In coming to the conclusion which I have just stated, I am not in the least unmindful of the opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to the state civil service commission, under date of December 22, 1914, wherein he held that persons employed in the liquidating department of the state banking department are subject to the provisions of the civil service act. I cannot, however, reach the same conclusions that he did.

Since the employes of the superintendent of banks in the liquidation of a given bank are not within the classified service of the state civil service, I am of the opinion that if the superintendent of banks appoints a bank examiner or an office clerk to serve him in the liquidation of a particular bank, he may do so, and, subject to the approval of the common pleas court, fix the compensation of said persons at a different rate than they were receiving as bank examiner or as office clerk in the department of the suprintendent of banks.

You next inquire:

> "(2) May an examiner who has been appointed and his salary fixed under section 712 and 713, G. C., be appointed a special deputy superintendent of banks and, if so, may he draw a greater salary than that fixed under section 713, G. C.?"

In my answer to your first question, I have advised you that, in my opinion, the employes of the superintendent of banks in the liquidation of a given bank are not within the purview of the state civil service act.

Even if they were within the purview of such act, nevertheless a special deputy superintendent of banks, appointed under the provisions of section 742-2, G. C., would not be within the classified service of the state civil service.

Section 742-2, G. C. (103 O. L., 530), provides in part as follows:

> "* * * The superintendent of banks may under his hand and official seal appoint one or more special deputy superintendents of banks as agent or agents, to assist him in the duty of liquidation and distribution, a certificate of appointment to be filed in the office of superintendent of banks and a certified copy in the office of the clerk of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located. * * *"

Section 486-8, G. C. (being section 8 of the civil service act), 103 O. L., 701, divides the civil service of the state into unclassified and classified service. Under the division of unclassified service, subsection 8 thereof, provides as follows:

> "The deputies of elective or principal executive officers authorized by law to act generally for and in place of their principals and holding a fiduciary relation to such principals."

It has heretofore been determined that it is not necessary that a deputy act for the principal in all matters, but that insofar as he does act, he shall act generally for his superior, and I am of the opinion that the special deputy superintendent of banks appointed under the provisions of section 742-2, G. C., is, in all respects, a deputy under the provisions of subsection 8 of division "a" of section 486-8, G. C., and, therefore, that a bank examiner may be appointed a special deputy superintendent of banks and receive a different salary than he received as bank examiner.

You next inquire:

> "(3) If an examiner is appointed as special deputy superintendent, does it nullify his appointment under section 712, G. C., or may he hold both titles at the same time—not drawing pay under both titles at the same time—but interchangeably as he may be employed in the different capacities?"

Under section 7 of the civil service act (section 486-7 of the General Code) the state civil service commission shall "prescribe, amend and enforce rules for carrying into effect section 10 of article XV of the constitution of Ohio, and the provisions of this act, and such rules shall have the force and effect of law."

Section 9 of the civil service act (section 486-9 of the General Code) requires the commission to put into effect rules for various subjects, among which is "lay-offs."

In pursuance of the authority granted by the above sections, the civil service commission adopted rules and regulations, and under regulation IV, section 7, provided relative to leave of absence. Said regulation is to the following effect:

> "(7) Leave of Absence. Leave of absence from duty shall in no case be granted to an officer or employe who has been in the service for less than three months immediately preceding his time of leave, except in case of sickness or disability, in which case application for extended leave shall be accompanied by such proof as the commission may require, and such leave shall be granted only upon the approval of the commission. Leave of absence shall not be extended unless application therefor be made prior to the expiration thereof, and no such leave, extension or continuation, whether continuous or not, shall exceed one year, except as herein provided.
> "The head of the department may, with the approval of the civil service commission, grant leave of absence from regular duty upon written application made to him by such subordinate officer or employe within his department. The application shall be reported immediately to the civil service commission, and the commission shall approve such leave for the following purposes and reasons, and not otherwise:
> " '(a) Where leave is requested to enable an officer or employe to take any elective or appointive position in the civil service exempted from the classified service by section 8 of the civil service act, the same may be granted for periods of one year, and during the actual service of such officer or employe in such position.'
> " '(b) Where leave of absence is requested because of disability or injury received in the performance of duty, and not due to the negligence of the officer or employe himself, the same being recommended by the head of the department.'
> " '(c) Where leave of absence is requested because of some special reason other than those above enumerated; and is recommended by the head of the department concerned; provided, that no such leave shall be granted for a period to exceed one year."

In view of such regulation, I am of the opinion that when the superintendent of banks appointed a state bank examiner as a special deputy superintendent in charge of the liquidation of a particular bank, he must necessarily be presumed to have granted to such state bank examiner a leave of absence from his duties as bank examiner, and under paragraph "a" thereof, the right so to do is for periods of one year.

When the state civil service commission had presented to it a payroll containing the name of the person who was designated as bank examiner, and it appears that the period of time as shown by such payroll during which he served was not for the complete period of time covered by the payroll, and the civil service commission placed its certificate on such payroll, such act must be held to have been an approval by the civil service commission of the granting of the leave of absence by the superintendent of banks to the state bank examiner from regular duty as such state bank examiner.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the appointment of an examiner as special-deputy superintendent in the liquidation of a particular bank does not nullify his appointment as bank examiner, but that his appointment as special deputy superintendent would, in effect, be the granting of a leave of absence to such bank examiner during the time he acted as such special deputy superintendent. However, the head of each department should always first obtain the approval of the state civil service commission on granting a leave of absence from regular duty to an employe in the classified service.

In your fourth question you inquire as follows:

> "(4) If the court fails to allow the salary and expense of an examiner or office clerk, assigned to duty in the liquidation of a bank, may the amount so rejected be paid out of the state treasury and, if not, who is liable for the amount?"

The answer to your fourth question has already been given you in another opinion. However, I would again state that the amount which the court has failed to allow, cannot be paid out of the state treasury, and the employe who has received such amount should be the primary party to restore the same to the state treasury.

You next inquire:

> "(5) If a liquidating agent sells real or personal property or sells or compounds doubtful debts without an order of the court, what finding should be made in the premises?"

Section 742-2 (103 O. L., 530) provides in part as follows:

> "* * * The superintendent of banks shall collect all debts due and claims belonging to it and upon the order of the common pleas court in and for the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society, or association was located may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and on like order may sell all the real estate and personal property of such corporation, company, society or association, on such terms as the court shall direct; and the superintendent of banks, upon the terms of sale or compromise, directed by the court, shall execute and deliver to the purchaser of such real or personal property, such deeds or instrument as shall be necessary to evidence the passing of the title; * * *"

It would appear, therefore, that only upon the order of the common pleas court of the county in which the office of the bank is located, may the superintendent sell or compound bad or doubtful debts or sell any real estate or personal property. If he attempts to sell any real or personal property, or compound doubtful debts without such an order, he is without authority so to do, and any sale so made by him would not, as I see it, pass title to the property in question.

The obtaining of the order of the common pleas court is jurisdictional as to his right to proceed to sell real or personal property, or sell or compound doubtful debts.

In your sixth question you inquire as follows:

> "(6) If the liquidating agent closes up the affairs of a bank without submitting the expense of said liquidation to the proper court for approval, what finding should be made in the premises?"

The answer to your sixth question has already been given you in another opinion.

You next inquire:

> "(7) If no record of the approval of the governor of appointments and salaries can be found in the office of the superintendent of banks, or in the executive office, what finding should be made in the premises?"

I have been informed that since you have submitted your request for an opinion on the above question the records have been found. Consequently, I do not answer such question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY—MAY AFTER A LAW HAS BEEN SIGNED BY THE GOVERNOR AND DURING THE NINETY DAYS PERIOD OF SUSPENSION PROVIDED BY THE CONSTITUTION, BUT BEFORE A REFERENDUM HAS BEEN ORDERED THEREON, AMEND SUCH A LAW.

The general assembly may, after a law has been signed by the governor, and during the ninety days period of suspension provided by the constitution, but before a referendum has been ordered thereon, amend such a law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK C. PARRETT, Chairman Taxation Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You submitted to me a draft of a proposed bill to amend section 32 of what is known as the "Parrett-Whittemore bill," which has been passed by the general assembly and is now in the hands of the governor.

The only question which I have considered is as to whether or not, if the governor signs what may be termed the "main bill," the general assembly may, within the referendum period provided by the constitution, amend a section of that bill.

This interesting question invites extended discussion, but such discussion is prevented by the limitations of time and space.

Under the initiative and referendum provisions of the constitution, a measure that has passed both houses of the general assembly, and has been signed by the governor, is referred to as a "law," and its status by the express provisions of the constitution is, so to speak, one of suspended animation. It is a law, but it does not go into effect for a period of ninety days, nor thereafter, if a referendum is ordered, until the electors have approved it at a general election.

During the referendum period, and at least before the people have asserted their reserved right to order a referendum and thus become a part of the legislative machinery of the state, such a measure is a complete law—a legislative act in every sense of the word. Laws are often passed so as not to go into effect for a considerable period after the date of their passage, even when constitutional restrictions do not intervene; and in states where the initative and referendum does not prevail there are to be found constitutional provisions postponing the effectiveness of all ordinary laws to a date considerably subsequent to that of their passage. I do not find that the power of the legislature under either a voluntary or a compulsory suspension of this sort to amend or repeal a law in this condition has ever been questioned.

For the reason, then, that until a referendum has actually been ordered a law, the effectiveness of which is suspended by force of the constitution, is none the less a "law," I am of the opinion that until a referendum is ordered and after the law is approved by the governor it may be amended by the general assembly.

I may add that I have no criticism of the form of the bill which has been submitted to me.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS—EFFECT OF REFUNDING THOSE ISSUED PRIOR TO TAKING EFFECT OF AMENDED HOUSE BILL No. 414 BY REMOVING TAX LIMITATIONS AS TO SUCH REFUNDING BONDS—EFFECT OF RE-ENACTMENT OF SECTION 5649-2, G. C.—EFFECT OF AMENDMENT ON TEN MILL LIMITATION.

Section 3941, G. C., as amended by house bill No. 414 is ambiguous.

A provision that bonds may be issued to refund certificates of indebtedness issued prior to the taking effect of the bill, and removing tax and debt limitations as to such refunding bonds, opens the door for a municipality during the referendum period to issue a large amount of such certificates of indebtedness, and thus to incur indebtedness without restraint.

The re-enactment of section 5649-2 of the Smith law, imposing the ten mill limitation without excepting levies authorized to be made outside of such limitation by laws passed since June 2, 1911, and prior to the passage of the pending bill, would have the effect of bringing such levies within such limitation.

The amendment of said section 5649-2, made by the bill, has the effect of taking all interest and sinking fund levies outside of the ten mill limitation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. A. R. GARVER, Chairman Senate Taxation Committee, Eighty-First General Assembly, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have left with me for my inspection and opinion amended house bill No. 414.

In regard to the same I beg to submit the following:

The amendment to section 3941, General Code, is seemingly an effort to simplify the Longworth law by putting the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations in one section instead of in three, as they are in the law itself.

It is feared that confusion will result from the language of this section as proposed to be amended, taken in connection with the remainder of the act as it is to be amended. Formerly, there was a one per cent. limit applicable to the amount of bonds that might be issued in any one year, and a two and one-half per cent. limit on the total amount of bonds that might be outstanding at any one time, both without a vote of the people and a five per cent. limit on the amount that might be outstanding at any one time, including bonds issued by a vote of the people. Other amendments in this bill prohibit the issuance of any bonds without a vote of the people, with certain exceptions. Amended section 3941 does not make it clear whether the two and one-half per cent. limit is to apply to bonds issued by a vote of the people or not. Formerly, as already stated, this limitation did not apply to such bonds.

As a matter of interpretation, the intention of the draftsman of this section can be ascertained, because the two and one-half per cent. limitation is upon the indebtedness incurred by the council, while the five per cent. limitation is upon the indebtedness incurred by a municipal corporation. Possibly this distinction makes the section clear enough for practical purposes, but it occurred to me that it might be made a good deal clearer than it is.

The amendment to section 3942 radically changes the scope and effect of that section. Formerly, any bond issue could be submitted to a vote of the people, and any bond issue had to be submitted to a vote of the people when the one per cent. or two and one-half per cent. limitations were reached. Under the amendment, however, the rule is that all bond issues must be submitted to a vote of the people with certain exceptions therein provided for. This, it is believed, is a good move, as it wi l prevent the council of municipalities from putting over a big bond issue without a vote of the people. The limit is $75,000. The other exceptions are of bonds like the Bense act bonds, refunding bonds, mortgage bonds, special assessment bonds, emergency bonds, etc., that ought to be outside of these limitations.

The proviso, beginning at the bottom of page two of the bill, makes a hole in the Smith law, and the Longworth law too, in that it gives a municipality the power to refund certificates of indebtedness "issued prior to the taking effect of this act," without regard to any limitations, and without a vote of the people. This is vague, in that it does not on its face apply to bonds as well as certificates of indebtedness, and the question will be raised as to its application here. It is dangerous, in that it will permit a city between the date of the passage of the act and the time it takes effect, viz.: ninety days, to issue a large amount of certificates of indebtedness upon the amount of which there is no limitation, and then, by refunding, to get the levies outside the Smith law limitations and the bonds outside the Longworth law limitations. This proviso is probably intended for the benefit of the city of Cleveland, which has been issuing certificates of indebtedness until it is unable to provide for their payment under the Smith law. Some relief to Cleveland and other such cities may be necessary, but the date fixed should be in the past and not in the future, so as to prevent the cities from taking advantage in an unfair way of the referendum period.

The amendments to section 3949 are entirely proper. The first one, which affects paragraph "e," is restrictive. Paragraphs "g" and "h," which are new, are not open to criticism. The first of these obviates a decision of the court of appeals of the sixth district in the Cuyahoga Falls case, to which the attention of this department has already been called. The second one takes mortgage bonds out of the Longworth act, although as a matter of fact I do not think they could have been regarded as within the limitations of the Longworth act in any event. In this view of the case paragraph "h" is unnecessary, but harmless.

The re-enactment of section 5649-2, without change, other than that made at the end of it, would have the effect of bringing into the ten mill limitation quite a number of levies which were never intended to be within that limitation. I refer to levies provided for by laws passed since June 2, 1911, and prior to the passage of the bill now under consideration, and which by those laws were expressly taken out of the ten mill limitation. Unless the legislature wants to bring these levies back into the ten mill limitation again, there should be some sort of a saving clause, or else the question will be raised as to whether or not this amendment of section 5649-2, being the last in point of time, will not be inconsistent with these intermediate laws.

A shining example of a law of this kind is the Hite road law, which, if section 5649-2 of this bill is enacted into a law, might very well be held to be brought within the ten mill limitation.

The amendment which is made to section 5649-2 knocks another hole in the Smith law, in that it takes all sinking fund and interest levies outside of the ten mill limitation, whereas under the original Smith law and its previous amendments only those levies which were necessary to provide for indebtedness incurred prior to June 2, 1911, or thereafter, by a vote of the people, were exempt from taxation.

We prepared for you, for use in your bill restoring the amount limitation of the Smith one per cent. law, a revised form of section 5649-2, which, with the amount limitations stricken therefrom, would be the proper solution of the difficulty of drafting that section so as to amend it in any material particular now without affecting the status of levies, authorized by what might be termed "intervening" legislation, and intended to be outside of the ten mill limitation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF AMENDED SENATE BILL No. 220 UPON THE SMITH ONE PER CENT. TAX LIMITATIONS.

Where a section providing for a tax levy is so amended as to create new levying power, a provision therein that the levies therein provided for shall be "in addition to all other taxes authorized by law," probably has the effect of removing, as to such levies, all tax limitations created by previously enacted laws, although the language in question was in the original section which was passed before the law creating the general tax limitation became effective.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to examine amended senate bill No. 220, passed by both houses of the general assembly.

The general purpose of this bill is to grant authority to townships and municipal corporations to issue bonds for their respective shares of a joint improvement made under agreement with the county commissioners.

Under some of the laws affected by the bill there is no real necessity for such legislation, because such laws already provide for the issuance of bonds by the county commissioners to pay the total cost of the improvement, and the making of tax levies by the commissioners upon the property of the township or municipality to pay the share assumed by such township or municipality. There can be no vital objection, however, to the policy of having the borrowing power lodged where the levying power ought to be lodged, viz.: in the officers of the township or municipality.

You direct my attention particularly to the curative provision found in amended section 3295. The general assembly has special power to enact such legislation under the constitution, and I can see but one objection to the form of this provision, namely: it assumes to validate all bonds issued for the purpose therein specified without reference to whether the provisions of law applicable generally to the issuance of bonds by township trustees have been complied with or not. Strictly speaking, it might be better to have the clause limited to the curing of such defects in the bonds of which it speaks as arise out of the fact that the township trustees lack general authority to issue such bonds. However, this is the effect that most likely will be given to the provision by the courts should any question arise, and as the bill has been passed, I do not feel that the objection is vital. At any rate, this provision is clearly severable from the remainder of the section in which it is found and from the remainder of the bill, so that if the curative provision should be held to be unconstitutional, the remaining provisions of the bill, should it become a law, would not be affected by such a holding.

You also direct my attention to the tax limitation provisions of the bill. You refer here to the provision of section 6912-1, as amended, to the effect that the levies therein authorized to be made shall be "in addition to all other taxes authorized by law."

The question as to whether or not this language, as it appears in the amended section, would have the effect of placing these levies outside of all the limitations of the Smith law is a close one. In a recent case (not yet in the official reports), it was held that when the legislature in 1913 passed the Kilpatrick act, amending section 5649-2 of the Smith law, and left a part of the section unchanged, the words denoting time in such unchanged portion continued to have the significance which they had in the original section; so that this part of the section still continues to refer to the date of the passage of the original Smith law instead of to the date of the passage or effectiveness of the Kilpatrick law.

I doubt seriously whether the principles underlying that decision could be applied so as to keep the levies authorized by amended section 6912-1 within the limitations of the Smith law. The cases are not parallel, for two reasons:

In the first place, the particular words interpreted in the case which I have described, related to time and fixed a specific date, whereas the phrase "authorized by law" does not necessarily refer to the law in existence at a given time.

In the second place, it cannot be said that the clause in which the language to be interpreted appears is the same in amended section 6912-1 as it was in the original section bearing that number.

As I have pointed out, the fact that a part of original section 5649-2 was unchanged by the Kilpatrick law was one of the grounds of the decision in the case which I have mentioned. Now, in the case of section 6912-1, as amended by the bill, the clause in question has been changed by inserting the words "and village council," that is, as to villages, an entirely new levying power has been created.

It is to be observed that there is no qualification of the phrase "in addition to all other taxes authorized by law." If there were any such qualifying phrase, as "for county, township or municipal purposes," or words of like import, the conclusion might be reached that the taxes therein authorized were to be merely in addition to the ordinary local taxes, but within the limitations upon the aggregate amount of all taxes; but in the absence of such qualifying language I incline strongly to the belief that the amendment can be given but one meaning, namely, that the two mill tax levy therein authorized is to be outside of all limitations.

In connection with this subject, I call attention to the views expressed by Governor Harmon in his message to the general assembly, vetoing certain provisions of the state highway law of 1911, the message being found in 102 Ohio laws, 349. It is true that the language which Governor Harmon found objectionable as violating the principles of the Smith Law was more explicit than the language which I have considered, but it seems clear to me that even if the clause, "notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force," had been eliminated from the sections to which Governor Harmon called attention, he would have found the same fault with them.

For the foregoing reasons I cannot say less of section 6912-1 than that it raises a very serious question relative to its effect upon the Smith law limitations.

Another objection to amend section 6912-1 lies in the fact that if, acting under its provisions, the county commissioners issue bonds to pay the entire estimated cost and expense of the improvement, then the levies to pay the respective shares of the township and village must be made, not by the commissioners who issued the bonds, but by the local taxing authorities of the township or village. In that event there would be no one tax duplicate pledged to the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon. Such a situation would raise a legal question under article XII, section 11 of the constitution, as amended, and a very practical question as to the marketability of the bonds.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL No. 438—DOUBLE NEGATIVE IN SAME RENDERS BILL INOPERATIVE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: In re house bill No. 438, which you have submitted to me.

I am of the opinion that a portion of this bill is rendered inoperative by the use of a double negative in the third clause thereof.

I have called the attention of Senator Moore and Mr. Platt to the same and they have stated to me in a letter from Senator Moore that they believe the best course to be pursued is to have the bill vetoed and passed again with the necessary corrections. House bill No. 438 returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CHILDREN'S HOME—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS HAVE NO AUTHORITY TO MAKE CONTRACT WITH TRUSTEES OF A CHILDREN'S HOME OF ANOTHER COUNTY WHERE NO HOME IS MAINTAINED IN A COUNTY, UNLESS SUCH HOME HAS CERTIFICATE FROM STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES—PAYMENTS UNDER SUCH ILLEGAL CONTRACTS MAY BE ENJOINED.

The commissioners of a county having no children's home, are not authorized to enter into a contract with the trustees of a children's home of another county, for the admission and care of children of their county who become proper subjects for admission to such a home, unless such children's home has received a certificate of qualification from the state board of charities as prescribed by law.

Such a contract with a home not having the required certificate being illegal, payments of money from the county treasurer pursuant thereto, may be enjoined, and it is the duty of the auditor upon notice of such facts to refuse to issue his warrant for such payments.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 9th, you submitted to me for written opinion thereon the following inquiry to wit:

> "Under the provisions of section 1352-1 of the General Code, as enacted April 28, 1915, the board of state charities has not deemed it proper to certify a certain county children's home as suitable in its management for the reception of dependent children. The trustees of this home, as well as the juvenile court in that county have been notified of the action of the board.
> "We are now advised that negotiations are under way between the county commissioners of an adjoining county in which there is no children's home to make a contract for the care of dependent children of the latter county in the home which we have not certified. I desire your advice on the following:
> "Can such a contract under the above circumstances be entered into legally?
> "If the contract is made, would the auditor of the second county have any legal right to pay the trustees of the uncertified home for the care of children under the terms of the contract?"

The sections of the statutes applicable to your inquiry are found in the chapters of the General Code entitled "Board of State Charities" sections 1349 et seq., and "Children's Homes" sections 3070 et seq., and the amendments thereto in the act of 1913, 103 O. L., 864.

The sections being somewhat lengthy, only the language most directly in point is quoted.

Section 3089, G. C., 103 O. L., page 890, provides in part:

> "The home shall be an asylum for children under the age of eighteen years, of sound mind and not morally vicious and free from infectious or contagious diseases, who have resided in the county not less than one year, and for such other children under such age from other counties in the state where there is no home, as the trustees of such home and the persons or authority having the custody and control of such children, by contract agree upon, who are, in the opinion of the trustees, suitable children for admission by reason of orphanage, abandonment or neglect by parents, or inability of parents to provide for them. * * *"

Section 3090, G. C., 103 O. L., 890, provides in part:

"They shall be admitted by the superintendent on the order of the juvenile court or of a majority of such trustees. * * *"

Section 3092, G. C., 103 O. L., 891, provides in part:

"In any county where such home has not already been provided, the board of commissioners shall make temporary provisions for destitute children by transferring them to the nearest children's home where they can be received and kept at the expense of the county, or by leasing suitable premises for that purpose, which shall be furnished, provided and managed in all respects as provided by law for the support and management of children's homes * *"

Section 1352, G. C., 103 O. L., 865, provides in part:

"The board of state charities shall investigate by correspondence and inspection the system, condition and management of the public and private benevolent and correctional institu'ions of the state and county, and municipal jails, workhouses, infirmaries and children's homes, and all maternity hospitals or homes, lying-in hospitals, or places where women are received and cared for during parturition, as well as all institutions whether incorporated, private or otherwise which receive and care for children."

