for approval.

For the reasons above stated I am returning the duplicate copies of resolution without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JOINT STOCK COMPANY FORMED UNDER THE LAWS OF NEW YORK STATE, NOT REQUIRED TO SECURE FROM SECRETARY OF STATE CERTIFICATE AUTHORIZING IT TO DO BUSINESS IN OHIO, BUT SUCH COMPANY IS REQUIRED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 8099, G. C.—AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY.

The American News Company, a partnership or joint stock association, formed under the laws of the state of New York, is not a foreign corporation within the meaning of section 178, G. C., and is not required, as a prerequisite of transacting business in Ohio, to procure from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with the requirements of the law authorizing it to do business in Ohio; neither is the secretary of state authorized by the laws of Ohio to receive and file a certificate tendered to him by The American News Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 15th requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith enclosing a communication from Squire, Sanders and Dempsey, attorneys at law, Cleveland, Ohio, copy of articles of association of THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY, and certificate of The American News Company, a partnership or joint stock association, formed and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of New York, and beg to ask for your opinion upon the following questions:
> "1. Are there any provisions of the law in the state of Ohio authorizing the secretary of state to receive and file said certificate of THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY, a partnership or joint stock association of New York State?
> "2. If the laws of the state of Ohio authorize the secretary of state to receive and file the aforesaid certificate what fee should be charged by the secretary of state for the filing of same?"

The articles of association of The American News Company and the certificate enclosed with and referred to in your letter reveal that The American News Company is a joint stock association formed under the laws of the State of New York. Paragraph 2 of article I, chapter 29, of the consolidated laws of New York, defining a joint stock association, is as follows:

> "As used in this chapter the term 'joint stock association' includes every unincorporated joint stock association, company or enterprise, having written articles of association and capital stock divided into shares, but does not include a corporation, and the term 'stock holder' includes every member of such association."

In Hibbs v. Brison, 112 App. Div., 214, affirmed in 190 N. Y., 167 in discussing the distinction between joint stock associations and corporations says:

> "Joint stock associations are in all essential aspects, except the personal liability of stockholders, like corporations, the difference is that ordinarily the creditors of a corporation may only have recourse to corporation property while the creditors of a joint stock association may cover all the stockholders, without exhausting his remedy against the association."

See also People ex rel. Winchester v. Coleman, 133 N. Y., 279.

In McFadden et al., v. Leeks et al., 48 O. S., 513, the court, at page 526 of the opinion, makes the following distinction:

"The unincorporated association known as the Union Pork House Company is to be regarded as merely a co-partnership, and subject to the rules governing that branch of the law. It did not lose its real nature as a partnership because certain of its members were constituted directors, and its members were called stockholders, and a constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the number of its members was large. It might be deemed expedient to appoint directors to act as the special agents for managing the affairs of the company instead of leaving each member, as in an ordinary partnership, to act as a general agent for the transaction of business in the ordinary way. The company, too, might be a partnership, although its capital stock be divided into shares, which, by the articles of association, are made transferable on the books of the company."

The above language very aptly describes the characteristics of The American News Company. It has a capital stock divided into shares, and a considerable number of stockholders. Its business is managed and operated by directors elected by stockholders, and it possesses many of the other attributes of a corporation, yet it is not a corporation and its so-called stockholders are individually liable to the creditors of the association.

Section 178 of the General Code, requires a foreign corporation for profit, as a prerequisite of transacting business in Ohio, to procure from the secretary of state:

* * * "a certificate that it has complied with the requirements of law to authorize it to do business in this state, and that the business of such corporation to be transacted in this state is such as may be lawfully carried on by a corporation organized under the laws of this state for such or similar business, or if more than one kind of business, by two or more corporations so incorporated for such kind of business exclusively. * *"

Section 179 of the General Code, requires the corporation, in order to secure such certificate, to first file with the secretary of state a sworn copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation, and a statement under its corporate seal setting forth the detailed information required by said section.

The language of the two sections just referred to indicates that they were intended to apply exclusively to corporations, and I know of no provision of the General Code of Ohio which requires a foreign stock association organized under the laws of a sister state to secure from the secretary of state a certificate authorizing it to do business in Ohio, or which authorizes the secretary of state to file and record any statement made by such joint stock association.

In Commonwealth v. Adams Express Company, 123 Ky., 720, (97 S. W. Rep., 386) the court held that:

"An unincorporated express company need not obtain a permit from the state under a statute requiring foreign corporations to do so."

In this case the Adams Express Company, a joint stock association created under the laws of New York, was indicted for doing business in Kentucky without having filed with the secretary of state the statement required by section 571 Ky. St., of 1903. The Kentucky statute upon which the action was based is, in part, as follows:

> "All corporations, except foreign insurance companies formed under the laws of this or any other state, and carrying on any business in this state, shall at all times have one or more known places of business in this state, and an authorized agent or agents thereat upon whom process can be served; and it shall not be lawful for any corporation to carry on any business in this state, until it shall have filed in the office of the secretary of state a statement, signed by its president or secretary, giving the location of its office or offices in this state, and the name or names of its agent or agents thereat upon whom process can be served; and when any change is made in location of its office or offices, or in its agent or agents, it shall at once file with the secretary of state a statement of such change * * * and if any corporation fails to comply with the requirements of this section such corporation or any agent or employe of such corporation, who shall transact, carry on or conduct any business in this state for it shall be severally guilty of a misdemeanor * * *."

The court held that the Adams Express Company was not a corporation within the meaning of the language of the statute above quoted, although section 457 of the Kentucky statutes, of 1903, contained a provision that "* * * the words 'corporation' and 'company' may be construed as including any corporation, company, person, persons, partnership, joint stock company or association."

I therefore advise you that you are not authorized by the laws of Ohio to receive and file said certificates of The American News Company referred to in your letter. The answer to your first question is also an answer to your second question.

I think it proper here to suggest, however, that before The American News Company can undertake to carry on its business in Ohio it should comply with the requirements of section 8099 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in the next following section, every partnership transacting business in this state under a fictitious name, or a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners therein, must file with the clerk of the common pleas court of the county in which its principal office or place of business is situated, a certificate to be indexed by him, stating the names in full of all the members of the partnership and their places of residence."

See also the provisions of section 8101 and 8102 of the General Code, particularly applicable to joint stock companies. The provisions of the last two sections of the General Code, relative to joint stock associations, further indicate that it was not the legislative intent to treat them as corporations.

I am returning herewith the letter addressed to you by Messrs. Squire, Sanders and Dempsey, two documents addressed to the secretary of state, and a printed copy of the articles of association which were enclosed with your letter.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—STATE NOT REQUIRED TO PAY ANY PORTION OF HIS EXPENSES ON STATE OR COUNTY WORK.

The state is not required to pay any portion of the expenses of a county highway superintendent even when that official is employed on state work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. CLINTON, COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 26, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to whether or not the state highway department, in addition to paying one-fifth of the total salaries of the county highway superintendents under the Cass highway law, is required to pay any portion of the expenses of said county highway superintendents when placed in charge of state work by the state highway department."

In answering your inquiry I am not unmindful of the provision of section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., to the effect that the expense of surveys and plans for state work, when made by the county highway superintendent, shall be equally divided between the state and county, and that the expense of supervision and inspection of state work when under the control of the county highway superintendent shall be apportioned between the state and the county on the same basis as the cost of construction. I am of the opinion, however, that the controlling provision is that part of section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., which reads as follows:

> "In addition thereto, the county highway superintendent and his assistant, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury, their actual, necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging."

Section 139 of the Cass highway law, section 7182, G. C., provides explicitly that the state shall pay one-fifth of the salary of the county surveyor when that official has charge of state work, but no place in the act is there found any provision for a division between the state and county of the expenses of the county highway superintendent. On the contrary, as pointed out above, the positive declaration of section 138 of the act, is that the expenses of the county highway superintendent shall be paid out of the county treasury.

It must be borne in mind that the assistants referred to in section 138 of the act, and whose expenses are to be paid out of the county treasury, are of an entirely different class from the assistants, superintendents and inspectors referred to in section 212. The assistants referred to in section 138 are such as are needed upon county and township work, while those referred to in section 212 are the assistants required upon state work. This distinction is made clear by the difference in the method of appointment and compensation as to the two classes of assistants. The expense referred to in section 212 of the act and which is to be divided between the state and county is evidently the compensation and expenses of the assistants, superintendents and inspectors appointed under that section.

In view of the above consideration, it is my opinion, in answer to your specific question, that the state is not required to pay any portion of the expenses of a county highway superintendent even when that official is employed on state work. In order that this opinion may not be misunderstood, however, it should be added that if assistants are appointed upon state work under the provisions of section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., then not only the compensation but also the expenses of such assistants are to be divided between the state and the county. If such assistants are employed in the making of surveys and plans, their compensation and expenses are to be equally divided, and if employed upon construction work their compensation and expenses are to be divided on the same basis as the cost of construction.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

4. The provision contained in paragraph 2 of the policy form under consideration "to defend in the name and on behalf of the assured any suit brought against the assured" being merely incidental to the main contract of insurance may be embodied in the policy without conflicting with the principle laid down in the case of State v. Laylin, 73 O. S., 90.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. FRANK TAGGART, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 22, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "On July 20, 1914, the attorney general of Ohio gave to the Hon. Robert Small, superintendent of insurance, an opinion as to the right of liability companies to write physicians' liability policies. The copy of the policy which was under consideration at that time contained the following provisions:
> "'1. TO INDEMNIFY the person named in statement No. 1 of the schedule of warranties and herein called the assured, AGAINST LOSS FROM THE LIABILITY IMPOSED BY LAW UPON THE ASSURED for damages on account of bodily injuries or death, suffered by any person or persons in consequence of any malpractice, error or mistake—(a) of the assured in the practice of his profession during the term of this policy; (b) of any assistant of the assured while assisting the assured in the administration of medical or surgical treatment during the said term;

"'2. TO DEFEND in the name and on behalf of the assured, any suit brought against the assured to enforce a claim, whether groundless or not, for damages on account of bodily injury or death suffered, or alleged to have been suffered by any person or persons in consequence of any malpractice, error or mistake—(a) of the assured in the practice of his profession during the term of this policy; (b) by any assistant of the assured while assisting the assured in the administration of medical or surgical treatment during the said term;'

"Its limit of indemnity is set out in paragraph one of that part thereof designated, 'Subject to the following conditions,' and is as follows:

"'1. The company's liability for loss from any malpractice, error or mistake resulting in the bodily injuries to or in the death of one person is limited to FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and, subject to the same limit for each person, the company's total liability under this policy is limited to FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS. The expenses incurred by the company in defending any suit, including the interest on any verdict or judgment and any costs taxed against the assured, will be paid by the company irrespective of the limit expressed above.'

"The company which proposed to issue said policy was licensed by this department for the years 1911, 1912 and 1913, as follows:

"'Its appropriate business of making insurance on the health of individuals and against personal injury, disablement or death, resulting from traveling or general accidents by land and water; making insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property from cause other than fire or lightning, guaranteeing the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, who may be required to or do, in their trust capacity, receive, hold, control, disburse public or private moneys or property; guaranteeing the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and executing and guaranteeing bonds and undertakings required or permitted in all actions or proceedings, or by law allowed; making insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes or persons other than employes, and to indemnify persons and corporations other than employes against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations, as prescribed in section 9510, paragraph second, General Code, in accordance with law, during the current year.'

"It also appears from that opinion that the company proposing to write this class of insurance was by its charter and the laws of the state of its origin authorized to write physician's liability insurance.

"The honorable attorney general, in his answer to the superintendent of insurance, held that the laws of Ohio do not authorize this class of insurance, and further answered the question of the superintendent of insurance that section 9510 does not affirmatively provide for such insurance.

"On August 3, 1915, Mr. M. J. Hanley, general agent for the General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, Limited, requested of the insurance department a further consideration of the ruling based on the opinion of the attorney general of the date of July 20, 1914. The policy of this last named insurance corporation contains the following provision:

"'Does hereby agree (1) to indemnify the person named in statement numbered 1 of the schedule of warranties and herein called the assured, AGAINST LOSS FROM THE LIABILITY IMPOSED BY LAW UPON THE ASSURED for damages on account of bodily injuries or death, suffered by any person or persons in consequence of any malpractice, error or mistake—(a) of the assured in the practice of his profession during the term of this policy; (b) of any assistant of the assured while assisting the assured in the administration of medical or surgical treatment during the said term;

"'2. To defend in the name and on behalf of the assured any suit brought against the assured to enforce a claim, whether groundless or not, for damages on account of bodily injuries or death suffered, or alleged to have been suffered, by any person or persons in consequence of any malparctice, error or mistake—(a) of the assured in the practice of his profession during the term of this policy; (b) of any assistant of the assured while assisting the assured in the administration of medical or surgical treatment during the said term;

"'SUBJECT TO THE FOLLOWING CONDITIONS:

"'1. The corporation's liability for loss from any malpractice, error or mistake resulting in bodily injuries to or in the death of one person is limited to FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and, subject to the same limit for each person, the corporation's total liability under this policy is limited to FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS. The expenses incurred by the corporation in defending any suit, including the interest on any verdict or judgment and any costs taxed against the assured, will be paid by the corporation irrespective of the limit expressed above.'

"This last named corporation is authorized to do physician's liability insurance by its charter and by the laws of the country of its incorporation.

"Upon taking up this question, it was the ruling of this department that this class of physicians' liability insurance could not be written, basing the ruling upon the opinion of the attorney general as formerly given to this department.

"Upon the ruling of this department being made public, the physicians of the state in great numbers, together with the liability companies writing this class of insurance, again requested a reconsideration of the whole matter, and I beg to ask your opinion and direction on the questions involved, in order that I may again announce what is the law respecting this class of insurance.

"I am desirous of knowing whether policies containing the conditions and provisions above quoted may be written by corporations organized in other states and countries, whose charters and the laws of the states and countries where incorporated permit physician's liability insurance—can such policies be written in the state of Ohio under what is known as the rule of comity between states?

"Second, can this class of insurance be written under sections 9510 and 665 of the General Code of Ohio?

"Your opinion in this matter is respectfully requested."

As stated in your letter, my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on July 20, 1914, rendered an opinion to Hon. Robert M. Small, the then superintendent of insurance of Ohio, in which he held that the laws of Ohio do not authorize insurance companies to issue policies agreeing to indemnify and defend physicians against loss from liability imposed by law for damages on account of bodily injury or death suffered by any person or persons in consequence of any malpractice, error or mistake, of such physician or his assistants.

By reason of the former opinion referred to, I have given the questions submitted by you more than usual time and consideration, and in arriving at a conclusion I have had before me and carefully read the briefs submitted by Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, representing The General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, wherein the author, after a more careful and complete personal investigation of the law, reaches and unequivocally expresses a conclusion contrary to that announced by him while attorney general of Ohio; also two briefs submitted by Hon. A. I. Vorys,—one on behalf of the United States Casualty Company of New York, and the other for The Aetna Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn.; also the brief of Hon. Thomas L. Pogue, representing various organizations of physicians and surgeons interested in securing for themselves the protection afforded by this character of insurance.

I have been very materially helped in my investigation by the careful and exhaustive manner in which the question has been discussed by the authors of the briefs just referred to, and I desire to acknowledge my obligation to them.

I will first consider your second question, which is as follows:

> "Can this class of insurance (meaning physicians' liability insurance) be written under sections 9510 and 665 of the General Code of Ohio?"

These two sections, so far as applicable, are as follows:

> "Section 9510. A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to * * *
> "2. Make insurance on the health of individuals and against personal injury, disablement or death, resulting from traveling or general accidents by land and water; make insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property, from cause other than fire or lightning; guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, who are required to, or, in their trust capacity do receive, hold, control, disburse public or private moneys or property; guarantee the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings required or permitted in all actions or proceedings, or by law allowed; make insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes or persons other than employes and to indemnify persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations. But a company of another state, territory, district or country admitted to transact the business of indemnifying employers and others, in addition to any other deposit required by other laws of this state, shall deposit with the superintendent of insurance for the benefit and security of all its policy holders, fifty thousand dollars, * * *
> "Section 665. No company, corporation, or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein, or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

The right to make physicians' liability insurance in Ohio is claimed under the following provisions of section 9510 of the General Code: "to indemnify persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations."

The answer to your second question, to my mind, depends entirely upon the proper interpretation of the word "accidents" as used in the above language. My predecessor, in his opinion of July 20, 1914, referred to in your letter, wherein he had under consideration a sample copy of insurance policy identical in language with the sample policy you have submitted to me, without entering into any discussion or citing authority therefor, lays down the bare statement that > "the contingency insured against in the policy submitted to me cannot be classified as an accident," and from this statement or hypothesis the conclusion is drawn that section 9510 does not authorize physicians' liability insurance.

This conclusion doubtless logically follows the stated premise, but I am unable to agree with the learned writer of the opinion upon the premise adopted by him, and I take it from the brief filed that he has now reached a contrary opinion.

I believe that the word "accidents" as used in the statutes should receive a liberal interpretation and be given a much wider meaning than that accredited to it in the opinion of my predecessor. Whether or not an occurrence resulting in injury to another is an accident within the meaning of the statutes depends upon the relationship of the occurrence to the person injured rather than to the person from whose act or neglect the injury resulted. If the narrower meaning of the word is adopted, then the provision of section 9510, above quoted, under which is claimed the right to make physicians' liability insurance is reduced to an absurdity. If the word "accidents" does not include occurrences which result from negligence or failure to comply with lawful requirements, then the legislature has enacted that an insurance company may insure a physician against loss or damage for personal injury or death of his patients, only in the event no liability is imposed upon him by law, for if the physician is not negligent and has not failed to comply with the lawful regulations and requirements he cannot be held to answer in damages for the death or injury of a patient. In other words, his negligence or failure to comply with the lawful requirements is the basis of his liability in damages. Therefore, insurance would be useless to him unless he can be indemnified against liability for injuries resulting from his mistake, negligence or failure to comply with lawful requirements.

The interpretation which I have given to the word "accidents" is sustained by numerous authorities.

> "The equitable definition of the term 'accident' includes not only inevitable casualty and such as are caused by the act of God, but also those which arise from unforeseen occurrences, misfortune, losses, and acts or omissions of other persons without fault, negligence or misconduct on the part of the person injured."
> (Bostwick v. Steller, 35 Conn., 198.)
>
> "An act done deliberately and wilfully by a third person may be an accident from the point of view of the employer and employe."
> Keller v. District School, L. T. J., 605.)
> (Anderson v. Balfour, 2 I. R., 497.)
> (Nesbitt v. Wayne, 3 B. W. C. C., 507.)

Defining the word "accident":

"A casualty, something out of the usual course of events and which happens suddenly and unexpectedly and without design on the part of the person injured."

(Richards v. Travelers Ins. Co., 89 Cal., 170.)

(Price v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 147 Pac., 1175.)

"An event happening without any human agency, or if happening through human agency, an event which under the circumstances is unusual and not expected by the person to whom it happened."

(McGlinchy v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 80 Mo., 251.)

I quote from the opinion of the attorney general of Massachusetts, published in the Investigator of August 10, 1901, which has been cited and followed by the attorney general of the state of New York and of Minnesota:

"* * * In general, an accident may be said to be the operation of chance. As the word is more commonly used, it signifies an undesirable or unfortunate happening designed to harm or injure, but the word as used in the statute is to be construed in accordance with its surroundings. Throughout the insurance statutes a distinction is made between death and injury resulting from disease, and those which are the result of what are ordinarily called casualties or accidents. Mere disease, therefore, is not an accident. An aggravation, however, of the disease caused by no fault of the patient but by a mistake, inadvertence or error of another may properly be termed an accident so far as the patient is concerned. * * *

"Bearing this consideration in mind I see no good reason to doubt that whenever a patient receives an injury, the proximate cause of which is the negligence of the physician, he may not be properly said to have been injured by accident as an employe who is thrown to the ground by a staging defective in consequence of the negligence of his employer. The same is true, in my judgment, of fatal injuries caused under the same circumstances. If a man receives a wound not of itself fatal, but which causes death by what is commonly called blood-poisoning, this would be death by accident. If a patient is treated by a physician who neglects to use antiseptic precaution and death results from such neglect it is still an accident so far as the patient is concerned, and one for which the physician may be liable.

"An employer whose neglect causes injury to his employe may be held to pay damages therefor either at common law or by some statute. He may insure himself against such liability.

"A physician whose negligence causes injury to his patient that would not have happened to him if he had been skillful may be made to pay the damages which resulted. I see no difference between insuring the physician under such circumstances and the employer whose negligence made him liable to his employe.

"It is not necessary to consider whether there may not be casualty or liability of physicians for malpractice which could not be insured against under the statutes quoted. It is sufficient that some cases where physicians are held liable at common law come within the meaning of the statute as I interpret it and therefore the form of policy cannot be pronounced illegal."

The provision of the Massachusetts statute, in construing which the attorney general of Massachusetts used the language above quoted is:

> "To insure any person, firm or corporation against loss or damage on account of bodily injury or death by accident of any person for which loss or damage said person, firm or corporation is responsible."

It will be observed that in the Massachusetts statute, as well as in the Ohio statute, the determination of whether or not physician's liability insurance could be written depended upon the interpretation to be given the word "accidents." This was also true in the New York and Minnesota statutes, which have been construed to authorize physicians' liability insurance.

Employers' liability insurance, as written for many years prior to the passage of the workmen's compensation act, and as since written to a more limited extent, was made under the authority of the following language in paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, above quoted:

> * * * "make insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accident to employes or persons other than employes. * * *"

The statutory authorization for employers' liability insurance is based upon a liberal construction of the word "accidents" as therein used, and unless the word "accidents" be interpreted to include occurrences causing injury to employes which occurrences are due to the negligence or failure to comply with lawful requirements upon the part of the employer, then employers' liability insurance is not and has never been authorized in Ohio. There is no reason why the word "accidents" as used in one line of the statute should be given a narrower meaning than is given to it in another line of the same sentence of the statute. It seems impossible to distinguish between the character of liability of an employer and that of a physician. Incident to the employers' activities is the possible injury to his employe, likewise to the activities of the physician is the possible injury to his patient.

The form of employers' liability insurance which has been written for many years has never been questioned, and recent legislation in the workmen's compensation law, one of the purposes of which is to relieve the employer from liability, shows beyond question that injury resulting from negligence or carelessness of an employer are recognized as accidental injuries, at least for the purpose of determining whether or not the employe is entitled to compensation from the state insurance fund, which is paid and accepted in lieu of enforcing the liability of the employer.

Under the authorities above cited and the language of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, I am of the opinion that physicians' liability insurance may be written by insurance companies organized or admitted to do the class of insurance indicated by paragraph 2 of the said section.

I have not considered and deem it here unnecessary to discuss to what extent a physician may protect himself from financial loss through liability insurance. The courts have uniformly held that such insurance is in general consistent with sound public policy. Considerations of public policy would doubtless deny the right to make or recover upon a policy of insurance purporting to indemnify a physician against liability resulting from his criminal act or misconduct.

In discussing the meaning of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, the authors of the several briefs submitted have strongly urged that physicians' liability insurance is authorized by the language of the first line of paragraph 2 of said section to "make insurance on the health of individuals. * * *"

I am unable to agree with the learned counsel in this interpretation of the language just quoted. It seems clear to me that it was the legislative intent in the use of this language to authorize insurance upon the health of certain ascertained individuals; whereas physicians' liability insurance undertakes to indemnify the assured against loss which may result to him by reason of accident to or failure of the health of individuals whose identity is not and cannot be ascertained at the time the contract is made. I think this construction is fortified by the fact that later in the same paragraph of this section liability insurance is expressly authorized.

In view of my conclusion as to the construction of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, the provisions of section 665 of the General Code, offer no obstacle to the making of physicians' liability insurance, because section 665 does not purport to prohibit the making of insurance which is authorized by Ohio laws, but only makes it unlawful in Ohio for any company, corporation or association to make any kind of insurance which is not expressly authorized by Ohio laws.

In construing the language of section 665 of the General Code, supra, Mr. Hogan, in the brief submitted by him, asserts and strongly maintains that the provisions of the section apply not to the subject-matter of the insurance but to corporations or associations engaged therein. In other words, that the section does not require an express authorization or the particular kind of insurance, but only that the company, corporation or association engaged therein must be expressly authorized and must comply with all the laws applicable to and regulatory of it. He arrives at this conclusion by construing the pronoun "it" as referring to and having as its antecedent not the "business of insurance" but "the company, corporation or association engaged in such business." Upon this premise he argues that since physicians' liability insurance is not expressly prohibited by law, that it may therefore be written under the rule of comity by any foreign company authorized, under its charter and the laws of the state where it is incorporated, to make such insurance, if said company has been admitted and licensed to do business in Ohio.

I cannot concur in this interpretation of section 665, General Code. To my mind, the pronoun "it" clearly has as its antecedent and refers to "the business of insurance." This meaning, I think, is made clear by referring to the language of section 289, Revised Statutes of 1908, from which section 665, General Code, was taken. The language of section 289, Revised Statutes, as originally enacted in 69 O. L., 32, was as follows:

> * * * "it shall be unlawful for any company, corporation or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, either directly or indirectly, to engage in the business of insurance, or to enter into any contract substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner to aid therein, in this state, without first having complied with all the provisions of this act."

On March 5, 1902, the then superintendent of insurance in his annual report, at page 7, made the following recommendation relative to amending the provisions of section 289:

> "Section 289 declares it 'unlawful for any company, corporation or association * * * to engage in the business of insurance, or to enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner to aid therein, in this state, without first having complied with all the provisions of this chapter.

"The chapter referred to is Chapter VIII, Title III, Division II, Part First of the Revised Statutes. This chapter contains general provisions, applying to some insurance companies.

"Chapters X and XI of Title II, Division II, Part Second, contains many important regulations, and authorize insurance not subject to this chapter VIII. It is recommended that from section No. 289 the following be eliminated, 'without first having complied with all the provisions of this chapter,' and that the following be substituted therefor, 'unless the same is expressly authorized by the statutes of this state, and such statutes and all laws regulating and applicable to such insurance or contracts have been complied with.'"

On May 12, 1902, 95 O. L., 553, said section 289 was amended by the legislature in the manner suggested by the superintendent of insurance as follows:

* * * "and it is unlawful for any company, corporation or association whether organized in this state or elsewhere, either directly or indirectly, to engage in the business of insurance, or to enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner to aid therein, in this state, or to engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage unless the same is expressly authorized by the statutes of this state, and such statutes and all the laws regulating the same * * * have been complied with; * * *"

There is nothing to indicate that the legislature in adopting the report of the codifying commission intended to change the meaning of the language contained in section 289 of the Revised Statutes; and if there is any ambiguity in the language of the revision it is a well settled principle of law that reference will be had to the section of the Revised Statutes from which it was taken, in order to ascertain its proper interpretation. It seems clear, therefore, that it was the legislative intent in the adoption of section 665, General Code, to prohibit the making of insurance contracts of any kind in Ohio unless that particular kind of insurance is expressly authorized by law. It follows that insurance cannot be written in Ohio under any rule of comity, because no insurance can be made except such as is expressly authorized by law (by which is meant legislative enactment), and if expressly authorized there is no necessity or occasion to resort to the rule of comity.

Objection has been raised to the making of the form of insurance set forth in the policy form submitted in your letter on account of the agreement or covenant contained in paragraph 2 thereof:

"2. To defend in the name and on behalf of the assured any suit brought against the assured to enforce a claim whether groundless or not * * *"

this objection being based upon the decision of the supreme court of Ohio in the case of State v. Laylin, 73 O. S., 90, the syllabus of which is as follows:

"1. A foreign corporation, the sole business of which is authorized by its charter, is that of defending physicians and surgeons against civil prosecution for malpractice, which, in the prosecution and conduct of said business, issues and sells to members of the medical profession a contract whereby it undertakes and agrees to defend the holder of said contract against any suit for malpractice that may be brought against him during the term therein specified, but does not assume, or agree to assume or pay, any judgment that shall be rendered against him in such suit, is not engaged in the business of insurance, nor is the contract so issued and sold an insurance contract.

"2. But a foreign corporation created for the purpose of engaging in and carrying on such business, is not entitled to have or receive from the secretary of state of the state of Ohio, a certificate authorizing it to transact such business in this state, for the reason that the business proposed is professional business, and as such is expressly prohibited to corporations by section 3225 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio."

It will be observed that the court found from the evidence in the above case that the sole authorized business of the physicians' defense company was that of defending physicians, that the company neither paid nor agreed to pay any indemnity whatever, and that the contract written by it was not a contract of insurance, but a contract for professional services and prohibited by the statutes.

The policy form submitted in your letter, however, is a contract of indemnity wherein the insurer agreed to indemnify the assured under certain conditions and limitations to a stipulated amount. As incidental to such contract of indemnity, the insurer agrees to defend "in the name and on behalf of the assured any suit brought against the assured." In the insurance world it is a well recognized fact that these provisions to defend are inserted as much for the benefit and protection of the insurance company as for the benefit of the assured. By virtue of such provision the insurance company may protect itself from the payment of indemnity resulting from the failure of the assured to make proper defense in an action brought against him. This provision in the policy form submitted is clearly incidental to the main contract of indemnity, and in no manner impairs its essentials as an insurance contract. Since the policy form under consideration is a contract for indemnity and is therefore insurance, an agreement of the insurer to defend the assured is merely incidental, and the principle laid down in the case of State v. Laylin, supra, is not applicable.

Specifically answering the several questions asked by you, I am of the opinion:

1. That physicians' liability insurance of the class specified by you is authorized by the language of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, and may be written in Ohio by any company organized or admitted to make the several kinds of insurance enumerated in said paragraph.

2. Section 665 of the General Code, is a limitation upon the business of insurance, and no insurance can be made in Ohio unless that particular kind of insurance is expressly authorized by Ohio laws. The fact that a foreign insurance company, admitted to do business in Ohio, is by its charter and the laws of its home state authorized to make a particular kind of insurance will not authorize such company to make that kind of insurance in Ohio unless it is expressly authorized by Ohio law.

3. Physicians' liability insurance is not authorized by the provisions of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, which confers the right "to make insurance on the health of individuals and against personal injury."

4. The provision contained in paragraph 2 of the policy form quoted in your letter "to defend in the name and on behalf of the assured any suit brought against the assured" being merely incidental to the main contract of indemnity may be embodied in the policy without conflicting with the principle laid down in the case of State v. Laylin, 73 O. S., 90.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANY AUTHORIZED BY ITS CHARTER AND LAWS OF STATE OF ITS INCORPORATION TO WRITE PHYSICIANS' LIABILITY INSURANCE AND WHICH IS ADMITTED TO DO BUSINESS IN OHIO UNDER SECTION 9385, G. C., MAY MAKE PHYSICIANS' LIABILITY INSURANCE CONTRACTS IN THIS STATE —SUCH COMPANY REQUIRED TO DEPOSIT $50,000 IN BONDS AS PRESCRIBED BY SECTION 9510, G. C.—THE AETNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

The Aetna Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, having authority under its charter and the laws of Connecticut to make physicians' liability insurance, and admitted to do business in Ohio primarily under section 9385, G. C., may, under the provisions of said section, make physicians' liability insurance contracts in Ohio, but must make the $50,000 deposit with the superintendent of insurance as prescribed in the latter part of paragraph 2 of section 9510, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. FRANK TAGGART, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 19, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The Aetna Insurance Company claims the right to write physicians' liability insurance under and by virtue of section 9385. Its charter and the laws of the state of its origin permit it to do this class of business.
> "I am requesting you to consider this question in conjunction with the right of companies to issue physicians' liability insurance, which has heretofore been submitted to you. I do this in order to save the necessity of submitting again to you the question of physicians' liability from a different angle, and in order that the entire question may be concluded by your opinion."

As my opinion holding that physicians' liability insurance is authorized by paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code, and may be written in Ohio by a company organized or admitted to make the several kinds of insurance therein enumerated is already prepared, I am addressing my reply to the question submitted in your letter just quoted as a separate opinion, which may be considered as supplementary to the general opinion on physicians' liability insurance.

From the facts stated in your letter and in the brief submitted by Honorable A. I. Vorys, representing the Aetna Life Insurance Company, it appears that this company is a foreign life insurance company organized under the laws of Connecticut, and that its charter and the laws of Connecticut permit it to make liability insurance.

The Aetna Life Insurance Company is licensed to do business in Ohio, and secures its right to transact its business primarily under section 9385 of the General Code, which is a part of the chapter relating to life insurance, whereas section 9510 of the General Code, under which I have heretofore held that physicians' liability insurance may be written in Ohio, is a part of the chapter relating to insurance upon property and against certain contingencies. The Aetna Life Insurance Company claims the right to make physicians' liability insurance under section 9385 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "No company, organized under the laws of this state, shall undertake any business or risk, except as herein provided, and no company, partnership, or association, organized or incorporated by act of congress, or under the laws of this or any other state of the United States, or by any foreign government, transacting the business of life insurance in this state, shall be permitted or allowed to take any kind of risks, except those connected with, or appertaining to making insurance on life or against accidents to persons or sickness, temporary or permanent physicial disability, and granting, purchasing and disposing of annuities; nor shall the business of life insurance, or life and accident insurance in this state, be in any wise conducted or transacted by any company, partnership or association which in this state, or any other state or country, make insurance on marine, fire, inland, or any other risk, or does a banking or any other kind of business in connection with insurance."

While the language of section 9385 of the General Code, above quoted, is that of regulation and restriction rather than of affirmative grant, nevertheless by clear implication it recognizes the right, and would seem to confer upon and invest in companies having charter authority, such as the Aetna Life Insurance Company, with full authority to make insurance and take risks in anywise connected with or appertaining to accidents to or sickness of persons.

By analogy from the principle announced and the reasoning expressed by the supreme court in the case of State ex rel., v. The Aetna Life Insurance Company 69 O. S., 317, I am of the opinion that physicians' liability insurance may be written in Ohio under section 9385 of the General Code by the Aetna Life Insurance Company. In that case the court held that a foreign insurance company (which was the Aetna Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn.), licensed to do business in Ohio, and whose charter conferred upon it authority to make employers' liability insurance, was privileged to write such insurance in Ohio under the language of section 9385 of the General Code:

"to make insurance and take risks connected with and appertaining to accidents to persons."

At page 323, the court, in the opinion, say:

"That this kind of insurance, employers' liability insurance, may from its very nature appropriately be classified with and peculiarly belongs to what is commonly known and designated as accident insurance must, we think, be conceded, inasmuch as such insurance has for its primary purpose indemnification against the effects of accidents resulting in bodily injury or death. It is said by Barker, J., in Employers' Assurance Corporation v. Merrill, 155 Mass., 406: 'In one sense, there can be no doubt that an employers' liability policy is accident insurance. Such policies cover accidents to others than the assured, but the assured must stand in such a relation to the person accidentally injured or killed as to be legally liable for the result of the accident, and it is only an accident causing bodily injury or death which creates a right to the insurance.' * * *"

Again, at page 325, as follows:

"However, a consideration of the legislation in Ohio touching the rights of life, and life and accident insurance companies, organized under the laws of another state and doing business in this state, will show that it has not been, and is not the policy of our law to discourage or prohibit such companies from engaging in or doing an accident insurance business in this state; nor can there be found any statutory inhibition whereby the right of such com> panies to insure against accidents is limited or restricted to risks by accident to the person assured, but on the contrary the right conferred is to take such risks as are in anywise connected with or appertaining to accident to persons. It follows, therefore, that so long as the defendant company confines itself to insurance against accidents to persons, and its contract is one to indemnify the assured against loss by accidental injury to a person in whom the assured has an insurable interest because legally liable for the results of such accident, that such risk is clearly one 'connected with and appertaining to accidents to persons' and is therefore within the legitimate scope of the powers and authority possessed by such company by virtue of section 3596, Revised Statutes."

If, therefore, as decided in the above case, the Aetna Life Insurance Company may make employers' liability insurance under authority of the language in section 9385 of the General Code "connected with or appertaining to the making of insurance on life or against accidents to persons, or sickness, * * *" I cannot escape the conclusion that the same company may make physicians' liability insurance under authority of the same language, because his liability is precisely the same kind of a liability as that of the employer.

Although, as above stated, I am convinced that the Aetna Life Insurance Company may make physicians' liability insurance under authority of section 9385 of the General Code, I cannot subscribe to the further claim which is made by counsel for the Aetna Life Insurance Company, and which is perhaps the company's real purpose in requesting this opinion, that it may make physicians' liability insurance in Ohio without the necessity of first depositing with the superintendent of insurance bonds to the amount of fifty thousand dollars of the kind enumerated and required in the latter part of paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code. The language pertinent is as follows:

> "* * * But a company of another state, territory, district or country admitted to transact the business of indemnifying employers and others, in addition to any other deposits required by other laws of this state, shall deposit with the superintendent of insurance for the benefit and security of all its policy holders, fifty thousand dollars in bonds of the United States or of the state of Ohio, or of a county, township, city or other municipality in the state, which shall not be received by the superintendent at a rate above their par value. * * *"

This language clearly indicates the legislative intent to require foreign insurance companies, which are admitted to make insurance in Ohio indemnifying "employers and others," to deposit for the benefit and security of its policy holders fifty thousand dollars in bonds mentioned, which deposit shall be in addition to any and all other deposits. The language requiring this extra deposit was placed in section 9510 of the General Code (Revised Statutes, section 3596), by amendment approved April 25, 1904 (97 O. L., 408), subsequent to the enactment of sections 9367 and 9373 of the General Code, which provide generally as to the amount and kind of the deposit required by a foreign life insurance company, and also subsequent to the enactment of section 9385 of the General Code.

Specifically answering the question asked by you and the further question raised by counsel for the Aetna Life Insurance Company, I am of the opinion that the Aetna Life Insurance Company, a foreign insurance company endowed with authority under its charter and the laws of the state of its incorporation to make physicians' liability insurance contracts and which is admitted to transact its business in Ohio primarily under section 9385 of the General Code, may, under the language of said section and upon the principle laid down in the case of State v. the Aetna Life Insurance Company, 69 O. S., 317, make physicians' liability insurance contracts in Ohio. Regardless, however, of the source from which it claims its authority to transact the business of indemnifying employers and others, the Aetna Life Insurance Company must, in addition to any other deposits required by the laws of Ohio, make the deposit of $50,000.00 in bonds prescribed by the latter part of paragraph 2 of section 9510, of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—CLAIM OF FORMER SECRETARY OF BOARD FOR COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES—HOW ADJUSTED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 19th, you certified to my department, a claim against Mr. George Billow, of Akron, Ohio, formerly secretary of the Ohio state board of embalming examiners, in the sum of $155.00, being the amount received by said Billow as license fees while secretary of said board. Mr. Billow admits that he had in his hands at the time of ceasing to be secretary of said board, the sum of $155.00, the amount of the claim, and in payment thereof has tendered to you the sum of $22.75 by check signed by him and made payable to your order, and a voucher for $132.25, being the amount owing to him by the state for salary in the sum of $100.00 for services as such secretary for the month of January, 1915, and the sum of $32.25 being for expenses incurred by him while acting as such secretary.

We understand that there is no claim made, but that the sum of $132.25 is properly owing to Mr. Billow, but that the reason the same has not been paid is that there is no money available to the embalming board with which to pay the same. In your letter you state:

> "There being no money available to the embalming board with which to pay his expenses, he attempted to deduct them from the receipts in his possession by filing with this office the revenue voucher above mentioned, for the receipts, and in lieu of the cash, the board's voucher to him for his expenses, and his own check to A. V. Donahey for the balance."

The matter is in the following situation:

Mr. Billow, as secretary of the state board of embalming examiners, owes the state of Ohio for license fees collected by him, as such secretary for the state of Ohio, the sum of $155.00; the state of Ohio owes him the sum of $132.25, and he offers the state of Ohio his check for the difference between the two amounts. As we understand it, Mr. Billow refuses to pay over the amount of $155.00, being the amount of the claim which you have certified to me against him. It will, therefore, be necessary that suit be brought on the said claim, and the question then arises as to whether or not, if suit is brought, Mr. Billow will be entitled to a set-off in the sum of $132.25.

In the case of State of Ohio v. Franklin Bank of Columbus, 10 Ohio, 91, the court recognizes the right of a defendant to set off a debt due to him from the state in a civil action by the state. The opinion on the above point is no more than a statement of the proposition, but it has not been reversed or modified in any subsequent case in Ohio so far as I am able to ascertain. At the end of the opinion the court states the entire proposition as follows:

> "Such being the opinion of the court, we are requested to render judgment against the state for the balance due. This we cannot do. But under the agreed case we are authorized to set off so much of this amount which is due from the state to the bank, as will be sufficient to balance the claim $47.66, which is done accordingly."

This rule is not in accordance with the overwhelming weight of authority, but is in accordance with the rule laid down in Kentucky and Arkansas.

The rule of law in Ohio being, that on suit brought by the state, the defendant can set off any claim legally due to him from the state to the amount claimed by the state, I am of the opinion that an action could not be maintained in the courts of Ohio to recover from Mr. Billow the entire sum of $155.00, but that the court would permit a set off of the amount claimed by him to be due him from the state, which claim is not disputed in the sum of $132.25, leaving a balance of $22.75, for which he has already tendered his check.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that Mr. Billow's check should be converted into cash, and that proper entry should be made on your books showing that the transaction is closed.

The claim was certified to this department under the provisions of sections 259 and 268 of the General Code. Under the provisions of section 268, the attorney general and auditor of state are authorized, if they deem it for the best interests of the state, to adjust the claim by allowing a set-off or abatement thereto. My suggestion for settling this matter is that you and myself abate the claim of $155.00 by the amount of the claim of Mr. Billow, in the sum of $132.25, and accept his check for $22.75, balance due.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

POLICE RELIEF—TRUSTEES OF POLICE RELIEF FUND CANNOT DIVERT ANY PART OF GENERAL POLICE FUND RAISED BY AUTHORITY OF SECTION 4621, G. C., TO A POLICE SUB-FUND AUTHORIZED BY SECTION 4625, G. C.

The police relief fund authorized by section 4621, G. C., is to be made up of receipts of a levy provided therein, the amount, if any, credited on account of a resort to the tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, fines imposed upon members of the police department by way of discipline, rewards, fees or proceeds of gifts and emoluments allowed by the authority in charge or control of the department and donations made to and accepted by the trustees under the provisions of section 4624, G. C., unless the conditions under which said donations are made prescribe that they shall become a part of the police relief sub-fund, in which case they may be credited to that fund.

The power given to the trustees to make rules and regulations for the distribution of the fund under section 4628, G. C., does not confer authority to divert moneys from the funds to which, under the law, they are to be credited.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion relative to the police relief sub-fund of the city of Columbus, Ohio, which is as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"The trustees of the police relief fund of the city of Columbus, Ohio, have created a 'Police Relief Sub-fund' under authority, as cited in their rules, of section 4628 of the General Code. The purpose of this fund is to furnish sick benefits and funeral expenses to such members of the police department as voluntarily contribute from their salaries certain amounts as provided in section 4625 of the General Code. In addition to such voluntary contributions, the trustees have turned into this sub-fund rewards and fees for extraordinary services by members of the police force, moneys arising from the sale of unclaimed property, and donations to the police relief fund. In fact, all revenues accruing to said fund except those raised by taxation. At the time the police relief sub-fund, so-called, was created in December, 1913, the money in the regular police relief fund, which was received from these sources (other than taxation) was transferred to said sub-fund.

"Since only a part of those who are entitled to receive benefits from the police relief fund, have any share in this sub-fund, and since the law specifically provides that moneys derived from fines, and all rewards, fees, etc., for extraordinary services, as well as donations, shall be credited to the police relief fund (sections 4623 and 4624, G. C.), is such action of said trustees in diverting said moneys to the sub-fund legal?

"We enclose a copy of the rules of the trustees of the police relief fund and the police relief sub-fund. An early reply will be greatly appreciated."

The police relief fund in the first instance is maintained by the levy of a tax authorized by section 4621 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"In each municipality availing itself of these provisions, to maintain the police relief fund, the council thereof each year, in the manner provided by law for other municipal levies, and in addition to all other levies authorized by law, may levy a tax of not to exceed three-tenths of a mill on each dollar upon all the real and personal property as listed for taxation in the municipality. In the matter of such levy, the board of trustees of the police relief fund shall be subject to the provisions of law controlling the heads of departments in such municipality, and shall discharge all the duties required of such heads of departments."

If the maximum amount authorized to be levied under the preceding section be not provided the deficiency may be made up from the annual tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors as provided in section 4622 of the General Code, and it is specifically provided that the police relief fund may be further augmented under the provisions of section 4623 and section 4624 of the General Code, which are as follows:

"Section 4623. All fines imposed upon members of the police department of the municipality by way of discipline or punishment by the authority having charge or control thereof, and all rewards, fees, or proceeds of gifts and emoluments allowed by the authority in charge or control of the department, paid and given for or on account of any extraordinary service of any member of the force, and moneys arising from the sale of unclaimed property or money, after deducting all expenses incident thereto, shall be credited to the police relief fund.

"Section 4624. The trustees of the fund may make by gift, grant, devise or bequest, moneys on real or personal property, upon such terms as to the investment or expenditure thereof as is fixed by the grantor or determined by the trustees."

It will be observed therefore that there is to be credited to the police relief fund as such the receipts arising from the levy authorized by section 4621, supra, the amount, if any, credited on account of a resort to the tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, fines imposed upon members of the police department by way of discipline in the department, rewards, fees, or proceeds of gifts and emoluments allowed by the authority in charge or control of the department given on account of the extraordinary service of any member of the force, the net amount arising from the sale of unclaimed property and donations made to the trustees and accepted under the provisions of section 4624 of the General Code, supra, for such fund.

The police relief sub-fund referred to in your letter is authorized and established under the provisions of section 4625 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The trustees of the fund may also receive such uniform amounts from each person designated by the rules of the police department, a member thereof, as he voluntarily agrees to, to be deducted from his monthly pay, and the amount so received shall be used as a fund to increase the pension which may be granted to such person or his beneficiaries, or in the discretion of such trustees moneys derived from such monthly deductions shall be used to relieve members of the force who contribute thereto when sick or disabled from the performance of duty, for funeral expenses, relief of their families in case of death or for pensions when honorably retired from the force."

Section 4628 of the General Code, as amended, page 557 O. L., vol. 106, is as follows:

"Such trustee shall make all rules and regulations for distribution of the fund, including the qualifications of those to whom any portion of the fund shall be paid, and the amount thereof, with power also to give credit for prior continuous actual service in the fire department or in any other department of the city rendering service in fire prevention, but, no rules or regulations shall be in force until approved by the director of public safety or the marshal of the municipality, as the case may be."

The provision, "with power also to give credit for prior continuous actual service in the fire department or in any department of the city rendering service in fire prevention," was inserted by way of amendment by the recent general assembly, otherwise the law is as it was at the time of the establishment of the police relief sub-fund referred to in your letter.

Under the provisions of section 4328 of the General Code, supra, it is contended that the trustees asserted the right to, and actually did, transfer to the police relief sub-fund certain moneys derived from fines and all rewards, fees, etc., for extraordinary services, which had been placed to the credit of the police relief fund under the provisions of section 4623 of the General Code, supra.

A reading of section 4625 of the General Code, supra, will at once disclose the fact that the fund therein authorized and created is not a part of the police relief fund but is a separate and distinct fund in the nature of an auxiliary fund to be distributed among a number limited to those who contributed voluntarily to the same, and that the fund is made up exclusively of such contributions from members of the police department and such other moneys or real or personal property as may be added to such fund under the conditions of the grant, devise or bequest fixed by the grantor under the provisions of section 4624 of the General Code, supra. While only contributing members of the police force are entitled to share in the police relief sub-fund created under section 4625 of the General Code, supra, all members of the police department are entitled to share in the police relief fund which is maintained by general taxation.

It is my opinion therefore that the trustees of the police relief fund were without authority to divert any part of the general police relief fund, which was for the benefit of all, to the sub-fund, which is for the benefit of a limited number, and that the general fund must be expended strictly as a police relief fund without reference to the existence of the sub-fund, save and except in the case of donations to the fund made under the provisions of section 4624, supra, which may have been diverted to the police relief sub-fund under conditions fixed by the grantor. The power to make rules, contained in section 4628, General Code, supra, does not confer authority to divert moneys from the funds to which under the law they are to be credited.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—WHERE NO HIGH SCHOOL MAINTAINED SAID BOARD CAN BE REQUIRED TO PAY TUITION OF PUPILS ATTENDING HIGH SCHOOLS—WHERE SECOND OR THIRD GRADE HIGH SCHOOL IS MAINTAINED BOARD LIABLE FOR TUITION FOR ONE YEAR AND TWO YEARS RESPECTIVELY.

The board of education of a village school district which is subject to both district and county supervision, and which maintains no high school, and which makes no provision for the schooling of its high school pupils in the manner authorized by the first part of section 7750, G. C., may be required to pay the tuition of said pupils, residing in said district, who are eligible for admission to and are attending a high school in another district.

In case the board of education of said village school district has made the agreement authorized by the first part of said statute, any pupil residing in said district, and eligible for admission to high school, and living at a distance of three or four miles from the high school designated in said agreement, will still have the right, under the provision of said statute, to select a high school other than the one designated by said board of education, and to have his tuition paid by said board.

Under provision of section 7748, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 126, the board of education of a village school district which is subject to both district and county supervision, and which maintains a third grade high school, may be compelled to pay the tuition of graduates from such high school, residing in the district, at a first grade high school for two years.

The board of education of a village school district which is subject to both district and county supervision, and which maintains a second grade high school, may be compelled to pay the tuition of graduates from such high school, residing in the district, at a first grade high school for one year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of November 23rd you request my opinion on the following questions:

"1. A certain village school district has no high school. Can the board of education of said village be compelled to pay the high school tuition of its pupils who are eligible for admission to high school?

"2. Can the board of education of a village school district maintaining a third grade high school be compelled to pay for two years the high school tuition of its pupils who have graduated from said third grade high school?

"3. Can the board of education of a village school district maintaining a second grade high school be compelled to pay the high school tuition for one year of one of its pupils who has graduated from said high school and who is now attending a high school of the first grade located in another district?"

The village school districts of the state may be classified as follows:

"1. Village school districts which are exempt from the supervision of the county board of education, under the provision of section 4688, G. C., as amended and supplemented by section 4688-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 133.

"2. Village school districts which, having complied with the requirements of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 439, are exempt from district supervision, and are continuing under the direct supervision of the county superintendents of the respective counties in which such districts are located.

"3. Village school districts other than those referred to in the above mentioned classes, and within the county school district as defined by section 4684, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, and therefore subject to district and county supervision."

Upon investigation I find that every village school district of the first class above mentioned maintains a first grade high school as defined by section 7652 G. C. It is evident, therefore, that inasmuch as every village school district of the second class maintains a high school of the first grade, your questions can have reference only to those village school districts of the third class above mentioned which are subject to both district and county supervision.

With this limitation in mind, your first question may be stated as follows:

"May the board of education of a village school district which is subject to both district and county supervision, and which maintains no high school, be required to pay the tuition of pupils, residing in said district, who are eligible for admission to and are attending a high school in another district?"

Section 7750, G. C., provides as follows:

"A board of education not having a high school, may enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining such school, for the schooling of all its high school pupils. When such agreement is made, the board making it shall be exempt from the payment of tuition at other high schools of pupils living within three miles of the school designated in the agreement, if the school or schools selected by the board are located in the same civil township, as that of the board making it, or some adjoining township. In case no such agreement is entered into, the school to be attended can be selected by the pupil holding a diploma, if due notice in writing is given to the clerk of the board of education of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of attendance."

It will be observed, under the provisions of the first part of section 7750, G. C., as above quoted, the board of education of the village school district, referred to in your inquiry, is authorized to enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining high schools, for the schooling of all of its high school pupils. By exercising this authority and entering into such an agreement, said board of education would be exempt from paying the tuition of pupils residing within three miles of the school designated in said agreement, when such school is located in the same or some adjoining township.

If no such agreement is made, it remains to be determined whether said board of education may be required to pay the tuition of the pupils, referred to in your first question.

It will be observed, that under the provisions of the latter part of section 7750, G. C., if said board of education fails to provide for the schooling of its high school pupils in the manner therein set forth, a high school can be selected by those pupils holding diplomas, providing due notice in writing is given to the clerk of said board in the manner prescribed by said statute.

The above provision of said section 7750, G. C., by its terms, limits the right to select a high school, in case of the failure of a board of education having no high school to provide for the schooling of its high school pupils, to those pupils holding diplomas, issued to them by the board of county school examiners, under authority of section 7744, G. C., as in force prior to May 20, 1914.

This section was repealed by an act of the general assembly, as found in 104 O. L., 125, which act constitutes a part of the new school code so-called, and which became effective on said date of May 20, 1914. The provisions of the aforesaid section were not re-enacted, and the board of county school examiners is no longer authorized to examine pupils to determine their eligibility for admission to high school, and to issue diplomas as evidence of such eligibility.

I call your attention, however, to the latter part of section 7747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 125, which provides that:

> "The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year, the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified, a certificate of promotion, which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

These provisions of section 7747, G. C., must be read in connection with the latter part of section 7655-7, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 129, which provides that:

> "Graduates of any elementary school shall be admitted to any high school without examination on the certificate of the district superintendent."

It was evidently the intention of the legislature, in repealing the provisions of section 7744, G. C., as in force prior to May 20, 1914, and in enacting the above provisions of sections 7747 and 7655-7 of the General Code, that the certificates of promotion issued by the district and county superintendent, under authority of said section 7747, G. C., as amended, shall take the place of the diploma formerly issued by the board of county school examiners, under authority of said section 7744, G. C., and be the proper evidence of the eligibility of a pupil for admission to the high school.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, as stated by me, that pupils holding such certificates of promotion, and residing in a village school district of the third class above mentioned, which maintains no high school, and which makes no provision for the schooling of said pupils in the manner authorized by the first part of said section 7750, G. C., may attend a high school in another school district, and the board of education of said village school district may be required to pay the tuition of said pupils provided the notice required by the latter part of said section is given as therein prescribed.

In case said board of education of the village school district has made the agreement authorized by the first part of said statute, any pupil residing in said district and holding said certificate of promotion, and living at a distance of three or more miles from the high school designated in said agreement, will still have the right, under the provisions of said statute, to select a high school other than the one designated by said board of education, and to have his tuition paid by said board.

Your second question may be stated as follows:

> "May the board of education of a village school district of the third class, above mentioned, which maintains a third grade high school, be compelled to pay the tuition of graduates from such high school, residing in the district, at a first grade high school for two years?"

Your third question may be stated as follows:

"May the board of education of a village school district of the third class above mentioned, which maintains a second grade high school, be compelled to pay the tuition of graduates from such high school, residing in the district, at a first grade high school for one year?"

The answers to your second and third questions, as stated by me, are found in the provisions of the first part of section 7748, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 126, which are as follows:

"A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year. Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school, the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years and a first grade high school for one year. Such a board providing a second grade high school as defined by law shall pay the tuition of graduates residing in the district at any first grade high school for one year; except that, a board maintaining a second or third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—JUSTICE OF PEACE—ASSESSOR.

A justice of the peace elected assessor under the provisions of section 3349, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 250, and whose term of office as assessor begins January 1, 1916, may not hold both the office of assessor and justice of the peace after the beginning of the term of office of assessor, notwithstanding the fact that the actual work of assessor may not begin until the second Monday in April, 1916, as the two offices are incompatible, having been made so under the provisions of section 5590, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 270.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is just in receipt of a letter from Mr. Dow Bretz, justice of the peace of Napoleon township, Napoleon, Ohio, which is as follows:

"At the regular election held on the 2nd of November I was elected assessor of the village of Napoleon. As I understand it I cannot hold both office of justice of the peace and assessor, and what I would like to know is: Can I hold the office of justice of the peace until April 1, 1916, as I will not commence work as assessor until the second Monday in April?"

The election of assessor is provided for in section 3349 of the General Code, as amended, 106 O. L., 250, which, in part, is as follows:

> "At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law. * * * Such assessor shall take and hold his office for the term of two years from and after the first day of January following his election. Upon the election and qualification of such assessor, the right of the deputy assessor theretofore appointed under any provision of law to exercise any powers or perform any duties as such deputy assessor shall cease and determine, and he shall turn over to the person so elected and qualified, all the books, records, papers and furniture of said office. Such elected assessor shall be the successor of said appointed officer, with full power to take up, carry on and complete any and all of the unfinished business thereof, and he shall perform all the duties, exercise all the powers and be subject to all the liabilities and penalties devolved, conferred or imposed by law upon the deputy assessor so appointed."

Section 5590 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., 270), is as follows:

> "An assessor, member of a county board of revision or an assistant, expert, clerk or other employe of a county board of revision shall not, during his term of office, or period of service or employment, as fixed by law or prescribed by the tax commission of Ohio, hold any other public office of trust or profit, except offices in the state militia or the office of notary public."

It will be noted from the provisions of section 3349 of the General Code, quoted above, that the term of the office of assessor to which the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace, who makes the enquiry, has been elected, will begin on January 1, 1916, and under the provisions of section 5590 of the General Code, supra, it is clear that from and after that date he will not be allowed to hold the offices of justice of the peace and assessor.

It is my opinion, therefore, in answer to his question that he cannot continue to hold the office of justice of the peace until April 1, 1916, and at the same time the office of assessor to which he has been elected, notwithstanding, as he states, he will not commence work as assessor until the second Monday of April.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to Mr. Bretz.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT MUST FURNISH MAPS OF COUNTY WHEN STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER REQUESTS THE SAME.

Where the county highway superintendent is called upon by the state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer to furnish a map or maps of the county, showing the location of rivers, etc., together with any other information that may be required, it becomes the duty of the county highway superintendent to prepare the map or maps in question, furnish the required information and make any survey necessary in preparing such map or maps and collecting such information.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

HON. LINDSEY K. COOPER, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 27, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I am advised by the county commissioners of this county that the state highway commissioner has called upon the county highway superintendent of this county to make a survey of all the roads in the county, giving detailed information relative to same, and especially with reference to all bridges and culverts, their condition, etc., over one foot in diameter. The county commissioners of this county, believing that this would entail an expenditure of considerable money, which is very badly needed for defraying expenses of labor and material necessary to repair the roads, have called upon me for an opinion as to whether or not this expense would absolutely have to be incurred.
> "I have advised them as per copy of letter enclosed herewith. They requested me to ask you for an opinion upon the same, and in accordance with said request I respectfully refer the matter to you."

Your letter of advice to the county commissioners of your county, a copy of which you enclosed with your inquiry, reads as follows:

> "Replying to your question of whether or not the county surveyor is compelled to furnish to the state highway commissioner the detailed information called for with reference to all roads in the county, including all bridges, culverts, etc., and making a general survey of said roads, will say:
> "Section 180 of the Cass highway act, being section 1187, General Code, provides in part:
> " 'The state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer may call upon the county highway superintendent, at any time, to furnish a map or maps of the county showing distinctly the location of any rivers, railroads, streams, township lines, cities, villages, public highways and deposits of road material, together with any other information that may be required by said commissioner or engineer. Such information shall be furnished in such form as the state highway commissioner may require.'
> "It is my opinion that this section is broad enough to cover the information asked for, and that the county highway superintendent may not legally refuse to furnish such information."

I concur fully in the opinion expressed by you, and advise that when the county highway superintendent is called upon by the state highway commissioner or chief highway engineer to furnish a map or maps of the county, showing the location of rivers, railroads, streams, township lines, cities, villages, public highways and deposits of road material, together with any other information that may be required by said commissioner or engineer, it becomes the duty of the county highway superintendent to prepare the map or maps in question and to furnish the required information, and to make any survey or surveys that may be necessary in the preparation of such map or maps or in the collection of the information required, and that the county highway superintendent cannot legally refuse to act in the premises.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—INTERPRETATION OF SECTIONS 2489, G. C., AND 2490, G. C., IN REGARD TO REWARDS OFFERED FOR APPREHENSION OF CRIMINALS GENERALLY AND ALSO FOR HORSE THIEVES—REWARD LIMITED TO SPECIFIC CRIME WHICH HAS BEEN COMMITTED AND IS NAMED IN RESOLUTION OF COMMISSIONERS—DEPUTY MARSHAL OR NIGHT WATCHMAN OF MUNICIPALITY NOT ENTITLED TO REWARD FOR MAKING SUCH ARREST.

1. Until the crime or crimes specified in sections 2489 and 2490, G. C., have been committed, county commissioners may not offer the reward provided for in said sections.

2. The reward offered under the provisions of said sections may be limited only to a specific crime or crimes named and described in the resolution offering the reward, which resolution must name the reward and by appropriate reference be made to apply only to such specific crime or crimes.

3. A deputy marshal or night watchman of a municipality making an arrest in the discharge of his official duty may not demand or receive a reward therefor and is entitled to no other or further remuneration or reward for making such arrest than that prescribed by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

HON. A. A. SLAYBAUGH, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio:

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 15, 1915, containing the following statement and inquiries:

> "The board of county commissioners of Putnam county, Ohio, under the provisions of section 2490, General Code, passed a resolution some years ago, offering a reward of $50.00 for the arrest and conviction of any person or persons stealing a horse within the limits of said Putnam county, i. e., they offered a standing reward for the arrest and conviction of any person stealing a horse, or aiding, or abetting the same subsequent to the passage of such resolution. This resolution was passed not for the purpose of offering a reward for any particular person or crime that had been committed, prior to the passage of the resolution. Did they have the authority to pass such a resolution, and if so, is the party, not an officer, who was the cause of the arrest and conviction of the horse thief subsequent to the passage of such resolution entitled to the reward?
> "2. In order for a person to collect a reward offered by the county commissioners, must the county commissioners have passed a certain resolution subsequent to the date of the claim and specifying in the resolution the date of the crime, the kind of the crime and the amount of reward offered before any person would be entitled to the reward for the arrest and conviction of such a person?

"3. Is the deputy marshall or a night watchman of a municipality entitled to a reward under any conditions?

"In answer to third question, I wish to say that in my opinion, no night watchman or deputy marshal, whether he has given bond or receives a salary is entitled to any reward, because under section 13492, he is a police officer, within the meaning of the statutes of Ohio, and in case of Bank v. Edmund, 76 O. S., 396, appears to have determined this third question to my entire satisfaction; still I would like to have your opinion on the matter. As to the 1st and 2nd questions, I would say that by construing section 2490, General Code, literally, and in favor of public policy, the county commissioners would have authority to offer a standing reward for any of the crimes specified in sections 2489 and 2490, General Code, but I would greatly appreciate your opinion on this point."

Section 2490, G. C., to which you refer in your letter, provides as follows:

"When they deem it expedient, the county commissioners may offer such reward, or employ such detectives, as in their judgment the nature of the case requires for the detection or apprehension of any person charged with horse stealing or engaged in aiding or abetting horse stealing, and upon the conviction of such person, pay such reward or other compensation from the county treasury. On the collection of a recognizance given and forfeited by such person, if they deem it expedient, the commissioners may pay such reward or other compensation. In no case shall the owner of the stolen horse or horses be entitled to any of such reward."

The preceding section 2489, G. C., I also consider pertinent to the discussion of the questions submitted by you, and it provides as follows:

"When they deem it expedient, the county commissioners may offer such rewards as in their judgment the nature of the case requires, for the detection or apprehension of any person charged with or convicted of felony, and on the conviction of such person, pay it from the county treasury, together with all other necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for by law, incurred in making such detection or apprehension. When they deem it expedient, on the collection of a recognizance given and forfeited by such person, the commissioners may pay the reward so offered, or any part thereof, together with all other necessary expenses so incurred and not otherwise provided for by law."

An analysis of the section first quoted shows that the authority or jurisdiction therein conferred upon the county commissioners to offer a reward or employ detectives is predicated upon the fact that some person or persons, known or unknown are charged with the crime of horse stealing or are engaged in aiding or abetting horse stealing. Manifestly the commission of the crime must precede the charge of stealing and necessarily there can be no aiding and abetting unless a crime is committed.

It is provided further that the jurisdiction so conferred in said section is to be exercised by the county commissioners as in their judgment the nature of the case requires. In this provision their action is again limited to a condition which must obtain by reason of the happening of some former event and have reference thereto.

In view of these plain provisions of the law and its purposes I am impelled to conclude that the action of the county commissioners in offering a reward, or in the employment of detectives, can only be taken after a specific crime, or crimes, have been committed, and said reward or employment must be limited to such specific crime or crimes.

It follows, therefore, that until a crime or crimes have been committed as contemplated by section 2489 or 2490, the commissioners are without authority to take the action therein provided.