Section 1352-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 865, provides in part:

"Such board shall annually pass upon the fitness of every benevolent or correctional institution, corporation and association, public, semi-public or private as receives, or desires to receive and care for children, or places children in private homes. * * *"

"When the board is satisfied as to the care given such children, and that the requirements of the statutes covering the management of such institutions are being complied with, it shall issue to the association a certificate to that effect, which shall continue in force for one year, unless sooner revoked by the board. No child shall be committed by the juvenile court to an association or institution which has not such certificate unrevoked and received within fifteen months next preceding the commitment. A list of such certified institutions shall be sent by the board of state charities, at least annually, to all courts acting as juvenile courts and to all associations and institutions so approved. Any person who receives children or receives or solicits money on behalf of such an institution, corporation or association, not so certified, or whose certificate has been revoked, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not less than $5.00, nor more than $500.00"

The foregoing provisions of the statutes and others of similar import are in the interest of the proper care and guardianship of the children of the state who are subject to commitment or admission to children's homes or other institutions receiving or desiring to receive or care for children, and to this end, it is the manifest purpose of the enactment to provide for the proper regulation and management of such institutions and to prohibit the commitment of children to institutions not meeting the requirements of the law and the approval of the state board of charities.

The statutes provide that when upon investigation the board is satisfied of the qualification of such institution adequately to care for such children as are or may be committed to it or received therein, and that the requirements of the statutes relating to such institutions have been complied with, the board shall issue to such institution a certificate to that effect, and that a list of such certified institutions shall be furnished by the board at least annually to all juvenile courts and to all approved institutions.

It is further provided no child shall be committed by the juvenile court to an institution not having such certificate unrevoked and received within fifteen months next preceding such commitment. It is made a misdemeanor for any person to receive a child or receive or solicit any money on behalf of an institution not so certified.

The placing of children in institutions not having the required certificate, and the payment of the cost of their maintenance out of the public funds by the officers of the county, would seem therefore to be in direct contravention of the purpose of the statutes.

From the foregoing and other similar provisions of the act relating to children's homes, I am of the opinion that there is no authority of law for the county commissioners of any county to enter into a contract with trustees of an institution to receive and care for children of its county that may be committed to a children's home, unless such institution meets the requirements of the statutes as to qualification and management, and has received a certificate to that effect from the board of state charities.

A contract with such an institution not so certified being illegal, the approval of payment of moneys under such contract from the county treasury by the county commissioners would not be conclusive on the auditor, and upon notice that the institution has not been approved, as provided by law, it would be his duty to refuse to issue a warrant for such payments, or the payment of money from the county treasury pursuant to such contract could be restrained by injunction.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOSPITALS—AUTHORITY OF MUNICIPALITY TO CONTRACT FOR PROPER SUBJECTS OF ADMISSION—COUNCIL HAS RIGHT OF DISCRETION—OBLIGATION OF A HOSPITAL TO RECEIVE PERSONS AFFLICTED WITH CONTAGIOUS DISEASES—EYE DISEASES.

The statutes conferring authority upon the council of municipalities to maintain hospitals or contract for the care and treatment of inhabitants of the municipality who are proper subjects of admission to hospitals, vest a discretion in the council as to the extent and method of the exercise of such authority, which may not be controlled in the absence of gross abuse.

The arrangement by which inhabitants of a municipal corporation are received and cared for in hospitals not owned by the municipality, and in consideration of which, contributions are made by the municipality to such hospitals, is contractual, and the obligation of the hospital to receive persons afflicted with infectious or contagious diseases is dependent upon the terms of the contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON. CHARLES F. F. CAMPBELL, Executive Secretary, State Commission for the Blind, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 9th, 1915, you requested my written opinion upon the following statement of facts and inquiry, to wit:

"Dr. Walter H. Snyder, of Toledo, a member of the commission for the blind, is very much concerned because the hospitals which are subsidized by the city of Toledo are refusing to admit babies having opthalmia neonatorum. I enclose a letter from him which will give you the facts in the case.

"Without immediate and constant treatment, an infant whose eyes are infected with this disease runs a very great risk of becoming blind, and when the home conditions are bad, practically the only way of saving the sight is to send the child to the hospital. It is well known that if a baby's eyes are once badly infected, it needs the constant attention of a night and day nurse for several days (and sometimes more) to get control of the situation, and hospitals naturally are not keen to take charity cases which involve so much trouble. From the point of view of the commission, however, the unnecessary loss of a pair of eyes means a future expense to the state of thousands of dollars, and if there is any way of bringing pressure to bear upon the hospitals, we should like to know it."

The letter of Dr. W. H. Snyder, enclosed, is in part as follows:

"A few weeks ago, our eye nurse in Toledo, had reported to her the case of a baby with inflammation of the eyes. The house was in such a condition that it was impossible to treat the baby at home, and the superintendent of the district nurse association referred the father to the police station for an order admitting her to one of the hospitals that are subsidized by the city. He was given an order on the Toledo Hospital, but on presenting himself with the child was refused admittance, the claim being made that the disease was a contagious one which they were not bound by the contract to accept. Later, through the kindness of the sisters of St. Vincent's, the child was taken there for a few days, and then sent to the county hospital. A few days after this, I made an appointment with the safety director, which appointment he did not keep, but Idid see his secretary. I explained the situation to him, asking for some ruling on what we could do if a similar case came up. The answer was that nothing could be done, and that there was no arrangement by which these cases could be cared for.

"I wish you to make a formal inquiry of the attorney general as to whether we have power to compel municipalities to make some arrangement for caring for these children in case the parents are unable to meet the expenses."

Section 4021, G. C., authorizes the council of municipalities to levy and collect a tax, not to exceed one mill, and pay the proceeds of such tax to a private corporation or association which maintains and furnishes a free public hospital for the benefit of the inhabitants of the municipality, or free to those who are unable to pay.

Section 4022, G. C., provides:

"Such council may agree with a corporation or association organized in the municipality for charitable purposes, for the erection and management of a hospital for the sick and disabled, and a permanent interest therein to such extent and upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between them. The council shall provide for the payment of the amount agreed upon for such interest, either in one payment or installments, or so much each year as the parties may stipulate."

The arrangement by which sick or disabled inhabitants of municipal corporations are received and cared for in institutions not owned by the municipality is contractual, and the scope and extent of the rights and privileges accruing are necessarily dependent upon the terms of the contract between the municipal authorities and the authorities of the hospital.

It would be competent for such authorities to contract for the admission and care of such inhabitants of the municipality as are proper objects of admission, under the rules and regulations of the hospital, and in which event, admission of persons contrary to the rules of the hospital could not be required or enforced.

The authorities of the municipality would be authorized to provide by contract for the care and treatment of persons afflicted with contagious diseases at a hospital adapted to their treatment, but it appears from the letter of Dr. Snyder, that the treatment of such patients was not included within the terms of the contract with the hospital referred to in your inquiry.

Section 4441, G. C., provides, in part:

"No person suffering from, who has been exposed to, or is liable to become ill of, small-pox or other contagious disease or infectious disease may be sent to or admitted into prison, jail, workhouse, infirmary, children's or orphans' home, state hospital or institution for the insane, epileptic, blind, feeble-minded or deaf and dumb or other state or county benevolent institution without first making known the facts concerning such illness or exposure to the superintendent, or other person in charge thereof. * * *"

If the terms of the contract with the hospital spoken of, as subsidized by the city of Toledo, do not provide for the admission and treatment in such hospital of persons affected with the character of disease or affliction mentioned in your inquiry, I am of the opinion that such hospitals are not under obligations to accept such persons under their contract with the city, but the city may contract for the care and treatment of persons so affected, with any association or corporation having a hospital or other proper place for the isolation and treatment of such cases.

Section 4452, G. C., provides:

> "The council of a municipality may purchase land within or without its boundaries and erect thereon suitable hospital buildings for the isolation, care or treatment of persons suffering from dangerous contagious disease, and provide for the maintenance thereof. The plans and specifications for such buildings shall be approved by the board of health."

Among the enumeration of powers of municipal corporations, such corporations are authorized in section 3646 of the General Code,

> "To provide for the public health, to secure the inhabitants of the corporation from the evils of contagious, malignant or infectious diseases, and to purchase or lease property or buildings for pest houses and to erect, maintain and regulate pest houses, hospitals and infirmaries."

The statutes conferring authority upon the council of municipalities to maintain hospitals or contract for the care and treatment of inhabitants of the municipality who are proper subjects of admission to hospitals, vest a discretion in the council as to the extent and method of the exercise of such authority and, while this authority of council to make such provision is very ample, I am of the opinion that its exercise is not subject to control in the absence of gross abuse by the council.

Section 12787, G. C., provides:

> "Whoever, being a midwife, nurse or relative in charge of an infant less than ten days old, fails within six hours after the appearance thereof, to report in writing to the physician in attendance upon the family, or if there is no such physician, to a health officer of the city, village or township in which such infant is living, or, in case there be no such officer, to a practitioner of medicine legally qualified to practice, that such infant's eye is inflamed or swollen, or shows an unnatural discharge, if that be the fact, shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or both."

Section 1367, G. C., provides:

> "The commission for the blind shall make inquiries concerning the cause of blindness to ascertain what portion of such cases are preventable, and cooperate with the state board of heath in the adoption and enforcement of proper preventive measures."

The powers conferred by the foregoing section, upon the commission for the blind, are largely advisory and regulatory.

Section 1237, G. C., provides, in part:

> "The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people, and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of heath has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases, the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

By the foregoing and other sections of the statutes relating to the state board of health, the said board is given supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the health of the people, and supreme authority in matters of quarantine; it is authorized to make inquiry as to the causes of disease and the methods for its prevention and suppression; it may make orders looking to the prevention and suppression of diseases, and local authorities are required to enforce the rules and regulations adopted by the board.

The powers conferred upon the state board of health seem to be largely regulatory, except in case of unusual prevalence of contagious disease or similar emergency, or when the local board fails to act, when such board is authorized to take steps for the restriction and suppression of diseases, and in which event the costs incurred are chargeable against the municipality. The authority of the board does not extend to the maintenance of hospitals, nor is the board empowered to direct or control he general policy of municipal authorities in the provision and maintenance of hospitals.

Under the chapter entitled "Poor," sections 3476, et seq., General Code, provision is made for extending aid and medical relief to needy persons whose condition requires it, and the expense thereof is chargeable against the township, municipality or county, as regulated by the provisions of the chapter.

While under all the foregoing sections it would seem that ample authority is provided for the maintenance of hospitals and regulation of matters affecting the public health, yet the administration of the provisions relating to public hospitals is a function of the council of the municipality.

I have to advise, therefore, that there is no authority to compel hospitals receiving contributions from the city of Toledo for caring for the city's sick and disabled inhabitants to receive persons for treatment contrary to the terms of the contract, nor to control the discretion of the council in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it to provide hospitals for the care and treatment of its inhabitants.

I would suggest that local medical organizations are usually active and effective agencies in the interest of the requisite hospital facilities for the proper care and treatment of those whose condition requires the accommodations of such institutions, and by calling to the attention of the organizations of the physicians of Toledo, the conditions of which you speak, a remedy may be greatly promoted.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

AMENDED HOUSE BILL No. 453—EFFECT OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS RELATING TO SALE OF PUBLIC BONDS

Section 2294, G. C., as amended by house bill No. 453, is broadened so as to govern the advertisement and sa'e of township bonds, if its provisions are consistent with amended senate bill No. 220, passed but not signed at this writing; but if said amended senate bill No. 220 does not become a law the section will be inconsistent with section 3295, G. C., and related statutes.

Section 2295, G. C., is so amended by the bill as to give to county commissioners, and other au'horities to which it relates, the right to sell at private sale bonds once advertised and not sold, at not less than par and accrued interest; and to require that premiums and accrued interest received from the sale of such bonds shal go to the sinking fund instead of the improvement fund.

The bill amends sec'ion 3914, G. C., by requiring hat municipal assessment bonds shall not be issued until the assessments are made. Such amendment is not made necessary by article XII, section 11 of the constitution, and is inconsistent with the policy of the state statutes relative to special assessments, with certain sections of which it would be in direct conflict.

The bill so amends sections 4228 and 4229, G. C., as, general y speaking, to clarify the language of these sections, though it leaves something to be desired in this respect, particu'arly in that section 4229, as amended by the bill, is inconsistent with section 3924, G. C.

The bill amends section 7626, G. C., so as to take from boards of education the power to dispense with advertising bonds for sale.

The bill changes section 7627, G. C., so as to permit bonds to be dated at a fixed ime and to bear interest from date, but balances this change by requiring that they be sold for not less than par and accrued interest.

The bill provides for the making of deficiency tax levies in the case of municipal assessment bonds, and bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments or special taxes by county commissioners. As to the municipal assessment bonds there is no change in the substantive law. As to the county bonds the law is changed, and the effect of the new provision would be to remove all questions which might arise under article XII, section 11 of the constitution, and to promote the marketability of such county bonds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 4, 1915.

HON A. R. GARVER, Chairman Senate Taxation Committee, Eighty-First General Assembly, Co'umbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to examine amended house bill No. 453, Mr. Lustig.

This bill amends several sections of the General Code, all bearing upon the sale of public bonds. The amendments, however, are various in their nature, there being no one purpose discernible in all of them.

The amendments to section 2294 disclose the following changes:

> "The scope of the section is broadened so as to include bonds issued by township trustees."

General authority is conferred upon township trustees to issue bonds by section 3295, General Code, which is to be read in connection with sections 3939 et seq., of the General Code, which latter sections are applicable primarily to municipal corporations. Section 3295, General Code, formerly made the provisions of this group of sections of the Municipal Code, familiarly known as the "Longworth law," generally applicable in the issuance and sale of township bonds However, this section has been amended at this session by amended senate bill No. 220, which has been passed but has not yet been signed by the governor. This bill, if it becomes a law, will strike out of original section 3295 the provision that the municipal statutes applicable "in the issue and sale of bonds for specific purposes" shall apply to the trustees of townships and will substitute the following sentence:

> "Such township bonds shall be advertised and sold in the manner provided by law."

This change in section 3295 makes it necessary to provide somewhere by law for the manner of selling township bonds. Therefore, it seems appropriate that section 2294, which is the general section relative to the sale of bonds other than municipal bonds, should be extended in the manner in which amended house bil No. 453 extends it. Should senate bill No. 220 not become a law, however this amendment would produce a conflict with original section 3295 and related sections.

The change in the language, descriptive of the publication to be made, tends to make the statute more specific, and is not open to criticism. The same may be said of other amendments in the section as it is printed in the bill.

In view of doubtful questions which frequently arise respecting the newspapers in which publications may be made, it might be advisable to specify the place of publication or printing of the newspaper in which the publication is to be made. However, it must be said that the bill makes no change in the present law in this particular.

Section 2295, General Code, is amended in two particulars—both of them important, viz.:

(1.) The section gives to county commissioners, boards of education, turnpike commissioners and township trustees the privilege of selling, at private sale, bonds once advertised and offered at public sale, if such private sale is made at not less than par and accrued interest. This provision is found in the statutes applicable to municipal corporations, and there seems to be no valid objection to giving the same privilege to the borrowing authorities to whom section 2295 applies. On the contrary, the provision will have the effect of dispensing with fruitless readvertisements involving expense in times when, like the present, it is difficult to dispose of bonds.

(2.) Present section 2295 provides that premiums received from the sale of county, school district and turnpike bonds, shall be credited to the improvement fund. This is wrong in principle, and is properly changed by the amendment so that such premiums are to go to the sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds. The old section made no specific disposition of the accrued interest. The amended section treats such accrued interest like the premiums, i. e., provides that it shal go into the sinking fund.

Amended section 2295 in this respect would be like the municipal law.

A vital and far reaching change is made by the bill in section 3914, by the addition of a sentence to the effect that assessment bonds shall not be issued by a municipal corporation until the assessments are levied.

I am told that this proposed change in the law is due to the feeling that article XII, section 11 of the constitution, as adopted in 1912, has the effect of requiring that all revenues to be available for the payment of the interest and principal of bonds shall be specifically provided for in the legislation under which the bonds are issued, and that in the case of bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments, the constitution, in effect, requires that the assessments be levied prior to the issuance of the bonds. So, I understand that dealers in municipal bonds, acting under legal advice, are reluctant to purchase Ohio municipal bonds issued prior to the actual levying of the assessment.

In my opinion, the constitution does not have the above described effect. The requirement of article XII, section 11 of the constitution, in effect, is that in the legislation under which a bonded indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision shall be made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity.

The levying of assessments on specially benefited property is sometimes spoken of as a species of taxation; yet I do not think that it is "taxation" within the meaning of the constitutional amendment. On the contrary, I think that the requirement of the constitution is that the coincidental revenue provision, of which it speaks, shall assert the taxing power in the pure sense; that is, that in the legislation under which the indebtedness is incurred, the exercise of the taxing power for the purpose of producing a sufficient amount to meet the interest and sinking fund requirements of the bond issue, shall be provided for. This conclusion is strengthened by consideration of the fact that the provision mentioned in the constitutional amendment is obviously not to be the levy itself, for the levy is to be made, as the section itself intimates, "annually." See on this point Link v. Karb, Mayor, 89 O. S. 326, wherein, in the language of the third branch of the syllabus, it is held:

> "This provision of the constitution does not require that at the time the issue of bonds is authorized there shall then be levied any specified amount or any specific rate, but it does require that provision shall then be made for an annual levy during the term of the bonds in an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds proposed to be issued and to provide for their final redemption at maturity, which levy must be made annually in pursuance of the provisions of the original ordinance or resolution requiring the same. The amount necessary to be levied for the purpose specified is to be determined by the taxing officials at the time the levy is made."

Now the constitution does not mean, in my judgment, that when bonds have been issued the entire interest and sinking fund requirements thereof shall be annually met by general tax levies; the emphasis in the constitution is, I think, upon the word "sufficient," for the purpose of the provision is to insure that the tax duplicate of the borrowing district shall be behind all of its bonds in such a way as to guarantee (not necessarily completely furnish), the production of sufficient revenue to pay the interest thereon and retire them at maturity.

In this, the only practical view of the case as it seems to me, the constitution is fully satisfied when, in the legislation under which special assessment bonds are issued, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, and to retire them through a sinking fund at maturity; and when in pursuance of the principles laid down in Link v. Karb, supra, the taxing authorities in a given year are proceeding to carry out the mandate of such a coincidental provision, they need not, in my judgment, levy the tax for the full amount of the interest and sinking fund requirements of the bond issue for that year, if there is (available for the payment of such interest, and the accumulation of such sinking fund in that year) revenue produced otherwise than by taxation, as by the assessments themselves; or, for example, by accumulations to the sinking fund through the contribution thereto of premiums, and accrued interest received from the sale of bonds. In other words, in the case of assessment bonds all that is required to comply with article XII, section 11, is a deficiency levy of general taxes. This, as to municipal corporations, is required by existing statutes relative to the maintenance of a sinking fund and the duties of the sinking fund trustees of municipal corporations.

This result is also promoted by section 3914-1, as framed in the bill now under examination. I believe this section to be wholly unnecessary, but it is at the most merely declaratory of the law in its present state.

I have gone into detail in discussing the necessity of the change in section 3914 which the bill makes, because if there is any such necessity for such a change as has been suggested and considered, the practical objections thereto would be overridden by such necessity. I may say in this connection that my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, expressed the same views which I have just stated in an opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

Being certain then that there is no necessity for amending section 3914 in the manner in which the bill seeks to amend it, I pass to the question as to the policy of the amendment. On this point there are serious objections to the change. In the first place, the amended section would be inconsistent with at least three express provisions of the law relative to special assessments, which are left untouched by the bill. I refer to section 3817, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Section 3817. When bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of the assessment, the interest thereon shall be treated as part of the cost of the improvement for which assessment may be made. If such assessment or any installment thereof is not paid when due, it shall bear interest until the payment thereof, at the same rate as the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, and the county auditor shall annually place upon the tax duplicate the penalty and interest as therein provided."

to section 3896, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Section 3896. The cost of any improvement contemplated in this chapter shall include the purchase money of real estate, or any interest therein, when acquired by purchase, or the value thereof as found by the jury, when appropriated, the costs and expenses of the proceeding, the damages assessed in favor of any owner of adjoining lands and interest thereon, the costs and expenses of the assessment, the expense of the preliminary and other surveys, and of printing, publishing the notices and ordinances required, including notice of assessment, and serving notices on property owners, the cost of construction, interest on bonds, where bonds have been issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, and any other necessary expenditure."

and to section 3892, General Code, which provides in part as follows:

> "Section 3892. When any special assessment is made, has been confirmed by council, and bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness of the corporation are issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, the clerk of the council, on or before the second Monday in September, each year, shall certify such assessment to the county auditor, stating the amounts and the time of payment. * * *"

All of these sections recognize the practice of issuing bonds before the assessments are made, and indeed this is the established practice arising from the very necessities of the case as I shall point out. Of course, it would be impossible to figure the interest on bonds as a part of the total cost of the improvement for which the assessment is to be made if the issuance of the bonds were postponed to the making of the assessment. Often bonds are offered at one rate of interest, and because of the condition of the market for such investments fail to sell at that rate, requiring amendatory legislation fixing another and higher rate of interest.

But the most serious objection to the change lies in the fact that it is simply impossible to let a contract for an improvement until bonds are issued, as no municipal corporation can make improvements without borrowing money; and it is equally impossible to determine the total cost of an improvement until the work is completed and the contractor's estimates have been allowed; for frequently there are changes in the plans and specifications of an improvement during the progress of the work, the effect of which is either to increase or diminish the cost. Moreover, the engineer's estimate as to the cost of the improvement is often inaccurate, and is not borne out by the bids when they are actually received.

It has been held that the general law requiring the issuance of a certificate that money is in the treasury, and available for the purpose of a contract, does not apply as to the proceeds of special assessment bonds. So, it might be argued that there is no legal impediment in the way of letting a contract before the improvement fund has been provided, when that fund is to be provided by special assessments. But though there may be no legal impediment in the way of such a proceeding, it is very clear to me that there would be a very practical impediment in the way of it, as no contractor would be willing to bid on a public job unless he knew that the fund to pay for his work was in existence or in immediate prospect.

Summing up then, the practical objection to the change in section 3914 is that no assessment can be made until the total cost of the improvement is ascertained. This cannot be done until the work is completed. The work cannot be completed without the issuance of bonds. Therefore, the issuance of bonds should precede the making of the assessment.

It may be answered that municipalities may provide money for the progress of the work of an improvement by issuing notes under section 3915 of the General Code, and then subsequently taking up these notes and issuing bonds under section 3914; and that in this way the issuance of the bonds can be postponed to the making of the assessment. This would not be a sufficient answer to what has been said respecting the requirement that interest on bonds (not notes) shall be treated as a part of the total cost of the improvement for which assessments are to be made. But even if this were not so, the cities subject to the municipal code should not, in my judgment, be compelled to have recourse to such a procedure; for short time notes of the character which might be thus issued under section 3915 would bear a relatively high rate of interest as compared to bonds running for a longer period, and in a normal condition of the money market it would be a real hardship in many conceivable cases to have to resort to such an expedient.

For all the foregoing reasons I think there is strong objection to section 3914, at least without amending numerous other related sections of the General Code and making the process of assessment completely open.

Section 4228, as amended in the bill, embodies a distinct improvement on the language of the present Municipal Code sections relative to legal publications. There is some question, however, as to whether the purpose here would not be more completely subserved by amending other related sections, such as 4676 and 6255 of the General Code. A recent decision of the court of appeals of Muskingum county (later reversed by the supreme court) created a great deal of interest in this subject at the opening of the present session of the general assembly, and more than one bill was introduced with a view to clarifying these publication statutes. I refer your committee to house bill No. 336, Mr. Stevens, which deals with this subject in a comprehensive way. The committee may find some valuable suggestions therein along the lines just referred to.

The last sentence of amended section 4228, as printed in the bill, is quite necessary. Some provision of this sort must be made by the present session of the general assembly, as the lack of such a provision has created much confusion.

Of section 4229 it may be said generally that it is amended principally for the purpose of making it consistent with the changes in section 4228, and generally speaking, this purpose is well carried out. However, the section as it is now framed conflicts with section 3942, General Code, relative to the sale of bonds. This conflict was present in original section 4229, and is one of the things which the general assembly, now that it has the opportunity, should correct, either by making some exception to the general language of section 4229, or by amending section 3924. As the situation now stands section 3924 is the specific provision and is of later enactment than section 4229 (that is, both were enacted at the same time as sections of the General Code, but when recourse is had to the state of the pre-existing law it is discovered that the two provisions were enacted in the order named). In this state of affairs section 3924 would prevail over section 4229, but if section 4229 should now be amended, and thus become the law of later enactment, the question would be reopened as to which of the two sections should control. I take it that the whole purpose of the Lustig bill is to clarify the laws relative to the sale of bonds. In this respect its effect would be exerted in the other direction.

The change in section 7626 is a very salutary one. Under the original section bearing this number boards of education were seemingly given some power to dispense with competitive bidding in the sale of bonds. This is against sound public policy. The amendment has the effect of requiring advertisement, in that it provides that the bonds shall be "sold in the manner provided by law." The reference here is to section 2294 as amended in the bill itself. Perhaps it would be better to refer to the section by number.

Section 7627 is amended by the bill so as to conform to the practice and statutes relative to municipal corporations and to other bonds generally. The custom is to offer bonds for sale dated at a time fixed in the resolution or ordinance providing for their sale and bearing interest from that date, and then to require the bidder to pay the interest accrued on the bonds up to the day of delivery. This is what is known as the "accrued interest," and the practice in effect prevents the taxing district from paying interest on money which it has not yet received.

This same object was in the mind of the legislature in enacting original section 7627, and providing that the bonds should bear date of the day of sale and should not bear interest until the purchase money had been paid. Such a provision does not more effectively accomplish the desired result than the provision for sale at not less than par and accrued interest, and is much more awkward from the standpoint of practice.

Section 5630-1 is a very important provision of this bill. There are several kinds of road bonds issued in anticipation of contributions to a common improvement fund fixed in definite proportions from different sources, as a certain portion to be paid by the county, a certain portion to be paid by the township, and a certain portion to be paid by specially benefited property. The most prominent example is the state highway law, which provides for the issuance of bonds to pay the portion of the total cost and expense of an inter-county highway improvement not assumed by the state, which in a normal case are issued in anticipation of the collection of revenues for the creation of a fund, fifty per cent. whereof is to be paid by the county, thirty per cent. by the township and twenty per cent. by the property owners whose property is to be specially assessed. These proportions are fixed at the time the bonds are issued, and should there be any deficiency in the revenues it could only be met by drawing again upon the particular source which happened to be deficient. In other words, no general tax duplicate is behind such bonds. As a consequence thereof there is a serious question as to the status of such bonds under article XII, section 11 of the constitution, and the bonds themselves are not salable—not only on account of this question, but also because one of the chief uses of bonds of this character is for hypothecation under the laws and regulations of the federal government and several states by banks, etc. Practically all these laws require general tax duplicate bonds, and Ohio bonds of the character just described fail to meet these requirements.

In effect, section 5630-1, as it appears in the bill, provides for a deficiency levy in the same manner that section 3914-1 provides for such a levy in the case of municipal assessment bonds. The difference between the two provisions, however, is that whereas the present law applicable to municipal corporations constitutes special assessment bonds general tax duplicate obligations, in the last analysis the same is not true of the present laws relative to county bonds of the above described character.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION—SECTION 196 OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 125 IS CONSTITUTIONAL.

If it be the desire of the legislature to secure a uniform standard of road construction in the state, then the words "county highway superintendent" should be stricken from line 2255 of amended senate bill No. 125 and the words "state highway commissioner" should be substituted therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 5, 1915.

HON. ANTHONY NIEDING, Chairman Public Highways Committee, Ohio House of Representatives Columbus, Ohio.

SIR:—Mr. Thacher, of your committee, has requested my opinion as to the constitutionality of section 196 of amended senate bill No. 125, and at his request I am directing the opinion to you.

The section in question reads as follows:

> "Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as prohibiting the county commissioners or township trustees from constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing any part of the inter-county highways within such county or township; provided, however, that the plans and specifications for the proposed improvement shall first be submitted to the chief highway engineer and shall receive his approval; and provided further, that whenever forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of any county are improved by the use of gravel, broken stone, slag, brick, cement and bituminous products or the aggregate of any of these, to a standard established by the county commissioners and approved by the county highway superintendent and the county commissioners appropriate an equal sum for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing all or any part of the inter-county highways within such county; then, on request of the county commissioners, the state highway commissioner shall order the apportionment or any appropriation by the state or of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways, due or to become due and available for such county as state aid, paid into the treasury of said county. The state highway commissioner shall issue his voucher therefor upon the auditor of state against any such fund, and the auditor shall issue his warrant therefor upon the state treasurer and deliver the same to the treasurer of such county. The sum realized therefrom shall be deposited to the credit of the road fund of said county together with the sum appropriated by such county to be used by the commissioners in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such inter-county highways within the county, in accordance with the plans and specifications of the state highway engineer as herein provided."

It has been suggested that this section is unconstitutional, at least in part, for the reason that while the section is of general nature it does not have a uniform operation throughout the state. While there can be no doubt that the subject-matter of public roads is of a general nature, yet I am unable to say that the section in question is not of uniform operation throughout the state. The particular provision in the section which it has been suggested might be unconstitutional upon the ground above stated is that to the effect that whenever forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of any county are improved with certain materials and to a certain standard, then that county's apportionment of inter-county highway funds shall be paid to the county and expended by it instead of by the state highway commissioner, provided the county appropriates an equal sum for use on inter-county highways. The fact that under this section the inter-county highway funds apportioned to some counties may be expended by the county authorities, while in other counties these funds may be expended by the state highway commissioner does not prevent the section from having a uniform operation throughout the state. Any county in the state can qualify to receive and superintend the expenditure of its proportion of inter-county highway money by improving forty per cent. of the mileage of its roads with certain materials and to a certain standard, and by appropriating for use on inter-county highways a sum equal to the state's contribution. If a county does not elect to comply with these conditions or is unable so to do, this fact will not operate to decrease in any way the share of inter-county highway funds apportioned to and expended in that county. The only effect of the failure or inability of a county to meet the conditions in question will be that the county's proportion of inter-county highway funds will be expended by the state highway commissioner instead of by the local authorities. I am therefore of the opinion that the section in question is constitutional.

My opinion has been further requested as to whether or not this section will tend toward securing uniform standard of road construction in the state, and more particularly as to the effect in this direction of the provision found in lines 2254 and 2255, which is in substance that the standard to which forty per cent. of the roads of a county must be improved before the county authorities are to be entrusted with the expenditure of inter-county funds is to be established by the county commissioners and approved by the county highway superintendent. It would seem clear that the effect of this provision will be to destroy uniformity in the state, for under its terms each county in the state may establish a different standard. If uniformity is the thing desired by the legislature, then the standard fixed by the county commissioners should be made subject to the approval of the state highway commissioner instead of the county highway superintendent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION—EXPENSES OF EMPLOYE—TRAVELING TO AND FROM HIS HOME NOT CHARGEABLE TO STATE.

An employe of the public utilities commission stationed at Columbus may not charge or receive expenses incurred while traveling to and from his home.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 5, 1915.

The Public Utilities Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication of May 1st, requesting my opinion upon the following matter:

> "Has an employe, whose work consists of office and field work, and whose office is located at Columbus but who has retained his residence at a point outside of Columbus, the right to charge, as a part of his expenses, money spent in going from Columbus to his home and returning therefrom?"

Section 494, G. C., establishes the office of the commission at the seat of government in the city of Columbus.

Section 499, G. C., provides as follows:

> "All expenses incurred by the commission pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, including the actual and necessary traveling and other expenses and disbursements of the commission, their officers and employes, incurred while on the business of the commission, shall be paid from funds appropriated for the use of the commission after being approved by the commission. An itemized statement of traveling expenses shall be sworn to by the person incurring same before payment is made."

Section 614-81, G. C., provides:

> "* * * The commissioners and their assistants, shall receive from the state their actual and necessary expenses while traveling on the business of the commission."

The official residence of the employe inquired about is at Columbus, and not where he resided at the time of his appointment or where he retains his residence after appointment. While all actual and necessary traveling expenses and other disbursements incurred while on the business of the commission is required to be paid by the state, it cannot be said that such employe is engaged in the business of the commission, or traveling in the discharge of his duties, when expending money for traveling from the established office of the commission in Columbus to his home and returning therefrom. The traveling expenses or other disbursements, authorized to be paid by the statute, must be some item of expense directly connected with or relating to the carrying on of the business of the commission in which the employe is engaged.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the expenses referred to in your communication are not properly chargeable against the state.

Very truly yours,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMMON LAW—FIRE PREVENTION—AUTHORITY TO ESTABLISH INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY FOR DAMAGES RESULTING FROM FIRE CAUSED BY NEGLIGENCE.

At common law, one employing fire as his agency, or upon whose property a fire has been accidentally or without his fault started, who fails to exercise ordinary care under the circumstances to prevent its spread to neighboring property, or one who negligently or carelessly starts a fire, is liable in damages to another for injury to person or property, of which injury such fire or its spread is the proximate cause.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 5, 1915.

HON. E. R. DEFFENBAUGH, State Fire Marshall, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The committee on public safety of this chamber, of which I am chairman, has been considering for sometime the question of the advisability of legislation which would aid in decreasing the annual loss of life and of property through fire in Ohio.
> "It is our belief that the first step toward this end lies in calling the attention of those through whose negligence fires result to their liability under the common law rather than in the placing of an additional law in our statute books.
> "On behalf of the committee on public safety of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, I respectfully request from you a statement on the form of a brief synopsis of the common law, which establishes individual liability for damages resulting from fire caused by negligence. I am informed that there have been several decisions in point, one of which is Adams v. Young, 44 O. S., 80.
> "You will appreciate that since in a large part the value of any law which, by establishing individual liability for damage resulting from fires caused by negligence, attempts to prevent our fire waste, would lie in its moral effect and that moral effect would be dependent upon the publicity given it, a concise statement of the liability existing under the common law, which statement can be printed upon such letter heads, notices, etc., will be of very great value.
> "It is our hope that this matter may receive your early attention."

In view of the present public interest and concern in the subject of fire prevention, and the important service in conserving life and property of Ohio citizens, which the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce is endeavoring to accomplish, I believe it my duty to lend all assistance possible.

In order, however, to keep within the rule of this department, restricting the furnishing of opinions and advice to such officers and departments of the state as are by law entitled to receive the same, I have addressed to you my reply to the question submitted, and I am sending a copy of the same to the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

There are court decisions without number, as well as comments of numerous text writers, in reference to the common law liability of individuals for damages resulting from fire by their negligence, I take it, however, from the letter of Mr. C. H. Patton, chairman of the committee on public safety, and from the conference with Mr. John P. Phillips, the assistant secretary of that organization, that the desire is to secure in as brief form as possible a statement of the law governing such liability, and I therefore submit the following rule, which I trust will answer its purposes, viz.: At common law, one employing fire as his agency, or upon whose property a fire has been accidentally or without his fault started, who fails to exercise ordinary care under the circumstances to prevent its spread to neighboring property, or one who negligently or carelessly starts a fire, is liable in damages to another for injury to person or property, of which injury such fire or its spread is the proximate cause.

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHERE SCHOOL DISTRICT RECEIVES MORE THAN AMOUNT TO WHICH IT IS ENTITLED FROM STATE AID FOR WEAK SCHOOL DISTRICT—AMOUNT MAY BE DEDUCTED FROM FUTURE STATE AID CONTRIBUTIONS.

If a school district receives more than it is legally entitled to from state aid for weak school district, an adjustment may subsequently be made by deducting from subsequent amounts to which it is entitled, the amount illegally receivd.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—Under date of April 21, 1916, you replied to a letter addressed to you by this department, under date of April 16th, in which letter was submitted a letter received from Hon. Addison P. Minshall, prosecuting attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio, received under date of April 14th, relative to a certain finding for $197.14, made against the board of education of Harrison township, Ross county, being an amount held by your bureau to be in excess of the amount of state aid for weak school districts, to which said Harrson township school district was entitled. Your letter is to the following effect:

> "We are in receipt of a letter addressed to you from Hon. Addison P. Minshall, prosecuting attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio, in which he recommends that a finding of $197.14 against the board of education of Harrison township, Ross county, Ohio, for excess state aid, be cancelled, because the district is unable to pay the same.
> "In opinion No. 236, given by your department April 14, 1915, the auditor of state is instructed to correct errors in the payment of state aid, either by making a draft on the district or by withholding an amount necessary to correct the error in case too much money has been sent, or by paying an amount necessary to correct the error in case insufficient amount has been paid. This opinion, however, is a construction of section 7596, as amended 103 Ohio laws, page 277. The finding was made under the section before amended, hence it may not be considered as applying. We are assuming, however, that the correction may be made under this opinion, and if so, the finding could be cancelled at the time the amount is deducted from the next payment of state aid. We would be glad to have a ruling on this question."

You request an opinion as to whether or not, when a school district entitled to state aid has received an amount in excess of that to which it is entitled, the auditor of state can correct the matter by withholding from future state aid the amount so paid in excess.

Under the law relative to state aid for weak school districts, provision is made for the amount to which each school district may be entitled, as ascertainable by the provisions of such law and it is contemplated that such a school district shall not receive more than that to which the law entitles it. Having received more, it is to that extent unjustly enriched, and in order to correct the error in the payment of such state aid, I am of the opinion that the auditor of state should withhold from future state aid given to such school district an amount equal to the amount which the said school district has received unlawfully, and that the principles set forth in opinion No. 236, given to your department April 14, 1915, would be applicable, as above set forth, to section 7596, G. C., prior to the amendment found in 103 O. L., page 277.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT—CANNOT EMPLOY ATTORNEY OTHER THAN PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

The board of education of a county school district has no authority in law to employ counsel other than prosecuting attorney of the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of March 20th, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Is the county board of education, as created under the provisions of section 4729, vol. 104, O. L., page 136, a school board within the meaning of the provisions of section 2918, General Code, and has it the same power to employ counsel when necessary?"

Section 4679, General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., 133, provides:

> "The school districts of the state shall be styled, respectively, city school districts, village districts, rural districts and county districts."

Section 4728, General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 136, provides in part:

> "Each county school district shall be under the supervision and control of a county board of education composed of five members."

Section 4729, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 136, provides for the election and term of office of the members of such board.

The principal function of the county board of education, as above created, is to re-district and supervise the schools of the county district.

Section 4761, G. C., provides, in part, as follows:

> "Except in city school districts, the prosecuting attorney of the county shall be the legal adviser of all boards of education of the county in which he is serving. He shall prosecute all actions against a member or officer of a board of education for malfeasance or misfeasance in office, and he shall be the legal counsel of such boards or the officers thereof in all civil actions, brought by or against them, and shall conduct such actions in his official capacity. When such civil action is between two or more boards of education in the same county, the prosecuting attorney shall not be required to act for either of them. * * *"

While I am of the opinion that, within the limitations of the above provisions of section 4761, G. C., the prosecuting attorney of the county may act as the legal adviser of the county board of education in the case of an action between the county board and the local board of education of a school district within the county district, the prosecuting attorney cannot represent both boards, and is not required to represent either of said boards. If, in such case, the prosecuting attorney declines to represent either of said boards, or, if he chooses to represent the local board, the question arises may the county board employ counsel other than the prosecuting attorney, to represent it under authority of section 2918, G. C., which provides, in part, as follows:

"Nothing in the preceding two sections shall prevent a school board from employing counsel to represent, it but such counsel, when so employed, shall be paid by such school board from the school fund."

Section 2916, G. C., relates to certain powers and duties of the prosecuting attorney, and section 2917, G. C., provides that the prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of county and township officers, and that no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney except as provided in section 2412, G. C.

Section 1, of article X, of the constitution, provides:

"The general assembly shall provide, by law, for the election of such county and township officers as may be necessary."

The members of the county board of education are not county officers, and the said board is not a county board within the meaning of the provisions of section 2917 G. C., as limited by the above provision of the constitution, and this section has, therefore, no application to a county board of education.

Under the above provision of section 2918, G. C., payment for services rendered to the board of education of a school district by counsel other than the prosecuting attorney must be made from the "school fund" of such district.

The contract of employment would not be within the exceptions to the requirements of section 5660, G. C., provided in section 5661, G. C., and it would, therefore, be necessary that a certificate of available funds be filed with said contract by the clerk of said board.

The authority of the local board, in the case above referred to, to employ counsel other than the prosecuting attorney to represent it, provided it has sufficient funds in its treasury available for such purpose, is clear, but the county school district has no school fund within the meaning of section 2918, G. C., out of which counsel, other than the prosecuting attorney, might be paid by the county board of education for services rendered to said board, and there is no authority in law to create such fund.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the county board of education may not employ counsel other than the prosecuting attorney of the county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY AUDITOR'S OFFICE—DEPUTIES AND CLERKS WHO OFFER TO PERFORM THE SERVICE OF PREPARING TAX LIST AND DUPLICATE FOR DISTRICT ASSESSOR MAY DO SO UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS—EFFECT ON TAX LIST—RIGHTS OF ASSISTANTS IN DISTRICT ASSESSOR'S OFFICE—DEPUTIES IN AUDITOR'S OFFICE MAY CONTINUE TO RECEIVE REGULAR SALARIES AS SUCH DEPUTIES—NO COMPENSATION FOR PREPARING TAX LIST.

If the deputies and clerks in the office of a county auditor, who, though regularly and continuously employed as such, have at a certain time of the year a relatively great amount of spare time, and offer to perform the service of preparing the tax list and the duplicate and triplicate copies thereof for the district assessor; and the district assessor, willing to avail himself of such offer, desires to dispense with the services of assistants, clerks and other employes in his office and in the classified civil service, who would otherwise do such work; with respect to such arrangement, it is held:

(1) That if carried into effect it would not affect the validity of the tax list or that of the duplicate and triplicate thereof, if kept in the proper offices and properly certified to by the district assessor.

(2) That the assistants, clerks and employes of the district assessor whose positions are in the classified civil service have no rights under the Warnes Law or the civil sevice law, which would prevent the district assessor from dispensing with their services in order to carry out the arrangement.

(3) That the deputies and clerks in the office of the county auditor may continue to receive their regular compensation as such for the time within which they are employed under such an arrangement, if the discharge of their duties as deputies and clerks of the auditor is not in any way interfered with and if they receive no compensation for working on the tax lists.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 3d, enclosing copies of communications addressed to the commission by the district assessors for Hamilton county and the auditor of Hamilton county, respectively.

The letters referred to disclose the following facts:

The auditor of Hamilton county has a certain number of deputies and clerks, for the annual salaries of whom allowance has heretofore been made by the commissioners of that county. In order to secure competent men it is necessary that these deputies and clerks be continuously employed, although the need of their services is acute only at certain periods of the year. During the spring and summer months they are not very busy.

The district assessors for Hamilton county last year employed a considerable force of clerks and assistants in the preparation of the tax list, the auditor's duplicate and the treasurer's triplicate, and these men so employed, being under civil service, are now available for service in this capacity, although they are not at present working.

The clerks and assistants last year employed by the district assessors were inexperienced. They consumed several months in doing the work allotted to them, whereas the same work had been done by the auditor's force under the prior law in the same number of weeks. They committed numerous errors entailing an inordinate number of corrections in the auditor's office.

For the protection of his own office and in the interest of what is deemed to be public economy, the auditor suggests that the books in question be prepared by the deputies and clerks in his office under the direction of the district assessors, such deputies and clerks to perform such work without neglecting the regular work of the auditor's office and without additional compensation; and that the services of the clerks and assistants in the office of the district assessors, who were employed last year for this purpose, be dispensed with. The suggestion is made upon the understanding that the district assessors are to have control of the making of the lists and that when they are prepared the original list is to be retained in their office, and they are to certify the other lists as having been prepared by them in accordance with law.

The district assessors acquiesce and join in the suggestion of the county auditor.

You advise that the plan above outlined has been submitted to the state civil service commission, which, however, declines to make any official ruling in the premises, but joins with the tax commission in requesting my opinion upon the legal questions involved. As they present themselves to you, these questions are as follows:

> "(1) Would a tax list and its duplicates so prepared be valid, if certified to as their own by the district assessors?
> "(2) Would the assistants and clerks of the district assessors, who are under civil service, have any rights under the Warnes law and the civil service law which would prevent this work from being taken from them and performed in accordance with the above described plan?"

To these two questions which you submit, I may add another which has arisen in my own mind, namely:

> "(3) Assuming that no objection is made by the deputies and clerks in the auditor's office and that the work is performed by them voluntarily, would it be lawful for them to receive their compensation as auditor's deputies and clerks from the fee fund of the auditor's office in full for the period of time during which they are partially engaged in performing such services?"