This view of the law is substantially the same as that held by Hon. George K. Nash in an opinion reported at page 861, of vol. 2, of the attorney general's report for the years 1880 and 1883. I quote from said opinion as follows:

> "Sometime ago you asked me this question: 'Have the county commissioners the legal authority, where a crime has been committed in their county, to enter into a contract with a person to pay him so much per day to investigate the case and find out the criminal?'
> "I have given the matter considerable thought, but have not been able to find any statute authorizing the commissioners of a county to make such a contract. In the absence of statutory authority, I do not believe that they have any inherent power or authority so to do. Sections 918 and 919 authorize the county commissioners to pay a reward in certain cases after conviction, and section 1310 authorizes them to pay certain expenses incurred by officers in pursuit of persons charged with felony who have fled the county.
> "I suppose that these sections were placed in the law because in their absence the commissioners would not have authority to pay such rewards or such expenses."

Sections 918 and 919, as referred to in said opinion, are now sections 2489 and 2490 of the General Code, under consideration here. There has been no substantial change made in either section since the date of said opinion except the added provisions in both sections referring to forfeited recognizances.

I agree with the conclusion in said opinion that the commissioners of a county in the absence of a statutory authority cannot pay rewards for the detection or conviction of crimes. Where statutory authority is conferred it may extend only to conditions named and prescribed in the statute conferring such authority.

Answering your first question, therefore, I am impelled to conclude that until the crime or crimes specified in sections 2489 and 2490, G. C., have been committed county commissioners are without authority to offer, under the provisions of said sections, any reward for the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons known or unknown, charged therewith.

The observations made in answering your first question offer the solution to your second. To comply with the provisions of the sections quoted aforesaid, an offer of a reward by the county commissioners should be made by an appropriate resolution to refer to the specific crime or crimes committed for the conviction of which the reward is offered, and said resolution should also name the reward offered in each particular case or cases.

You state in your letter that the case of Bank v. Edmund, 76 O. S., 396, has determined the third question to your satisfaction. I concur with you in the conclusion you reach in this regard.

I therefore conclude, in answer to your inquiries:

(1) That until the crime or crimes specified in sections 2489 and 2490, G. Co., have been committed, county commissioners may not offer the reward provided for in said sections.

(2) That the reward offered under the provisions of said sections may be limited only to a specific crime or crimes named and described in the resolution offering the reward, which resolution must name the reward and by appropriate reference be made to apply only to such specific crime or crimes.

(3) That a deputy marshal or night watchman of a municipality making an arrest in the discharge of his official duty may not demand or receive a reward therefor and is entitled to no other or further remuneration or reward for making such arrest than that prescribed by law.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 20, 1915, containing the following statement and inquiries:

> "The county infirmary of Warren county, located at Lebanon, Ohio, was destroyed by fire on the second day of November, 1915, and the commissioners of the county contemplate rebuilding the same. They will probably have about $20,000.00 of insurance from the old building and we desire to submit to you the following questions:
> "First: Into what fund should the insurance money collected from the company be paid, and may it be expended from that fund in the construction of the new building?
> "Second: Sections 2333 et seq. provide the general rules for the construction of county buildings. Section 2436 provides that the commissioners may borrow not to exceed $50,000.00 without a vote of the people, for the purpose of rebuilding an infirmary which has been destroyed by fire or other casualty. Section 14585 of the General Code provides for the issuance of $90,000.00 of bonds for the construction of an infirmary destroyed by fire.

"I note also that at page 1261 of the annual report of the attorney general for 1913, your office construed sections 2333 and 2436. We desire to inquire:

"First: What amount of money may be borrowed by the commissioners for the erection of the building without a vote being taken?

"Second: What amount may be expended by them without such vote, that is, including the amount received from the insurance?

"Third: Must a building commission be appointed, as provided in section 2333, for the construction of this building?

"Fourth: Can the commissioners erect a temporary building to accommodate the patients until a permanent building can be built?

"The commissioners of this county desire to construct a memorial structure under sections 14849, 14849-1 and 14849-2, as amended in 106 O. L., page 456.

"First: Is it necessary in the building of this structure that a building commission be appointed?

"Second: Is it necessary to give notice of intention to build, under section 2444, as amended in 106 O. L., page 423, the land upon which it is proposed to build this memorial structure being a lot of land dedicated for the use of the public?

"Is the Little Miami River, in its course through Warren county, Ohio, legally deemed a navigable stream?"

In addition to the facts stated in your letter, I have learned from you through other sources, that the infirmary which your county commissioners contemplate building will probably cost $70,000.00. From this fact it appears that if the amount of money which your county commissioners may expend without a vote is limited to $50,000.00, and that amount may be expended independent of the insurance money you may receive, no vote will be necessary to approve said expenditure. Upon the other hand, however, if the insurance money may be considered as a part of the entire amount to be expended, under the statute requiring a vote, it will be necessary to submit the proposition to your voters.

I also learn in connection with your inquiries regarding the construction of a memorial structure that your commissioners propose to erect such structure upon land now dedicated to and owned by the county, and that the cost of such structure will not exceed $10,000.00.

With the foregoing additional facts in mind I will now address myself to your inquiries.

Referring to your first question, which is in reference to the disposition to be made of the insurance money received from the old building, it may be said that while it is probable the purpose of the insurance upon the old infirmary was to provide a fund for rebuilding in the event it was destroyed by fire, yet that fact cannot now fix the legal status of the money received under such contract. In other words, it may be said that the insurance money in question may not now legally belong to any fund. Had it been withdrawn from any fund of the county heretofore, it should now be returned to that particular fund, but never having been withdrawn from any fund of the county, it is money which never was in the county treasury, and therefore may not be used for any particular purpose until that purpose be determined by some competent authority. State v. Allen, 86, O. S., 244. The authority which may determine its use is the board of county commissioners, who should direct into what fund this money may be placed, and when such direction is made to the county auditor, it thereupon becomes his duty, under section 2567, G. C., to certify into said fund and charge the treasurer accordingly. State v. Allen, supra.

Answering your first question, therefore, specifically, the insurance money to which you refer in your letter may be placed in any fund of the county to be determined by the board of county commissioners, which fund may be the building fund for the construction of your new infirmary.

Your second inquiry involves a consideration of section 2436, G. C., and section 14585, as found in the appendix to the General Code.

Section 2436, G. C., in so far as its provisions may affect the question here under consideration, provides as follows:

> "For the purpose of rebuilding an infirmary, or court house, destroyed by fire or other casualty, the commissioners of a county may appropriate money, levy tax, issue and sell the bonds of such county in anticipation thereof, in an amount not to exceed fifty thousand dollars, without first submitting to the voters of said county, the question of rebuilding such infirmary or court house, appropriating such money, levying such tax and issuing and selling such bonds."

This section was first enacted March 3, 1904, and is found in vol. 97 O. L., page 33. After its enactment it appeared in the Revised Statutes as section 871-1. As first enacted, it limited the amount to be expended without a vote to $50,000.00, and its provisions were limited to the rebuilding only of a county infirmary destroyed by fire or other casualty.

It was first amended March 31, 1906, 98 O. L., page 187. The amendment made at this time added a provision making the provisions of the law applicable to a county infirmary condemned as unsafe and uninhabitable by the chief inspector of workshops and factories.

The next amendment to this section is found in vol. 99 O. L., 138, which amendment was passed April 21, 1908, and which is now incorporated into section 14585 as found in the appendix to the General Code, which is the section referred to in your letter as providing for the issuing of bonds to the amount of $90,000.00 for the construction of an infirmary destroyed by fire.

This section as amended at that time was in the precise form it is now found in said section 14585 of the appendix to the General Code.

From the foregoing facts it clearly appears that at the time of the codification in 1910, the law as amended April 21, 1908, fixing the amount at $90,000.00, was the controlling law of the state on the matter therein specified and contained. It seems, however, that this amendment of April 21, 1908, escaped the attention of the codifying commission with the result that the amendment of March 31, 1906, 98 O. L., 187, supra, was carried into the General Code as section 2436 thereof (see General Code of Ohio, 1910), and being adopted by the general assembly as a section of said Code must be held to repeal by implication at least, the amendment of April 21, 1908. However, the repeal of this last amendment is further emphasized and conclusively determined by the last amendment of April 28, 1910, 101 O. L., 135, which amendment was in the form of the law as it now appears in section 2436.

In view of these facts, I am clearly of the opinion that the provisions of section 2436, supra, fixing the amount at $50,000.00, must control. It may be urged to impeach this conclusion that the amendment of April 21, 1908, which was subsequently found by the commission, employed by the attorney general to prepare an appendix and was carried into said appendix and designated as section 14585 thereto, could give said section any vitality. I therefore hold, as above noted, that the law controlling the amount which now may be appropriated and expended without a vote, for the erection of the building in question, is found in section 2436, G. C., supra, and said amount so fixed by said section is $50,000.00.

The succeeding two inquiries in your letter may be considered together, and refer to the relation the insurance money bears to the limitations imposed by said section. Do the provisions of said section fixing the amount at $50,000.00, apply independent of, and without reference to, the expenditure of said insurance money, or is the insurance money to be considered as a part of the $50,000.00 fixed by said section which may be appropriated and expended? The opinion of my predecessor, Hon. T. S. Hogan, to which you refer, reported in the attorney general's report for the year 1913, at page 1261, answers these questions fully. In that opinion it is held that sections 5638, 5639-1 and 5640 of the General Code, and said section 2436, supra, are sections in pari materia, and must be construed and applied together, and when so construed, the limitation provided in said section 2436, supra, is a limitation on the authority to expend, and not merely on the authority to appropriate money, levy a tax, issue and sell bonds in the amount named. In this conclusion I concur, and it follows, therefore, that any expenditure in excess of $50,000.00, whether raised wholly by taxation, or of which the insurance money may be a part, must first have the approval of the voters of your county as provided in sections 5638 et seq., above noted.

As before stated, if the probable cost of the building you contemplate erecting will exceed $50,000.00, such expenditure must be first submitted to the electors of your county for approval. It follows from this that the commissioners may not borrow in excess of the sum of $50,000.00 without a vote being taken, nor may they expend more than $50,000.00 without such vote being taken, which said amount of $50,000.00 may include the money received from the insurance. In order that you may thoroughly understand this ruling and applying the facts in my answer to your question I will say further that if you receive $20,000.00 and apply that amount to the construction of the new building, you may not then borrow more than $30,000.00 without a vote being taken. If, however, the $20,000.00 of insurance is certified to some other fund of the county and not expended in the construction of your new building, you may then borrow to the full amount of $50,000.00.

You next inquire whether a building commission must be appointed as provided in section 2333, G. C., in the erection of this new infirmary building.

Keeping in mind the fact that you propose to erect an entirely new building to cost more than $50,000.00, which expenditure must receive the approval of your voters, I conclude that the provisions of section 2333, G. C., apply, and that such commission must be appointed. While this conclusion may appear in conflict with some of the observations made by my predecessor, in his opinion hereinbefore referred to, yet it must be noted in this connection that such observations had no direct reference to any question then under consideration. In another opinion, however, by General Hogan, reported at page 1142 of the attorney general's report for the years 1911, 1912, in which the precise question now under consideration was therein presented, it was held that:

> "Under section 2436, General Code, when an infirmary has been destroyed by fire, the commissioners are empowered to appropriate money, levy tax, and issue and sell bonds in anticipation of said tax in an amount not to exceed $50,000.00 without submission to the vote of the electors.
> "While this section presents an exception to that part of sections 2333-2343, General Code, providing for a submission to the electors the question of issuing bonds for county buildings in excess of $25,000.00, it in no way excepts any of the other restrictions of these sections, providing for a building commission, etc."

In the same opinion, in commenting upon this question, General Hogan says:

> "My final conclusion is that in the situation covered in section 2436, G. C., the said section becomes operative and governs, insofar as the exception goes, to wit: The commissioners may appropriate money, levy tax, and issue and sell the bonds of such county in anticipation thereof, etc., without first submitting to the voters thereof the question of rebuilding such infirmary, appropriating such money, etc.: for to hold otherwise would make the exception of no effect upon the original rule which it modifies, and more restricted than it really is, but with respect to the remaining provisions of said sections 2333 and 2342, General Code, I think it necessarily follows, and I am of the opinion that said remaining provisions would apply and govern, and that the county commissioners would be legally required to rebuild in accordance therewith. That is to say, the only exception, as I have stated above, to the provisions contained in said sections is, that in the event the county infirmary is destroyed by fire or other casualty, then the commissioners may expend a sum to the extent of $50,000 without submitting the proposition to a vote of the people of the county; and this being the only exception, of course it follows that all the remaining provisions would govern."

It is sufficient to say, in concluding my observations upon this inquiry, that I fully concur both in the reasoning and the conclusion of the above opinion.

In answer to your inquiry as to the authority of the county commissioners to erect a temporary building to accommodate the inmates of your infirmary until a permanent building may be erected, I have to advise that there are no statutory provisions specially covering such contingency. While it is provided in section 2437, G. C., that in case a county infirmary building or buildings are condemned by the board of health, the commissioners may construct temporary buildings, this section is limited to the contingency therein named. However, it is provided in section 2419 G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 423, that:

> "A court house, jail, public comfort station, offices for county officers, and an infirmary, shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, or any of them, are needed. Such buildings and offices shall be of such style, dimensions, and expense, as the commissioners determine."

It is further provided in section 2434, G. C., that for the purpose of erecting or acquiring certain buildings, including a county infirmary, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, or other necessary buildings or bridges, or for the purpose of enlarging, repairing, improving or rebuilding thereof, or for the relief or support of the poor, the commissioners may borrow such sums of money as they deem necessary, etc. Under the provisions of the first section cited, the county commissioners are authorized to erect certain buildings, including county infirmaries. Under the last section noted, they are empowered to borrow money for the purpose of erecting certain buildings, which include county infirmaries. In view of the provisions of the two foregoing sections I incline to the opinion that the county commissioners have authority to erect for temporary purposes a building designed for the care of the poor of your county during the rebuilding of the infirmary destroyed by fire.

I learn from you in this connection that the proposed building is to be used in conjunction with other buildings on your infirmary premises, which buildings escaped destruction when your main building burned. As your proposed temporary building is to be in fact merely an additional building to those now standing, and is to be erected at a cost of about $2,000, I advise that your commissioners may legally make such expenditure under the authority conferred in the foregoing statutes.

Referring now to your inquiries in reference to the construction of a memorial under sections 14848 and 14849, G. C., and 14849-1 and 14849-2, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 456, you inquire whether it is necessary in the construction of said building that a building commission may be appointed. As the contemplated cost of this memorial structure is only $10,000 it does not come within the provisions of section 2333, G. C., which fixes the minimum cost of a building requiring the appointment of a commission at $25,000. I am therefore of the opinion that it is not necessary that such commission be appointed in the construction of said memorial building.

You next inquire whether it is necessary to give notice of interition to build said memorial structure under the provisions of section 2444, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., page 423. This section, insofar as it applies to this question, provides as follows:

> "Before the county commissioners purchase lands to erect a building or bridge, the expense of which exceeds one thousand dollars, they shall publish and circulate hand bills, and publish in one or more newspapers of the county, notice of their intention to make such purchase, erect such building or bridge, and the location thereof, for at least four consecutive weeks prior to the time of that purchase, building, or location is made."

It is obvious, that the purpose of this statute is to give the people of the county wherein such action is to be taken, an opportunity to object to the purchase of land and the consequent location and erection of the building or bridge thereon. In other words, the facts which bring into operation the provisions of this statute are the proposed purchase of lands, and the location and erection thereon of a building or bridge.

While in your case no purchase of land is required, yet as the legislature, by a very recent amendment, has chosen to except under such conditions the erection of public comfort stations only, I conclude that in other cases where the land is owned and no purchase thereof required, it was the purpose of the legislature that notice be given.

At your request, your last inquiry will be reserved for a separate answer.

Recapitulating the conclusions reached herein I hold:

1. That insurance money paid to a county for buildings destroyed by fire may be placed in any fund designated by the county commissioners of said county.

2. Section 2436, G. C., is the controlling section of our statutes as to the amount of money county commissioners may expend for the purpose of rebuilding an infirmary without a vote of the people.

3. That the amount of money provided in said section 2436, supra, viz., $50,000, is the maximum amount of money which may be borrowed by the commissioners without a vote being taken.

4. That said amount of $50,000 is the maximum amount that may be expended without a vote under the provisions of said section 2436, supra, for the erection of any building named therein.

5. A building commission is required to be appointed under the provisions of section 2333, G. C., when an infirmary building, which has been wholly destroyed by fire, is to be rebuilt at a cost to exceed $25,000.

6. When a county infirmary has been destroyed by fire, the commissioners may erect a temporary building to be used in connection with other buildings not destroyed by fire, to accommodate the inmates of such infirmary during the construction of the infirmary building so destroyed.

7. A building commission is not required to be appointed where a memorial structure is to be erected at a cost of not to exceed $10,000.

8. When the county owns real estate upon which it is proposed to erect such memorial structure, the notice required by section 2444, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., page 423, is necessary, public comfort stations being the only exception under said statute, when no purchase of land is required.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of November 11th you request my opinion as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:
> "Has the board of library trustees, organized under the provisions of section 7636, General Code, the authority to elect a treasurer, or to provide for a bank depositary for the funds under their control, or is the city treasurer the treasurer of said funds?

"In most cities the city treasurers have been the treasurers of the school funds until the boards of education have provided a depositary for school funds. In such cases the clerk of the board serves as clerk-treasurer, and the position of treasurer of the school funds is dispensed with.

"Does the library fund follow the school funds, or what disposition should now be made of such moneys?"

Section 7631, G. C., as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, page 228, provides:

"The board of education of any city, village or rural school district, by resolution, may provide for the establishment, control and maintenance, in such district, of a public library, free to all the inhabitants thereof. For that purpose, by purchase, it may acquire the necessary real property, and erect thereon a library building; acquire, by purchase or otherwise, from any other library association, its library property; receive donations and bequests of money or property for such library purposes, and maintain and support libraries now in existence and controlled by the board."

Section 7632, G. C., provides:

"Such board of education annually may make a levy upon the taxable property of such school district, in addition to all other taxes allowed by law, of not to exceed one mill for a library fund, to be expended by the board for the establishment, support and maintenance of such public library."

Section 7633, G. C., contains provisions similar to those above set forth, applicable to a building and library owned jointly by two or more school districts.

Section 7634, G. C., provides that such library building and library, and the expenditure of all moneys for the purchase of books and other purposes, and the administration of the library, shall be vested in a board of six trustees, three to be appointed by each of the boards of education for the term of five years.

Section 7635, G. C., must be read in connection with the provisions of sections 7631 and 7632, G. C., above quoted, and provides that the board of education referred to in section 7631, G. C., may provide for the management and control of such library by a board of trustees, to be elected in the manner provided by section 7636, G. C.

Section 7636, G. C., provides:

"Such board of library trustees shall consist of seven members, who must be residents of the school district. No one shall be eligible to membership on such library board who is or has been for a year previous to his election, a member or officer of the board of education. The term of office shall be seven years, except that at the first election the terms must be such that one member retires each year. Should a vacancy occur in the board, it shall be filled by the board of education for the unexpired term. The members of the library board must serve without compensation and until their successors are elected and qualified."

Under provision of section 7637, G. C., the library board referred to in section 7636, G. C., is authorized to hold, in its own name, the title to, and to have the custody and control of all libraries, branches, stations and reading rooms, of all library property, real and personal, of such school district, referred to in section 7631, G. C., and of the expenditure of all moneys collected or received from any source for library purposes for said school district.

Section 7638, G. C., confers on said board the power to purchase or lease property for library purposes, and the power to appropriate such property when the purchase of the same cannot be effected by an agreement with the owner, and to dispose of land when in its opinion the same is no longer needed for library purposes.

Section 7639, G. C., provides that such board of library trustees annually, during the month of May, shall certify to the board of education the amount of money needed for increasing, maintaining and operating the library during the ensuing year in addition to the funds available therefor from other sources. Said section further provides that the board of education annually shall levy on each dollar of taxable property within such school district, in addition to all other levies authorized by law, such assessment not exceeding one and one-half mills as shall be necessary to realize, without reduction, the sum so certified, which must be placed on the tax duplicate and collected as other taxes.

Section 7640, G. C., provides that the proceeds of such tax will constitute a fund to be known as the library fund, and that payments therefrom shall be made only upon the warrant of the said board of trustees, signed by the president and secretary thereof.

Under the above provisions of the statutes it will be observed that the board of education of any city, village or rural school district may, itself, establish a library in the manner provided in section 7631, G. C., and, under authority of section 7632, G. C., levy a tax annually upon the taxable property of such school district, in addition to all other taxes authorized by law, of not to exceed one mill for a library fund, to be expended by said board in the manner provided in said section 7632, G. C., or the said board may, under authority of section 7635, G. C., provide for the management and control of such library by a board of trustees, elected in the manner provided by section 7636, G. C., and having the powers and duties prescribed by sections 7637, 7638 and 7639 of the General Code.

In case the board of education of a school district determines to place the management and control of the library of said district in the hands of a board of trustees, section 7639, G. C., makes it the duty of said board of education to make the annual tax levy therein provided for library purposes.

It will be further observed that in the case of a library established by the boards of education of two or more school districts, under authority of section 7633, G. C., the management and control of such library is vested in a board of trustees by provision of section 7634, G. C., to be chosen in the manner therein prescribed.

It will be noted, however, that under any of the plans above set forth, the authority to levy the tax and establish the library fund is vested in the board of education of the school district.

No statutory authority is given the library board, in its organization, to elect a treasurer to take charge of the library fund or to provide a depositary for said fund.

It seems clear to my mind that while, under provision of section 7634, G. C., the board of library trustees of a library, established and owned jointly by two or more school districts, is charged with the control of all library property and with the expenditure of all moneys for library purposes, and while the board of trustees of the library, established by the board of education of a school district under authority of section 7631, G. C., is charged with similar powers and duties, the library fund established by the board of education of a school district and maintained by an annual tax levy by said board of education must be considered as the fund belonging to said school district and under the general control of said board of education.

In case of a library owned jointly by the boards of education of two or more school districts, the board of education of each district is authorized, by provision of section 7633, G. C., to levy an annual tax for the establishment, support and maintenance of such library. The fund so established and maintained by each of said school districts would, therefore, be under the general control of the respective boards of education.

In the exercise of its powers and in the performance of its duties, the board of library trustees acts, in a certain sense, as the agent of the board of education, and in this respect the relation of said board of trustees to said board of education is somewhat similar to that of the trustees of the county children's home to the board of county commissioners of such county.

While the management and control of a county children's home is vested in a board of trustees appointed by the county commissioners, under authority of section 3081, G. C., the children's home fund is under the control of the county commissioners and is considered a part of the county funds, insofar as the duty of the county commissioners to place the same in a legally designated depositary is concerned.

Section 4763, G. C., as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, page 138, provides that in each school district the treasurer of the city funds shall be the treasurer of the school funds, and further provides that in all village and rural school districts which do not provide legal depositaries, as provided by sections 7604 to 7608, inclusive, the county treasurer shall be the treasurer of the school funds of such districts.

Section 4782, G. C., provides that when a depositary has been provided for the school moneys of the district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, shall dispense with the treasurer of the school moneys belonging to such district. Said section further provides that in such case the clerk of the board of education of the district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district.

Inasmuch as the board of library trustees, organized under provision of section 7634, G. C., or under provision of section 7636, G. C., is without authority to elect a treasurer or to provide a depositary for the library fund, and inasmuch as I have already held that said library fund is a part of the school funds of the school district in which such library is established and maintained, and under the control of the board of education of such school district, insofar as it being placed in a legally designated depositary is concerned, I am of the opinion, in answer to the questions submitted by you, that the library fund of a school district follows the school funds of such district into the depositary provided for said funds by the board of education of said district, under authority of and in compliance with the requirements of sections 7604, et seq., of the General Code, and that in a city school district, where the board of education has not as yet provided a depositary for the school funds, or where the board of education has provided such depositary but has not dispensed with the position of treasurer of said funds, under authority of section 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, page 138, the city treasurer, being treasurer of the funds of such school district, under the above provisions of section 4763, G. C., is treasurer of the library fund of said school district. It follows that where the board of education of a city school district, having provided a depositary for the funds of such district in compliance with the requirements of said sections 7604, et. seq., of the General Code, and dispensed with the position of treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the clerk of said board, being required to perform all the services and discharge all the duties. and being subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts, under provision of the latter part of said section 4782, G. C., is the treasurer of the library fund of said district. In a village or rural school district where the board of education had not provided a depositary for the school funds, the county treasurer, being treasurer of the funds of such school district, under provision of the latter part of said section 4763, G. C., is treasurer of the library fund of said school district. Where the board of education of a village or rural school district, having provided a depositary for the funds of such district in compliance with the requirements of said sections 7604, et seq., of the General Code, has dispensed with the position of treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the clerk of said school district, having succeeded to the duties of treasurer of said funds, under provision of the latter part of section 4782 G. C., is treasurer of the library fund of said district.

In connection with the duty of the board of education of a school district to provide a depositary for school funds, it should be noted that section 7604, G. C., as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 328, provides a definite time limit beyond which no school district in the state shall be without a lawfully designated depositary for its funds, and section 7609, G. C., as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 328, provides that upon the failure of the board of education of any school district to provide a depositary according to law the members of the board of education shall be liable for any loss occasioned by their failure to provide such depositary, and in addition shall pay the treasurer of the school funds two per cent. on the average daily balance on the school funds during the time said school district shall be without a depositary.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE FIRE MARSHAL—DATE WHEN ANNUAL OR PRINTED REPORT OF SUCH DEPARTMENT SHOULD BE FILED—WHAT SAID REPORT SHOULD NOT CONTAIN—HOW AN ADDITIONAL REPORT MAY BE PRINTED AND DISTRIBUTED.

The state fire marshal, not having filed any report for the period from date of last annual report to and including June 30, 1915, should now file a partial report in accordance with section 2264-1, G. C.

Such report need not contain statement of receipts and disbursements of the department.

An additional report of said department for the calendar year may, with the approval of the commissioners of public printing, be printed and distributed, in such form and in such numbers as said commission may prescribe.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 30, 1915.

HON. BERT B. BUCKLEY, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of November 22, 1915, asking for my opinion, received. For the sake of brevity, your questions may be stated as follows:

"(1) This department not having filed a report for the period from January 1, 1915, to June 30, 1915, should such report now be filed in accordance with section 2264-1 of the General Code?

"(2) If such report should be filed, should it contain a statement of receipts and disbursements of the department during said period?

"(3) Would it be proper for this department to submit to the commissioners of public printing a report of the department for the calendar year for printing and distribution, in addition to the report for the fiscal year as provided in said section 2264-1, G. C.?

In answer to your first question:
Section 260 of the General Code provided in part as follows:

"In all the departments, institutions, public works and buildings of the state, the fiscal year shall close on the fifteenth day of November of each year, and all annual reports from such departments and institutions shall be made with reference to that date."

This section was amended by section 1 of senate bill No. 226, passed April 11, 1913 (103 O. L., 661), being section 260-1, G. C., to read as follows:

> "For all state offices, departments, commissions, boards and institutions of the state the fiscal year shall be and is hereby fixed to begin on the first day of July in each year and to end on the last day of June of the succeeding year, and all annual reports from such departments, commissions, boards and institutions of the state shall be made as of those dates."

This amendment, however, did not go into effect until June 30, 1915.

Section 4 of senate bill No. 226 above mentioned, being section 260-4 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 661, provided as follows:

> "Such state officers, departments, commissions, boards and institutions of the state as are required by law to submit annual reports to the governor of state or to other persons, bodies, boards or commissions shall prepare and submit to the governor or such other persons, bodies, boards or commissions, on the first day of July, 1915, or as soon thereafter as is practicable, partial reports for the period covered between the date of the closing of the fiscal year formerly in force for such state officers, departments, boards and other institutions and June 30, 1915. The governor, or other persons, bodies, boards or commissions, to whom such partial report shall be made shall use their proper discretions as to the publication of such partial reports."

In your letter you state that your department made a report to the governor for the year ending December 31, 1914. It was therefore your duty on July 1, 1915, or as soon as practicable thereafter, to make and file with the governor a report for the period from December 31, 1914, to June 30, 1915, in accordance with the provisions of section 260-4, supra, and this you state in your letter has not been done. You cannot now file the report provided for in said section for the reason that the same was repealed by amended senate bill No. 158, which became effective September 3, 1915. However, section 2 of senate bill No. 158 (106 O. L., 517), provides as follows:

> "All officers, boards, commissions, institutions, associations, or corporations that were heretofore by law required to make an annual or semi-annual report to the governor of the state, shall on the first day of July, 1915, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make partial reports for the period covered between the date of the making of the last preceding annual or semi-annual report to the governor and June 30, 1915, in triplicate, to be filed in the manner prescribed by section 2264-1 of the General Code. This section shall cease to have any effect or operation on and after January 1, 1916."

This section being now in effect, it is your duty to comply with the same and file a report for the period covered between the date of the making of your last preceding annual report and June 30, 1915. Said report should be prepared and filed in accordance with the provisions of section 2264-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 508, which is as follows:

> "Each elective state officer, * * * the state fire marshal, * * * shall make annually, at the end of each fiscal year, in triplicate, a report of the transactions and proceedings of his office or department for such fiscal year excepting however receipts and disbursements, unless otherwise specifically required by law. Such report shall contain a summary of the official acts of such officer, board or commission, institution, association or corporation, and such suggestions and recommendations as may be proper. On the first day of August of each year, one of said reports shall be filed with the governor of the state, one with the secretary of state, and one shall be kept on file in the office of such officer, board, commission, institution, association or corporation."

In answer to your second question, your attention is called to the fact that under section 2264-1, G. C., supra, receipts and disbursements should not be included in said partial report nor in subsequent annual reports "unless otherwise specifically required by law." The only other section of the General Code referring to annual reports from your department is section 843, G. C., and this section was repealed by senate bill No. 158 above mentioned. You are therefore advised that it is not necessary for you to include in your partial report, nor in subsequent annual report, a statement of such receipts and disbursements.

In answer to your third question, your attention is called to the fact that the primary purpose of the partial annual reports provided for by senate bill No. 158 above mentioned, is to enable the secretary of state to publish "the Ohio general statistics" and full provision as to the distribution of said publication is made in the law. There is no provision for any other publication or distribution of such partial or annual report. However, your attention is called to section173-2, G. C., (106 O. L., 514), which provides as follows:

"No officer, board or commission, shall print or cause to be printed at the public expense, any report, bulletin, or pamphlet, unless such report, bulletin or pamphlet be first submitted to and the publication thereof approved by the commissioners of public printing. If such commission shall approve the publication thereof, it shall determine the form of such publication and the number of copies thereof, provided that in all cases the commissioners of public printing shall cause their action thereon to be entered upon the minutes of their proceedings.

"If such approval is given, the commissioners shall cause the same to be printed, and may authorize such printing to be done at any penal, correctional or benevolent institution of the state having a printing department of sufficient equipment therefor; and when printed, such publications, other than the Ohio general statistics, shall be delivered to such officer, board or commission for distribution by him or it."

Under this section it would be proper for you, if you so desire, to prepare a report for the calendar year from January 1 to December 1, and submit the same to the commissioners of public printing, and with their approval the same could be printed in such form and in such numbers as they prescribe.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CLERK OF SUPREME COURT—FEES TO BE CHARGED WHEN MOTION TO DISMISS PETITION IN ERROR IS SUSTAINED AND CASE IS AGAIN BROUGHT UP ON MOTION TO CERTIFY RECORD AND MOTION ALLOWED—TWO DISTINCT PROCEEDINGS.

If a case which originated in the court of common pleas is taken to the supreme court on petition in error as of right, and motion to dismiss is sustained by such court, but said case was also sought to be brought before said court on motion to certify record and said motion is allowed, the case is in court on two proceedings, and the fee of five dollars prescribed by section 1512, G. C., should be charged in each such proceeding.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HON. FRANK E. MCKEAN, Clerk of Supreme Court, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 22nd, you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

> "Will you please refer to section 1512, of the General Code, and advise me as to my duty in a case as follows:
> "(1) A petition in error is filed in an error proceeding brought into the supreme court. The petition in error so filed alleges that a constitutional question is involved.
> "(2) At the same time, and in the same action, a motion is filed in the supreme court asking that the court of appeals certify up its record.
> "(3) Counsel for defendant in error filed a motion to dismiss the petition in error on the ground that no constitutional question is involved.
> "(4) The supreme court allows the motion to dismiss the petition in error.
> "(5) The supreme court allows the motion to certify up the record.
> "The docket fee of $5.00 having been paid, under the provisions of section 1512, for the docketing of the case, and the petition in error therein having been dismissed, and a new petition in error allowed to be filed, the question arises whether or not it is my duty as clerk of the supreme court to charge $5.00 for the second petition in error.

"In other words, under section 1512, and under the circumstances outlined above, is it incumbent upon me to consider each of the two petitions in error as a separate case, and am I expected to collect a fee of $5.00 for the filing of each petition in error?"

Section 12251 of the General Code (103 O. L., 431) provides as follows:

"Except as to the judgment or final order of the court of appeals or a judge thereof, in cases involving questions under the constitution of the United States, or of this state, and in cases which originated in the court of appeals, no petition in error shall be filed in the supreme court in cases over which it has jurisdiction without its leave, or that of a judge thereof."

Section 1512 of the General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"The clerk of the supreme court shall charge and collect the following fees:

"For each case placed on the trial docket, five dollars, which shall be in full for docketing case, etc.

"For each case placed on the motion docket, two dollars, which shall be in full for docketing such case from term to term, etc.

* * * * * * * *

"Such fees must be paid to the clerk by the party invoking the action of the court, before the case or motion is docketed; * * *."

I assume that the case to which you refer originated in the common pleas court. Under the provisions of section 12251, G. C., in cases involving questions under the constitution of the United States, or of this state, a petition in error may be filed in the supreme court as of right; in cases in which no such question is involved leave must first be obtained to file a petition in error, and a motion must be filed to obtain such leave.

If a case is brought up to the supreme court as of right, it is docketed on the records of said court, and the fee of five dollars should be charged; and if such case is dismissed, that ends the case on that branch of it.

If a motion is filed to certify up the record, that brings the case before the court in an entirely different aspect, and it is my opinion that the fee of five dollars should again be charged for docketing said cause, after the court has granted leave to file a petition in error under that method, upon the filing of the same.

It is my opinion that you should consider each of the two petitions in error as a separate case.

The case appears to me as somewhat analogous to taking a case from the common pleas court to the court of appeals, both on error and on appeal.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—LEVY FOR BRIDGE PURPOSES UNDER SECTION 7562, G. C., BEFORE ITS REPEAL BY CASS HIGHWAY LAW MAY BE TRANSFERRED TO TOWNSHIP ROAD FUND OR MAY BE TRANSFERRED UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2296, G. C.

Moneys raised under section 7562, G. C., repealed by the Cass highway law, which moneys are not now needed by the township trustees for the construction or repair of bridges, owing to a transfer of authority to the county commissioners, may be transferred to the township road fund or other fund of the township in the manner pointed out in sections 2296, G. C., et seq.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HON. HUGH. F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 16, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Since the repeal of section 7562, G. C., with reference to the repair of bridges and culverts by the Cass highway law, vol. 106, page 615, which provides that the county highway superintendent 'shall generally supervise the construction, improvement, maintenance, and repair of the bridges and culverts on the highways of the county, the cost of which shall be borne by the county, unless otherwise provided by law,' I have had numerous inquiries from the various township trustees as to what use they may now make of the bridge fund they now have on hand in the various townships levied under the old law, for repairs as provided in section 7562 repealed.
> "I am unable to discover any other provision in the law as it stands now for the payment of repairs for bridges and culverts except the above provision for payment from the county funds.
> "Section 3370, vol. 106, page 594, in defining the duties of the township highway superintendent, provides that 'Under the direction of the township trustees he shall have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair.' No mention being made of bridges or culverts. Section 3374 goes further as to his duties, but not so far as to conflict with 7192 that I can see.
> "Section 6956-1, vol. 106, page 647, provides: 'The board of county commissioners shall provide annually a fund for the repair and maintenance of bridges and county highways.'
> "Our township have, under the old law, been in the habit of levying separately for bridge and road purposes, but I am not sure that it was necessary for them to do so, and if such is the fact can they not now use the amounts in their bridge fund for road purposes? See section 3274, G. C., before its repeal."

Section 3274, G. C., to which you refer and which was repealed by the Cass highway law, was not broad enough to warrant the expenditure for road purposes of a bridge levy made under section 7562, G. C. Section 3274, G. C., only went so far as to warrant the expenditure of a road levy for either bridge or road purposes, and inasmuch as the section has been repealed, it is now without force and effect even if its terms were broad enough to meet the situation presented by you.

I am of the opinion that the proper course of procedure for a board of township trustees, which made a levy for bridge purposes under section 7562, G. C., and which is now unable to use the proceeds of such levy on account of the transfer of authority from the township trustees to the county commissioners, is that which may be had under sections 2296, et seq., of the General Code.

Section 2296, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 522, provides in part that township trustees may transfer public funds, except the proceeds or balances of special levies, loans or bond issues under their supervision, from one fund to another, or to a new fund created under their supervision. The subsequent sections provide for the passage of a resolution by the board of trustees, the filing of a petition in the common pleas court of the county, the giving of notice and the hearing, and if the provisions of these sections be followed in the matter covered by your inquiry, the court will be authorized, upon a hearing, to transfer from the bridge fund the moneys for which no use now exists and the transfer may be made to the road fund of the township, if the proper facts showing the necessity for such transfer are made to appear to the court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—TRUST FUNDS HELD BY SAID BOARD UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 1840, G. C., CANNOT BE DEPOSITED IN BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Trust funds held by the Ohio board of administration under section 1840, G. C., cannot be deposited in a building and loan association.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion with reference to the investment of certain trust funds under your charge, which request is as follows:

> "Section 1840, General Code, reads in part as follows:
> " 'The board shall accept and hold on behalf of the state, if deemed for the public interest, any grant, gift, devise or bequest of money or property made to or for the use or benefit of said institution or any of them, whether directly or in trust, or for any pupil or inmate thereof. The board shall cause such gift, grant, devise or bequest to be kept as a distinct property or fund, and shall invest the same, if in money, in the manner provided by law; but the board may, in its discretion, deposit in a proper trust company or savings bank any fund so left in trust during a specified life or lives, and shall adopt rules and regulations governing the deposit, transfer or withdrawal of such funds and the income thereof. The board shall, upon the expiration of any trust according to its terms dispose of the funds or property held thereunder in the manner provided in the instrument creating the trust.'
> "The board of administration has in its possession a trust fund, amounting at the present time to $2,141.46, invested in certificates of deposit in the State Savings Bank and Trust Company, bearing interest at 3 per cent.
> "It is the desire of the board to deposit this money in a building and loan association, which would net 4½ per cent. interest per annum, and a surety bond given by the building and loan indemnifying the board against any loss. The law refers only to trust companies and savings banks. Would the board be within the law provided this money were deposited with a building and loan company?"

In view of the provisions of section 1840, General Code, quoted in part in your letter, and the fact there is no provision of law for the diversion of the trust funds in your hands to any purpose excepting those stated in section 1840, General Code, it is my opinion that the deposit of funds cannot be made in a building and loan association.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF PEACE—TERM OF OFFICE—WHEN SUCCESSOR SHOULD BE ELECTED.

A justice of the peace under the provisions of section 1714, G. C., may be appointed to serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, which would be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the odd numbered year next following said appointment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HON. FORREST G. LONG, Prosecuting Attorney, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 26, 1915, as follows:

> "A question has arisen in Logan county, Ohio, concerning the term of justice of the peace, in which several attorneys have taken a position adversely to the position I hold with reference to this question, and the seriousness with which they have brought the matter to bear upon me causes me to seek an opinion from you on the subject.
> "At the general election in 1913, John W. Bergschicker was elected and qualified as a justice of the peace in and for Lake township, Logan county, Ohio, and died on or about the first day of May, 1915, when one Henry C. Hayes was duly appointed to fill the vacancy. Said Hayes filed his petition according to law and was a candidate for election to said office at the general election just passed, but was defeated. His attorneys now contend that 1915 was not the time for the election of a justice of the peace, and that no man could be elected to succed him earlier than 1917. Holding that the only years for the election of justice of the peace was 1913-17-21, etc.
> "The law which seems to take care of the question is found in article 4, section 9, and section 1 of article 4 of the constitution (said section 9 of article 4 being without effect since section 1 of article 4 was adopted), section 1711-1 of the General Code or 103 Ohio Laws, page 214, and chapter 2 of the General Code.
> "I feel certain that your opinion will settle this question without any court proceedings, and therefore I should be very much pleased to hear from you."

In answering your foregoing inquiry it is necessary first to call your attention to the constitutional provision found in section 1 of article XVII. Said section provides:

> "Elections for state and county officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the even numbered years; and all elections for all other elective officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the odd numbered years."

The general assembly has provided in section 1713 of the General Code, that:

"All justices of the peace shall be elected for a term of four years."

Coming now to consider the law under which the party in question was appointed, it is found in sections 1714 and 1715 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

"Section 1714. If a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace, by death, removal, absence for six months, resignation, refusal to serve, or otherwise, the trustees, within ten days from receiving notice thereof, by a majority vote, shall appoint a qualified resident of the township to fill such vacancy, who shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The trustees shall notify the clerk of the courts of such vacancy and the date when it occurred.

"Section 1715. At the next regular election for such office, a justice of the peace shall be elected in the manner provided by law, for the term of four years, commencing on the first day of January next following his election."

While the provisions of the foregoing sections may be susceptible of different constructions, yet when those provisions are considered in connection with the constitutional provision hereinbefore noted, it is apparent that an appointment to fill a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace may only be made to continue until the next regular election for justice of the peace, which would be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the odd numbered year next following such appointment. If this were not the purpose and intent of the provisions of section 1714, that such appointee shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, it would be wholly unnecessary to provide, as is done in the succeeding section, 1715, that the successor of said appointee shall be elected for the full term of four years. In other words, if there were no part of an unexpired term for which it might be claimed such successor was elected, this provision would be unnecessary, as such successor, being elected at the end of a completed full term of four years, would necessarily serve a full succeeding term of four years without such special provision in section 1715.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that a successor to said appointee named in your letter was properly elected at the November election of this year, and that upon the qualification of such person so elected, the term of said appointee will end. This conclusion is in harmony with an opinion of my predecessor, reported in the attorney general's reports for the years 1911-1912, at page 1689.

The contention that an election for justice of the peace may only be held in the year 1913, and every four years thereafter, doubtless arises from the claim that by the repeal of section 9 of article IV of the constitution, said office was abolished, and, when thereafter it was re-created and re-established by the enactment of section 1711-1 G. C. (103 O. L., 214), the first elections thereunder were held in 1913. The answer to this contention is found in the case of State ex rel. v. Redding, 87 O. S., 388, wherein it is held:

"A justice of the peace holding office January 1, 1913, is entitled to serve as such official until the expiration of the term of office to which he has been elected, and the adoption of the amendment to the constitution September 3, 1912, does not deprive him of that right."

This case has the effect of continuing in office all justices of the peace elected in 1911 until January 1, 1916, and also made necessary the election on November 2, 1915, of their successors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—COMPENSATION ASCERTAINED AND DETERMINED TO BE DUE AN INJURED EMPLOYE UNDER SECTION 27 OF SAID LAW—SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION—SETTLEMENT OF PARTIAL OR TOTAL AMOUNT DUE.

Where an injured employe of an employer who has not complied with the provisions of section 22 of the Ohio workmen's compensation act makes application to the state liability board of awards to ascertain and determine the amount of the compensation due the injured employe from his employer, the state liability board of awards should ascertain and determine the total amount due the injured employe by reason of his injuries.

A single cause of action cannot be split or divided so as to sustain two or more actions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—We are in receipt of your favor of October 22, 1915, which is as follows:

"The commission has had before it for consideration the claim of one Antonio Balbia, filed under the provisions of section 27 of the workmen's compensation act.

"Mr. Balbia, on September 4, 1914, was injured while in the employ of Peter Praechter of Cincinnati, Ohio. His injuries were so serious that they may ultimately result in a case of permanent total disability. It is certain that the case, if it does not develop into one of permanent total disability, will involve a very serious permanent partial disability. However, it is not possible at this time to accurately determine the exact extent of this permanent disability, and for this reason the commission is unable to make a complete and final award.

"On September 23, 1915, the case was before the commission for hearing, at which time the claimant was allowed compensation to cover his temporary total disability from September 4, 1914, to March 21, 1916, amounting to the sum of $716.14. In addition, medical bills in the sum of $149.00 were allowed. Notice of this finding and order was sent to the employer, Peter Praechter, but we are advised by the claimant that to date he has received no compensation.

"Inasmuch as the claimant has been unable to work for more than one year, and is absolutely destitute and in desperate need of financial assistance, and according to the medical division it will not be possible to give a definite estimate as to the permanent disability in this case until about April 1, 1916, in view of all of these circumstances we desire to enquire as to whether it would be possible to institute civil proceedings at once against the employer for the collection of the partial award heretofore made by the commission. If so, will you kindly advise, in order that we may certify to you copy of our findings in this case?"

It is to be noted from the contents of your communication that Mr. Balbia was an employe of Peter Praechter, of Cincinnati, Ohio, that the employer had not complied with the provisions of section 22 of the workmen's compensation law, section 1465-69 of the General Code, in that he had not paid a premium to the state insurance fund or elected to compensate his injured employes direct, therefore this claim comes within the provisions of section 27 of the workmen's compensation act, section 1465-74 of the General Code. It is stated in your communication that:

"On September 23, 1915, the case was before the commission for hearing, at which time the claimant was allowed compensation to cover his temporary total disability from September 4, 1914, to March 21, 1916, amounting to the sum of $716.14. In addition, medical bills in the sum of $149.00 were allowed. Notice of this finding and order was sent to the employer, Peter Praechter, but we are advised by the claimant that to date he has received no compensation."

It is also stated in your letter that:

"According to the medical division, it will not be possible to give a definite estimate as to the permanent disability in this case until about April 1, 1916."

Your enquiry is as to whether or not it would be possible to institute civil proceedings at once against the employer for the collection of the partial award heretofore made by the commission.

Section 27 of the workmen's compensation act, section 1465-74 of the General Code, provides a means whereby an employe, whose employer has failed to comply with the provisions of section 22, and which employe has been injured in the course of his employment, may obtain compensation for said injuries. It is provided in this section that he may make application to the state liability board of awards for compensation in accordance with the terms of the act. However, when he makes application to the state liability board of awards for compensation he does so in lieu of proceedings against his employer by civil action in court. That is to say that the employe by making application to the industrial commission prefers to have the commission determine and fix the amount due him for injuries rather than to bring proceedings in court for damages as provided in section 26 of the act, or section 1465-73 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 72.

It is further provided in section 27 that:

"* * * the board shall hear and determine such application for compensation in like manner as in other claims before the board; and the amount of the compensation which said board may ascertain and determine to be due to such injured employe, or to his dependents in case death has ensued, shall be paid by such employer to the person entitled thereto within ten days after receiving notice of the amount thereof as fixed and determined by the board; and in the event of the failure, neglect or refusal of the employer to pay such compensation to the person entitled thereto within said period of ten days, the same shall constitute a liquidated claim for damages against such employer in the amount so ascertained and fixed by the board, which, with an added penalty of fifty percentum, may be recovered in an action in the name of the state for the benefit of the person or persons entitled to the same. * * *"

It will be noted that the section provides that the hearing before the board on application for compensation shall be in like manner as other claims before the board. I construe this section to mean that the hearing on application shall be the same as the hearing on any other claim. It will also be noted that this section provides that the amount of compensation which said board may ascertain and determine to be due to the injured employe shall be paid to such employe or to the person entitled thereto within ten days, etc. It also appears from a reading of this section that the full amount due the injured employe from his employer by reason of his injury must be determined and fixed by the commission at the time of the hearing of the claim.

It is quite evident that this section does not contemplate that the amount of compensation fixed and determined by the board shall be paid in periodical payments for the reason that the section provides that it shall be paid within ten days after the employer receives notice of the finding of the board.

Nowhere do we find in this section of the statute that the commission has authority to determine and fix a partial amount due the employe for his injuries, but the language throughout this section leads us to the belief that the total amount due him by reason of his injuries must be fixed and determined by the commission at the time of the hearing. It is further provided in this section that upon the failure, neglect or refusal of the employer to pay such compensation within a period of ten days after receiving notice of the amount, the same shall constitute a liquidated claim for damages. The fact that the amount determined and fixed by the commission as due the employe becomes, according to the statute, a liquidated claim for damages leads us to the further conclusion that the amount so determined and fixed must be the total amount due the injured employe by reason of his injuries.

Section 26 of the act abolishes the common law defenses of contributory negligence, assumed risk and fellow servant rule to such employers as fail to comply with the provisions of section 22, and provides that such employer shall also be subject to the provisions of the next two succeeding sections of the act, to wit: sections 27 and 28. Section 28 provides for the collection by civil suit from an employer who defaults in any payment required to be made by him to the state insurance fund. It would seem from a reading of section 27 and section 28 that these are in the nature of a penalty provided against a defaulting employer.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the amount when fixed by the commission as compensation for an injury to an employe arising under section 27 must be the whole amount of the compensation due him.

It is further provided in this section that the amount plus fifty percentum may be recovered in an action in the name of the state for the benefit of the person or persons entitled to the same. The cause of action against the employer arises upon the breach of the duty of the employer to pay the amount of compensation fixed and determined by the commission. If the commission proposes to collect by a civil action a portion of this award, we are likely to be confronted with another proposition, to wit: the principle applying to the "splitting of a cause of action." The supreme court of Ohio has held repeatedly that causes of action can not be split. Referring to the case of James v. Allen County, 44 O. S., 230, in which case the plaintiff sought to recover in several actions which all arose out of the same transaction, the court, in speaking upon the question, uses the following language:

"There is but one dismissal, but one breach, pleaded. The dismissal was one act. And, as to recovery of damages for that, plaintiff could not split up his cause of action, recovering a part of his damages in one suit, and the remainder afterward. He must include all that belonged to that cause of action in his first petition, so that one suit and one recovery should settle the rights of the parties. It would be at his own risk and peril if he negligently or ignorantly omitted a part of what might properly have been embraced in the cause of action in his first suit. His mistake, if he made one might be a matter of regret, but that could not change the rule of law."

In the case of Cockley v. Brucker, 54 O. S., 227, the court say:

"A single cause of action cannot be split up into two or more causes of action; neither can two or more actions be sustained against the same party on a single cause of action."

The claim of Antonio Balbia against his employer for compensation arises out of a single transaction, and is for an amount of compensation due him by reason of an injury which he sustained in the course of his employment.

The question might arise as to the continuing jurisdiction of the board over claims arising under section 27. Section 39 of the act, section 465-83 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"The powers and jurisdiction of the board over each case shall be continuing, and it may from time to time make such modification or change with respect to former findings or orders with respect thereto, as in its opinion, may be justified."

The board, no doubt, has continuing jurisdiction over claims for compensation by employes of employers who have complied with section 22, and may make such modification or change with respect to the same just as is provided in section 39, but the provisions of this section could not apply to claims arising under section 27 for the reason that when suit is entered for the recovery of the amount found due, the board necessarily divests itself of any further continuing jurisdiction over the claim, because it has a suit in a court of competent jurisdiction where the question submitted must be adjudicated according to the rules of civil procedure, and a finding or judgment obtained in a civil court would be beyond the power of modification or change by the state liability board of awards.

In view of the above cited decisions, and the construction we place upon the sections of the statutes herein discussed, together with the facts submitted in your letter, I am of the opinion that the commission in determining the amount of compensation due the injured employe must, under the provisions of section 27, determine the full amount due said employe by reason of his said injury. If an action is instituted in court for the recovery of a partial amount of the award, we might meet the objection that a recovery had been made in a former suit and that the question between the industrial commission and the employer had been adjudicated in a former action. This theory seems to be substantiated by the decision of the supreme court and might, if taken advantage of by the employer, work great harm to the injured employe in the collection of the amount of the award.

Therefore, answering your question directly, I am of the opinion that a civil action should not be commenced for the collection of a partial amount of the award already found due, but that the action should be for the full amount due the employe by reason of his said injuries.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION OUT OF STATE INSURANCE FUND OR BY A DIRECT COMPENSATING EMPLOYER TO AN INJURED EMPLOYE NOT A BAR FOR ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE OF THIRD PERSON—RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST A THIRD PERSON WHO IS A TORT-FEASOR.

Where an employe of an employer has sustained an injury in the course of his employment and his employer has paid a premium to the state insurance fund, or has elected to pay compensation direct to his injured employe, and which injury to the employe was caused by a tort-feasor (a third person) the payment of compensation to the injured employe out of the state insurance fund or the payment of compensation to the injured employe by a direct-compensating employer is not a bar to a right of action against such third person for negligently injuring such employe.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HONORABLE JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 24, 1915, in which you request an opinion as follows:

> "We have been requested to submit for your opinion the following question:
> " 'If an employe is hurt by reason of the negligence of a third party while working for an employer who is regularly contributing to the state insurance fund, and such employe participates in the fund, is he barred in the subsequent action brought against the said third party on the theory that a settlement with one joint tort-feasor is a settlement with all?'
> "We trust that you may render this opinion at your very earliest convenience and beg to remain."

The question submitted in your letter is as to whether or not an employe of an employer who has contributed to the state insurance fund and the employe having accepted compensation for an injury out of the state insurance fund would be barred in a subsequent action brought against a third person where the employe has been injured by the third person while in the course of his employment with his employer.

This question has been before the Industrial Commission of Ohio in two cases—one case being that of Ridorfo v. The Cleveland Telephone Company, found in 7 N. C. C. A., 1187, the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "SETTLEMENT WITH TORT-FEASOR. EFFECT ON RIGHT TO COMPENSATION. Where an employe is injured while in the course of his employment and a tort-feasor, other than his employer, is responsible therefor, his right to receive compensation in accordance with the provisions of the workmen's compensation act of Ohio is not lost by settlement with the tort-feasor."

The other case is that of Ferraro v. LaBelle Iron Works, 8 N. C. C. A., 1180, the second branch of the syllabus being as follows:

> "2. DEATH CAUSED BY ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE OF THIRD PERSON. EFFECT ON RIGHTS OF DEPENDENTS TO RECOVER COMPENSATION. The right of the dependents of a killed employe to receive compensation in accordance with the provisions of the workmen's compensation act of 1913 is not affected by the fact that the death of the employe was caused by the actionable negligence of a third person not connected with the employment."

The opinions in these two cases before the industrial commission discuss the question quite fully.

The enactment of the workmen's compensation law of Ohio has made an innovation in the law of torts. Under the Ohio workmen's compensation law an injured employe's right to participate in the state insurance fund or to receive compensation direct from his employer is not based upon any wrong the basis of which, for a recovery as in an action for tort, would be upon the fault or negligence of his employer. A review of the workmen's compensation law reveals the fact that compensation is not awarded on the ground that the employer has been at fault or negligent, but on the simple fact that the injury to the employe was received in the course of his employment and not purposely self-inflicted. Therefore the compensation the employe receives is not paid to him because of any fault or negligence on the part of the employer, which fault or negligence must be the basis of an action in tort, and the employer could not be considered under the workmen's compensation law as a tort-feasor, and there is no liability on the part of the employer for an injury on the ground that he is a tort-feasor.

This question was before the court of common pleas of Cuyahoga county, and on July 9, 1915, Judge Feran rendered an opinion in a series of cases in which he discussed the various provisions of the Ohio workmen's compensation law, and on page 13 of the opinion of the court the same question submitted by you was discussed as follows:

"That while the act and the related acts are far from being perfect * * * they certainly do not deprive the employe of a right of action against a third person who injures him while he may be or is in the course of his employment."

And by way of illustration, Judge Feran says that:

"If the driver of a lumber wagon, in the course of his master's business, is negligently injured by a railroad company while crossing its tracks upon a public highway, he may recover from the wrong-doer, notwithstanding, he has recovered compensation or has been awarded compensation by the state industrial commission from the state insurance fund, for the injury.

"There is no possible justification in law or ethics or morals for the principle or proposition that a railroad company, or any other corporation or person, may wantonly or negligently injure a man and claim immunity on the ground that the injured man received compensation from the state insurance fund. The act or law does not provide for full compensation and even if it did, to hold that a third person might negligently injure a man while that man was in the course of his master's business, and escape liability merely because the man's employer was a contributor to the state insurance fund, would inevitably lead to wanton destruction of limb and life. To so hold would be tantamount to holding that because a man has ample insurance upon his life, another may negligently kill him; or if he has an accident policy, another may wantonly injure him, and plead the payment of the insurance as a defense to an action for the injury or death. It has been so uniformly held that this cannot be done that it would be useless and unnecessary to cite authorities in support of the proposition. The English act of 1906 provides in express terms that an employe injured in the course of his employment, by a third person, 'shall not be entitled to recover both damage and compensation.' The Ohio statute places no such limitation upon the rights of an employe."

Again, quoting from Judge Feran's opinion, on page 15:

"From a consideration of these provisions it becomes apparent at a glance that the doctrine forbidding double compensation or double recovery for the same wrong can have no application and may not be invoked by a third person who has negligently caused an injury to an employe while engaged in his master's business, even though such employe has made application for and has been awarded compensation by the industrial commission."

Again, on page 16, the court says:

"Again, it must not be forgotten that an employe is entitled to the compensation provided for in the act, even though the injury is the result of his own gross negligence, and that the employer was in no sense responsible for it and was in no sense a wrong-doer. Under such circumstances, how can it be said that the employer is a tort-feasor?"

The same question as submitted in your letter was before the supreme court of New Jersey, and arose out of or under the workmen's compensation law of that state in the case of Painting Company v. Klotz, 85 N. J. L., 432, the syllabus of which is as follows:

"Where a workman is injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, and a tort-feasor other than his master is responsible therefor, the right to compensation under the act of 1911 is not lost by settlement with and release of a tort-feasor."

On page 434 of the opinion the court say, after stating the general policy and reason of the act, that:

"These considerations suffice to show that the right to compensation under the statute, and the right to recover damages of a tort-feasor are of so different a character that the rule of law appealed to by the prosecutor is inapplicable."

A very interesting discussion of your question is found in the Ohio law reporter of April 5, 1915, the article being written by Mr. Ernst Angell, of the Cleveland bar. Without entering into a discussion of this article, suffice it to say that his conclusions are that the acceptance of compensation by an injured employe out of the state insurance fund or direct from his employer does not affect his right of action against a third person who is a tort-feasor.

Therefore, answering your question direct, I am of the opinion that the acceptance of compensation from the state insurance fund or from his employer who has elected to pay compensation direct, does not bar the employe of his subsequent action against a third person who is a tort-feasor.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF SALE OF CERTAIN CANAL LANDS TO MARTIN D. KUHLKE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 30, 1915, requesting my approval of the sale of certain canal lands to Martin D. Kuhlke.

I find that your proceedings have been regular and that the record of the same has been prepared in accordance with my opinion of November 29, 1915, relating to the same matter. I therefore return the duplicate copies of your record with my approval of the sale endorsed thereon. In the opinion referred to above it was only intended to hold that the participation of the attorney general was not required in making a public sale of canal lands, and the reference therein to the matter of approval as distinguished from participation was through inadvertence. I find upon an examination of the statutes that the requirement, that the commissioners of the sinking fund fix the terms of payment, was evidently intended to apply only where credit was extended as to some part of the purchase price.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 23, 1915, transmitting to me for examination triplicate copies of a lease of two miles of the abandoned Hocking canal to T. R. Cowell, for oil and gas purposes.

I find that this lease has been executed in accordance with the provisions of the statutes and am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed upon the triplicate copies thereof.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—NOT AUTHORIZED UNDER CASS HIGHWAY LAW TO LET CONTRACTS ON UNIT PRICE BASIS.

County commissioners are not authorized, under the Cass highway law, to let contracts on a unit price basis.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 20, 1915, I have a communication from Mr. Charles A. Groom, of your office, which communication reads as follows:

> "Enclosed please find form of contract combining surveyor's estimate, proposal, bid, bond and specifications for road improvements prepared with special reference to the Cass highway law upon the unit price basis, but so arranged that, with the insertion of a page or one or two words in blanks left, same may be used for contract on a total price basis.
> "In contracts for road construction by the county commissioners, section 91 requires the surveyor to transmit estimate of cost with survey, plats, profiles, cross-sections, estimates and specifications; section 124 provides that the commissioners may let the work as a whole or in convenient sections and shall award the contract to the lowest and best bidder; section 126 provides for a bond equal to the contract price and section 127, relating to extras, is apparently upon the theory of a definite total contract price since same refers to original contract price less than ten thousand dollars and original contract price of ten thousand dollars or more.
> "In view of the fact that there should be uniform procedure throughout the state under the Cass law, I request your opinion as to whether it is possible to award contracts on the unit price basis, or whether it is requisite to award contracts for a definite price, requiring the bidder to state merely unit prices for the purpose of complying with section 127 in case extras become necessary.

"It appears to me that a total price, definitely ascertained, is requisite under the law for the reason that definite plans, specifications, cross-sections and profiles are required and a total contract price for all work is indicated by sections 126 and 127; this, however, will undoubtedly make the work more expensive for the county and in resurfacing contracts will be almost impossible of execution because of the variation in wear requiring larger or smaller quantities at various points along the road to be repaired. On the other hand the unit price basis presents numerous difficulties in the application of the law; the unit price bid and payment thereunder for quantities and work on the actual basis furnished would not disclose the total price until the completion of the work and therefore the amount of the bond could only be upon the basis of an estimated figure and the same would apply to operations under the section regarding extras, and since a bidder, having surveys, profiles, etc., could make an unbalanced bid and thereby load his items at the points where the greatest amount of work and materials were necessary, he could thereby mulct the county and receive a high price on the loaded item necessary in the work and only have a small deduction for the items running substantially under the estimate of quantities. On unit bids, contractors customarily cover their method of calculation by unbalanced bidding, and since the calculation is based upon the total units, there is no method of preventing this practice.

"With your opinion on the question as to whether the unit price basis may be used or whether a definite total price is requisite, will you kindly indicate desired changes in wording of estimate, proposal and contract form, as it seems to me that a uniform or standard type of contract and specifications will tend to definite understanding both upon the part of the contractors and commissioners for the benefit of the public.

"If there is anything I can do to be of assistance either in the matter of arriving at a conclusion or upon the subject of standardizing a form of contract and specifications under the Cass law, I shall be glad to confer with you."

The question raised by Mr. Groom's inquiry is not free from doubt. In view of the reference in section 127 of the Cass highway law, section 6948, G. C., to an original contract unit price, it would seem that the legislature in framing that section acted upon the assumption that contracts might be let upon a unit price basis. On the other hand, section 126 of the act, section 6947, G. C., provides that before entering into a contract the county commissioners shall require a bond in a sum equal to the contract price.

As pointed out by Mr. Groom, there would be no way of fixing the amount of the contractor's bond if the contract were let upon a unit price basis, inasmuch as the contract price could not be determined until the work had been completed and the quantities measured. Even the section of the act which refers to an original contract unit price contains references to the amount of the original contract price of such a character as to warrant the inference that such price must be a fixed sum, determined at the time the contract is made. The section refers to cases in which the original contract price is less than ten thousand dollars and to cases in which the original contract price is ten thousand dollars or more, and establishes a different rule for the letting of contracts for extra work in the two cases. If contracts were let on a unit price basis it would often be impossible to determine in advance of the completion of the contracts whether the amounts involved were less than ten thousand dollars or whether they equalled or exceeded that sum, thus involving in doubt the manner of letting contracts for extra work. At no place in the act is any express authority conferred on county commissioners to let contracts on a unit price basis and any argument in favor of the existence of such authority must be based on the reference in section 127 of the act to "the original contract unit price." In view of the other provisions of this section, and the provisions of the preceding section relating to the amount of the contractor's bond, all of which contemplate a fixed and definite total contract price, I am of the opinion that any argument in favor of the existence of the authority to let contracts on a unit price basis would not be well taken, and therefore concur in the view expressed by Mr. Groom, that county commissioners do not have authority, under the Cass highway law, to let contracts on a unit price basis, that a total price, definitely ascertained, is necessary under the law, and that the language of section 127 of the act relating to the original contract unit price can only be given such effect as to authorize the commissioners to require bidders to state the unit prices used by them in arriving at the total sum bid, such unit prices to be of no effect unless extra work becomes necessary, the contractor to receive the total sum bid without additions or deductions and without reference to quantities handled or furnished unless extra work rendered necessary by unforeseen contingencies is contracted for by the commissioners.