In the consideration of your first question the following statutory provisions may be considered:

Section 5585, General Code, (Section 7 of the Warnes law, 103 O. L., 786):

> "On or before the first Monday of July, annually, the district assessor shall compile and make up * * * lists * * *. Such lists shall be prepared in triplicate. On or before the first Monday in September in each year the district assessor shall correct such lists in accordance with the additions and deductions ordered by the tax commission of Ohio and by the board of complaints and shall certify and deliver two copies thereof to the county auditor. The copies delivered to the county auditor shall constitute the auditor's tax list and treasurer's duplicate of real and personal property for the current year. * * *"

Section 5581, General Code, (Section 3 of the Warnes law):

> "Each district assessor shall appoint such number of deputy assessors, assistants, experts, clerks and employes as may, from time to time, be prescribed for his district by the tax commission of Ohio. Such deputy assessors, assistants, experts, clerks and employes shall hold their respective offices and employments for such times as may be prescribed by the tax commission."

Nowhere in the Warnes law or elsewhere is there any provision specifying the duties of the assistants, clerks and other employes of the district assessor. The law does attach specific duties to the position of deputy assessor; but I take it that none of the former employes of the district assessors' office concerned in the question now presented are deputy assessors. Moreover, the statutes describing the duties of the deputy assessors do not relate to the preparation of the tax lists.

Inasmuch, then, as the law requires the district assessors to make up the tax list and certify to the copies thereof, and inasmuch as the duties of the assistants, clerks and other employes of the district assessor are not fixed by law, two conclusions are at once established:

> "(1) The assistant assessors, clerks and employes are not required to be employed in the preparation of the tax lists.
> "(2) If a district assessor, or the members of a board of district assessors, should personally do the work involved in the preparation of tax lists, which is merely clerical in its nature, and should certify to the copies, there would be no question as to the validity of the list and the certified copies thereof."

Now if no law requires that any public employe shall actually do the clerical work of preparing the tax list and duplicates, and inasmuch as the responsibility for the preparation thereof rests upon the district assessor, who discharges his duty in the premises when he, so to speak, produces the required list, it follows, I think, that the district assessor is at liberty to have the clerical work done in any way he sees fit, so long as he does not thereby incur any liability payable from the public treasury. That is to say, if the district assessor chose to dispense with the services of any and all publicly employed clerks and to employ clerks and assistants privately, paying them from his own individual fund, he might use such private employes in the preparation of the tax list and duplicates; and if when such privately employed assistants or clerks had completed their work it was then certified to by the district assessor in his official capacity as the tax list and the duplicate copies thereof prepared by him, no question could be made as to its validity. In the hands of the auditor and the treasurer respectively, the copies of such tax list so certified would have complete virtue in law for all purposes.

The case is not altered by the fact present in the question asked by you, that the clerical work is to be done by other employes of the public acting as volunteers. All that is required to make the tax list and duplicate valid is the certificate of the district assessor, which has the force and effect in law to adopt such lists and duplicates as the work of the district assessor in his official capacity.

I answer your first question, then, in the affirmative.

The answer to your second question is at least partially suggested by what I have already said respecting the duties of the assistants, clerks and other employes. These are not prescribed by law. So, aside from the civil service law at least, such assistants, clerks and other employes have no right whatever to consider the clerical work in the preparation of the tax list and duplicate as in any sense belonging to them.

The civil service law (103 O. L., 698) gives to the state civil service commission with respect to the county service authority to put into effect rules for the classification of offices, positions and employments (section 486-9—section 9 of the act), and to ascertain the duties imposed by law and practice upon each employe in the classified service, and to establish grades of service based upon similarity of duties and salaries (section 486-18—section 18 of the act).

Without discussing the effect of these provisions of the civil service law in detail it is sufficient to state that no inference can be drawn therefrom, to the effect that there is any authority in the civil service commission to prescribe the duties of a given position. The investigations, classifications and rules of the commission are to be made solely for the purpose of enabling it to conduct examinations—in other words, to enforce the substantive provision of the civil service law. So that where the general law by necessary inference gives to the head of a department power to prescribe the duties attaching to a given position, such a result is not affected by any provision in the civil service law.

Of course, the abuse by the head of a department of a power of this character for the purpose of evading the civil service law or violating its spirit is guarded against by other provisions of the civil service law (see section 22 and section 26 of the civil service law); but in the case submitted to me through the commission the facts are such as completely to negative any idea of possible abuse of the civil service law.

I am confident that the civil service law could not be given the effect of requiring the head of a department to find work for an employe in civil service whom he considered to be unnecessary. So, to refer again to an illustration once used in this opinion, if an incoming district assessor should find in his office an employe who had been used by his predecessor in the preparation of the tax lists; and if such district assessor would be willing to do this work with his own hands, and should feel that on that account the services of such a clerk would be unnecessary, the civil service law would not prevent the district assessor from doing the work and dispensing with the services of the employe.

Section 17 of the civil service law (section 486-17, General Code) relates to reductions, suspensions and removals, and provides as follows:

> "No person shall be discharged from the classified service, reduced in pay or position, laid off, suspended or otherwise discriminated against by the appointing officer for religious or political reasons. In all cases of discharge, lay off, reduction or suspension of a subordinate, whether appointed for a definite term or otherwise, the appointing officer shall furnish the subordinate discharged, laid off, reduced, or suspended with a copy of the order of discharge, lay off, reduction, or suspension, and his reasons for the same, and give such subordinate a reasonable time in which to make and file an explanation. Such order together with the explanation, if any, of the subordinate shall be filed with the commission.
> "Nothing in this act shall limit the power of an officer to suspend without pay, for purposes of discipline, a subordinate for a reasonable period, not exceeding thirty days; provided, however, that successive suspensions shall not be allowed."

For reasons which I have already suggested, I am of the opinion that the fact that the services for which a clerk, assistant or employe had been originally brought into the civil service were unnecessary, and indeed the mere fact that the head of the department might deem such services unnecessary, would be a sufficient reason for discharge or lay off under the above section.

For all the above reasons I answer your second question in the negative.

The third question, which is one I have myself suggested, is answered in the specific case submitted by the statement that the proposed arrangement does not contravene the county officers' salary law. It is perhaps true as a general rule that a deputy or other employe of a county officer, the compensation of whom is payable from the fee fund of the office under allowance made at the beginning of the official year by the county commissioners, is employed solely for doing work pertaining to that office, and may not lawfully be paid out of such fund for doing work of any other kind; but this rule cannot be carried so far as to prevent such an assistant or deputy from doing outside work and continuing to receive his compensation, if the doing of such work in nowise interferes with the performance of the services for which he is being paid out of the public treasury.

The arrangement upon which I have expressed my opinion, as I understand it, is that the auditor's deputies and clerks are not, on account of the preparation of the tax list and duplicates for the district assessors, to absent themselves from their post of duty at the auditor's office during business hours; nor are they to do the clerical work for the district assessors to the exclusion of such work in the auditor's office as may fall to their lot at this season of the year. They are merely to work on the books for the district assessors when they are not busy with the affairs of the auditor's office.

The auditor's deputies and clerks are not to receive any compensation attributable to the performance of the services in question. In fact, technically, they will perform such services voluntarily and without compensation therefor.

Therefore, I am of the opinion, as heretofore stated, that it would be lawful under the county officers' salary law for the deputies and clerks in the auditor's office voluntarily to do the work contemplated by the above described arrangement, and that the doing of such work would not in any way affect their right to receive the compensation prescribed for them under the salary law.

The questions which I have considered are the only ones which have occurred to me.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the arrangement as above outlined may lawfully be made and carried into effect.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

While section 3104, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 893, requires the trustees of a county children's home to file an annual report of the conditions of the home, and, at the same time, a carefully prepared estimate, in writing, for the wants of the home for the succeeding year, it is still the duty of the county commissioners of such county, at the beginning of each fiscal half year, to make an appropriation from the children's home fund, and the expenditures for said home for the succeeding six months must be kept within said appropriation as required by sections 5649-3d and 3106, G C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1915.

HON. ROBERT C. PATTERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR —I am in receipt of your letter of April 28, 1915, which is as follows:

"The trustees of the county children's home are in need of additional funds to maintain the institution. The condition is due to the fact that the amount allowed by the budget commission for the support of the institution in each of the years 1913 and 1914, was insufficient for that purpose, owing to an abnormal number of children having to be admitted and cared for in each of the years, and the budget was fixed on the old attendance.

"The trustees and county commissioners have not followed the requirements of the statutes (General Code, 3104 to 3106), in filing a report and estimate, and making an appropriation within which amount the expenses must be kept; but the semi-annual distribution of taxes has been placed to the credit of a children's home fund, out of which warrants were paid on the trustees' order. In meeting the increased cost of maintenance, the trustees have anticipated future semi-annual distributions, until now their fund will soon be exhausted.

"Under these conditions, can the county commissioners borrow money by authority of General Code 5656 to meet the cost of supporting the children's home as the indebtedness accrues, so as to change the form, but not increase the amount?

"In the opinion of the attorney general, dated March 8, 1913, it was held that General Code section 5649-3d limits only the expenditure of current revenue, and does not restrain the expenditure of borrowed money. This opinion further holds, that under General Code section 2434, money may be borrowed for the support of the poor and expended regardless of section 5649-3d. While I find no similar section authorizing the borrowing of money for the support of children's homes, General Code section 3078 imposes a duty on the commissioners to 'provide means by taxation' for the support of such homes; and if, from unforeseen conditions, the amount provided by taxation is not sufficient, it seems to me that the provisions of section 5656 should be available.

"The amendment of section 3104 (103 O. L., 864-893), substitutes an annual for a quarterly report by the trustees. As there is no longer a quarterly report upon which to base an appropriation under section 3105, are the commissioners to make a semi-annual appropriation under 5649-3d?"

While you state that the trustees of the Montgomery County Children's Home did not comply with the provisions of section 3104, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment, 103 O. L., 893, requiring said trustees to file with the commissioners of said county a quarterly report of the condition of said home, and a carefully prepared estimate, in writing, of the wants of the home for the succeeding quarter, specifying, separately, the amounts required for each of the purposes therein enumerated, and that said commissioners, at their regular quarterly meetings, at which such reports and estimates were presented to them, did not make quarterly appropriations for the maintenance of said home as required by the provision of section 3105, G. C., in view of the fact that the semi-annual distributions of taxes levied by the commissioners of said county, for the maintenance of said home, were placed to the credit of the children's home fund, and that said commissioners made the proper semi-annual appropriations out of said fund for such maintenance, as required by section 5649-3d, G. C., I do not think that the failure of said officials to comply with the requirements of section 3104, as in force prior to said amendment, and section 3105, G. C., is material as affecting the answer to your first question.

Section 3104, G. C., as amended, now provides:

"The board of trustees shall report annually to the commissioners of the county the condition of the home, and make out and deliver to the commissioners a carefully prepared estimate, in writing, of the wants of the home for the succeeding year. Said estimate shall specify, separately, the amount required for each of the following purposes, to wit: First, maintenance. Second, repairs. Third, special improvements."

While this section, as amended, requires the trustees of the children's home to file an annual report of the condition of the home and, at the same time, a carefully prepared estimate, in writing, for the wants of the home for the succeeding year, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that it is still the duty of the county commissioners to make semi-annual appropriations from the children's home fund and that the expenditures for said home for the succeeding six months must be kept within said appropriation as required by section 3549-3d, which provides:

> "At the beginning of each fiscal half year, the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a of this act, shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from the moneys known to be in the treasury, from the collection of taxes, and all other sources of revenue, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget, nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

The same limitation is placed upon the trustees of the home by the provision of section 3106, G. C., which is as follows:

> "The trustees shall contract no debts and make no purchases in excess of the amount so appropriated."

You state that the trustees of the children's home, in meeting the increased cost of maintenance of said home, have anticipated future semi-annual distributions of taxes, with the result that their allowance for the six months commencing March 1, 1915, is almost exhausted, and in view of this fact, you inquire whether the county commissioners can borrow money under authority of section 5656, G. C., to meet the cost of maintaining said home "as the indebtedness accrues" during the remainder of the current half year.

The contracting of any indebtedness by the trustees of said home, in the absence of an appropriation by the county commissioners, of sufficient money for such purpose, would be a plain violation of the provisions of section 3106, G. C.

I understand, however, that the county commissioners, in making semi-annual appropriations from the children's home fund, have anticipated future semi-annual tax distributions in contravention of the provision of section 5649-3d, G. C., and that the trustees of the home have not violated the provisions of section 3106, G. C., by contracting indebtedness beyond the semi-annual appropriations made by said commissioners.

The county commissioners had no authority in law to appropriate any of the money realized from the collection of taxes for the first half of the year 1914, levied for the maintenence of the children's home, to be used by the trustees of the home for the payment of any indebtedness incurred prior to March 1, 1915. In so doing they violated the plain provision of section 5649-3d, G. C.

I appreciate the embarrassing situation confronting the county commissioners, but, from your statement of facts, it is evident that this situation arises on account of the failure of the commissioners to properly estimate the needs of the children's home for the years 1913 and 1914, and their consequent failure to make a sufficient levy as authorized and required by section 3078, G. C., for the maintenance of said home for said years, and not on account of the inability of the commissioners to make a levy sufficient for such maintenance, because of the limitations of the statutes governing tax levies. You call attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, rendered to Hon. Eli H. Speidel, prosecuting attorney of Clermont county, under date of March 8, 1913, with special reference to the following:

"The Smith one percent. law, section 5649-3d, provides that, all expenditures for a given period of time shall be made from and within the appropriations required by the section.

"I have in other opinions held that this section imposes an absolute limitation upon the amount which may be expended by the county commissioners for any purpose other than one for which money may be borrowed. That is to say, it has been, and still is my opinion, that if the county commissioners are authorized to borrow money for a particular purpose, they may, through the exercise of the borrowing power, expend more money in a given half yearly period than is permitted to be expended by section 5649-3d. Stating it still in another way, section 5649-3d limits the power of the commissioners to expend current revenues only and does not restrain the expenditure of borrowed money."

The question asked by Mr. Speidel was as follows:

"May the county commissioners borrow money for the purpose of supporting the county infirmary when the funds raised by taxation for that purpose are exhausted?"

Mr. Hogan held that, so far as the Smith one per cent. law is concerned, money borrowed under section 2434, for the relief or support of the poor, may be expended, without reference to any appropriation made by the county commissioners, and that the commissioners of Clermont county were therefore authorized to meet the indebtedness incurred for the support of the poor by borrowing money and issuing bonds under said section.

There is nothing in this opinion that leads me to conclude, in view of your statement of facts, that the commissioners of Montgomery county can borrow money under section 5656, G. C., to make up a deficiency in the children's home maintenance fund for the current half year. On the contrary, it seems to me, said opinion warrants the opposite conclusion in view of the fact that there is no statutory provision expressly authorizing county commissioners to issue bonds and to levy a tax to pay the interest on said bonds and provide a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity, for the purpose of providing a fund for the maintenance of the children's home, in addition to the fund realized from the semi-annual distribution of the annual tax levy for such maintenance.

Answering your first question, I am of the opinion that the commissioners of Montgomery county cannot borrow money under authority of section 5656, G. C., to make up a deficiency in the children's home maintenance fund for the current half year.

The unfortunate situation confronting said board of county commissioners is due not to a lack of lawful authority on the part of said board to provide sufficient funds to maintain the children's home of said county, but to the failure of said board to comply with the requirements of section 5649-3d of the General Code, above quoted, and to fully exercise the authority conferred upon it for said purpose by the provision of section 3078, G. C.

I might suggest that, if there is a surplus in any other county fund, except the proceeds or balances of special levies, loans or bond issues, not needed for the purposes of such fund, the county commissioners may, on an order of the common pleas court, upon application made under authority of section 2296, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 522, and in compliance with the requirements of sections 2297, et seq., of the General Code, transfer such surplus to the children's home fund, but the money realized from such transfer would not be available for appropriation until September 1, 1915, for the reason that on March 1, 1915, the county commissioners, in compliance with the provisions of section 5649-3d, G. C., made an appropriation for the maintenance of the children's home "from the moneys known to be in the treasury from the collection of taxes" levied for such purpose, and from "all other sources of revenue" applicable to said purpose, and said section requires that "all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MEMBER OF BOARD OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—REMOVAL FROM TOWNSHIP IS NOT ABANDONMENT OF OFFICE—TEMPORARY AND PERMANENT REMOVAL DISTINGUISHED—WHAT IS ABANDONMENT OF OFFICE—REMEDY.

A temporary removal by a public officer for a limited time from a district represented and with no intention to abandon or surrender the office or to cease to perform its duties will not be deemed an abandonment of an office.

A permanent removal by a public officer from the district represented, will at once, ipso facto, vacate the office.

A refusal or neglect to exercise the functions of an office for so long a period as to reasonably warrant the presumption that an officer does not desire or intend to perform the duties of an office at all, will be held to amount to an abandonment, but it is ordinarily held that such an abandonment does not, of itself, create a complete vacancy and that a judicial determination of the fact is necessary to render it conclusive.

Sections 10-1 to 10-4, inclusive, of the G. C., furnish an appropriate remedy where a public officer is guilty of gross neglect of duty.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1915.

HON. OTHO M. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

SIR:—I have your communication of March 1, 1915, inquiring as to whether or not a certain Mr. Stuckey is still a member of the board of township trustees of Lykens township, Crawford county, in view of certain facts set forth in your communication: and also your letter of April 29, 1915, transmitting to me additional information necessary in the preparation of an opinion covering this matter. From these two communications the following state of facts appears to exist:

About April 1, 1914, Mr. Stuckey, who was then a member of the board of trustees of Lykens township, left the township and went to the city of Bucyrus. His family continued to reside in Lykens township until some time between the 15th and the 22nd of September, 1914, when the family also moved to Bucyrus. Since the first day of April, 1914, the board of trustees of Lykens township has held twenty-five official meetings. Mr. Stuckey has attended fifteen of these meetings, and has been absent ten times. Beginning on June 13th, he was absent from three consecutive meetings, and again, beginning on August 1st, he was absent from three consecutive meetings. Since October 3rd, twelve meetings have been held and Mr. Stuckey has only been absent twice during that period. It also appears that on some of the occasions when Mr. Stuckey was present, he would only remain a short time and would leave before the business of the board had been completed. Mr. Stuckey still claims his residence in Lykens township, and voted there at the election in November, 1914. You inquire as to whether or not, under the above state of facts, Mr. Stuckey still holds the position of township trustee or whether a vacancy has been created.

If a vacancy exists in the office of township trustee, due to the facts above set forth, it is to be attributed to one of two causes, to wit: (1) Removal from the township; (2) Abandonment of the office.

A mere temporary removal for a limited time, from the district represented, and with no intention to abandon or surrender the office, or to cease to perform its duties, will not be deemed an abandonment of an office. Mechem's Public Offices and Officers, section 438.

Temporary absence from the district represented, for the purpose of engaging in business for a limited time, will not amount to an abandonment of an office. Curry v. Stewart, 8 Bush (Ky.), 560.

The above cited case is also authority for the proposition that a permanent removal by an officer from the district represented will at once, ipso facto, vacate the office.

It is impossible to determine from your statement of facts, whether Mr. Stuckey has temporarily removed from the township for the purpose of engaging in business for a limited time, or whether he has permanently removed from the township. I assume, however, from the fact that he voted at the November, 1914, election, that his removal from the township is only temporary, and for the purpose of engaging in business, or for some similar purpose, and if that be the fact, then such removal would not vacate the office. If, on the other hand, it appears from the actual facts, and from Mr. Stuckey's statement of intentions together that his removal from the township is permanent, then that fact would result in rendering the office vacant.

I am of the opinion that so far as Mr. Stuckey's absence from meetings, and failure to remain in other cases until the close of the meetings are concerned, they do not in themselves, constitute an abandonment of the office. A refusal, or neglect to exercise the functions of an office for so long a period, as to reasonably warrant the presumption that an officer does not desire or intend to perform the duties of the office at all, will be held to amount to an abandonment. Mechem's Public Offices and Officers, section 435.

The facts in the case now under consideration do not bring it within the above statement of the law. Even where the refusal or neglect to exercise the functions of the office is for so long a period as to warrant the presumption that the officer does not desire or intend to perform the duties of the office at all, it is ordinarily held that such an abandonment does not of itself create a complete vacancy, but that a judicial determination of the fact is necessary to render it conclusive. Van Orsdall v. Hazard, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 243.

Answering your question specifically, and basing my answer upon the assumption that Mr. Stuckey's absence from the township is only temporary, and for some specific purpose, such for instance, as engaging in business for a limited time, it is my opinion that under the facts stated by you, a vacancy has not been created in the office in question.

Your inquiry is directed solely to the proposition of whether or not the facts related by you and set forth in this opinion, are such as to automatically create a vacancy in the office of township trustee, and the opinion is therefore limited to an answer of your specific question.

The legislature of 1913, in pursuance of the mandate of section 38 of article II of the constitution of Ohio, adopted September 3, 1912, passed an act to provide for the removal of certain officers for misconduct in office. This act is found in 103 O. L., 851, the section numbers being 10-1 to 10-4, inclusive. It is provided in section 1 of the act, being section 10-1 of the General Code, that any person holding office in this state or in any municipality, county or subdivision thereof, coming within the official classification in section 38 of article 2 of the constitution, who is guilty of certain acts specified in the section, shall upon complaint and hearing, have judgment of forfeiture of said office entered against him. Among the grounds upon which such judgment of forfeiture may be based, are refusal or wilful neglect to perform any official duty, gross neglect of duty and nonfeasance. Other sections of this act relate to the courts having jurisdiction in this matter and to the procedure necessary to secure the removal of a public officer.

The language "who refuses or wilfully neglects * * * to perform any official duty now or hereafter, imposed upon him by law" and "who is guilty of gross neglect of duty * * * or nonfeasance," has not received such a judicial interpretation as to make it possible to determine just what acts on the part of a public officer, or what failure upon his part to act, come within the terms of this statute. In the absence of a judicial definition or interpretation, for instance, of the term "gross neglect of duty," it is impossible to assert with confidence, just what failure to act will constitute gross neglect of duty on the part of a public official within the meaning of the terms as used in this section. The character or nature of the duties to be performed by a board and any excuse which a member of a board might have to offer for his failure to attend all the meetings of a board, might well be considered by the court in determining whether or not his official conduct had been such as to make him guilty of gross neglect of duty.

Many surrounding facts would have a bearing upon the determination of this question, and some of these facts in the particular case are not covered by your letters or within my knowledge, and while not holding that absence on the part of a township trustee from ten out of twenty-five meetings held by the board of trustees during a given period, and failure to remain during the entire session of the board on many of the fifteen occasions when the trustee was present, would, as a matter of law, constitute gross neglect of duty within the meaning of this statute, yet I am of the opinion that in the absence of any proper or valid excuse for such conduct, and especially if it be made to appear that important matters were before the board of trustees for consideration, and that the public business might suffer by reason of the failure of all the members of the board to attend the meetings, it would then be true that such conduct would constitute gross neglect of duty and that the offending official would be liable to have judgment of forfeiture pronounced against him in a proceeding instituted and carried forward under the provisions of the act referred to above.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TORRENS LAND ACT—REGISTRATION OF TITLE—FEES OF COUNTY RECORDER FOR RECORDING DOCUMENTS—FEES PAID ON PRESENTATION OF DOCUMENTS—COMPLETE RECORD OF EVERY CASE SHOULD BE SENT BY CLERK OF COURT TO COUNTY RECORDER.