I also note Mr. Groom's request that I indicate any changes that should be made in the wording of the estimate, proposal and contract form submitted by him. The form submitted was evidently drawn upon the theory that the work was to be let upon a unit price basis and I am sure the changes necessary to conform to the requirement of a total price, definitely ascertained, will readily suggest themselves. The statement under the heading of surveyor's estimate and immediately preceding the table of quantities and prices might properly be amended to provide that the contractor should not be entitled to any additional compensation rather than to any claim for loss of profits or for other damages, should the quantity of work done prove greater than estimated. No reference would be required to a situation where the work done might prove less than estimated. The table of items and prices embodied in the proposal should have added to it two additional columns,in one of which should be printed under an appropriate heading the total estimated quantities while the other should provide a space for the total bid for each kind or class of labor or material. The heading of the column already provided for prices should be so altered as to call for the unit prices for each kind or class of labor or material, and at the foot of the column provided for the total bid for each kind or class of labor or material a space should be provided for the total bid for the complete work. The contract should be reframed to provide for a definite lump sum as compensation and should contain a provision to the effect that the contractor shall not be entitled to any extra compensation in case the quantities actually exceed the estimates, and certain references to the measurement of the work should be stricken from the specifications. There may be some other slight changes necessary in order to conform fully to the theory of a definite lump sum bid.

I have not attempted to rewrite the estimate, proposal, contract and specifications in their entirety, and have only suggested the line to be followed in reframing the same, but am sure that no difficulty will be encountered on this score.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—PROVISION IN REGARD TO SIGN POSTS ON HIGHWAYS—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER AND COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT'S DUTY IN PRESCRIBING AND PROVIDING DESIGN.

Under section 7196, G. C., the state highway commissioner is not required to provide sign posts, his duties under that section being limited to prescribing and providing the design. The county highway superintendent is not required to erect sign posts until the county commissioners have authorized the necessary expenditure.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1915.

HON. F. C. GOODRICH, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 23, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Under section 7196 of the General Code, the county highway superintendent is required to erect and maintain at cross roads on inter-county and main market roads suitable sign posts, etc. I would like an opinion from your office as to who pays for these sign posts, whether they are furnished and paid for by the highway commissioner, or whether they are furnished and paid for by the county commissioners."

So much of section 7196, G. C., being section 153 of the Cass highway law, as is material to your inquiry, reads as follows:

> "The county highway superintendent shall erect and maintain at cross roads, on inter-county and main market roads, suitable sign posts of a design to be prescribed and provided by the state highway commissioner, showing the names of the roads, and the direction and distance to nearby villages and cities."

So far as the above quoted language is concerned, the only duty that it casts upon the state highway commissioner is to prescribe and provide a design for sign posts. The word "provided" relates to the word "design" and not to the word "sign posts," and the language in question does not require the state highway commissioner to provide any sign posts. His only duty is to prescribe a design for general use on the inter-county highways and main market roads of the state and to provide each county highway superintendent with a copy of the design.

While the language in question might seem at first glance to impose upon the county highway superintendent a mandatory duty to erect and maintain sign posts upon certain highways, yet this language must be read in connection with the other provisions of the act in which it is found. Under section 155 of the act, section 7198, G. C., the county highway superintendent may employ laborers and purchase material only with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, and other sections of the act further indicate that the county highway superintendent has no authority to bind the county unless authorized by the county commissioners. It therefore follows that under the provision of section 153 of the Cass highway law, section 7196, G. C., no duty attaches to the county highway superintendent to erect sign posts until the county commissioners have authorized the purchase and erection of the same. When such purchase and erection have been authorized by the county commissioners, then it becomes the duty of the county highway superintendent to act and the cost and expense is, of course, to be paid from the county treasury.

By the above it is not meant to hold, however, that independent of section 153 of the Cass highway law the state highway commissioner, acting either with or without the co-operation of the local authorities, would not have authority to include the erection of sign posts in the plans for the improvement of an inter-county highway or main market road.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—AN ASSIGNMENT BY CONTRACTOR OF ALL COMPENSATION DUE OR TO BECOME DUE UNDER HIS CONTRACT OR ALL OF AN INSTALLMENT BECOMING DUE IS VALID.

An assignment by a contractor on state highway work of all the compensation due or to become due to him under his contract, or all of any particular installment or installments to become due is valid and must be recognized by the state highway commissioner. An assignment of a part of the compensation due or a part of an installment to thereafter become due, may or may not be recognized by the state highway commissioner at his option.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 6, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 26, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "We are attaching hereto copy of a paper purporting to be an assignment by Henry J. Neipfoot & Company to the Universal Portland Cement Company of all moneys due and payable to Henry J. Neipfoot & Company for the construction of section 'P,' Cleveland-East Liverpool road, Portage county.
> "The Universal Portland Cement Company's representative requests the signature of the auditor of Ohio, and myself, as highway commissioner, to the blank form of acceptance at the bottom of this paper, and the honoring of the purported assignment.
> "I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to what action may properly be taken by this department pursuant to the Universal Portland Cement Company's request."

I am informed by you, that as a matter of fact your department has no contract with Henry J. Neipfoot & Company for the construction of section "P" of the Cleveland-East Liverpool road in Portage county, the contract in question being with Henry J. Neipfoot and not with Henry J. Neipfoot & Company. In so far as the assignment submitted by you is concerned, it therefore follows that the same is invalid and should not be recognized by you in any way, for the reason that the same is not executed by the contractor for the road in question.

I understand, however, that you desire a general statement of your rights and duties relative to assignments by contractors of compensation due or to become due to them on account of work performed under contracts entered into by your department. No question has ever been raised as to the right of a contractor to assign compensation already earned. The courts have generally extended this right to unearned compensation under an existing contract. The rule in Ohio, and indeed generally is that a contingent debt founded on an existing contract is property which is assignable.

Andrew v. Krippendorf-Dittman Co., 7 O. L. R., 114;
Rodijkeit v. Andrews, 74 O. S., 104;
Brooks Co. v. Tolman, 6 O. C. C. (n. s.), 137.

The first case above cited related to the assignment of commissions on sales made, and the other two cases to the assignment of wages, but the same principles are applicable and have been generally recognized by the courts as to the compensation due to contractors, and the rule is the same where the contract is one for the erection of a public work.

In the case of Soeder v. Cleveland, 12 O. D. N. P., 222, the court recognized the validity of orders given by a city contractor for the payment to persons named therein of sums of money out of certain funds due or to become due the contractor under a contract with the city. Assignments of moneys due or to become due on public contracts are recognized as valid in the following cases:

Fortunato v. Patten, et al., 147 N. Y., 277;
Gilligan Co. v. Casey, 210 Mass., 26;
Perkins v. Butler County, 44 Neb., 110;
Bank v. School District (Neb.), 110 N. W., 347;
Dickson v. City of St. Paul (Minn.), 106 N. W., 1053;
Bank v. School Committee, 121 N. C., 107;
Stott v. Franey, 20 Ore., 410;
Board of Education v. Brick Company, 13 Utah, 211.

The right of a contractor on public work to receive compensation at such future time as he shall have completed the work, or some part thereof, being property and subject to assignment, the general rule is that the consent of the debtor is not necessary to the validity of an assignment of this character. The existence of this rule in Ohio was recognized by Spiegel, J., in the case of Andrew v. Krippendorf-Dittman Co., supra, in the following language:

> "The personal confidence which precludes the transfer of rights arising out of a contract must be involved in the nature of the rights themselves. It is not ordinarily involved in the right to receive moneys due under a contract and this right is generally assignable without the consent of the other party."

In view of the above it follows that no formal written acceptance of the assignment on your part, or on the part of the state auditor is necessary, and that such an acceptance would not add anything to the rights of the assignee. I therefore suggest the advisability of your declining to execute any such acceptance.

I have so far considered only those cases in which a contractor holding a contract for the construction of a highway executes and delivers an assignment for all of the compensation due or to become due to him under his contract, or all of any particular installment or installments to become due. I advise you that such assignments, if sufficient in form and substance and properly executed by the contractor and filed with you, are to be regarded as valid and binding upon you, and that payment of moneys due on such contract should be made to the assignee and moneys thereafter becoming due on such contract and covered by the assignment, should be paid to the assignee when they become due.

A somewhat different situation presents itself where a contractor endeavors to assign a part of the compensation which may be due, or a part of an installment which may thereafter become due to him. Such assignments have generally been held to be unenforceable at law unless assented to by the debtor, for the reason that their effect is to split a cause of action and create two debts where one had previously existed.

> Stanbery v. Smythe, 13 O. S., 495;
> Railway Company v. Supply Company, 6 O. C. C. (n. s.), 429.

In other words, if a creditor without his debtor's consent, assigns a part of a claim, or if he assigns parts of the claim to different persons, the debtor is not bound, and may discharge himself by payment to the original creditor, but an assignment of a part of a fund assented to by the debtor is valid.

I therefore advise you that as to the class of assignments now under consideration, you are not bound to recognize the same and may refuse to consent to such assignments and may make payments to the contractor, or you may, at your option, consent to such partial assignments and make payment to the assignees.

I am not advised as to the advantage or disadvantage to your department of being called upon to recognize assignments of compensation by contractors engaged in the construction of highways. If it be a fact that the duty imposed upon you by law, of recognizing such assignments when in due form and properly executed, works to the disadvantage of the public and tends to hamper the work of your department, the remedy is to be found in the insertion in the contracts hereafter made by your department of a clause prohibiting the contractor from assigning without your consent any of the money that may become payable under his contract.

The validity of such a provision was sustained by the court in the case of City of Omaha v. Standard Oil Company, 55 Neb., 337. The facts in that case were that the Metropolitan Street Lighting Company had contracted with the city of Omaha to light its streets for a consideration to be paid monthly. The contract contained the following provision:

> "It is further agreed between the parties hereto that the party of the second part shall not assign this contract without first obtaining the consent of the first party endorsed hereon in writing."

I therefore advise you that as to the class of assignments now under consideration, you are not bound to recognize the same and may refuse to consent to such assignments and may make payments to the contractor, or you may at your option consent to such partial assignments and make payment to the assignees.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—PRELIMINARY VIEW OF PROPOSED DITCH —COUNTY SURVEYOR NEED NOT ACCOMPANY THEM ON SUCH INITIAL VIEW.

County commissioners are without authority to order the county surveyor to accompany them upon their preliminary view of a proposed ditch or to attend upon the preliminary hearing had upon a ditch petition, and the county surveyor cannot be compensated for such services.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 6, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of November 24, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Have the county commissioners, under sections 6451, General Code, et seq., the discretion to legally order the county surveyor to accompany them upon the initial view of a proposed ditch, petitioned for, and if so, how is the surveyor to be paid for the services so rendered by him?"

Your inquiry presents a question involving the construction of certain apparently inconsistent sections of the General Code of Ohio, relating to the construction of single county ditches. The sections in question are found in chapter I of title 3 of part 2 of the General Code.

Under sections 6447, G. C., et seq., jurisdiction as to the construction of single county ditches is obtained by the county commissioners of a county upon the filing of a petition with the county auditor and the giving of notice. Section 6451, G. C., provides that the county commissioners shall meet at the place of beginning of the ditch on the date fixed, hear the proof offered, go over and along the line of the improvement and determine the necessity thereof. This section also provides that the commissioners may adjourn from time to time so that the preliminary view of the site of the proposed improvement and the hearing of proof may occupy one or more days. At no place in the statutes is found any direct authority for the county surveyor to accompany the county commissioners in their preliminary view or to attend upon the hearing of proof, either of his own volition or on the order of the county commissioners.

Section 6454, G. C., provides that if the county commissioners find for the improvement, they shall cause to be entered on their journal an order directing the county surveyor to go upon the line described in the petition, or as changed by them, and perform certain duties, this being the first direct statutory authority for any action on the part of the county surveyor in the premises.

Considering the above provisions together, it would seem clear that no duty attaches to or can be required of the county surveyor prior to the time that the county commissioners have found for the improvement, and if it were not for the existence of a provision found in section 6453, G. C., there could be no doubt of the soundness of the proposition that county commissioners do not have the power to order the county surveyor to accompany them upon the initial view of a proposed ditch.

Said section 6453, G. C., reads as follows:

> "If the county commissioners find against the improvement, they shall dismiss the petition and proceedings at the cost of the petitioners, and cause an itemized bill of the costs to be made up by the auditor for their examination and approval, including the per diem of the county surveyor, together with all costs necessarily made except fees of the auditor and compensation of the commissioners."

It thus appears that while prior to a finding of the county commissioners, either for or against the ditch, there is no statutory authority for the performance of any duties in the matter by the county surveyor, either on his own motion or at the request of the county commissioners, yet the section pointing out the duty of the county commissioners in case they do find against the improvement contemplates the inclusion in the bill of costs of the per diem of the county surveyor. This apparent inconsistency in the statutes is, however, cleared up by an examination into the history of the law of Ohio relating to the construction of single county ditches.

The first act of the legislature relating to this subject, and approximating the present law as to form, is found in 68 O. L., 60. Under section 2 of that act it was the duty of the auditor to furnish a copy of the petition to the commissioners, who were required to thereupon proceed with or without an engineer, as they deemed best to view the site of the proposed improvement, and to perform certain other duties.

Section 2 of the act, found in 68 O. L., 60, was amended in 70 O. L., 79, and in its amended form provided that the commissioners, upon receipt of the petition, should direct the county surveyor or a competent engineer to go upon the line of the proposed ditch, view the same and perform certain other duties. Under this section the county surveyor, or some other engineer, was required to perform certain duties upon receipt of a direction so to do from the county commissioners and before the county commissioners had taken any other action in the premises. This section was again amended in 73 O. L., 181, but the part of the section now under consideration was not substantially changed.

In the revision of 1880, sections 4452 and 4453 read as follows:

"Section 4452. If the bond be approved by the county auditor he shall immediately deliver a copy of the petition to the commissioners, who shall thereupon take to their assistance a competent surveyor or engineer, if, in their opinion, his services are necessary, and at one proceed to view the line of the proposed improvement, and determine by actual view of the premises along and adjacent thereto, whether the improvement is necessary or will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare, and whether the line described is the best route; and they shall report their finding in writing and order the auditor to enter the same on their journal.

"Section 4453. If the commissioners find against the improvement, they shall dismiss the petition and proceedings at the cost of the petitioners; and they shall cause an itemized bill of all the costs, to be made up by the auditor, for their examination and approval, which shall include the per diem of the surveyor or engineer, together with all other costs necessarily made, except fees of the auditor and compensation of the commissioners."

Section 4452, R. S., as subsequently amended, became section 6452, G. C., while section 4453, R. S., became section 6453, G. C. As the two sections stood in the Revised Statutes of 1880, they were not inconsistent, but a subsequent amendment of section 4452, R. S., section 6452 G. C., was so framed as to strike from that section the provision authorizing the commissioners to take to their assistance a surveyor or engineer. The legislature, however, evidently overlooked the provision of section 4453, R. S., section 6453, G. C., to the effect that the bill of costs should include the per diem of the surveyor or engineer and this oversight produced the present apparent conflict between the two sections. Inasmuch, however, as all authority on the part of the commissioners to call to their assistance the county surveyor or any other engineer in making their preliminary view of the site of the proposed ditch has been destroyed by the action of the legislature, the language in section 6453, G. C., to the effect that the itemized bill of cost shall include the per diem of the county surveyor, must be rejected as surplusage.

It is therefore my opinion, in answer to your specific question, that the county commissioners have no authority to order the county surveyor to accompany them upon their initial or preliminary view of a proposed ditch, or to attend upon the preliminary hearing had upon a ditch petition, and that the county surveyor cannot be compensated for such services. Indeed, such services on the part of the county surveyor, not being official in their nature, cannot, strictly speaking, be rendered even without compensation, for the reason that under section 7181, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 612, the county surveyor is required to give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—TOWNSHIP AND VILLAGE ASSESSORS—WHEN ELECTION TO SUCH OFFICES ARE VOID BY REASON OF ELECTOR NOT RESIDING IN REQUIRED DISTRICT—OFFICES COMPATIBLE—VILLAGE TREASURER AND TOWNSHIP CLERK—VILLAGE TREASURER AND TOWNSHIP TREASURER—VILLAGE CLERK AND TOWNSHIP CLERK.

The election of resident of a village within a township as township assessor and the election of a resident of the territory of a township outside of such village as village assessor, are void and of no effect, and a certificate of such election may not be compelled to be delivered to the person found by the canvassing officers to be so elected.

A vacancy will occur in such offices on the first day of January, 1916, to be filled in the manner provided by law.

The offices of village treasurer and township clerk; the offices of village treasurer and township treasurer, and the offices of village clerk and township clerk are not incompatible, and may be held by the same person at the same time, unless the volume of business is such or for other reasons it be physically impracticable for one person to properly perform all of the duties of the offices held by him.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 6, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion under date of November 16, 1915, is as follows:

> "Section 3349, G. C., as amended, 106-250, provides among other things: 'In villages one assessor shall be elected; * * * in townships composed in part of a municipal corporation, one assessor shall be elected in the territory outside such municipal corporation. * * * An assessor shall be a citizen possessing the qualifications of an elector of such ward, district, city, village or township.'
> "Batesville village is a municipal corporation in Beaver township, this county.
> "B, qualified elector of Batesville village, received 12 votes for the office of assessor of Batesville village. He also received 106 votes in Beaver township, in the territory outside such municipal corporation, for the office of assessor of such territory. He was also elected a member of council of Batesville village.

"F, qualified elector of Beaver township, outside Batesville village, received 25 votes as assessor of Batesville village. He also received 85 votes in Beaver township, in the territory outside such municipal corporation, for the office of assessor of such territory.

"B, elector of the village, received the majority vote for township assessor in the territory outside the municipality, while F, qualified elector of the township in the territory outside the municipality, received the majority vote as village assessor.

"Query. To whom shall the deputy state supervisors of elections give notice of election as provided in section 5119 of the General Code, or does a vacancy exist in either or both of said offices?

"If elected thereto, may an elector of a municipality qualify for and hold the following offices: Village treasurer and township clerk? Village treasurer and township treasurer? Village clerk and township clerk?

"If not, may he elect which one to hold and qualify therefor, or is he disqualified from both?"

Section 3349, G. C., 106 O. L., 250, provides in part as follows:

"At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers as follows: In municipal corporations divided into wards, one assessor shall be elected in each ward; in villages one assessor shall be elected; in cities not divided into wards, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, shall, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, within ten days after this act shall become effective, divide such cities or such part or parts thereof as may be located in their county, into such number of assessment districts as in the judgment of the county auditor may be necessary in order to provide for the assessment of all the property therein; * * * One assessor shall, at the time specified in this section, be elected in each assessment district so created; * * * in townships not having a municipal corporation therein, one assessor shall be elected in such township; in townships composed in part of a municipal corporation, one assessor shall be elected in the territory outside such municipal corporation. An assessor shall be a citizen possessing the qualifications of an elector of such ward, district, city, village or township. * * *"

It seems unnecessary to say here that although an elector of a municipality may also be an elector of the township in which the municipality is located, for the purpose of electing certain township officers, the term "elector" as used in the last sentence above quoted has a somewhat narrower application and there clearly comprehends only electors of such wards, districts, cities, villages and townships for the purpose of electing assessors therein. That is to say, an assessor must be entitled to vote for an elector to fill that office in the ward, district, city, village or township in which he is elected.

An elector of a ward, district, city or village is not entitled to vote for an assessor of the township in which such city or village is located, and is, therefore, not an elector of the township for the purpose of electing an assessor, and is, therefore, ineligible to the office of assessor for the township. For like reason an elector of the township residing outside of the limits of a municipal corporation is not, for the purpose of electing assessors, an elector of any city or village, or any ward or district thereof, and is ineligible to the office of assessor herein.

From this it follows that B is ineligible to the office of assessor of Beaver township, outside of Batesville, and likewise is F ineligible to hold the office of assessor in the village of Batesville. The face of the election returns then shows, under your statement, that there was elected in both Beaver township and Batesville a person who is ineligible to fill the office to which he was elected. From this it follows that the election to the office of assessor was a nullity in both the township and village and consequently a vacancy in that office will occur on the first day of January, 1916, in each case to be filled in the manner provided by law.

The rule is well established that where there is elected to an office a person who is ineligible to fill the same, the election is void.

15 Cyc., 391;

Dorian v. Walters, 116 S. W., 313 (Ky. 1909);
Jenners v. Clark, 129 N. W., 357 (N. D. 1910);
Spruill v. Bateman, 77 S. E., 768 (N. C. 1913).

The election being a nullity by reason of the ineligibility of the person receiving the highest number of votes, it would seem that under the authority of State ex rel. v. Egry, 79 O. S., 400, and Brown v. State, 81 O. S., 556, canvassing officers may not be compelled to issue certificates of election.

Inquiry is made as to whether the offices of village treasurer and township clerk may be held by the same person at the same time. In the absence of other disqualification or express statutory inhibition, a person may hold more than one office unless they are incompatible from the nature of the functions and the duties thereof.

There is no such statutory inhibition against these offices being held by the same person at the same time. It is impracticable to here quote or even make specific reference to all the statutory provisions defining the powers and duties of these offices. Suffice it to say that a careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose any incompatibility of the offices mentioned. On the contrary, it appears that the duties and functions of these offices are entirely independent of each other. That is to say, we fail to find any duty of one of these offices which is related to a duty of the other, or any duty of one which is in any way dependent on the other.

The rule of incompatibility of offices is stated in the case of State ex rel. v. Gebhart, 12 C. C. (n. s.), 274, as follows:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon, the other; or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

The duties of the offices of village treasurer and township clerk being entirely independent of each other, one could not be said to be subordinate to or a check upon the other, nor would it ordinarily be physically impossible for one person to perform the duties of both.

I am therefore of the opinion that unless on account of the volume of business of the two offices, or for other reasons, it is impracticable for one person to properly perform the duties of both, a person otherwise qualified may hold the offices of village treasurer and township clerk at the same time.

For similar reasons to those above stated, my predecessor held in an opinion under date of November 21, 1911, to be found at page 1461 of the report of the attorney general of this state for the year 1911, that the offices of treasurer of a municipality within a township and treasurer of the township may both be legally held by the same person. In this opinion, and the reasons given therefor, I fully concur.

The offices of village clerk and township clerk, about which you also inquire, are found upon investigation to be in no way a check upon or subordinate to each other. It therefore follows that unless it is impracticable for one person, who is otherwise in all respects qualified to properly perform all the duties of both offices, he may legally hold both at the same time.

The foregoing answers to your preceding inquiries obviates the necessity of an answer to your concluding question. It may be observed, however, that while the holding of one office may disqualify from holding another, the mere election to a second office will not disqualify from holding either in the absence of specific statutory provision to that effect.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CANVASSING OFFICERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PASS UPON QUALIFICATIONS OF PERSONS ELECTED TO OFFICE—DISQUALIFICATION TO HOLD OFFICE PERPETUAL, SEE SECTION 3808, G. C.

No authority is conferred upon canvassing officers to pass upon the qualifications or eligibility of persons who are by the election returns shown to have been elected to office.

If it clearly appears that a person so elected is disqualified to hold an office to which he has been elected by reason of the provisions of section 3808, G. C., he may not compel to be delivered to him a certificate of such election.

The disqualification to hold office provided in section 3808, G. C., is perpetual.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 6, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your request for an opinion under date of November 11, 1915, is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:
> "Section 3808, General Code, provides that a violation of any provision of this or the two preceding sections shall disqualify the party violating same from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, etc.
> "If a mayor of a village, serving in 1912, drew several vouchers in payment for labor on streets, etc., has been elected as mayor at the November election of 1915, may the clerk and present mayor, in their canvassing of the vote, refuse to issue a certificate of election to the mayor on the grounds that he was disqualified by reason of the violation of the provisions of section 3808, General Code?
> "For what length of time is a person disqualified who has violated the provisions of said law, and how shall the disqualification be established?"

Section 3808, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any provision of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other thing he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, and if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom."

The provisions of this section were originally enacted as a part of section 45 of the Municipal Code passed in 1902, 96 O. L., 37, and except for slight changes in phraseology made in the codification of 1910, has not been changed. Section 45 of the Municipal Code was sub-divided and incorporated in the General Code as sections 3806, 3807, 3808 and 3809, without substantial change and are independent of section 12912, G. C., therefore enacted and which is a penal statute.

The authority and duties of the clerk of a municipality with respect to the issuance of certificates of election to municipal officers, is found in section 5114, G. C., which provides as follows:

"The returns of municipal elections shall be made by the judges and clerks in each precinct to the clerk or auditor of the municipality. Such clerk or auditor, or, in his absence or disability, a person selected by the council, shall call to his assistance the mayor, and, in his presence, make an abstract and ascertain the candidates elected, as herein required with respect to county officers. Such clerk or auditor shall make a certificate as to each candidate so elected, and cause it to be delivered to him. If there is no mayor, or he is absent, disabled or a candidate at such election, the clerk or auditor shall call to his assistance a justice of the peace of the county."

A careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose jurisdiction or authority conferred upon those officers, charged with the duty of canvassing the returns of municipal elections and issuing certificates to those elected, to in any way determine questions as to the qualifications or eligibility of persons elected to office. The power of canvassing officers, as such, conferred by law is limited to determining in the first instance the number of votes cast for each candidate and to issue certificates of election to those candidates thereby found to be elected. Stated in another way, it may be said that it is made the plain duty of such canvassing officers, upon ascertaining what candidates are elected, to issue to them a proper certificate of election. See Ingerson v. Berry, 14 O. S., 315, at page 322 of the opinion of the court, citing 20 Pick., 484.

In Phelps v. Schroder, 26 O. S., 549, it is held:

"1. Under the 34th section of election law (S. & C. 536) where the poll-books upon their face are substantially correct, the justices and clerk, in making the abstract of votes, are not authorized to reject such poll-books on account of fraud in the election."

See also Dalton v. State ex. rel., 43 O. S., 652.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Pattison, 73 O. S., 305, it is held:

"4. In certifying the election of an officer the power of the deputy supervisors of elections is limited to certifying that the successful candidate has been elected and they have no power to decide upon a disputed term of office."

In reaching this conclusion the court at page 330 of the opinion, referring to the duties of canvassing officers, said:

> "It was the duty of those officers to certify the relator's election and their authority conferred by statute ends."

In this connection it will not be overlooked that there is specific statutory provision for the removal of a municipal officer to be found in sections 4670 to 4675, G. C., both inclusive. Section 4670, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "When complaint under oath is filed with the probate judge of the county in which the municipality, or the larger part thereof is situated, by any elector of the corporation, signed and approved by four other electors thereof, charging any one or more of the following: * * * or that a member of the council or an officer of the corporation is or has been interested, directly or indirectly, in the profits of a contract, job, work or service, or is or has been acting as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in work undertaken or prosecuted by the corporation, contrary to law; or that a member of council or an officer of the corporation has been guilty of misfeasance or malfeasance in office, such probate judge shall forthwith issue a citation to the parties charged in such complaint for his appearance before him within ten days from the filing thereof, * * *"

Detailed provision is made in the following sections above referred to for further proceedings, and upon determination of the sufficiency and truth of the charges the court is authorized, under the provision of section 4674, G. C., to make an order removing such officer from office.

From the absence of specific statutory authority given to the canvassing officers to pass in any way upon the qualifications of those persons who are by the election returns shown to have been elected, and a consideration of the above provisions for removal, it would seem to follow that it was hardly in contemplation of the legislature that canvassing officers would undertake to exercise such authority.

It will be observed that disqualification under the provisions of section 3808, G. C., supra, arising from its violation, is without qualification or limitation as to time and in the absence of such limitation little if any doubt can arise as to the legislative intent that such disqualification to hold an office of trust or profit in a corporation should be perpetual.

In coming to answer your inquiry specifically, I am therefore of opinion that the officers of a municipality charged by law with the duty of canvassing the returns of election of officers of such municipality, are without authority to pass on or consider the qualifications of persons shown by the returns to have been elected to office, and upon the determination of the fact of election it becomes the duty of the clerk or auditor to make and deliver the certificate of election.

I am further of opinion that when any person becomes disqualified to hold any office in a municipality under the provisions of section 3808, G. C., such disqualification is permanent.

It may be further observed, however, that notwithstanding the lack of authority in canvassing officers to pass upon the qualifications and eligibility of persons elected to office, if it clearly appear that a person elected to office is disqualified by operation of section 3808, G. C., supra, under authority of state ex rel. v. Ergy, 79 O. S., 400, and Brown v. State, 81 O. S., 556, such fact would constitute a defense against an action to compel the issuance and delivery of a certificate of election.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WHEN ANNUAL AND PARTIAL REPORT OF HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT SHOULD BE MADE—WHAT INFORMATION SHOULD BE CONTAINED IN REPORT.

The state highway commissioner should now file a partial report of the activities of the department covering the period from November 15, 1914 to June 30, 1915, as provided in section 2 of senate bill No. 158 (106 O. L., 508), which report should be made in the form and containing the information called for in sectoin 2264-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 508. Each year the state highway commissioner should file the annual report provided in section 2265-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 508.

Each year the state highway commissioner should file with the governor the report provided for in section 1229, G. C., 106 O. L., 643.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 7, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of November 30, 1915, asking my opinion, received and is as follows:

"The records of this department indicate that the annual report filed by this department covered the period from November 16, 1913, to and including November 15, 1914, this presumably under authority of section 260, of the General Code. Since then no report has been made by this department.

"We are now confronted with two seemingly inconsistent sections of the General Code, to wit: sections 1229 and 2264-1.

"I therefore respectfully request an opinion from your office as to when this department is to make an annual report to the governor.

"I would also appreciate your advising me the meaning of the following requirement of section 1229:

" 'The report shall contain * * * a detailed itemized statement of the expense of the commissioner and of the department.' "

Section 260-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 508, provides as follows:

"For all state officers, departments, commissions, boards and institutions of the state the fiscal year shall be and is hereby fixed to begin on the first day of July in each year and to end on the last day of June of the succeeding year."

Section 2264-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 508, provides as follows:

"Each elective state officer * * * * the state highway department, * * * shall make annually, at the end of each fiscal year, in triplicate, a report of the transactions and proceedings of his office or department for such fiscal year excepting however receipts and disbursements unless otherwise specifically required by law. Such report shall contain a summary of the official acts of such officer, board or commission, institution, association or corporation, and such suggestions and recommendations as may be proper. On the first day of August of each year, one of said reports shall be filed with the governor of the state, one with the secretary of state, and one shall be kept on file in the office of such officer, board, commission, institution, association or corporation."

Section 2 of senate bill No. 158, 106 O. L., 517, provides as follows:

"All officers, boards, commissions, institutions, associations, or corporations that were heretofore by law required to make an annual or semi-annual report to the governor of the state, shall on the first day of July, 1915, or as soon thereafter as practicable, make partial reports for the period covered between the date of the making of the last preceding annual or semi-annual report to the governor and June 30, 1915, in triplicate, to be filed in the manner prescribed by section 2264-1 of the General Code. This section shall cease to have any effect or operation on and after January 1, 1916."

Section 174, G. C., 106 O. L., 513, provides as follows:

"The secretary of state shall prepare from the reports filed with him or with the governor of the state, accurate statistical tables and practical and analytical information regarding the activities and proceedings of the several offices and departments of the state to be known as 'Ohio General Statistics.' "

Section 173-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 513, provides as follows:

"The secretary of state shall annually publish the 'Ohio General Statistics,' the number of copies thereof to be determined by the commissioners of public printing. The first issue of 'The General Statistics' shall be for the period from November 15, 1914, to and including June 30, 1915."

The foregoing sections are quoted in order to show the underlying purposes of section 2264-1, supra, which is to provide for the furnishing to the proper officers of the information necessary to a compilation of the publication known as "Ohio General Statistics," and thus make available to the citizens of the state information as to the activities of the various state departments.

Senate bill No. 158, of which all the foregoing sections were parts, was passed May 27, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 4, 1915, thus becoming effective September 3, 1915.

Section 1229, G. C., 106 O. L., 643, provides as follows:

"Each year not later than January first, the state highway commissioner shall make a report to the governor of the operation of the highway department. The report shall contain a statement of the number of miles, cost and character of roads or highways built under his direction; a detailed itemized statement of the expense of the commissioner and of the department, and such other information relative to the condition of the public roads of the state as the commissioner may deem proper. Not less than one thousand copies of this report shall be published by the state, five hundred of which shall be distributed by the secretary of state and the remainder under the direction of the state highway commissioner. The state auditor shall prescribe methods of accounting for the highway department, and the same when prescribed shall be followed in all respects."

The Cass highway law, of which section 1229 was a part, was also passed May 27, 1915, filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 5, 1915, and by its own terms became effective September 6, 1915.

The foregoing sections apparently contain inconsistent provisions concerning the same subject-matter, and if this be so they present a question of implied repeal. Under the well settled rule that implied repeals are not favored and that apparently inconsistent statutes should be reconciled, if possible, we now examine the above sections with this end in view and find that, whereas the group of sections, above quoted, enacted as part of senate bill No. 158, provide for a general report of the proceedings and transactions of the state highway department and a summary of the official actions of the state highway commissioner, one copy of which is to be filed with the governor and one copy in the office of the secretary of state for his information in the preparation of the "Ohio General Statistics," section 1229 provides for a report to the governor by the state highway commissioner covering specific things therein set out, to wit: "the number of miles, cost and character of highways built under his direction, a detailed itemized statement of the expense of the commissioner and of the department, and such other information relative to the condition of the public roads of the state as the commissioner may deem proper," and provides for the printing and distribution of the same. So that it requires no strain of construction to say that section 1229, supra, providing as it does for a detailed report to the governor of specified activities of the state highway department and for the printing and distribution of such report among the citizens of the state, is an entirely separate and distinct provision and calls for a report in addition to the general report provided for in senate bill No. 158, supra. Clearly this is a case for the application of the rule of reconciling apparently inconsistent statutes and the entire intention of the legislature can only be accomplished and the results desired obtained by the making of two reports, one on the first day of January of each year, under section 1229, G. C., supra, and the other on the first day of August of each year, as provided in section 2264-1, supra.

Having determined that your department should comply with the provisions of senate bill No. 158, supra, your attention is called to an opinion rendered by this department to Hon. Bert B. Buckley, state fire marshal, under date of November 30, 1915, being opinion No. 1060, a copy of which is enclosed herewith and from which you will see that your department should now file a partial report from November 15, 1914, to June 30, 1915. Neither said partial report or subsequent annual reports, made under the provisions of section 2264-1, supra, need contain any statement of receipts and disbursements of your department.

On the first day of January of each year your department should prepare and file with the governor the report called for in section 1229, supra, covering the preceding calendar year, and it is in connection with this report that your second inquiry as to expenses becomes pertinent. It is impracticable, of course, in this opinion to attempt to go into detail in this connection. It is sufficient to say that the report made under this section should contain a statement of all the expenditures of your department for the year, including under the appropriate head such of your expenditures as are properly charged to cost of construction and under the appropriate head such of them as constitute expenses.

The fact that section 1229, supra, provides no leeway in the matter of the date of making the report therein provided for, but requires the report to be made on January 1st for the preceding year, ending December 31st, suggests a practical difficulty in the way of complete compliance therewith, to wit: the lack of complete data on January 1st as to activities of the department during the closing days of the preceding year. However, when it is remembered that the report in question deals principally with the activities of the department in the building of roads, an activity in which at that season of the year field work is at a standstill, this difficulty does not appear to be insurmountable. By requiring prompt action on the part of all officials and employes of the department in reporting their activities and expenses for the month of December, which, when added to a report already compiled covering the previous months of the year, would make a complete report, it would seem that the intent and purpose of section 1229 can be fully carried out and the report filed on the day named.

Specifically answering your questions, therefore, you are advised that your department should now file a partial report as called for in section 2 of senate bill No. 158, supra, and on the first day of August of each year the annual report called for in section 2264-1, G. C., supra, in which reports it is not necessary to include receipts and disbursements; that on the first day of January of each year your department should file with the governor the report called for in section 1229, supra, in which report should be included all expenditures of the department for the year under the appropriate heads of construction and expense.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

2. To permit of the substitution of a device at variance with those prescribed in part 4, sanitation, Ohio building code, there must be an agreement between the state and municipal authorities.

3. The provisions of the Ohio building code do not extend to private dwellings and the state board of health is without power to extend the operation of the code to private dwellings by orders issued under its general powers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 8, 1915.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

> "I submit the following questions and request your opinion relative thereto:
> "1. Has the state board of health jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of the Ohio building code (sections 12600, 12600-282, General Code, both inclusive), in relation and pertaining to sanitary plumbing (sections 12600-137 to 12600-273, General Code, both inclusive), in municipalities having a building inspector or commissioner or health department, when the said building inspector or commissioner or health department fails and refuses to enforce such provisions (section 12600-281, General Code)?
> "2. The state board of health acting in conjunction with the proper municipal authorities (the building inspector or commissioner or health department), is authorized to approve and permit the substitution of another device, fixture or construction at variance with what is described in part 4, sanitation, Ohio building code, if the device, fixture or construction proposed answers to all intents and purposes the fixture, device or construction therein described.
> "Query: Has the state board of health the authority to require or permit the substitution of a device, fixture or construction in a municipality, where, because of the failure or refusal of the proper municipal authorities to act, the state board of health is called upon to enforce the provisions of the Ohio Building Code in relation and pertaining to sanitary plumbing, when, in the judgment of said board, the substitution would be of economic and sanitary advantages?

"3. Has the state board of health the authority to adopt and enforce orders and regulations of a general character for the construction, installation and inspection of plumbing and drainage in and for any class or character of buildings not included within the scope of the Ohio building code?"

Answering your first question permit me to call your attention to the provisions of section 12600-281 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the state fire marshal, or fire chief of municipalities having fire departments, to enforce all the provisions herein contained relating to fire prevention.

"It shall be the duty of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, or building inspector, or commissioner of buildings in municipalities having building departments, to enforce all the provisions herein contained for the construction, arrangement and erection of all public buildings, or parts thereof, including the sanitary condition of the same, in relation to the heating and ventilation thereof.

"It shall be the duty of the state board of health, or building inspector, or commissioner, or health departments of municipalities having building or health departments, to enforce all the provisions in this act contained, in relation and pertaining to sanitary plumbing. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any other officer or department from the obligation of enforcing all existing laws in reference to this act."

It will be noted that the duty of enforcing the provisions of the state building code devolves upon the state board of health, or building inspector, or commissioner, or health department of municipalities having building or health departments, and that there is express provision that nothing contained in the section quoted shall exempt any officer or department from the obligation of enforcing all existing laws with reference to this act. The intention of the legislature in enacting section 12600-281 was to provide for the enforcement of the building code in any and all events, and a penalty was provided for the violation of the code in section 12600-279, which is as follows:

"Whoever being the owner or having the control as an officer, or as a member of a board or committee, or otherwise, of any opera house, hall, theatre, church, schoolhouse, college, academy, seminary, infirmary, sanitorium, children's home, hospital, medical institute, asylum, memorial building, armory, assembly hall or other building for the assemblage or betterment of people in any municipal corporation, township or county in this state, violates any of the provisions of the foregoing act, or fails to conform to any of the provisions thereof, or fails to obey any order of the state fire marshal, chief inspector of workshops and factories, or building inspector, or commissioner in cities having a building inspection department, or the state board of health, in relation to the matters and things in this act contained, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars and stand committed until said fine and costs be paid, or secured to be paid, or until otherwise discharged by due process of law."

Where a duty is imposed by statute upon two or more persons for the benefit of the public, a disregard of the obligation by both on the ground that the other was charged with the fulfillment of the duty would be at the peril of both, and it would be no defense for either to say that the duty rested on the other. In the case of Smith v. Builders Exchange, 91 Wis., 360, L. R. A., 504, it was held:

> "An ordinance requiring any owner or contractor constructing any building abutting on a public sidewalk shall, after the completion of the first story, cause a roofed passageway to be built in front of the building is a reasonable one, and any owner or contractor who fails to do so is liable for an injury to one passing on the sidewalk."

The court, in the opinion handed down in this case, says:

> "This ordinance was passed by the common council before the erection of this building was begun, and provides in substance that 'any owner or contractor who shall hereafter build or cause to be built' any building abutting on a public sidewalk shall, after the completion of the first story, cause a roofed passageway to be built in front of the building, upon the sidewalk, under pain of a certain fine or imprisonment * * *. This ordinance, we think, is entirely reasonable, and it was therefore law to all intents and purposes, and it required both the owner and contractor to construct a covered way over the sidewalk where this accident happened * * *."

With respect to your first question, therefore, entertaining a view that a municipality having a building inspector or health department, the duty of enforcing the provisions is conferred concurrently on the state board of health and the building inspector or health department of such municipality, I am of the opinion that when such building inspector or municipal health department refuses or fails to enforce such provision, the power and duty of enforcing the same rests on the state board of health.

Referring to your second question, which relates to the substitution of another device, fixture or construction at variance with what is described in part 4, sanitation, Ohio building code, attention is directed to the provisions of section 12600-277 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit the council of municipalities from making further and additional regulations, not in conflict with any of the provisions of this act contained, nor shall the provisions of this act be construed to modify or repeal any portions of any building code adopted by a municipal corporation and now in force which are not in direct conflict with the provisions of this act. Where the use of any other fixture, device or construction is desired at variance with what is described in this statute, plans, specifications and details shall be furnished to the proper state and municipal authorities mentioned in section 1 (G. C., 12600-281), for examination and approval, and if required actual tests shall be made to the complete satisfaction of said state and municipal authorities that the fixture, device or construction proposed answers to all intents and purposes the fixture, device or construction hereafter described in this statute, instead of actual tests satisfactory evidence of such tests may be presented for approval with full particulars of the results and containing the names of witnesses of said tests."

The general assembly in enacting the provisions of the law above quoted doubtless had in mind the fact that from time to time changes in the mode of building brought about through the experience of persons skilled in that line of endeavor, also the possibilities of improvements in the way of devices, and therefore in order that every advantage might be taken of improvements and substitutes in the way of devices that would serve better to carry out the purpose for which they were designed than those described in the various statutes, provided for such substitution when in accordance with the views of the state board of health acting through its proper officers and municipalities affected, it was mutually agreed that when the substitution not at variance with the provisions of the statutes would be best for economic reasons, and that such substitution would be allowed when a device is presented as a substitute for one already provided for, it is necessary that the plans, specifications and details shall be furnished to the proper state and municipal authorities for examination and approval, and if such state and municipal authorities can be satisfied without an actual test of the device that it is proper to substitute the same and an agreement is entered into between the state and the municipal authorities then the substitution may be made. Upon the failure of either party to agree to the substitution, it naturally follows that the original provision of the law must prevail and the substitution will not be allowed.

Your third enquiry is directed to the authority and power of your board to adopt and enforce orders and regulations of a general character for the construction, installation and inspection of plumbing and drainage in and for buildings not included within the scope of the Ohio building code.

The immediate purpose of this enquiry is to determine your authority in this regard as to private dwellings, residences and homes. While you impliedly admit in your question that buildings of this character are not included within the provision of said building code, yet a brief reference to the same may be had if for no purpose other than to emphasize the fact that the legislature in its general grant of powers to the state board did not contemplate that such grant may be so construed as to include the matter of the plumbing and drainage of private residences and homes.

The state building code is found in sections 12600-1 of the General Code, to section 12600-283 of the General Code, inclusive. It was enacted in 1911 and is found in 102 O. L., 586. In the preamble as it appears on page 588 thereof, it is declared that the classification of the various buildings covered by the code will be found under the following titles:

Title 1—Theatres and assembly halls.
Title 2—Churches.
Title 3—School buildings.
Title 4—Asylums, hospitals and homes.
Title 5—Hotels, lodging houses, apartments and tenement houses.
Title 6—Club and lodging buildings.
Title 7—Workshops, factories and mercantile establishments.

The titles as above designated were not enacted in the law which follows. An inspection of the code discloses that titles 1 and 3 were enacted, but titles 2, 4, 5, 6 and 7 were omitted. However, had the classification as made been incorporated in the law as enacted, it is manifest that such classification did not include, nor was it intended to include, private residences and the homes of individual owners. The term "homes" as used in the classification made under title 4 has no reference to the private home of an individual owner designed only for private habitation. Under the most elementary rules of statutory construction it must be held that the term "homes" as used in said classification refers to homes of the character of children's homes, or the homes owned, operated and maintained by various associations and societies, and are therefore in a certain sense public buildings, and used in that sense in connection with the two terms which precede it under the same title, viz: asylums and hospitals.

This distinction is further emphasized by the penal sections of the building code which are intended to enforce its provisions, and which by their express terms are confined to the prosecution of such persons who own, or have control of, buildings of a public character. I refer in this connection especially to section 12600-279, which provides as follows:

> "Whoever being the owner or having the control as an officer, or as a member of a board or committee, or otherwise, of any opera house, hall, theatre, church, school house, college, academy, seminary, infirmary, sanitorium, children's home, hospital, medical institute, asylum, memorial building, armory, assembly hall or other building for the assemblage or betterment of people in any municipal corporation, township or county in this state, violates any of the provisions of the foregoing act * * * shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined * *."

In this section we have the conclusive evidence that the provisions of the building code which preceded it, and which include in part 4 thereof the matter of sanitary plumbing, were intended to apply only to public buildings. It is hardly probable that had the legislature in the enactment of this code intended to make it apply to private homes it would have left the law incapable of enforcement against the owners of such homes. It may be claimed, however, that some of the provisions of part 4 of this code, which cover the matter of sanitary plumbing, may apply to private homes. Conceding this to be true, it is also manifest that such provisions at the same time apply fully and completely to such public buildings as children's homes, the homes of various associations and secret societies, asylums, hospitals and other public buildings of that character. It follows therefore, that as indicated by your enquiry, the provisions of the state building code do not apply to private homes.

Considering, now, the question whether under the general powers of your board, as delegated to it by the legislature, it has authority to adopt and enforce the orders and regulations in question, we must refer to the provisions of section 1237 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of health has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases the necessary expenses incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

Before discussing the provisions of this section in detail, it must be noted that the matter of plumbing in private dwellings is now under the control and supervision of local boards of health by direct grant of power in that regard under the provisions of sections 4413, 4420 and 4421 of the General Code. Without quoting the provisions of said sections in full, it is sufficient to say that they confer full and ample authority upon local boards of health to regulate plumbing and drains and all matters pertaining thereto. That this authority is now being exercised by local boards of health is observed by you in your correspondence when you call attention to the fact that there are now in force in this state thirty different municipal plumbing ordinances in that many different cities.

Speaking now of the general plan observed by legislatures in their distribution of power to state and local boards, Parker and Worthington on public health, in section 73, observe:

> "The statutory provisions defining the powers and duties of state boards vary in the different states, but there is an apparent uniformity in the method of their organization and the purpose they are designed to subserve. As a rule the state boards of health are not invested with any enlarged executive duties, these being relegated usually to local boards, and their duties are chiefly inquisitorial and advisory, both in relation to the government and the local boards. They have cognizance of all matters touching the interests of the health and lives of the citizens of the state, and directed to make a special study of vital statistics, the cause of disease, and especially of epidemics, the sources of mortality and the effects of localities, employments and their conditions upon the public health. They frequently have general supervision of the state system of registration of births, marriages and deaths, and sometimes have charge of all matters pertaining to quarantine, with authority to make and enforce quarantine regulations."

An analysis of section 1237, supra, indicates that the power therein delegated to your board is confined to the matters noted in the foregoing observations and is in harmony therewith. The specific subjects named in said section, over which your board is given direct control, are matters of quarantine, the prevention of the spread of contagious or infectious diseases and the receipt and conveyance of the remains of deceased persons. There is further a grant of authority as to such "other sanitary matters" as the board may deem best to control by a general rule. While the matter of plumbing may under certain circumstances become a sanitary matter, especially in cities, yet in view of the fact that the legislature has directly and expressly delegated this matter to local boards under the provisions of the sections hereinbefore noted, it is evident by reason of this fact that it was not the purpose of the legislature to include plumbing in the term "sanitary matters" as used aforesaid. To so hold would be to say that the legislature had conferred authority upon two separate bodies to do the same thing, when the general purpose and policy of the law, as evidenced by its other provisions relating to such bodies, shows that one is to be considered subordinate to and under the authority of the other. Again, it must be noted that by the provisions of said section 1237, supra, the state board is given full authority to supervise the work of local boards, and when the latter fail to act the state board may make and enforce its own orders.

In consideration of these various provisions and their consequent conditions, I am of the opinion that under the general powers delegated by said section 1237, supra, the state board has no power to adopt and enforce orders and regulations for the construction, installation and inspection of plumbing and drainage in private homes and residences throughout the state of Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TREASURER OF STATE—NOT AUTHORIZED TO MAKE REDUCTION IN AMOUNT CERTIFIED TO HIM FOR COLLECTION—MAY ACCEPT FROM INSURANCE COMPANIES PAYMENT OF AMOUNT OF TAX UNDER EITHER SECTIONS 5433 OR 841, G. C.—FIRE MARSHAL TAX—REFUSAL OF PAYMENT.

The treasurer of state is not authorized to make any reduction in or to accept other than the exact amount certified to him for collection by the auditor of state under sections 5433 and 841, G. C. He may, however, accept from insurance companies payment of the amount of the tax assessed under either of said sections, even though payment of the tax assessed under the other section be refused.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 4th, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The superintendent of insurance of Ohio certified to this department for collection moneys due the state, under section 5433 of the General Code, and section 841. This certification has been in bulk, or in other words, the controlling account as certified shows as follows:
> " 'State of Ohio,
> " 'INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,
> " 'Statement of Account.
>
> " 'COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1915.
> " 'Section 5433, G. C., tax for year 1914, 2.5% of $41,043.19__ $1,026.08
> " 'Section 841, G. C., tax for year 1914, .005% of $64,339.51____ 321.70
> " 'EQUITABLE FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.,
> " 'Providence, R. I.'

"The fire insurance companies are contending that the amount of tax certified against them under section 841 is illegal, and are tendering their checks in payment of the 2½%, but in some instances are refusing to pay the fire marshal tax, and in other instances are doing their own computation and tendering their checks in payment therefor.

"As treasurer, I contend that I have no right to receive anything against this account except what is charged against me. The insurance companies are willing to pay the 2½%, but are objecting very seriously to paying the other tax. I would like to have your decision as to whether the treasurer of state could legally receive the 2½% tax, and refuse payment on the fire marshal tax unless the full amount was offered pending an adjustment of the controversy. Your early opinion will enable us to get considerable money in the state treasury."

Section 5433 of the General Code, as worded both prior to and since its amendment, 106 O. L., 500, authorizes a tax against every insurance company incorporated by authority of another state or government of 2½% upon the balance of the gross amount of premiums received during the preceding calendar year, after deducting return premiums and considerations received for reinsurance.

Section 841 of the General Code, referred to in your letter, and known as the "Fire marshal tax," prior to its amendment by the last general assembly, authorized a tax against fire insurance companies doing business in this state of one-half of one per cent. upon the gross premium receipts of all the business transacted in the state during the preceding year as shown by its annual report. This section was twice amended at the last session of the general assembly (106 O. L., pages 241 and 500), so that now, in determining the amount of gross premium receipts upon which such tax is computed, a deduction must be made of returned premiums and considerations paid for reinsurance.

Under section 24-1 of the General Code (106 O. L., 500), it is the duty of the superintendent of insurance to certify the amount of both these taxes, viz.: those charged under sections 5433 and 841 of the General Code, to the auditor of state,

"* * * upon triplicate forms prescribed by such auditor, and at such time or times as he may prescribe, including in such certificate such matters and information as he may direct. Within five days next following the receipt by the auditor of state of such certification, * * * the auditor of state shall transmit to the treasurer of state for collection a duplicate of the charges so certified or determined. The treasurer of state shall immediately proceed to collect the charges upon such duplicate, and shall forthwith notify the person, co-partnership, or corporation * * * so charged upon such duplicate of the amount thereof, by mail, to the address of such person, co-partnership or corporation * * *."

Section 24-2 of the General Code (106 O. L., 500), which provides further as to the duties of the treasurer of state in the collection of such taxes is, in part, as follows:

"Within thirty days after the receipt of such duplicate by the treasurer of state, he shall return the same to the auditor of state. Said auditor shall immediately transmit to the attorney general such duplicate for collection of all delinquent charges therein, and, at the same time, shall certify a copy thereof with all credits and interest thereon to the officer, board or commission originally certifying the same. * * * The attorney general, in addition to the other powers reposed in him, shall have such further powers to enforce payment as are given by law to officers, boards or commissions originally certifying such charges * * *."

It is apparent from the language above quoted from sections 24-1 and 24-2 of the General Code, that the sole duty of the treasurer of state is to collect the taxes certified to him upon the duplicate furnished him by the auditor of state. No authority is conferred upon the treasurer of state to effect any compromise, make any reduction, or to accept other than the exact amount certified to him for collection under said sections 5433 and 841 of the General Code. His duty in the matter is purely ministerial.

Since the taxes provided for in said sections 5433 and 841 of the General Code are separate and distinct taxes, authorized by different acts of the legislature, and not in any way related, it follows that the treasurer of state may accept payment of the tax levied under either of said sections from a company even though it refuses to pay the tax assessed under the other section. It is made his further duty after the expiration of thirty days from the receipt of such duplicate from the auditor of state, to return the same to the auditor. Thereupon it becomes the immediate duty of the auditor of state to transmit such duplicate for collection of delinquent charges to the attorney general.

Without discussing or considering whether or not the particular amount of tax assessed against any company under authority of section 5433 or section 841 of the General Code has been properly computed and is the correct amount, it is my opinion that you may accept payment from any company of the amount charged against it under either section 5433 or section 841 of the General Code, but that you are not authorized to make a reduction in the amount of tax charged, or to accept less than the amount which has been certified to you for collection under either of said sections. If any company offers to pay the tax certified under section 5433 of the General Code and refuses to pay the amount certified under section 841 of the General Code, or vice versa, it is your duty to accept the certified amount of either of said taxes and after the expiration of thirty days from the receipt of such duplicate from the auditor of state, it will be your duty to return said duplicate to him showing the amount paid and the amount unpaid. The auditor of state will then within the time prescribed by law certify the duplicate to the attorney general for collection of any unpaid tax, at which time the correctness of any disputed charge can be determined.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CORPORATION ORGANIZED TO ACT AS AN AGENT OF THE GENERAL INSURANCE, SURETY AND FIDELITY BOND BUSINESS IS NOT AN INSURANCE COMPANY—THE DAVIS AND FARLEY COMPANY —ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION NEED NOT BE APPROVED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL.

A corporation organized for the purpose of acting as an agent of the general insurance, surety and fidelity bond business and to do all things necessary and incidental thereto is not an insurance company within the meaning of section 9341, G. C., and the approval of its proposed articles of incorporation by the attorney general is not necessary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 6th, with enclosures, in which you refer to me for examination and approval the proposed articles of incorporation of The Davis and Farley Company. The purpose clause stated in the proposed articles of incorporation is as follows:

> "Said company is formed for the purpose of acting as an agent of the general insurance, surety and fidelity bond business and doing all things necessary and incidental thereto."

I assume that these articles were referred to me under the supposition that the proposed corporation is an insurance company, and that the approval of its articles by the attorney general is necessary under the provisions of section 9341 of the General Code. The purpose clause stated, however, does not confer authority to make insurance contracts but only to act in the capacity of an agent. The company proposed, therefore, in my opinion, is not an insurance company, and the approval of the attorney general is not necessary.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE—MEMBER OF BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR SAME TOWNSHIP.

The office of township trustee and member of the board of education in and for the same township are incompatible in that they may be, and frequently are, adverse in the matter of the levying and adjustment of tax rates as provided by sections 5649-3*a*, 5649-3*b*, as amended 106 O. L., 180, and 5649-3*c*, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 2, 1915, as follows:

> "I would like to have your opinion on this question. At our recent election a party was elected as township trustee and at the same time was holding office as a member of the board of education, the term of which office will not expire for two years. The township wherein he is to certify as trustee is the same jurisdiction as the township in which he is now serving as a member of the board of education.

Are the two offices incompatible? I note the respective duties of the township trustee and a member of the board of education. From the opinions rendered by former Attorney General Hogan concerning the duties of the respective officers, my opinion is they are not incompatible, but because of the dates and specific times of their meeting they might become incompatible in the manner of conducting the business of the two boards. I would like to have your opinion."

The office of township trustee and member of the board of education in and for the same township are incompatible in that they may be, and frequently are, adverse in the matter of the levying and adjustment of tax rates as provided in sections 5649-3a, 5649-3b, as amended 106 O. L., 180, and 5649-3c of the General Code.

The first named section provides, that on or before the first Monday in June of each year, the trustees of each township, and each board of education, and certain other taxing authorities shall submit, or cause to be submitted to the county auditor, an annual budget setting forth an estimate stating the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year, and for each month thereof. It further provides the matters that such budgets shall specifically set forth and the limits of the rate to be fixed by each of the taxing authorities named in said statute.

Section 5649-3b, as amended as aforesaid, provides for a board known as the budget commissioners, to be composed of the county auditor, the county treasurer and the prosecuting attorney, for the purpose of adjusting the rates of taxation and fixing the amount of taxes to be levied in each county. Said section further provides for the meeting of said board and prescribes their duties and compensation, and makes certain other provisions not necessary to enumerate here.

Section 5649-3c requires the county auditor to lay before the budget commissioners aforesaid the annual budgets submitted under the provisions of the section first quoted and provides that said budget commissioners shall examine such budgets. It provides further that if the budget commissioners find the total amount of taxes raised in each taxing district does not exceed the amount authorized by law to be raised therein, that fact shall be certified to the county auditor. It then provides as follows:

"If such total is found to exceed such authorized amount in any township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district in the county, the budget commissioners shall adjust the various amounts to be raised so that the total amount thereof shall not exceed in any taxing district the sum authorized to be levied therein. In making such adjustment the budget commissioners may revise and change the annual estimates contained in such budgets, and may reduce any or all the items in any such budget, or any item therein. The budget commissioners shall reduce the estimates contained in any or all such budgets by such amount or amounts as will bring the total for each township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district within the limits provided by law."

It is apparent without further discussion, that under the provisions of the section last quoted, the budget commissioners may be compelled to make changes in the original estimates made and contained in the budgets submitted by township trustees and boards of education. In the event this becomes necessary, which is very frequently the case, the members of said two taxing authorities, viz., township trustees and board of education, are called before the budget commissioners for conference to determine what changes shall be made in the estimates submitted by them. This necessarily involves the consideration by the budget commissioners of the merits of the respective claims made by the township trustees and board of education. Under such circumstances the same individual may not be permitted to represent such adverse interests.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that one individual cannot hold contemporaneously both the office of township trustee and of member of the board of education in and for the same township, because the same are incompatible, at least in the respect hereinbefore named.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—SECTION 1841, G. C., AMENDED TWICE AT SAME SESSION OF LEGISLATURE—WHICH SECTION NOW IN EFFECT.

Section 1841, G. C., was amended by house bill No. 249, 106 O. L., 114, which became effective July 2, 1915.

Said section was again amended by house bill No. 154, 106 O. L., 558, which became effective September 4, 1915, and said section as amended by said house bill No. 249 was thereby repealed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary Board of State Charities.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of December 4, 1915, asking for my opinion, received, and is as follows:

> "A few days ago the state printing commission granted this board authority to print a special bulletin containing the laws relating to benevolent and correctional institutions and kindred subjects.
> "In preparation of copy for this bulletin I find that the general assembly at its recent session made two radical amendments to section 1841. By reference to vol. 106, Ohio Laws, you will find on page 114, house bill 249, which was filed in the office of the secretary of state on April 5. On page 558 will be found house bill 154, which was filed on June 5. These amendments were prepared by different persons with a distinct purpose, which is considerably different, as will be found by noting the particular amendments.
> "We desire to ascertain what in your opinion is the correct reading of section 1841, so that when our bulletin is published it will contain what may be considered the current law."

House bill 249 (106 O. L., 114) was passed April 1, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state April 5, 1915, and provides as follows:

> "Section 1. That section 1841 of the General Code (102 O. L., 211) be amended to read as follows:
> "Section 1841. The board shall have power to regulate the admission and discharge of the pupils and inmates in said several institutions, as provided by law, and the powers and duties of the board of state charities under sections 1819, 1820, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1952 and 1956 of the General Code shall cease and thereafter devolve on the board of administration alone from and after August 15, 1911.

"Upon the admission of any person who has been committed to any state institution under its control there shall be included with the papers committing such person, and signed by the authority executing such commitment, such information relative to the person so to be committed as may be required by said board. The board shall provide blank forms for such information, and the same when properly filled in and signed and delivered as herein provided shall be filed under the direction of the board for statistical and other proper purposes.

"Section 2. That said original section 1841 of the General Code be, and the same is hereby repealed."

The above amendment of section 1841 therefore became effective July 2, 1915, and from and after that date was the only section 1841 in existence.

House bill 154 (106 O. L., 558) was passed May 27, 1915, and was filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, and provides as follows:

"Section 1. That sections 1841 and 2068 of the General Code be amended, and section 1815 be supplemented to read as follows:

"Section 1841. The board shall have power to regulate the admission and discharge of the pupils and inmates in said several institutions, as provided by law. Provided, that subject to the approval of the Ohio board of administration the admission and discharge of patients in the Ohio state sanatorium shall be governed by rules and regulations adopted by the state board of health.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Section 2. That said original sections 1841, 2067 and 2068 of the General Code are hereby repealed."

The repealing clause of this bill therefore became effective September 4, 1915, and operated to repeal section 1841 of the General Code. There being but one section 1841 upon which it could operate, it follows that said section as amended by house bill 249, supra, was thereby repealed, and section 1841 as it appears in house bill 154, supra, is now in full force and effect.

Specifically answering your question, therefore, the correct reading of section 1841 is that found in house bill 154, supra, and the original section as it appeared in the General Code and the amendment thereof by house bill 249 have been repealed.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—QUALIFICATIONS OF APPLICANTS FOR LICENSE—NEED NOT BE RESIDENT OF THIS STATE—RESIDENT OF ANOTHER STATE MUST TAKE EXAMINATION.

The state board of embalming examiners may not require an applicant for a license as an embalmer to be a resident of this state, nor may they issue such license to a resident of another state without an examination as required by the laws of this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

The Ohio State Board of Embalming Examiners, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of December 6th, submitting the following inquiries:

> "1. May the state board of embalming examiners provide as a condition to an applicant taking an examination that he shall be a resident of this state at the time of taking such examination?
> "2. May this board issue an embalmer's license, without examination, to a resident of another state who has been duly licensed in such other state?"

The authority and duties imposed by law upon the state board of embalming examiners are administrative. They must administer the law as they find it, and may not, therefore, change, modify or add to it any conditions or provisions not contained therein.

The only qualifications required by the statute law of this state of an applicant for a license as an embalmer are that he shall possess a good moral character and shall pass a satisfactory examination in the subjects specified in section 1341, G. C., which subjects it is not necessary here to enumerate. There are no provisions of law requiring an applicant to be a resident of this state, and your board, therefore, may not add such condition to the qualifications provided by law.

I hold that your board is without authority of law to require an applicant for a license as an embalmer to be a resident of this state. For the same reasons heretofore noted, I must also hold that when an applicant has been duly licensed in another state of which he is a resident your board is not authorized to issue a license to such applicant without an examination as provided by the laws of this state. No provisions are made by law authorizing the granting of a license except upon the condition that the applicant pass a satisfactory examination as heretofore specified. Your board may not waive such requirements.

In conclusion I therefore advise that both of your inquiries must be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

NEW COURT HOUSE—BUILDING COMMISSIONS—HAVE AUTHORITY TO DETERMINE NECESSITY OF AN INSPECTION OF STRUCTURAL WORK FOR SAID NEW BUILDING—HOW INSPECTION MAY BE AUTHORIZED—CIVIL SERVICE.

Building commissions have authority, under section 2338, G. C., and related sections, to determine the necessity of an inspection of the structural work of a court house which is being constructed under its supervision and may provide for such inspection in any manner authorized by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of October 27, 1915, as follows:

"I am in receipt of a letter from the new court house building commission of Hamilton county, Ohio, stating that the commission requests me to ask the attorney general of Ohio for an opinion as to whether the civil service laws apply to inspectors of steel and riveting.

"I enclose herewith copy of correspondence transmitted with the letter, which will disclose the field of the inquiry, and respectfully request your opinion as to whether the civil service law applies, or whether this work may be contracted out to such an institution as The Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory.

"The provisions of the specifications referred to are paragraphs 287 and 288, reading as follows:

" 'STEEL AND IRON WORK.
" 'INSPECTION.

" '287. The mill and shop inspection of all structural work shall be done by an expert inspector or inspecting company, to be selected and named by the architects; the entire cost of such inspection to be paid by the contractor, and for which he shall allow in his proposal the sum of 50 cents per ton.

" '255. Ample facilities, including all necessary labor, shall at all times be furnished the duly authorized inspector at the mill and shops for inspection of materials, and the finished pieces, except surfaces that are in contact after assembling, must not in any case be painted or oiled before being accepted at the shop.'

"The inspection now desired is inspection on the building site of the construction of the steel work and riveting of the parts. You will note that this is not included in the specifications. My own notion of the matter is that inspection of the mechanical work of assembling the structure is a matter for the commission and should not be let as an extra to the contractor, and that it differs from shop inspection, which of necessity must be made in various parts of the country, and the results reported by the contractor as provided in the specifications.

"Being of opinion that such inspection is a matter for the commission, the question arises as to the application of the civil service laws and the commission desire your opinion on this subject."

It appears from your letter that the inspection in question is not covered by the specifications or contract under which your new court house is being built. It seems, therefore, that it has been determined upon by the building commission, as a matter of precaution, to safeguard a proper construction of certain parts of said building. It is clear that such action by the commission is within its authority and power.

Section 2338, G. C., provides among other things, that:

> "Until the building is completed and accepted by the building commission, it may determine all questions connected therewith, and shall be governed by the provisions of this chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county."

This provision of the law vests in the commission full authority, first, to determine the necessity of an inspection and, secondly, to provide for it in any manner authorized by law.

It is equally clear, that such inspection is a matter that comes within the duties that may be imposed upon employes of said commission, as contemplated by section 2339, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "The commission may employ architects, superintendents and other necessary employes during such construction and fix their compensation and bond."

While this method may be adopted, I am not prepared to say that it may be regarded as exclusive; upon the contrary, I incline to the opinion that in view of the wide discretion and power vested in said commission by the provisions of sections 2338 and 2339, aforesaid, it may, in the exercise of its discretion, make a contract for such inspection with a person or company competent to do such work.

However, should the commission determine to make this inspection through its own employes, the persons so employed are within the civil service of the county as defined in paragraph 1 of section 486-1, 106 Ohio Laws, 400. See opinion of this department to your office under date of August 24, 1915.

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that the inspection in question may be made by the building commission through the agency of its own employes, or it may be made by an independent person or company under contract therefor, and, if made by its own employes, they are within the civil service of the county as defined by section 486-1, supra. I agree with you that such inspection may not be let to the contractor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY TREASURER—FUNDS WITHDRAWN FROM INACTIVE AND PLACED IN ACTIVE DEPOSITARY—PURPOSE, PAYMENT OF BONDED INDEBTEDNESS DUE OR TO BECOME DUE—PROVISION OF SECTION 2722, G. C., COMPLIED WITH—SEE OPINION No. 1027, NOVEMBER 16, 1915.

When large amounts of money are withdrawn from an inactive and placed in an active depositary of a county in anticipation of the payment of the interest and principal of its funded indebtedness due and to become due, observance must be had of the provisions of section 2722, G. C., requiring a bond equal to the amount of money that may be deposited in a depositary at any one time.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received, through the courtesy of Hon. Frederick W. Green, assistant prosecuting attorney, a copy of an opinion rendered by you upon certain matters relative to the manner of the payment of the principal and interest of the funded indebtedness of your county.

The facts upon which your opinion is predicated are so radically different from the facts on which my opinion No. 1027 was rendered, sometime since, that I am wholly unable to understand the discrepancy.

I have no criticism to make of your conclusions based upon the facts as stated in your opinion. If it is true that no funds were withdrawn from any county depositary and thereafter placed to the individual credit of the county treasurer, in a bank of his own choosing, and subject to his individual check, the main subject of criticism in the conduct of these matters is eliminated. Permit me, however, to suggest that when funds are withdrawn from an inactive and placed in an active depositary due observance must be had of the provisions of section 2722, G. C., requiring a bond equal to the amount of money which may be deposited therein at any one time. It must also be remembered in this connection that no bank or trust company may receive a larger deposit than one million dollars (section 2715, G. C.), nor more than five hundred thousand dollars if said depositary is within the class named in section 744-12, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 505.

Referring now to your construction of sections 2609, 2614 and 2441, G. C., I wish simply to note that I considered said sections merely in the light of the question submitted, that being whether or not there was any conflict in their various provisions. While it may be held that the last named section applies only to the payment of such bonds as may be issued under the provisions of section 2434, G. C., and therefore may not include other bonds, as for instance road bonds, yet it must be remembered that said section 2441 in its present form received the approval of the legislature again in 1910 when the present general code was adopted. I was also informed by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices that for many years it has been and is now followed in the various counties of the state as a statute of general application, which fact it must be assumed was known by the legislature and its last adoption made in the light of this knowledge.

In view of these facts I would now hesitate to give it such limited application as you suggest. However, I regard these matters as not material, they refer only to the manner of payment. If the funds in question are kept in a depositary until required for the payment either of the principal or interest of the funded debt of your county, and are protected by bond as required by section 2722, supra, I know of no just cause for criticism or complaint.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

REGISTRAR OF VITAL STATISTICS—LOCAL REGISTRAR WHEN REMOVED INELIGIBLE TO REAPPOINTMENT—IN COMPETITIVE CLASSIFIED SERVICE OF THE CIVIL SERVICE—CITY BOARD OF HEALTH MAY BE COMPELLED BY MANDAMUS TO FILL SUCH VACANCY.

A local registrar who has been removed in accordance with section 203, G. C., is ineligible to reappointment under the facts stated in this opinion.

Local registrars are in the competitive classified service of the state and may be appointed only in accordance with the civil service law.

A city board of health may be compelled by mandamus to fill a vacancy in the office of local registrar in a city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 9, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion under date of November 13, 1915, is as follows:

> "Under section 203, General Code of Ohio, Charles Griffith, local registrar, Bucyrus, Ohio, district, was removed on the 26th day of July, 1915, by the secretary of state for failing to efficiently discharge the duties of his office in this, to wit:
> " 'Failing to make reports of births and deaths to the state registrar of vital statistics.'
> "Under section 201, General Code, the board of health of Bucyrus, Ohio, was requested by the secretary of state to appoint a successor to the aforesaid Charles Griffith. Said board of health failed and refused to appoint a successor to the aforesaid Charles Griffith until the 20th day of October, 1915, according to a report from W. S. Hite, president of the aforesaid board, which communication reads as follows:
> " 'BUCYRUS, OHIO, October 22, 1915.
> " 'HON. M. W. BLAND,
>
> " 'State Registrar, Columbus, Ohio.
> " 'DEAR SIR:—Upon my arrival home from Columbus, Wednesday evening, I called a special meeting of the board of health for the purpose of appointing a local registrar of vital statistics for the city of Bucyrus. The board met Thursday evening, with all members present. Mr. Charles Griffith, upon his request, was given a hearing. Mr. Griffith stated that he was first appointed to the position of local registrar in 1908. Was again appointed to the same office on January 1, 1910, by Carmi A. Thompson, then secretary of state. He claims that he had no knowledge of the change of law until you and Mr. Pemberton visited him last July, and presumed that the appointment held good under the secretary of state. Now that appointment is in the hands of the board of health. Mr. Griffith made application to appointment for the position and the board unanimously elected him.'
> "Please advise as to the proper procedure for the removal of Charles Griffith as local registrar in the Bucyrus, Ohio, district, and the selection of some one who will efficiently discharge the duties of the said office."

Section 201, G. C., to which you refer, provides with reference to local registrars in cities as follows:

"* * * in cities the city board of health shall appoint a local registrar of vital statistics * * *."

Section 203, G. C., provides in part as follows:

"A local or sub-registrar who fails to efficiently discharge the duties of his office shall be forthwith removed from office by the secretary of state * * *."

While there is no specific statutory authority for the filling of vacancies in the office of local registrar in cities, as stated in opinion No. 889, rendered to you under date of October 5, 1915, it seems clearly to have been the legislative intent that there should be at all times proper persons qualified and authorized to perform the duties of such office in cities and specific provision is made for their appointment by the city board of health. Of course, any removal of a local registrar of a city creates a vacanacy in that office and as a result thereof it becomes the plain duty of the board of health to appoint a proper, qualified elector to fill such vacancy.

In view of this conclusion, two questions then arise under the statement of facts set forth by you.

(1) Has such appointment been made?

(2) If not, what is the remedy?

It will be noted that a local registrar may be removed for inefficient discharge of the duties under authority of section 203, G. C., and it was for that cause the registrar in question was so removed.

In providing for the removal of such registrars, the legislature most certainly never contemplated the authorization of the idle performance of the removal of a registrar for the cause specified by the secretary of state, and his immediate reappointment to the same position. It cannot be conceived that such a course of procedure would tend to effect efficiency of service, the manifest purpose sought in the removal. From these considerations I am inclined to the view that a local registrar who has been removed in accordance with the provisions of section 203, G. C., is disqualified thereby, and therefore ineligible to reappointment, under the facts stated by you.

It appears, however, that the appointment made on October 20, 1915, was not made from an eligible list certified by the civil service commission under the civil service law. While a local registrar of a city is removable by the secretary of state, and is paid from the county treasury, and may be appointed only by the city board of health, and his jurisdiction and authority is confined to the city in which he is appointed, I am inclined to the view that such officer performs only state functions and, for the purpose of the present consideration, such local registrar is an officer in the employ of the state.

The position of local registrar is not specifically included in the unclassified service as defined by division (a) of section 486-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 404, and is therefore in the competitive classified service as defined by division (b) of said section.

Section 486-13, G. C., 106 O. L., 408, provides in part as follows:

"Appointments to all positions in the classified service, as herein defined, that are not filled by promotion, transfer or reduction, as provided for in this act and the rules of the commission prescribed thereunder, shall be made only from those persons whose names are certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of this act, and no employment, except as provided in this act, shall be otherwise given in the classified service of this state or any political subdivision thereof."

Provision is made in section 486-14, G. C., 106 O. L., 409, for temporary and exceptional appointments. These, however, may not be made except within conditions precedent therein prescribed, which are not shown in your inquiry to have been met. On the contrary, it appears that the action of the board referred to was intended as a permanent employment and without regard to the civil service law.

For the reasons above suggested, the action of the city board of health was wholly unauthorized and of no effect. I am therefore of opinion that there exists a vacancy in the office or position of local registrar in the city of Bucyrus and it is the duty of the city board of health to appoint an eligible elector to fill the same in the manner provided by law, which is enforceable by mandamus.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO GENERAL STATISTICS—VOLUME I SHOULD COVER PERIOD FROM NOVEMBER 15, 1914, TO JUNE 30, 1915—SECRETARY OF STATE.

The first issue of "Ohio General Statistics" should cover the period from November 15, 1914, to June 30, 1915, and should be published as soon as the required information is available, and it would not be proper to hold same and consolidate it with the issue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of December 7, 1915, asking my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "Under amended senate bill No. 158, passed May 27, 1915, approved June 3, 1915, filed in the office of the secretary of state June 4, 1915, shall the secretary of state, under section 173-1 of said act, publish the general statistics for the period from November 15, 1914, to and including June 30, 1915 or may said general statistics be compiled from the 15th day of November, 1914, to the 30th day of June, 1916, in one volume?"

Section 173-1 of the General Code, 106 Ohio Laws, 513, provides as follows:

> "The secretary of state shall annually publish the "Ohio General Statistics," the number of copies thereof to be determined by the commissioners of public printing. The first issue of 'The General Statistics' shall be for the period from November 15, 1914, to and including June 30, 1915."

While it would be more economical to consolidate the general statistics for the period from November 15, 1914, to June 30, 1915, with the volume for the year ending June 30, 1916, it was clearly the intention of the general assembly, when they provided that the publication should be made annually and defined what the first issue should contain, that a volume of the "Ohio General Statistics" should be published in the year 1915 and annually thereafter.

I am therefore of the opinion that it would not be proper for the first issue of the "Ohio General Statistics" to be held until June 30, 1916, and consolidated with the publication for the year ending on that date, but that the first issue should be published as soon as the information is available and the volume can be prepared.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MOTHERS' PENSION LAW—WHEN APPLICANT RETURNS FROM A TWO YEARS' RESIDENCE IN SISTER STATE, HAVING RESIDED IN THIS STATE THE GREATER PART OF HER LIFE, SHE IS ELIGIBLE FOR PENSION.

A mother of dependent children, returning to Seneca county, Ohio, where she formerly resided for the greater part of her life, after an absence of several years, in a sister state, is eligible to file application for mothers' pension under the provisions of section 1683-2, G. C., and under the facts presented an award of such pension by the juvenile court judge would not be regarded as an abuse of discretion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. GEORGE M. HOKE, Probate Judge, Seneca County, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter asking for an opinion on the mothers' pension law, which letter is as follows:

> "The following are the facts in reference to the residence of a mother who is poor, the mother of several children of school age not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, and whose husband is dead.
> "She always resided in this county until about two and a half years ago. She and her husband and family then moved to another county in this state where they resided for about one year. They then moved to Michigan where they resided for a little more than a year when her husband died. She and the children then moved back to this county where they could get some help from her relatives. They have been back here about five months. Is this woman entitled to receive partial support under the so-called mothers' pension law? If not now, when will she be entitled to the same?
> "Of course she lost her residence in Ohio when they removed from the state in good faith and became a resident of Michigan. The statute, however, does not seem to require a continuous residence in this state or in any county of this state for the TWO YEARS previous to the time of maki ng and receiving the allowance. It seems to satisfy the statute if the mother has resided continuously for two years in any county of this state at some time before the allowance is made. So it has been held by a former attorney general. It has also been held that the statute should be liberally construed. It is true that a person coming to Ohio from another state who has never resided in Ohio would be compelled to reside in Ohio for two years in some one county before being entitled to the benefits of the law. But this case is different, as the two years residence in a county in Ohio has been complied with.
> "I have my own notion about this case, but I would like to have an official opinion from you, and if possible, please let me have it before January 11, when the association of probate judges holds its next meeting."

In your letter you make reference to an opinion of my predecessor to be found on page 921 of the first volume of the report of the attorney general for the year 1914. In the opinion referred to the question considered was similar to the one presented, although in that case the residence of the applicant for two years preceding the award of the mothers' pension was entirely within the state, but in a separate county; whereas, in the case under consideration the mother and the dependents have been residing in a sister state for a portion of the two years immediately preceding the application.

Section 1683-2 of the General Code (103 O. L., 877) is as follows:

> "For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled for work by reasons of mental or physical infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are mothers of children not entitled to receive an age and achooling certificate, and such mothers and children have been legal residents in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make an allowance to each of such women, as follows: Not to exceed fifteen dollars a month, when she has but one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, and if she has more than one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, it shall not exceed fifteen dollars a month for the first child and seven dollars a month for each of the other children not entitled to an age and schooling certificate. The order making such allowance shall not be effective for a longer period than six months, but upon the expiration of such period, said court may from time to time extend such allowance for a period of six months or less. Such homes shall be visited from time to time by a probation officer, agent of an associated charities organization, a humane society, or such other agents as the court may direct, provided that the person who actually makes such visits shall be thoroughly trained in charitable relief work, and the report or reports of such visiting agent shall be considered by the court in making such order."

The mothers' pension act has been made a part of the juvenile court act; section 1683 of the General Code is also a part of the juvenile court act and provides for a liberal construction of the mothers' pension law to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child in order that it may be educated and cared for as far as practicable.

There is no express provision of law to the effect that two years' residence in a county of the state must be continuous or immediately preceding the application for an award under the mothers' pension act. In the case presented, the widow and children of the deceased husband had lived in Seneca county for the greater portion of their lives until several years ago, of course covering a period much longer than the two years' residence provided for in the statute. For some reason or other they moved to Michigan and after the death of the father they returned to Seneca county, Ohio, where they are now residing, and to all intents and purposes are residents of the county.

In view of the provisions of section 1683-2 of the General Code, supra, coupled with the provisions of section 1683 of the General Code, referred to above, it is my opinion that under the facts presented in this particular case, the mother referred to is eligible to file an application for an award of a mother's pension, subject to the determination of questions of law and fact to be passed upon by the juvenile court judge, and if an award should be made such action would not be an abuse of the discretion conferred upon the court.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

TAX COMMISSION—ALL EMPLOYMENTS, PROVISIONAL OR PERMANENT, UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 1465-8, G. C., 102 O. L., 225 MUST BE APPROVED BY GOVERNOR—SERVICE FOR ONE YEAR UNDER SAID PERMANENT APPOINTMENT WITHOUT APPROVAL OF GOVERNOR DOES NOT GIVE APPOINTEE THEREOF VESTED LEGAL RIGHT THERETO.

1. All employments, both provisional and permanent, made under the provisions of section 1465-8, G. C., 102 O. L., 225, and compensation therefor, to be effective, must first be approved by the governor.

2. Service for one year under a permanent appointment made under said section, but without the approval of the governor, does not give the appointee thereof a vested legal right thereto.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of October 11, 1915, in which you present certain facts in reference to the appointment of one Mr. M. to the position of examiner public utilities under the state tax commission. In connection with your letter is also submitted certain correspondence and data from your records and the records of the state tax commission, from all of which the following facts appear:

On January 29, 1914, the state tax commission with the approval of the governor provisionally appointed Mr. M. as special excise tax examiner for the period of three months, which appointment was duly authorized by the state civil service commission after a non-competitive examination. On June 2, 1914, a competitive examination was held in which twenty-three persons competed including Mr. M., who as a result of such examination was ranked third in the order of eligibility. On or about August 18, 1914, his name and the names of two persons ranking above him were duly certified by your commission to the tax commission, and on said date said tax commission made the following order:

> "The commission being in receipt of a list of the names of three men eligible for the position of examiner of public utilities which was certified by the state civil service commission after a competitive examination conducted by said body, and after careful consideration of the same, the commission has this day, appointed as examiner of public utilities M. A. M—, of ----------, ---------- County, Ohio, who was on January 29, 1914, provisionally appointed by the commission with the approval of the governor as special excise tax examiner, effective February 1, 1914."

Thereupon said tax commission duly reported to your commission its appointment of the said Mr. M. as follows:

"COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1914.

"To the State Civil Service Commission of Ohio.

"GENTLEMEN:—You are hereby notified that M. A. M— was appointed this day (from certificate No. 322) rank No. ------ on the eligible list as examiner public utilities in this department at a monthly salary of one hundred and fifty dollars."

Mr. M. continued to serve under said appointment in the position of examiner of public utilities until on or about October 1, 1915. The records do not show that the regular appointment, made as aforesaid on August 18th, was approved by the governor. In fact, it may be considered in view of the contentions in this case that the failure to so approve this appointment is admitted. It is claimed, however, that the governor's approval of the provisional appointment was all the law required in that behalf and that said approval continued in effect as to said regular appointment. It is further claimed that Mr. M. having served without objection from any official or department and having since the date of said appointment received his salary, his right now to said position cannot be questioned.

Upon the foregoing facts you submit the following inquiries:

> "1. Does the approval of the provisional appointment automatically insure the approval of the permanent appointment?
> "2. Does he have any vested right in his position, inasmuch as he was allowed to serve so long with the approval of the tax commission, and without objection from the governor?"

In answering your foregoing inquiries it is necessary, first, to briefly refer to the provisions of the law whereby the approval of the governor was required in this appointment. This law is found in section 10 of the "act to further define the duties of the tax commission" 102 O. L., 225, being section 1465-8, G. C., and which provides, after authorizing the commission to make certain appointments including examiners, as follows:

> "Such employments and compensation therefor shall be first approved by the governor."

It was held by this department in an opinion under date of September 8, 1915, to the Hon. A. V. Donahey, auditor of state, in which the same question was under consideration in connection with the provisions of another statute similar to the one above quoted, that the approval of the governor to an appointment under this requirement was necessary to give said appointment legal effect and that without such approval it would not be valid, that this requirement, in other words, was jurisdictional in order to give the person appointed a legal status and a right to his salary. That the approval of the governor was necessary at some stage of the proceedings in the case under consideration seems to be conceded, but it is claimed that the approval of the provisional appointment continued in effect and applied to and covered the subsequent regular appointment.

The law under which said provisional appointment was made is in itself a complete answer to this contention. This law is found in section 486-14, G. C., 103 O. L., 705, and is as follows:

> "Whenever there are urgent reasons for filling a vacancy in any position in the competitive class and the commission is unable to certify to the appointing officer upon requisition by the latter a list of persons eligible for appointment after a competitive examination, the appointing officer may nominate a person to the commission for non-competitive examination, and if such nominee shall be certified by the said commission as qualified after such non-competitive examination, he may be appointed provisionally to fill such vacancy until a selection and appointment can be made after competitive examination; but such provisional appointment shall continue in force only until regular appointment can be made from eligible lists prepared by the commission, and such eligible lists shall be prepared within ninety days thereafter."

Under the foregoing provisions regulating a provisional appointment it is provided that said provisional appointment shall continue in force only until a regular appointment can be made from eligible lists prepared by the civil service commission. This makes the provisional appointment and the regular appointment from an eligible list as distinct and separate from each other as they would be if they referred to and involved two wholly different positions. The eligible list from which the regular appointment must be made may or may not contain the name of the provisional appointee. In other words a provisional appointment does not make the appointee eligible to the regular appointment. If the provisional appointee passes a competitive examination and ranks among the three highest certified as eligible from said examination, he may be considered in connection with the regular appointment, otherwise not. If on this eligible list of three, he may or may not be appointed, that being a matter to be determined by the appointing authority.

In view of the foregoing considerations, to hold that the governor's approval of the provisional appointment followed and obtained in the regular appointment would be no more consistent than to maintain that the commission of an elective officer given to cover his first term of office would follow and be in force during a second term in the same office. I am clearly of the opinion that the contention that the regular appointment did not require the approval of the governor cannot be entertained and that such approval was required and was necessary to give said regular appointment valid force and effect.

There remains then the contention that because Mr. M. was permitted to serve and receive his salary under said invalid appointment, from August 18, 1914, to the present time, it cannot now be questioned. I know of no principle of equitable estoppel that can be applied under the facts in this case to the extent of justifying such contention. As between Mr. M. and the tax commission, the former might successfully contend that the latter cannot now be heard to complain because it knew the facts, or should have known them in the exercise of that degree of care which the law requires of it in making such appointments. This situation, however, does not extend to other authorities connected with his appointment or his subsequent official relations and service. In the case of the civil service commission there is nothing to show that it knew or should have known of this irregularity in his appointment. On the contrary, that the certificate of his appointment was made to said commission by the tax commission would imply that such appointment had been made under all the provisions of law and with due regard therefor. It necessarily follows from this that it is now the duty of said commission, since all of the facts are known to it, to disregard said appointment and refuse to longer certify Mr. M. on the payroll, unless his appointment and compensation are approved by the governor.

I would suggest, however, in this connection that hereafter your commission require that all certificates of appointment from the appointing authority show the approval of the governor when said appointment to be effective requires said approval.

I therefore conclude in this case that the approval of the governor was necessary to make said permanent appointment effective and to entitle said appointee to his salary thereunder and that service for one year under said permanent appointment, without such approval, does not give said appointee a vested legal right thereto.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—BEQUEST TO THEOLOGICAL INSTITUTION TO EDUCATE STUDENTS OF PARTICULAR CLASS AND RELIGIOUS FAITH, SUBJECT TO SUCH TAX—MT. SAINT MARY'S SEMINARY.

A bequest to an institution of learning, which limits its students to a particular class and religious faith, is subject to the collateral inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received through Hon. Henry G. Hauck, assistant prosecuting attorney, the following inquiry of the date of November 13, 1915:

> "By direction of Hon. William H. Lueders, judge of our probate court, I am writing for your opinion as to the taxability under the collateral inheritance tax law of this state of a bequest of four thousand dollars to the Mt. St. Mary's seminary, a theological institution incorporated under the laws of the state of Ohio, the object and purpose of which is the education of young men for the priesthood in the Roman Catholic Church."

I learn from you in a subsequent communication that the seminary in question is maintained by endowments and contributions and that its students are required to profess the Catholic faith, and if needy are educated therein without pay, but those having means are required to pay their board and lodging and an annual tuition fee. Under the limitations thus imposed upon those whom it elects to serve, I am of the opinion that such institution is neither a "public institution of learning" nor an "institution for the purpose only of public charity," within the meaning of said terms as employed in section 5332, G. C., and that it is therefore not exempt from the collateral inheritance tax. This conclusion is based upon the authority of:

> Morningstar Lodge, I. O. O. F. v. Hayslip, 23 O. S., 144;
> Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229;
> Little v. Seminary, 72 O. S., 417.

Those authorities and others were discussed in opinion No. 261 of the date of April 19, 1915, which involved, among others, an inquiry very similar to the one now submitted. I therefore, without further discussion, attach hereto a copy of said opinion and request that you consider it in connection with the conclusion herein stated.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—TRAFFIC RULES AND REGULATIONS PUBLISHED BY SAID COMMISSIONER NOT APPLICABLE TO STREETS WITHIN LIMITS OF ANY MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.

The traffic rules and regulations prepared and published by the state highway commissioner under section 249 of the Cass highway law, section 7246, G. C., apply only to those parts of inter-county highways and main market roads which have been or may hereafter be constructed or taken over by the state, and do not under any circumstances apply to any road or street within the limits of any municipal corporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a number of inquiries relative to the application of section 249 of the Cass highway law, being section 7246, G. C., and am therefore addressing to you an opinion upon the question involved. An idea of the character of the question involved in these inquiries may be gathered from the following letter from Hon. M. R. Talbott, mayor of the city of Urbana, Ohio, under date of December 8, 1915:

> "Will you please inform us whether section 7246 of the 'Road Law' is applicable to incorporated municipalities or not?
> "We have a city ordinance which provides for the manner of turning all vehicles, and one of its provisions is that all vehicles shall make turns only at street intersections. Does this ordinance conflict with the above section?"

Section 249 of the Cass highway law, section 7246, G. C., which is the section referred to by Mr. Talbott, is as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner, within sixty days after the taking effect of this act, shall prepare and publish a set of traffic rules and regulations governing the use of, and traffic on, all state roads. All rules and regulations that are to apply generally throughout the state, including those applicable to roads constructed of the various kinds of road material, shall become effective thirty days after publication. Special rules and regulations or orders, applying only to specified sections of state roads, shall become effective as soon as posted at each end, and at all road crossings on such specified section. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this section, it shall be the duty of the state highway commissioner, the county commissioners, the county highway superintendent, the township highway superintendent, township trustees and all patrolmen or deputies employed on any highways within the state, to prosecute any violation of this section. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, firm or corporation to enter upon, or travel over said state roads, except in accordance with the traffic rules and regulations promulgated by the state highway commissioner."

Section 251 of the Cass highway law, section 7478, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner shall furnish the county highway superintendent with a copy of the rules and regulations promulgated by said state highway commissioner, and applicable to his county. The county highway superintendent shall cause the rules and regulations so furnished to him by said highway commissioner to be published, at least one each week, for two successive weeks, in a newspaper published and of general circulation in said county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no newspaper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. When such regulations are published in the manner aforesaid, it shall be deemed a sufficient publication under the provision of this act."

I am informed that the state highway commissioner, acting under authority of section 7246, G. C., has prepared and published a set of traffic rules and regulations, and has furnished the county highway superintendents of the several counties of the state with copies of the same, and that publication of these rules and regulations has been made generally in the several counties. I am not advised as to whether sufficient time has elapsed in any particular county in which publication of the rules and regulations has been made so that they are now effective.

The rules and regulations prepared by the state highway commissioner, and copies of which have been furnished to the county highway superintendents, bear the following heading:

"TRAFFIC RULES AND REGULATIONS.
"Governing Traffic on the Public Highways of Ohio.
"These rules and regulations are effective on and after December 5, 1915."

The penal section applicable in case of a violation of the rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner is section 294 of the Cass highway law, section 13421-17, G. C., which section reads as follows:

"Whoever enters upon, travels over any portion of the highways, within the state, in violation of the traffic rules and regulations duly prescribed by law, or the state highway commissioner, or the county highway superintendent of any county, shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, nor less than five dollars, and in addition thereto such person shall be liable for all damage done to such highway."

While the title or heading of the traffic rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner states that the same govern traffic on the public highways of Ohio, yet such title could not enlarge the scope of the rules and regulations which the state highway commissioner is authorized to prepare and publish.

An examination of section 249 of the act discloses the fact that the traffic rules and regulations prepared and published by the state highway commissioner are to govern the use of and traffic on all state roads. It therefore follows that, notwithstanding any title which may have been given to these rules, they are of no force and effect except as to state roads. It therefore becomes important to determine what roads are state roads. This question is answered by the provisions of paragraph (a) of section 241 of the act, which reads as follows:

"State roads shall include such part or parts of the inter-county highways and main market roads as have been or may hereafter be constructed by the state, or which have been or may hereafter be taken over by the state, as provided in this act, and such roads shall be maintained by the state highway department."

It therefore follows that the traffic rules and regulations prescribed and published by the state highway commissioner have no application except to inter-county highways and main market roads, and apply only to those parts of inter-county highways and main market roads which have been or may hereafter be constructed by the state, or which have been or may hereafter be taken over by the state, as provided in the Cass highway law. Such rules and regulations do not, under any circumstances, apply to any road or street within the limits of any municipal corporation.

Municipal corporations have power to regulate the use of the streets, but, independent of whether any particular municipal corporation has or has not exercised its power to regulate the use of its streets, the traffic rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner have no force and effect within such municipal corporation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—COUNTY SURVEYOR MAY NOT BE EMPLOYED TO SURVEY TOWNSHIP DITCH FOR LAND DRAINAGE—SERVICES OF ASSISTANTS TO COUNTY SURVEYOR FOR TOWNSHIP DITCH WORK—FEES FOR LAND SURVEYS BY DEPUTY COUNTY SURVEYOR—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS SHOULD FIRST AUTHORIZE ROAD AND BRIDGE REPAIR WORK—FORCE ACCOUNT NOT LIMITED TO EXPENDITURE OF $200.00—LABORERS EMPLOYED BY COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT.

Township trustees may not employ the county surveyor to survey a township ditch for land drainage.

Assistants to the county surveyor, while in the service of the county and drawing compensation from the county treasury, may not accept employment from township trustees on township ditch work.

A deputy of the county surveyor making land surveys under sections 2807 to 2814, G. C., may charge and collect for such services the fees fixed by law. There is no authority for covering such fees into the county treasury and the same may be disposed of in any manner agreed upon between the surveyor and his deputy.

All road and bridge repair work should be first authorized by the county commissioners and this is true even where roads and bridges are in a dangerous condition.

County commissioners, when proceeding to improve roads by force account, are not limited to an expenditure of $200 or less. Laborers engaged on such force account work are to be employed by the county highway superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. ROGER D. HAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 9, 1915, in which you submit a number of inquiries as to the operation of the Cass highway law. Your first inquiry reads as follows:

> "May the township trustees request the county surveyor to survey a township ditch for land drainage? Said ditch to be governed by the special assessment law."

The pertinent provision of the General Code is found in section 6612 and reads as follows:

"The trustees may employ an engineer to locate, level and measure the course of such ditch, and such other assistance as they need."

Under the provision above quoted, it is no part of the official duty of the county surveyor to do the engineering work on a township ditch. Under the statutes in force prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, the township trustees might employ the county surveyor or they might employ some other engineer to perform the engineering work on a township ditch. The county surveyor was compensated on a per diem basis, and if any of his time was not required for his official duties there was nothing to prevent his accepting other employment during the time when he was not employed about the duties of his office. As to his employment by the trustees to survey a township ditch, he occupied the same position as any other engineer. This situation has been entirely changed by the Cass highway law. Section 138 of that law, being section 7181, G. C., provides that the county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office. As pointed out in opinion No. 844, of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, on September 20, 1915, the county surveyor is prohibited by the Cass highway law from accepting any employment, either public or private, not provided for by statute. Inasmuch as the county surveyor is required to devote his entire time to his official duties and inasmuch as the engineering work on a township ditch is no part of the official duties of the county surveyor, it follows, in answer to your first question, that township trustees may not employ the county surveyor to survey a township ditch for land drainage.

Your second question reads as follows:

"May the township trustees employ the county surveyor or one of his assistants and the surveyor draw the fees? Section 5551 of the General Code gives the township trustees the right to employ an engineer. Now does this give them the right to employ a county engineer and the county surveyor draw the fees?"

Your reference to section 5551, G. C., is not in point, as that section refers to the appointment of the county surveyor as tax map draughtsman by the county commissioners. Assuming that your second inquiry relates to the same subject as your first, it has already been answered in part by the observation that the township trustees may not employ the county surveyor on township ditch work. It is equally apparent that the county surveyor cannot receive any compensation for such work, whether performed by himself or an assistant. It is also clear that no right exists in the township trustees to employ one of the assistants of the county surveyor on township ditch work. The compensation of assistants to the county surveyor is paid from the county treasury and is a full compensation for all of their time, and such assistants would have no right while in the service of the county, and drawing compensation from the county treasury, to also accept employment from township trustees on township ditch work, and this is true without regard to whether the compensation for the township ditch work is retained by the assistants or paid by them to the county surveyor.

Your third inquiry is as follows:

"Land surveys. Whether the fees from work done on land surveys by the assistants in the county surveyor's office are to be paid to the county surveyor? If not, how can this work be done? Under your opinion the fees cannot be collected and paid back into the county treasury."

The answer to this question depends upon the character of the land surveys referred to by you. Inasmuch as the county surveyor is required to give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office, he cannot devote any time to land surveys unless the surveys in question be of such a character that private individuals have a right to call upon the county surveyor in his official capacity to make the same.

The land surveys which the county surveyor may be called upon to make in his official capacity, and therefore the only land surveys which it is permissible for him to make, are those referred to in sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio. If called upon to make surveys of this class, the county surveyor may either do the work himself or may detail a deputy to do the work, for, under the provisions of section 9. G. C., a deputy, when duly qualified, may perform all and singular, the duties of his principal. It would not be proper, however, for the county surveyor to detail any assistant other than a duly qualified deputy to perform the surveyor's duties under sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive.

The opinion of this department to which you refer, being opinion No. 844, was rendered on September 20, 1915, to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, and that opinion only went so far as to hold that the salary of the county surveyor provided for by section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., does not cover services rendered by the county surveyor to private individuals under sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, of the General Code.

The following is quoted from the opinion in question:

> "Sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, of the General Code, provide that land owners may call upon the county surveyor to make surveys of their lands, plant corner stones or posts, conduct proceedings to establish corners and take depositions therein, and record plats and certificates of the surveys made by him. These are clearly duties of the office of county surveyor. It is further provided that the fees of county surveyors for such services shall be paid by the person or persons applying therefor, and there is no provision of law requiring these fees to be covered into the treasury. If, therefore, a county surveyor is called upon to render services under sections 2807 to 2814, G. C., such surveyor will be entitled to charge and collect therefor the fees provided by law, and such fees will be in addition to the annual salary provided by section 138 of the act now under consideration."

It will be noted that the opinion from which the above is quoted refers in terms only to those cases where the land surveys are made by the county surveyor himself. Its principles, are, however, applicable where the surveys in question are made by a deputy or the county surveyor. In such cases the deputy is authorized to charge and collect the fees fixed by law for such services. The disposition of such fees after collection is a matter in which only the county surveyor and his deputy are interested, and the fees may be disposed of in any manner that may be agreed upon between them. There is, however, no authority for covering the fees into the county treasury even where the surveys are made by a deputy.

Your fourth question and the first branch of your fifth question may be answered together. They are as follows:

> "Should all road and bridge repair work be first ordered by the county commissioners upon their journal, providing same comes under $200.00?
> "Can the county highway superintendent repair roads and bridges in dangerous condition without the approval of the county commissioners?"

These inquiries involve a statement of the rights and duties of county commissioners and county highway superintendents as to the repair of roads and bridges. Several sections of the Cass highway law seem to confer an independent authority in this particular upon the county highway superintendent.

Section 141 of the act, section 7184, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent shall have general charge, subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department, of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, whether known as township, county or state highways, and that the county highway superintendent shall see that the same are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law and shall have general supervision of the work of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing the highways, bridges and culverts in his county, subject to an exception which it is not necessary to note in this connection.

Section 149 of the act, section 7192, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent shall keep the highways of the county at all times in good and suitable condition for public travel and shall generally supervise the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the bridges and culverts on the highways of the county, the cost of which shall be borne by the county unless otherwise provided by law.

Section 154 of the act, section 7197, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, shall provide for the maintenance and repair of the roads of the county, under such system as may be deemed expedient, so that each section of the highways of the county shall be under proper supervision and be effectively and economically improved, maintained and repaired.

Similar general provisions are found in several other sections of the act, but the provisions specifically referred to above, and others of a similar character, must be read in the light of the other provisions of the law.

A consideration of the entire act leads to the conclusion that its general spirit is that the county highway superintendent shall be the executive officer of the county commissioners in so far as bridges and highways are concerned. While duties in reference to repairing roads and bridges are enjoined upon him in general terms, he is given no authority to perform these duties with reference to county roads except in so far as the county commissioners may furnish him the means. Under section 155 of the act, section 7198, G. C., the county highway superintendent may employ laborers, teams, implements and tools and purchase materials only with the approval of the county commissioners, and the same is true under section 160 of the act, section 7203, G. C. I do not find any authority in the act for a county highway superintendent to make a contract binding upon the county except as he may be authorized by the county commissioners.

It seems clear from the above that it was the intention of the legislature to confer upon the county commissioners the power and authority of determining in the first instance what repairs should be made upon county roads and to place the work of making such repairs under the supervision of the county highway superintendent. The limitation of $200.00 referred to by you in your fourth question has reference only to the necessity for advertising and securing competitive bids, and I conclude, in answer to your fourth question, that all road and and bridge repair work should be first ordered by the county commissioners without reference to the cost of the work and, of course, their orders and instructions to the county highway superintendent in this particular should appear upon their journal.

In answer to the first branch of your fifth question, it is my opinion that the rule above stated is the same, even where roads and bridges are in a dangerous condition, and that the repair of such roads and bridges should be first authorized by the county commissioners.

The latter part of your fifth question reads as follows:

> "May the county commissioners build new roads by force account when the same will cost over $200.00, and also is the county highway superintendent, when work is done under force account, to have charge of the employment of men upon the work or whether it is meant that the work shall be done under his direction in so far as quality of workmanship and material is concerned?"

Section 156 of the act, being section 7199, G. C., contains the following language:

"If, in the opinion of the county commissioners, it is advisable to provide for the improvement, maintenance and repair of any portion of the highways of the county by contract * * *," thus indicating that it was the intention of the legislature to authorize not only the maintenance and repair, but also the improvement of highways by force account. The several provisions of the act authorizing the employment of laborers, teams, implements and tools and the purchase of tools and materials, also indicate that it was the intention to authorize force account work. The county could have no use for labor or tools or material unless the county commissioners were authorized to proceed by force account. It is therefore manifest that under proper conditions and circumstances, the county commissioners have authority to improve, maintain or repair highways by force account, and without going into an extended discussion of any possible limitation that may exist on this right, it is my opinion that the same is not confined to work costing $200.00 or less, and that if the other facts exist which would authorize the commissioners to proceed by force account, they are not prohibited from so doing merely by the fact that the improvement in question will cost more than $200.00.

In view of the provision of section 155 of the act, section 7198, G. C., to the effect that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners, employ laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase material it is my opinion that where the county commissioners determine to proceed by force account, the laborers engaged on the work are to be employed by the county highway superintendent, such employment having been first authorized by the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—NO AUTHORITY AT PRESENT TIME FOR MAKING ROAD IMPROVEMENT BY BOND ISSUE UNDER CASS HIGHWAY LAW.

Township trustees are without authority at the present time to raise funds by a bond issue under the Cass highway law for the improvement of roads under chapter III of that law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. B. A. MYERS, Prosecuting Attorney, Celina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 3, 1915, which reads in part as follows:

"Calling your attention to chapter III of Cass road law, 105-106 Ohio Laws, page 589.

"A petition has been filed with the board of trustees of Dublin township in our county asking for the improvement of a certain road as set out and described in the petition.

"Section 60 of said law provides that the board of trustees of any township may levy and assess upon the taxable property of such township a tax not exceeding three mills in any one year upon each dollar of taxable property therein for the purpose of improving, dragging, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads or part thereof. Such levy shall be in addition to the levy of two mills authorized by law for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force.

"The question arises, how will the township trustees raise funds for the immediate improvement of this road? Are they authorized to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of this levy? * * * The trustees desire to proceed under the Cass road law, if possible, and construct roads which they may see fit to grant under the petitions filed. How can they proceed and secure funds under this law?"

As I understand your question, you desire to know whether the township trustees may, under the provisions of the Cass highway law, raise funds at the present time for the improvement of a road under chapter III of that law, either by a bond issue or otherwise. Your question is specifically answered by opinion No. 849 of this department rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices on September 21, 1915, a copy of which opinion will be found on page 32 of a pamphlet which I am sending you under separate cover. In this opinion it was held that bonds might be issued by township trustees for the construction or reconstruction of roads under sections 60 and 74, inclusive, of the Cass highway law, provided such bonds were authorized by a vote of the qualified electors of the township and provided further that the money raised by a levy under section 60 of the act did not furnish sufficient funds for such work. It was further held that as the Cass highway law did not go into effect until September 6, 1915, and therefore no levy could be made this year under section 60 of that act, no election to determine the question of issuing bonds could be held until after the time in the year 1916 when the township made its levy under section 60 of the act, and it was determined that said levy did not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads. It therefore follows that township trustees are without authority at the present time to raise funds by a bond issue under the Cass highway law for the improvement of roads under chapter III of that law, and I know of no other method by which they may at the present time raise such funds.

Inasmuch as township trustees are without authority to raise such funds at the present time, it becomes unnecessary to discuss the further question suggested by you in your letter relating to a conflict of authority between the county commissioners and the township trustees.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY ISSUE BONDS FOR PIKE REPAIR PURPOSES—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 6929, G. C.

Bonds for pike repair purposes may be issued by county commissioners under section 108 of the Cass highway law, section 6929, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1915.

HON. DONALD F. MELHORN, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 11, 1915, in which you request my opinion as to the legality of a certain method suggested by you for raising money for pike repair purposes. You state that many of the main traveled highways of the county are badly in need of repair and that same are a positive menace to the safety of those who traverse them, and that the pike repair fund of the county is already overdrawn and the amount that will be available from the February, 1916, settlement will be altogether inadequate. Some of the roads in question are main market roads, others are inter-county highways and the remainder are county roads.

Referring to the possibility of relief through a road repair levy under section 238 of the Cass highway law, you make the point, among others, that the proceeds from such a levy would not be available until after the February, 1917, settlement. This point is well taken, and it is apparent that relief must be sought under some other section of the law.

As to obtaining state aid for the repair of the inter-county highways within your county, either under section 184 or under the latter part of section 196, of the Cass highway law, you state you are informed by the state highway commissioner that state aid is not obtainable at the present time, for the reason that the apportionment to Hardin county has been exhausted. You also point out that it would be useless to attempt to proceed at the present time under section 196 of the Cass highway law, even if state funds were available, for the reason that there are no funds in the county treasury subject to appropriation for the "equal sum" which must be appropriated and expended by the county in order to obtain state funds under this section.

Referring to the procedure for repairing roads under section 85 and the succeeding sections of the Cass highway law, using one of the methods of paying the costs and expenses set forth in section 98 of the law, you raise the objection, based upon the policy pursued by your county in the past, that such a procedure would involve assessing a part of the cost of the repairs upon the owners of abutting real estate. You observe that this has never been done in the history of your county in repairing pikes, and indicate that you are anxious to adopt a course of procedure which would enable the county to bear the entire cost of the contemplated repairs.

You state that the method called for by your present situation is not only one that will enable the county to bear the entire expense, but also one that will furnisih pike repair money that may be legally used on main market, inter-county and county roads alike. The method which you state you have in mind, and as to the legality of which you desire my opinion, is set forth in your communication as follows:

> "(A) The first thing that the county commissioners would do, would be to comply with section 196 (G. C. 1203), and get the approval of the chief highway engineer as to the plans and specifications of the repair of the inter-county highways and main market roads. Section 226 (G. C. 1231), would seem to give the commissioners the same right to repair a main market road, as is given by section 196, that is, after receiving the chief highway engineer's O. K. on the plans and specifications.

"(B) The county commissioners would take jurisdiction, without a petition, under section 89 (G. C. 6910), pass resolutions to repair certain specified roads, and order, by virtue of section 100 (G. C. 6921), all costs and expenses to be 'paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes on the grand duplicate of the county.' Said resolution would, of course, further provide, under section 105 (G. C. 6926), for a fund to be created by taxation for the payment of the county's proportion of the costs and expenses of the improvement (in this case the county's proportion being all of said costs and expenses).

"(C) Then the county commissioners, under section 108 (G. C. 6929), would issue bonds in anticipation of the taxes to be raised under the levy provided for by section 105 (G. C. 6926), to pay the costs and expenses of the improvement."

I am of the opinion that the method suggested by you will meet the situation which you present and that the same may be lawfully followed with sole slight changes in the order in which the several steps should be taken.

The county commissioners should first, by a unanimous vote, adopt a resolution, under section 89 of the Cass highway law, declaring the necessity for repairing the roads in question, which resolution should contain a description of each road. Acting under section 90 of the law, they should, by a unanimous vote, adopt a resolution determining the kind and extent of the repairs, and at the same time should order the county surveyor to make surveys, plats, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications, such as may be required for the repairs in question, and when the same have been made the profile and grade should be approved by the county commissioners. While it is true that in the latter part of section 90 of the law the word "improvement" is twice used instead of the phrase "construction, improvement or repair," yet the use of the expression "constructed, improved or repaired" in the first part of the section indicates that the word "improvement," as used thereafter in the section, was intended to include construction and repair.

Upon the completion of the surveys, plats, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications, and the approval of the profile and grade by the county commissioners, the plans and specifications for the proposed repairs should, in the case of inter-county highways and main market roads, be submitted to the chief highway engineer for examination and approval. This action should be taken in view of the following provision found in section 196 of the law:

"Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as prohibiting the county commissioners or township trustees from constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing any part of the inter-county highways within such county or township; provided, however, that the plans and specifications for the proposed improvement shall first be submitted to the chief highway engineer and shall receive his approval. * * *"

While the authority for county commissioners to construct, improve, maintain or repair main market roads, provided the plans and specifications be first approved by the chief highway engineer, is not expressly conferred by the portion of section 196 of the law quoted above, yet I am of the opinion, from a consideration of the entire act, that it was the intention of the legislature to confer such authority and that the same exists and may be exercised.

Upon the approval of the plans and specifications by the chief highway engineer, the county commissioners should, under section 100 of the act, adopt, by a unanimous vote, a resolution ordering that all the costs and expenses of making the repairs be paid out of a road repair fund to be thereafter created by a bond issue under section 108 of the act, or, as hereinafter pointed out, such resolution might properly be omitted from the procedure at this point and adopted at a later date. They should then, under section 108 of the act, and in anticipation of the collection of taxes levied under section 105 of the act, adopt a resolution declaring the necessity, in their judgment, for a bond issue, and providing for the issuing of the bonds of the county in an aggregate amount necessary to pay the estimated cost and expense of the repairs.

In order to comply with the constitutional requirement of section 11 of article XII of the constitution of Ohio, to the effect that no bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be incurred, unless in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred provision is made for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, the county commissioners should, in their bond resolution, provide for the levying and collecting annually thereafter by taxation, upon the grand duplicate of the county, under section 105 of the act, an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds in question and to provide a sinking fund for their redemption at maturity. If the resolution called for by section 100 of the act, and hereinbefore referred to, has not been adopted prior to the adoption of the legislation providing for a bond issue, the county commissioners should, after the sale of the bonds, adopt such resolution and order therein that all the costs and expenses of making the repairs be paid out of the road repair fund created by the bond issue in question. The commissioners will then be in a position to proceed with the work of repair, either by contracts duly entered into by them or by force account, as may be determined.

I deem it proper in this connection, however, to call your attention to certain considerations which bear upon the amount of bonds which may be issued by the county under favor of section 108 of the Cass highway law, section 6929, G. C. The bonds which it is proposed to issue in your county are to be issued in anticipation of a levy made under section 105 of the Cass highway law, section 6926, G. C., said levy to be provided for in the legislation authorizing the issuance of the bonds in question. The levy under that section is one made for the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the county's proportion of the costs and expenses of constructing, improving, maintaining, dragging and repairing roads under chapter VI of the Cass highway law.

The third branch of the syllabus in the case of Rabe v. Board of Education, 88 O. S., 403, reads as follows:

> "Bonds cannot be issued in anticipation of income from taxes levied or to be levied in an amount greater than the income to be anticipated thereby."

The above rule must be observed by your county in carrying through the scheme of bond legislation herein discussed, but it does not follow that the limitation expressed in the third branch of the syllabus in the Rabe case, quoted above, is the only limitation which, under the facts presented by you, should be observed in the issuing of bonds. The Rabe case was one involving the right to issue bonds for the purpose of obtaining and improving school property, and the court at page 422 used the following language:

> "It would seem to be not only proper but necessary to take into account the future demands upon the school funds for school purposes in connection with the probable increase of the tax duplicate in determining just what income may be anticipated by the issue of bonds for the purchase of school property without detriment to the future imperative needs of the schools of that school district. This, of course, is a question for the determination of the board of education in the first instance, and a court of equity would not for this reason interfere to restrain the issue of these bonds, except for an abuse of discretion."

In view of the foregoing, it may be stated that in issuing bonds under section 6929, G. C., in anticipation of taxes levied under section 6926, G. C., the county commissioners cannot issue bonds in an amount greater than the income to be anticipated. In determining the amount of income derived from taxes levied under section 6926, G. C., in anticipation of which bonds may be issued, the commissioners should first determine the total amount that can probably be realized by a levy under the section in question, having due regard to the needs and requirements of other taxing subdivisions and to the needs and requirements of the county for other purposes. From such total amount there must be deducted by the county commissioners an amount to be determined by them in the exercise of a sound discretion, which amount must be sufficient to meet the future imperative needs of the county for the purposes of constructing, improving, maintaining, dragging and repairing roads under chapter VI of the Cass highway law during the life of the bonds to be issued. The balance of such total amount left after making such deduction is the amount that may be anticipated by a bond issue. In other words, the amount of bonds that may be issued under section 6929, G. C., in anticipation of levies made under section 6926, G. C., plus the interest that will have to be paid on such bonds, cannot exceed the total amount that can probably be realized by the levy under section 6926, G. C., having due regard to the needs and requirements of other taxing subdivisions and to the needs and requirements of the county for other purposes, less an amount to be determined by the county commissioners in the exercise of a sound discretion and which amount must be sufficient to meet the future imperative needs of the county for the purposes of constructing, improving, maintaining, dragging and repairing roads under chapter VI of the Cass highway law during the life of the bonds to be issued.

An opinion covering the limitations set forth in the several tax levying sections of the Cass highway law is in process of preparation by this department and inasmuch as some of the matters therein to be treated have a bearing upon the matters set forth in your inquiry, a copy of that opinion will be forwarded to you as soon as the same is prepared.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF DISTRICT OF UNION TOWNSHIP, BUTLER COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 14, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"In Re: Bonds of Union township rural school district, Butler county, Ohio, in the aggregate amount of $30,000.00, being sixty bonds of $500.00 each, bearing interest at five per centum per annum, and payable $1,500 each year, beginning May 1, 1916, and ending May 1, 1935."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of the district of Union township, Butler county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above bonds; also the certified copies of the opinions of the court of common pleas, and of the court of appeals of Butler county, in the case of Harry W. Howard et al., plaintiffs, v. Aufranc et al., defendants, and I am of the opinion that said bonds are valid and legal obligations of the said Union township school district, and approve the same.

I wish to state further that the objections which have heretofore prevented my approval of these bonds have been removed by the decisions of the court of common pleas and the court of appeals of Butler county, above referred to, and this opinion is based upon the judgment of the courts expressed in the above action.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SECTION 2314, G. C., REQUIRED TO BE FOLLOWED WHEN INSTALLING HEATING SYSTEM IN STATE INSTITUTION COSTING MORE THAN $3,000—KENT STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

There is no authority to install heating system in state institution costing more than three thousand dollars without following provisions of section 2314 et seq., G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 14, 1915.

HON. J. E. MCGILVREY, President Kent State Normal School, Kent, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 7th, you submitted for my written opinion the following:

> "During the Christmas holidays, while school is not in session, I wish to take the hot air furnaces out of the administration building, which was built three years ago, and put in the necessary vento radiation for connecting this building with the power plant. It is necessary to make this connection, not only for the proper heating of this building, but I do not have money enough appropriated under personal service to operate two power plants for the remainder of the year. For the purpose above stated I wish to buy, to be paid for out of the appropriation for heating plant and equipment, five thousand (5,000) feet of vento radiation directly on bids from the manufacturer, which will cost not more than $1,573.00. From another firm I wish to buy the automatic temperature regulation which will cost $1,500.00, and I wish to install this radiation and equipment by direct labor with our plumbers who are at work here on the plant in the same way that we paid for the labor on the grading of the grounds this summer, and on the tunnel basement of the corridors. I feel sure that the proposed plan comes within the provision of the law. By doing work this way I find I can save enough money from the appropriation for the heating plant and equipment to connect the dormitory with the heating plant. This saving amounts to about $1,466.00.
> "I am enclosing copy of the report to the board of trustees which will give you the facts connected with this case which show that, because of the delay and unwarranted neglect of the architect, it would be impossible to advertise these items for the heating of this building in time to install during the Christmas vacation.

"The work in question might readily be considered under the head of 'Repairs to an old building.' This building was completed two years ago and heated with hot air furnaces. I wish now to buy and install a certain amount of radiation, as specified above.

"This matter is urgent, and I shall be glad to have an opinion at your earliest convenience."

The answer to your inquiry is contained in section 2314 of the General Code, which reads as follows:

"Before entering into contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars, each officer, board, or other authority by law charged with the supervision thereof, shall make or cause to be made the following: full and accurate plans, showing all necessary details of the work, with working plans suitable for the use of mechanics and other builders in such construction, so drawn and represented as to be plain and easily understood; accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction to accompany such plans; full and complete specifications of the work to be performed, showing the manner and style required, with such directions as will enable a competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out and afford bidders all needful information; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof."

Since, from your letter, it appears that the five thousand feet of vento radiation will cost $1,573.00, and the automatic temperature regulation will cost $1,500.00, the cost of the two will be in excess of three thousand dollars, without considering the labor on the same. To attempt to do the work in the way described in your letter would be in direct violation of the provisions of section 2314, supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—WHAT COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MUST DO TO COME UNDER PROVISION OF SAVING CLAUSE OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW WHEN PROCEEDING UNDER SECTION 6956-1, G. C.

In order that proceeding under sections 6956-1, et seq., G. C., may be preserved by the saving provisions of the Cass highway law, the county commissioners must, prior to September 6, 1915, have gone upon the line of the proposed road improvement, determined that the public utility and convenience require such road to be laid out, constructed, repaired, improved, altered, straightened or widened as petitioned for, and taken the other action provided by section 6956-2, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 14, 1915.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 11, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

"I would like to have your opinion upon the law relating to the following facts:

"In Paulding county there have been a number of petitions and bonds filed with the auditor to construct and improve pike roads, in accordance with the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-16 of the General Code of Ohio, all being filed since May 10, 1910. On some of these petitions for said road improvements the county commissioners have counted the names of the petitioners, and found that a majority of the land owners owning land lying and being within one mile in any direction from either side, end or terminus thereof have petitioned for said road improvements. The proceedings or journal of said county commissioners show no further action taken, nor have the county commissioners gone upon the line of any said roads or parts thereof, and all of said petitions were filed in 1913 and 1914, and such actions as were taken thereon by said county commissioners were prior to the passage of the Cass highway act.

"Section 300 of said Cass highway act, chapter 13, of the curative provisions of said act, provides in part as follows:

" 'Section 300. (Former proceedings, contracts, tax levies, bonds, etc., shall be valid.) All proceedings for the construction, improvement or repair of stone, gravel, or other roads in this state under the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-16, inclusive, of the General Code, had since May 10, 1910, and all petitions granted, bonds issued, taxes and assessments levied or to be levied on account of such roads, and all contracts made and entered into, under the provisions of said sections, and any and all steps taken thereunder, are hereby declared and held to be valid, and boards of county commissioners or other officials shall have full power and authority to complete all roads in process of construction under said sections, and shall have full power and authority to levy taxes and assessments for such roads, and to sell bonds to pay for the construction and improvement of all such roads, and to do any and all things contemplated by the provisions of said sections.'

"Do such actions and proceedings as have been taken, above referred to, by the county commissioners on said road improvements, in accordance with the provisions of said sections 6956-1 to 6956-16, before being repealed by said Cass highway act, enable them to complete said road improvements under the old law, or will said pike road improvements have to be repetitioned for under the new law?"

Your question is substantially answered by opinion No. 1045 of this department rendered to Hon. F. J. Bishop, prosecuting attorney of Ashtabula county, on November 29, 1915, a copy of which opinion you will find enclosed.

For the reasons set forth in the opinion to Mr. Bishop it is my opinion that, under the state of facts disclosed by your letter, the county commissioners are without authority to proceed under the old law, inasmuch as they did not, prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915, go upon the lines of the roads covered by the petitions and determine that the public utility and convenience required that the roads in question be laid out, constructed, repaired, improved, altered, straightened or widened as petitioned for, and did not determine the routes and termini of such roads as were to be laid out, and did not determine the kind and extent of the improvement or repair, and the alterations in the lines and changes of grades of said roads, if any. This being true, it will be necessary, in the construction or improvement of the roads in question, to institute new proceedings under the Cass highway law.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ASSESSORS—FAILURE TO FILE BONDS AT TIME PRESCRIBED BY STATUTE—DISCRETION WITH COUNTY AUDITOR TO ACCEPT BOND OR FILL VACANCY BY MAKING AN APPOINTMENT.

When assessors elected under the provisions of section 3349, G. C. (106 O. L., 250), file their bonds after the expiration of the time prescribed therefor by section 3353-1 (106 O. L., 252) the county auditor, if he has not filled the vacancies thus created by appointment, may accept said bonds and permit said assessors to take the oath of office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 6, 1915, submitting the following inquiry:

> "Quite a few of our assessors-elect have given their bonds since the second day of December, 1915. Shall the auditor refuse these bonds and declare the offices vacant and appoint others, or has he the discretion to accept these bonds and treat them as having been filed before the second day of December? The auditor has stated that he will appoint the parties elected, if he has to appoint them under section 3353, General Code (105-106 Year Book at 252)."

Section 3353-1, G. C., being section 22 of an act to provide for the listing of property, etc., 106 Ohio Laws, 252, provides as follows:

> "If there shall be a failure to elect an assessor in any ward, district, city, village or township, or if a person elected assessor fails to give bond and take the oath of office within thirty days after his election, or if after his appointment or election, an assessor shall remove from the ward, district, city, village or township for which he was appointed or elected, the office shall be deemed vacant. Should there be at any time a vacancy in such office for any of the causes aforesaid, or from any other cause, the county auditor shall fill such vacancy by appointing any competent and suitable elector of such ward, district, city, village or township, who will accept and perform the duties of such office."

It appears from your inquiry that the provisions of the foregoing section have not been complied with by quite a number of assessors in your county, who have filed their bonds since the expiration of thirty days from the date of their election. You inquire if the auditor may refuse to accept these bonds and declare their offices vacant, or if he may treat the bonds as having been filed prior to December 2, 1915, which date was the expiration of the thirty-day limit. The provisions of the section quoted must be considered in connection with section 7 of the General Code, which section also has a direct application to the question here submitted. Said section 7, aforesaid, provides as follows:

"A person elected or appointed to an office, who is required by law to give a bond or security previous to the performance of the duties imposed on him by his offce, or who refuses or neglects to give such bond or furnish such security within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, and in all respects to qualify himself for the performance of such duties, shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office to which he was elected or appointed and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law."

When the two sections are considered together, it would seem clear that their provisions must be held to be mandatory and that upon the failure of the officers named in your inquiry to qualify within the time prescribed by section 3353-1, aforesaid, their offices shall be deemed vacant and by the further provisions of section 7, aforesaid, they shall be deemed to have refused to accept said offices.

This conclusion is fully supported by the case of Davies, Auditor, v. State, 11 C. C. (n. s.), 209. In this case one Scherer was duly elected assessor of a taxing district in a municipality on the 5th day of November, 1907, and did not file his bond until the 19th day of said month. At that time section 1518, Revised Statutes, was in force and provided that if a person so elected failed to give bond and take the oath of office for one week after his election, said office should be considered vacant. Under this section of the Revised Statutes and section 7 of the General Code, aforesaid, being then section 19 of the Revised Statutes, the court in said case said:

"Taking the two sections together there seems to be no escape from the conclusion that the failure to file his bond and take the oath of office within the time and in the manner provided by law raises the presumption that he has declined the office and also that it has become vacant."

However, in this case while the fact does not appear in the opinion, the plaintiff Davies as auditor had filled the vacancy thus occasioned by Scherer's failure to qualify prior to the time the latter attempted to file his bond. This being so the provisions of the law were fully complied with by the auditor and when said appointment was made to fill the vacancy the matter was closed and no one had any further authority or power in reference thereto.

In the cases submitted by you a different situation is presented. It seems that the auditor has not as yet exercised his authority to fill the vacancies created by the failure of said assessors to qualify within the prescribed time. It follows that while as to them the law may be said to be fully executed and they are barred of all legal rights to the office, yet I am not prepared to say that its provisions conferring the authority upon the auditor to fill said vacancies go to the extent of automatically precluding or prohibiting said auditor from accepting the bonds in question. That is to say, until said vacancies are filled by appointment, as in the case quoted, the auditor may accept said bonds and permit the officers in question to qualify if he elects so to do.

I, therefore, conclude, under the facts stated in your inquiry, that said auditor may accept the bonds of the assessors in question and permit them to qualify.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS — PROSECUTING ATTORNEY — WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO REMIT TAXES ON REAL ESTATE BECAUSE IT IS ASSESSED AT AN EXCESSIVE VALUE.

The board of county commissioners and the prosecuting attorney of any county are without authority to remit or release any taxes charged upon the tax duplicate of said county against real estate therein upon the ground and for the reason that said real estate is assessed for taxation at an excessive value.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 10, 1915, as follows:

> "For the past three or four years, the Indian Guyan Coal Company, which owns some little surface, and about three thousand acres of minerals in Gallia county, has failed to pay its taxes. The minerals were assessed at $10 an acre, three or four times their real value.
> "The company has now gone into the hands of a receiver, and owes this county in taxes and penalties, about a thousand dollars.
> "The attorney for the company has requested me to O. K. an order of the court of common pleas of Lucas county, ordering the payment to Gallia county of taxes at the rate of $4.00 an acre on this land, including penalties.
> "I believe that this would be a fairly equitable settlement of the controversy. The county commissioners were prepared last year to make a compromise, but I concluded that they had no authority to do so, and so advised them.
> "As this matter is being held up pending a settlement, I will take it as a favor if you will advise me promptly as to my duties in the matter."

Your board of county commissioners are without any authority to release or remit under any compromise or adjustment any of the taxes in question. In the case of Peter v. Parkinson, Treasurer, 83 O. S., 36, the authority of the commissioners in this regard is discussed by the court and disposed of in the following language:

"Some reliance seems to be placed by counsel for plaintiff in error upon section 1038, Revised Statutes, which authorizes the correction of errors on tax list and duplicate by the county auditor, and empowers the board of county commissioners, under certain circumstances, to order refunded taxes that have been erroneously charged and collected. But neither by this statute nor by any other, is the board of county commissioners empowered to settle, remit, or release, either in whole, or in part, taxes that stand charged upon the duplicate and are unpaid. While in a sense the board of commissioners is the representative and financial agent of the county, its authority is limited to the exercise of such powers only as are conferred upon it by law. * * *

"Another, and perhaps sufficient reason why the county commissioners could not rightfully settle or remit the taxes sued for in this case is that such taxes were not wholly due to, nor were they wholly levied for, the use of Holmes county, but there was included therein as well, state, township, municipal and other taxes."

While the foregoing decision was rendered on the 25th day of October, 1910, there has been no legislation since that date which can in any way change the authority of the commissioners in this regard. It follows, therefore, that what they cannot do themselves you, as their attorney, may not do for them nor have you, as prosecuting attorney, any independent statutory authority to adjust this matter.

You state, however, that you are requested to approve an order of the court of common pleas of Lucas county directing payment to Gallia county of the taxes in question at the rate of four dollars per acre on said land, including penalties, and you now inquire as to your duties in reference thereto. I am wholly unable to understand in what way or by what means the common pleas court of Lucas county obtained jurisdiction in this matter. I conclude, therefore, that the order in question is to be made by consent and that you are requested merely to consent or agree to said order. This being so I must advise you that you are without any authority so to do.