In land registration, fees of recorder not specially provided for shall be charged as for services in similar cases authorized by law, section 8572-112, G. C. Fees due recorder to be paid on presentation of documents for filing or recording, section 2778, G. C. Clerk of court should demand from applicant necessary fees to cover all disbursements for filing and recording of various documents. Memorandum of disposition of every case should be sent by the clerk to the recorder, section 8572-12, G. C. All surveys ordered by court under section 8572-19, G. C., to be recorded under section 8572-29, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 7, 1915.

HON. ROBERT C. PATTERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have before me your letter of April 3, 1915, in which you ask for an opinion relative to certain questions arising under the operation of the land registration act, which is as follows:

"The county recorder has asked me some questions relating to the fees of his office under the registration of land title act, 103 O. L., 914, and as the questions relate to a subject that should be of uniform operation through the state, I am writing to you for your opinion in regard to them.

"1. Section 7 of this act requires the clerk of the court to file in the recorder's office a memorandum stating that the application for registration has been filed, and 'such memorandum shall be recorded and indexed by the county recorder.' The act contains no specific fee for the recorder for this recording and indexing, and we have advised the recorder that he is entitled under the provisions of the act at the bottom of page 958

" 'For filing, recording and indexing any papers or instruments other than those above provided, for any certified copy of record or of any instrument on file in his office, the same fees as may be allowed by law for like services."

to charge the same fees as he would for indexing and recording deeds and mortgages, but the recorder is in doubt as to whether he can demand this fee at the time the instrument is presented for record, under General Code, section 2778. The recorder contends that the bureau of inspection requires him to charge himself with all fees that are entered on his books, and that if they are not paid at the time the instrument is presented he will get in trouble with the next inspector. On page 959 of the land registration act, the following provision is made:

" 'Costs as herein provided may in any case be taxed, and by the court ordered to be paid by the parties in such manner as to it may seem just and reasonable.'

"It seems to me that unless the provisions of section 2778, requiring the fees to be paid at the time of the presentation of the instrument to be recorded are mandatory, that the costs of this filing and recording could be carried along and paid in the costs of the case; although undoubtedly it would be much better for the recorder's accounts to have it paid at the time of presentation.

"2. The same question arises under section 12, which provides:

" 'As soon as an application is disposed of the clerk shall make a memorandum stating the disposition of the case, and shall send the same to the recorder of deeds of the county, who shall record and index it with the records of deeds.'

"Mr. Jones, in a recent article on this act published in the law bulletin, and which has since been sent out by him in pamphlet form, states that this memorandum is required only in case where the court refuses to register the title. But I am unable to see any ground for such a construction from the language of the statute, and it seems to me that it would be a good thing for the memorandum to be sent down in every case, because it finally closes the record of the old system for keeping the records; and a certified copy of the decree sent down under the seal of the court, as provided in section 23 of the act, begins the new system.

"I would therefore like your opinion in addition to the question as to whether or not the recorder may demand the fee for recording and filing this instrument at the time of its presentation. Also as to whether or not this memorandum is to be sent down in all cases or only in cases where the proceeding in court is dropped.

"3. Section 29 of the act requires the recorder to keep books to be known as 'records of surveys of registered lands,' and I understand the surveys to be kept in this are those ordered by the court under section 19 of the act. The act provides that a plat shall be filed with the application in the common pleas court, and section 22 requires that the decree

'shall contain an accurate description and plat of each separate parcel of the land as finally determined and adopted by the court.'

"As this plat which is required to be in the decree must be entered upon the certificate of registration sent to the recorder, and then also placed upon the owner's duplicate certificate, the provision for recording the surveys ordered by the court seems useless; but for recording such surveys is the recorder entitled to the fees under section 2779 of the General Code?"

Answering your first question, as to the authority of the recorder to charge fees for the recording and indexing of the memorandum noting that application for registration has been filed, which memorandum is to be filed with the recorder by the clerk of the court, I have to advise that the fee to be charged in this case is governed by the provisions of section 8572-112 of the General Code, to be found on page 958, 103 O. L. the part particularly referred to being as follows:

> "For filing, recording and indexing any papers or instruments other than those above provided, for any certified copy of record or of any instrument on file in his office, the same fees as may be allowed by law for like services," resort being had to the above in view of the fact that no special provision is made for fee for the recorder in connection with the recording and indexing of the memorandum provided for in section 8572-7 of the act.

With reference to your inquiry as to the authority of the recorder to perform the above services without receiving the fees at the time the instrument is filed for record, I have to advise that it is provided in section 8572-112, G. C., among other things:

> "For certifying pending suits, judgments, liens, attachments, executions or levies, the officers certifying the same to the recorder shall receive a fee of twenty-five cents, to be paid by the party interested, and taxed in the costs of the case."

Section 2778 of the General Code, after enumerating the fees to be charged for certain services, provides as follows:

> "The fees in this section provided shall be paid upon the presentation of the respective instruments for record (or) upon the application for any certified copy of the record."

The word "or" in parentheses in the above quotation does not appear in section 2778 as printed in the General Code, but was a part of the act as passed in 102 O. L., at page 290.

Under the provisions of section 2778 of the General Code, quoted above, it is clearly made the duty of the recorder to collect the necessary fees upon the presentation of the various records for filing, recording, and so forth, and there is no provision in law authorizing the recorder to disregard the provisions of section 2778, nor in fact is there any necessity growing out of the operation of the land registration act for the disregard of said section.

At the time the original application is filed, the clerk of the court should demand, in addition to the three dollars to be paid to him in full of all clerk's fees, as charges in such proceeding on behalf of the applicant as necessary to cover any disbursements which he will be obliged to make in filing papers with the recorder on behalf of the applicant. I might say that this course has been followed by some of the clerks with whom I have consulted in reference to the matter. For instance, the clerk, at the time of the filing of the application, knows that it will be necessary to file with the recorder the memorandum provided for in section 8572-7 of the General Code, also the memorandum concerning the disposition of the case, provided for in section 8572-12 of the General Code.

Referring to your second question, I have to advise that, from a careful reading of the act referred to, I have been unable to find a basis for the statement that the clerk in certain cases may dispense with the memorandum which under the provisions of section 8572-12, G. C., he is to file with the recorder showing what disposition is made of the case.

Section 8572-12, G. C., which is to be found on page 920 of 103 O. L., is as follows:

> "After the filing of an application and before registration, the land therein described may be dealt with, and instruments relating thereto may be recorded and indexed, in the same manner as if no such application had been filed. As soon as an application is disposed of the clerk shall make a memorandum stating the disposition of the case, and shall send the same to the recorder of deeds of the county, who shall record and index it with the record of deeds."

I would advise, in view of the provisions of the section quoted above, that the memorandum referred to therein is to be sent to the recorder in all cases, and that the fees to be paid to the recorder should be paid on presentation of the memorandum from the sum to be procured from the applicant, as before stated.

Coming to your third question, which refers to the fees to be charged for the recording of such surveys as the court may direct to be made in connection with any land title registration case, I have to advise that, while, as you state, there may be a duplication of the surveys on file in the recorder's office, by reason of the fact that the decree of the court shall contain an accurate description and plat of each separate parcel of land as finally determined and adopted by the court, and that under the provisions of section 8572-29 of the General Code, a copy of the survey shall be filed in the "records of surveys of registered land," yet the provision of section 8572-29 of the General Code, is plain, and the record therein provided should be made in every case where the survey is ordered.

You understand, of course, that this does not apply to every application for the registration of land title, but only in such cases when it is made necessary "for the purpose of determining the boundaries and a more accurate and definite description of the land," as provided for in section 8572.

As there is no express provision in the act for the fees to be charged for recording of the surveys, resort must be had to section 8572-112, G. C., quoted above, where authority is given to charge the same fees as may be allowed by law for like services; and as the survey referred to is in reality a plat, the provision for the payment of fees for the recording of the same is to be found in section 2779 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "For recording assignment * * * any plat not exceeding six lines, one dollar; and for each additional line, ten cents."

Upon ascertaining from the recorder as to the fees to be charged for the recording of the survey, the clerk should call upon the applicant to provide such recording fees so that section 2778 of the General Code may be complied with when the survey is presented to the recorder for filing and recording.

It is my opinion, therefore, that under the provisions of the act "to provide for the settlement, registration, transfer and assurance of land titles, and to simplify and facilitate transactions in real estate," to be found in 103 O. L., pages 914 to 960, inclusive, that the recorder, in the absence of express provisions for fees for services, may charge the same fees as provided by law for like services, and inasmuch as under section 2778 G. C., to which no exception has been made in the above entitled act, the recorder is compelled to demand his fees for filing and recording, such fees should be procured by the clerk from the applicant, to be paid to the recorder on the presentation of the various documents offered for filing and recording; that it is the duty of the clerk in every case, as soon as an application is disposed of, to make and send to the recorder a memorandum stating the disposition of the case, in order that said memorandum may be recorded and indexed with the record of deeds.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE FOR CERTAIN CANAL LANDS—CITY OF MASSILLON TO L. P. SCHIMKE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 6, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination a lease to L. P. Schimke, of certain canal land in the city of Massillon, Ohio, valued at $1,666.66.

I find that this lease has been executed according to the provisions of the statutes governing the leasing of canal lands, and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR CERTAIN ROAD IMPROVEMENTS.

Final resolutions on the following roads, as submitted for approval by the state highway department, are defective:

(1) Cleveland-Buffalo, Lake county, petition 852.
(2) Paulding-Woodburn, Paulding county, petition 1404.
(3) Mansfield-Galion, Richland county, petition 1138.
(4) Mansfield-Shelby road, Richland county, petition 823.
(5) Akron-Cuyahoga, Summit county, petition 1367.
(6) Lancaster-New Lexington, Perry county, petition 894.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your communication of May 3, 1915, transmitting to me for my consideration the six final resolutions referred to below. I have examined these resolutions and find them defective for the reasons set forth below, and am therefore returning the same to you without my approval.

(1) Cleveland-Buffalo, Lake county, petition 852;

It appears from an examination of this resolution, including the certificate of the chief clerk of the state highway department, that all the proceedings had by the county commissioners of Lake county have been taken under the inter-county highway law, being sections 1178 to 1231 inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, but that the money which is to be used in paying the state's proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement is to be taken from the main market road fund. I find no provision of law authorizing county commissioners to engage in a scheme of co-operative road improvement with the state highway commissioner, when the state's proportion of the cost and expense is to be paid from the main market fund. The only statutory authority for co-operation between the state and its several counties, contemplates the expenditures by the state of inter-county highway funds.

(2) Paulding-Woodburn road, Paulding county, petition 1404;

The chief clerk of the state highway department has certified upon this resolution, under date of May 3, 1915, that there has been appropriated from the highway fund of the state highway department the sum of $14,000 to the credit of Paulding county. The improvement in question is an inter-county highway improvement, and under the terms of the current appropriation bill under which your department is now operating, there could not, on the third day of May, 1915, be a sum available for an inter-county highway improvement in any county of the state in excess of $8,874.73. The current appropriation bill carries in effect an appropriation of $8,874.73 for inter-county highway work in each of the 88 counties of the state and by the terms of the bill all balances remaining in the inter-county highway fund on the 12th day of March, 1915, were lapsed so that, as above stated, there could only be in the inter-county highway fund to the credit of Paulding county, on the third day of May, 1915, $8,874.73, assuming that no contingent liabilities had been contracted against the same from the 12th day of March to the third day of May, 1915. Under the circumstances I deem it proper to call your attention to these facts and to go back of the certificate of the chief clerk of the highway department and withhold my approval from this resolution.

(3) Mansfield-Galion road, Richland county, petition 1138;

It appears from the certificate of the chief clerk of the highway department that the state's proportion of the cost and expense of this work is to be paid from the maintenance and repair fund. I am assuming, therefore, that the contemplated work is in the nature of a repair. I make this assumption for the reason that the maintenance and repair fund, as indicated by its name, can be used only for repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of public highways. It further appears from the face of the resolution that the road to be improved is less than one mile in length and it does not appear that the proposed improvement is an extension of or connected with a permanently improved road, street or highway of approved construction. As before observed, the only indication on the resolution that the improvement contemplated is in the nature of a repair, is found in the certificate of the clerk to the effect that the state's proportion of the cost is to be paid from the maintenance and repair fund. Before approving this resolution, I would therefore thank you to endorse thereon, or attach thereto, a certificate to the effect that the proposed work consists of the repair of an existing highway.

While it will not affect the question of the approval of this resolution, for the reason that the matter will go to the rights of the township and county rather than to the rights of the state highway department, I deem it proper to refer to what seems to be a copy of a resolution adopted March 10, 1915, by the trustees of Madison township, Richland county, a copy of this resolution of the township trustees being attached to the final resolution now under consideration. In this resolution of the trustees they agree to pay "the township's share of the cost of said improvement." Under section 1225 of the General Code, the township's share may be nothing or it may be any amount less than the entire cost of the repair. A determination, therefore, on the part of the trustees of Madison township to pay "the township's share," does not mean anything, or at least is too indefinite to fix the rights between county commissioners and the trustees, for the reason that the law does not fix the township's share of a repair proposition or indeed require them to pay any part of the cost.

(4) Mansfield-Shelby road, Richland county, petition 823;

There is an error in the last paragraph of the resolution. The amount appropriated by the county commissioners, as written in the resolution is "twenty-five thousand, six hundred and 00/100 dollars" where as the amount appropriated by the commissioners, as set forth in figures, is "$20,000.00."

It appears by the certificate of the chief clerk of the state highway department endorsed on this resolution, that there has been appropriated from the highway fund of the state highway department the sum of $15,600.00 to the credit of Richland county. In this connection I desire to refer you to my previous statements in this communication, relative to the resolution in the case of the Paulding-Woodburn road in Paulding county, merely observing that on May 3, 1915, the date of the chief clerk's certificate, there could not have been in the inter-county highway fund to the credit of Richland county, more than $8,874.73.

(5) Akron-Cuyahoga road, Summit county, petition 1367;

It appears that the proceedings had by the county commissioners of Summit county, were under the sections of the Code relating to inter-county highways, whereas the certificate of the chief clerk of your department shows that the state's proportion of the cost and expense is to be paid from the main market road fund. In this connection I refer you to the statements heretofore made in this communication, relative to the resolution as to the Cleveland-Buffalo road.

It also appears on the face of this resolution that the proposed improvement is less than one mile in length and there is nothing on the face of the resolution to show that the improvement is an extension of, or connected with a permanently improved road, street or highway of approved construction. Either of the objections above suggested would be fatal to the validity of this resolution.

(6) Lancaster-New Lexington road, Perry county, petition 894;

The description in this resolution should be corrected to read 1.44 mills instead of 144 mills. In the last paragraph of the resolution and the second line thereof, the word "of" should be stricken out and the words "less than" should be substituted therefor. I suggest that the resolution be returned to the commissioners of Perry county with instructions to make the necessary corrections and then readopt the resolution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SENATE BILL NO. 187—LIMITATIONS OF SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW FOR TAX LEVIES DISREGARDED IN PROPOSED BILL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1915.

HONORABLE FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted for my examination amended senate bill No. 187, and have requested my opinion upon the following specific question in connection therewith:

> "Is the levy of taxes, provided in section 3 of the bill, subject to any of the limitations of the Smith one per cent. law, so called?"

The language of section 3, in this particular, is as follows:

> "The resolution authorizing and directing the execution and delivery of said bonds shall provide for levying and collecting annually, by taxation on the taxable property in the county, of an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, which may be assessed, levied and collected without regard to any limitation or restriction contained in any other law, or laws, upon the amount of taxes which may be assessed, levied and collected."

This language unquestionably has the effect of taking the levies, therein provided for, outside of all the limitations of the Smith law. That is to say, the levy is outside of the fifteen mill limitation as well as of the other limitations of said law. In short, there would be no limitation or restriction whatever upon the taxes which might be levied under this language.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MAYOR OF MUNICIPALITY—JUSTICE OF PEACE—MAY NOT REMIT A PART OF FINE OR PART OF COST WHEN ONCE ASSESSED FOR VIOLATION OF STATUTES—FINES AND COSTS OR FINES ONLY MAY BE SUSPENDED.

Mayors of municipalities and justices of the peace may not remit a part of fine or part of cost when once assessed for violation of statutes. They may suspend both fines and costs or fines only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On March 30, 1915, you asked me if mayors of municipalities or justices of the peace have the power to remit fines in cases brought for violation of the statutes. On April 10, 1915, I answered this enquiry, holding that there is no authority for a mayor to remit any fine due to the state of Ohio, subject to the question of the authority of a mayor to revise or modify his judgment in any such cases by proper proceedings for such purposes. I also referred to the opinion of Attorney General Wade H. Ellis on the same question, given on October 24, 1907. You now supplement the question so answered by submitting for my opinion thereon the following facts.

> "1. In some actions the statutory fine has been assessed, together with costs. The magistrate, or mayor, has then remitted the whole fine, or all but one dollar, which is less than the minimum fine, collecting the costs. Is this remitting of the fine legal?
> "2. In other actions, the statutory fines have been assessed, and the magistrate, or mayor, has then suspended the fine, or fines and costs, and no collection of either has been made. Is this permissible?
> "3. In still other cases the magistrate, or mayor, has assessed a fine and costs, and has suspended all of the fine but one dollar, which is less than the minimum fine, and has collected the one dollar and costs. Please advise if this is in accordance with law."

Answering your first enquiry, I beg to advise that the magistrate or mayor may suspend sentence upon the payment of costs, but in no case can he remit a fine due to the state of Ohio. Neither can the magistrate, or mayor, impose or collect a fine less in amount than the minimum fine fixed by the statutes. The magistrate or mayor has no authority to disregard the express provisions of the statutes as to the amount of the fines he shall impose.

As to your second enquiry, I know of no provision of law that would prevent the magistrate or mayor from assessing a fine and costs and then proceeding to suspend both the fine and costs, or fine only. However, such a course is inconsistent with the proper administration of the law and the maintenance of respect therefor. To exempt one found guilty of violating a statute from paying the costs incurred in his prosecution is not conducive to the preservation of the public peace and welfare and, unless in an exceptional case, is not to be approved.

Your third enquiry involves the same principle as your first. The magistrate or mayor must either suspend the entire amount of the fine, or collect the full amount thereof as imposed under the letter of the statute under which the prosecution has been brought. It is the duty of the magistrate or mayor to administer the law as he finds it and not to make unauthorized substitution therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

REPORT ON FOLLOWING CLAIMS TO FINANCE COMMITTEE OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: WALTER WOHLWEND; CITY OF ST. MARYS; CITY OF CHILLICOTHE; DEFIANCE UTILITIES CO.; D. K. WATSON; W. F. GATES AND SUE NOON; THE VAN CAMP PACKING CO.; WEBB C. BALL CO.; T. J. McKIM; CUYAHOGA COUNTY; OHIO LIGHT & POWER CO., NEWARK; CLERK OF COURT OF ASHLAND COUNTY; FRANK YOUNG; RIGHTMIRE AND NIXON, MT. VERNON; JOHN ALBURN.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

HON. FRANK H. REIGHARD, Chairman Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to report to you upon the following claims which have been presented as claims against the state to the finance committee of the house of representatives. The claims are as follows:

Walter Wohlwend, City of St. Marys, City of Chillicothe, Defiance Utilities Co., D. K. Watson, W. F. Gates and Sue Noon, The Van Camp Packing Co., Webb C. Ball Co., T. J. McKim, Cuyahoga County, Ohio Light and Power Co., Newark; Clerk of Court of Ashland County, Frank Young, Rightmire and Nixon, Mt. Vernon, John Alburn.

As to the claim of Walter Wohlwend, I am unable to advise specifically. The papers submitted to me do not show the foundation of this claim. The claimant asserts that he has been damaged by the failure of water power at a certain grist mill on the Ohio canal. Whether or not he is entitled to water power, as a matter of right under a contract with the state; whether or not the failure of the water power was due to any neglect on the part of the state in the maintenance of its public works, and all similar facts are not shown.

It seems clear to me, however, that in any view of the case this claimant should not be allowed, as damages, the cost of supplying other power for the operation of his mill.

I am unable to make any recommendation whatever in this case.

As to the claim of the city of St. Marys, I beg to advise that this is a sewer assessment against lands of the state. While the superintendent of public works should be consulted as to the location of these lands and the benefits to be derived from them by the improvement, I have no hesitancy in advising that if his statements show that the lands have been properly assessed the claim should be allowed.

The claim of the city of Chillicothe is similar to that of the city of St. Marys except that in this case the assessments are for street paving. It appears that the canal property belonging to the state and located in the city of Chillicothe has been abandoned for canal purposes and that the lands in question abut directly upon the improvement. Should the state sell these lands, as it undoubtedly will ultimately do, the value of the improvement would certainly affect the selling price of the land. The state should, in good conscience, pay these assessments. In my opinion the certificates and plat attached to the papers making this claim are sufficient on their face to show that the claim is a proper one.

The claim of The Defiance Utilities Company is for refund of corporation taxes paid to the state. It appears that the taxes charged and collected from this company were correct in accordance with the report which the company made, but that one of the company's officers made a mistake in the report, which cost this company the sum of $65.00. If this mistake had been discovered within the specified time it could have been corrected by application to the tax commission, as was the case in the matter of The Van Camp Packing Company which will be hereinafter referred to. The state is under no obligation to pay such a claim as this because of the failure of the corporation to act within the time specified in the statute. However, if the circumstances warrant, as for example if the mistake was not discovered in time to make application to the commission, then there would be no impropriety in making an allowance on the theory that the state has collected more taxes than the corporation ought to have paid and is hence under a moral obligation to make the refunder. Primarily, the corporation should seek restitution from its officer whose carelessness gave rise to the over-payment.

The claim of W. F. Gates arises out of a deposit which he was required to make by the Perry county liquor licensing board to cover the cost of a transcript of the proceedings in the hearing of his rejection of an application for a license. The law requires such deposits to be made and to be transmitted to the state board, and requires the state board to pay all moneys received by it daily into the state treasury to the credit of the state liquor license fund. It is the opinion of this department that the last described requirement does not make it necessary to pay moneys of this sort into the treasury, but this was evidently done in the case of this claim. The claimant is now entitled to a refunder not, however, in the full amount of the deposit made by him, but in the amount of the deposit less the cost and expense of preparing the record of testimony and proceedings. Evidently the next claim, that of Sue Noon, represents the cost of preparing such record. Accordingly the applicant, W. F. Gates, has a valid claim in the amount of $79.60 against the state, and the applicant, Sue Noon, if she has not been paid for her services, has a proper claim of $20.40 against the state. The money for the payment of both of these claims, however, should be appropriated from the state liquor license fund and not from the general revenue fund.