I, therefore, hold that your board of county commissioners and you, as their representative, may not in any manner or by any method compromise, remit or release any of said taxes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—WHEN IT IS DUTY TO PROVIDE TRANSPORTATION FOR PUPILS WHO LIVE MORE THAN TWO MILES FROM SCHOOL—SECTIONS 7731 AND 7646, G. C., CONSTRUED.

The provision of the first part of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, taken in connection with the provisions of section 7646, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 228, makes it the duty of the board of education of a rural school district to provide transportation for those pupils residing in that part of said rural district formerly known as a subdistrict of said rural school district, and living more than two miles from the school maintained by said board of education in said part of said rural school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of November 20th, you state that in one of the rural school districts of your county the nearest school to the residence of certain children is more than two miles from said residence and that said children have been attending said school. You further state that the part of said rural school district in which said school is located and in which said children reside was formerly known as subdistrict No. _____.

You inquire whether section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, requires the board of education of said rural school district to provide transportation for said children.

While section 4716, G. C., which provided that:

> "The division of township school districts into subdistricts as they exist shall continue and be recognized for the purpose of school attendance, but the board of education may increase or diminish the number or change the boundaries of the subdistricts at any regular meeting," was repealed by the act of the general assembly as found in 104 O. L., 133, and the provisions of said section were not re-enacted, section 7646, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 228, is still in force and provides that:

> "The board of education of each rural school district shall establish and maintain at least one elementary school in each subdistrict under its control, unless transportation is furnished to the pupils thereof as provided by law."

Section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, provides in part as follows:

> "In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school. The transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education."

I have already held in opinion No. 875 of this department rendered to Hon. Joseph W. Horner, prosecuting attorney of Licking county, under date of September 30, 1915, that as to those pupils in a rural or village school district living more than two miles from the nearest school in said rural or village district, the above provision of section 7731, G. C., makes it the duty of the board of education of such school district to provide transportation for such pupils and if said board of education neglects or refuses to provide such transportation it becomes the duty of the board of education of the county school district, under provision of the latter part of said statute, to provide transportation for said pupils and charge the cost thereof to said local school district.

In keeping with my former holding I am, therefore, of the opinion in answer to your question that the above provision of section 7731, G. C., as amended, taken in connection with the provision of section 7646, G. C., as above quoted, makes it the duty of the board of education of the rural school district referred to in your inquiry to provide transportation for those pupils residing in that part of said rural school district formerly known as subdistrict No. ---------- and living more than two miles from the school maintained by said board of education in said part of said rural school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT MUST PUBLISH TRAFFIC RULES AND REGULATIONS PRESCRIBED BY STATE COMMISSIONER.

Section 7478, G. C., makes it mandatory upon the county highway superintendent to cause to be published the traffic rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 13, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

> "Does section 7478 of the General Code, as amended 106 Ohio Laws, 651, make it mandatory upon the county highway superintendent to publish the rules and regulations promulgated by the state highway commissioner, as provided for in said section?"

Section 7478, G. C., being section 251 of the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 574, 651, reads as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner shall furnish the county highway superintendent with a copy of the rules and regulations promulgated by said state highway commissioner, and applicable to his county. The county highway superintendent shall cause the rules and regulations so furnished to him by said highway commissioner to be published, at least once each week, for two successive weeks, in a newspaper published and of general circulation in said county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no newspaper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. When such regulations are published in the manner aforesaid, it shall be deemed a sufficient publication under the provisions of this act."

The language of the above quoted section would seem to leave no doubt as to its mandatory character. It is true that under familiar rules of construction the word "shall" may sometimes be read "may," but no reason can be suggested why such meaning should be given the word in the sentence now under consideration. On the other hand, certain other provisions of the Cass highway law make it manifest that in adopting section 251 of the Cass highway law the legislature intended to cast upon the county highway superintendent a mandatory duty in reference to causing the traffic rules and regulations prepared by the state highway commissioner to be published.

Section 294 of the act in question, being section 13421-17, G. C., makes it a misdemeanor to enter upon or travel over any portion of the state highways in violation of the traffic rules and regulations duly prescribed by the state highway commissioner and under the provisions of section 249 of the act such rules and regulations do not become effective until thirty days after publication. Publication in each county of the state of such traffic rules and regulations, at least once each week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper published and of general circulation therein, if such there be, is, therefore, a part of the promulgation of such rules and regulations.

I, therefore, conclude, in answer to your specific inquiry, that section 7478, G. C., makes it mandatory upon the county highway superintendent to cause to be published the rules and regulations prepared by the state highway commissioner, under authority of section 7246, G. C., and furnished to the county highway superintendent in compliance with the provisions of the first part of said section 7478, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 3019, G. C., AS TO FEES AND COSTS MADE BY JUSTICE OF PEACE OR CONSTABLE IN EXECUTION OF SEARCH WARRANT IN FELONY CASE.

Fees and costs made by a justice of the peace or constable or both in the execution of a search warrant in a felony case can only be paid in case of conviction or under the provisions of section 3019, G. C., when the state fails.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion on the question of the payment of certain fees and costs, which request is as follows:

"I would like an opinion on the following facts: An affidavit is filed before a justice of the peace charging the offense of burglary, and an affidavit is also filed before the same justice at the same time for a search warrant to search the premises of the party accused of burglary. The party charged with the offense was not and has not been apprehended, but the property which had been stolen was found upon the premises of the accused by the officer in executing the search warrant.

"Can the county commissioners allow the regular fees to the justice and constable for issuing the search warrant and for the search and seizure of the goods stolen, when the offender has not been apprehended and probably never will be?"

Sections 3015, 3016, 3017 and 3019 of the General Code, are as follows:

"Sec. 3015. The county commissioners may allow and pay the necessary expense incurred by an officer in the pursuit of a person charged with felony, who has fled the country.

"Sec. 3016. In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from the county treasury.

"Sec. 3017. In no other case whatever shall any cost be paid from the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, or constable.

"Sec. 3019. In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officer in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowance to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

It will be noted from the sections quoted that the only provisions of law for the payment of fees and costs referred to in your letter are in the case of felonies where the defendant has been convicted, or in the case of a misdemeanor wherein the defendant proves insolvent, in addition to the provision for the payment of fees and costs in cases of felony where the state fails—such payment being authorized by the provisions of section 3019 of the General Code, supra.

In the case presented by you, while there is ample provision for the paying of fees and costs for the services incidental to the execution of the search warrant, the conditions precedent to the payment of fees and costs have not been made inasmuch as there has not been a conviction in a felony case, nor has the state failed. Hence, it is my opinion that there is no authority for the payment of the fees and costs in the case presented by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HUMANE SOCIETY—COUNTY HAS NO AUTHORITY TO PAY AN ATTORNEY WHO CONDUCTS A PROSECUTION FOR DELINQUENCY IN JUVENILE COURT ON BEHALF OF SUCH SOCIETY.

There is no authority in law for the payment by the county of a bill rendered by the attorney for the humane society for conducting a prosecution for delinquency in a juvenile court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

HON. J. H. MUSSER, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion under date of December 11, 1915, which is as follows:

"Auglaize county has a humane society, with its principal officers located in St. Marys, Ohio. The humane society has an attorney who represents it if prosecution is brought.

"A short time ago a number of young girls were brought before our juvenile court, and charged with delinquency, and at the same time a number of men were brought before the court on a charge of contributing to the deliquency of the girls.

"The attorney, who represents the humane society in St. Marys, came into the juvenile court, and made the complaints, and looked after their prosecution.

"This attorney has now presented a bill to the probate court, who is our juvenile judge, for his approval, and the probate judge told the attorney to secure my approval before presenting the bill for payment.

"I refused to approve the bill, for the reason that I could not see that such prosecutions were among those described in section 13440 of the General Code.

"This attorney informed me that he had in the past prosecuted such cases as attorney for the humane society, and that his bill had been approved, allowed, and paid out of the county treasury, and that the county examiners had never as yet held the bill to be improper, and I then suggested to him that I would write you for your opinion in the matter. I wish that you would please advise me as to whether or not this is a proper bill to be paid by the county."

Section 13440 of the General Code is as follows:

"A humane society or its agent may employ an attorney to prosecute the following cases, under this section, who shall be paid for his services out of the county treasury in such sum as the judge of such county or the county commissioners thereof may approve as just and reasonable:

"1. Violations of law relating to the prevention of cruelty to animals or children;

"2. Violations of law relating to the abandonment, non-support or ill-treatment of a child by its parent;

"3. Violations of law relating to the employment of a child under fourteen years of age in public exhibitions or vocations injurious to health, life or morals or which cause or permit such child to suffer unnecessary physical or mental pain;

"4. Violations of law relating to neglect or refusal of adult to support destitute parent."

From a reading of the section referred to it will be noted that the prosecutions mentioned in your letter were not such as are contemplated under the provisions of section 13440 of the General Code, supra.

Section 1664 of the General Code, which is a part of the juvenile court law, is as follows:

"On the request of the judge exercising such jurisdiction, the prosecuting attorney of the county shall prosecute all persons charged with violating any of the provisions of this chapter."

There is no authority for the employment of a prosecutor in juvenile court cases save and except under the provisions of section 1664 of the General Code, supra, which makes it the duty of the prosecuting attorney, when called upon by the juvenile court judge, to prosecute cases pending in the juvenile court.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Commissioners, 8 O. N. P. n. s., 281, it was held:

"In the absence of statutory provision for the employment of persons to perform the duties of public officers, no person other than a public officer can legally be employed and paid from the public treasury, or perform the duties of a legal officer unless such officer refuses to act or has become adversely interested. The county commissioners have no power to employ special counsel to represent that board in specific litigation even though such appointment might be in accordance with the interests of the county."

There is nothing in the request submitted by you to indicate that the prosecuting attorney of Auglaize county refused to act or was adversely interested in the prosecution referred to; and there being no statutory authority for the employment of an officer of the humane society to conduct prosecutions in the juvenile court, such as referred to in your letter, it is my opinion that the bill for the services for such prosecution presented by him should not be allowed nor paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE AND COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARDS— CANNOT PAY SERVICES OF LEGAL COUNSEL—ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Neither the state nor the county liquor licensing board is authorized to pay for the services of legal counsel rendered for complainants or either of such boards in hearings in matters of rejection of applications for saloon licenses before the county board or upon appeal thereof before the state board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of December 14, 1915, with which you enclose a letter addressed to you by the Franklin county liquor licensing board and duplicate statement of claim made against the Franklin county board for legal services, stated in the letter to you to have been rendered to the complainants at a hearing before the Franklin county board in the matter of the rejection of the application of George J. Wahlemaier, for renewal of a saloon license. The statement, however, purports to make claim also for services in the same matter before the state liquor licensing board. This statement and letter of the Franklin county board, you state, are referred to me in the hope that I may be able to find some way to pay for the services mentioned.

Our authority is limited to that which we find to have been conferred by the legislative branch of the state government. In this view I call your attention to section 1261-55, G. C., 103 O. L., 233, which provides that in cases of appeal before the state board, such as that to which reference is made, the prosecuting attorney shall, upon request of the county board, represent the state at the hearing thereof.

In reference to the services rendered for complainants in this matter before the county board, it is sufficient to say that payment therefor is nowhere authorized by the statutes of this state.

Your attention is further called to the provisions of section 333 of the General Code, which are in part as follows:

> "The attorney general shall be the chief law officer for the state and all its departments. No state officer, board or the head of a department or institution of the state shall employ, or be represented by, other counsel or attorneys-at-law. * * *"

The statutory provisions above referred to not only provide ample counsel in the matters referred to, but clearly preclude the employment of other counsel than that which is therein provided in any event, by either the county or state boards, and the payment for services rendered complainants in hearings before county boards by either the state or county board is, in my opinion, unauthorized by law.

No request was made of this department for counsel in this case, although we are constantly looking after the work of your department.

I am, therefore, unable to approve the payment of the enclosed bill.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO UNIVERSITY—CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION AND COMPLETION OF A WOMEN'S DORMITORY FOR SAID UNIVERSITY, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 17, 1915.

HON. ALSTON ELLIS, President Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—A few days ago Hon. Frank L. Packard, architect for the board of trustees of Ohio unversity, submitted for my approval a contract entered into on the thirtieth day of October, 1915, between the Cullen & Vaughn Company, of Hamilton, Ohio, and the board of trustees of Ohio university, for the construction and completion of a women's dormitory for said university.

I have carefully examined the advertisement for bids and find that the same was made for the requisite time. It appears, however, that the same was inserted five times in the various newspapers, whereas four times would have been sufficient. However, if inserted four times a period of at least eight days must elapse after the fourth and last publication before the day fixed for opening the bids.

It appears from the transcript of the minutes of the meeting held by the board of trustees of Ohio university on October 30, 1915, that the Cullen & Vaughn Company, of Hamilton, Ohio, is the lowest bidder, the general bid being in the sum of $95,177, and the five alternates, to wit, alternates B, C, E, G and H, exercised by the board amounted to $2,619, or a total of $97,796. The amount of the architect's estimate for the building is $113,333.30. Therefore, the bid as accepted is below the architect's estimate by about $15,000.

In an examination of the specifications submitted at the time the plans were submitted it appears that there was no architect's estimate on the alternates. The same should have been estimated, either as an addition or deduction, at that time; but as the bid after the exercise of the alternates mentioned—all of which increased the cost of the building—was below the estimate, I make no objection to the fact that the alternates were not estimated in this instance.

The amount specified in the contract to be paid is $97,796, and is to be paid from the appropriation made in house bill No. 701, passed May 27, 1915, $15,000 of which was appropriated in section 2 thereof and $105,000 appropriated in section 3 thereof. The contract is, therefore, well within the amount appropriated. The bond is in proper form, and both are hereby approved.

On an examination of the appropriations made to the Ohio university for the purpose of the women's dormitory, I find that in section 2 of house hill No. 701 the following appropriation is made:

"G 2. Women's dormitory to cost complete with equipment $120,000.00 ---------- $15,000 00" and in section 3 thereof the following appropriation:
(106 O. L., 745.)

"To complete and equip women's dormitory---------- $105,000 00"
(106 O. L., 820.)

On an examination of the estimate made by the architect I note that but $910.00 was provided for the furnishing of said dormitory. Had the contract price been the amount of the architect's estimate of $113,333.30 and the architect's commission and advertising cost been as estimated, there would have been but $910.00 for furnishing or, in other words, equipping said women's dormitory. I am at a loss to understand how the sum of but $910.00 would be sufficient to complete the equipment of the women's dormitory in accordance with the intention of the legislature clearly expressed in the appropriation bill. The mere fact that the contract is for $15,000 less than the estimate does not, in my mind, justify the fact that the architect in his estimate estimated but $910.00 for the furnishing and equipment.

I have this day filed the contract and bond in the office of the auditor of state and have handed the rest of the papers to your architect, Mr. Packard.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 17, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your communication of December 4, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

"I quote for your information letter under date of November 30th, from Swint Bros., contractors, of Fremont, relative to two contracts with this department:

" 'Hon. Clinton Cowen, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

" 'My Dear Sir:—On August 7, 1915, we attended a letting at the Sandusky county court house, securing contract No. 742, known as I. C. H. No. 275 in Washington township, called the Fremont-Perrysburg road.

" 'Relative to the above contract, we wish to call your attention to our bid on this job, and which was made out as follows:

" 'Approx. Quantities.	Unit Bid Price.	Total Amt. Column
27,290 sq. yds.	3 4-5c	$1,100.00
1,000 tons stone.	$1.50	1,150.00

" 'You will notice that our unit bid price of 3 4-5c for the 27,290 square yards of reshaping and scarifying should make a total of $933.32, and instead of inserting that amount under the total amount bid, we inserted $1,100, which is an error on our part and in our favor. You will also find that our unit bid price for the 1,000 tons of stone was $1.50, which should make a total of $1,500 under the total amount bid column, and instead we inserted $1,150 in the column of total amount bid, therefore, you can plainly see that these errors are in our favor and also in your favor. The reason this occurred is that when we attended this letting we only had our figures in the unit bid price column, and only having a minute or two we inserted the total amount figures in the total amount column roughly and quickly so as to be able to hand our bid in for letting. We also wish to say that our time was so short that the district engineer and commissioner clerk granted us permission to have the bonds signed after the letting if we were awarded this contract, and which we secured, therefore, you will see that these figures in the total amount column were entered roughly by making errors in favor of us both.

" 'We have not as yet received full settlement from the state and county for the above contract, but up to date we have received one estimate, and in looking same over carefully together with our contract unit price, we note that you have allowed us 4c per square yard for reshaping and scarifying, and for stone you allowed us $1.15 per ton. You should have allowed us only according to our bid, 3 4-5c for reshaping and scarifying, and $1.50 per ton for stone, and according to your estimate you are paying us too much for reshaping and scarifying, and not enough for the stone, as it should be $1.50 per ton, and we wish you would please advise us if we are to receive settlement according to our unit price bid or not; however, we should. This price is what we intended receiving and not the total amount bid in the total amount column on account of the true facts explained to you in this letter.

" 'According to the quantities in this contract, as per your estimate, we are to receive in full $2,433.32, without figuring any of our extras, and if you should settle for our bid in the amount column we would only receive $2,250, and which would make a difference due us of $183.32, and which we believe we are entitled to, and which should be corrected on the contract and also adjusted on the final estimate which no doubt is in your hands at this time for payment. We also note on the contract (printed) that the yardage, etc., is governed according to unit bid prices only, and we sincerely hope and trust that you will give this matter your careful attention and allow us for this job according to our figures in the unit bid price column only, as we are frank to say that this is what we bid the work for, and as we have already had a considerable loss on this work we trust that you will fix this up all satisfactory when settling the final estimate, and which no doubt is in your hands by this time from the Sandusky county engineer.

" 'Thanking you very kindly for giving this your prompt and careful attention, and hoping to have an early and favorable reply, we are,

" 'Yours very truly,

" '(Signed) SWINT BROS.,

" 'SW-E. By S. A. Swint.

" 'P. S.—On August 6th we also secured contract No. 741, known as I. C. H. No. 275 in Washington township, Sandusky county, called the Fremont-Perrysburg road, for which we have settlement in full to date. However, according to our unit bid price, which was 3 4-5c for reshaping and scarifying, we should have received $1,289.15, and only received from your department as final settlement $1,166.69, at a price of 3 6-10c per square yard, which leaves a balance due us of $122.46 on this contract. We also wish you would please give this your careful attention and include same in final settlement when settling for the other contract above mentioned.'

"We are attaching hereto copies of proposals signed by the Swint Bros. Stone Co. in connection with each contract.

"The letter quoted above does not state all their troubles in connection with these contracts. A considerable amount of extra work has been performed by these contractors for which estimates have been allowed them at a unit price arrived at by ignoring the unit price as set out in the proposal and dividing the total amount bid by the quantities.

"I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the proper method of making payments both on the original contracts and for the extra work."

The form of proposal used by the contractor in both instances referred to by it is identical. The proposal which resulted in the award to the Swint Bros. Stone Co. of the contract known as contract No. 741, was headed as follows:

"PROPOSAL

For improving the section of intercounty highway No. 275 (the Fremont-Perrysburg road) in Washington township, Sandusky county, beginning at the west line of Washington township, and extending in a southeasterly direction to the Gibsonburg road, near the east line of section 9 a distance of 3.40 miles; by scarifying, reshaping the crown, thoroughly harrowing, filling depressions with No. 2 crushed limestone where ordered, rolling, applying screenings and water required to build a waterbound surface according to item A-3, including the cutting off of the shoulders where necessary."

The first part of the proposal was worded as follows:

"To the State Highway Commissioner.

"The undersigned, having full knowledge of the site, plans and attached specifications for the above improvement, hereby agrees to furnish all services, labor, materials and equipment required to complete the same by September 15, 1915, according to the plans and specifications and to accept in full compensation therefor the sum of twenty-two and fifty 00/100 ($2,-250.00).

"The undersigned further agrees to accept the following 'unit bid prices' in compensation for any small additions or deductions caused by any changes or alterations in the plans or specifications of the work.

"(The bidder is required to fill in under 'unit bid price,' a unit price for additions and deductions opposite each item for which there is a quantity given in the 'approximate estimate.' The gross sum of the totals in the 'total' columns shall equal the sum (given above) bid for the work.)"

Following the portion of the proposal quoted above was a table, in which table appeared a number of printed columns showing the approximate quantities, units of measurements, items and approxicate estimates, the latter being subdivided under the heads of "estimated unit cost" and "totals."

From the printed table referred to above it appears that in the matter now under consideration the work to be done was estimated at 27,290 square yards of scarifying, etc., at a unit cost of four cents per square yard, or a total of $1,116.80, and 1,000 tons of limestone screenings at a unit cost of one dollar and fifty cents per ton, or a total of $1,500.00. The table referred to above also contains a column for the itemized proposal, subdivided under the heads of "unit bid price" and "total amount bid." The contractor in the case now under consideration inserted in the column for "unit bid price" a bid of three and four-fifths cents per square yard for scarifying, etc., and a bid of one dollar and fifty cents per ton for limestone screenings. In the column provided for "total amount bid" the contractor inserted the sum of $1,100.00 for scarifying, etc., and the sum of $1,150.00 for limestone screenings, and the amount of $2,250.00 for gross sum bid.

The proposal was then concluded with the following language:

"On acceptance of this proposal for said work we do hereby bind ourselves to enter into written contract with the state highway commissioner within ten days from date of notice of award, and to give the required bond and surety to perform said work for the consideration above named."

As previously indicated, the same form of proposal was used as to contract No. 741. As to the proposal which resulted in an award of that contract to the Swint Bros. Stone Co., it should be observed that the table embodied in said proposal contained an estimate of 32,229 square yards of scarifying, etc., at a unit cost of four cents per square yard, or a total of $1,289.16, and 1,100 tons of limestone screenings at a unit cost of one dollar and fifty cents per ton, or a total of $1,650.00. In filling out the itemized proposal contained in said table the contractor inserted in the column provided for "unit bid price" a bid of three and four-fifths cents per square yard for scarifying, etc., and a bid of one dollar and fifty cents per ton for limestone screenings. In the column provided for "total amount bid" the contractor inserted the amount of $1,166.69 for scarifying, etc., and $1,650.00 for limestone screenings, or a gross bid of $2,816.69.

The bids of the Swint Bros. Stone Co. being the low bids as to these two improvements, this company was awarded the contracts and agreements were duly signed. So much of contract No. 742 as is material to the present inquiry reads as follows:

> "For and in consideration of payments hereinafter mentioned, to be made by the party of the first part, party of the second part agrees to furnish all materials, appliances, tools and labor, and perform all the work required for the improvement of a certain portion of the public highway known as section (——) of Fremont-Perrysburg road, I. C. H. No. 275, Washington township, Sandusky county, petition No. ——, state of Ohio, according to the plans and specifications and to the satisfaction and acceptance of the party of the first part.
> "The party of the second part further covenants and agrees that the following papers shall be bound with, and be an essential part of this contract: Notice to contractors, instructions to bidders, specifications, proposal for the work and bond for the performance of the contract.
> "In consideration of the foregoing premises the party of the first part agrees to pay to the party of the second part the sum of twenty-two hundred and fifty dollars ($2,250.00)."

In drawing contract No. 741 the same blank form was used as in the preparation of contract No. 742.

Referring now to contract No. 742 and the proposal for the same, it should first be observed that in the proposal form with which bidders were supplied there appeared an error in the computations made thereon. The quantity of scarifying, etc., was estimated at 27,290 square yards and the estimated unit cost thereof at four cents per square yard. By multiplying the estimated quantity by the estimated cost per unit, it is determined that the total estimated cost of the scarifying, etc., was $1,091.60. This amount should have been printed in the sub-column of the approximate estimate devoted to "totals," but instead of inserting this sum the sum actually inserted was $1,116.80.

When the contractor came to bid upon the scarifying, etc., it inserted in the "unit price" column the sum of three and four-fifths cents. By multiplying the approximate quantity of scarifying, etc., to wit, 27,290 square yards, by the unit price bid by the contractor the result is found to be $1,037.02, instead of $933.32, as stated by the contractor in its letter to you. Despite the fact that the approximate quantity of scarifying, etc., multiplied by the unit bid price amounts to only $1,037.02, the contractor inserted in the column provided for "total amount bid" the sum of $1,100.00. As to the item of limestone screenings, the approximate quantity was 1,000 tons, and the contractor inserted in the column provided for "unit bid price" the sum of one dollar and fifty cents, but despite this fact it inserted in the column devoted to "total amount bid" the sum of $1,150.00. As to the proposal which resulted in the award of contract No. 741 to this contractor the approximate quantity of scarifying, etc., was 32,229 square yards, and the unit bid price was three and four-fifths cents per square yard. By multiplying the quantity by the unit bid price the result obtained is $1,224.70, instead of $1,289.15, as stated by the contractor in its letter. The contractor in filling out the proposal inserted in the column provided for "total amount bid" a bid of $1,166.69 for scarifying, etc.

Both of these contracts have been completed and in both cases the plans and specifications for the work were changed after the contracts were entered into and these changes have resulted in the performance of a certain amount of extra work on the part of the contractor.

As indicated by your communication, two questions present themselves for consideration:

> "1. To what compensation is the contractor entitled for work covered by the original contract?
> "2. To what compensation is the contractor entitled for extra work rendered necessary by changes in the plans and specifications?"

It should first be observed that, while under ordinary conditions and circumstances a contractor would insert in the column devoted to "unit bid price" the same unit price used by him in computing the total amount bid by him, yet there is no positive requirement on the face of the proposal to the effect that the unit price bid by the contractor for additions or deductions must be the same unit price used by him in computing the total amount bid by him for any class of work.

Considering the proposals and the contracts together there is but one conclusion that can be reached as to their legal effect in case no changes should be made in the plans and specifications and the quantity of work thereby changed. The contracts were for the performance of certain work according to the plans and specifications and upon the completion of that work, in case no changes were ordered, the contractor was entitled to receive the lump sum set forth in the contracts, and that without regard to whether the actual quantities should prove greater or less than the estimates. In other words, the contracts, in so far as they contemplate the completion of the proposed work without changes or alterations in the plans, were contracts upon a lump sum basis and the unit bid price therein could have no possible effect or operation unless changes were made in the plans and specifications, which changes might increase or diminish the quantity of work required of the contractor. This being true, it is my opinion and I advise you that in settling with the contractor he is entitled to receive for the work covered by the original plans and specifications for contract No. 742 the sum of $2,250.00, and for contract No. 741 the sum of $2,816.69.

In so far as extra scarifying, etc., rendered necessary by any changes or alterations in the plans or specifications is concerned, the contractor is entitled to receive for such extra work its unit bid price of three and four-fifths cents per square yard, and in so far as extra limestone screenings rendered necessary by any change or alterations in the plans or specifications are concerned, the contractor is entitled to receive for such extra screenings its unit bid price of one dollar and fifty cents per ton. This last observation as to the prices to be allowed for extra work rendered necessary by changes in the plans and specifications applies alike to both contracts, since the unit bid prices in both cases are the same.

It may well be that the contractor in these particular instances made an error in that its intention was to bid $1,037.02 for the scarifying, etc., and $1,500.00 for the limestone screenings required under contract No. 742, and that it intended to bid $1,224.70 for the scarifying, etc., as to contract No. 741, but it cannot be heard to say at this date that it did not mean to bid the sum set forth in its proposals and in the written contracts duly executed by it. The contractor's remedy would seem to be to give more time to its mathematical calculations, for even in the communication which it has addressed to you it has made two errors in computing the amounts which it claims were intended to be inserted in its original proposals.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—FOREIGN MANUFACTURING CORPORATION —RULE FOR DETERMINING RELATIVE VOLUME OF BUSINESS OF SUCH CORPORATION WHEN IT OPERATES FACTORIES IN OHIO AND ALSO SELLS PRODUCTS OF OUTSIDE FACTORIES IN OHIO.

Rule for determining relative volume of business of foreign manufacturing corporation when it operates factories in Ohio and also sells product of outside factories in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 18, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have referred to me the facts respecting the business of the Carnegie Steel Company, the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company, the American Steel & Wire Company, the American Bridge Company, International Harvester Company of New Jersey and the International Harvester Corporation, foreign corporations doing business in Ohio, with the request that I advise you, in as much detail as the nature of the case warrants, as to the proper method of computing the proportion of the total authorized capital stock of these several companies represented by their property and business in Ohio, for the purpose of assessing the annual franchise tax.

A general statement of facts will suffice to cover all of the specific cases submitted. In each case the company has one or more manufacturing plants in Ohio, and, consequenly, exercises the function of production within the borders of this state. Each company also has one or more manufacturing plants which are located outside of the state of Ohio. Each company sells the products both of Ohio factories and other factories to Ohio buyers. In some cases these sales are made by the negotiations of a business agency located outside of the state of Ohio, in such way as to call for delivery directly from the factory to the buyer. For the purposes of this opinion, such sales will be characterized as "factory sales." Some of the companies at least also maintain in the state of Ohio branch houses or warehouses, from which deliveries are made; and stocks in such warehouses are made up indiscriminately of the products of Ohio factories and other factories. Such sales will, for the purposes of this opinion, be called "branch house sales."

The production activities of the several companies, of course, vary according to the nature of their respective businesses. All of them, however, are as a matter of course engaged in transforming what is, for their purposes, raw material into what is, for their purposes, a finished product, though the raw material worked upon by them may be the finished product of another kind of manufacturing business, and though their finished products may constitute the raw material of still another kind of manufacturing business.

The discussion of the principles involved in and the rules to be evolved from facts of this character starts with the general conclusions expressed in my opinion to the commission respecting the franchise tax of Swift & Company, being opinion No. 246, rendered on April 13, 1915.

In that opinion I advised the commission that manufacturing is not commerce; and that when a corporation organized under the laws of another state carries on manufacturing operations within this state, it is, to the full extent of its character as a producer, "transacting business" within this state; and that as such it is, on that account alone, obliged to comply with the laws of this state and subject to an annual franchise tax therefor, it being necessarily assumed, of course, that it will have and employ a part or all of its capital or plant in this state. The conclusion was therefore reached that such manufacturing activities so carried on in this state constituted "business in this state" for the purpose of the section of the General Code which prescribes the rule for the apportionment of the franchise tax.

It was further pointed out that the thing aimed at by the statute, so far as business is concerned, is the relative volume thereof in this state as compared with the total volume of the business of the company.

The conclusion was reached that sales, though themselves partaking of the nature of commerce rather than of the nature of production, might be used to indicate the volume of manufacturing business; so that the sales of the product of an Ohio factory, for example, might be regarded as indicative of the volume of manufacturing business carried on at that factory; and the total sales of the company—that is, the sales of the products of all its factories—might be regarded as indicative of the volume of its manufacturing business everywhere. It was, however, conceded in the opinion that, scientifically, sales do not constitute an accurate criterion of the volume or extent of manufacturing; so that there could be no objection at least to the adoption of some other criterion which might more accurately represent or indicate the exact relative volume of manufacturing activities.

The opinion referred to went on to point out that while the production activities of a corporation of themselves constituted "business," yet every manufacturing corporation is under the necessity of disposing of its products, and in disposing of them must necessarily engage in commerce—that is, in sales and deliveries. So that, in perfect accuracy, the production activities of a manufacturing corporation constitute but one side of its whole business, its selling or commercial activities constituting another and equally important side. Therefore, when a foreign corporaion which has no factory in Ohio maintains a branch house in this state, where it keeps a stock of goods from which sales and deliveries are made, it is likewise "doing business" in Ohio, though it does not carry on within this state any of its production activities. Though the previous opinion is silent on this point, it follows that when a corporation which has a factory in Ohio sells some of the products of that factory directly to an Ohio consumer, it is likewise on that account alone "doing business" in Ohio.

All these things being true, for the reasons stated in the former opinion, the present problem is to work out a scientific, accurate rule of apportionment under the statute as applied to facts like those above set forth.

In the first place, it is to be remembered that under the recent decision of Judge Kinkead of the common pleas court of Franklin county, in State v. Cabin Creek Consolidated Coal Company, the assessment must in all cases be made by adding together the figures representing property and business in Ohio and dividing them by the figures representing property and business everywhere, which are to be added together in like manner; then multiplying the resultant fraction or percentage by the total authorized capital stock of the company, the result being a figure which constitutes the "proportion of the total authorized capital stock of the company representing its property and business in Ohio," upon which the tax or fee at the rate of three-twentieths of one per cent. is to be computed.

On the basis of this decision we may, for convenience, consider the initial calculation as a fraction, in the numerator of which must appear all elements constituting Ohio business or property, and in the denominator of which must appear all elements indicating the total business or property of the same kind or character. For the purposes of this opinion, therefore, this calculation will be herein referred to as the basic fraction.

Now in the cases submitted the companies may be considered, I think, as engaged in at least two distinct kinds of business in Ohio, viz.: production and sales; and the business of sales may, for the purpose of perfect accuracy, be subdivided into that represented by direct factory sales and that represented by branch house sales.

In my opinion, there should be an element both in the numerator and in the denominator of the fraction representing each kind of business so above distinguished, in order to work out a scientifically satisfactory rule. Each of the companies should report to the commission its direct factory sales in Ohio—meaning thereby the sales of its Ohio factories directly to Ohio buyers, and this amount should be placed in the numerator of the basic fraction; the company should also report all of its direct factory sales, whether of the products of other factories to Ohio customers or of the products of such factories to buyers outside of Ohio, and including likewise the sales of the products of Ohio factories directly to buyers outside of Ohio, in addition to the Ohio direct factory sales as above described; that is to say, this figure should represent all the direct factory sales of the company, and it should be placed in the denominator of the basic fraction.

Each company should also report its total Ohio branch house sales, and this figure should be placed in the numerator of the fraction; in the denominator and corresponding therewith should be placed a figure to be reported by the company representing its total sales from branch houses; the sum of the two figures in the denominator should equal the total sales of the company for the year covered by the report.

So far the fraction contains figures on both sides thereof representing the commercial activities of the company in Ohio and everywhere, and disclosing with substantial accuracy, it seems to me, the extent to which the franchise to sell is exercised in Ohio as compared with the total exercise of that particular corporate franchise everywhere.

The function of production, not being thus far accounted for, is to be represented by a figure in the numerator of the fraction measuring the total volume of production of the Ohio factories, and a corresponding figure in the denominator representing the total volume of production of the company for the year.

In the previous opinion it was said that total sales might represent the thing to be measured, and might be used to define the proportion or relation in this respect; but in the other opinion the inference was plainly left that any other criterion of volume of production satisfactory to the commission and to the company might be selected instead of sales.

In the particular cases now under consideration I am informed, through correspondence and conference with Messrs. Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, counsel for the several companies, that another criterion of volume is preferred. It may be described in general as follows:

From the total selling price of the product the followning deductions are made:

1. The cost of the raw material;
2. The profits, including cost of delivering finished product.

It is obvious that the result of making these deductions is to leave a figure which represents the actual enhancement in the value of commodities produced by the manufacturing operations conducted at the particular factory, less profits. The profits and delivery costs are deducted because, in a most accurate sense, they are produced by the commercial activities of the company—by its sales, and not by its production. The cost of the raw material is eliminated because it is in no sense the product of the exercise of the corporate franchise. It is true that where the manufacturing company actually produces its own raw material in Ohio, the cost of producing the same should not be deducted. I am informed that this is not the case with respect to any of the companies under consideration. The most accurate way in which to put the point now under discussion is to say that there should be deducted from the value of the product manufactured in Ohio the cost of materials purchased anywhere and the value of materials produced by the company outside of Ohio.

If the figures arrived at by making the aforesaid deductions for each Ohio factory are added together and placed in the numerator, and if corresponding figures, the same deductions being made, are used to measure the volume of all manufacturing business wherever conducted and placed in the denominator, the basic fraction will be complete so far as business is concerned; then there should be, of course, added to the numerator the value of the capital or plant of the company in Ohio, and its total capital investment everywhere should be placed in the denominator; then all the figures in the numerator should be added together and likewise those in the denominator, the fraction ascertained and the process as outlined by Judge Kinkead carried out.

I am informed that the above mentioned companies are willing to file corrected reports under oath, setting forth their respective figures ascertained according to the above rule. I advise the commission that when such reports are filed they may lawfully and should, in the interest of approximate accuracy, be received by the commission and used in the manner above indicated to make the respective assessments which are involved.

For the sake of clearness I may express the process approved in this opinion as follows:

Numerator:

> Value of capital and plant in Ohio plus Ohio factory sales, plus Ohio branch house sales, plus factory value of goods manufactured in Ohio (meaning the selling price less delivery costs and profits, and including all goods produced within the year, whether sold or not), minus the cost of raw material entering into same (none being produced by the company in Ohio).

Denominator:

> The total value of the capital and plant of the company in the aggregate, plus all sales of the company, whether through branch houses or by direct factory delivery, plus the total production everywhere (meaning the factory value of all the annual product of the company, whether sold or unsold, during the year, minus the cost of raw material purchased).

I do not mean to be understood as holding that the above formula is strictly logical and closed to technical objections. On the contrary, there is a duplication of factors, in that the company's sales, both in Ohio and everywhere, and whether through branch houses or by direct factory deliveries, are measured by the total selling price, which includes, of course, not only the production elements elsewhere entering into the numerator and the denominator of the fraction, but also the cost of raw materials.

To make the formula perfect this duplication should be avoided, and the elements in the numerator and in the denominator, respectively, so based as to measure with logical perfection the exact amount of "business done" represented by the discharge of the several functions. That is to say, each element might, and perhaps technically should, be based upon figures which will represent the exact enhancement of the values brought about by the exercise of the particular function which is being accounted for thereby; for "business" as used in the law may, and in entire accuracy should be, regarded as the creation of values.

Such a strictly scientific formula would be stated as follows:

Numerator:

Value of capital and plant in Ohio plus (the sales in Ohio of the product of Ohio factories, whether through branch houses or by direct delivery, minus cost of material purchased anywhere or value of material produced outside of Ohio), plus (sales from Ohio branch houses of the products of foreign factories, minus value of the product on arrival at branch houses), plus (factory value of annual product of Ohio factories, eliminating therefrom such product as has been sold in Ohio during the year and leaving therefore (the unsold Ohio product plus the Ohio product sold outside of Ohio) minus material entering into Ohio product so diminished, purchased anywhere or produced outside of Ohio).

Denominator:

Aggregate value of the capital and plant of the company everywhere, plus total sales everywhere, plus factory value of goods manufactured everywhere during the year but not sold, minus the cost of all material purchased.

While the formula last above set forth is strictly and technically correct, practical reasons have deterred me from advising the commission to adopt it in the present cases. It must be conceded that under section 5502, G. C., the commission has some discretion in adopting methods of arriving at and measuring the relative volume of business in Ohio. Therefore, if practical considerations should dictate the employment of a formula against which purely technical objections might be raised, I believe the commission would be justified in following the practical method.

I can see one practical objection to the formula last above stated: As it is stated, it is of universal application and should fit any manufacturing company. Should it be applied, however, to a manufacturing company having no factory in Ohio, but engaged in business extensively in Ohio through branch houses, the formula would require that the company's business in Ohio be measured solely by what might be roughly called the profits of the company from such Ohio business, and what is, with perfect accuracy, described as the difference between the value of the goods as delivered in Ohio at the branch houses and the price for which the same goods are sold in Ohio. If it should appear that through market conditions, or otherwise, goods produced outside of Ohio were sold through Ohio branch houses at less than the cost to manufacture them and deliver them to the Ohio branch houses, great difficulty would be presented in the practical application of the strict formula last above set forth. I do not think that the occurrence of such a condition—the occurrence of which is, of course, entirely possible and at times actually probable—would prove the mathematically exact formula wrong. In such case, however, it would be necessary to revalue the product, as such, from day to day during a year of fluctuating markets and to enter into a rather complicated calculation to determine just how much enhancement of value to the company had been produced by its selling agencies, as such, during that period.

It is not for me to say that the more accurate formula above expressed is entirely impracticable. The commission is the judge of that. But I have rejected it as impracticable in the instant cases and at the present time, for the reason that I know the commission has always measured the business done in Ohio by a company having no producing plant in this state by the gross sales thereof in Ohio as compared with gross sales everywhere. There are many such companies which have been assessed for franchise taxes for the current year and for past years on this basis. Uniformity of apportionment is to be sought, within the limits of the law, above all things else. Hence, it would be most improper, I think, to adopt the strictly logical and scientific formula last above set forth, if it is to be adopted at all, as to a few companies in a given year without applying it to all. To apply this formula to all companies would necessitate a reorganization of the commission's methods and a revision of the blank forms used by it. I am satisfied that in the particular cases under consideration the choice between the two methods above outlined does not make any very material difference in the amount of taxes paid by the companies. Therefore, it seems to me that even though the commission should find it practicable to adopt the more elaborate and technically correct formula which I have stated, the commission should not attempt to put it into effect except at the beginning of an annual assessment of the tax, so that all foreign corporations in the same category can be treated alike. Hence, I repeat my advice that the first of the two formulas above set forth be used in the cases of the above named companies for the current year.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HON. A. C. MCDOUGAL, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of December 10th, which is in part as follows:

"The tax commission of Ohio, as I am informed, has communicated with our county auditor with reference to the employment of extra help in his office made necessary by the repeal of the Warnes law which repeal as I understand it requires the work now being performed by the district assessor in each county to be performed by the county auditor on and after January 1, 1916, and without making any provision for the payment of any extra compensation to the auditor, deputy or clerk for the performance of such extra labor.

"I am informed that the tax commission of Ohio has cited the auditor of our county to section 2980-1, G. C., as amended, approved March 1, 1915, Vol. 105-6 O. L., pages 14, 15, as authority for obtaining such extra compensation.

"The county auditor and several of the county officials have been allowed by the county commissioners the limit or maximum prescribed by the above section of the General Code measured by the percentum limitations as provided therein. Said auditor and other county officials have filed their applications with the judge of the court of common pleas of this county asking for an additional allowance to carry on the business of their respective offices as provided in said section of the Code.

"The applications for extra allowances in this county have been approved by the county commissioners as provided by said section of the Code.

"The above cited section of the Code provides for a hearing upon said applications, and if upon hearing the same said judge shall find that such necessity exists, he may allow such sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salary of such deputy, etc.

"The common pleas judge of this county frankly informs me that unless compelled to do so he will refuse to make extra allowances to said officials.

"Is the above provision of the Code prescribing the duties of said judge mandatory or discretionary? In other words, would mandamus lie to compel him to make such allowances? Or could he refuse to make the same in the exercise of his discretion?"

Section 2980, G. C., provides that:

"On the twentieth of each November such officer (the probate judge, auditor, treasurer, clerk of courts, sheriff or recorder of the county) shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks and other employes, except court constables, of their respective offices, showing in detail the requirements of their offices for the year beginning January 1st, next thereafter with the sworn statement of the amount expended by them for such assistants for the preceding year. Not later than five days after the filing of such statement, the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such period for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes of such officer, except court constables, which sum shall be reasonable and proper, and shall enter such finding upon their journal."

Section 2980-1, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 14, provides that:

"The aggregate sum so fixed by the county commissioners to be expended in any year for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes, except court constables, shall not exceed for any county auditor's office, county treasurer's office, probate judge's office, county recorder's office, sheriff's office, or office of the clerk of the courts, an aggregate amount to be ascertained by computing thirty per cent. on the first two thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, forty per cent. on the next eight thousand dollars or fractional part thereof and eighty-five per cent. on all over ten thousand dollars, of the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected for the use of the county in any such office for official services during the year ending September thirtieth next preceding the time of fixing such aggregate sum."

Said section further provides that:

"If at any time any one of such officers require additional allowance in order to carry on the business of his office, said officer may make application to a judge of the court of common pleas, of the county wherein such officer was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application and if, upon hearing the same said judge shall find that such necessity exists, he may allow such a sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salary of such deputy, deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes as may be required, and thereupon the board of county commissioners shall transfer from the general county fund, to such officers' fee fund, such sum of money as may be necessary to pay said salary or salaries.

"Notice in writing of such application and the time fixed by such judge for the hearing thereof shall be served by the applicant, five days before said hearing upon the board of county commissioners of such county. And said board shall file in said proceeding their approval or disapproval of the allowance asked for and shall have the right to appear at such hearing and be heard thereon; and evidence may be offered."

It seems clear to my mind, that, in view of the provision of said statute that if upon hearing the application the judge shall find "that such necessity exists," he may allow such a sum of money "as he deems necessary" to pay the salary of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers or other employes as may be required, the judge of the court of common pleas, to whom said application is made, is vested with the discretion to determine in view of all the facts and circumstances of each particular case whether the additional amount applied for, or any part of said amount, shall be allowed.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that an action in mandamus will not lie to compel the court of common pleas of your county to make the additional allowances for which applications have been made by the county officials referred to in your inquiry.

Prior to the enactment of the Warnes law all of this clerical work was done in the office of the county auditor. After the enactment of said law few, if any, auditors in the state reduced their force in the slightest, claiming that all of their force was required at certain times of the year and that as to the work taken away from them and given over to the Warnes law assessors, that had always been done between rush seasons by their regular force. Perhaps this is what was in the mind of your common pleas judge when he stated to you that no increase would be granted.

Ordinarily and without peculiar circumstances in a particular case I see no reason for increasing the clerical force in the auditor's office, especially when such force was not reduced at the time the said Warnes law became effective.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS, NOT AUTHORIZED TO SELL ANY PART OF CANAL EMBANKMENT BY SECTION 13971 OF APPENDIX TO GENERAL CODE—MAY SELL UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 412, G. C.—LIMITATIONS APPLICABLE TO SUCH SALE—THE B. F. GOODRICH COMPANY, AKRON, OHIO.

The superintendent of public works is not authorized by section 13971 of the Appendix of the General Code to sell any part of a canal embankment. Should the superintendent of public works, acting under authority of section 412, G. C., narrow a canal embankment or eliminate an unnecessary basin, he may, under certain conditions, be authorized to sell a part of the land not occupied by the canal and its reconstructed embankments, but no sale should be made which would reduce the width of the state's property below its narrowest width at any adjacent point. The state's property should not be narrowed at any point so as to prevent an improvement of such width as might be made at other points along the same canal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 20, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 5, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "The B. F. Goodrich Co. has made application to the superintendent of public works for the purchase of the parcels of state land along the Ohio canal in the city of Akron, shown in yellow on the plat hereto attached marked 'Exhibit A' and made a part hereof.
> "This department favors selling these parcels of land if it can legally be done.
> "The company will construct a much needed perpendicular, concrete retaining wall about 1,650 feet long on the water line of the canal to maintain a tow path.
> "The sale of these parcels, according to the application of the company, would leave ten feet of level surface for tow path, forty feet, top and bottom of water, and nothing for berme bank.
> "The department is satisfied to retain only forty feet, top and bottom, of water, but is in doubt whether it can legally sell without retaining 15.68 feet, instead of ten feet, for tow path and twelve feet, instead of nothing, for berme bank.
> "The superintendent asks that the attorney general give his opinion as to whether a sale of Ohio canal lands reserving only ten feet for tow path and nothing for berme bank can legally be made.
> "The B. F. Goodrich Company will furnish a brief to the attorney general."

You transmitted to me, along with the above quoted communication, a plat showing the lands involved in your inquiry, a series of drawings showing cross sections of the Ohio canal under varying conditions and a copy of the rules and specifications relating to the construction of the Ohio canal and the estimating of work performed thereon. On the 10th of November I was in receipt of a brief from the B. F. Goodrich Company, which brief was accompanied by a number of blue prints and photographs, and on the 19th day of November I received from you a pamphlet containing additional information bearing upon the question submitted by you.

I desire to first call your attention to the sections of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio, relating to the leasing and selling of canal lands. So much of section 13965 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio as is pertinent to the present inquiry reads as follows:

> "That each and every tract of land, and any part of the berme bank of any canal, canal basin, reservoir and outer slope of the towing path embankment, * * * may be leased. * * *"

The pertinent provision of section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code is as follows:

> "Any land or lands belonging to the state of Ohio, near or remote from the line of any canal in this state, that cannot be leased so as to yield six per cent. on the valuation thereof * * * may be sold. * * *"

A comparison of the provisions of the two sections referred to above shows that under the section relating to leasing, there are three classes of canal property that may be leased, to wit: (1) Canal land, (2) any part of the berme bank of any canal, canal basin or reservoir, and (3) the outer slope of the towing path embankment of a canal; while the section relating to sales contains no reference to berme banks or towing path embankments and only goes so far as to authorize the sale of any land or lands belonging to the state of Ohio and near or remote from the line of any canal.

From the language used in the two sections and from the fact that in the section relating to leases, berme banks and the outer slopes of towing path embankments are specifically referred to, while in the section relating to sales, no reference whatever is made to berme banks or towing path embankments, it clearly appears that the legislature intended to permit the leasing of the berme bank of any canal and the outer slope of the towing path embankment thereof and did not intend to authorize the sale of any part of either embankment. It may, therefore, be safely asserted that the superintendent of public works, while authorized to lease all or any part of the berme bank of a canal and the outer slope of the towing path embankment, is not authorized to sell any part of either embankment and in making sales of canal lands is limited to those lands lying outside the lines marking the outer edges of the two embankments of a canal.

It is provided, however, by section 412, G. C., 103 O. L., 120, that the superintendent of public works shall have the care and control of the public works of the state and shall make such alterations and changes thereof as he may deem proper in the discharge of his duties. I am of the opinion that this confers a certain degree of authority upon the superintendent of public works to narrow the embankments of the canals of the state and to eliminate basins not necessary for the storage of water or other purposes incident to the operation and use of the canals, by constructing a new embankment inside the line of the old.

At the time the Ohio canal was constructed, the use of concrete retaining walls was unknown and all the canal embankments were constructed of earth. In order that these embankments might have sufficient strength to resist the force of the water, it was necessary to build them with wide slopes. Land was not expensive at that time and often where the canal skirted the base of a hill, no berme bank was constructed and the water was allowed to form a basin, bounded on one side by the towing path embankment and on the other by the hill. It was in this manner that the basin to the west of the B. F. Goodrich Company's plant was formed. While authority exists to eliminate unnecessary basins and to narrow embankments by the use of modern concrete construction, yet this authority should never be so exercised as to narrow the channel of the canal or the towing path below their minimum dimensions, as disclosed by the original plans and specifications for the construction of the canal in question.

The determination of this question does not, however, dispose of the question as to the right of the superintendent of public works to sell any lands not occupied by the canal and its embankments after such narrowing process has been carried to completion. Before discussing that question it becomes necessary, in the view that I take of the law, to note the character and extent of the state's canal property in the vicinity of the land which the B. F. Goodrich Company desires to purchase.

A careful examination of Silliman's Survey of that part of the Ohio canal in the city of Akron discloses that the canal property owned by the state in that city varies in width from about 65 feet to about 267 feet. The approximate width of the state's property, as shown by Silliman's Survey, beginning at Ravine street in the northern part of the city and extending to Nathan street in the southern part of the city, is as follows:

"At Ravine street---------- 90 feet
At Maple street---------- 125 feet
At North street---------- 115 feet
At B. & O. R. R. crossing---------- 100 feet
At Station 1794---------- 76 feet
At Lock No. 11---------- 84 feet
At Station 1803---------- 124 feet
At Lock No. 8---------- 68 feet
At Cherry street---------- 80 feet
At Ash street (south side)---------- 65 feet
At Quarry street---------- 73 feet
At Lock No. 3---------- 67 feet
At State street---------- 92 feet
At Buchtel avenue---------- 107 feet
At Exchange street---------- 82 feet
At Cedar street---------- 100 feet
At Chestnut street---------- 90 feet
At the basin (widest point)---------- 267 feet
At Falor street---------- 203 feet
At Station 1875---------- 85 feet
At Bartges street---------- 75 feet
At Campbell street---------- 80 feet
At Vassar street---------- 75 feet
At LaSalle and Princeton---------- 76 feet
At Thornton street---------- 79 feet
At Wolfe street---------- 76 feet
At Nathan street---------- 85 feet"

The part of the canal referred to in your inquiry and along which the B. F. Goodrich Company desires to purchase certain land, extends south from Cedar street, where the state's property has a width of about 100 feet, to Bartges street, where the state's property has a width of about 75 feet. The B. F. Goodrich Company desires to purchase land on both sides of the canal between these two streets and to reduce the state's property between these two points to a width of only 50 feet. It should be observed at this point that the future policy of the state, with reference to its canal system, remains to be determined. It is not known at the present time whether the state will sell its canals, repair and maintain them at their present width, or enlarge, improve and practically reconstruct them. This lack of a definitely established policy for the future should be taken into account in dealing with the canal property of the state under the existing statutes, and the authorities charged with the control and management of the canal property should not, by sales of canal lands, so narrow the state's property at any point as to prevent an improvement of such width as might be made at other points along the same canal. This conclusion is dictated not only by the existing statutes, but also by the principles of sound public policy.

It appears that at only three points in the city of Akron is the state's property of less width than about 73 feet. At Lock No. 8 the state's property narrows to a width of about 68 feet for a distance of about 70 feet. At the south side of Ash street the state's property is about 65 feet wide for a distance of about 120 feet. At Lock No. 3 the width is about 67 feet for a distance of about 80 feet. The narrowest part of the state's property in the vicinity of the land which the B. F. Goodrich Company desires to purchase is at Bartges street, where the width is about 75 feet.

Applying the above principles to the facts presented by your inquiry, it is my opinion that you are authorized by the provisions of section 412, G. C., to narrow the towing path embankment between Cedar street and Bartges street by the use of concrete retaining walls and to eliminate, by the construction of a new berme bank, so much of the basin to the west of the plant of the B. F. Goodrich Company as is not needed for canal purposes, and that when this narrowing process is completed a part of the land not occupied by the canal and its embankments may, under certain conditions, be sold, but that in making such sale of land you should, under no circumstances, reduce the width of the state's property below its narrowest width at any adjacent point. In other words, in making a sale of any lands not occupied by the canal or its embankments, after such embankments have been reconstructed and narrowed you should reserve for the state a strip of land between Cedar street and Bartges street not less than 75 feet in width, that being the approximate width of the state's property at Bartges street at the present time.

Answering your specific question, I advise that you should not make a sale of so much of the state's property as is described in the application of the B. F. Goodrich Company referred to by you in your communication. Even should the narrowing process referred to above be carried out under authority of section 412, G. C., the land outside of the lines marking a 75 feet strip of land to be reserved by the state could only be sold by you under the conditions set forth by law for the sale of other canal lands. In other words, the land outside the 75 feet strip to be reserved for the state could not be sold if it could be leased so as to yield six per cent. on the valuation thereof. Neither could it be sold if necessary or required in any way for the use, maintenance and operation of the canal. If valued at more than $500.00, it could only be sold at public sale, after due notice as provided by law.

I am returning herewith the copies of the rules and specifications relating to the construction of the Ohio canal, and the sixty-ninth annual report of the board of public works submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—CONFERS NO AUTHORITY UPON COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT TO ENTER INTO CONTRACTS—EXCEPTION, WHEN HE IS AUTHORIZED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—PROSECUTING ATTORNEY LEGAL ADVISER OF COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT.

The Cass highway law does not confer any authority upon the county highway superintendent to enter into any contracts, employ any labor or purchase any tools or material for road repairs except as he may be authorized by the county commissioners.

The prosecuting attorneys of the several counties are the legal advisers of the county highway superintendents of their respective counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 20, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 17, 1915, in which you quote for my information a letter from Mr. R. E. Hempel, county highway superintendent of Trumbull county.

Mr. Hempel in his letter to you refers to section 141 of the Cass highway law which provides, among other things, that the county highway superintendent shall see that all bridges and highways within his county are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law. He also refers to section 149 of the Cass highway law, which provides that the county highway superintendent shall keep the highways of the county at all times in good and suitable conditions for public travel, and section 154 of that act, which provides that the county highway superintendent, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, shall provide for the maintenance and repair of the roads of the county under such system as may be deemed expedient. Mr. Hempel also refers to section 303 of the Cass highway law which, by its terms, enjoins upon the county highway superintendent the duty of improving and repairing certain classes of roads at the cost of the county. Mr. Hempel says that the sections referred to by him seem to make it plain that the county highway superintendent shall maintain and keep in repair bridges and highways of the county, that the county has money in the treasury for both road and bridge work, but that the prosecuting attorney rules that the county highway superintendent has no authority to hire labor or to buy material.

Further statements contained in Mr. Hempel's letter indicate that the matter in which he is interested is the repair of county and possibly of township roads, and that the matters about which he inquires are not connected, at least directly, with the activities of the state highway department.

In your communication of November 17th you stated that you desired my opinion as to the duties of your department in the premises. Upon receipt of your letter I addressed a communication to Hon. Archer L. Phelps, prosecuting attorney of Trumbull county, quoting Mr. Hempel's letter for his information and stating to Mr. Phelps that before answering your inquiry I would be grateful to him if he would advise me as to the exact nature of the question raised by Mr. Hempel. I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Phelps from which it appears that the matters in which Mr. Hempel is interested relate solely to the activities of the county commissioners and the county highway superintendent in the repair of county and township roads and that the matters in question are not directly connected with the activities of the state highway department.

Mr. Phelps' letter indicates that he has advised the county highway superintendent in substance that while the Cass highway law in several sections would seem to confer some authority upon him relative to the construction, maintenance and repair of highways and bridges and seems to charge him with the duty of seeing that certain work is done, yet nowhere in the act is there any authority conferred upon the county highway superintendent to expend money or enter into contracts for road repair unless the same be authorized by the county commissioners.

I concur in the view expressed by Mr. Phelps, as set forth above, and it is my opinion that while a number of the sections of the Cass highway law in terms enjoin certain duties upon the county highway superintendent with reference to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of bridges and highways, yet the act does not confer any authority upon the county highway superintendent to enter into any contracts, employ any labor or purchase any tools or material for road repairs except as he may be authorized by the county commissioners. In other words, the county highway superintendent is merely the executive officer of the county commissioners in matters relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges under the jurisdiction of the commissioners.

Since the matter referred to by Mr. Hempel is purely a county matter and since he has already been advised in the premises by the prosecuting attorney of his county, I am unable to advise you that your department has any duty to perform in the premises other than to inform Mr. Hempel that the prosecuting attorney is his legal adviser, and that in all matters where he is in doubt as to the law he should apply to the prosecuting attorney for advice.

It is true that section 148 of the Cass highway law provides that the county highway superintendent may request advice and assistance from the state highway commissioner in all matters relating to his duties, but I do not think that the effect of this provision is to substitute your department for the prosecuting attorneys of the several counties or to make you the legal adviser of county highway superintendents. It was rather the intention of the legislature in enacting this provision to give the county highway superintendents of the several counties of the state the right to call upon you for advice and assistance in matters of an engineering nature, and as to legal matters they should apply to the prosecuting attorneys of their respective counties for advice and assistance.

If the prosecuting attorney of any county is in doubt upon any proposition submitted to him by the county highway superintendent and desires the advice or opinion of this department the same will be promptly given if requested. In the case under consideration, however, the prosecuting attorney does not seem to have entertained any doubts as to the law and has not requested my advice or opinion and, so far as I can judge from the correspondence, has advised the county highway superintendent substantially in accordance with my understanding of the law. I, therefore, conclude that there is no further duty to be performed in the premises either by this department or by yours.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF PEACE—CANNOT QUALIFY AND BECOME MEMBER OF VILLAGE COUNCIL—OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE.

A justice of the peace cannot qualify and become a member of a village council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 22, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a communication from Mr. C. H. Warner, justice of the peace in Harrison township, Paulding county, Ohio, and as the question asked by Mr. Warner is one of general interest I am taking the liberty of addressing an opinion to you. Mr. Warner's inquiry is as follows:

> "I am taking the liberty of addressing you for the purpose of acquiring information concerning the following, to wit:
> "The village of Payne is situated in Harrison township, Paulding county, Ohio, and I am serving as a justice of the peace, having been elected to that position in the year 1913, and on the 2nd of November, last, was elected a member of the village council of Payne.
> "Now what I wish to know is, whether I can qualify, and serve as such councilman, and also continue as justice of the peace."

The inquiry requires no further investigation than a reference to section 4218, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "No member of the council shall hold any other public office or employment except that of notary public or member of the state militia, or be interested in any contract with the village. * * *"

From this plain and unambiguous statutory provision it follows that so long as he continues to hold the office of justice of the peace he cannot qualify and become a member of the village council. A similar holding to that above stated was made by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to be found at page 1666 of the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1913, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—REBUILDING OF COUNTY INFIRMARY—APPROVAL OF SUCH EXPENDITURE AT AN ELECTION MAY BE HELD UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 5640-1, G. C., AND BONDS ISSUED UNDER FAVOR OF SECTION 5642-1, G. C.

When an election is held under section 5640-1, G. C., to approve an expenditure for the erection of a county building and said expenditure is approved by a majority of the votes cast at said election, the county commissioners may thereafter, under favor of section 5642-1, G. C., issue bonds in any amount not exceeding the amount stated upon said ballots, to be used exclusively for the purpose stated upon said ballots, and no other or further vote is required to approve said bonds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 22, 1915.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have yours of December 19, 1915, as follows:

> "The commissioners of Warren county have called an election submitting to vote the questions of expending $84,000 for an infirmary building and issuing $65,000 of bonds for that purpose. Should the form of ballot in 5640-1, G. C., which says nothing about bonds, be used? If not, what form?"

In an opinion to you under date of November 20, 1915, I held, following an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, that sections 2436, 5638, 5639-1 and 5640-1, G. C., are sections in pari materia, and must be construed and applied together, and that before your county commissioners could expend any sum in excess of $50,000 for the rebuilding of your county infirmary said expenditure must first have the approval of the voters of your county, as provided in said section 5638, et seq., as above noted.

I beg now to refer you to that opinion and to add that said section 5640-1 provides the only method of so submitting said questions to your voters.

From your inquiry it would seem that you propose to submit both the question of an expenditure of $84,000 and the matter of issuing bonds thereunder to the amount of $65,000, and that some doubt exists as to the application of said section 5640-1, G. C., because it does not expressly provide for the issuing of bonds. I must advise you that the matter of the amount of bonds to be issued may be determined by the commissioners after a vote upon the amount of the expenditure named, to wit: $84,000, and that the issuing of the bonds is fully covered by the provisions of a succeeding section 5642-1, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "If a majority of the votes so cast are against the proposed expenditure the board of county commissioners shall not assess a tax or issue bonds therefor. If a majority of the votes cast are in favor of the proposed expenditure, the board of county commissioners shall proceed to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding the amount stated upon said ballots, the proceeds of which shall be used exclusively for the purpose stated upon said ballot, and said board shall levy such amount of tax as may be necessary to pay the interest accruing on said bonds and to redeem them at maturity."

It will be observed that under the provisions of the foregoing section the county commissioners are delegated full authority to determine the amount of bonds which shall be issued if the expenditure is approved by a majority of the votes cast at said election. In other words, it is not necessary that the amount of bonds be submitted to the voters, but only the amount to be expended, and if that amount is approved then the commissioners may issue bonds under said vote in any sum not exceeding the amount of expenditure so approved.

In conclusion, therefore, I advise you that an election for the approval of an expenditure of $84,000 by your board of county commissioners for the rebuilding of your county infirmary may be held under the provisions of section 5640-1, supra, and if said expenditure is approved by a majority of the votes cast at said election bonds may be issued in any amount not exceeding said sum of $84,000, under favor of section 5642-1, supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—SECTION 1261-73, G. C., BARS PROSECUTION FOR ALL VIOLATIONS OF ANY STATE LAWS OR ORDINANCE REGULATING THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC COMMITTED PRIOR TO SERVICE OF WARRANT OF ARREST IN PROSECUTION FOR VIOLATION OF SUCH LAWS WHICH RESULTS IN CONVICTION.

When a licensee is convicted for an offense under any law or ordinance regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors the provisions of section 1261-73, G. C. (103 O. L., 241), bar a prosecution of any and all offenses under said laws or ordinances committed prior to the time of the service of the warrant of arrest in the case in which said licensee is convicted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 23, 1915.

HON. CHARLES T. STAHL, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 18, 1915, submitting the following statement and inquiry:

> "During the October term of the Fulton county court of common pleas the grand jury returned two indictments for selling and furnishing intoxicating liquors to a minor, each indictment being for a different minor, but indicting the same person for selling and furnishing.
> "We went to trial and found the person guilty as charged, and now the other indictment will be up for trial in the near future.
> "Under section 58 of the Ohio liquor license code, we find:
> "'If at the time of conviction for any offense under the laws or ordinances regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors, the fact shall be that an offense has been committed under said laws or ordinances by the licensee prior to the time of the service of the warrant of arrest, prosecution upon said other offenses shall be barred.'
> "It is my opinion that under the above section we have no right to try the defendant on this indictment, as each charge against him was committed at the same time.
> "I ask that you give me your opinion on the said section."