The claim of the Van Camp Packing Company is for franchise taxes paid on December 1, 1914, in accordance with the determination of the tax commission, which was subsequently corrected on January 25, 1915. These proceedings are regular, and the company is entitled to a refunder, upon a showing that it actually paid $470.39, in the amount of the difference between said sum and $381.37, which is the amount due under the corrected certification. In my opinion the papers submitted constitute a sufficient showing for an appropriation, but the special auditing committee, which the legislature will doubtless create for the purpose of auditing these claims, should require the state treasurer's receipt showing the payment of $470.39.

The papers submitted to me in the matter of the claim of Webb C. Ball Company do not show sufficient facts upon which to base an appropriation. It appears that this company paid franchise taxes in the amount of $406.50 in the year 1914, and subsequently in 1915 the same company paid $820.00 in settlement of the claims of the state for franchise taxes for the years 1911-1914 inclusive. The records of this department show that there was a confusion of names, and the exact amount which is to be refunded to the Webb C. Ball Company, if any, is uncertain.

At this stage of the proceedings it would be proper, in my judgment, to make an appropriation in the sum of $406.50 to the Webb C. Ball Company and direct the special auditing committee to allow so much thereof as may be recommended by the attorney general and tax commission upon more complete investigation. Otherwise, we would be unable to advise the making of any appropriation.

In the matter of the claim of T. J. McKim it appears that the state highway department has already made a settlement with the claimant and has paid him the sum of $3,455.00 in full of all claims. The issue in this case appears to be one of fact. I am unable to advise, as a matter of law, upon such meager details as have been furnished to me and without consulting the state highway department, that this claim should be paid. The ground of the claim is that the claimant, a contractor, was damaged in a certain amount by the failure of the state to furnish common labor, for the work contracted for, in accordance with the terms of the contract, and that he was accordingly damaged. This matter should be taken up with the state highway department and acted upon in accordance with its recommendation.

The claim of Cuyahoga county is for moneys paid upon forfeited recognizances, no part of which should go to the state treasury. The claim amounts to $1,033.83, and is due to Cuyahoga county from the state.

In this connection, however, I advise the committee that the state has a claim against Cuyahoga county in excess of $17,000.00 for the cost and expense of maintaining patients committed from that county to the institution for feeble-minded. Other counties in the state have paid similar claims, and this department is now seeking to enforce the collection of this claim against Cuyahoga county. So long as Cuyahoga county refuses to pay its obligation to the state it does not seem appropriate that the state should pay its obligation to Cuyahoga county.

The claim of the Ohio Light and Power Company of Newark, Ohio, arises by virtue of the shutting off of the water in the Ohio canal through the sale of a part of the canal located in the city of Newark. The claimant had paid water power rental in advance and is accordingly entitled to a rebate in the sum claimed, which has been approved by the department of public works.

The claim of the clerk of courts of Ashland county is founded upon the provisions of section 5144, G. C., which authorizes the court of appeals, in determining a case of contest of the election of a common pleas judge, to adjudge a part of the cost against the state treasury. The court of appeals, in the trial of the election contest case of Frey v. Graven, ordered that the clerk of courts and the clerk of the board of elections be allowed each the sum of $10.00 for expenses of transferring papers and dockets and election papers. I do not find any authority of law for the allowance of such items as costs in a case of this character. Nevertheless, the court of appeals has made the allowance, and the same is reasonable in amount. I am unable to recommend an appropriation for this claim, yet I cannot advise against the same in the face of the decree of the court.

The claims of Frank Young and Rightmire and Nixon, of Mt. Vernon, arise out of the sale of diseased hogs from the state farm at Mt. Vernon. There is no question, upon the affidavits submitted, but that the representative of the state is responsible for the damage suffered by Mr. Young, and for the damages suffered by those to whom Messrs. Rightmire and Nixon sold some of these animals. The latter named gentlemen have been held by the court primarily responsible for the damages on account of such sales. I observe that the board of administration recommends these appropriations and I concur in the recommendation.

The claim of D. K. Watson for counsel fees for services rendered in the case of State v. Fenn is one concerning which I am unable to make any recommendation to the committee. The records of this department disclose that General

Watson, after the rendition of these services, was paid the sum of $3,300.00, but unfortunately there is no showing as to the services covered by this payment. The amount of the fee is reasonable considering the nature of the services rendered, the only question in my mind being as to whether or not the compensation which General Watson has already received includes these services. Inasmuch as the former allowance was made by the general assembly in 1911 it is suggested that there may be on file the papers of the finance committee of that year and statements which will make this matter clear.

The claim of John A. Alburn is for services rendered under the direction of this department in the administration of Honorable Timothy S. Hogan as attorney general. The records of this department show that these services were rendered and that Mr. Alburn has never been paid for them. It is suggested, however, that General Hogan can be of more assistance to the committee, in regard to this matter, than I can.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL LOAN COMPANIES—NOT AUTHORIZED TO REDUCE CAPITAL STOCK—EACH SHARE OF STOCK REQUIRED TO BE OF FACE VALUE OF FIFTY DOLLARS.

A collateral loan company, organized under sections 9857, 9858, et seq., G. C., is not authorized to reduce the amount of its capital stock, by reason of the fact that each share of stock is required by law to be of the face value of fifty dollars.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 3, 1915, in which you request my opinion, as follows:

> "This department is in receipt of certificate of reduction of capital stock of The Toledo Savings & Collateral Loan Company, attempting to reduce its capital stock from $400,000.00 to $10,000.00, by reducing the par value of each share from $50.00 per share as required by section 9858 to $1.25 per share. We are transmitting the same and request your opinion upon the following questions in reference thereto:
> "(A) May a collateral loan company reduce the authorized amount of its capital stock?
> "(B) May a collateral loan company reduce its authorized capital stock to an amount less than $20,000.00?
> "(C) May a collateral loan company reduce the par value of its shares to less than $50.00 per share?
> "Said certificate of reduction, and fee of $5.00 was received from H. E. French, 606 Summit St., Toledo, Ohio.
> "We are temporarily holding said check awaiting your opinion."

The Toledo Savings & Collateral Loan Company is a corporation organized under section 9857, et seq., General Code, which are as follows:

"Sec. 9857. Corporations may be organized for the purpose of making loans on pledges of goods and chattels and upon mortgage thereof; but they shall not receive money on deposit, engage in banking, nor make loans upon security other than herein is provided. The names of such corporations shall begin with the word 'The' and end with the words 'Collateral Loan Company.'

"Sec. 9858. The capital stock of such company shall not exceed five hundred thousand dollars in shares of fifty dollars each. When twenty thousand dollars have been duly subscribed and one-fourth of it actually paid in, the subscribers thereto may organize and transact business."

The above sections of the General Code, together with other following sections of the same act, were designed to authorize the organization and to regulate the business of collateral loan companies.

Under the terms of section 9858 supra such corporations must have a capital stock of at least twenty thousand dollars, divided into shares of fifty dollars each.

Section 8700 of the General Code, relative to the reduction of the capital stock of corporations, provides as follows:

"With the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of shares of the capital stock thereof stands on its books, the board of directors of such a corporation may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, and issue certificates therefor. The rights of creditors shall not be affected thereby; and a certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

The above section of the General Code was apparently intended to apply to corporations organized under general laws, which are not limited as to the amount of their capital stock or as to the amount or value of each share.

A collateral loan company, by virtue of the section of the General Code under which it is organized, must have a capital stock of at least twenty thousand dollars and each share of its stock must have a face value of fifty dollars. I am unable to understand, therefore, how such a corporation can reduce its capital stock under the provisions of section 8700 of the General Code and still maintain its shares at fifty dollars face value.

In answer to your first question, I am of the opinion, therefore, that a collateral loan company can not reduce the authorized amount of its capital stock.

A negative answer to your second and third questions follows of necessity from my answer to your first question.

I herewith return to you the certificate of reduction of capital stock of The Toledo Savings & Collateral Loan Company.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCE LAW—NO AUTHORITY TO SENTENCE FOR CRIME COMMITTED PRIOR TO PASSAGE OF ACT—ERRONEOUS SENTENCE—HOW TO PREVENT ITS EXECUTION—ELIGIBLE FOR SUSPENDED SENTENCE UNDER SUCH SENTENCE—JURISDICTION OF COURT TO SENTENCE PRISONER IN ABANDONMENT CASES CONTINUES UNTIL MINOR REACHES AGE OF SIXTEEN YEARS.

There is no authority in law to sentence under indeterminate sentence act for crime committed prior to the passage of the act.

Erroneous sentence to the penitentiary should be executed through proceedings in error—habeas corpus will not lie.

Imprisonment in penitentiary under erroneous sentence does not render prisoner ineligible for suspended sentence imposed subsequent thereto.

Jurisdiction of court to sentence prisoner in abandonment cases continues until minor reaches age of sixteen years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have before me your letter of April 1, 1915, in which you ask for an opinion, the same being as follows:

"The board of administration is today in receipt of a letter from P. E. Thomas, warden of the Ohio penitentiary, which reads as follows:

"'Attached please find papers in the case of Estel Judd, serial No. 43133, received November 20, 1914, from Clermont county for the crime of abandoning a legitimate child.

"'This man was sentenced in February, 1912, and the sentence was suspended, but he was not put on probation, hence was not certified to the Ohio penitentiary. He failed to keep his promise with the court regarding the payment of $2.00 or $2.50 per week and was arrested, brought into court and was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary, either under the old indictment, or the old sentence was put into execution, probably the latter. The sentence appears to be for the unexpired time of the maximum sentence from the date of the sentence, which would cause his release to be effective February 20, 1915.

"'It appears to me from previous cases that when a suspended or probationed sentence is given or allowed for time served upon the same, that the prisoner being committed to the Ohio penitentiary, either by order of the court or the Ohio board of administration, puts the original sentence into execution.

"'Hence I wish to know the status of this man's case: Whether he is to be released immediately or held on the original sentence, the same beginning November 20, 1914.'

"In view of the facts as stated in the warden's letter, the board requests your opinion as to whether Estel Judd, serial 43133, now confined in the Ohio penitentiary, should be released immediately or held on the original sentence beginning November 20, 1914."

With your letter you enclose a transcript of the docket and journal entry in the case of the State of Ohio v. Estel Judd, No. 4097 in the court of common pleas of Clermont county, Ohio; also a letter from Honorable Eli H. Speidel, addressed to Mr. Judd, at Columbus, Ohio, advising Mr. Judd that the sentence received by him in the above styled case should have expired February 20th, last. Mr. Speidel's letter was dated March 27, 1915.

A reading of your letter and an examination of the transcript and journal entry at once suggests the thought that there was a misunderstanding as to just what had transpired in the case under consideration, your letter indicating that the defendant had been sentenced in February, 1912, and that the sentence was suspended. In view of past experience with a number of cases similar to this one, I felt uncertain as to what actually occurred, and I addressed a letter to Honorable Eli H. Speidel, prosecuting attorney of Clermont county, under date of April 2, asking for full information relative to the matter. Under date of May 1, Mr. Speidel advises me as follows:

"Batavia, Ohio, May 1, 1915.

"Dear Sir:—I have your communication of April 29th, concerning the sentence of Estel Judd, an inmate of the Ohio penitentiary, who was committed thereto from this county for the crime of failing to provide for his minor child.

"I was under the impression that I had answered your letter of April 2nd, but I presume that the matter was overlooked, and consequently will endeavor herein to give you the information desired.

"Estel Judd was indicted by the Clermont county grand jury, on October 18, 1911, and on February 19, 1912, was arraigned on said indictment and entered a plea of guilty. The entry on the plea being the following form:

Court of Common Pleas,
"Clermont county, Ohio.

"State of Ohio, Plaintiff,
v.
"Estel Judd, Defendant.

No. 4097.
ENTRY ON PLEA OF GUILTY.

"This day came D. W. Murphy, prosecuting attorney on behalf of the state of Ohio, the defendant Estel Judd being into court in the custody of the sheriff, and his counsel, N. G. Cover, also coming, and thereupon said defendant, Estel Judd, was arraigned upon said indictment, the same being distinctly read to him, and was required to plead thereto, and for his plea thereto saith he is guilty, and he stands charged therein.

"And thereupon the defendant Estel Judd, agreeing in open court that he would pay the sum of $2.00 per week, commencing Saturday 24, 1912, and a like sum thereafter to Edward Tilton, as trustee, of Moscow, Ohio, for the support, care and maintenance of his minor child, Ethel Judd. And that he would within thirty days pay the costs in this case taxed at $----------.

"Said payment of $2.00 per week is to be made until the said Ethel Judd arrives at the age of sixteen years.

"Thereupon the court does suspend sentence herein upon said Estel Judd, upon the condition that he will fulfill the conditions and terms of said agreement above named in open court, otherwise said defendant, Estel Judd, is to be brought before this court as provided by statute for sentence.

"The defendant is hereby ordered released from jail.

"Judd having failed thereafter to comply with the order of the court as to the payment of the $2.00 per week, a capias was issued on September 14, 1914, for his arrest, and he was thereafter apprehended by the sheriff in Cincinnati, Ohio, and was brought before the court on November 13, 1914, for sentence, when the following order was made by the court:

" 'This day came Eli H. Speidel, prosecuting attorney, on behalf of the state of Ohio, the said defendant, Estel Judd being brought into court in the custody of the sheriff. And it being made to appear to the court that heretofore, to wit: On the 20th day of February, 1912, the said Estel Judd was arraigned upon the indictment, and for plea thereto said he was guilty as he stands charged therein.

" 'And it being made to further appear to the court that sentence on the said defendant was suspended upon the condition that the said Estel Judd pay the sum of $2.00 per week, commencing on Saturday, February 24, 1912, and a like sum on each Saturday thereafter for the support, care and maintenance of his minor child, Ethel Judd, until his said minor child should arrive at the age of sixteen years, said money to be paid to Edward Tilton, of Moscow, Ohio, as trustee for said child, and it being made further to appear to the court that the said Estel Judd has violated the terms of said probation, and has at no time paid any sum whatever to the said Edward Tilton, as such trustee for the support of said child, and the said Estel Judd being now brought before this court for sentence, as provided by statute, and it appearing that said defendant has been a fugitive from justice, and offering no good reason or excuse for his failure to pay said sum per week, it is ordered that the said defendant, Estel Judd, be imprisoned and confined in the penitentiary of the state, at Columbus, O., and kept at hard labor for an indeterminate period, but for a period of time not later than February 20, 1915, which is the maximum time for which he would have been sentenced for the crime charged in said indictment, and that he pay the costs of this prosecution, for which execution is awarded.'

"You will ascertain from the foregoing proceedings that Judd committed the crime prior to the enactment of the indeterminate prison sentence law, and had he been sentenced at the time he was arraigned, he would necessarily have been sentenced for a fixed period not to exceed three years.

"I am sure that Judge D. in sentencing Judd looked upon the matter as one of doubt as to whether or not he could be sentenced for an indeterminate sentence, as it might be claimed that the indeterminate law could not be retro-active in its effect, and that the crime having been committed prior to its enaction he only could be sentenced for a fixed period, or for a time not later than the expiration of the maximum time for which he might have been sentenced at the time of his original arraignment.

"However, whatever view the board of administration or yourself may take of the matter, it seems to me that a spirit of fairness towards this prisoner would require that he be confined no longer than the time indicated by the trial court, and if this could not be done, then a pardon ought to be issued. I do not say this in the sense that Judd by his actions is deserving of any great help or sympathy, but I know it was the intent and purpose of the court in sentencing Judd that he should be imprisoned for a period of time not later than February 20, 1915.

"If there is any further or additional information I can give you, kindly advise me."

A reading of Mr. Speidel's letter quoted above shows that Warden Thomas was under a misunderstanding as to the proceedings had in the Judd case at the time the plea of guilty was entered, the case having been disposed of under the provision of section 13010 of the General Code, which authorized the judge to defer sentence and release the defendant under bond conditioned upon the payment of the sum of two dollars per week to Edward Tilton, as trustee, for the care and maintenance of his minor child, Ethel Judd, commencing Saturday, February 24, 1912, and to continue until said Ethel Judd arrived at the age of sixteen years. The defendant Judd defaulted in his payments, and under the provisions of section 13015 a capias was issued on February 14, 1914, for his arrest and upon his apprehension by the sheriff at Cincinnati, Ohio, he was brought before the court on November 14, 1914, for sentence as provided in section 13015 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Upon the failure of such father or mother * * * to comply with any order and undertaking provided for in this subdivision of this chapter, he or she may be arrested by the sheriff or other officer, on a warrant issued on the precipe of the prosecuting attorney, and brought before the court for sentence. Thereupon the court may pass sentence, or for good cause shown, may modify the order at to the time and amount of payments, or take a new undertaking and further suspend sentence as may be for the best interests of the child. * * *"

From a reading of the order made by the court on November 13, 1914, it will be noted that the defendant was sentenced "to be imprisoned and confined in the penitentiary of the state, at Columbus, Ohio, and kept at hard labor for an indeterminate period, but for a period of time not later than February 20, 1915, which is the maximum time for which he would have been sentenced for the crime charged in said indictment, and that he pay the costs of this prosecution, for which execution is awarded."

The question arises as to what was the effect of the sentence imposed by the court and when would it expire.

The crime for which Judd was convicted occurred prior to May 29, 1913, when the new indeterminate sentence law (to be found in 103 Ohio Laws, page 29) went into effect; and in view of that fact the court would have no power or authority to sentence under the law passed subsequent to the commission of the crime, and, in fact in this case, subsequent to the conviction of the defendant, but would be obliged to look for his authority to sentence to a law in effect at the time the the crime was committed. The authority which might have been invoked at that time was to be found in section 13009 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Whoever, being the father of a legitimate child under sixteen years of age, * * * and leaves with intent to abandon such child, shall be imprisoned in a jail or workhouse at hard labor not less than six months nor more than one year, or in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years."

The judge in passing sentence in this case probably had in mind the provisions of section 13714 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Upon such revocation and termination, the court or magistrate may pronounce judgment at any time after such suspension within the longest period for which the defendant might have been sentenced, whereupon the judgment shall be in full force and effect, and the person shall be delivered over to the proper officer to serve his sentence."

The section quoted above, however, would apply only in cases where a sentence had been previously imposed and execution of the same suspended under the provisions of sections 13706, et seq., of the General Code. However, as no sentence had been previously imposed, and the only authority under which the sentence could have been imposed in this case resided in section 13009 of the General Code, above quoted, the sentence which was imposed and which was "for an intederminate period" being without authority of law was erroneous, and had steps been taken to correct the same the error would, in all probability, have been corrected at that time.

The supreme court of the state in case No. 39, volume 91, No. 14687, In re Harry Allen, not yet reported, speaking through Newman, J., says:

"The trial court in the instant case had jurisdiction of the person of the petitioner. It had jurisdiction to try him for the offense charged and to sentence him to a term in the penitentiary under section 12672. Instead there was an indeterminate sentence imposed of which the petitioner complains. If this was erroneous, the error committed by the court related to the sentence and punishment only and was not a jurisdictional one. The court merely entered and enforced a wrong judgment. Admitting then, for the purpose of this case, that there was no authority to impose the sentence, either by reason of the repeal of the indeterminate sentence law or its unconstitutionality, the punishment inflicted was erroneous and voidable, but not void. The sentence and punishment could have been corrected in a proceeding in error challenging the judgment of the court. The petitioner had ample opportunity to avail himself of the objections as to the sentence which he attempts to make here. A habeas corpus proceeding cannot perform the functions of a writ of error."

When this case was originally considered by the court, sentence was deferred on an order of the court conditioned upon the payment by the defendant of two dollars per week for the support, care and maintenance of his minor child, Ethel Judd, until the said minor child should arrive at the age of sixteen years. Section 13015, of the General Code, which is quoted above would empower the court to pass sentence on the defendant at any time before the child arrived at the age of sixteen years after the defendant had been arrested and brought before the court for a failure to comply with the order previously made, hence the defendant would be under the jurisdiction of the court for the purpose of sentence or modification of the order until Ethel Judd, the minor child, became sixteen years of age. The court in passing an erroneous sentence did not thereby lose jurisdiction over the defendant.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the sentence under which Estel Judd is confined in the penitentiary is erroneous, having been imposed without warrant of law, and that the matter should be taken up with the prosecuting attorney of Clermont county without delay to the end that the rights of the prisoner may be protected, at least to the extent of his having the benefit of the minimum penalty provided in section 13009 of the General Code, namely, one year in case of a sentence to the penitentiary, and that the judge, having retained his jurisdiction over the prisoner under the provisions of section 13015 of the General Code, may resentence him in accordance with the terms of section 13009 of the General Code, quoted above.

In case the judge should be inclined to suspend any sentence he may impose, and the prisoner is not otherwise ineligible to receive a suspended sentence under the provisions of section 13706 of the General Code, the fact of his having been confined in the penitentiary under the erroneous sentence hereinbefore referred to should not operate of itself against him.

This case, which is an unusual one, presents a question the practical solution of which rests between your board, the prosecuting attorney and the judge of the court, who imposed the sentence.

The papers submitted by you, together with jacket No. 43133, containing papers submitted by the warden of the Ohio penitentiary, are returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

(Enclosures)

P. S. The above opinion was prepared upon the assumption that the minor child referred to was a legitimate child, that assumption being borne out by all of the papers presented. However, from the prosecuting attorney's statement and a statement made by the bertillion officer of the penitentiary, it is gathered that the child is an illegitimate child, and the latter being the case, section 13008 of the General Code should be substituted where reference is made to section 13009 of the General Code in the opinion.

TRADING STAMPS—NOT SECURITIES WITHIN MEANING OF "BLUE SKY" LAW.

Trading stamps, coupons or stamps, commonly known as "trading stamps" are not securities within the meaning of the "Blue Sky" law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

HONORABLE HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 30th, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "This department is informed that there are several companies, some of them organized under the laws of Ohio, and some of them organized under the laws of other states, offering for sale in Ohio 'trading stamps.'
> "As yet the department has no full information in regard to any particular company. It may be stated, however, generally, that the companies sell to merchants coupons or trading stamps, which the merchants give out to their customers as premiums or rebates when cash purchases are made aggregating certain amounts. The stamps or coupons are redeemable in merchandise or railroad trips, or some other thing of value, when presented at the place designated as the office of the trading stamp company.
> "Are coupons or stamps sold to merchants under such circumstances 'securities' within the meaning of the Ohio blue sky law?"

Section 6373-1 of the General Code, prescribing who must be licensed under the blue sky law, is as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this act, no dealer shall, within this state, dispose or offer to dispose of any stock, stock certificates, bonds, debentures, collateral trust certificates or other similar instruments (all hereinafter termed 'securities') evidencing title to or interest in property, issued or executed by any private or quasi-public corporation, co-partnership or association (except corporations not for profit), or by any taxing subdivision of any other state, territory, province or foreign government, without first being licensed so to do as hereinafter provided."

If trading stamps come within the meaning and scope of the term "securities" as used in the section above quoted, it must be by virtue of the language: "instruments evidencing title to or interest in property."