It is apparent from a consideration of the section quoted that its purpose is to prevent a prosecution of any offense against the liquor laws committed prior to the time of the service of the warrant of arrest in a case wherein the accused is convicted. This conclusion is inevitable when the phrase "service of the warrant of arrest" is interpreted as applying and referring to the case in which the accused is convicted. It may be said that this seems to be the only possible construction that may be given to this language and make it harmonize with the remainder of the section and make the whole section intelligible.

It is suggested that this law was enacted with a view of mitigating, to some extent, the application of the constitutional provision found in section 9 of article XV of the constitution, which requires the revocation of a license after two convictions for violation of liquor laws and thereafter disqualifies the licensee from receiving a license. Regardless, however, of the considerations which moved the legislature to enact this law, I agree with your conclusion that, under the facts of the case presented in your inquiry, a further prosecution upon the remaining indictment, which is for an offense committed prior to the service of the warrant in the case in which you secured a conviction, is barred by the statute in question.

I, therefore, advise, in conclusion, that said section 58, being section 1261-73, G. C., bars prosecution for all violations of any state law or ordinance regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors which are committed prior to the service of a warrant of arrest in a prosecution for a violation of said laws which results in a conviction.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE LANDS—VOUNTARY ASSOCIATION—MEMBERS OF SUCH ASSOCIATION DESIRING TO LEASE CANAL OR RESERVOIR LANDS SHOULD HAVE LEASE EXECUTED BY MEMBERS AS INDIVIDUALS —UNINCORPORATED CLUB.

Where the members of an unincorporated club desire to lease canal or reservoir lands, the lease should be drawn to and executed by the members as individuals.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 23, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Suprintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 7, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

> "The Wyandotte club of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, a sort of a voluntary association for the purpose of conducting a club house on an island in Indian Lake, as a pleasure resort for the members thereof, comprising Messrs. Chas. S. Matthews, Z. S. Virtner, Arthur Stultz, Ray Cuneo, Bert Hill, Eliott Hedges, Ira Pontius, Len O. Smith, A. F. Schoenberger and Will Fleck, has applied for a lease of a small island in Indian Lake for club house and boat landing purposes. We are somewhat in doubt as to the standing of this club. It does not appear to be either a partnership or corporation, but rather a voluntary association for club purposes. They keep a record of their proceedings and have spread upon their minutes a resolution directing the president and secretary of the association, or club, to execute a lease on behalf of the club in pursuance of the resolution referred to above.

"The club does not attempt to derive any income from the building, but from time to time an assessment is levied to meet the current expenses and improvements and repairs.

"Any information you can give us on this subject will be appreciated and followed in connection with this lease."

From your letter it is apparent that the Wyandotte club to which you refer is neither a corporation nor a partnership and is to be classed as a voluntary association not for profit. It has been held that a voluntary association, as such, cannot hold real estate.

Mannix v. Purcell, 46 O. S., 102.
Church v. Society, 44 Conn., 259.
Association v. Scholler, 10 Minn., 331.

I suggest that the members of the Wyandotte club should be requested to make application, as individuals, for a lease of the land in question and that the lease be drawn to and executed by the ten persons composing the club, all reference to the club being omitted both from the application and from the lease. All question of the liability of all the members for the payment of rent and the observance of the other covenants of the lease will thereby be avoided.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAX COMMISSION—APPOINTMENT OF EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS OF ESTATES.

The tax commission of Ohio is in no way concerned with the appointment of executors and administrators of estates.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 30, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter under date of December 14th in which you enclose a letter received by you from the probate judge of Hamilton county, together with certain memoranda including a copy of the opinion of the court of appeals of said county in the matter of Clifford Seasongood, plaintiff in error, v. Philip L. Seasongood, et al., defendants in error, No. 738 in said court of appeals, to which opinion said probate judge makes special reference in his letter.

As stated by Judge Lueders in said letter the probate court of Hamilton county, in the appointment of executors and trustees under the will, and administrators of estates, has for many years followed a rule adopted by said court, not to appoint non-residents of the state as executors or administrators.

Upon an examination of the opinion of the court of appeals in the case above referred to, I find that said case went to said court of appeals on error from the judgment of the court of common pleas of Hamilton county, affirming the judgment of the probate court of said county, in refusing to appoint Clifford Seasongood, plaintiff in error, as a co-executor and co-trustee under the will of Lewis Seasongood, deceased, on the ground that the said Clifford Seasongood is a non-resident of the state of Ohio.

From the statement of facts as set forth in said opinion it appears that on November 29, 1914, the said Lewis Seasongood, a resident of Cincinnati, Hamilton county, Ohio, died testate leaving a large estate, part of which was located in Ohio and part in New York, and in his will nominated as executors his three sons, Philip L., Albert and Clifford, and his nephew Murray Seasongood, and also nominated all of his executors except Albert as testamentary trustees.

It further appears that all of the above named persons were appointed as nominated in said will by the surrogate court of New York on February 8, 1915, and that the said Clifford Seasongood was a resident of New York City at the time of his father's death, as well as at the time when his application for appointment as co-executor and co-trustee under said will was made to the probate court of Hamilton county.

After a careful consideration of the law applicable to the issues involved in said case the court of appeals held that the appointment of the said Clifford Seasongood as co-executor and co-trustee under his father's will is mandatory and should be recognized by the probate court by accepting a proper and sufficient bond and issuing to him in conjunction with his co-executors and co-trustees letters testamentary on said will.

The judgment of the court of common pleas of said county affirming the judgment of the probate court, in refusing to appoint the said Clifford Seasongood as a co-executor and co-trustee under his father's will on the ground that the said Clifford Seasongood is not a resident of the state of Ohio, having been reversed by the court of appeals of said county, it is the desire of Judge Lueders of said probate court to have this case taken to the supreme court, and it is his idea, as stated by you, that inasmuch as the filing of inventories and accounts in the probate court has to do with the assessment of taxes, the case above referred to may be of sufficient importance to justify your commission in requesting me as attorney general of the state to represent the defendants in error in prosecuting error in the supreme court to the judgment of said court of appeals. You ask to be advised as to my authority in this matter.

Section 1465-9, G. C., provides:

> "Upon the request of the commission the attorney general, or under his direction, the prosecuting attorney of any county, shall aid in any investigation, hearing or trial had under the laws which the commission is required to administer, and to institute and prosecute all necessary actions or proceedings for the enforcement of such laws, and for the punishment of all violations thereof, arising within the county in which he was elected."

The laws referred to in the above provision of the statute are the laws governing the assessment and collection of taxes on real and personal property. While executors and administrators have certain duties to perform under said laws and your commission is concerned with the proper administration of the trust by said executors and administrators in the performance of said duty, you are in no way concerned with their appointment or with the law applicable to such appointment. It follows, therefore, that inasmuch as your commission is in no sense either a necessary or proper party to the case above referred to and is in no way concerned with the law applicable to the issues involved in said case, I am without authority under the above provision of the statute to represent the defendants in error in the prosecution of error to the judgment of the court of appeals.

I call your attention to the provisions of section 11 of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law as found in 106 O. L., 249. This section will become effective January 1, 1916, and provides as follows:

> "Sec. 5371-3, G. C. Personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise belonging to the estate of a deceased person whose residence at the time of his decease was in this state, shall be listed by his executors, administrators, trustees or personal representatives, whether residents of this state or not, in the township, city or village in which the deceased would have been required to list the same if he had been or was living on the day preceding the second Monday of April."

The provisions of this statute clearly prescribe the duty of executors, administrators, trustees or personal representatives in the listing of personal property for taxation and, I think, meet the objections of Judge Lueders to the appointment of a non-resident as an executor or an administrator of an estate.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your question that I am without authority in law to represent the defendants in error, in the case above referred to, in the prosecution of error in the supreme court to the judgment of the court of appeals.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—INSPECTOR OF SAID BOARD INDICTED FOR CRIMINAL OFFENSE—NO AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY COUNSEL OR INCUR EXPENSE IN DEFENSE OF SUCH PERSON.

The state liquor licensing board is without authority to employ counsel or incur other expense in defense of a person against an indictment for a criminal offense, by reason of the fact that the person so indicted is an inspector appointed by the state liquor licensing board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 30, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In yours under date of December 18, 1915, you make inquiry whether you may employ attorneys for the defense of an inspector appointed by your board, who is under indictment for shooting in Champagin county in this state. I learn from members of your board, personally, that it is claimed by the inspector that the shooting was done by him in self-defense while engaged in the discharge of his duties as such inspector.

It is unnecessary to reiterate what has already been stated in opinion No. 1108, addressed to you under date of December 16, 1915, in reference to the employment of attorneys or counsel to represent the state liquor licensing board in any matter. It is sufficient to observe that your board is not under indictment and therefore cannot have occasion to be represented in the trial on the indictment referred to, or otherwise, in respect to the same, neither is any inspector, as such, so indicted.

The indictment referred to is against an individual in his individual capacity and your inquiry resolves itself into this: Is your board authorized, under the law of this state, to employ counsel for a person under indictment for a criminal offense, by reason of the facts that it is claimed that the transaction upon which such indictment is founded occurred while the person under indictment was in the proper pursuit and discharge of his duties as liquor licensing inspector, and that it is claimed by the person so indicted that the shooting with which he is charged was necessary to his proper self-defense?

Your inquiry involves a consideration of section 5 of the license law (section 1261-20, G. C., 103 O. L., 218), as follows:

> "The state liquor licensing board shall provide itself with an office at the seat of government. Said board shall employ the necessary clerks, examiners, inspectors, stenographers and other assistants as it may deem necessary and fix their compensation, subject to the approval of the governor; and shall also provide itself with the necessary furniture, books, stationery and other things that may be necessary for the proper conducting of the office, and may incur such other expenses as it deems expedient, subject to the approval of the governor.
> "The commissioners, the secretary, clerks, examiners, inspectors, stenographers and other assistants that may be employed shall be entitled to receive their actual and necessary expenses while traveling on the business of the board. Such expenses shall be itemized and sworn to by the person who incurred the same, allowed by the commission and paid as other expenses are paid.
> "The board may remove any of its employes for any violation of law or the rules of the board, or for any neglect of duty or for other good and sufficient cause."

The expenses incurred by the employment of attorneys, as above stated, could not, in any sense, come within the terms of the provision for the payment of traveling expenses of inspectors while on the business of the board.

It will be observed, however, that the state board is here authorized to "incur such other expenses as it deems expedient, subject to the approval of the governor." This provision is rather elastic and certainly leaves much to the discretion of the board and the governor. Its manifest purpose is to make provision for extraordinary matters of expense which are not susceptible of anticipation in the regular course of business and leaves that board and the governor the authority and responsibility of determining the necessity and expedience thereof. It is, however, subject to the well established rule of construction that where general terms are used in direct and immediate connection with specific terms, the general are limited in their meaning and application to the class to which the specific terms belong.

An examination of the preceding special provisions discloses an authorization of expenditures which are essential to a proper performance of the duties of the state board and its employes imposed by law. That is to say, an office, clerks, examiners, inspectors, stenographers, assistants, furniture, books, stationery and expenses of traveling are, to a certain extent, not only necessary but indispensable to a proper performance of the duties and functions of the state liquor licensing board. But the legislature clearly anticipated the necessity of further expenditures so essential in their nature, which, in the very nature of things, could not be so specifically enumerated, hence the use of the general provision.

It cannot be argued, however, that under this general provision there may be found authority for any expenditure which even expenditures, in its broadest sense, might suggest. As stated above, expenditures authorized by this general provision must be confined to that class of objects which the legislature clearly had in mind in making the specific enumerations immediately preceding.

It does not seem, from anything which may be found in the license law or in the statutes defining the powers and duties of inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board, that it was anticipated that it might be at all necessary to the proper performance of their duties that inspectors become involved in personal encounters or become the subject of criminal charge in any way, and it therefore follows that the expense of their defense against criminal charges of any character by inspectors, had no place in the legislative mind in the enactment of the provisions of section 1261-20, G. C., supra.

It will be further borne in mind that notwithstanding any claim made by or on behalf of the inspector referred to, an indictment is a complaint of the state made in due course of legal procedure and founded on evidence sufficient in the judgment of a grand jury to establish a prima facie case of the commission of a criminal offense. It has never been the policy of the state to institute criminal prosecution, the defense of which would in any way devolve upon the state itself, except in those extraordinary cases in which the accused is shown to the court to be indigent and without means to secure counsel for his defense, wherein the means of furnishing such counsel is provided in section 13617, G. C., et seq.

I am therefore of opinion that your board is unauthorized to employ counsel for or to incur any expense in the defense of an inspector appointed by your board against an indictment for shooting under the facts stated by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL COPORATION—SECTION 4276, G. C., 106 O. L., 483, PROVIDES THE EXCLUSIVE MANNER IN WHICH DUTIES OF OFFICES AS WELL AS POSITIONS NAMED THEREIN MAY BE MERGED WITH THOSE OF CITY AUDITOR IN CERTAIN CITIES.

The provisions of section 4276, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 483, are exclusive both as to the mode by which the duties of the offices named therein may be merged with those of city auditor in the cities named and also as to such offices or positions the duties of which may be merged with those of city auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 30, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of December 14, 1915, submitting the following inquiries:

> "1. If council refuses or neglects to pass an ordinance merging the duties of the city auditor with those of clerk of council, could the city auditor be elected by council as their clerk and receive the compensation attached to said position, in addition to his salary as city auditor?
> "2. Since the amendment to section 4276, General Code (106 O. L., 483), enumerates the positions in the city service which may be merged with that of city auditor, does such legislation prevent the city auditor from holding any other clerical positions in the city service, if the duties be not incompatible?"

Section 4276, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 483, to which you refer in your foregoing inquiries, provides as follows:

> "The auditor shall keep the books of the city, exhibit accurate statements of all moneys received and expended, and of all property owned by the city and the income derived therefrom, and of all taxes and assessments. In cities having a population of less than twenty thousand the city council may, by a majority vote, merge the duties of the clerk of the waterworks, if any, clerk of the board of control and clerk of the city council with the duties of the city auditor, allowing him such additional assistants in performing such additional duties as council may determine."

It seems that the doubt which prompts the submission of your foregoing inquiries arises from the contention that the legislature having provided in the foregoing section in what manner and by what method the duties of the various offices therein specified may be merged with the duties of the office of city auditor, such provisions must be held to be exclusive both as to the method of such combination and as to the offices the duties of which may be so combined.

The section in question provides a mode or method in certain cities specified therein whereby four offices or positions theretofore existing may be merged or combined into one office and the duties thereof imposed upon the city auditor. It is therefore an affirmative statute introductory of a new law which creates new rights and imposes new and additional duties and responsibilities upon the city auditor.

It is a well settled maxim of statutory construction that if an affirmative statute, which is introductory of a new law, directs a thing to be done in a certain manner, that thing shall not, even although there are no negative words, be done in any other manner.

Harlan v. Roberts, et al., 2d Dec. Reprint, 460.

Applying this rule to the statute in question it would seem to establish conclusively that the legislature having provided a method whereby the duties of clerk of council may be merged with those of city auditor in certain cities, such method must be regarded as exclusive and such combination may be made only in the manner so provided. I am of the opinion, therefore, that your first question must be answered in the negative.

If this statute is exclusive as to the method which may be pursued in combining the duties of the office of city auditor with those of the duties of the other offices or positions therein named, it must also be held to be exclusive as to the positions which may be so combined with that of city auditor. This construction follows as the logical result of the application of the rule of construction above noted, and the application of another maxim of statutory construction, viz., expressio unius est exclusio alterius. That is to say, the legislature having by special enactment provided what offices or positions may be combined with that of city auditor in cities of the class specified in this law, it must be assumed that it intended those provisions to cover all combinations that may be made with said office. I therefore conclude, in answer to your second question, that a city auditor in cities of the class named in section 4276, G. C., supra, may not hold any clerical position in the city service other than those provided for in said section.

In view of these considerations I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 4276, supra, are exclusive both as to the manner in which the duties of the offices named therein may be merged with those of city auditor in the cities named, and also as to the offices or positions the duties of which may be merged with those of city auditor in said cities.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—SHOULD FIRST BE APPROVED BY BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES WHEN FOR BENEVOLENT AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

A corporation, the purpose of which is the rendering of benevolent and charitable protection and assistance to unfortunate girls and to train them religiously and industriously is one such as is referred to in section 1352-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 866, and before the secretary of state can issue a certificate of such incorporation in such a case it is necessary that a certificate be filed in his office showing that the articles of incorporation have been examined and approved by the board of state charities under the provisions of section 1352-2, G. C. The act of the secretary of state in issuing such corporation papers, without having the certificate of the state board of charities on file, is a nullity; anyone attempting to act as a corporation under such articles may be proceeded against under the provisions of section 12303, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"On October 9, 1915, the secretary of state issued articles of incorporation to the Tatum missionary home, of Dayton, Ohio, as will be found in volume 180, page 692 of the Records of Incorporation in his office.

"Section 3 of said articles provides in part: 'Said corporation is formed for the purpose of rendering benevolent and charitable protection and assistance to unfortunate girls.'

"We are of the opinion that this part of the said articles comes within the provisions of section 1352-2 of the General Code (O. L., 103, p. 864), which requires such articles to be referred to this board for approval. If these articles had been referred to this board for approval it is doubtful if the board would have approved them.

"1. We desire to ascertain from you whether in your opinion these articles of incorporation should have been referred to the board of state charities.

"2. If such reference should have been made has the secretary of state authority to withdraw the issuance of said articles?

"3. If the secretary of state cannot on his own part withdraw the issuance of said articles, what method would you suggest to have them cancelled?"

From a copy of the articles of incorporation of the Tatum missionary home, of Dayton, secured from the office of the secretary of state, I quote the purpose clause, which is as follows:

"3. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of rendering benevolent and charitable protection and assistance to unfortunate girls and to train them religiously and industriously."

Sections 1352-1 and 1352-2 of the General Code (103 O. L., 865-866), are as follows:

"Sec. 1352-1. Such board shall annually pass upon the fitness of every benevolent or correctional institution, corporation and association, public, semi-public or private, as receives, or desires to receive and care for children, or places children in private homes. Annually at such times as the board shall direct, each such institution, corporation or association, shall make a report, showing its condition, management and competency, adequately to care for such children as are, or may be committed to it or admitted therein, the system of visitation employed for children placed in private homes, and such other facts as the board requires. When the board is satisfied as to the care given such children, and that the requirements of the statutes covering the management of such institutions are being complied with, it shall issue to the association a certificate to that effect, which shall continue in force for one year, unless sooner revoked by the board. No child shall be committed by the juvenile court to an association or institution which has not such certificate unrevoked and received within fifteen months next preceding the commitment. A list of such certified institutions shall be sent by the board of state charities, at least annually, to all courts acting as juvenile courts and to all associations and institutions so approved. Any person who receives children or receives or solicits money on behalf of such an institution, corporation or association, not so certified, or whose certificate has been revoked, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not less than $5.00 nor more than $500.00.

"Sec. 1352-2. No association whose object may embrace the care of dependent, neglected or delinquent children or the placing of such children in private homes shall hereafter be incorporated unless the proposed articles of incorporation shall have been submitted first to the board of state charities. The secretary of state shall not issue a certificate of incorporation unless there shall first be filed in his office the certificate of the board of state charities that it has examined the articles of incorporation, and that in its judgment the incorporators are reputable and respectable persons, and that the proposed work is needed, and the incorporation of such association is desirable and for the public good. Amendments proposed to the articles of incorporation of any such association shall be submitted in like manner to the board of state charities, and the secretary of state shall not record such amendment or issue his certificate therefor unless there shall first be filed in his office the certificate of the board of state charities that it has examined such amendment, that the association in question is, in its judgment, performing in good faith, the work undertaken by it, and that such amendment is, in its judgment, a proper one, and for the public good."

From a reading of section 1352-2 of the General Code, supra, it is clear that the articles of incorporation should have been submitted to your board for examination before a certificate of incorporation was issued by the secretary of state, the section providing that the secretary of state shall not issue a certificate of incorporation unless there shall first be filed in his office the certificate of the board of state charities that it has examined the articles of incorporation and that in its judgment the incorporators are reputable and respectable persons, and that the proposed work is needed and that the incorporation of such association is desirable and for the public good.

It is therefore clear that it was the duty of the incorporators to file in the office of the secretary of state such certificate before asking that articles of incorporation issue. This course, however, was not followed, and in view of the statements of your board to the effect that it is doubtful that the board would have approved the articles if they had been submitted, coupled with the information conveyed by your Mr. Shirer personally, the reason for the failure to file the certificate with the secretary of state is obvious. For some reason, either through a misinterpretation of the law, or facts surrounding the formation of the Tatum missionary home, of Dayton, Ohio, the certificate of incorporation was issued by the secretary of state without there having been filed in his office the certificate of approval referred to in section 1352-2 of the General Code, supra.

In view of this situation you now present the three questions contained in your letter, and in answer to the first question it is my opinion that the facts presented in the articles of incorporation referred to constitute a case such as should have been submitted to your board for approval or disapproval before such articles were filed in the office of the secretary of state, as the filing of the certificate of approval of your board is a jurisdictional matter without which the secretary of state has no authority in law to issue articles of incorporation such as are contemplated in section 1352-2 of the General Code, supra.

In answer to your second question I have to advise that as the secretary of state was without authority in law to issue the articles of incorporation in the case under consideration his act was a nullity and there is, therefore, nothing to cancel notwithstanding the fact that the persons who signed the incorporation papers have in their possession what purports to be articles of incorporation of the Tatum missionary home of Dayton, Ohio.

Coming to your third question in which you ask what course should be pursued to have the articles of incorporation canceled, I might say that the answer to your second question practically disposes of the necessity of replying to this question; however, for your information I call your attention to the provisions of section 1352-1 of the General Code, supra, from which it will be observed that notwithstanding the fact of the issuance of the articles of incorporation by the secretary of state for a corporation such as the Tatum missionary home of Dayton, Ohio, your board is vested with final authority in passing upon the fitness of the institution, corporation or association to engage in business such as is contemplated by the Tatum missionary home, and unless after such investigation and examination you issue a certificate to the effect that you are satisfied that the institution, corporation or association is qualified to engage in the business contemplated by the statute, any effort to carry on the business, to receive children, or even to receive or solicit money for the benefit of the corporation would make the offending party or parties subject to the infliction of a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars.

It is therefore clear that the articles of incorporation do not of themselves authorize the incorporation to engage in a business such as is contemplated by the Tatum missionary home unless section 1352-1 of the General Code has been complied with. If, however, in pursuance of the course which has been taken by the persons who filed the articles of incorporation of the Tatum misisonary home of Dayton, they should attempt to exercise corporate powers resort might then be made to section 12303 of the General Code, which, in part, is as follows:

> "A civil action may be brought in the name of the state * * *
> "3. Against an association of persons who act as a corporation within this state without being legally incorporated."

Specifically answering your third question it is my opinion that if the purpose you desire to accomplish cannot be secured through the restraining influences of section 1352-1 of the General Code, supra, which is a criminal statute, a civil action may be instituted under the provisions of section 12303 of the General Code, referred to and partly quoted above, on the ground that the parties are attempting to act as a corporation within this state without being legally incorporated.

A question covering this same matter has been presented to this department by Mr. D. F. Garland, director of public welfare of the city of Dayton, and a copy of this opinion is being sent to him for his information, as well as one to the secretary of state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—FEES AND FINES COLLECTED BY ENFORCEMENT OF LAW RELATING TO PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES—PAID TO COMMISSION, WHICH IN TURN PAYS SAME INTO STATE TREASURY—DEFENDANT IN A PENDING ACTION NOT PREJUDICED BY SUCH DISPOSAL.

Fees and fines collected through the enforcement of the law relating to private employment agencies may be paid over to the industrial commission by a justice of the peace in order that the commission may turn same into the state treasury as provided by law.

The manner of disposition of such fees and fines, either or both, in the hands of the justice of the peace does not concern the defendant in the pending action and he cannot be prejudiced thereby.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"We have a case in court in Toledo before Judge W. O. Morse, in which we are prosecuting Joseph Nowakowski for violation of the law governing private employment agencies.

"Nowakowski was arrested on the following affidavit of Mr. Charles H. Mayhugh, special agent of the department of investigation and statistics of the industrial commission:

"'State of Ohio, County of Lucas, ss.

"'Before me, W. O. Morse, one of the justices of Adams township, Lucas county, Ohio, personally came Charles H. Mayhugh, who being duly sworn according to law deposeth and saith that Joseph Nowakowski, late of the county aforesaid, on or about the 25th day of July, A. D. 1915, at the county of Lucas, aforesaid unlawfully and knowingly did operate and maintain a private employment agency for hire in which the said Joseph Nowakowski did charge a fee of $10.00 (ten dollars) to secure a position for one Adam Rutowski at the Willys-Overland Automobile Company. The said Adam Rutowski being then and there an applicant for employment at said employment agency. The said Joseph Nowakowski at the time aforesaid did operate and maintain said employment agency for hire without having paid the legal fee for maintaining and operating a private employment agency for hire, to the proper authorities.'

"The case is being prosecuted by Mr. Robert Phillips, police prosecutor and the defendant's attorneys are Fell and Shaw, Toledo. This trial was set for December 3, at which time the defendant's attorneys attacked the affidavit, claiming the court had no jurisdiction upon the following grounds: They claim that the law requires the industrial commission of Ohio to enforce the laws governing private employment agencies and pay the fines collected into the state treasury, and does not provide for the justice turning the fines over to the industrial commission.

"They cited section 13429, which requires the justice to turn such fines into the county, unless otherwise instructed by law, and claimed that there is no law which empowers the justice to turn the money to the industrial commission. In their arguments they used the 'Dope' law which provides that all fines assessed shall be turned over to the secretary of the health board, and he in turn shall pay them into the state treasury.

"After their arguments, the court continued the case until we could get a decision from your department. We would like very much to have an early decision of this matter in order that we may have the case brought to trial promptly, as delay would probably result in our not being able to locate the principal witnesses."

Section 13429 of the General Code is as follows:

"Fines collected by a justice of the peace shall be paid into the general fund of the county where the offense was committed within thirty days after collection unless otherwise provided by law."

Sections 894, 895 and 896 of the General Code, which is a part of the law relating to private employment agencies, are as follows:

"Sec. 894. The term 'applicant for employment,' as used in the laws governing private employment agencies, shall mean any person seeking work of a lawful character, and 'applicant for help' shall mean any person seeking help in any legitimate enterprise. Nothing in such laws shall limit the meaning of the term 'work' to manual labor, but it shall include professional service and all other legitimate service. All moneys received from fees and fines as provided by the laws governing private employment agencies, shall be paid into the state treasury by the commissioner of labor statistics in the manner provided by law.

"Sec. 895. Whoever violates any provision of law relating to private employment agencies shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense.

"Sec. 896. The commissioner of labor statistics shall enforce the laws relating to private employment agencies, and when informed of a violation of such laws, institute proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to enforce their penalties."

Under the provisions of section 871-24 of the General Code (103 O. L., 103) which is section 24 of the act creating the industrial commission, the duties, liabilities, powers and privileges of certain departments, including the commissioner of labor statistics, are conferred upon the industrial commission of Ohio, and under that section it becomes the duty of the commission to pay money received from fees and fines collected under the law relating to private employment agencies into the state treasury, as provided for in section 894 of the General Code, supra.

It is clear that the provisions of section 13429 of the General Code, supra, do not apply in the case presented by you owing to the provision contained in section 894 of the General Code, supra, for the payment of fees and fines collected under the law relating to private employment agencies into the state treasury.

The contention is made that the court had no jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the pending action referred to in your letter on account of the fact that there is no express law providing for the transfer of the money received by the court to the industrial commission for payment into the state treasury. In view of the express provision of section 894 of the General Code, supra, coupled with the provisions of section 871-24 of the General Code, referred to above, and the exception contained in section 13429 of the General Code, supra, it is my opinion that there is ample authority for the justice of Adams township, in case conviction is had, to take the receipt of the industrial commission for any money which may be collected in order that the commission may be in position to turn such money into the state treasury provided by law and that there is no merit in the contention made by the attorneys representing the defendant in the matter under consideration as the question is entirely immaterial, does not concern him, nor can he be prejudiced in any manner by reason of the situation of which he complains.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—VILLAGE MAYOR—VACANCY BY REASON OF DEATH AFTER RE-ELECTION—PRESIDENT PRO TEM. OF COUNCIL BECOMES MAYOR FOR UNEXPIRED TERM AND FOR TWO-YEAR TERM FOR WHICH DECEASED MAYOR WAS ELECTED.

Upon the death of a village mayor, the president pro tem. of council becomes the mayor for the unexpired term and until a successor is elected and qualified. Section 4256, G. C.

Where the mayor of the village, who has been re-elected to office, dies after his re-election but before his new term commences the president pro tem. who becomes the mayor by virtue of section 4265, G. C., for the unexpired term and until a successor is elected and qualified will continue as mayor for the unexpired term of the deceased mayor and for the two-year term for which such deceased mayor was elected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of December 22, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The present mayor of a village, who has been re-elected to the position at the last November election, died on or about November 20th, the president of council succeeding to the position of mayor and is now serving in said position.
> "Question: Whose duty will it be to call the incoming council to order on January 1st, next, and how shall the vacancy in the office of mayor be filled?"

Sections 4255 and 4256 of the General Code contain the answers to your question, and are as follows:

> "The mayor shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January, next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the corporation. He shall be the chief conservator of the peace within the corporation, and shall have the powers hereinafter conferred, perform the duties hereinafter imposed, and such other powers and duties as are provided by law. He shall be the president of the council, and shall preside at all regular and special meetings thereof, but shall have no vote except in case of a tie.

"Sec. 4256. When the mayor is absent from the village, or is unable for any cause to perform his duties, the president pro tem. of council shall be acting mayor. In case of the death, resignation, or removal of the mayor, the president pro tem. of council shall become the mayor and serve for the unexpired term and until the successor is elected and qualified."

By virtue of the last sentence in section 4255, above quoted, the mayor of a village is the presiding officer of the council, and as such should preside at its regular and special meetings.

By the language in the last sentence of section 4256 of the General Code, above quoted, upon the death, resignation or removal of the mayor, the president pro tem. of council becomes the mayor and serves as such for the unexpired term and until a successor is elected and qualified.

Under the facts stated in your letter, the president pro tem. of council by virtue of his office became the mayor of the village upon the death of the elected mayor and succeeded to all the powers and authority of the office to as full an extent as though he had been regularly elected. By virtue of this same language in section 4256 of the General Code, the president pro tem., having succeeded to the office of mayor, is entitled to hold this office until his successor is duly elected and qualified. Since the former mayor was re-elected to the office in November, 1915, and has since died, it follows that no new mayor can be elected until November, 1917. Therefore, the incumbent of the office, viz: the former president pro tem. of council, will, under the statutes, hold the office of mayor until January 1, 1918.

The language of the sections of the General Code above quoted is, to my mind, clear and susceptible only of the interpretation above given to it.

For a further citation of authority and a discussion of what is meant by the term "until his successor is elected and qualified," I respectfully refer you to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered March 14, 1912, found at page 1202 of volume II, of the annual report of the attorney general for 1912.

Directly answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that it will be the duty of the present mayor, viz: the former president pro tem. of council, to call the incoming council to order on January 1, 1916, and that there will at that time be no vacancy in the office of mayor, but that the present mayor will hold office until January 1, 1918.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—BONDS ISSUED PRIOR TO GOING INTO EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW—PROCEEDS CAN BE EXPENDED FOR IMPROVING ROADS OF TOWNSHIP ROAD DISTRICT.

Township trustees are authorized to expend on the roads of a township road district the proceeds of bonds issued under sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, G. C., as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. GEORGE THORNBURG, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 17, 1915, in which you call my attention to opinion No. 978 of this department, rendered to you on October 27, 1915, and relating to the sale of certain bonds of Washington township, Belmont county, the bonds being issued for the improvement of the roads of that township under section 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law.

You further call my attention to the fact that in your request for the opinion referred to above you asked me to advise you as to whether or not the township trustees could use the proceeds of the $10,000 worth of bonds and the proceeds of the remaining bonds, when sold, for the purpose of improving the roads of Washington township, and observe that opinion No. 978 does not specifically answer that part of your inquiry.

You state that the township trustees have sold the $10,000 worth of bonds, and are now about to let a contract for road improvement, which contract will involve the expenditure of the proceeds of the bonds, and that the question has now arisen as to whether the trustees have the right to let such a contract in view of the following provision found in section 303 of the Cass highway law:

> "* * * but no such organization or organizations shall contract any new obligation or obligations after the taking effect of this act, for the construction or repair of additional road or roads or the maintenance or repair of roads already improved."

You further state that from the language of opinion No. 978 you assumed that it was intended to hold therein that the trustees had authority to use the proceeds of the bond sale for the purpose of improving the roads and authority to enter into a contract for that purpose, but that since having your attention called to the fact that my former opinion does not seem to expressly cover that point, you desire a definite and specific reply covering the matter in question before further advising the trustees in the premises.

You were entirely correct in the interpretation which you placed upon my former opinion, although the matter was not therein covered by language as specific as might have been chosen.

I desire to call your attention to opinion No. 976 of this department, rendered on October 27, 1915, to Hon. Archer L. Phelps, prosecuting attorney of Trumbull county, a copy of which opinion is herewith enclosed. It was held in that opinion that sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, as those sections stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, did not provide for an "organization" within the meaning of that term as used in that part of section 303 of the Cass highway law above quoted.

Applying the reasoning of that opinion to the facts in the case presented by you, it is my opinion that the township trustees of Washington township are now authorized to expend, according to law, the proceeds of the $10,000 bond issue and to enter into contracts involving the expenditure of the same for the purpose of improving the roads of the township road district, and that if, as pointed out in opinion No. 978 rendered to you, they proceed within a reasonable time to sell the remaining $40,000 of bonds authorized by a vote of the electors, they will also be authorized to so expend the proceeds arising from the sale of such bonds.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—FORM OF BOND FOR DIVISION ENGINEER WHEN SAME IS REQUIRED AFTER SERVICE HAS BEGUN.

Form of bond prescribed for a division engineer of the state highway department when such division engineer is not required by the state highway commissioner to give bond until after his service has begun.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 20, 1915, submitting for my approval the bonds of John R. Chamberlin, deputy highway commissioner, and Nicholas Koehler, division engineer in your department.

In so far as the bond of Mr. Chamberlin is concerned, permit me to call your attention to the fact, as pointed out in opinion No. 988 of this department, rendered to you on October 29, 1915, that the statute does not require me to approve the form of the bonds of deputy highway commissioners.

In so far as the bond of Mr. Koehler is concerned, permit me to call your attention to opinion No. 940 of this department, rendered to you on October 16, 1915, in which opinion there was suggested a proper form of bond to be furnished by division engineers. In that opinion it was pointed out that a division engineer is not an officer and that when he is required to give a bond by the state highway commissioner, the bond should be so drawn as to indicate that he is the holder of a position rather than an office. The form of bond suggested in opinion No. 940 was drawn to meet the condition existing where a division engineer was required to give bond at the time of his appointment. That is not the condition existing with reference to Mr. Koehler, as he already holds the position of division engineer and you are now requiring him to give a bond.

This brings me to the observation that the bond of Mr. Koehler, submitted for approval, is dated December 11, 1915, but the bond seeks to bind the principal and surety for any failure on the part of the principal to faithfully discharge the duties of his position from and after September 24, 1915. It has been held that a statute which requires an officer or employe to give bond with condition for the true and faithful discharge of the duties of his office or position does not authorize a bond with condition that such officer or employe has truly and faithfully discharged such duties. Fed. Cas. No. 14663 (Gilp. 155).

While in the form of bond submitted the word "shall" is used, yet it is the manifest intention to cover a period of time beginning prior to the date of execution of the bond. In view of the fact that the statute does not authorize the taking of a bond with the condition that duties already performed have been faithfully discharged, I suggest the following as a proper form for the bond to be furnished by Mr. Kohler:

"BOND.

"STATE OF OHIO.

"Know All Men by These Presents:

"That we, Nicholas Koehler, of Grandview Heights, Ohio, as principal, and American Surety Company of New York, of 100 Broadway, New York City, New York, as surety, are held and firmly bound unto the state of Ohio in the penal sum of four thousand ($4,000) dollars, for the payment of which, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, administrators, assigns and successors, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

"The condition of the above obligation is such, That, Whereas, the said Nicholas Koehler has heretofore been duly and in accordance with law appointed division engineer of the state highway department of the state of Ohio, to serve until his incumbency in said office shall have been terminated according to law;

"Now, if the said Nicholas Koehler shall hereafter during his incumbency in said position of division engineer, faithfully discharge the duties of said position, then this obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect.

"Witness, our hands and seals, this _____ day of _____ 191__.

_____"

I am returning herewith the bond of Mr. Koehler submitted by you, without my approval, but will be glad to approve the same when the bond has been redrafted in accordance with the suggestions herein made. I also return the bond of Mr. Chamberlin submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—HOW APPORTIONED WHEN HEIRS CONTEST WILL AND COMPROMISE IS EFFECTED—TAX DETERMINED BY TERMS OF WILL.

Where heirs contest the probate of a will and a compromise is reached whereby the whole estate is divided between devisees and legatees, on the one hand, and contestants, on the other, and the will is admitted to probate as a valid will, administration to follow the terms of the compromise, the amount and apportionment of the collateral inheritance tax is determined by the terms of the will itself and the value of the inheritances created thereby, without reference to the compromise.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. CHARLES KRICHBAUM, Probate Judge, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 10, 1915, requesting my opinion upon the following facts:

> "B died testate, unmarried and leaving brothers and sisters. By the terms of his will numerous bequests were made to neighbors. The brothers and sisters contested the will; but in the course of the trial of the action an agreement was arrived at by the terms of which the devisees and the relatives divided the estate regardless of the terms of the will. The court thereupon charged the jury, in accordance with the statute, that the will was valid and must stand as admitted to probate.
> "On what basis is the collateral inheritance tax to be computed under these circumstances?"

Upon a somewhat similar but not identical statement of facts my predecessor in an opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, under date of December 19, 1913, held that the title of the contestors being one of inheritance, the tax was to be assessed against their respective shares if not otherwise exempt, although the amount thereof was determined by the agreement and not by the will. In short, where the contestors as well as the contestants are all collateral relatives, the tax is to assessed against all their shares notwithstanding the agreement, but in accordance with the distribution fixed thereby; so that assuming a simple case, if the sole legatee were a brother and the contestant were another brother, and the agreement were to divide the estate equally, the tax would be computed upon the shares of each as fixed by the agreement, over and above the sum of five hundred dollars.

I agree with my predecessor in the main and perhaps the only point passed upon by him in his opinion; that is to say, I agree that the making of the compromise does not deprive the portion of the estate passing to the contestors thereunder of the character of inheritance and thus exempt it from the tax. It is clear in my mind, upon the authorities referred to by my predecessor in his opinion, which will be found at page 1444 of the annual report of this department for the year 1913, Vol. 2, that no part of the estate can become exempt from taxation solely by reason of the making of an agreement of this character. Such a conclusion affords a partial answer to the question submitted by you. It is certain that the tax must be collected in the case you submit—all parties to the agreement being collateral relatives—upon the entire estate except as affected by exemptions, and not merely upon that portion thereof which is to be paid or has been paid to the devisees and legatees under the will in pursuance of the agreement.

But there is another question which is material and must be answered in connection with your general query, upon which the opinion of my predecessor is not so satisfactory to me. Though the point was apparently not passed upon in the opinion, the implication from the authorities cited and the reasoning adopted by my predecessor in the opinion referred to is that the tax shall be computed upon the respective shares of the takers, under the agreement, as inheritances. This is the holding of the supreme court of Pennsylvania in the case of In re Peppers Estate, 159 Pa. St., 508, which has been followed in other states. The contrary doctrine is maintained by the supreme court of Massachusetts in the case of Baxter v. Treasurer and Receiver General, 209 Mass., 459, wherein it is held that under circumstances of this character, where the will is sustained, the property is to be regarded as having passed first to the devisees and legatees under the will, so that what ultimately becomes of it under the agreement is subsequent to the vesting of the inheritance and in fact is not an inheritance at all. Upon this theory the tax is to be based upon the respective shares as they would have passed under the will and the exemptions deducted in accordance therewith without making any allowance or deduction for or on account of the amounts paid to contestors. The difference between the two rules is therefore material as affecting the amount of the tax, as determined by the exemptions to be deducted. In a case in which the contestors were direct heirs the difference would be even greater, for in that event, under the Pennsylvania theory, their shares would be exempted entirely and there would be a corresponding reduction in the tax charged against the entire estate, while under the Massachusetts law, the fact that under the agreement and not under the will a part of the estate might go to a direct relative would be immaterial.

Upon very careful consideration I am inclined to prefer the reasoning of the Massachusetts court. As stated in Blakemore and Bancroft on Inheritance Tax Law, section 106, "It would seem that the Massachusetts doctrine is preferable, both on principle and as a practical matter of policy. The other view is an open inducement to unscrupulous persons to make such collusive arrangement as may save their pocketbooks at the expense of their conscience."

The statute of Massachusetts is not materially different in phraseology from the statute of Ohio in respect to the question under consideration.

It is my conclusion, therefore, that under the circumstances described by you the tax should be computed upon the values of the several inheritances as determined by the will, deducting only the exemptions thereon and the costs, if any, paid out of the estate in connection with the litigation, as well as other costs of administration.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—UNITED STATES BONDS INCLUDED IN AN INVENTORY OF AN ESTATE ARE TO BE CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING THE AMOUNT OF SAID TAX.

The fact that United States bonds constitute a part of an inheritance passing to collateral heirs does not affect the amount of the collateral inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 21, 1915, submitting for my opinion the following question:

> "Are United States government bonds which were included in an inventory filed in the probate court of a county taxable under the collateral inheritance tax law of this state?"

No property as such is taxable under the collateral inheritance tax law. The subject of the tax is the privilege of inheriting; that is, taking property by will or under the intestate laws of the state, or by deed or other instrument of conveyance intended to take effect at the death of the owner thereof. There are exemptions from the collateral inheritance tax, and it would be sufficient to state that none of them would include any part of an inheritance on the ground that the same is composed of United States bonds. It may, however, be stated also that none of the exemptions from the tax are based upon the character of the property transmitted, but upon the character of the taker or the purpose of the bequest.

The one serious question involved in your inquiry arises under the language of the first section of the inheritance tax law, G. C., section 5331 as amended, 103 O. L., 463. The section provides that:

> "All property within the jurisdiction of this state, * * * which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state * * * to a person * * * shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value above the sum of five hundred dollars."

The query is thereby raised as to whether United States bonds are "within the jurisdiction of this state," within the meaning of this section. If the meaning of this phrase is to be determined by the analogy of the general property tax laws the answer must be in the negative, because it must be conceded that the state is without power to tax bonds of the United States as property unless with the consent of the United States evidenced by an act of congress. In my opinion, however, the meaning of the phrase in question may not be thus narrowed. I think the word "jurisdiction" implies rather the idea of territoriality than the notion of power, especially in view of the fact that it is not the property as such which is taxed but the privilege of inheritance; so that though specific property be sold to pay debts, or otherwise, and a residue merely passed to the inheritor, he is under this law taxed on his inheritance and not upon the property itself.

There can be no doubt that the state may tax the privilege of inheriting United States bonds as well as the privilege of inheriting any other property, though it might not tax the bonds themselves.

For all these reasons, as well as for the primary reason above suggested, and the language of the act, including as well that of the sections containing the machinery of the assessment of the tax as the exemption provision thereof which are consistent with such a conclusion, I advise that United States bonds included in the inventory of an estate are to be considered in determining the value of a taxable inheritance therein, under the collateral inheritance tax laws of this state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION 4736, G. C., IN CREATING A NEW SCHOOL DISTRICT—WRITTEN NOTICE TO DISTRICT BOARDS AFFECTED—MAPS MUST BE FILED WITH COUNTY AUDITOR—NOTICE POSTED OR PRINTED—REMONSTRANCE MAY BE FILED AGAINST TRANSFER.

In creating a new school district under authority of the latter part of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, the county board of education is required, as a condition precedent to the exercise of such authority, to give written notice to the boards of education of the districts to be affected by the transfer of territory, as required by provision of the first part of said section.

Under provision of the first part of said section 4736, G. C., as amended, taken in connection with the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, said transfer of territory will not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the territory to be transferred is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory to be transferred, and until a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county for ten days, and such transfer shall not take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 13th you request my opinion as follows:

> "In the creation of a new school district, under the last half of section 4736, G. C., three questions have arisen upon which your opinion is desired, to wit:
> "1. What notice, if any, is required to be given to the school boards affected?
> "2. What notice, if any, is required to be given to the people of the territory affected?
> "3. Is the clause permitting a remonstrance, as provided for in the first half of section 4736, G. C., intended to apply in case of the creation of a new school district under the second half of said section?"

Section 4736, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, provides:

"The county board of education shall arrange the school districts according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to the pupils, and shall file with the board or boards of education in the territory affected, a written notice of such proposed arrangement; which said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of school districts so proposed. The county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof. The county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district and direct an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness belonging to the newly created district. Members of the boards of education of the newly created district shall thereafter be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the boards of education of the village and rural districts."

Under provision of said section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, and as in force prior to the date when said section as amended in 106 Ohio Laws became effective, the county board of education had power to change district lines and to transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another.

The general assembly in 1915, by the same act in which it amended section 4736, G. C., carried the above provision as well as the subsequent provisions of said statute, as found in 104 O. L., prescribing the conditions under which the aforesaid power might be exercised, into section 4692, G. C. This section as amended in 106 O. L., 397, and as now in force provides:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. If an entire district be transferred the board of education of such district is thereby abolished or if a member of the board of education lives in a part of a school district transferred the member becomes a nonresident of the school district from which he was transferred and ceases to be a member of such board of education. The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

It will be observed, however, that under provision of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., and as now in force, the county board of education has power to arrange the school districts of the county school district according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to the pupils and as a condition precedent to the making of such an arrangement said county board is required to file with the boards of education in the territory affected a written notice of such proposed arrangement and said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with said boards of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory to be affected by the order of the county board file a written remonstrance with said county board against said proposed arrangement.

It is evident that in arranging school districts under authority of section 4736, G. C., as amended, the county board must necessarily exercise the powers conferred upon it by the above provisions of section 4692, G. C. The provisions of the two sections must therefore be read together. The legislature in amending section 4736, G. C., as found in 106 Ohio Laws, extended the authority heretofore exercised by the county board under provisions of said section as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, by providing in the latter part of said section that "the county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof."

While it may be argued that inasmuch as the latter provision of said statute follows the provision requiring the county board of education as a condition precedent to the arrangement of the school districts of the county school district, to file with the boards of education of the districts to be affected by changes in district lines and transfers of territory, written notice of such proposed arrangement, it is not intended that such notice and opportunity to the electors of such districts to file objections to such proposed arrangement shall be given by the county board of education in the exercise of the authority conferred by said latter provision, I think that inasmuch as the authority conferred by said latter provision is merely an extension of the authority conferred by the former provisions of said section, and in view of the provisions of both section 4736 and section 4692 of the General Code as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, requiring the giving of notice and the affording of an opportunity to the electors of the districts to be affected by changes proposed to be made under authority of said sections, as conditions precedent to the exercise of such authority, it cannot be said that the county board of education may create a new district from one or more school districts or parts thereof, and thus exercise the extreme power conferred by said latter provision of said section 4736, G. C., without being required to give the notice to the boards of education of the districts to be affected by said proposed transfer of territory and without affording the opportunity to the electors of such districts to file a remonstrance against said proposed arrangement as provided for in the first part of said section.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your first question that, in the creating of a new school district under authority of the latter provision of said section 4736, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, the county board of education is required, as a condition precedent to the exercise of such authority, to give written notice to the boards of education of the districts to be affected by such transfer of territory as required by provision of the first part of said section.

Replying to your second and third questions I am of the opinion that under provision of the first part of said section 4736, G. C., as amended, taken in connection with the above provisions of section 4692, G. C., said transfer of territory will not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the territory to be transferred is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory to be transferred, and until a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county for ten days, and that such transfer shall not take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CLERK OF BOARD OF EDUCATION—A NON-RESIDENT OF A SCHOOL DISTRICT MAY NOT HOLD SUCH AN OFFICE.

A non-resident of a school district may not hold the office of clerk of the board of education of said district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. D. F. MILLS, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of December 3d, which is as follows:

> "In Jackson township, Shelby county, Ohio, there are two school districts, namely, the Jackson Center village school district, and the Jackson township rural district. The Jackson township rural school district comprises all the territory in said township outside of the Jackson Center village school district. The township clerk resides in the territory included in the Jackson Center village school district; the board of education of the Jackson township rural school district desires to appoint the township clerk as clerk of their board of education.
> "I would like to have your opinion as to whether or not the fact that the township clerk does not reside in the district will disqualify him from serving as clerk of the township board of education."

Under provision of section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, a person who may or may not be a member of the board of education may be elected as clerk of said board by the members thereof. Section 4774, G. C., provides that:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, the clerk of each board of education shall execute a bond in an amount and with surety to be approved by the board, payable to the state, conditioned for the faithful performance of all the official duties required of him."

In so far as the compatibility of the two offices is concerned, the duties of township clerk in no way conflict with the duties of the office of clerk of the board of education of the township rural school district and it is interesting to note in this connection that under provision of section 4747, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104 Ohio Laws, the clerk of the township was ex-officio clerk of the board of education of the township school district.

Your inquiry, however, is confined to the question as to whether or not the fact that the person, who holds the office of township clerk, is a non-resident of the Jackson township rural school district disqualifies such person from holding the office of clerk of the board of education of said school district.

Section 4 of article XV of the constitution as adopted November 4, 1913 (103 O. L., 992), provides in part:

> "No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state unless possessed of the qualifications of an elector."

Under provision of section 1 of article V of the constitution of Ohio, as modified by the fourteenth and fifteenth articles of amendments to the federal constitution, every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the state one year next preceding the election, and of the county, township or ward in which he resides, such time as may be provided by law, shall have the qualifications of an elector, and be entitled to vote at all elections.

Sections 4861, 4862 and 4863 of the General Code, as found in the chapter relating to the qualifications of electors, provide as follows:

> "Sec. 4861. Every male citizen of the United States, who is of the age of twenty-one years or over, and possesses the qualifications in regard to residence hereinafter provided, shall be entitled to vote at all elections.
> "Sec. 4862. Every woman, born in the United States or who is the wife or daughter of a citizen of the United States, who is over twenty-one years of age and possesses the necessary qualifications in regard to residence hereinafter provided for men shall be entitled to vote and to be voted for for member of the board of education and upon no other question.
> "Sec. 4863. No person shall be permitted to vote at any election unless he shall have been a resident of the state for one year, resident of the county for thirty days, and, except as provided in the next section, resident of the township, village or ward of a city or village for twenty days next preceding the election at which he offers to vote."

Section 4864, G. C., provides that a person who is the head of a family and has resided in the state and in the county in which such township, village or ward of a city or village is situated the length of time required by the preceding section, and who bona fide removes with his family from a ward to another ward in such city or village, or from a ward of such city or village to a township or village in the same county, or from a township or village to a ward of a city or village in the same county, or from one township to another in the same county, shall have the right to vote in such township, village or ward of a city or village without having resided therein the length of time so prescribed by such section.

Section 4865, G. C., provides that:

> "Such voter so removing with his family from a township to a village or ward of a city or village in the same county shall not have the right to vote at any municipal election held in such city or village, unless he shall have resided therein twenty days prior to such municipal election."

Upon an examination of the above provisions of the constitution and statutes it will be observed that the right to vote at all elections in this state is limited to male citizens of the United States of the age of twenty-one years, who have been residents of this state for one year next preceding the election at which they desire to vote, and residents of their respective counties for thirty days and, except as provided in section 4864, G. C., residents of their respective townships, villages or wards of a city or village for twenty days next preceding such election.

It will be noted, however, that while residence of the state and county and of a township or village, or ward of a city or village, for the respective lengths of time prescribed by the above provision of the statute, is a necessary qualification of an elector for the purpose of voting at any election, the above provisions of the constitution and statutes do not by their terms make residence of a school district a necessary qualification of an elector of such district.

Assuming, therefore, that the township clerk referred to in your inquiry has resided in the state and in the county and township mentioned in said inquiry the respective lengths of time required by the above provisions of the constitution and the statutes, it still remains to be determined whether the fact that he is a nonresident of Jackson township rural school district disqualifies him from serving as clerk of the board of education of such district.

Upon a careful consideration of the above provisions of the constitution taken in connection with the provisions of the statutes relating to the qualification of electors, the casting and counting of votes and the challenging of voters, I have reached the conclusion that the township clerk referred to in your inquiry is not eligible to the office of clerk of the board of education of said township rural school district for the reason that, not being a resident of said district, he is not a qualified elector thereof and is therefore disqualified from holding the office of clerk of said board of education under the above provision of section 4 of article XV of the constitution.

Section 4866, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "All judges of election, in determining the residence of a person offering to vote, shall be governed by the following rules, so far as they may be applicable:
> "1. That place shall be considered the residence of a person in which his habitation is fixed, and to which, whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning." * * *

Section 5055, G. C., provides:

> "Each qualified elector shall vote at the polls of the precinct in which he has a legal residence, unless otherwise directed by special provision of law."

Section 5061, G. C., provides in part:

> "If the person offering to vote is challenged as unqualified, one of the judges shall tender him the following oath: 'Do you swear that you will fully and truly answer all questions put to you, touching your place of residence and qualifications as an elector at this election?'
> "Third—If the person is challenged as unqualified on the ground that he is not a resident of the county or precinct where he offers to vote, the judges or one of them shall put the following questions:
> "1. How long have you resided in this precinct?
> * * * * * * * * * * *
> "6. Are you an actual resident of this precinct?"

In support of the proposition that a qualified elector of a school district must be a resident of such district I call your attention to the opinion of the court in the case of Lehman v. McBride, 15 O. S., 573, and particularly to that part of said opinion as found at pages 597 and 598, in determining the intent and meaning to be given to the words "all elections" as found in the above provision of section 1 of article V of the constitution. The court said:

> "We are, doubtless, to give such construction to the words 'all elections,' as will be in harmony with the other clear and unmistakable provisions of the constitution on the same subject. Now, other portions of the same instrument clearly point out in what elections the several electors of the state may respectively participate, by their votes. And this is uniformly done, not by reference to the places where elections may be held, but to the character of the office to be filled by election, and the residence of the electors. Thus, as we have seen, senators and representatives are to be elected 'by the electors in' (that is, residing in), 'the respective counties or districts' which they directly represent in the legislative branch to which they are chosen. The governor and other executive officers of the state, 'by the electors of the state;' judges of the supreme court, 'by the electors of the state at large;' judges of the courts of common pleas, 'by the electors of their respective subdivisions;' judges of probate courts, clerks of the court of common pleas, and county officers generally, 'by the electors of each county' for which they are severally to be elected; justices of the peace, and township officers generally, 'by the electors of their respective townships;' judges, other than those provided for in the constitution, 'by the electors of the judicial district for which they may be created;' and officers in the militia, 'by the persons subject to military duty in their respective districts.' On a well-recognized rule of construction, these various provisions, which specify the portion of electors by whom the different officers shall be chosen, exclude all others from a right to vote at such elections; and are, therefore, limitations or qualifications to be carefully respected in giving a construction to the words under consideration. The general priciple which pervades the constitution on this subject, is, that no one shall be allowed to participate in the election of officers whose jurisdiction will not extend over him, or territorially include the place of his residence; but that the electors of each district or civil subdivision of the state, shall have the right to select their own official representatives, or public functionaries. And, keeping in view the limitations to which we have referred, there can be but little danger of misunderstanding what is meant by an elector's right 'to vote at all elections.'"

This same rule was recognized by the supreme court of the state of New Jersey in the case of State ex rel. Allison v. Blake, 25 L. R. A., 480-486, in interpreting a similar provision of the constitution of that state.

Replying to your question I am of the opinion that inasmuch as the person referred to in your inquiry is not a resident of the rural school district mentioned in said inquiry, and is not therefore a qualified elector of said district, said person is not eligible to the office of clerk of the board of education of such district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS—AS MEMBER OF COUNTY BOARD OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS, MAY NOT TEACH IN, BE CONNECTED WITH OR BE FINANCIALLY INTERESTED IN A SUMMER SCHOOL, OR ANY SCHOOL, NOT SUPPORTED WHOLLY OR IN PART BY STATE.

The superintendent of a county school district as a member of the county board of school examiners may not teach in, be connected with or become financially interested in a summer school or any school which is not supported wholly or in part by the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of December 4th, which is as follows:

> "Section 7811 of the school laws, provides:
> "'There shall be a county board of school examiners for each county, consisting of the county superintendent, one district superintendent and one other competent teacher, the latter two to be appointed by the county board of education.'
>
> "Section 7812 also provides:
> "'No examiners shall teach in, be connected with, or financially interested in any school which is not supported wholly or in part by the state, etc.'
> "The question is whether or not the county superintendent comes strictly under the term 'examiner' or whether or not he would be permitted to teach in a summer school which is not supported wholly or in part by the state, or in other words, whether it would be illegal for a county superintendent to teach in any summer school that is not supported wholly or in part by the state?"

Under provision of section 7811, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 102, and as quoted by you, the superintendent of the county school district is ex-officio a member of the county board of school examiners, and the authority to appoint the other two members of said board is vested in the county board of education.

By the same act of the legislature amending section 7811, G. C., section 7812, G. C., was amended and the only change in said latter section affected by said amendment was to vest in the county board of education instead of the probate judge of the county the authority to remove an examiner and appoint his successor in case it is ascertained by said county board of education that such examiner is connected with or interested in any school not under state control, or is employed in any such institution in his own county, or becomes an agent of or interested in any book company or journal, or fails to hold the necessary teacher's certificate, or has removed from the county.

Inasmuch as the legislature, in amending said section 7812, did not except the county superintendent as a member of the county board of school examiners from the inhibitions therein provided, it seems clear that said officer is subject to the provisions of said section the same as the other two members of said board of school examiners.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that under the plain provisions of said section 7812, G. C., as amended, the county superintendent as a member of the county board of school examiners may not teach in, be connected with or become financially interested in a summer school or any school which is not supported wholly or in part by the state, and in case the county board of education ascertains that said county superintendent as a member of said board of examiners sustains any of said relations to such an institution, it will be the duty of said county board of education to remove said county superintendent from his office and appoint a successor to said office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY TRANSFER A PART OR ALL OF A SCHOOL DISTRICT OF COUNTY DISTRICT TO AN ADJOINING DISTRICT OR DISTRICTS OF SAID COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT—REGARDLESS OF ELECTION HELD PRIOR TO TIME OF SUCH TRANSFER AT WHICH ELECTION CENTRALIZATION IS FAVORED —WHEN TRANSFERRED TERRITORY WILL BE LIABLE FOR BONDED INDEBTEDNESS CREATED BY ELECTORS OF A SCHOOL DISTRICT BY SECTION 7625, G. C.

A county board of education acting under authority of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, and in compliance with its requirements, may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of said county school district, and this may be done regardless of the fact that at an election held prior to the time of such transfer the electors of the district to which such territory is transferred, voted in favor of centralization.

If the electors of a school district vote in favor of a bond issue under authority of section 7625, G. C., and for the purposes therein mentioned, and thereafter the county board of education transfers a part or all of another school district to such district, upon said transfer being effected, said territory thus transferred will become a part of said district for all school purposes and will, therefore, be liable for its share of the bonded indebtedness so created.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. ADDISON P. MINSHALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 13th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I am desirous of having your opinion on the following proposition:
> "At the general election in November last the electors of the Green township rural school district of Ross county, Ohio, voted in favor of the centralization of the schools of said district. The board is now contemplating the submission of a bond issue, for the purpose of procuring a site and erecting a suitable building thereon, to the electors of said district.
> "Can the county board of education transfer a part of another township rural school district to the Green township rural school district after centralization has been carried?
> "If the bond issue, about to be voted upon, carries, and a part of another district is transferred to the said centralized district, will the bond issue be a liability upon the territory to be transferred to the centralized district as well as upon the territory of the centralized district?"

Section 4692, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 397, provides:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. If an entire district be transferred the board of education of such district is thereby abolished or if a member of the board of education lives in a part of a school district transferred the member becomes a non-resident of the school district from which he was transferred and ceases to be a member of such board of education. The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

It will be observed that the county board of education, acting under the above provisions of the statute and in compliance with the requirements of said provisions, may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of said county school district.

The provisions of this statute are in no way related to or dependent upon the provisions of section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and as supplemented by section 4726-1, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 442, which sections provide for the submitting of the question of centralization by one or more rural boards of education of a township to the qualified electors of the rural school district or rural school districts of such township.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that your county board of education, acting under authority of section 4692, G. C., as amended, and in compliance with its requirements, may transfer a part of the township rural school district referred to in said inquiry to the Green township rural school district, and that this may be done regardless of the fact that at the last general election, the electors of said Green township rural school district voted in favor of centralization.

Your second question has been answered in opinion No. 919 of this department rendered to Hon. Earl K. Solether, prosecuting attorney of Wood county, under date of October 13, 1915. In said opinion it was held that where a village school district within a county school district votes in favor of a bond issue under authority of section 7625, G. C., for the purposes therein mentioned, and thereafter the county board of education transfers a part of a rural school district within said county school district to said village school district, upon said transfer being effected, said part of said rural district will become a part of said village school district for all school purposes and will, therefore, be liable for its share of the bonded indebtedness so created.

In keeping with said former holding I am of the opinion in answer to your second question that if the bond issue referred to in your inquiry as about to be voted upon, carries, and a part of another district is transferred to said centralized district, said part of said district so transferred will be liable for its share of said bonded indebtedness so created.

A copy of the opinion above referred to is enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—WHERE LOCATED IN MORE THAN ONE COUNTY—TAXES AND TAXATION—ELECTION OF ASSESSOR—ONE SHOULD BE ELECTED IN EACH OF SEVERAL PARTS OF SAID MUNICIPAL CORPORATION AS LOCATED IN SEVERAL COUNTIES.

Under provision of section 17 of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law, being section 3349, G. C., 106 O. L., 250, where a municipal corporation is located in more than one county, each of the several parts of said municipal corporation as located in the several counties respectively, constitutes an assessment district in which an assessor should be elected as provided in said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. C. H. CURTISS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 24th you request my opinion as follows:

> "I desire to call your attention to section 17 of the act: 'To provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation' and ask for your construction of such section which is found on page 250, 105 Ohio Laws, as relating to a situation we have in this county and that of Summit county in relation to an assessor or assessors for the village of Mogadore; which is located partly in Summit county and partly in Portage county, the greater portion being in Summit county.
> "By a construction placed on this section by the authorities in Summit county (as I understand) only one assessor was elected for the village of Mogadore; he being elected there by the electors of said village residents of both Portage and Summit counties.
> "The person elected to this office resides on the Summit county side. The question being whether he is legally elected assessor for the whole village including the parts in each county or whether under the situation a vacancy exists on the Portage county side, or perhaps on both sides.
> "A further question arises, if under this section, as would seem to be indicated by the latter part of line 6 and the first part of line 7 of such section this person is legally elected assessor for the whole village whether then he must give one bond or two bonds as such assessor; if one bond, with which auditor the same shall be filed and approved."

Section 17 of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law, being section 3349 of the General Code, as found in 106 O. L., 250, provides in part as follows:

> "At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers as follows: In municipal corporations divided into wards, one assessor shall be elected in each ward; in villages one assessor shall be elected; in cities not divided into wards, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, shall, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, within ten days after this act shall become effective, divide such cities or such part or parts thereof as may be located in their county, into such number of assessment districts as in the judgment of the county auditor may be necessary in order to provide for the assessment of all the property therein; a division so fixed shall remain in effect for a period of four years, at the expiration of which and quadrennially thereafter a like division shall be made in the same manner and by the same authority. One assessor shall, at the time specified in this section, be elected in each assessment district so created; provided, however, that nothing therein shall be so construed as to require a division of any municipal corporation or part thereof into assessment districts when, in the judgment of the county auditor, such division is not necessary, in which event one assessor shall be elected in the entire municipal corporation or in that part thereof which may be located in one county as the case may be;"

Under the above provision of the statute it will be observed that where a municipal corporation is located in more than one county, each of the several parts of said municipal corporation as located in the several counties respectively, constitutes an assessment district in which an assessor should have been elected as provided in that part of section 17 above quoted.

Inasmuch as a part of the village of Mogadore is located in Portage county and the remaining part of said village is located in Summit county, each of said parts of said village constitutes a separate assessment district in which an assessor should have been elected as above provided.

It follows therefore that said village as a whole could not be considered as an assessment district and the action of the electors in attempting to elect an assessor for the entire village is without legal effect.