A determination of the nature and legal effect of a trading stamp cannot be arrived at merely by an examination of the stamp itself, or of the contract entered into by the issuer of the stamp and the merchant who places it in circulation, but it must be considered in view of the provisions of section 6386 to section 6389, both inclusive, of the General Code. In these sections the general assembly has practically defined and established, at least so far as the Ohio law is concerned, the legal status of trading stamps. They have also very effectively safeguarded the public from abuse and fraud resulting from the use of trading stamps; and it may be further added that there was and is no real necessity or reason why the subject of trading stamps should have been further regulated and restricted by the provisions of the blue sky law.

Without quoting the sections from 6386 to 6389, both inclusive, it is sufficient to say that in substance they provide that trading stamps shall in all cases be redeemable in money when presented in amounts aggregating five cents or more, and that each stamp issued must have written or printed thereon its redeemable value in money of the United States.

Section 13399 of the General Code prescribes a penalty for the violation of any of the provisions of sections 6386 to 6389, above referred to. The legal effect of these last mentioned sections of the General Code is, in my opinion, to make trading stamps simply evidences of indebtedness, payable upon demand either in money or in merchandise at the option of the holder. This can by no interpretation, as I view it, be taken as "evidencing title to or interest in property." No property of any kind is hypothecated for security, nor has the holder thereof any claim upon any specific property. True, he may, if he so elects, demand merchandise for their redemption, but he has no right of any kind, by virtue of his ownership of stamps, in any specifically described or segregated property.

I am therefore of the opinion that coupons or stamps commonly known as "trading stamps" are not such securities within the meaning of the blue sky law as makes necessary the securing of a license by the trading stamp company selling them or by the merchant distributing them.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BONDS AUTHORIZED TO BE ISSUED BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES OF MONROE TOWNSHIP, MIAMI COUNTY, OHIO, DISAPPROVED—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ADVISED NOT TO PURCHASE.

Bonds to the amount of $50,000, authorized to be purchased by the township trustees of Monroe township, Miami county, Ohio, and purchased by the industrial commission of Ohio, subject to the approval of the attorney general, are held invalid and the industrial commission advised not to purchase same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 26, 1915, enclosing a certified copy of a resolution adopted by the Industrial Commission of Ohio on April 26, 1915, purchasing bonds from the township trustees of Monroe township, Miami county, Ohio, in the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00), subject to securing from the attorney general a certificate approving the validity of said bond issue.

Under date of April 29, 1915, I received a transcript of the proceedings of the trustees of Monroe township, Miami county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of said bonds, and under date of May 7, 1915, I received additional information relative to said proceedings, from the attorneys for said township trustees and from S. O. Mitchell, clerk of said township.

I have made a careful examination of this transcript, together with the supplemental information referred to, and herewith submit my opinion relative to the validity of the bond issue.

The transcript recites that on October 11, 1913, the trustees of Monroe township at regular session adopted a resolution directing that the question of building a town hall be submitted to a vote of the electors of said township at the coming November election; at the same meeting of said board of trustees another resolution was adopted by the trustees directing that there be submitted to a vote of the electors of said township "at the same time the question of the erection of a town hall is submitted" the question of whether or not said bonds should be issued to run for a period of twenty-five years.

Under authority of the two resolutions above referred to the clerk of said Monroe township posted, as required by law, the following notice of the holding of said election:

"Notice is hereby given to the electors of Monroe township, Miami county, Ohio that an election will be held at the regular voting places in each precinct in said township on for the purpose of determining as to whether or not the trustees of said township shall erect a town hall in said township as provided for by sections 3395 to 3398 of the General Code of Ohio; the estimate cost of said building is fifty thousand ($50,000.00) dollars.

"Notice is further given that at the same time and at the same election vote will be taken by the electors of the township to determine the length of time bonds shall run that are issued to pay for the above hall in anticipation of taxes afterwards to be levied. The time proposed for said bonds to run is twenty-five years.

"At the aforesaid election those desiring to vote in favor of the erection of a town hall shall place upon their ballot 'town hall' yes, and those opposed 'town hall' no.

"Those favoring a bond issue for a period of twenty-five years shall place on their ballot 'bond issue twenty-five years' yes, those opposed to this time shall place on their ballot 'bond issue twenty-five years' no.

"The above notice is given by virtue of a resolution of the board of trustees of Monroe township duly passed at a regular meeting on October 11, 1913.

"S. O. MITTCHELL, Clerk.

"Tippecanoe City, Ohio."

Section 3395, 3396 and 3397 of the General Code, relative to the construction of town halls by township trustees, are as follows:

"Sec. 3395. If in a township, it is desired to build, remove, improve or enlarge a town hall, at a greater cost than is otherwise authorized by law, the trustees may submit the question to the electors of the township, and shall cause the clerk to give notice thereof and of the estimated cost, by written notices, posted in not less than three public places within the township, at least ten days before election.

"Sec. 3396. At such election the electors in favor of such hall, removal, improvement or enlargement shall place on their ballots 'town hall' yes, and those opposed 'town hall' no. If a majority of all the ballots cast at the election are in the affirmative, the trustees shall levy the necessary tax, but not in any year to exceed four mills on the dollar valuation. Such tax shall not be levied under such vote for more than seven years. In anticipation of the collection of taxes, the trustees may borrow money and issue bonds for the whole or any part therefor, bearing interest not to exceed seven per cent., payable annually.

"Sec. 3397. After such affirmative vote, the trustees may make all needful contracts for the purchase of a cite, and the erection, or the improvement or enlargement of a town hall. They shall have control of any town hall belonging to the township, and from time to time, may lease so much thereof as may not be needed for township purposes, by the year or for shorter periods, to private persons, or for lectures or exhibitions, in all cases having the rent paid in advance or fully secured. The rents received may be used for the repair or improvement of the hall so far as needed, and the balance for general township purposes."

It will be observed that the question of whether or not a town hall should be constructed and the question of the length of time for which said bonds should run were submitted at the same election. The electors were informed of the holding of an election upon both questions by the same posted notice and apparently, from the form of the posted notice, both questions were submitted upon the same ballot.

I find no authority in the statutes for the submitting to the electors as to the length of time for which bonds shall run. In fact, in view of the provisions of section 3396, G. C., above quoted, I doubt very much whether the bonds in question could be issued to run longer than a period of seven years.

It is claimed that the submission to the electors of the length of time said bonds should run, being unauthorized, is mere surplusage and should not be considered in passing upon the validity of the proceedings of the trustees or of the election. I am unable to agree with this position, because the electors who voted upon the question of whether or not a town hall should be constructed were undoubtedly misled into believing that the bonds issued to secure money to pay for said hall were to run for twenty-five years and that, therefore, the burden of taxes to redeem the bonds when due would be distributed over a period of twenty-five years. It is not unreasonable to suppose, therefore, that many of the voters who sanctioned the proposed erection of a town hall did so with the express understanding and representation to them that the raising of the funds to construct said building would be distributed over a period of twenty-five years and I question, therefore, very seriously the validity of the election.

Assuming, however, that the election was valid, I note the following defects in the proceedings of the trustees, which to my mind render the bonds invalid:

1. Section 3396, G. C., provides that "in anticipation of the collection of taxes, the trustees may borrow money and issue bonds for the whole or any part thereof, bearing interest not to exceed seven per cent., payable annually." The resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds contains no recital that a tax levy has been made or that the bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of any tax, and I am informed by the attorneys representing the township trustees, in their letter setting forth additional information, that no tax levy has as yet been made. Under the language of the statute above quoted the authority of the township trustees to issue bonds is dependent upon a tax levy having first been made, and I am of the opinion that the levying of such tax is a jurisdictional fact, which must exist before the township trustees can by resolution authorize the issuance of bonds.

In this connection I desire to call attention to section 11, article 12, of the constitution of Ohio, which is as follows:

"Section 11. No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption."

This provision of the constitution has apparently been ignored by the township trustees and no provision has been made in the legislation of the trustees authorizing the issuance of said bonds for levying and collecting any tax or otherwise providing for the payment of interest and redemption of the principal of said bonds at maturity.

I am therefore of the opinion that the proceedings of the township trustees relative to the issuance of said bonds are defective and that said bonds are invalid and I advise the commission to refuse to accept the same.

Since the township trustees will doubtless desire to take the necessary steps to correct their proceedings and in anticipation of a re-submission to me of the question of the validity of said bonds, I deem it my duty to advise that they start entirely new proceedings.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JOINT COUNTY DITCHES—LEGISLATURE HAS PROVIDED TWO DISTINCT METHODS OF PROCEDURE FOR SUCH IMPROVEMENT—SECTIONS 6536 TO 6563, G. C., PROVIDE ONE METHOD AND SECTIONS 6563-1 to 6563-48, G. C., THE OTHER.

Sections 6536 to 6563, inclusive, G. C., relative to county ditches, were not repealed by implication by the enactment of sections 6563-1 to 6563-48, inclusive, G. C., 102 O. L., 575.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

HON. ARCHER L. PHELPS, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of April 24 and May 5, 1915, relating to the subject of joint county ditches and the straightening of natural water courses in two or more counties. You state that there has been filed with the commissioners of Trumbull county and the commissioners of Ashtabula county, a petition signed by thirteen property owners, praying for the deepening, widening, straightening and changing of Grand river through the northerly part of Trumbull county and the southerly part of Ashtabula county, and that the petitions so presented have been submitted to the prosecuting attorney of each county, respectively, for an opinion upon the validity of the petitions. You then call attention to the present state of the law relating to improvements of this class.

The subject of joint county ditches and the improvement of water courses in two or more counties is provided for in sections 6536 to 6563-48, inclusive, of the General Code. As the law stood prior to May 31, 1911, sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, contained all of the law on this subject. On May 31, 1911, the legislature enacted sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 of the General Code, which sections afford an independent and complete procedure, covering substantially the same ground covered by sections 6536 to 6563, inclusive, but the steps to be taken under each procedure differ sufficiently to make it necessary to follow one procedure or the other exclusively. This enactment is found in 102 O. L., 575.

On May 31, 1911, the same day that the legislature enacted sections 6563-1 to 6563-48, it also amended sections 6536, 6540, 6541, 6548, 6553, 6556 and 6557. Section O. L., 313. On April 12, 1913, the legislature recognized the continued existence of sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, by amending twelve of these sections in important particulars. See 103 O. L., 836. The same session of the legislature also recognized the existence of sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, by amending two of these sections. See 103 O. L., 465.

After pointing out the above situation you inquire as to whether these two separate procedures, one covered by sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, and the other by sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, are in full force and effect, or whether the enactment of sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, repealed sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive.

The theory that there was an implied repeal in the case now under consideration, finds some support in the case of Goff v. Gates, 87 O. S., 142. It was decided in that case that an act entitled "an act to provide for the laying out, construction, repair or improvement of any public road or any part thereof, and for the straightening, widening or altering and draining of the same by the county commissioners" passed by the legislature May 10, 1910, and being sections 6956-1 to 6956-15 inclusive, of the General Code, repealed by implication sections 6926 to 6956 inclusive, of the General Code, which sections provided a method of improving and grading public roads by county commissioners. Much of the reasoning of the court in the case of Goff v. Gates might be applied to the situation now under consideration, but in the last analysis the decision of the court in that case is grounded upon the elementary principle of giving effect to the intent of the legislature, it being held that in enacting sections 6956-1 to 6956-15 inclusive, the legislature must have intended to repeal sections 6926 to 6956 inclusive, and that the failure to make an express repeal was a mere oversight.

This reasoning cannot be applied to the matter now under consideration, and indeed the facts point in the opposite direction. It could hardly be said that in enacting sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, the legislature intended to repeal sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, when on the same day the legislature proceeded to amend sections 6536, 6540, 6541, 6548, 6553, 6556 and 6557. In other words, the rule announced in Goff v. Gates cannot be carried to the point where it will result in defeating the manifest intention of the legislature. That the legislature intended to leave sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, in full force and effect and did not intend to repeal these sections in enacting sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, is strongly indicated by the fact that on the same day that the legislature enacted the new sections, it amended certain of the old. A subsequent legislature placed this construction on the law by proceeding to amend certain of the old sections and certain of the new sections, thus recognizing the existence of both schemes of improvement.

It is elementary that repeals by implication are never favored, and that if any reasonable construction may be given to previously existing statutes, so that both may stand, it must be given. With this principle in mind, and having in view, also, the history of the legislation as set forth above, I am of the opinion that sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive of the General Code, have not been repealed by implication and that two separate procedures for the construction of joint county ditches are available, one covered by sections 6536 to 6563 inclusive, of the General Code, and the other by sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive, of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY OFFICERS—LIABILITY FOR EXCEEDING CLERK HIRE ALLOWANCE—LIABILITY OF COUNTY AUDITOR—OF COUNTY TREASURER.

When amount allowed by county commissioners for clerk hire to county officer is exceeded, both county auditor and county officer whose allowance is exceeded are liable.

When total aggregate allowable under section 2980-1, G. C., is exceeded, county treasurer is likewise liable.

Since liability sounds in tort, it is joint and degrees of liability cannot be determined.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 11, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 17th you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

> "On December 10, 1912, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, attorney general, rendered to this department a lengthy opinion in regard to findings which should be made against county auditors and other officers for payment of clerk hire in excess of the amount allowed by county commissioners. This opinion appears in full at page 200 of Vol. 1 of the Annual Report of the Attorney General for 1913. This opinion intimates that under certain circumstances, joint findings should be made, but in order that our examiners may understand the matter fully, we would respectfully request you to distinguish more definitely the degree of liability as presented by the various phases of this opinion.
> "We make this request for the reason that we find that it is rather awkward in a report to make joint findings unless it is possible to show the amount that should be charged to each officer."

The opinion to which you refer in your inquiry has attached thereto the following synopsis:

> "It is the official duty of the county auditor to know the manner of drawing, and the statutory restrictions relating to vouchers for payment of county expenses. Furthermore, in the case of the allowance of clerk hire in the office of county officers, the auditor has notice of the proceedings of the commissioners when he serves as their clerk, under the provisions of section 2566, General Code; if he does not serve as their clerk, he has notice of their proceedings by virtue of section 2407, General

Code, which provides that the record book of the county commissioners' work shall be kept in the auditor's office. The county auditor, therefore, is charged with actual or constructive notice of the allowance made by the county commissioners, for clerk hire in excess of which no payment can be made, by virtue of sections 2980 and 2981, General Code.

"When a county auditor, therefore, allows a voucher for the payment of clerk hire, in excess of the county commissioners' allowance, he is liable for such payment.

"By virtue of section 2981, General Code, the various officers are required to limit the salaries of their clerks to the aggregate amount allowed by the commissioners. If such officer, therefore, employs help and certifies to the county auditor, compensation in excess of the aggregate amount allowed his office by the commissioners, he violates his official duty and is liable to the county for such excess payment. The county treasurer is not given any official or formal notice of the action of the county commissioners in fixing such an allowance, nor has he in his possession any records of such proceedings. He is not, therefore, liable for over-paying the annual allowance made by the county commissioners for such clerk hire.

"Under section 2980-1, General Code, however, the aggregate sum, fixed by the county commissioners to be expended in any one year for compensation of any assistants or any employes shall not exceed a certain percentage of the fees, costs and allowances, etc. When in making their allowances, therefore, the county commissioners violate this statute, they and all other county officers are charged with knowledge of this limitation and are liable for payment made in contravention thereto, the county treasurer as well as the others.

Deputies and clerks are not required to take notice of these statutory limitations and they have the right to presume that the officers will perform their duties as prescribed by statute. They are not liable, therefore, for excess amounts paid to them when they have received money in good faith for services performed."

From the foregoing synopsis it appears that the county auditor in issuing a warrant for compensation in excess of the aggregate amount allowed to a certain office by the commissioners violates his official duty; that the officer employing the clerk and permitting the clerk to continue after the amount allowed to his office for clerk hire has been expended has likewise violated his official duty; also that the county treasurer, if he honors a warrant which calls for clerk hire above the total aggregate allowable to such office under the provisions of section 2980-1, is likewise guilty of a violation of his official duty.

The above violations sound in tort, and I am unable to say that any one of the officers liable in a given case should be considered as more liable than the other, and am therefore unable to distinguish more definitely the degree of liability as presented by the various phases of the opinion referred to.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION—CAN ONLY LET CONTRACT FOR MAIN MARKET ROAD WHEN HIGHWAY HAS BEEN LEGALLY DESIGNATED AS SUCH—MAIN MARKET ROAD NO. 13, ERIE COUNTY—CHANGE IN ROUTE SHOULD BE MADE BY STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—THIS PARTICULAR CASE DISTINGUISHED.

Contracts involving the expenditure of main market road funds can only be let by the state highway commissioner where the highway to be improved has been legally designated as a main market road.

In the improvement of Main Market Road No. 13, Erie county, the state highway commissioner attempted to let a contract for the improvement of a section of said road, the highway to be improvd also including a section of proposed highway that has not been legally designated as a main market road. The contractor has incurred a considerable expense in the matter. Under the facts of the particular case, a proper procedure for the state highway commissioner to follow would be to legally designate as a main market road the section of highway not previously so designated, and enter into a new and valid contract with the original contractor at the price bid in the first instance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 7, 1915, relating to the present situation with reference to the improvement of a portion of main market road No. 13, situated in Erie county. You call my attention to the original designation of inter-county highway No. 3, as main market road No. 13, the original designation of main market road No. 13 being as follows:

> "Beginning at the junction of inter-county highways Nos. 3 and 31 in Cuyahoga county, and following what is known as inter-county highway No. 3 to the junction of inter-county highways Nos. 3 and 294 in Erie county."

You further direct my attention to the fact that in projecting the survey for the improvement of section "L" of said main market road No. 13, said section "L" lying within Erie county, the state highway commissioner attempted to change the location of a part of said section of said main market road and his action, purporting to make this change, was approved by the governor.

On April 6, 1915, this department rendered an opinion to Hon. James F. Flynn, Jr., prosecuting attorney of Erie county, the opinion dealing with the attempted change in the location of said main market road. In the opinion in question it was pointed out that when the state highway commissioner contemplated the improvement of this highway, and when said improvement was projected, a sentiment arose in favor of establishing a new road and of changing the route of the main market road so that said main market road would run over the new route, the reason for this suggested change being that the new road would avoid a dangerous railroad crossing and would be more direct. For the purpose of establishing this new road, the commissioners began proceedings under section 6860, et seq., of the General Code, but before these proceedings had been completed, and before the new road had been in fact established, the state highway commissioner, assuming to act under section 1184-4, G. C., 103 O. L., 451, made an order changing the route of the Cleveland-Sandusky inter-county highway No. 3, and main market road No. 13, and attempted to change the route from the existing highway and established the said road over the projecting new road which the commissioners of Erie county were seeking to establish in the proceedings above referred to, and this attempted action of the state highway commissioner was approved by the governor.

It was held in the opinion above referred to that the state highway commissioner was without authority to make this change and that he had no authority to re-locate any inter-county highway or main market road in any location other than along the line of an existing public highway of the state. In other words, the holding was to the effect that in selecting additional routes and in changing to a more practicable location, the state highway commissioner acts under the same limitation that applied in the original designation of inter-county highways and he must designate the additional route or the altered route so that the same will follow the line of an existing public highway, and he has no authority to change a route and establish the same across privately owned lands. The conclusion expressed was that the act of the highway commissioner, in attempting to change the route was, therefore, without legal effect and the legal location of the inter-county highway and main market road in question was still along the old route.

You call my attention to the opinion above referred to and further state that a contract has already been let by the state highway commissioner to the Fred R. Jones Company, of Cleveland, for the improvement of said section of main market road, the contract price being $70,107.52.

The contract entered into as above stated, with the Fred R. Jones Company, covers the new section of highway which, as above stated, has never been legally designated by the state highway commissioner as a main market road. Since the opinion to Prosecuting Attorney Flynn, above referred to, was rendered, the proceedings for the establishment of a road under sections 6860, et seq., of the General Code, have been carried to a conclusion by the county commissioners, and such proposed new road is now a public highway. It was not, however, a public highway at the time the contract was let to the Fred R. Jones Company, and has never been legally designated as a main market road. The effect of the facts above stated is that when the state highway commissioner entered into the contract in question with the Fred R. Jones Company, he was entering into a contract involving the expenditure of main market road money upon a section of road and proposed road, part of which was not at that time a public highway and, what is more important to the present inquiry, part of which had never been legally designated as a main market road or even as an inter-county highway. You now inquire as to the effect of this action and as to the proper procedure to pursue in the premises.

Under the provisions of section 6859-3 of the General Code, main market road money can only be used in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of such roads as have been legally designated as main market roads. I am therefore of opinion that there was no authority for the making of the contract with the Fred R. Jones Company for the reason that the contract was one involving the expenditure of main market road funds and at the time it was entered into, a part of the highway covered by the improvement was not a main market road.

This conclusion to which I have been forced, results in a most awkward and embarrassing situation and it remains to consider whether a course of procedure can be worked out that will protect the rights of all parties concerned.

The infirmity in the original proceedings and the lack of authority on the part of the highway commissioner to enter into the contract in question, could not have been easily ascertained by the Fred R. Jones Company at the time it entered into the contract in question. The company has apparently acted in the best of faith, and I am informed that the company has shipped its equipment to Erie county, perfected its organization for the construction of the road in question, started the work of grading and already incurred a large expense in the matter, but that so far the company has not been paid anything on account of the work done. If the company should be deprived of all rights in the premises, a very considerable financial loss will result to it, which loss ordinary prudence on the part of the company probably would not have prevented. It may be observed in the first place that the new road must be legally designated as a main market road before a valid contract can be entered into with the Fred R. Jones Company. The only course which is open and which will result in at least a substantial compliance with the law and at the same time will not result in the taking of what appeals to me as an unconscionable advantage of the company, would be for the state highway commissioner to now take the action which was formerly attempted, but which, for the reasons heretofore pointed out, was a nullity, and now make the change in the route of the inter-county highway and main market road which was previously attempted. If this change in the route of the main market road in question appeals to you as a wise and proper one, I suggest that you make the change in question and submit your action in the premises to the governor for his approval. If he approves of the change in route, the result will be the establishing of an inter-county highway and main market road over the new road recently established by the county commissioners of Erie county, under section 6860 et seq., of the General Code. The situation will then be that all of the highway covered by the proposed improvement will have been legally designated as a main market road and the commissioner will have before him the original bids filed by the Fred R. Jones Company and other bidders for the construction of this improvement. I assume that the contract was originally attempted to be awarded to the Fred R. Jones Company for the reason that that company was the lowest bidder for the work in question.

After taking the action above suggested and legally designating the new highway established by the commissioners as a main market road, and securing the approval of the governor to such action, it is my opinion that it would be proper, in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of this particular case, to then regard the bid of the Fred R. Jones Company as still subsisting and upon said bid to award the contract for the construction of the road improvement in question to said company, and to enter into a written contract with the company in question for the performance of the work, for the amount of its original bid. This course of action on your part will not do any violence to the statute requiring the letting of these contracts on competitive bids and will be at least a substantial compliance with the law limiting the expenditure of main market road funds to the improvement of highways that have been legally designated as main market roads. In other words, such a course of procedure will protect the rights of the public and at the same time will protect the equities of the company which has proceeded under the original void contract and which has incurred a considerable expense in the matter.