The vacancy in the assessment district comprising that part of said village located in Portage county should be filled by the auditor of said county under authority of section 22 of the act and in the manner therein provided. In like manner the vacancy in the assessment district comprising that part of said village located in Summit county should be filled by the auditor of said county.

The conclusion reached in answer to your first question disposes of the other question submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY TREASURER MAY NOT ACT AS MEMBER OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT LOCATED IN SUCH COUNTY—OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE.

The treasurer of a county may not act as a member of the board of education of a village school district located in such county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 31, 1915.

HON. WILLIAM C. HUDSON, Prosecuting Attorney, McArthur, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 22d you request my opinion as follows:

> "Please give your opinion on the following: Is a county treasurer disqualified from acting as a member of a village board of education in the county of which he is treasurer?"

Section 5649-3b of the General Code, as amended in 106 O. L., 180, provides in part as follows:

> "There is hereby created in each county a board for the annual adjustment of the rates of taxation and fixing the amount of taxes to be levied therein, to be known as the budget commissioners. The county auditor, the county treasurer and the prosecuting attorney shall constitute such board."

Section 5649-3c of the General Code, makes it the duty of the county auditor to lay before the budget commissioners the annual budgets submitted to him by the boards and officers named in section 5649-3a, G. C., together with an estimate to be prepared by the auditor of the amount of money to be raised for state purposes in each taxing district in the county, and such other information as the budget commissioners may request, or the tax commission of Ohio may prescribe. Said section further provides that:

> "The budget commissioners shall examine such budgets and estimates prepared by the county auditor, and ascertain the total amount proposed to be raised in each taxing district for state, county, township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district purposes. If the budget commissioners find that the total amount of taxes to be raised therein does not exceed the amount authorized to be raised in any township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district in the county, the fact shall be certified to the county auditor. If such total is found to exceed such authorized amount in any township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district in the county, the budget commissioners shall adjust the various amounts to be raised so that the total amount thereof shall not exceed in any taxing district the sum authorized to be levied therein. In making such adjustment the budget commissioners may revise and change the annual estimates contained in such budgets, and may reduce any or all the items in any such budget, but shall not increase the total of any such budget, or any item therein. The budget commissioners shall reduce the estimates contained in any or all such budgets by such amount or amounts as will bring the total for each township, city, village, school district, or other taxing district within the limits provided by law."

You will readily observe that the duties of the county treasurer as a member of the board of budget commissioners of the county would conflict with the duties of a member of the board of education of a school district in such county, for the reason that the budget commissioners, in considering the annual budget of the various taxing authorities of the county and in limiting the amount of taxes to be raised in each of the several taxing districts of such county to the amount authorized by law to be raised in such taxing district, acts as a check on said taxing authorities.

It follows, therefore, that inasmuch as the board of education of a school district is one of the taxing authorities of the county in which such district is located, the office of county treasurer is incompatible with the office of member of the board of education of such school district, under the rule laid down by the court in the case of State ex rel. v. Gebert, 12 C. C. (n. s.), 294.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your question that the treasurer of a county may not act as a member of the board of education of a village school district located in such county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of December 7, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

"Section 7246, G. C. (Sec. 249 of the Cass highway act), requires the state highway commissioner to prepare and publish a set of traffic rules and regulations, and section 7478, G. C. (Sec. 251 of the Cass highway act), provides that the state highway commissioner shall furnish the county highway superintendent with a copy of the rules and regulations promulgated by said state highway commissioner, and directs that official to publish the same in a newspaper in his county.

"A week or so ago this department received a copy of a newspaper containing the rules and regulations, with the request that we measure same. Since that time this department has received two other newspapers with the request for measurement, but in these instances the advertisement contains the entire contents of the pamphlet sent out by the state highway commissioner entitled, 'Traffic rules and regulations.' We enclose herewith copy of the pamphlet, together with the letter of the state highway commissioner submitting the same to the county highway superintendent, and we would ask you for a ruling as to whether or not the law contemplates the publication of all the matter as given in the pamphlet including the highway commissioner's 'Foreword,' page 3, and the quotation of the laws under the head of 'Appendix' as same appears on pages 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22.

"Question: Should the advertisement, as required to be published by section 7478, G. C., embrace only the rules and regulations as set forth in the pamphlet commencing at page 5 and ending at page 15, or should the entire text of the pamphlet be published?

"Question: If you should hold that only the rules and regulations are necessary, should findings for recovery be made if the entire pamphlet was published and paid for, and if so, against whom should the excess finding for recovery be made, the publisher of the newspaper or the officer who authorized the publication?"

Section 7246, G. C., referred to by you, requires the state highway commissioner to prepare and publish a set of traffic rules and regulations governing the use of and traffic on all state roads.

Section 7478, G. C., provides that the state highway commissioner shall furnish the county highway superintendent with a copy of the rules and regulations promulgated by said state highway commissioner and applicable to his county, and the county highway superintendent is required to cause the rules and regulations so furnished by said highway commisssioner, to be published at least once each week for two successive weeks in a newspaper published and of general circulation in said county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no newspaper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county.

In pursuance of the duty enjoined upon him by section 7246, G. C., it appears that the state highway commissioner did prepare a set of traffic rules and regulations. These traffic rules and regulations consist of nine articles, containing a total of seventy-two sections. It is manifest that the publication of these traffic rules and regulations to be made by the state highway commissioner, under authority of section 7246, G. C., is not the newspaper publication referred to in section 7478, G. C., and the state highway commissioner, in performing the duty of publishing the traffic rules and regulations prepared by him exercised this authority and performed this duty by printing such traffic rules and regulations in a small pamphlet suitable for general distribution.

The first page of the cover of this pamphlet bears the following title:

"Ohio state highway department, Columbus, Ohio. Traffic rules and regulations covering traffic on the public highways of Ohio. These rules and regulations are effective on and after December 5, 1915. Prepared in accordance with sections 7246 and 7478 of the General Code. Clinton Cowen, state highway commissioner. November, 1915."

This title is repeated on page 1 of the pamphlet and pages 3 and 4 are taken up by a foreword, which foreword contains a reference to section 7246, G. C., and a brief statement of the sources from which the rules and regulations are derived and an acknowledgment of the assistance rendered by certain persons in their preparation. Pages 5 to 15, inclusive, of the pamphlet contain the rules and regulations, and pages 16 to 22, inclusive, contain an appendix. This appendix consists of 18 sections of the General Code of Ohio, the sections in question being those relating to the use of the highways of the state. So far as the title is concerned, it might be well to observe that the traffic rules and regulations, as pointed out in a former opinion of this department, are effective only on state roads and not on all of the public highways of the state. This is not material, however, as the title does not serve to enlarge the scope of the rules and regulations, neither does the use of the expression "public highways" serve to invalidate the rules and regulations in so far as the use of and traffic on state roads are concerned. The statement in the title that the rules and regulations are effective on and after December 5, 1915, must, of course, be read in the light of the provision of section 7246, G. C., to the effect that the rules and regulations shall become effective thirty days after publication. The only effect, therefore, of the statement that the rules and regulations are effective on and after December 5, 1915, is to prevent their going into effect before that date, even in those cases where publication might have been made more than thirty days before December 5th.

A careful study of the rules and regulations and of the appendix, discloses the fact that practically every provision found in the eighteen sections of the General Code included in such appendix, has been carried into and made a part of the traffic rules and regulations. It is manifest that the legislature did not intend that the state highway commissioner should select all or any part of the sections of the General Code applicable to highways and promulgate the same as a code of rules and regulationss for state roads. All the sections of the General Code applicable to state roads, and it may be observed that most of the sections of the General Code relating to the use of highways are of general application to all roads, were and are in full force and effect without the necessity of any adoption, promulgation or publication on the part of the state highway commissioner. It was evidently in the mind of the legislature that these sections of the General Code did not cover all the ground that should be covered and the intention was that rules and regulations covering additional ground should be adopted, promulgated and published. The state highway commissioner in the performance of his duty has seen fit to restate in simple form, certain of the statutory requirements already in force.

From the above it must be concluded that neither the foreword nor the appendix, containing quotations from the General Code of Ohio, strictly speaking, constitute any part of the traffic rules and regulations. While it was entirely proper to include the appendix and also the foreword in any pamphlet that might be published by the state highway commissioner for general distribution, yet the reason for making a newspaper publication of the rules and regulations does not exist as to the foreword or the sections of the General Code found in the appendix. The object of the newspaper publication required by section 7478, G. C., was manifestly to bring to the knowledge of the public the traffic rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner. No publication in a newspaper, however, was necessary to bring to the knowledge of the public the sections of the General Code contained in the appendix.

In a prosecution under section 13421-17, G. C., for violating the traffic rules and regulations prescribed by the state highway commissioner, it might be a good defense to show that the traffic rules and regulations in question had not been published in the county in which the prosecution was had, but in a prosecution for violating any one of the sections of the General Code found in the appendix, the defendant could not be heard to complain that such section of the General Code had not been published in a newspaper in that county.

Your communication, however, does not present so much a question of what should have been included in the rules and regulations or what, as a matter of law, constitutes the rules and regulations, as it does a question of what construction county highway superintendents and newspaper publishers were entitled to place upon the communication of the state highway commissioner and the pamphlet enclosed therewith.

The communication addressed by the state highway commissioner to each county highway superintendent in the state and accompanying the pamphlet referred to above, read as follows:

> "We are sending you herewith a copy of the traffic rules and regulations prepared, published and furnished by this department in accordance with sections 7246 and 7478 of the General Code of Ohio. Additional copies are being sent you under separate cover for distribution by you.
> "You will note that section 7478 of the Code requires that you have these rules and regulations published at least once each week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper published and of general circulation in your county.
> "I suggest that you familiarize yourself with sections 7246, 7478 and 13421-17 of the General Code, in addition to the rules themselves, in order that these rules may be of the greatest value to the public."

It will be noted that this communication refers to a copy of the traffic rules and regulations, but the enclosure was the pamphlet in question. As previously noted, the title of this pamphlet appeared on the first page of the cover and also on page one, and there was nothing to indicate that all that followed was not regarded by the state highway commissioner as a part of the traffic rules and regulations. In other words, there was nothing, either in the pamphlet or the accompanying communication, to indicate, either to the county highway superintendent or to the publisher, that the state highway commissioner did not intend to incorporate into and make a part of the rules and regulations both the foreword and the appendix.

There is no statutory limitation upon the length of the traffic rules and regulations or as to what may or may not be included therein and while it is unfortunate that there has been created a situation resulting in the incorporation in the legal advertisement of unnecessary matter, yet I am of the opinion, in view of the form in which this matter was sent out by the state highway department, that county highway superintendents were authorized to cause to be published all of the contents of the pamphlet. It therefore becomes unnecessary to answer your inquiry in regard to findings.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL—BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS—LATTER HAS AUTHORITY TO LET CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF WATERWORKS—HOW ACTION OF COUNCIL MAY BE RATIFIED.

It is the duty of the council of a village, when it orders waterworks to be constructed, to establish a board of trustees of public affairs, and it is the duty of the mayor, subject to confirmation by council, to appoint the members of such board to hold office until the next regular election.

It is the duty of the board of trustees of public affairs to secure plans, specifications and estimates of proposed waterworks and after the expenditure therefor has been approved by council to let a contract for the work with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement as directed in section 4328, G. C.

The mayor and the clerk of the council have no authority to let a contract for the construction of waterworks.

Where council has secured plans and specifications for the waterworks and bids have been received after advertisement therefor by the village clerk, the board of trustees of public affairs may approve and ratify the action of council and the village clerk and let a contract to the lowest and best bidder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 3, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of December 13th, with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"Section 4357, G. C., et seq., provides that when council orders waterworks * * * to be constructed, or leased, or purchased, council shall establish at such time a board of trustees of public affairs for the village, which board shall consist of three members to be, in the first instance, appointed by the mayor, subject to the confirmation of council.

"A village has issued bonds for the construction of a municipal waterworks plant and desires to enter upon the construction thereof.

"Question 1. Just where do the powers of council cease and those delegated to the board of public affairs begin, in the execution of the contracts for the purchase of the site and the erection of the plant?

"Question 2. If the council of a village has issued and sold the bonds of the village for the construction of a waterworks plant, purchased the site therefor, and awarded the contract for the construction of the plant upon receipt of bids after due advertisement as provided by law, would said contract, if signed by the mayor and clerk on behalf of the village, and by the contractor, be a valid contract as against the special fund created by the sale of bonds for such purpose?

"We enclose herewith a statement and brief prepared by the mayor of the village of Belleville, O., for your information, which kindly return with your reply. An early consideration and reply to the above will greatly accommodate the officials of said village."

Your inquiry arises from a situation existing in the village of Belleville, Ohio, and I quote the following statement of facts furnished by the mayor of the village, which contains a synopsis of the proceedings of council in the matter of the construction of a waterworks system:

"PROCEDURE.

"Resolution No. 8, declaring it necessary to issue bonds in the sum of $25,000.00, passed September 23, 1914, and duly published.

"Notice of election, November 3, 1914, duly published.

"Election resulted as follows:

For waterworks bond issue	194
Against	92
Total vote cast at election	308

(Some did not vote on the proposition.)

"Ordinance No. 15, to issue bonds, passed December 16, 1914. Duly published. Form —, page 383, Ellis' Municipal Code.

"Ordinance establishing board of public affairs, passed January 4, 1915. Duly published. No. 17.

"Ordinance No. 23, 'amending section 1 of ordinance No. 15', passed April 19, 1915. Changed rate of interest on bonds. Duly published. Bonds sold June 10, 1915, to Seasongood and Mayer, Cincinnati, $915.00 premium.

"Ordinance No. 31, 'To levy a tax to create a sinking fund' passed July 1, 1915. Duly published.

"Resolution 'Approving the plans and specifications' passed September 8, 1915. Same approved by the state board of health, September 23, 1915.

"Notice to contractors for bids to be received by the clerk, November 9, 1915.

"Bids received by clerk and opened and read. The engineer tabulated the bids and met with council on the evening of November 9th, but there being twenty-eight bids, and such variance, no action was taken by council on that date. Owing to the sickness and death of the wife of the engineer, A. H. Smith, the further consideration was delayed until on or about the twenty-second day of November, at which time the mayor appointed the three men who had received the highest number of votes for members of the board of public affairs, at the November election, as members of said board for the time intervening between then and January 1, 1916. The appointment was confirmed by council, and the members took the oath of office. After some consideration they refused to further qualify by the giving of bond as required, and claimed that the whole proceeding of the clerk in advertising for bids was without authority of law, and should have been by the board, and that the board had full and complete authority to supervise the construction of the system of waterworks from the commencement.

"No resolution ordering waterworks was ever passed. * * *"

Section 4357 of the General Code, which provides for the establishment of a board of trustees of public affairs in villages, is as follows:

"In each village in which waterworks, an electric light plant, artificial or natural gas plant, or other similar public utility is situated, or when council orders waterworks, an electric light plant, natural or artificial gas plant or other similar public utility, to be constructed, or to be leased or purchased from any individual, company or corporation, council shall establish at such time a board of trustees of public affairs for the village, which shall consist of three members, residents of the village, who shall be each elected for a term of two years."

Section 4361 of the General Code (103 O. L., 561), relating to the powers and duties of the board of trustees of public affairs, is, in part, as follows:

"The board of trustees of public affairs shall manage, conduct and control the waterworks, electric light plants, artificial or natural gas plants, or other similar public utilities, furnish supplies of water, electricity or gas, collect all water, electrical and gas rents, and appoint necessary officers, employes and agents. * * The board of trustees of public affairs shall have the same powers and perform the same duties as are possessed by, and are incumbent upon, the director of public service as provided in sections 3955, 3959, 3960, 3961, 3964, 3965, 3974, 3981, 4328, 4329, 4330, 4331, 4332, 4333, 4334 of the General Code, and all powers and duties relating to waterworks in any of these sections shall extend to and include electric light, power and gas plants and such other similar public utilities, and such boards shall have such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinance not inconsistent herewith. * * *"

In order, therefore, to determine the extent of the powers and duties of the board of trustees of public affairs, the sections of the General Code to which reference is made in section 4361 must be consulted.

Section 3961 of the General Code, relative to the powers of the director of public service to make certain contracts, is as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of this title, the director of public service may make contracts for the building of machinery, waterworks buildings, reservoirs and the enlargement and repair thereof, the manufacturing and laying down of pipe, the furnishing and supplying with connections all necessary fire hydrants for fire department purposes, keeping them in repair, and for all other purposes necessary to the full and efficient management and construction of waterworks."

Section 4328 of the General Code, which directs the manner in which contracts shall be made by the director of public service, is as follows:

"The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

Section 4329 of the General Code provides that bids for such contracts

"shall be opened at twelve o'clock, noon, on the last day for filing them by the director of public service and publicly read by him."

also that:

"the director may reject any and all bids."

Section 4334 of the General Code provides that:

"All contracts made by the director of public service shall be executed by him in the name of the city. * * *"

It will be observed that under the language of section 4361 of the General Code, above quoted, the board of trustees of public affairs are given the same powers and duties relative to the making of contracts as are conferred upon the director of public service in cities by virtue of sections 3961, 4328, 4329 and 4334. Under these last sections it is clear that it is not only the right but also the duty of the director of public service in cities to contract for the erection of a waterworks plant and to manage and control such plant after its construction. Since the board of trustees of public affairs are by direct reference given the same power relative to making contracts as the director of public service in cities, it follows that the board of trustees should contract for and supervise the erection of a waterworks plant whenever the village council orders such waterworks to be constructed, and by ordinance directs such expenditure of money.

Although the facts submitted in the statement of the mayor of Bellville do not show that the village council ever formally ordered waterworks to be constructed, yet, since by ordinance they authorized an election to determine whether or not bonds should be issued to construct waterworks, and subsequently passed an ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds for the construction of waterworks, and also enacted an ordinance establishing a board of public affairs, it is fair to assume that the requirement of the statute that council must first order the construction of waterworks was complied with.

Specifically answering your first question, therefore, I am of the opinion that it is the duty of council, when it orders the construction of a waterworks plant, to immediately establish a board of trustees of public affairs for the village. It thereupon becomes the duty of such board to prepare plans and specifications looking toward the construction of the plant and submit the same to council for approval. If these plans and specifications meet the approval of council, the expenditure therefor should first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council under the provisions of section 4328, and it then becomes the duty of the board of trustees of public affairs to advertise for bids as required by law and to enter into a contract in the name of the village with the lowest and best bidder.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 4357 of the General Code are mandatory and that council must establish a board of trustees of public affairs whenever it orders waterworks or other like utilities to be constructed. It therefore follows that council has no authority to proceed to let the contract for the construction of such utility, and that a contract signed by the mayor and the clerk on behalf of the village and by the contractor would not be a valid contract against the special fund created by the sale of the bonds for such purpose.

It appears from the facts stated that the village did, by ordinance, make provision for a board of trustees of public affairs, but that the mayor failed to appoint the members thereof as provided in section 4358 of the General Code, and that council itself proceeded to secure the plans and specifications and to advertise for bids through the village clerk and that a number of bids were received in response to such advertisement, but that no contract has yet been let. Upon these facts the mayor of the village of Bellville raises the further question as to whether or not the board of trustees of public affairs can approve and adopt the proceedings of council in securing of plans and specifications and advertising for bids through the clerk of the village, and now enter into a valid contract with the lowest and best bidder who has submitted a bid in response to the advertisement by the village clerk.

It was clearly the legislative intent that when a village authorizes the erection of a waterworks plant or other like utility, a board of trustees of public affairs should be established, and the members thereof appointed, to take charge of the construction of said utility and to manage and control it after construction. Under the provisions of section 4328 of the General Code, it was the duty of such board to make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder "after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the village." If the board is satisfied with and wishes to approve the plans and specifications adopted by council, I know of no reason why they cannot acquiesce in and ratify the action of council and enter into a valid contract with the lowest and best bidder who submitted a proposal in response to the advertisement of the village clerk, provided that such notice to bidders was published for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the village. The statute does not provide in so many words that the notice to bidders shall be given in the name of the board, and as the purpose of advertising for bids is to insure full publicity and give notice to prospective bidders, it seems that the purpose of the statutes in this respect has been accomplished. In view of the statement that twenty-eight bids were received there certainly can be no doubt as to the effectiveness of said advertisement.

I therefore advise you that the board of trustees of public affairs may, upon the facts presented, approve and adopt the proceedings and action of the village council and, after the passage of an ordinance by council authorizing such expenditure, the board of trustees of public affairs may enter into a lawful contract for the construction of such waterworks plant with the lowest and best bidder, whose bid was received in response to publication of notice by the village clerk, and that such contract will be valid as against the special fund created by the sale of the bonds referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—PUBLIC EMPLOYES—HOW ONE PERCENTUM ASSESSMENT IS LEVIED IN TAXING DISTRICTS—WHEN STATE AND COUNTY ARE TO BE REGARDED AS UNITS—CLAIMS ARE TO BE PAID OUT OF GENERAL STATE INSURANCE FUND.

All claims arising from injury or death of public employes in the course of employment when found by the industrial commission to be justified are to be paid out of the general state insurance fund.

The statutory assessment of one percentum is to be made up from a charge of one per cent. of the amount expended for services of persons employed by the state, counties, cities, townships, incorporated villages, school districts or other taxing subdivisions, except policemen and firemen in municipalities maintaining police or firemen's pension funds.

For the purpose of the collection of the statutory assessment, the state in the first instance and the county in the second instance are to be regarded as the units.

All just claims will be paid from general state insurance fund in case of injury or death to public employes as contemplated by law, notwithstanding credit of particular subdivision when general state insurance fund is depleted, there being provision of law for subsequent assessments to replenish such credit standing.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 3, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to reply to your letter in which you submit certain questions relative to public employes under the workmen's compensation act, which is as follows:

> "We hereby request your opinion upon the following questions pertaining to public employes under the workmen's compensation law, as enacted 103 O. L., 72, and the subsequent amendments thereto:
> "1. Is the general fund which was created for the protection of public employes by the statutory assessment of one percentum of the money expended by the state and each taxing district therein to be considered the unit from which claims arising under said act are to be paid?
> "2. How is the statutory assessment of one percentum to be made?
> "3. Is the state, county, city, township, school district, each a separate unit so that when assessments are made and paid they are credited to each subdivision and when a subdivision exhausts its credits under this act is a further assessment required only against the subdivision exhausting its credit?"

With your letter you submit a communication addressed to you by the industrial commission of Ohio, which, omitting the names of the counties and the taxing districts referred to therein, is as follows:

> "In accordance with section 18 of the workmen's compensation act, as amended in 105 O. L., page 4, requiring that the industrial commission certify to the auditor of state certain information with reference to the counties contributing to the state insurance fund for public employes, please be advised as follows:

"I.

"The following counties have not made any contribution to the state insurance fund, as required by law, viz.: * * *

"II.

"The following counties have omitted to include in their payments to the treasurer of state assessments from certain of their taxing districts, which are as follows: * * *

"III.

"If the state insurance fund for the protection of public employes is to be considered as the unit, there is, in the judgment of the commission, sufficient money in said fund to pay all lawful claims likely to come against the same to and including December 31, 1916.

"IV.

"If the county is to be considered as the unit, we hereby certify that there is, in the judgment of the commission, sufficient money to the credit of each county within this fund to pay all lawful claims likely to come against each such county, to and including December 31, 1916, with the following exceptions: * * *

"V.

"If the separate taxing district of the county is to be considered as the unit, we hereby certify that there is, in the judgment of the commission, sufficient money to the credit of each taxing district within such county to pay all lawful claims likely to come against each such taxing district, to and including December 31, 1916, with the following exceptions: * * *"

To your first question, which is as to whether the general fund which was created for the protection of public employes is a unit from which all claims for injuries or death of public employes arising under said act are to be paid, my answer is in the affirmative.

Coming to your second question, your attention is directed to the provisions of section 1465-63 of the General Code (103 O. L., 77), which is as follows:

"The amount of money to be contributed by the state itself, and by each county, city, incorporated village, school district or other taxing district of the state shall be, unless otherwise provided by law, a sum equal to one percentum of the amount of money expended by the state and for each county, city, incorporated village, school district or other taxing district respectively during the next preceding fiscal year for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof."

From a reading of the section quoted above it will be noted that the statutory assessment of one percentum which is made for the purpose of payment into the general state insurance fund for the purpose of compensating public employes injured in the course of their employment or to the dependents of public employes killed while in the course of their employment embraces a collection of one per-centum of the amount expended by the state, counties and the taxing subdivisions of the county for the employes, as defined in paragraph 1 of section 1465-61 of the General Code (103 O. L., 77).

Replying to your third question, I prefer to deal with the fourth branch of the letter of the industrial commission of Ohio which you have just handed to me, and which is as follows:

> "If the county is to be considered as the unit, we hereby certify that there is, in the judgment of the commission, sufficient money to the credit of each county within this fund to pay all lawful claims likely to come against each such county, to and including December 31, 1916. * * *"

Your attention is invited to the provisions of section 1465-65 of the General Code, as amended, page 4 of 105 O. L., which is as follows:

> "In the month of December of each year, the auditor of state shall prepare a list for each county of the state, showing the amount of money expended by each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district therein for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof, during the fiscal year last preceding the time of preparing such lists; and shall file a copy of each such list with the auditor of the county for which such list was made, and copies of all such lists with the treasurer of state. Such lists shall also show the amount of money due from the county itself, and from each city, township, village, school district, and other taxing district thereof, as its proper contribution to the state insurance fund, and the aggregate sum due from the county and such taxing districts located therein.
> "Provided, however, that should the industrial commission of Ohio on or before the first day of December in any year certify to the auditor of state that sufficient money is in the state insurance fund to the credit of any county or counties to provide for the payment of compensation to the injured and to the dependents of killed employes of such county or counties and the several taxing districts therein for the ensuing year, the auditor of state shall not prepare and file with the county auditors and the treasurer of state said list or lists for such county or counties specified in such certificate; and it shall be the duty of the industrial commission of Ohio to make and file such certificate with the auditor of state whenever in its judgment there is sufficient money in the state insurance fund to the credit of any county or counties to provide for the probable disbursements required to be made to the injured and to the dependents of killed employes of such county or counties and the several taxing districts therein for the ensuing year."

From a reading of this section it will be observed that for the purpose of the collection of the statutory assessment the county is to be regarded as the unit. All the dealings of the industrial commission acting through the auditor of state are with the county auditor representing the county, and under the provisions of the section just quoted it becomes the duty of the auditor of state, in the month of December each year, to prepare a list for each county of the state showing the amount of money expended by each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district therein for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen of the act during the fiscal year last preceding, unless, pursuant to the second paragraph of section 1465-65 of the General Code, supra, the auditor is relieved from preparing the list referred to above for such counties as may be certified by the industrial commission of Ohio as having to their credit in the state insurance fund a sufficient sum to provide for the probable disbursements required to be made to injured and to the dependents of killed employes of such counties and the several taxing districts thereof in the ensuing year. In other words, the auditor of state is charged only with the making and sending of the list referred to in section 1465-65 of the General Code, supra, to such county or counties as are not certified by the industrial commission as having a status of credit in the state insurance fund to relieve them from further payment.

It is generally understood that the purpose of the state insurance fund is to compensate injured employes or to care for the dependents of killed employes, and in the case of public employes such as are covered by the state insurance fund claims arising on account of such injuries or death presented to the industrial commission of Ohio would be considered and allowances made when justified, notwithstanding the fact that the particular counties or subdivisions do not have the required credit in the state insurance fund—the law providing that when such credit is depleted it shall be replenished by further assessment as provided for in section 1465-65 of the General Code, supra.

Summing up, it is my opinion:

1. That all claims arising for injuries or death of public employes as comprehended by the act referred to are to be paid out of the general state insurance fund for public employes without regard to the credit standing of any taxing subdivision.

2. The statutory assessment which makes up the fund is to be arrived at by making a charge of one per cent. of the amount expended for services of persons employed by the state, counties, cities, townships, incorporated villages, school districts or other taxing districts therein—this latter statement being subject to the exception of municipalities maintaining police or firemen's pension funds.

3. For the purpose of the collection of the statutory assessment the state in the first instance and the counties in the second instance are to be regarded as units without reference to the various taxing subdivisions of the county enumerated, except in so far as the information concerning such taxing subdivisions is submitted to the county auditor by the auditor of state for the purpose of enabling the county auditor to make the necessary and proper settlements with the taxing subdivision after drawing his warrant for the payment of the county's assessment to the state insurance fund.

4. At all events any just claims arising from the death or injuries to public employes in the course of their employment are to be cared for out of the general state insurance fund for public employes regardless of the fact that the credit of the particular subdivision may at the time be depleted, it being especially provided that such credit shall be replenished by subsequent assessments.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ASSISTANT FIRE MARSHALS—SERVICES AS WITNESSES—NO FEES OR MILEAGE SHOULD BE DEMANDED WHEN ON REGULAR SALARY AND EXPENSES.

When the services of assistant fire marshals are required as witnesses in the trial of criminal cases with which they have theretofore had an official connection, such services are within the scope of their official duties and while so in attendance as witnesses they should be paid their regular salary and expenses, but no further fees or mileage as witnesses should be demanded or paid to them or taxed as costs in said cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 4, 1916.

HON. BERT B. BUCKLEY, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 23d containing the following statement and inquiries:

> "In this department our assistant fire marshals are called to the various county seats in the state to participate, as witnesses, in arson trials which have been brought about by their activity in investigation. They receive from this department, out of a fund made for that special purpose, their actual railroad fare and their necessary maintenance while away from their residences.
> "As a direct legal proposition, are these assistant fire marshals, who are also citizens, entitled to the 10 cents per mile from the county clerk of the county where the trial might be held?
> "Again, if this is sent to them, should they refuse it or should they turn it in to this department for turning over to the general revenue fund of the state of Ohio—from which this department draws its maintenance under the present budget system?
> "Further, if it were found that these assistant fire marshals had been receiving this 10 cents mileage and had made no return of it to this department, are they liable for the return of it and to what extent, or are they entitled to it under the general provision of law which gives 10 cents per mile to each citizen called as a witness, to some distant point?"

It appears from your statement that your assistant fire marshals are frequently called as witnesses in the trial of arson cases in which they were instrumental in developing and securing evidence resulting in the presentment of indictments and subsequent prosecution thereon. It may be added in this connection, because it is a well known fact, that in a great number of cases their testimony is the main reliance of the state for conviction.

It further appears from your statement that said assistants, when in attendance upon such trials, are paid their actual railroad fare and necessary expenses while so attending as witnesses. While you do not so state in your letter, I assume that their official salary is also paid for the time they are in attendance upon such trials as witnesses.

I will say in the outset of my observations that I regard such payments as proper and that the services rendered by said assistant fire marshals as witnesses may justly be said to be in the line of the duties of their office and as necessary and essential to the proper administration and enforcement of the laws as their services in procuring evidence in the first instance.

To state the matter differently, when your assistants are attending as witnesses they are merely performing a service required of them by the duties of their office and it is proper that they should be paid for said services in the same manner as they are paid for official services rendered in any other way. This being so, you then inquire if under such state of facts it is their right to demand and receive mileage as witnesses in addition to the salary and expenses which should be paid to them as above noted.

It may be said in this connection that in some states and under the federal law payment of witness fees to state or government officials is prohibited when they are called upon as witnesses in cases which are in the line of their official duties.

In this state no such qualifications are attached to the payment of witness fees and mileage, and, under our statutory provisions covering the payment of the same, it must be admitted that such assistant fire marshals have the legal right to demand and receive their fees and mileage as witnesses. It is evident, however, that they cannot serve the state in an official capacity and be permitted at the same time to receive compensation from other sources for the same official service. This proposition has received the approval of the courts in many instances and the general rule which seems to prevail in such cases is that when the officer's services as a witness are fairly within the scope of his duties as an official and for which he receives his salary and other necessary expenses, he may not receive fees as a witness. Upon the other hand, when as a witness he performs services for the public not required of him by the duties of the office which he holds, he stands upon a plane with any other citizen and may exact the same compensation for his services that the law allows to anyone for services as a witness.

Healy v. Hillsboro County, 49 Atlantic Reporter, 69.
Starmount v. Cummins, 120 Mich., 627.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that when the services of your assistant fire marshals are required as witnesses in the prosecution of criminal cases with which they have theretofore had an official connection, and such services are reasonably within the scope of their official duties, their salary and expenses should be paid by the state as indicated in your letter and no further fees or mileage as witnesses should be demanded or paid to them or taxed as costs in such cases. When, however, such assistant fire marshals are subpoenaed as witnesses and thereafter attend such trials as private citizens, they may be paid their statutory witness fees and mileage, but may not, during the time they are in attendance as such witnesses, receive any official salary or expenses from the state.

This conclusion, I think, is consistent with the proper expenditure of the state funds under your control and also obviates a situation in which such officials appearing as witnesses would be subject to the attack that they have a pecuniary interest in the case not common to all other witnesses in attendance.

Answering your questions specifically I must advise that when your assistant fire marshals are paid their regular salary and expenses when in attendance as witnesses in the trial of criminal cases such services must be deemed to be in the line of their duty and they are not entitled to any further witness fees and mileage, and if such fees and mileage are sent to them they should be returned to the county treasury from which they are drawn. When, however, it appears that any assistant fire marshal has accepted fees and mileage as a private citizen for attendance as a witness and has also for the same time received his salary and expenses from the state, he should be required to refund to the state the salary and expenses so paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TREASURER OF STATE—AUTHORIZED TO ACCEPT DEPOSIT OF $100,000, OFFERED IN CASH BY THE PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY FOR INSURANCE ON LIVES AND GRANTING ANNUITIES, A TRUST COMPANY—NOT AUTHORIZED TO DEPOSIT SAME IN BANK UNDER DEPOSITORY ACT.

Under section 9778, G. C., the treasurer of state is authorized to accept the* $100,000 cash offered by the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, a Trust Company, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but is not authorized to deposit the same in any bank or trust company under the depositary act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On January 3, 1916, you submitted to me a draft for $100,000.00 drawn in your favor by the Girard national bank of Philadelphia on the cashier of the Ohio national bank of Columbus, and submitted at the same time a letter to you from Hon. George H. Warrington, of Cincinnati, Ohio, under date of December 31, 1915, wherein Mr. Warrington states that the draft as presented "is for deposit with you under the provisions of section 9778 of the General Code of Ohio, for the purpose of qualifying the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, a Trust Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to accept trusts in the state of Ohio." Mr. Warrington further asks you to telegraph to Mr. Gates, of Philadelphia, upon receipt of his letter "that you have received the money and deposited it, and that the company is authorized thereby to accept trusts in this state."

Section 9778 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "No such corporation either foreign or domestic shall accept trusts which may be vested in, transferred or committed to it by an individual, or court, until its paid in capital is at least one hundred thousand dollars, and until such corporation has deposited with the treasurer of state in cash fifty thousand dollars if its capital is two hundred thousand dollars or less, and one hundred thousand dollars if its capital is more than two hundred thousand dollars, except that, the full amount of such deposit by such corporation may be in bonds of the United States, or of this state, or any municipality or county therein, or in any other state, or in the first mortgage bonds of any railroad corporation that for five years last past paid dividends of at least three per cent. on its common stock."

There has been no showing made to you that the said company has a paid in capital of at least one hundred thousand dollars, but upon inquiry of Hon. Harry T. Hall, superintendent of banks of Ohio, I learned that the Banker's Register shows that said company has a paid up capital of two million dollars.

Such being the fact, it appears that said company is authorized to deposit with you the said sum of one hundred thousand dollars, being the amount required by section 9778, G. C.

There does not seem to be any authorization at all for the treasurer of state to call for a certified copy of the charter of the company in order to ascertain whether or not the said company has a paid in capital stock, but, as I view it, the legislature did not require of you that you ascertain what the paid in capital stock of the company is.

Section 736, paragraph "c," of the General Code (106 O. L., 361), provides as follows:

> "Sec. 736. That for the purpose of maintaining the department of the superintendent of banks and the payment of expenses incident thereto, and especially the expenses of inspection and examination, the following fees shall be paid to the superintendent of banks of Ohio:
> * * * * * * * * * * * *
> "(c) Each foreign trust company desiring and intending to do business in this state shall pay to the superintendent of banks a fee of fifty dollars for issuance to it of a certificate authorizing it to transact business in this state. Such fee to be paid before such certificate is issued."

Before a foreign trust company can proceed to transact business in this state it would, of course, be compelled to obtain the authority required by the above section and before it could obtain such authority it would be required to deposit the amount specified in section 9778, G. C.

There is a question as to whether or not a trust company comes within the exceptions found in section 178 of the General Code or within the exceptions found in section 188 of the General Code, in regard to procuring from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with the requirements of law to authorize it to do business in this state; but I do not think that it is necessary to determine that question in this instance, since your question is asked solely as to your authority to accept the $100,000.00. It is my opinion that you may accept the same.

You have asked a further question, and that is as to whether or not, if you are to accept the $100,000.00 in cash, there is any authority for you to place the same in the state depositary or in any bank.

Section 9779 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The treasurer of state shall hold such fund or securities deposited with him as security for the faithful performance of the trusts assumed by such corporation, but so long as it continues solvent he shall permit it to collect the interest on its securities so deposited. From time to time said treasurer shall permit withdrawals of such securities or cash, or part thereof, on the deposit with him of cash, or other securities of the kind heretofore named, so as to maintain the value of such deposit as herein provided."

It appears from section 9779 that the treasurer of state, so long as the corporation depositing securities is solvent, shall permit said corporation to collect the interest on its securities so deposited. There is, however, no provision of law that undertakes to allow a corporation to receive any interest on cash deposited under said section. The money is deposited with you under the provisions of section 9778, G. C., and I have not been able to find any statute which authorizes you to redeposit the same in any bank, either with or without interest, and accept security for the repayment thereof. It is apparent that the legislature intended that the said money should remain in the state treasury.

I therefore advise you that you are without authority to do other than to place the said sum of $100,000.00 in the state treasury, and you are not authorized to lend the same out to any bank or trust company under the depositary act.

I have answered the two questions upon which I understand you desire me to render an opinion, but in concluding I desire to call your attention to the request of Mr. Warrington that you telegraph Mr. Gates, at Philadelphia, upon receipt of Mr. Warrington's letter "that you have received the money and deposited it, and that the company is authorized thereby to accept trusts in this state."

While you have authority to accept the money, you have no authority whatever to notify the company that it is authorized by reason of the deposit of said money to accept trusts in this state. If after the deposit of said money the said company, being a foreign trust company, desires or intends to do business in this state, it will have to comply with section 736, paragraph "c" of the General Code, and likewise, possibly, with sections 179 and 183 et seq.

I therefore advise you that you are not authorized to comply with Mr. Warrington's request.

I am herewith returning to you the letter of Hon. George H. Warrington, together with the draft for $100,000.00. hereinbefore mentioned.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—HEADS OF ALL SUBDEPARTMENTS SERVING UNDER HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS OF PUBLIC SERVICE AND PUBLIC SAFETY IN CITIES ARE WITHIN CLASSIFIED SERVICE OF CIVIL SERVICE LAW.

The heads of subdepartments of the department of public service and the department of public safety are within the classified service as defined in subdivision (b) of section 486-8, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 404.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of December 31, 1915, as follows:

> "Attached hereto, you will find letters from R. D. Turner, district tax assessor, and George H. Lingrel, mayor-elect of the city of Kenton.
> "The question is raised as to whether or not the heads of subdepartments under the city public service department are in the classified or the unclassified service. In a similar case, we have given the following as our opinion:
> "'It is our opinion that the director of public service and the director of public safety are exempt from the classified service in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 486-8 of the civil service law, and the heads of all subdepartments serving under them are in the classified service, except such as might be claimed exempt under the provisions of paragraph 8 of this section. By this interpretation, the director of public service and the director of public safety would each be entitled to two secretaries, assistants or clerks, and one personal stenographer exempt from the classified service. All other employes serving under them would be subject to the jurisdiction of the municipal civil service commission.'
> "Inasmuch as we are receiving a number of such requests, we desire to submit the question raised by Mr. Lingrel to you for an opinion. We are not certain as to whether the heads of subdepartments should be claimed exempt from the classified service as 'assistants.'"

I concur in your construction of paragraph 3 of section 486-8, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 404, and conclude with you that the heads of all subdepartments serving under the heads of the departments of public service and public safety are within the classified service.

While the heads of such subdepartments are appointed by the mayor under favor of section 4250, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 483, it may not be said for that reason they should be considered the "heads of departments" within the purview of said paragraph 3 aforesaid. Upon the contrary the fact that they are expressly designated in said section 4250 as the "heads of subdepartments" clearly indicates that such designation was purposely applied to distinguish them from the "heads of departments," and it must be assumed that such distinction was in the legislative mind in the enactment of said paragraph 3.

But it is further provided in section 4323, G. C., that the department of public service shall be administered by the director of public service and in the succeeding section it is provided that he shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city.

In view of these various provisions it may not be said that the department of public service has any head other than the director of public service and therefore he is the only person in the service of said department who may qualify as its head under the provisions of said paragraph 3.

The question presented here has also been considered by me in a recent opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices. A copy of this opinion is attached hereto to which I respectfully call your attention.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the heads of subdepartments of the department of public service and the department of public safety are within the classified service as defined in subdivision (b) of section 486-8, G. C., aforesaid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—MAYOR—MAY REMOVE DIRECTORS OF PUBLIC SAFETY AND PUBLIC SERVICE—HEADS OF SUBDEPARTMENTS IN SERVICE OR SAFETY DEPARTMENT IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE, INCLUDING CITY ENGINEER, SUPERINTENDENT OF WATERWORKS.

Mayors may summarily remove the director of public service and the director of public safety under the provisions of section 4250, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 483, but the heads of subdepartments of the department of public service and the department of public safety are within the classified service as defined by subdivision (b) of section 486-8, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 404, and may be removed from office only as provided by the civil service law as found in 106 O. L., 400 et seq.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of November 24, 1915, submitting the following inquiries:

> "Section 4250 provides that the mayor may remove a director of public service, director of public safety and the heads of the subdepartments of the departments of public service and public safety, and section 4263 states that the mayor shall have general supervision over each department and the officers provided for in this title (the Municipal Code), and if the mayor has reason to believe that the head of a department, or such officer, has been guilty in the performance of his official duty of bribery, misfeasance, malfeasance, misconduct in office, gross neglect of duty, gross immorality or habitual drunkenness, he shall immediately file with the council, except when the removal of such head of department, or officer, is otherwise provided for, written charges against such person, and the following section provides that the officer, upon trial by council, may be removed by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to the council.

"Question 1. Has a mayor the authority to remove a director of service under the authority of section 4250 without filing the charges, or must he proceed as outlined in sections 4263 and 4264?

"Question 2. May the mayor remove a city engineer, or superintendent of waterworks, heads of subdepartments in the department of public service, under authority of section 4250, without filing charges, or must he proceed, if he desires their removal, in the manner prescribed by sections 4263 and 4264?"

Section 4250, G. C., to which you refer above, as amended in 106 O. L., 483, provides as follows:

"The mayor shall be the chief conservator of peace within the corporation. He shall appoint, and have the power to remove, the director of public service, the director of public safety, and the heads of the subdepartments of the departments of public service and public safety, and shall have such other powers and perform such other duties as are conferred and required by law. In cities having a population of less than twenty thousand, the council may by a majority vote merge the office of director of public safety with that of public service, one director to be appointed for the merged department."

The provision in section 4250 aforesaid, empowering the mayor to appoint and remove the directors of public service and public safety and the heads of the subdepartments of the departments of public service and public safety was first placed in said statute by an amendment passed April 29, 1908, found at page 562 of Vol. 99, O. L., and is a part of what is known as the Paine law. The changes in the municipal code made by this law are summarized by the supreme court in the case of State v. Roney, 82 O. S. 376, as follows:

"It amended more than twenty sections of the municipal code, but the changes effected may be summarized as follows: The boards of public service and of public safety were abolished and in their stead was substituted a director of public service and a director of public safety, appointed by the mayor. * * *"

Prior to said amendment of section 4250, the department of public service was administered by a board of directors which consisted of three or five members, as provided by ordinance or resolution of council in each city. They were elected for a term of two years.

Referring now to sections 4263 and 4264, G. C., they were originally section 225 of the municipal code and were not affected by the changes made in said code by the enactment of the Paine law aforesaid. Said sections provide as follows:

"Section 4263. The mayor shall have general supervision over each department and the officers provided for in this title. When the mayor has reason to believe that the head of a department or such officer has been guilty in the performance of his official duty of bribery, misfeasance, malfeasance, nonfeasance, misconduct in office, gross neglect of duty, gross immorality or habitual drunkenness, he shall immediately file with the coun> cil, except when the removal of such head of department or officer is otherwise provided for, written charges against such person, * * *"

The succeeding section, 4264, makes provision for the hearing of said charges at the next regular meeting of council and for the manner of hearing and trial thereon.

As before noted these two sections were section 225 of the municipal code, and no change was made therein by the enactment of the Paine law. However, when the code was adopted in 1910 the clause italicized in said section 4263 providing as follows:

> "Except when the removal of such head of department or officer is otherwise provided for,"

was added by the codifying commission to section 4263 and thereafter adopted by the legislature. The purpose in writing into this statute an exception of this character which theretofore did not exist therein was evidently to give effect to the provisions of section 4250, supra, to which said clause undoubtedly refers, and excepts from the provisions of section 4263 the officers specified in said section 4250. In other words, prior to the amendment of section 4250 the provisions of section 4263 furnished the only method for the removal of the heads of departments and other officers provided for in the municipal code, but with the amendment of section 4250 in 1908 there was an apparent conflict between the provisions of said section 4250 and said section 4263, which was taken care of by the codifying commission in 1910 in adding to said section 4263 the clause hereinbefore quoted and which as before suggested unquestionably refers to the heads of departments or officers whose removal is provided for in section 4250.

In the case of State v. Roney, supra, Summers, J., in commenting upon said section 4250, says:

> "The power in the mayor to appoint and to remove is a continuing power, and, no term of appointment of the chief of police being fixed, the chief of police holds his office at the pleasure of the mayor and in the absence of statutory regulation may be summarily removed by the mayor."

Since this decision however the chief of police has been placed under the protection of the civil service law and may not now be so removed but the remarks quoted apply here. The director of public service is appointed for no definite term. (See section 4323, G. C.) There are no statutory provisions protecting him from removal. It follows, therefore, that he may be summarily removed by the mayor under the provisions of section 4250, supra, and that the provisions of sections 4263 et seq. do not apply to such removal. I, therefore, hold that the director of public service may be removed under the provisions of said section 4250 and that the provisions of sections 4263 et seq. of the General Code may not apply to such officer.

Referring now to your second question it might be assumed that the observations made here regarding a director of public service apply with equal force to the heads of subdepartments which are also included within the provisions of said section 4250. Such assumption would be well founded were it not for the provisions of the civil service law as found in paragraph 3 of section 486-8, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 404. It is provided in said paragraph 3, among other things, that:

> "The members of all boards and commissions and all heads of departments appointed by the mayor, or if there be no mayor such other similar chief appointing authority of any city or city school district," shall be in the unclassified service. It becomes pertinent then to inquire whether the heads of subdepartments as designated in said section 4250 are within the provisions of the civil service law just quoted. I am of the opinion that the heads of subdepartments such as referred to in your second inquiry are not the "heads of departments" as contemplated by said paragraph 3 of the civil service law and are therefore within the classified service and protected by the civil service law of the state.

Section 4323, G. C., provides:

> "In each city there shall be a department of public service which shall be administered by a director of public service. The director of public service shall be an elector of the city, shall be appointed by the mayor and shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. He shall make rules and regulations for the administration of the affairs under his supervision."

Section 4324, G. C., provides:

> "The director of public service shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city, except as otherwise provided by law, and shall have all powers and perform all duties conferred upon him by law. He shall keep a record of his proceedings, a copy of which, certified by him, shall be competent evidence in all courts."

In view of the provisions of the statutes just quoted it may not be said that the department of public service has any head other than the director of public service. Therefore, the director of public service is the head of the department which includes the subordinate officers named in your second inquiry and the provisions of said paragraph 3 of the civil service law may not apply to such officers for this reason.

It must also be assumed that the legislature in the use of the term "head of department" did so with knowledge of the fact that in section 4250, supra, reference was made to the heads of subdepartments.

It may be claimed that the last clause of said paragraph 3, relating to chiefs of police and chiefs of fire departments, would indicate that the legislature had intended to exempt all similar subdepartments and therefore deemed it necessary to make special reference to them to include them in the classified service. While the police and fire departments are under the direction of the director of public safety in a city, the statute defining his duty (section 4368) denominates him as the executive head of the police and fire departments only and by separate provisions, viz., sections 4372 and 4376, G. C., provides for the heads of police and fire departments which are not therefore subdepartments in the sense that term may be applied to the waterworks and engineering department. For this reason the legislature rightly considered some question could be raised and therefore settled all controversy by this special provision.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the officers named in your second inquiry, viz., a city engineer and superintendent of waterworks, are within the classified service of the city under the provisions of the act amending sections 486-1 to 486-31 and repealing section 4505 of the General Code, found in 106 O. L., page 400, and may therefore only be removed from office as provided for in sections 486-17 and 486-17a of said act.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

No.* 701 are effective for the full amounts therein expressed only in case such amounts come into the treasury by reason of the state levy in so far as the state highway improvement fund is concerned and by reason of surplus automobile registration fees in so far as the maintenance and repair fund is concerned.

If there is a surplus of receipts over appropriations such surplus cannot be expended. The act limits the expenditure of appropriations carried by section 2 thereof to a two-year period beginning July 1, 1915, and the expenditure of appropriations carried by section 3 thereof to a one-year period beginning July 1, 1916. The inter-county highway and main market road appropriations carried by section 2 represent the proceeds of the February and August, 1916, settlements and the appropriations for the same purposes carried by section 3 represent the proceeds of the February, 1917, settlement.

In contracting against these appropriations, contracts should be entered into in advance of the coming of the funds into the state treasury only where no payments will be required on such contracts until the funds are actually in the treasury.

The appropriation of surplus automobile registration fees should not be contracted against until the funds contracted against have actually come into the treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 18th, 1915, in which you request my opinion as to when and to what extent your department may properly contract against the funds appropriated to the state highway department by house bill No. 701.

House bill No. 701, 106 O. L. 666, being an act to make general appropriations, was passed May 27, 1915, and with the exception of certain items therein was approved by the governor on June 5, 1915, and was on that day filed in the office of the secretary of state.

It is provided in section 1 of the act in question that no moneys shall be taken from the general revenue fund to support the highway department, but I am informed by representatives of your department that the amount that will probably be yielded by the state levy of three-tenths of one mill, and the probable surplus of revenues derived from automobile registration fees after the payment of the expenses chargeable against such fees, will be more than sufficient to supply the amounts appropriated for your department by house bill No. 701, and this feature of the matter may therefore be dismissed with the observation that the appropriations for your department carried by house bill No. 701 are effective for the full amounts therein expressed, only in case such amounts come into the treasury by reason of the state levy of three-tenths of one mill in so far as the state highway improvement fund is concerned and by reason of surplus automobile registration fees in so far as the so-called maintenance and repair fund is concerned. Should the amounts received from these sources exceed the amounts appropriated, you would not thereby be authorized to expend the surplus of receipts over appropriations, and would be limited to the amounts specifically appropriated.

Appropriations for your department are carried by sections 2 and 3 of the act now under consideration. In so far as the sums appropriated in section 2 are concerned, it is provided in that section that such sums shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917. In so far as the moneys appropriated by section 3 are concerned, it is provided in said section that the moneys therein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917. Further limitations upon your right to contract against these funds will be hereinafter pointed out.

It should be observed that by the provisions of section 7 of house bill No. 701, any moneys appropriated for the use of your department by house bill No. 314, 106 O. L. 33, under the classification: "F-9. General Plant Service," and against which no liabilities were incurred prior to July 1, 1915, are reappropriated and are available for expenditure by your department. The section in question provides that such reappropriated balances shall be available for expenditure at any time prior to July 1, 1917, for the purposes for which they were originally appropriated.

As previously indicated, your inquiry involves a discussion of certain other limitations upon your power to enter into contracts involving the expenditure of funds appropriated by sections 2 and 3 of house bill No. 701. As pointed out in opinion No. 521 of this department, rendered to you on June 21, 1915, the items of $780,976.50 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways, and $273,000.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, carried by house bill No. 314, 106 O. L. 33, represented the proceeds of the February, 1915, settlement, and the items $707,100.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways, and $97,052.73 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, carried by house bill No. 709, 106 O. L. 452, represented the proceeds of the August, 1915, settlement.

It therefore follows that the items of $1,533,400 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways, and $562,500 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, carried by section 2 of house bill No. 701, represent the proceeds of the February and August settlements of the year 1916, and the items of $826,300.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways, and $305,000.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, carried by section 3 of house bill No. 701, represent the proceeds of the February, 1917, settlement.

As pointed out in an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to your predecessor, Honorable James R. Marker, on May 23, 1914, and found on page 699 of the Annual Report of the Attorney General for that year, and as also pointed out in opinion No. 521 of this department rendered to you on June 21, 1915, and referred to above, it is both proper and legal for the state highway department to contract for the aggregate amount of money that has been levied and appropriated for an entire tax year, even though the second installment of the tax has not come into the state treasury and would not come into the state treasury for sometime after the letting of contracts for the reason that such second installment of tax had been levied, placed upon the duplicate, and was in process of collection, and would be in the state treasury before it was actually needed and before the fund arising from the first installment of the year's tax would have been exhausted in payments to contractors on estimates.

It was observed in opinion No. 521, referred to above, that it is a matter of common knowledge that it requires a considerable time, even after a contract is let before the work can be so far prosecuted by the contractor as to require or even warrant the payment of estimates, and that to hold that contracts might not be entered into where compensation to the contractor was to be paid, either in whole or in part, from taxes actually levied, placed on the duplicate and in process of collection but not yet in the treasury, would serve no useful purpose, and the only result of such a holding would be to delay the letting of contracts and the performance of the same.

Applying the principles discussed in the opinions referred to above to the present state of facts, it should first be observed that the items of $1,533,400.00 and $562,500.00, carried by section 2 of house bill No. 701 and appropriated for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways and main market roads, respectively, represent a tax which has been levied, placed on the duplicate and is now in process of collection. Approximately one-half of the tax necessary to meet these two items will come into the state treasury at the February, 1916, settlement, and the remainder will come into the state treasury at the August, 1916, settlement.

Since the date of July 1, 1915, has long since past, and since the tax required to meet these two items has been levied, placed on the duplicate and is in process of collection, I advise you, in conformity with my previous opinion and with that of my predecessor, that you may now enter into contracts involving the expenditures of these two items, provided the circumstances are such that no payments from the state treasury will be required to be made on such contracts prior to such time as the proceeds of the February, 1916, settlement may come into the state treasury, and provided payments on such contracts, which will be required to be made from the state treasury between such time as the February, 1916, settlement may come into the state treasury and the time when the August, 1916, settlement will come into the state treasury, will not exceed one-half of such items. In other words, you should take into consideration the fact that these two items represent moneys not yet in the state treasury and that approximately one-half of each item will come into the state treasury at the February, 1916, settlement and the remainder of the items will come into the state treasury at the August, 1916, settlement, and in making contracts, either at the present time or in the future, you should not enter into any contracts which will actually involve any payments from the state treasury in advance of the time when the funds will be actually received from the several counties of the state.

Referring now to the items of $826,300.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways and $305,000.00 for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, carried by section 3 of house bill No. 701, it is manifest that these items represent the proceeds of the February, 1917, settlement. In so far as the limitation of section 3 of house bill No. 701 is concerned, these items may be said to be available for expenditure at any time during the year beginning on July 1, 1916, and inasmuch as the auditor of state is by section 5626, G. C., required to give notice to each county auditor on or before the first Monday of June, annually, of the rate of taxes for state purposes, I conclude that you may contract against the items referred to above and carried by section 3 of house bill No. 701 at any time during the year beginning July 1, 1916, but such contracts should be entered into between July 1st, 1916, and the time of the February, 1917, settlement only where the conditions are such that no actual expenditures will be required to be made on such contracts prior to the time that the proceeds of the February, 1917, settlement come into the state treasury.

Referring to the item of $750,000.00 carried by section 2 of the act and appropriated for the purpose of repairing, maintaining, protecting, policing and patrolling public highways, as provided in section 6309, G. C., and all sections supplementary or amendatory thereof, and to the item of $650,000.00 carried by section 3 of the act and appropriated for the same purpose, it should be observed that in so far as the act itself is concerned, the only limitation as to the first item is that it shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917, while as to the item of $650,000.00 it cannot be expended for the payment of liabilities incurred prior to July 1, 1916, or subsequent to June 30, 1917. These items do not represent the proceeds of any property tax and are appropriations of surplus automobile registration fees, and I am therefore unable to advise you that you have any right to contract against these items until they have actually come into the state treasury, in view of the provisions of section 1 of the act that no moneys shall be taken from the general revenue fund to support the highway department.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—NO AUTHORITY TO ASSESS MAINTENANCE OR REPAIR OPERATION AGAINST OWNERS OF ABUTTING PROPERTY—WHEN WORK IS CONSTRUCTION, RECONSTRUCTION OR IMPROVEMENT—TEN PER CENT. OF COST MUST BE ASSESSED AGAINST OWNERS OF ABUTTING PROPERTY.

So long as any work carried on by the state highway department may be properly classified as a maintenance or repair operation, there is no authority to assess any part of the cost thereof against the owners of the abutting property. If the work is in the nature of construction, reconstruction or improvement, ten per cent. of the cost thereof must be assessed against the owners of the abutting property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 19, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "This department contemplates the repair of an approximately three-mile section of an intercounty highway using for this purpose a part of the proceeds of the funds derived from the registration of automobiles.
> "This repair is of such a character as to approach a reconstruction, consisting of a substantial resurfacing of a macadam road with new macadam, bound with tar.
> "I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to whether or not the abutting property is to be assessed for any portion of the cost of this repair, and if so, by whom, and upon what basis?
> "If you find that an assessment should be made in this case, I would appreciate a comprehensive opinion from you covering conditions when a repair is less extensive, but general in character, filling holes, evening up the surface of a roadway and applying a surface treatment of oil or asphalt, and covering the entire surface with stone chips or pea gravel.

"When it is necessary to apply a portion of the levy for the state highway improvement fund upon the repair of an intercounty highway, or main market road, what assessment, if any, is then required?"

Any doubt that may exist as to the proper answer to be made to your inquiry, results from the loose use of the words "construction," "improvement," "maintenance" and "repair" in the Cass highway law.

It is provided by section 184 of that act, section 1191, G. C., that the commissioners of any county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from any appropriation by the state, from any fund available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways. If the commissioners or township trustees do not apply by May first of any year, then the state highway commissioner shall construct, improve, maintain or repair any of the intercounty highways or parts thereof in said county, paying the full cost and expense thereof, except that portion to be assessed against abutting property owners, from the apportionment due said county and unused or unapplied for. The provision last referred to throws little light upon the question, however, as the portion to be assessed against abutting property owners might be ten per cent. in the case of construction or improvement and nothing in the case of maintenance or repair operations. Very important, however, is the following provision to the effect that when an intercounty highway or main market road is improved by the state without co-operation ten per cent. of the cost of said construction or improvement shall be assessed against the land abutting thereon, etc. The failure to use the words "maintained," "repaired," "maintenance" and "repair" in this provision constitutes an argument of considerable weight in support of the proposition that the legislature did not intend that ten per cent. of the cost of maintenance and repair work should be assessed against the abutting land.

Section 187 of the act, section 1194, G. C., provides that the county commissioners or township trustees may expend any amount available by law for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways or main market roads within the county, providing the county commissioners or township trustees by resolution agree to pay the cost and expense of said improvement over and above the amount received from the state and the amount received from abutting property owners. This provision furnishes practically no light, however, on the question of whether the abutting property owners are to be assessed for a part of the cost of all construction, improvement, maintenance or repair or whether they are to be assessed only in case the work is of a certain particular character.

Section 204 of the act, section 1211, G. C., reads in part as follows:

"Upon completion of the improvement the chief highway engineer shall immediately ascertain the cost and expense thereof, and apportion the same to the state, county, township or townships and abutting property."

It will be noted that in the above provision only the word "improvement" is used.

Section 205 of the act, section 1212, G. C., reads in part as follows:

"* * * * The proportion of the cost and expense of construction, improvement, maintenance or repair to be made by the county, township and property owners shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the highway is located upon the warrant of the county auditor, issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner. * * * * * Where the improvement has been made upon the application of the township trustees the proportion of the cost and expense of such construction, improvement, maintenance and repair to be made by the township and property owners shall be paid by the treasurer of the township in which the highway is located upon the order of the township clerk issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner. * * *''

The above language is not inconsistent with the view that there may be certain operations for which no assessment can be made if that view finds sufficient support in other provisions of the act.

The following language is found in section 207 of the act, section 1214, G. C.:

''Ten per cent. of the cost and expense of improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation.''

Section 210 of the act, section 1217, G. C., contains the following language:

''In no case shall the property owners abutting upon said improvement be relieved by the state, county or township from the payment of ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, provided the total amount assessed against any abutting property does not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation.''

It is significant that in both the above quoted provisions relating to assessments, the words ''maintenance'' and ''repair'' are omitted. In opinion No. 950 of this department, rendered to you on October 19,1915, a definition was attempted of the word ''improvement'' as found in the last paragraph of section 210 of the act. The paragraph contains two sentences, and in framing a definition of the word as used in the second sentence, sufficient consideration was not given to other provisions of the act, and in view of the opinion that will be hereinafter expressed, the definition as framed was made somewhat too broad.

Section 213 of the act, section 1220, G. C., reads in part as follows:

''The board of county commissioners of two or more counties interested, may make application to the state highway commissioner for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty or main market roads upon a county line. The cost and expense of the construction of such improvement, over and above the amount to be paid by the state shall be equitably apportioned by the state highway commissioner between the counties interested therein. The part of the cost and expense adjudged to each county shall be apportioned between the county and the township or townships interested, and the abutting property owners in the same proportion as if the improvement was wholly within one county. * * * *''

The following provision is found in section 216 of the act, section 1223, G. C.:

> "The county commissioners, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes or assessments, and whenever in their judgment it is advisable, are hereby authorized to sell the bonds of any such county in which such construction, improvement or repair is to be made to an amount necessary to pay the respective shares of the county, township or townships, and the lands assessed for such improvement. * * *"

In those phrases of the above quoted provisions relating especially to assessments, the words "maintenance" and "repair" are omitted.

The provisions so far referred to leave the situation involved in doubt, but by a reference to some of the subsequent provisions of the act it is possible to determine the intention of the legislature with a reasonable degree of certainty.

Section 217 of the act, section 1224, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "The state highway commissioner shall maintain and repair to the required standard all intercounty highways, main market roads and bridges and culverts constructed by the state by the aid of state money, or taken over by the state after being constructed."

Section 241 of the act, section 7464, G. C., provides that state roads shall be maintained by the state highway department, and section 244 of the act, section 7467 G. C., provides that the state, county and township shall each maintain their respective roads. All of the above provisions are silent upon the question of whether any part of the cost of maintaining and repairing state roads by the state highway department is to be assessed against the owners of the abutting real estate.

It is also worthy of consideration that the law in force prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, did not provide for assessing a part of the cost of maintenance and repair work carried forward by the state highway department. Where doubt exists as to the meaning of a statute, repealed acts in pari materia with the statute to be construed may be considered in the interpretation thereof.

> "26 Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law, 2d Ed., p. 624;
> "Heck v. State, 44 O. S., 536."

In the case of Cincinnati v. Connor, 55 O. S., 82, which was a case involving the validity of certain assessments, the court held that in the absence of any legislative requirement on the subject, statutes imposing taxes and public burdens of that nature are to be strictly construed; and where there is ambiguity which raises a doubt as to the legislative intent, that doubt must be resolved in favor of the subject or citizen on whom the burden is sought to be imposed.

In view of all the foregoing, I am of the opinion that so long as any work carried on by your department may be properly classified as a maintenance or repair operation, there is no authority to assess any part of the cost thereof against the owners of the abutting property. If the work is in the nature of construction, reconstruction or improvement, ten per cent. of the cost thereof must be assessed against the owners of the abutting property.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—NO APPROPRIATION AVAILABLE FOR PAYMENT OF SALARY OF SECRET SERVICE OFFICER TO MAKE INVESTIGATIONS FOR SAID DEPARTMENT.

There is no appropriation available for the payment of the salary of a person who might be employed by the state highway department to investigate accounts, pay rolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished and financial status of contractors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 21, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I have found at various times during my incumbency in this office, and have reached the conclusion, that the state of Ohio would be more properly protected and an appreciable sum saved each year were this department able to employ continually the services of a capable man to investigate accounts, pay rolls, bills, quantities of material furnished, financial status of contractors—in short, to make investigations generally into matters wherein the state highway department might possibly be defrauded or where greater economy could be exercised in its various operations by its various agents.
> "I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to whether or not this department may legally devote any portion of any moneys appropriated for expenditures of this department in the hiring of such a man with such duties as I have described above.
> "If you find that this department has such authority, I respectfully request you to advise me if such an employe should be secured through the classified lists of the state civil service commission."

Section 175 of the Cass highway law, section 1182, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "The state highway commissioner may appoint as many additional clerks or stenographers and such superintendents, inspectors and other employes, and may purchase such equipment within the limits of appropriations as he may consider necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter. Each of said employes shall be paid a salary to be fixed by the state highway commissioner, within the limits of the appropriations made by the general assembly. All appointees and employes for whom provision is made in this and the preceding sections of this act shall receive their actual and necessary expenses when on official business, but such expenses shall have been first authorized by the state highway commissioner and shall be approved by him before a warrant is issued for the payment of the same."

The above quoted provision is found in the chapter of the Cass highway law relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department. From a consideration of the same it is manifest that you are authorized to employ a person to perform the duties enumerated by you if there is any appropriation available for the payment of the salary and expenses of such an employe. The answer to your inquiry, therefore, depends upon the terms of the current appropriation measure, house bill No. 701, 106 O. L., 666, and more particularly upon the terms of section 2 of that act.

Section 2 of house bill No. 701, being the section making appropriations for the year begnning July 1, 1915, in addition to providing for the salary of the state highway commissioner, carries salary appropriations under the head of personal service for the following assistants and employes of your department: Three deputy commissioners, eight division engineers, nine engineers, one map maker, two draughtsmen, three superintendents, one testing engineer, two assistants, one chemist, a chief clerk, one file clerk, one bookkeeper, one assistant bookkeeper, one clerk, one assistant, six stenographers, one voucher clerk, a secretary and a messenger. The employe whose duties you have described is not covered by any of the salary appropriations referred to above. There is also an appropriation of $3,500.00 for wages, but it is apparent that the compensation of an employe such as you have referred to must be regarded as salary rather than wages.

It remains to consider whether any or all of the items of $1,533,400.00 for constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing intercounty highways; $562,500.00 for constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing main market roads and $750,000.00 for repairing, maintaining, protecting, policing and patroling public highways are available for the payment of the compensation of an employe of the character referred to by you. It is manifest from a consideration of house bill No. 701, in connection with the Cass highway law, that the three items referred to above are available for the payment of the compensation of certain employes. As has been pointed out in previous opinions of this department, rendered to you, the item of $1,533,400.00, after being divided into eighty-eight equal parts, is available for the payment of the state's portion of the salaries of county highway superintendents. When a county co-operates with the state and assistants, superintendents and inspectors are employed on the work under section 212 of the Cass highway law, section 1219, G. C., the state's proportion of the compensation of such assistants, superintendents and inspectors is payable from some one of the three items referred to above. In other words, if the state and a county co-operate in constructing a section of main market road, and assistants, superintendents and inspectors are employed thereon under authority of section 1219, G. C., the state's proportion of the compensation of such assistants, superintendents and inspectors is payable from the item of $562,500.00. This is true, however, because the compensation of such assistants, superintendents and inspectors is a part of the cost of constructing the main market road in question. In other words, compensation is payable from the three items referred to above only when such compensation is a part of the cost of constructing, improving, maintaining, repairing, protecting, policing or patroling some specific section of highway or the highways of some particular county under state control. It is my opinion that in so far as employes of your department whose services cannot be regarded as a charge against any particular county or any particular road improvement are concerned, you are limited as to the number, character and compensation of such employes by the appropriations for your department under the head of personal service. In other words, those salaries which are to be regarded strictly as overhead expenses and which are not paid out on account of any particular road improvement, or on account of the state's road activities in any particular county are provided for under the head of personal service, and appropriations under that head constitute a limitation which you are not authorized to disregard. In view of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that there is no appropriation available for the payment of the salary of an investigator or employe having the duties which you enumerate, and it therefore becomes unnecessary to consider your further inquiry involving the application of the civil service law of the state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CLERK OF SAID BOARD REQUIRED TO GIVE ONE BOND WHEN ACTING AS CLERK-TREASURER OF SCHOOL DISTRICT—BOARD SHOULD TAKE INTO CONSIDERATION ADDED DUTIES IN FIXING AMOUNT OF BOND WHEN CLERK REQUIRED TO ACT AS TREASURER.

The clerk of a board of education elected by said board at its meeting on the first Monday in January, under authority of section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, is required, before entering upon the duties of his office, to give one bond in an amount and with surety to be approved by said board, payable to the state, conditioned for the faithful performance of all the official duties required of him. The board of education in fixing the amount of said bond should take into consideration the added duties which the clerk is required to perform under provision of the latter part of section 4782, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 158.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 6, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of December 10th you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "If the board of education by an order on its journal fixed the bond of the incoming clerk-treasurer of a school district at an amount equal to or greater than the bonds of the former clerk and treasurer combined, would it be legal for the clerk-treasurer to give said bond in one obligation or does the law require that two separate bonds be given, one for clerk and one for treasurer which may be signed by different sureties?"

Your question relates to the board of education of a school district which, having provided a depository for the school moneys of such district as authorized by law, has dispensed with the treasurer of the school funds under authority of section 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 158.

The treasurer of the school funds of said school district having been dispensed with, the duties formerly performed by such treasurer are now a part of the duties of the clerk of the board of education of said district under provision of the latter part of said section 4782, G. C., which provides that:

> "In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district."

Section 4783, G. C., provides in part:

> "When the treasurer is so dispensed with, all the duties and obligations required by law of the county auditor, county treasurer or other officer or person relating to the school moneys of the district shall be complied with by dealing with the clerk of the board of education thereof."

Said section further provides that:

> "Before entering upon such duties, the clerk shall give an additional bond equal in amount and in the same manner prescribed by law for the treasurer of the school district."

While under provision of the latter part of section 4783, G. C., the clerk of the board of education above referred to was required, before entering upon the duties cast upon him by provision of the latter part of section 4782, G. C., as amended, to give an additional bond equal in amount to the bond formerly required by law of the treasurer of the school district, it does not necessarily follow that the clerk elected by said board of education at its meeting on the first Monday in January, under authority of section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, is required to give separate bonds as clerk of the board of education and as treasurer of the school funds, respectively, of said school district.

I think, however, that the bond of said clerk must meet the requirements of section 4764 as well as section 4774, of the General Code.

Section 4764, G. C., provides:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, each school district treasurer shall execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a sum not less than the amount of school funds that may come into his hands, payable to the state, approved by the board of education, and conditioned for the faithful disbursement according to law of all funds which come into his hands, provided that when school moneys have been deposited under the provisions of sections 7604-7608, inclusive, the bond shall be in such amount as the board of education may require."

Section 4774, G. C., provides:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, the clerk of each board of education shall execute a bond, in an amount and with surety to be approved by the board, payable to the state, conditioned for the faithful performance of all the official duties required of him. Such bond must be deposited with the president of the board, and a copy thereof, certified by him, shall be filed with the county auditor."

Under provision of the latter part of section 4764, G. C., it will be observed that where the board of education of a school district has lawfully provided a depository for the school funds but has not as yet dispensed with the treasurer of such funds under authority of section 4782, G. C., as amended, the bond of said treasurer is in such amount as said board of education may require.

Under provision of section 4774, G. C., the amount of the bond of the clerk of a board of education is fixed by such board.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that, under the provisions of sections 4764 and 4774, G. C., the clerk of the board of education referred to in your inquiry is required, before entering upon the duties of his office, to give one bond in an amount and with surety to be approved by the board, payable to the state, conditioned for the faithful performance of all the official duties required of him.

The board of education in fixing the amount of said bond should take into consideration the added duties which the clerk is required to perform under provision of the latter part of section 4782, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—STATE BOARD WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO CONTROL, REVERSE OR REVOKE ACTION OF COUNTY BOARD—EXCEPTION UPON APPEAL—COUNTY BOARD HAS CONTROL OF APPLICATION FOR REMOVAL OF PLACE OF BUSINESS—TWO EXCEPTIONS.

The state liquor licensing board is without authority to control, reverse or revoke the action of the county liquor licensing board in granting or rejecting an application for a saloon license, except upon appeal, or in the granting or rejection of an application for a removal of the place of business conducted under such license, except upon an appeal taken from the action of such county board in the manner provided by law, or in case of an inability of the county board to agree thereon for a period of more than three days when such disagreement is certified to the state board under section 1261-24, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 6, 1916.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of December 22, 1915, is as follows:

> "We desire to submit statement of facts that have arisen in two instances involving the same principle, and to request your opinion as to the power exercised by the state board.
> "The first instance is a case arising in Hocking county, where the firm of Hogan & Murphy, licensees, was granted a renewal for which application was made in September. Protests were made by a church congregation, whose building was near that of the saloon, and it was claimed by them that the proximity of the saloon was detrimental. The local board ignored the protests and granted the license. The matter was then brought to the attention of the state board by the protestants, and, although schools and not churches are specifically mentioned in the law, the state board felt that the proximity of this saloon was undesirable to the church and directed the county board that no license should be granted to Hogan & Murphy, except upon condition that the saloon should be removed to another location in the business district of Murray City. This condition was agreed to, and the following contract was entered into between Hogan & Murphy and the Hocking county board:
> " 'This agreement made and entered into this 22d day of November,

1915, by and between Hogan & Murphy, a partnership, party of the first part, and the Hocking County Liquor Licensing Board, a party of the second part, WITNESSETH:

" 'THAT WHEREAS, said party of the first part has heretofore made an application for a saloon license to carry on a liquor business on part of lots 56 and 57 in the village of Murray City, Hocking county, Ohio; and

" 'WHEREAS, by a ruling of the State Liquor Licensing Board, it is made necessary to remove said business because of its proximity to the First M. E. Church of Murray City, Ohio; and

" 'WHEREAS, said party of the second part has granted a license to carry on said business on said parts of lots 56 and 57, as described in the original application therefor;

" 'NOW, THEREFORE, it is agreed by and between said parties that in consideration of the granting of said license according to the application therefor, said party of the first part hereby agrees that within ten days from date hereof it will remove its said business from said lots 56 and 57, as described in said license, to some other suitable place in said village of Murray City, Hocking county, Ohio, approvable to said party of the second part.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have hereunto set their hands at Logan this 22d day of November, 1915.

" '(Signed) HOGAN & MURPHY,

" 'Per Hogan.

" 'THE HOCKING COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD,

" 'Per W. H. WHITE, President.'

"At the time the license certificate was granted, permission was given to the licensees, Hogan & Murphy, to have until December 12th to effect their removal. On the 12th of December the licensees neglected and refused to take any steps towards moving and repudiated their agreement, whereupon the state board sent an inspector to Murray City and removed the license from the walls of the saloon, notifying the proprietors to close their doors, which was done.

"The second case arises from the city of Cincinnati. A license was applied for in September by one Jacob Pittner, which license was granted thereafter by the Hamilton county board, the location being at 33-35 West Court street. Thereafter the licensee made application to remove to a building at the southwest corner of Ninth and Vine. Protest was made against this removal by the congregation of the Ninth Street Baptist Church, and it developed that this congregation had for two years, on file with the Hamilton county board, what purported to be a permanent protest against the placing of a saloon at this location, which was very near the entrance of the church on Ninth street, the saloon on the corner facing on Vine. The protest against the removal was overruled by the local board, which granted the removal license. The licensee proceeded to improve the property and has possibly involved himself in some expense. The protestants, the Ninth Street Baptist Church congregation, represented by Rev. John Herget, its pastor, brought the matter to the attention of the state board, which, after investigation of the matter, passed the following resolution:

" 'RESOLVED, That it be the sense of this board, that in view of the protest of the Ninth Street Baptist Church, that the removal of Jacob

Pittner to the southwest corner of Vine and Ninth streets should not have been granted, and that the Hamilton county board be directed to rescind the action granting the removal,'

''which was forwarded to the Hamilton county board. In both cases the action of the local boards, that of Hocking county and Hamilton county, was unanimous, there being no disagreement which under the law would bring the matter to this board for disposition.

''We, therefore, request your opinion in writing, based upon the facts stated in the two cases given above, as to the power of the state board in controlling the actions of the local county boards; the direct question being whether or not under the Greenlund licensing law the state board can review the action of local boards upon the appeal or application of protestants who had appeared ineffectually before the local boards.

''Owing to a very general interest over the state, not in these cases individually, but in the underlying principle, we would like to request your early attention to this matter.''

The question involved in each of the foregoing statements of fact goes to the authority of the state liquor licensing board to control, reverse, or revoke the action of local or county licensing boards in granting licenses or renewal thereof, and in the granting or rejection of application for removal by such county board.

It may be observed at the outset that the authority of the state board in these matters is confined to that which may be found to have been conferred by the liquor licensing law, under which both the state and county boards are established. The authority of public officials is, generally speaking, in every case confined to that which is specifically conferred by law and such implied power only as is essential to the performance of the duties imposed by law upon such officers.

It is impracticable to here set out all the provisions of the license law defining the powers and authority of the state liquor licensing board, or to attempt even an exhaustive synopsis of the same.

Section 1 of the liquor law, section 1261-16, G. C., 103 O. L., 217, provides in part that:

> ''The state liquor licensing board shall make rules and regulations for its own government, as well as for government of the county licensing boards hereinafter provided for, not inconsistent with law.''

This provision, however, cannot be regarded as restrictive of the general powers and authority conferred upon county boards, or as giving to the state board power to control the exercise of the same in any general way. In other words, this provision gives to the state board authority only to prescribe the general method of procedure by county boards in the exercise of the powers and functions conferred upon such boards by law, and such rules and regulations may not in any way impinge upon the authority of county boards. Otherwise, such rules and regulations would be inconsistent with law.

Attention is called to that part of section 9 of article XV of the constitution, which reads as follows:

> ''License to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall not be granted unless the place of traffic under such license shall be located in the county in which the person or persons reside whose duty it is to grant such license, or in a county adjoining thereto.''

Thus it is made clear that in no case is it within the authority of the state board to grant a license, and I am of opinion that the granting of an application for a renewal of a license comes clearly within the terms of the constitutional phrase "to grant a license."

Section 16 of the license law, section 1261-31, G. C., 103 O. L., 221, provides in part as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of the county liquor licensing boards of the respective counties of the state, and they are hereby authorized to grant, issue, renew and transfer, as provided by law, all licenses to traffic in intoxicating liquors in the county wherein the board is situated; also to suspend or revoke, subject to the conditions and in the manner provided by law, all licenses granted or renewed in said county; and to perform such other duties as may be required by law."

Section 36 of the license law, section 1261-51, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, provides in reference to removals as follows:

> "No licensee under a saloon license shall, during the then current year, remove his place of business to a place other than that set forth in the application upon which the license was granted, without the consent of the county board. If any such licensee so removes his place of business without said consent endorsed upon his license certificate, the license may be revoked by the board.
> "Upon the application of any licensee who desires to remove during the license year then current, to a location other than that named in the original application, the said board shall, if satisfied with the change of location, endorse upon the license certificate of the applicant the fact of said change of location, and said license shall thereupon be good in said location but shall cease to have force in the old location."

There is thus conferred upon the county boards general authority and control over the granting, issuance, renewal, transfer, suspension and revocation of all licenses to traffic in intoxicating liquors and the removal of the place of business conducted under such license within the county of such board.

No limitation, qualification or restriction may be placed by the state board upon the authority of county boards so conferred, except the state board be specifically authorized by law so to do.

A careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose any provision giving to the state board authority to reverse, revoke, modify or control the action of the county boards in respect to these matters, except upon an appeal from such action by an applicant or licensee under section 38 of the license law, section 1261-53, G. C., 103 O. L., 233, which provides as follows:

> "There shall be an appeal by an applicant or licensee to the state board from all final decisions of any county board, except in cases of suspension under section 34 of this act, and also except in cases of rejection of any application for a saloon license. There shall also be an appeal in cases of such rejection where:
> "1. The number of saloon licenses is limited, and where in any subdivision of the state a county licensing board has not granted saloon licenses to the full number allowed by said limitation.
> "2. In all cases of rejection by the board of an application for transfer of licenses to others, and for removal of location.

"3. In all cases where the county board has rejected an application to renew a license, or an application for a transfer of a license by one who has purchased a license at court sale, or under the terms of a will or contract of a licensee since deceased."

Section 9 of the license law, section 1261-24, G. C., 103 O. L., 219, infra, and that part of section 40 of the license law, section 1261-55, G. C., 103 O. L., 234, which provides in reference to appeals under section 38, as follows:

"If upon the said hearing and the examination of said record the state board shall decide that the finding of the county board was erroneous, the said state board shall reverse the action of the said county board, and shall order the county board to make the finding in accordance with the conclusions of the state board. Whereupon the said county board shall grant to the said appellant the said license, or shall reinstate the said licensee, or shall make the transfer, or shall do the thing required by the state board upon said record. And in the case of a decision of the county board rejecting an application for renewal, or where through any action of the county board a license is revoked, and where an appeal is taken within the time allowed by law, no license shall be issued to take the place of the license failed to be renewed or of the license revoked unless the action of the county board is affirmed."

It appears, however, that no appeal, as authorized, was taken and that the state board, in each of the matters referred to, acted solely upon its own motion, ostensibly pursuant to a protest or petition presented by or on behalf of certain individuals. While there is provision for the registration of protests against the granting of licenses or in favor of the revocation of any license with county boards, no authority for the filing of such protests with the state board will be found and such petition or protest will not, therefore, give to the state board jurisdiction to take any action in reference to the granting or revocation of any license.

In reference to the second statement of facts, however, which deals with an application for removal, attention is called to that part of section 9 of the license law (section 1261-24, G. C., 103 O. L., 219), which provides as follows:

"In the event of the inability of the board to agree upon any question before it for the period of more than three days, except as to a granting, renewing or transferring of a license, then the subject of difference shall be certified by the secretary of the board to the state liquor licensing board for decision, and its decision shall be final."

From this it will be observed that as to all those matters before the county board, in reference to the determination of which there is an inability of the board to agree for more than three days, except as to granting, renewing and transferring of licenses, upon proper certification thereof, the state board is authorized to make final decision. This provision would, of course, be applicable to and include applications for removal, but in the case under consideration there was no inability of the county board to agree and hence no certification to the state board. It is unnecessary, therefore, to say that in the absence of the inability of the county board to agree in respect to an application for removal and a certification of the same as prescribed, the state board is without authority to direct the action of the county board as to the granting or rejection of such application.

It should be here observed that the matter of the proper location of saloons is to be determinted in the first instance in their sound judgment and discretion by the county liquor licensing board, subject, however, to such appeal as is authorized by section 1261-53, G. C., supra, and to section 1261-24, G. C., supra.

Under section 10 of the license law, section 1261-25, G. C., 103 O. L., 219, county licensing commissioners may be removed by the state board "in case of misconduct in office, bribery, incompetency, any gross neglect of duty or gross immorality." This provision cannot be given such construction as to authorize the state board to assume to take such action in regard to the granting or revocation of licenses or the granting or rejection of applications for removal, as it may conceive ought to have been taken by the county board in any case. If the action of any member of a county board, with reference to the granting or revocation of a license or the granting or rejection of an application for removal has been such as to constitute any or all of the causes for which removal is authorized, it is then within the power of the state board to make such removal in accordance with the provisions of law prescribing the procedure in such cases. But, as stated above, in no case is the state board authorized to assume to act for and instead of the county board in such matters, except in pursuance of the provisions of section 1261-24, G. C., supra.

I am therefore of opinion that the action of the state board, in respect to both the matters set forth in your communication, was wholly without authority of law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE FOR VILLAGE OF MARBLE CLIFF, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 6, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE:—Bonds of Marble Cliff, Ohio, in the sum of $5,500.00, being 11 bonds of $500.00 each, dated November 1, 1915, bearing interest at five percentum per annum, payable semi-annually, and maturing one year beginning November 1, 1916.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Marble Cliff in connection with the issuance of the above bonds, and I find that said proceedings have been regular and in conformity with the laws of Ohio.

I am therefore of the opinion that said bonds, when properly prepared, executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said village of Marble Cliff.

Since no bond form has been submitted for my examination, I suggest that when the same are presented to the treasurer for delivery that I be given an opportunity to examine them.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CONTRIBUTION FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS BY INDIVIDUALS, FIRMS AND CORPORATIONS—HOW FUND SHOULD BE HANDLED—STIPULATION IN CONTRACT.

Contributions made to the state highway department for road work should be placed by the state highway commissioner in a bank to his account as such commissioner and a surety bond should be taken for the safe keeping of such funds.

In contracting against such funds there should be inserted in the contract a recital of the fact that all or a certain part of the contract price, as the case may be, is payable from contributions. Contributions for work on intercounty highways or main market roads may also be made to the county in which the work is to be done if the co-operation of the officials of such county may be had.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 7, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 17, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

> "This department has confronting it several cases where a certain proportion of the estimated cost of improving an intercounty highway or main market road consists of a fund created by contributions of various individuals, firms and corporations.
> "It has been suggested that the proper official to act as custodian of such a fund is the county treasurer of the county in which the improvement is being made, and that such funds in his hands should be drawn upon by the state in the same manner as funds of the county used in co-operation with this department.
> "I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to whether or not such county treasurer would be the proper custodian of such funds, and if you find that he is not, I respectfully ask an opinion from your office as to the proper and legal procedure to be followed by this department in the handling of such contributions."

Section 217, of the Cass highway law, being section 1224, G. C., and being found in the chapter of the Cass highway law relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department, provides among other things that nothing in that chapter shall be construed so as to prohibit any individual or corporation from contributing a portion of the cost of the construction, maintenance and repair of state highways.

Your communication presents the question of the proper method of handling contributions of the class referred to in the above mentioned provision. It is unnecessary to advance any argument in support of the proposition that you would not be authorized to enter into contracts involving the expenditure of promised contributions from individuals, firms and corporations. That is to say, if an individual specially interested in the improvement of a particular road should merely agree to contribute all or some portion of the funds required for the improvement of such road, you would not be authorized to enter into a contract involving the expenditure of the funds which the person in question had agreed to contribute, but which funds had not been placed in your hands.

The statute does not point out any particular method of handling these funds, and I have been unable to find any provision of law authorizing the handling of such contributions by the county treasurer in those cases in which the contributions are made to your department. In the absence of any statutory direction in the matter, I am of the opinion that you should act as custodian of the funds, and to insure their safe keeping should deposit them in a bank to your account as state highway commissioner, and take from such bank a surety bond conditioned that the bank shall safely keep the funds and pay out the same on your check. The working out of such an arrangement will hardly involve any particular difficulties for the reason that the bank selected by you as depositary of such funds, not being required to pay any interest thereon, will probably be willing to meet the cost of the surety bond required by you. In contracting against such funds, you should insert in the contract a recital of the fact that all or a certain part of the contract price, as the case may be, is payable from contributions received by you.

I am not unmindful of the following provision found in section 24, G. C., 104 O. L., 178:

> "On or before Monday of each week every state officer, state institution, department, board, commission, college, normal school or university receiving state aid shall pay to the treasurer of state all moneys, checks and drafts received for the state, or for the use of any such state officer, state institution, department, board, commission, college, normal school or university receiving state aid, during the preceding week, from taxes, assessments, licenses, premiums, fees, penalties, fines, costs, sales, rentals or otherwise, and file with the auditor of state a detailed, verified statement of such receipts."

The above quoted provision uses the words "taxes," "assessments," "licenses," "premiums," "fees," "penalties," "fines," "costs," "sales" and "rentals." None of these terms are broad enough to include contributions. They all refer to funds which the state has a right to demand, and the payment of which it has a right to enforce, and in this particular they do not differ from one another. A contribution is of an entirely different nature, being voluntary, and a thing which the state may receive but has no right to demand. In view of the familiar rule of statutory construction that while in the abstract general terms are to be given their natural and full signification, yet where they follow specific words of a like nature they take their meaning from the latter, and are presumed to embrace only things or persons of the kind designated by them, I conclude that the use of the word "otherwise" in the provision above quoted does not so enlarge the meaning of that provision as to require you to pay contributions to the state treasurer.

I deem it proper in this connection to call your attention to the fact that individuals, firms and corporations may make their contributions toward the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of state highways to the county in which the improvement is to be constructed instead of making the same to the state highway department provided the co-operation of county officials may be had in the matter. Under authority of the case of State ex rel. v. County Auditor, 86 O. S., 244, the contributors may secure the placing of their contributions in a specific road fund in the county treasury by indicating their desire in the premises at the time payment is made. Their contributions being placed in the county treasury to the credit of a road fund available for a specific improvement, it would be within the power of the county commissioners to make an application for state aid upon the road in question and to use the contributed funds for the purpose of meeting the county's proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement.

If this suggestion should be followed in any particular case, the procedure of your department and of the county commissioners from the time of the making of the application until the completion of the work and the payment for the same, would be identical with the procedure in those cases in which funds designed to meet the county's share of the cost and expense of the improvement were raised by taxation or by a bond issue.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—CORPORATION ORGANIZED FOR APPREHENSION AND CONVICTION OF CRIMINALS DISAPPROVED FOR REASON, PURPOSE CLAUSE FAULTY—SECTIONS 10200 TO 10206, G. C., CONSTRUED.

Sections 10200 to 10206, G. C., both inclusive, do not authorize the organization of a corporation for the purpose of enabling its members to exercise police powers in order to collect rewards offered for the apprehension and conviction of criminals. The powers conferred by said sections are only intended to enable the members of such a corporation to provide protection against loss caused by the depredations of criminals, and not for the purposes of profit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 6, 1915, together with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause contained in the articles of incorporation of the "OHIO SECRET SERVICE BUREAU."

The purpose clause contained in the articles of incorporation enclosed in your letter is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of apprehending and convicting any person or persons accused of either a felony or misdemeanor.

"The plan of operation of said corporation is as follows: Each member of said corporation shall be entitled to all his fees or reward the same as if he were operating as a private person.

"The only benefit to be derived by any member, exclusive of his said fees or reward, from said corporation, will be the power vested in him by reason of the incorporation; and this corporation will operate under sections 10200, 10201, 10202, 10203, 10204, 10205 and 10206 of the General Code of Ohio."

The proposed articles of incorporation are filed for the express purpose of organizing a corporation under the provisions of sections 10200-10206, inclusive, G. C. Said sections contain special provisions for the organization of a certain class of corporations. Not only are the provisions thereof essentially different from those authorizing the organization of the ordinary corporation, but the organization contemplated thereby is essentially different from the ordinary corporation. An examination of said sections will show that the particular characteristics of a corporation which may be organized thereunder are that it shall be a corporation not for profit, either of itself or its individual members, but a corporation whose sole purpose is the protection of its members from the depredations of criminals.

While section 10200 provides that:

"Any number of persons, not less than fifteen, a majority of whom must be residents of this state, may become incorporated for the purpose of apprehending and convicting any person or persons accused of either a felony or misdemeanor," yet this is modified by the provisions of the succeeding sections. Special attention is called to section 10205, G. C., which provides:

"Such an association may make and collect from its members, assessments authorized by its constitution or by-laws, and if so provided in its constitution, also may indemnify its members for losses caused by horse thieves or other felons, and expend such moneys as are deemed necessary in the pursuit, arrest, and to procure the conviction of felons," and to section 10206, G. C., which provides as follows:

"Upon the apprehension and conviction of a person charged with felony by such an association, the commissioners of the county in which the crime was committed, may reimburse it in any sum not above one hundred dollars, for necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for by law, incurred in the apprehension and conviction of such criminal. Upon the apprehension and conviction by the association of a person accused of misdemeanor, the commissioners of the county in which the crime was committed may reimburse it in any sum not above seventy-five dollars for necessary expenses incurred, not otherwise provided for by law, in the apprehension and conviction of such criminal."

The foregoing sections, providing for the assessment of members to provide funds for carrying on the activities of the corporation and for reimbursement from the county commissioners for the "necessary expenses" of the corporation in the apprehension and conviction of felons and misdemeanants, show clearly that the corporation contemplated therein is not one which in any sense of the word was designed or intended to be for the profit of itself or any of its individual members but is, as stated above, one whose sole purpose is to provide the means by which its members may protect themselves from laws by conferring upon them the right to make arrests and to create a fund to indemnify themselves for property stolen or destroyed.

An examination of the purpose clause of the proposed articles of incorporation above set out shows that it is not a corporation not for the profit of its members nor for the purpose of enabling its members to protect themselves from loss in the manner above suggested. On the other hand, it is clearly the intent of the incorporators to organize for the purpose of securing to themselves the power to make arrests, not for their own protection, but solely in order to secure the rewards which may be offered for the apprehension and conviction of criminals.

I am therefore of the opinion that the sections of the General Code above mentioned do not authorize the organization of a corporation such as is contemplated in the application in question for the purposes set out therein.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME—IF BUILDING IS ERECTED AT COST TO EXCEED $25,000 A BUILDING COMMISSION IS REQUIRED TO BE APPOINTED.

When a county children's home is to be erected in any county at a cost to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, a building commission is required to be appointed under the provisions of section 2333, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1916.

HON. OTHO W. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 24, 1915, as follows:

> "At the regular election held in this county on November 2d, 1915, a vote was taken under section 3077 of the General Code, as amended in the 103 Ohio laws, on the proposition of establishing a children's home in this county, and the issuing of bonds to provide funds out of which to pay for the same. The proposition carried. This vote was for the purpose of establishing a children's home in Crawford county. In other words, the whole of Crawford county is the district, and the only district or territory for which said home is to be established.
> "Now comes the question as to whether or not the provisions of section 2333 of the General Code apply. That is to say, must we have a building commission appointed or not? Personally, it is my judgment that no building commission is contemplated in respect to a children's home. Under section 2333, G. C., the language is very inclusive and probably standing alone would be sufficient to require the appointment of such building commission. But under sections 3077 et seq. in respect to children's homes, it occurs to me that we have a decidedly different situation from that contemplated under section 2333. It is difficult to state, in fact, at this time it is impossible to state how much money will be expended in the construction of the building, and if it should be within the twenty-five thousand dollars mentioned in section 2333, no building commission would be required. It may cost to exceed the twenty-five thousand dollars, and it may not reach that sum, or at least so far as the statutes are concerned, this may be true. Under section 2333, G. C., if a vote is taken on the proposition of issuing twenty-five thousand dollars or more in bonds for the purpose of constructing a building, a building commission is necessary, but under section 3077, there is no vote taken upon the amount of money to be expended in the building. First, there is a vote taken upon the proposition as to whether or not a children's home will be established or not. And, second, upon the maximum sum of money that may be expended for that purpose.

"As I view it, this clearly means that any sum of money may be expended so long as it does not exceed the sum voted on. But out of this sum voted on, a large portion of it may be used in the purchase of real estate and other things in connection with the children's home that would be proper and necessary, but no part of the building itself. This would indicate that the provisions of section 2333 are upon one question which seems to be this, that the vote must be taken on the bond issue of twenty-five thousand dollars or more for the building alone. Then, under section 3077, there may be more than one county included in the district, and if we had included, say three counties and section 2333 would apply to same, it would follow that there would have to be a building commission appointed in each county to act in conjunction with the commissioners of these counties, and it seems to me that no such thing was intended by the legislature. Then again, under 3077 et seq. this children's home could be established in one of the three counties, while section 2333 seems to contemplate the construction of the building in that particular county. And the wording of sections 3077 et seq. are such that it seems to me that the legislature did not contemplate that the commissioners should act in conjunction with the building commission. While it is true that our district includes Crawford county only, yet this could make no difference upon the meaning to be attached to this law as enacted by the legislature. Then section 3077 and some of the other sections pertaining to children's homes were enacted after the enactment of 2333, and therefore if the same are in conflict with the provisions of section 2333, the later would necessarily have to control. Other reasons might be given as to why a building commission was not contemplated in respect to children's homes, and I might add this to the reasons given before: That the commissioners would have a right to buy a property with a building on it so that no building would be constructed on it, or it might be a case where an old building would simply be repaired or the like.

"I should be pleased to have you give me your opinion at once, as to whether or not the law requires that we have a building commission. An early reply will be much appreciated in view of the fact that the application for the appointment of this commission is to be made within thirty days after the election, and this time will soon be up."

In answering your foregoing inquiry it must be understood that my observations are predicated upon the condition that your board of commissioners propose to erect a children's home at a cost to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars independent of the cost of any land or site upon which said home is to be erected. That is to say, the building furnished, heated, lighted and ready for occupancy must cost to exceed that amount. In the event, then, that your commissioners propose to erect such a home, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 2333, G. C., to which you refer, apply, and a building commission is required. While it is true that under sections 3077 and 3078, G. C., the vote required is upon the establishment of a children's home and the maximum amount of money to be expended therefor, yet the only effect of such vote is to eliminate the same requirement from the provisions of said section 2333, supra., and leave its remaining provisions in full force and effect. In other words, the commissioners having submitted the question of issuing bonds under sections 3077 and 3078, supra., such submission is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of said section 2333 in that behalf.

Your reference to the law providing for a district children's home can have no application here as said section 2333, G. C., applies only to court houses and other county buildings.

While the question is not wholly free from doubt, I am of the opinion that when the county commissioners have submitted the matter of establishing a children's home and the issuing of bonds therefor to the qualified electors of their county, as required by sections 3077 and 3078, G. C., and the same is approved by said electors, and that thereafter said commissioners, under the authority so conferred by said election, propose to erect a home at a cost to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, a building commission is required to be appointed under section 2333, G. C., which appointment may be made without the vote provided for in said section.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—GROSS EARNINGS FROM RAILROADS DOING BUSINESS IN OHIO—TRANSPORTATION OF IRON ORE BY WATER TO THIS STATE AND THEN TRANSPORTED BY RAIL—WHEN SUCH SHIPMENT CONSTITUTES INTERSTATE AND INTRASTATE COMMERCE.

The rail transportation of iron ore from lake ports in the state of Ohio to other points in the state of Ohio constitutes interstate business, and the earnings therefrom are not to be computed in ascertaining the basis of the railroad excise tax, if such transportation is a part of a continuous transit begun outside of the state, as by water transportation on the Great Lakes. The continuity of such transit is not affected by the time at which the title to the ore as between the consignor and the consignee passes, by the fact that the ore may have been brought down to the ports and delivered to the railroad by its owner in vessels belonging to such owner or chartered by him or it, or by the fact that the railroad transportation may be for any other reason upon new and separate bills of lading; but if the ore when landed at the ports is undisposed of, so that it is there held for sale by its owner, and the subsequent Ohio transportation is in pursuance of such sale, it is intrastate in character; and even though ore be contracted for by ultimate consignees, by specification of quality and quantity or otherwise, and quantities of ore are brought down to Ohio lake ports with a general view to discharging such contracts; yet if the ore which is sold lands in Ohio and is there held or detained beyond the strict necessities of transshipment for the convenience of the owner, as distinguished from or in addition to purposes which serve the convenience of transportation, the journey or transit of the commodity must be regarded as having been interrupted at the port, although the detention is in the custody of the railroad company, and in such event the subsequent rail transportation of the ore in Ohio is purely intrastate. Whenever the rail transportation in Ohio is intrastate in character the earnings therefrom must enter into the computation of the basis of the excise tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 30, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Under General Code section 5477, it is the duty of this commission to determine the gross earnings from intrastate business of each railroad doing business within this state. Examination of the books of certain of the companies has developed the following facts:
> "Iron ore is shipped by water from points outside of this state to points within this state under the following conditions:
> "1. The owner of the ore transports same in his own vessels to the terminals of certain railroads on lake points within this state. It is then delivered to the railroad company for transportation to some point within this state.
> "2. The owner of the ore charters a vessel and transports the ore in the same manner as above set out in paragraph 1.
> "3. Ore is carried by independent vessels to said lake points and then reshipped to points within this state under new and separate billing.
> "4. Ore is transported to the said lake points and stored on the docks and thereafter sold and delivered to points within this state.

"The railroad companies claim that the above is interstate business and refuse to return same as intrastate business. This commission respectfully requests your opinion in the matter."

My investigation of the law bearing upon these questions has convinced me that no positive answer can be given to some of them in the absence of further facts at least; and even on such supplementary facts as might be imagined for the purpose of a hypothesis, the answers to these questions must be qualified by stating that the law in respect thereto must be regarded as not perfectly settled.

In the first place, the only decisions worth considering are those of the supreme court of the United States. This is true because the questions submitted are purely federal ones, and also because the decisions of the state courts in such matters have been reversed or overruled with such frequency by the supreme court of the United States as to deprive them of determining weight.

The general principle is, of course, that a state may not tax the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce nor measure a tax nominally upon any privilege subject to its jurisdiction by the receipts or earnings from such commerce. Of course, there is nothing in the statutes of Ohio which conflicts with this principle because on their face they show an intention to exclude from the earnings of railroad companies and other commercial carriers, for the purpose of the computation of the public utility excise tax, all receipts which are derived from the commerce which the state may not tax.

The Ohio Tax Cases, 232 U. S. 576.

In short, the only receipts or earnings which may be considered in determining the basis of the apportionment of the tax are those from purely intrastate commerce.

The question presented by each of your specific inquiries then is as to whether or not the transportation of iron ore from the lower lake ports to points within the state of Ohio is intrastate commerce for the purpose of the rule as to privilege taxation.

One of the difficulties which I have encountered lies in the fact, that although the United States supreme court reports are prolific of decisions respecting the power of the state to tax property which has been in interstate commerce after its arrival in the state, no case so far as I am able to discover has been decided upon the exact point or points raised by your letter. To put it broadly, the rule adopted by the supreme court of the United States is, that property which has been carried in interstate commerce becomes subject to local or state taxation when it comes to rest in the taxing state and is there commingled with the general mass of property therein. But it has not been decided, at least directly, that when the property transported has come to rest and is so commingled, the interstate transit thereof is under all circumstances at an end, so that a subsequent movement of the property wholly within the borders of the state is a separate and distinct transit and constitutes purely intrastate commerce. I have, however, come to the conclusion that the reasons upon which the rule as to property taxation is based, apply with equal force to the solution of the question as to when the interstate journey is ended, in order to discriminate between interstate and intrastate business for privilege tax purposes.

I may add that decisions relative to the power to regulate commerce by fixing rates, ordering accommodations and prohibiting practices are not lacking, and that these decisions have been of some service to me. In their consideration, however, I have been mindful of a distinction which the supreme court of the United States has observed between the state's power to regulate commerce directly and its power to regulate commerce indirectly by taxation thereof. The power of congress in the former respect as opposed to that of the states, is much more zealously guarded by the supreme court of the United States than is the latter. Thus that court does not permit a state to regulate rates of transportation between points within that state over a route, a part of which passes through another state or states, but does permit such a state to tax the privilege of carrying on that commerce; so that such a movement may be said to be interstate for the purpose of police regulation and intrastate for the purpose of taxation.

This rule was discussed and the decisions sustaining it were cited in my predecessor's opinion to the commission relative to the steamer Greyhound (annual report of the attorney general for the year 1913, page 597), Lehigh Valley Railroad Company v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192.

It will thus be seen that the decisions relative to the police power of the state over commercial transportation within its borders afford an analogy to the rule to be applied to your questions which may be safely employed, so far at least as the rule is favorable to the state.

The following principles and the authorities sustaining them apply to the solution of your questions:

The character of commerce as interstate or intrastate is not determined by the actual route of a particular carrier, which may be wholly within one state without depriving a given act of transportation of the character of interstate commerce. The Daniel Ball, 10th Wallace, 557 and a great multitude of subsequently decided cases.

The character of a given act of transportation is not determined by the bill of lading upon which the goods are being carried upon a given stage of their journey.

Railroad Commission of Ohio v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101;
Illinois Central Railroad Company v. Louisiana Railroad Commission, 236 U. S. 157-163;
Pennsylvania Railroad Co. v. Clark Coal Company, 238 U. S. 456;
Southern Pacific Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498; Texas, etc., Railroad Company v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111.

In one of the most recent of the above cited cases, Illinois Central Railroad Company v. Louisiana Railroad Commission, supra., the following language was used:

> "The essential nature of the movement and not the form of the bill of lading determines the character of the commerce involved. And generally when this interstate character has been acquired it continues at least until the load reaches the point where the parties originally intended that the movement should finally end."

The ownership of the carrying agency by the owner of the goods transported does not affect the character of the commerce.

United States v. Ohio Oil Company, 234 U. S. 548; Kirmeyer v. Kansas, 236 U. S. 568.

In the first of these cases the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission over companies owning interstate pipe lines and transporting therein only their own petroleum was sustained, and in the latter case the delivery of intoxicating liquors in one state from a warehouse in another state by means of wagons upon orders received by telphone at the warehouse was held to be interstate commerce.

The time when with respect to the transit the title to the goods passes from the consignor to the consignee is immaterial; so that though the title may not pass until acceptance by the consignee at the point of delivery, the goods remaining the property of the consignor even after delivery, so as to afford an opportunity for inspection, testing, etc., the whole transaction if it involves interstate transportation constitutes interstate commerce.

Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507;
Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124-127;
In re Selma Company, Bankrupt, 204 Fed. 839;
Gulf,etc. Railroad Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403.

On the other hand, when goods are shipped from a point in one state to a point is another, the consignor and the carrier at the time contemplating no further shipment, whether on new or separate bill of lading, and during transit the consignee or one to whom he has sold the goods in the meantime, decides to have them transported to another point in the state of destination, and this is done, the second journey is independent of the first and constitutes intrastate commerce.

Gulf, etc., Railroad Company v. Texas, supra.
C. M. & St. P. Railroad Co. v. Iowa, 233 U. S. 334.

The property tax cases, involving the right of the state to impose a tax upon property as such as against the contention that the property is in transit in interstate commerce and therefore not subject to local taxation and resulting in the rule hereinbefore described, are as follows:

Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wallace, 123;
Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622;
Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517;
Pittsburgh, etc., Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577;
Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1;
Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82;
American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500;
General Oil Company v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211;
Bacon v. Illinois, 227 U. S. 516.

The results of some of these leading cases may be given:

In Coe v. Errol, supra—the most frequently cited of them—it was held that the property or products of a state, though collected from various points and transported to a common place of shipment for further transportation in interstate commerce, were subject to local state taxation because their interstate journey had not yet commenced. The facts of the case were that logs cut in the state of New Hampshire had been drawn by sleds and teams to a point on a tributary of the Androscoggin river, where they were detained until the water should become high enough to float them to a point in Maine. There were also other logs which had been cut in Maine and were ultimately destined to the same point in Maine. but which were held at the New Hampshire point until the propitious time for their further transportation. As to the latter, however, the state court had ordered the tax abated so that the only question before the court was with respect to the former. Mr. Justice Bradley used the following language at page 527:

> "Such goods do not cease to be part of the general mass of property in the state, subject, as such, to its jurisdiction and to taxation in the usual way, until they have been shipped or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another state or have been started upon such transportation in a continuous route or journey * * *. This movement does not begin until the articles have been shipped or started for transportation from the one state to the other. The carrying of them in carts or other vehicles or even floating them to the depot where the journey is to commence is no part of that journey. That is all preliminary work, performed for the purpose of putting the property in a state of preparation and readiness for transportation. Until actually launched on its way to another state * * *, it may be sold or otherwise disposed of within the state, and never put in course of transportation out of the state. * * * * *"

This case fixes the time at which the interstate journey begins.

In Brown v. Houston, supra, the facts were as follows:

A partnership of the state of Pennsylvania doing business in Pittsburgh had shipped coal in barges on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to their agents in New Orleans. While the coal was still in the barges in which it had been transported and afloat on the Mississippi river, and while it was held by the agents to be sold for the account of their principal, it was assessed for taxation by the parish of New Orleans. The supreme court of the United States sustained the tax, which was not levied upon the coal as an import nor as a foreign product but merely as property within the state. Mr. Justice Bradley used the following language at page 632:

> "The coal had come to its place of rest, for final disposal or use, and was a commodity in the market of New Orleans. * *"

This case then in effect holds that when property which has been carried in interstate commerce reaches a destination, its further movement from which, if any, depends upon a new and separate disposition of the goods, it is at rest and becomes a part of the property of the state in which it is situated.

In Kelley v. Rhoads, supra, the assessor of the county of Laramie, Wyoming, had assessed and collected taxes upon a herd of sheep which at the time of the assessment were being driven from a point in Utah across the state of Wyoming to a point in Nebraska for the purpose of shipment by rail from the latter point. The sheep were grazed as they were driven, and were assessed as "live stock brought into this state for the purpose of being grazed." The supreme court of the United States enforced repayment of the taxes on the ground that the sheep were, at the time of assessment, in transit. It will be observed that neither in this case nor in Coe v. Errol, supra, was the movement, the character of which was considered by the court, a service performed by a common carrier.

In Diamond Match Company v. Ontonagon, supra, the facts were quite similar to those in Coe v. Errol. That is, the property which was subjected to the local tax consisted of logs afloat in a river which remained there until the breaking up of the ice therein and the opening of navigation thereon, when the logs, or part of them, were to be released and floated down the river to a point in another state.

It was claimed by the owner of the logs that the sole reason for their accumulation at the given point was its inability to float them further until the opening of navigation. It was, however, agreed and stipulated that it was not the intention or purpose of the complainant, after the opening of navigation, to remove all the logs which had accumulated thereat, "but only such amount as could be manufactured at its said mills during the season," such amount being less than the amount which had been and would be accumulated at the point of detention. The state of Michigan, under the laws by which the tax was levied, had provided by legislation for the assessment of property in transit. The supreme court, which decided this case contemporaneously with its decision in Kelley v. Rhoads, supra, held that it was governed by Coe v. Errol, supra. Although the opinion of Mr. Justice McKenna does not expressly state that controlling effect was given to the facts respecting the accumulation at the point of detention of more logs than would be moved after the opening of navigation, yet at page 96 he dwells on these facts, and I think it may be assumed that they were not without weight in determining the court's decision; so that if it had appeared that the only reason for the detention of the logs at that point had been the closing of navigation, and that the number of logs so detained was not in excess of the number of logs that were to be moved, a different result might have been reached.

I have discussed the Diamond Match Company case because of its bearing upon facts, which I think may be involved in the situation which gives rise to your question, although they are not stated in your letter. The case itself, as it will be observed, does not deal with the termination of the interstate journey, but with the beginning thereof.

In American Steel & Wire Company v. Speed, supra, the facts were as follows:

The company manufactured its products in states other than the state of Tennessee but had selected Memphis in that state as a distributing point, and had made an arrangement with a transfer company in that city by which the latter company was to take charge of the products when shipped to Memphis, consigned to the steel company, store them in a warehouse there, assort them and make delivery to the persons to whom the goods were sold by the steel company. It was alleged that goods so held by the transfer company for the steel company were merely in transit from the point of manufacture outside of the state of Tennessee to the persons to whom they had been previously sold. The lower courts, however, had found, as facts from the evidence, that the contracts of sale, which were in writing, uniformly stipulated for the delivery of goods described as "so many kegs of nails, so many kegs of staples, so many reels of barbed wire, or so many coils of smooth wire," the agreement being with respect to the quantity and kind of goods, but not with respect to the grade and quality. The grade and quality were left open to be subsequently specified when the customer desired delivery. This specification was made in writing to the main office of the steel company in Chicago, which office would send the order to the transfer company at Memphis, and in accordance therewith the latter company would select goods of the desired quantity and quality from the mass in the warehouses and ship them to the customers. The court found that the allegation respecting the taking of orders in advance of shipments to the distributing point was true, but that the steel company, "taking advantage of the seasons when there is a good stage of water in the rivers, which must be used in floating its products from its mills to Memphis, * * * masses its goods at the latter point in anticipation of future sales." Moreover it was found that the products of the different factories of the steel company were indiscriminately massed in the warehouses, so that a given order might be filled from the products of one factory or from another, as the result of pure accident. In making the assortments and deliveries, however, the original packages of transportation were never broken by the transfer company.

The goods were assessed for property taxation under the general property taxation laws of Tennessee. The supreme court of the United States sustained the tax upon the authority inter alia of Brown v. Houston, supra. I quote the following from the language of Mr. Justice White at page 519 et seq.:

> "We are of opinion that the court below was right in deciding that the goods were not in transit, but * * had reached their destination at Memphis, and were there held in store * * to be sold and delivered as contracts for that purpose were completely consummated * * * * *. The other propositions pressed upon our attention require consideration. They relate two subjects: First, the asserted want of power of the state of Tennessee to tax because the goods were imported from another state, and were yet, it is contended, in the original packages;"

(It will not be necessary to state the second point discussed by Mr. Justice White in his opinion.)

On the first point considered by the court it was held that cases like Brown v. Houston, supra, were not overruled by cases like Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, in which the "original package" doctrine had been applied to the exercise of the police power of the state. The distinction was pointed out and it was held that while the state may not prohibit, regulate or otherwise interfere with the sale of goods imported from another state while they remain in the original package of transportation and are offered for sale by the importer, yet the state may tax goods while in the original package as property in the state. In other words, while the courts do not express it in this fashion, commerce possesses at least two aspects, viz., transportation and sale. The question as to the right to tax goods as property depends upon whether or not transportation has begun or ceased; but the question as to the right to prohibit sale or possibly the right to tax sales as such or the business of selling depends upon whether or not the sale, which is the incident of the interstate commerce involved, has been consummated.

The court did not in the case last discussed comment upon a fact as found by the lower court, that in most cases at least the contracts for sale of the goods therein involved were not completed until the goods had arrived at the distributing point in Tennessee. We are, therefore, left in doubt by this decision as to whether the result on the main question in which we are interested, respecting the end of the interstate transit, would have been different if some of the goods held in the warehouses had been sold prior to their delivery at the warehouse under complete contracts specifying quality as well as kind and quantity of goods to be delivered.

In General Oil Company v. Crain, supra, the facts were as follows:

The plaintiff, a Pennsylvania corporation with its principal place of business at Memphis, Tenn., was engaged in the manufacture and sale of illuminating oils. Its wells and refining and manufacturing plants were located in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Memphis was a distributing point from which sales were made and at which large receptacles for oil of various kinds were kept. It was customary for the plaintiff to ship oils from its refineries to Memphis by rail in tank cars, and there to unload the contents of the cars into the other receptacles mentioned. It was shown that for each kind of oil dealt in by the plaintiff it maintained at Memphis two tanks, one plainly and conspicuously marked "oil already sold in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi," and the other marked "oil to be sold in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi." The contents of the first remained in Tennessee only long enough (a few days) to be properly distributed, placed in smaller tanks, barrels and other receptacles and shipped according to the orders therefor. The oil in the other tank remained in Tennessee until required to supply orders from customers and was never sold except upon receipt of such orders. In short then, oil already sold and oil yet to be sold would come down to the point of distribution indiscriminately, and, of course, of necessity commingled in a single fluid mass in the tank cars and would be distributed and otherwise subsequently dealt with upon its receipt in Memphis. Plaintiff sold no oil at all in Tennessee from either of the two kinds of tanks mentioned.

The defendant was an inspector of oils, and the object of the suit was to restrain him from inspecting the oil in either of the two kinds of tanks above described. The court cited Coe v. Errol, Brown v. Houston, Coal Company v. Bates, Diamond Match Company v. Ontonagon and Kelley v. Rhoads, supra, as well as certain state cases which were followed and approved, among them State v. Engle, 34 N. J. L. 425, in affirming the lower court's decision denying the injunction. The New Jersey case cited having held that coal mined in Pennsylvania and sent by rail to a point in New Jersey where it was deposited on a wharf for separation and assortment, for the purpose of further transportation and not for sale, was not subject to taxation in New Jersey, was relied on for the purpose of establishing a principle approved by the supreme court of the United States and quoted from the decision of the state court as follows:

> "Delay within the state, which is no longer than is necessary for the convenience of transshipment for its transportation to its destination, will not make it property within the state for the purpose of taxation."

This principle, while recognized, was held not applicable to the facts in the case then at bar for the following reasons (per Mr. Justice McKenna at page 229 et seq.):

> "Its oil was not in movement through the state. It had reached the destination of its first shipment, and it was held there, not in necessary delay or accommodation to the means of transportation, as in State v. Engle, supra, but for the business purposes and profit of the company. It was only there for distribution, it is said, to fulfill orders already received. But to do this required that the property be given a locality in the state beyond a mere halting in its transportation. It required storage there—the maintenance of the means of storage; of putting it in and taking it from storage. The bill takes pains to allege this. (Here was quoted an excerpt from the bill of complaint showing that for its own purposes the oil company found it convenient to store and reload the oil at Memphis.)
> "This certainly describes a business—describes a purpose for which the oil is taken from transportation, brought to rest in the state, and for which the protection of the state is necessary—a purpose outside of the mere transportation of the oil. The case, therefore, comes under the principle announced in American Steel Company v. Speed (supra)."

Mr. Justice Moody, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Holmes, dissented on the ground that the doctrine of the American Steel and Wire Company v. Speed should not be carried forward, as it had been by the majority of the court, and applied to a case where the goods had been completely sold prior to their receipt at the distributing point. It is clear, therefore, that the question left unsettled by the decision in American Steel & Wire Company v. Speed was necessarily involved in General Oil Company v. Crain, and that it was decided in favor of the state.

In Bacon v. Illinois, supra, the facts were as follows:

The original defendant, Bacon, was sued for the recovery of a tax on grain owned by him and stored in an elevator belonging to him in the city of Chicago. An agreed statement of facts disclosed that all of the grain had been shipped by its original owners, who were residents of western and southern states, under contracts for its transportation, to New York, Pennsylvania and other eastern states, which reserved the right to the owners of the grain to remove said grain from the cars of the railroad companies "for the mere temporary purposes of inspecting, weighing, cleaning, clipping, drying, sacking, grading and mixing, or changing the ownership, consignee or destination" thereof. While the grain was in transit it was purchased by Bacon who was represented at the points of destination by agents through whom he disposed of grain and other commodities in eastern markets. He had purchased the grain in question solely for the purpose of selling it in the eastern markets and with the intention of forwarding it according to the shipping contracts. In removing the grain to his private elevator he was merely exercising the reserved right of the owner of the grain under the shipping contract, and it was agreed that the grain remained in the elevator only for such time as was reasonably necessary for the purposes above mentioned, and that immediately after these had been accomplished it was turned over to the railroad companies and was forwarded by them to the eastern cities in accordance with the original contracts of transportation which had been made with the railroad companies themselves. In other words, while the grain was stored in the elevator it was, so to speak, subject to contract for further interstate transportation. The supreme court of the United States, per Mr. Justice Hughes, sustained the imposition of the local tax. The following language appears in the opinion:

> "Neither the fact that the grain had come from outside the state nor the intention of the owner to send it to another state, and there to dispose of it can be deemed controlling when the taxing power of the state of Illinois is concerned. The property was held by the plaintiff in error in Chicago for his own purposes and with full power of disposition. It was not being actually transported, and was not held by carriers for transportation. The plaintiff in error had withdrawn it from the carriers. The purpose of the withdrawal did not alter the fact that it had ceased to be transported and had been placed in his hands. He had the privilege of continuing the transportation under the shipping contracts, but of this he might avail himself or not as he chose. He might sell the grain in Illinois or forward it as he saw fit. It was his possession with the control of absolute ownership. * * He had established a local facility in Chicago for his own benefit and while, through its employment, the grain was there at rest, there was no reason why it should not be included with his other property within the state in an assessment for taxation which was made in the usual way without discrimination."

It will be observed that thus far Bacon v. Illinois is the culmination of the line of cases involving (with the exception of General Oil Company v. Grain, supra), the right of the state to impose a property tax upon goods which are in some manner or other impressed with the character of subjects of interstate commerce. The rule to be gathered from all of these decisions then may be stated as follows:

Property is subject to local or state taxation though it has been in interstate commerce and is in the state by reason of interstate commercial dealings when its interstate transit is ended and it has come to rest in the state. Property has come to rest in the state when it has reached its final destination and is here held for purposes of sale, or when though it has not yet reached its final destination, it is detained in the possession of its owner at a place of distribution or transshipment and there commingled with other property of like kind or otherwise held for a purpose beneficial to the owner and beyond the mere necessities of transportation itself. But unless the interstate journey as originally contemplated is ended, the mere accumulation or delay at the place of transshipment, when such transshipment and such accumulation and such delay all result from the mere necessities of transportation, and it appears that nothing is detained or allowed to accumulate but what is to go forward as rapidly as the facilities of transportation permit, and when the accumulation or detention serves no purpose useful to the owner of the goods but merely accommodates the convenience and necessities of the transporting agencies, the goods are not at rest but are regarded as in transit until the end of their originally contemplated journey.

If these cases furnish the rule for the determination of the question as to what constitutes the business of transporting interstate commerce for the purpose of privilege taxes, an answer to your first three questions may, upon certain assumptions which must be made, be approximated. As I have stated, I believe that these cases do furnish such a rule. I base my conclusion upon this point on the fact that these property tax cases have been cited in the rate and regulation cases, where sole question involved was the character of the act of the transporting agency. Thus, in Gulf, etc., Railroad Company v. Texas, supra, Coe v. Errol, supra, was cited as embodying a rule applicable to the determination of the question then before the court. The same is true of Southern Pacific Terminal Railway Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, supra; Railroad Company v. Worthington, supra; Texas, etc., Railroad Company v. Sabine Tram Company. Indeed, while the question is as to the nature of the act of transportation, it seems to me that if the interstate transportation has ceased for one purpose, it must necessarily be held to have ceased for all other purposes. To hold the test applicable throughout the whole field, does not conflict with decisions like Leisy v. Hardin, or any other application of the so-called "original package" doctrine; for those cases deal with the right of the state to burden the selling aspect of interstate commerce, while your questions require consideration only of the transportation side, so to speak, of that commerce. The rule then may be applied in the solution of your questions, as follows:

You first inquire whether the transportation by the railroad company is intrastate or interstate under the following conditions:

> "1. The owner of the ore transports same in his own vessels to the terminals of certain railroads on lake points within this state. It is then delivered to the railroad company for transportation to some point within this state."

If the delivery to the railroad company from the vessels of the owner of the ore is direct, and there is no accumulation of the ore in the possession of the owner thereof, this transaction constitutes interstate commerce transportation on the part of the railroad company. The owner's ownership of the vessels and the transshipment of the ore at the lower lake port and the journey itself for the first time on a commercial bill of lading are alike immaterial. The journey would appear to be a continuous interstate journey upon the facts as you state them. However, it is a matter of common knowledge and one, too, which has been the subject of investigation by this department, that the case as I have put it is one which very seldom, if ever, occurs. I understand that ore from the Minnesota and Michigan mines is transported during the period of open navigation to lower lake ports and there laid on docks in piles. These docks, in many instances, belong to the railroad companies, but it is possible that some of them may belong to dealers in ore. The piles are graded with respect to the kind and quality of ore. The railroad company theoretically takes away from the pile in twelve months what is brought to it in six months, but in fact it is often true that the amount brought down by the boats during the period of navigation is greater than the amount required to supply the mills during the year of their operation, as in Diamond Match Company v. Ontonagon, supra. It may be that all ore of a certain quality received on a certain dock is put into a given pile whether a given boat load of ore, which is there placed, has been sold or not, and whether the ore is supposed to be destined for Ohio points or for points outside of Ohio. In other words, the ore docks are like the oil tanks in General Oil Company v. Crain, supra, and like the elevator in Bacon v. Illinois, supra, excepting possibly that the railroad companies are the owners of the ore docks. This fact would not, however, in my opinion, be material. If it should appear that there was no separation of ore for various destinations on the docks, and that the amount of ore received by the railroad company during the period of navigation and held for further shipment, does not correspond to the needs of the mills during the year of ordinary railroad transportation, I should think that under those circumstances the railroad companies, though the owners of the docks, would occupy a position corresponding to that of the transfer company in American Steel & Wire Company v. Speed, supra.

If the commission then should find the fact to be that all are belonging to a given owner is piled indiscriminately on docks at the lower lake ports in Ohio with other ore of like quality, and that the amount thereof, so piled in a given year, is in excess of the amount destined ab initio for specific points below the lower lake ports, then it would appear that such storage or accumulation of ore on the dock, though accounted for in a large part, indeed perhaps almost entirely by the necessities of transportation, is also due in some part to the requirements of the owner's convenience. If it should appear that the owner of the ore actually exercises dominion and control over the same while it is on docks, so that he is at liberty to take from the common mass any quantity of ore which he may desire and sell it after it reaches the docks, then I would be of the opinion that the ore is at rest in Ohio, and that any subsequent movement of it is an independent transit as related to the water transportation; so that if such subsequent movement is wholly within the state of Ohio, it would constitute intrastate commerce.

The conditions as described in your second question are as follows:

> "2. The owner of the ore charters a vessel and transports the ore in the same manner as above set out in paragraph 1."

This question must be answered in the same manner as your first question has been answered, namely, upon the facts stated without any other circumstances in the case and assuming an immediate transshipment of the ore at the lower lake ports and its delivery to the railroads, or rather the transshipment and delivery as immediate as the necessities of the transportation, and such necessities alone, dictate, the carriage by rail is interstate in character; otherwise, and especially if the ore is placed upon a dock in a pile with other ore of like quality, sold and unsold, the journey has been interrupted and the railroad transportation is intrastate.

Your third set of conditions is as follows:

"3. Ore is carried by independent vessels to said lake points and then reshipped to points within this state under new and separate billing."

This question must be answered in the same way as your first and second questions have been answered. The reshipment under new and separate bills of lading is a fact which of itself is entitled to no weight, upon the authorities above cited.

Your fourth question may be answered positively. If the ore is not sold until it reaches the docks, the transportation thereof subsequent to the sale is undoubtedly intrastate commerce. This is true because the first journey of the ore, noticed for the purposes of this opinion, namely, the water transportation thereof, must necessarily have been terminated at the lower lake port and the ore held there for the purpose of sale. This case comes squarely within Brown v. Houston, supra, as well as the principles of Gulf, etc., Railroad Company v. Texas, supra, and there is no question in my mind as to the character of such transportation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—NO APPROPRIATION TO PAY CLAIM OF W. C. MORSE—LOCATION AND AVAILABILITY OF ROAD MATERIAL IN OHIO—REPORT.

The state highway department has no appropriation available for the payment of a claim presented by Professor W. C. Morse.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your communication of December 27, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

"Under a former administration, Professor W. C. Morse was employed to make an examination and compile a report in writing on the location and availability of road material in Ohio. The report was completed under my administration. It represents a great amount of labor and has not been paid for.

"Mr. Morse has rendered a bill to the department to the amount of $50.00, in full and final payment for his work. He reports that the amount claimed represents only a fraction of the time necessary to complete the report, and which I have no doubt is correct on examining the amount of work entailed in compiling this report.

"I would respectfully request an opinion from you as to whether I have a right to pay Mr. Morse for his services; and, if so, from what funds should it be taken?"

From an examination of the files of your office, it appears that Professor Morse's claim is that he was asked by the state highway department to investigate the road materials of Ohio, and was engaged during the summers of 1912 and 1913 in field work. Since that time he has been engaged in the preparation of a report covering the road materials of the state, this report being based on his field work and tests of samples collected by him. There seems to be no written evidence of his appointment or employment and the arrangement with him seems to have been an oral one made by Deputy Highway Commissioner Shoemaker. His claim is that he was paid $150.00 per month and expenses for his field work, and that he was to receive $100.00 per month for a period of not more than nine months for the preparation of his report. He states that when he saw the work would extend beyond the nine-month period, he asked the chief clerk of the highway department to withhold the last half of his last month's salary, amounting to $50.00, until such time as the report might be finished. It is this last half month's salary that he now claims.

A reference to the acts of the general assembly of Ohio, making appropriations for your department during the four years prior to February 15, 1915, shows that an expenditure of this character was at that time authorized and an appropriation made to meet the expense of work of the character performed by Professor Morse. The various appropriation measures found in volumes 102 and 103 of the Ohio laws, carry items for contingent expenses of the state highway department and also appropriations for equipping and operating a laboratory for testing road building materials and for services and expenses in collecting samples of such materials.

It is unnecessary to refer specifically to the various items of this character at the present time, for the reason that all of these appropriations have now lapsed. It is also unnecessary to determine whether Professor Morse's position comes under any of the appropriations for the use of your department for personal service carried by house bill No. 701, 106 O. L., 666, for the reason, as I understand the situation, that all of the positions provided for by that act have been continuously filled by other persons during the time that Professor Morse has been completing his work and disbursement has been made accordingly. I have no reason to doubt the correctness of Professor Morse's statements, and indeed they are borne out by correspondence on file in your office, but for the reasons pointed out in opinion No. 1149 of this department, rendered to you on January 5, 1916, I advise you that none of the current appropriations for your department are available for the payment of the claim submitted by Professor Morse.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.