I desire to expressly limit the force and effect of this opinion to the particular facts of this case and do not desire to be taken as holding generally that the state highway commissioner may advertise for and receive bids in advance of the time when he is authorized by law to let a contract for a specific highway improvement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

A CORPORATION MANUFACTURING PRODUCTS IN OHIO AND SHIPPING SAME TO AGENTS TO BE SOLD UPON COMMISSION, MUST RETURN FOR TAXATION THE STOCK OF GOODS IN EACH TAXING DISTRICT WHEREIN HELD ON AVERAGE BASIS AS MANUFACTURER'S STOCK OF FINISHED PRODUCT—RETURN MADE BY PRINCIPAL OFFICER OF CORPORATION.

A corporation manufacturing a product in Ohio and shipping quantities of the same to local agents to be sold by them upon commission must return for taxation each stock of goods so held by such agent, in the taxing district wherein the same is so held, on the average basis as manufacturer's stock of finished products. The return must be made by the president, secretary or principal accounting officer of the corporation, and not by the local agent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 3rd, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "An incorporated company in this state, manufacturing fertilizers, has a business practice of shipping large quantities of its product over the state to farmers and others, to be sold by them upon commission. Admitting that these shipments are not included by the manufacturing company in its annual tax return of the average manufactured products on hand, by whom and in whose name should stocks of scattered merchandise so held as above, be listed, and who is liable for the tax thereon? If they are to be listed in the name of the manufacturing company should they be listed under the item of 'merchandise' or 'manufacturer's stock' and where?
> "If these stocks of merchandise so held are to be returned by the persons having them under control, should the amount returned be the value of the amount on hand on listing day, or the average amount in possession and control during the past year?
> "If the manufacturing company includes this merchandise in its tax return of the average amount of manufactured goods on hand, will that exempt such property from taxation in the taxing district in which it was found on listing day, or in a taxing district in which there had been a large average quantity on hand during the past year; in other words, what is the situs of such property for taxation?"

The questions which you submit involve a consideration of the following provisions of the taxation laws of the state:

> "Sec. 5370. Each person of full age and sound mind shall list the personal property of which he is the owner, and all moneys in his possession, all moneys invested, loaned, or otherwise controlled by him, as agent or attorney, or on account of any other person or persons, company or corporation, and all moneys deposited subject to his order, check, or draft; all credits due or owing from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, whether in or out of such county; and all money loaned on pledge or mortgage of real estate, although a deed or other instrument may have been given for it, if between the parties, it is considered as security merely. The property of a ward shall be listed by his guardian, of a minor child, idiot, or lunatic having no guardian, by his father, if living, if not, by his mother, if living, and if neither father nor mother is living, by the person having such property in charge; of a person for whose benefit property is held in trust, by the trustees; of an estate of a deceased person, by his executor or administrator; of corporations whose assets are in the hands of receivers, by such receivers, of a company, firm, or corporation, by the president or principal accounting officer, partner or agent thereof; and all surplus or undivided profits held by a society for savings or bank having no capital stock, by the president or principal accounting officer.

"Sec. 5371. A person required to list property, on behalf of others, shall list it in the township, city or village in which he would be required to list it if such property were his own. He shall list it separately from his own, specifying in each case the name of the person, estate, company, or corporation, to whom it belongs. Merchants' and manufacturers' stock, and personal property upon farms shall be listed in the township, city or village in which it is situated. All other personal property, moneys, credits and investments, except as otherwise specially provided, shall be listed in the township, city or village in which the person to be charged with taxes thereon resides at the time of the listing thereof, if such person resides within the county where the property is listed, and if not, then in the township, city or village where the property is when listed.

"Sec. 5372. Personal property of every description, moneys and credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, shall be listed in the name of the person who was the owner thereof on the day preceding the second Monday of April, in each year. * * *

"Sec. 5375. A person required to list property, upon receiving a blank for that purpose from the assessor, or, within five days thereafter shall make out and deliver, annually, to the assessor, a statement, verified by his oath, of all the personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, annuities, or otherwise, in his possession, or under his control, on the day preceding the second Monday of April of that year, which he is required to list for taxation, either as owner or holder thereof, or as parent, husband, guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, accounting officer, partner, agent, factor, or otherwise.

"Sec. 5381. A person who owns or has in possession or subject to his control personal property within this state, with authority to sell it, which has been purchased either in or out of this state, with a view to being sold at an advanced price or profit, or which has been consigned to him from a place out of this state for the purpose of being sold at a place within this state, is a merchant.

"Sec. 5382. When a person is required by this chapter to make out and deliver to the assessor a statement of his other personal property, he shall state the value of such property appertaining to his business as a merchant. In estimating the value thereof, he shall take as the criterion the average value of such property, as provided in the next preceding section, which he has had from time to time in his possession or under his control during the year next previous to the time of making such statement, if he has been engaged in business so long, and if not, then during such time as he has been so engaged. Such average shall be ascertained by taking the amount in value on hand, as nearly as possible, in each month of the next preceding year in which he has been engaged in business, adding together such amounts and dividing the aggregate amount thereof by the number of months that he has been in business during such year.

"Sec. 5383. A consignee shall not be required to list for taxation the value of property, the product of this state, which has been consigned to him, for sale or otherwise, from a place within this state, nor the value of property consigned to him from another place for the sole purpose of being stored or forwarded, if in either case, he has no interest in such property, or any profit to be derived from its sale. A person engaged in selling property on commission and who does not retain control of such property longer than forty-eight hours is not a merchant within the meaning of the next two preceding sections.

"Sec. 5385. A person who purchases, receives or holds personal property of any description, for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by manufacturing, refining, rectifying, or by the combination of different materials with a view of making a gain or profit by so doing, is a manufacturer, and, when he is required to make and deliver to the assessor a statement of the amount of his other personal property subject to taxation, he shall include therein the average value estimated, as hereafter provided, of all articles purchased, received or otherwise held for the purpose of being used, in whole or in part, in manufacturing, combining, rectifying or refining, and of all articles which were at any time by him manufactured or changed in any way, either by combination or rectifying, or refining or adding thereto which, from time to time, he has had on hand during the year next previous to the first day of April annually, if he has been engaged in such manufacturing business so long, and if not, then during the time he has been so engaged.

"Sec. 5386. Such average value shall be ascertained by taking the value of all property subject to be listed on the average basis, owned by such manufacturer, on the last business day of each month the manufacturer was engaged in business during the year, adding such monthly values together and dividing the result by the number of months the manufacturer was engaged in such business during the year. Such result shall be the average value to be listed. A manufacturer shall also list at their fair cash value, all engines and machinery of every description used, or designed to be used, in refining or manufacturing, except such fixtures as are considered a part of any parcel or parcels of real property, and all tools and implements of every kind used, or designed to be used, for such purpose, owned or used by such manufacturer.

"Sec. 5404. The president, secretary and principal accounting officer of every incorporated company, except banking or other corporations whose taxation is specifically provided for, for whatever purpose they may have been created, whether incorporated by a law of this state or not, shall list for taxation, verified by the oath of the person so listing, all the personal property thereof, and all real estate necessary to the daily operations of the company, moneys and credits of such company or corporation within the state, at the true value in money.

"Sec. 5405. Return shall be made to the several auditors of the respective counties where such property is situated, together with a statement of the amount thereof which is situated in each township, village, city or taxing district therein. Upon receiving such returns, the auditor shall ascertain and determine the value of the property of such companies, and deduct from the aggregate sum so found of each, the value as assessed for taxation of any real estate included in the return. The value of the property of each of such companies, after so deducting the value of all the real estate included in the return, shall be apportioned by the auditor to such cities, villages, townships, or taxing districts, pro rata, in proportion to the value of the real estate and fixed property included in the return, in each of such cities, villages, townships, or taxing districts. The auditor shall place such apportioned valuation on the tax duplicate and taxes shall be levied and collected thereon at the same rate and in the same manner that taxes are levied and collected on other personal property in such township, village, city or taxing district."

The duty of the agent to list property of the kind described by you will first be considered; and in such consideration the fact that the manufacturer is a corporation will, for the time being, be eliminated from consideration.

Section 5370, General Code, makes complete provision as to who shall list personal property for taxation. This fact is not altered by section 5375, which, though it mentions "agent, factor or otherwise," has no force and effect of its own, because primarily it fixes the date as of which the ownership, possession or control of property for purposes of taxation shall be determined, and its exact provision is that each person shall list the property "which he is required to list for taxation" in any of the capacities mentioned, with reference to the date therein named (which date, of course, has been changed by subsequent legislation not affecting the other substantive provisions of the section). In other words, one must look to some section other than section 5375 to determine what property a person "is required to list for taxation." One other such provision is, as already stated, section 5370. This section requires each person of normal status to list the personal property of which he is the owner; but when it comes to prescribe what shall be listed as agent or attorney or on account of any other person or persons, etc., its scope is limited to "moneys in his possession" and "moneys invested, loaned, or otherwise controlled by him," etc. That is to say, the first or general clause of section 5370 standing by itself does not require a person to list personal property other than moneys controlled by or in the possession of the listing person for or on behalf of another person.

This general rule is enlarged as to particular classes of persons acting in a representative capacity by the second sentence of the section, which provides for the listing of the property of a ward, a minor child, idiot, lunatic, cestui que trust, the estate of a deceased person, corporations whose assets are in the hands of receivers, and companies, firms or partnerships. But the property of a mere individual of normal status in the hands of an agent is by this section not required to be listed by the agent, except as to moneys.

Still ignoring for the purpose of clearness the fact that the principal in the case submitted is a corporation, we may consider the application of the statutes relative to merchants and manufacturers thereto.

I call attention, first, to the fact that section 5381, which defines a "merchant," is divisible into two parts as follows:

"(1) A person who owns or has in possession or subject to his control personal property within this state, with authority to sell it, which has been purchased either in or out of this state, with a view to being sold at an advanced price or profit, is a merchant.

"(2) A person who owns or has in possession or subject to his control personal property within this state, with authority to sell it, which has been consigned to him from a place out of this state for the purpose of being sold at a place within this state, is a merchant."

To the case submitted by you the conditions of the first part of the above definition are not satisfied, because the property has not been purchased with a view to being sold at an advanced price or profit. In fact, the property has not been in the exact sense "purchased" at all; it has been manufactured with a view to being sold at the manufacturer's price.

The conditions of the second half of the definition are not satisfied by the facts stated by you, because the goods were consigned to the agent from a place within this state and not from a place out of this state.

In short, the case which you submit is one case which is not embraced within the definition of a "merchant" by section 5381, General Code.

An incongruity is presented by section 5383, General Code, which, insofar as applicable here provides that a consignee shall not be required to list for taxation the value of property, the product of this state, which has been consigned to him, for sale or otherwise, from a place within this state, if he has no interest in such property or any profit to be derived from its sale. The natural inference is that if a consignee has an interest in such property, or a profit to be derived from its sale (which is the case, of course, where the sale is to be on a commission) he is to be required to list the value of the property for taxation, even though it is the product of this state and has been consigned to him from a place within this state. But, as we have seen, no statute requires a consignee to list, either as a merchant and on the average basis or otherwise, property which has been consigned to him for sale on commission from a place within this state unless he is the owner of such property. A mere negative inference like that to be drawn from section 5382, General Code, is not sufficient upon which to base a positive duty to list property for taxation, with the attendant penalties for the failure to discharge such duty.

Still disregarding, then, the fact that the principal in the case submitted is a corporation, I express the opinion that it is not the duty of the commission agent to list the property described by you as merchandise in his possession.

I think that upon a casual inspection of sections 5385 and 5386, General Code, it will be apparent that there is nothing in these sections relative to manufacturers which has the effect of imposing the duty to list the goods described by you for taxation upon the agent.

Still having regard to the duty of the individual agents of the corporation mentioned by you in the premises, let us now consider the effect of the fact that the principal is a corporation.

Sections 5404 and 5405, supra, require corporations to make return of all property of the corporation situated in each county in the state to the auditors of the several counties where the same is situated. This return is required by section 5404 of the General Code, to be made by the "president, secretary and principal accounting officer of the company." This provision is in apparent conflict with section 5370, which provides that the personal property of a "company, firm or corporation" shall be listed by "the president or principal accounting officer, partner or agent thereof." This conflict has existed in the law since the general taxation act of 1859, section 4 whereof (the predecessor of section 5370, General Code) provided that the property of "every company, firm, body politic or corporate" should be listed "by the president or principal accounting officer, partner or agent thereof," and section 16 whereof (the predecessor of present section 5404, General Code) provided that the "president, secretary or principal accounting officer" of certain enumerated corporations should list the property of such corporation.

I am of the opinion that insofar as there may be said to be a conflict between these two provisions, the specific one relative to corporations, viz.: section 5404, must control. I am inclined to the belief that there is no conflict at all between the two provisions, and that the words "or agents" in section 5370 refer to partnerships and unincorporated associations and not to corporations.

For the foregoing reasons, then, it is apparent that the fact that the principal in the case submitted by you is a corporation does not affect the duty of its several agents in the premises.

Sections 5371 and 5372, General Code, clearly provide as to the name in which property shall be listed, the provision being that property shall be listed in all cases in the name of the person, etc., to whom it belongs. In the case stated by you the property is not owned by the agents, but by the corporation, and it not being even the duty of agents to list the property, it follows clearly that it should be listed in the name of the corporation.

The conclusions thus far reached furnish answers to some of your questions, as follows:

> "The goods in question should be listed by the corporation through its president, secretary or principal accounting officer.
> "The goods in question should be listed in the name of the corporation to which they belong.
> "The corporation is liable for the personal taxes thereon."

The question embraced in the second paragraph of your letter, which assumes that the goods are to be listed by the agents having them under control, does not require any answer.

These questions being eliminated and it being clear from what has preceded that the corporation must list the goods and pay the taxes on them, there remain for consideration the following questions:

> "(1) Should the goods in question be listed on the average basis as merchandise; or
> "(2) Should they be listed by the corporation on the average basis as manufacturer's stock of finished product?
> "(3) What is the situs of such property for taxation?"

For reasons which have been suggested, I think, in discussing the statutes relative to the listing of merchandise on the average basis, it is clear that the answer to the first question must be in the negative. The corporation mentioned by you does not satisfy the definition of a "merchant," nor indeed does it come as near to satisfying such definition as do its agents.

On the other hand, the company, I assume, satisfies the definition of a "manufacturer" in section 5385, General Code, and it is therefore the duty of the company to return such "articles which were at any time * * * manufactured or changed in any way, which from time to time, he (it) has had on hand during the year next previous to the first day of April annually" at the average value thereof ascertained in the manner described in section 5386, General Code.

Here, however, two questions present themselves, as follows:

> "Are goods which a manufacturer has taken from his factory and placed in the hands of an agent for sale on commission to be considered as 'on hand' within the meaning of section 5385; and
> "If such goods are to be regarded as 'on hand,' at what place for the purpose of this section and section 5371, which provides that manufacturers' stock shall be listed in the township, city or village in which it is situated, shall the stock be regarded as 'on hand'—at the factory or at the residence or place of business of the agent; in other words, are such small stocks to be regarded as a part of the factory stock of finished products or as separate and distinct small stocks?"

Of these two questions the second is, of course, dependent upon the first, for if it be held that when a manufacturer places goods in the hands of his agent for sale they thereby cease to be "on hand" for all purposes, the conclusion would necessarily follow that such goods are not subject to be listed on the average basis, but merely at the value thereof as ascertained as of the date on which personal property is required to be listed for taxation.

I find that a closely related question was considered by my predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to the commission under date of August 25, 1912. The question which Mr. Hogan considered as submitted by the commission was as to whether or not a stock of goods constituting manufacturer's finished product stored in warehouse in a county other than that in which the manufacturing corporation's plant is located, should be regarded as located in such other county and as manufacturer's stock therein.

Mr. Hogan found himself confronted, as I am, with the decision in Bridge Co. v. Yost, 22 C. C. 376, wherein it was held that a corporation engaged in Ohio in the business of manufacturing bridge materials and erecting bridges should list for taxation in the county in which its factory was located and as a part of its manufactured articles on hand materials shipped from its factory to a place in another county in the state for the purpose of being put together in the form of a bridge.

This decision Mr. Hogan very properly limited to the facts of the particular case, it appearing not only that there were numerous distinctions between the decided case and the case which he was considering, but also because the court in Bridge Co. v. Yost, supra, had seemingly overlooked such material provisions of the statute as section 5371 and section 5405.

Mr. Hogan's conclusion may be quoted from his opinion, as follows:

"I am of the opinion that the act of a corporation in separating from its stock at the manufactory, articles of its finished product and sending them to a warehouse maintained by it in another county, causes the goods so separated to cease to be 'on hand' within the meaning of section 5385, General Code, as part of the stock which a corporation must list in the county where the manufactory is located."

With this conclusion I agree, upon the grounds stated in Mr. Hogan's opinion, and I advise the commission on the facts submitted in your letter of May 3rd, that when goods have been shipped by a manufacturing corporation to agents for the purpose of sale on commission, they cease to be "on hand" at the factory, and from the time of their separation from the factory stock their value is to be disregarded in arriving at the average value of the goods there on hand for the purposes of the statute.

But it was apparent to Mr. Hogan, as it is to me, that this holding did not furnish a complete answer to the question which he was considering. As he saw it, there still remained another question which he stated and analyzed as follows:

"I come now to the consideration of the question as to the manner of listing the stock at the warehouse in the other county. Three views might be taken of this question:

"1. That it must be listed as any other tangible personal property, by setting forth the value of the goods on hand on the day preceding the second Monday of April;

"2. That it must be listed as merchant's stock;

"3. That it must be listed as a separate manufacturer's stock."

In answering this question Mr. Hogan referred to a previous opinion to the commission under date of September 13, 1911, in which he had considered the case of Bridge Co. v. Yost, supra, as applied particularly to the question as to the listing of manufacturer's finished product sent from an Ohio manufactory to another state for the purpose of sale. Upon authorities therein cited he reached the conclusion that "a stock of goods maintained in a warehouse in the manner suggested in your question should not be listed as ordinary tangible property, but should be listed upon the average basis either as merchants' or manufacturers' stock of finished product."

Thereupon Mr. Hogan eliminated from consideration the view that such a stock could be treated as "merchant's stock" for reasons similar to those which I have already expressed.

Referring to section 5385, General Code, applicable to the return of a manufacturer, he concludes as follows:

"Taken in connection with the provision of section 5371 which I have already quoted, this statute furnishes to me, the proper guide for the listing and valuation of the warehouse stock described in your letter. To be sure, there is a slight inconsistency arising out of the failure of the statute specifically to provide for separating a stock of finished products into more than one part. That it was the intention of the legislature that this should be done, however, seems to me to be reasonably clear from section 5371, supra, and I cannot reach the conclusion that the general assembly intended to give such an artificial situs to a manufacturer's stock of finished products as to preclude him from keeping two separate stocks of said products in two different places. For the reasons already suggested the case of Bridge Co. v. Yost, supra, cannot be relied upon in support of any such construction of the law. The construction suggested is consistent with reason and justice and, in my opinion, ought to prevail.

"This construction is also consistent with the provisions of sections 5404 and 5405, General Code, pertaining to corporate returns, and permits corporations to return their property consisting of manufactured products in the counties wherein it is actually situated in accordance therewith.

"I am, therefore, of the opinion that when a manufacturing company whose factory is located in one county maintains in a warehouse, or otherwise, situate in another county, a stock of its manufactured products, such stock should be listed in such other county as a separate stock and manufactured products and valued on the average basis. No 'double taxation' results from adherence to this principle. The moment an article leaves the factory it must be charged off from the stock of finished products there maintained and credited to the stock of manufactured articles maintained at the warehouse in the other county. No single article need be included in the monthly averages of both stocks for any one month."

The only difference between the case submitted to Mr. Hogan and that now presented by you is that in the former case there was a considerable and substantial stock of goods maintained at a particular place and controlled directly by the corporation itself, whereas in your case the stocks of goods are small in amount and value and are scattered promiscuously throughout the state in the hands of persons who are not in the full sense agents of the corporation, but who are merely its agents to sell on commission.

I am of the opinion, however, that the distinction does not produce a difference in result. I agree with Mr. Hogan's conclusion and advise that the principles which he lays down apply to the case which you present. In other words, having regard to the controlling purpose of section 5371, General Code, which provides that manufacturer's stock shall be listed in the taxing district in which it is situated, and being of the opinion that section 5383 is subject to a construction which permits of a division of a manufacturer's stock of finished products, where the manufacturer has actually divided his stock for the purpose of custody and sale, I reach the conclusion that where a manufacturer in Ohio consigns to an agent in Ohio a relatively small amount of his products for sale on commission by the agent, such goods cease to be on hand as a part of the main stock of manufactured products, but are on hand from that time forward as a part of a separate stock of manufactured products maintained at the place of business of the agent, and that they should, therefore, be listed on the average basis in the taxing district in which the agent's place of business is located.

Of course, sections 5404 and 5405, General Code, taken in connection with section 5371, and particularly the last clause thereof, would have the effect of fixing the situs of property of the kind mentioned by you in the taxing district in which it is located—at least in all counties other than the county in which the principal place of business of the corporation is situated; and this consideration would leave only the question as to whether the goods should be listed on the average basis or at the value thereof on hand on tax listing day for final determination.

For the reasons above stated, however, I am of the opinion that the goods retain their character as manufacturer's stock of finished products, subject to be valued on the average basis, after they are placed in the hands of agents for sale on commission; but that each separate small stock is to be considered as a distinct manufacturer's stock for the purpose of computing the average amount on hand at the factory and in the hands of agents, respectively. So that when a given article leaves the factory it ceases to be "on hand" there and becomes "on hand" as a part of a stock in the hands of the agent for the purpose of computing the average amount. That is to say, under these circumstances, the particular goods are to be charged off the account of goods on hand at the factory and credited to the account of goods on hand in the possession of the agent.

Further answering your questions specifically, then, I am of the opinion that the goods in question should be listed under the item of "manufacturer's stock" by the corporation in the taxing district in which the small stock maintained in the possession of the agent is located, and that the value of such goods so located and listed should be ascertained on the average basis.

Any other conclusion would require a rule defining a manufacturer's stock in terms of mere quantity. The statutes permit of no such distinction, and I accordingly reach the conclusion that the mere size of a manufacturer's stock of finished products is no criterion by which to determine whether or not the value thereof is to be ascertained on the average basis.

It follows also that the mere fact that the manufacturing company may have included the merchandise in question in its return of the average amount of the manufactured goods on hand in the taxing district in which its plant is located will not exempt such goods as may have been actually on hand in a small stock in another taxing district from taxation in that district. The manufacturer has simply made an excessive and erroneous return in the district in which the factory is located. The other taxing districts concerned are, under favor of section 5371, General Code, entitled in law to the benefit of the taxes upon such property as should be returned therein.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—NO AUTHORITY TO EXPEND MONEY FOR ADDITION TO TOWNSHIP HALL IN ORDER TO PROVIDE PLACE FOR TEMPORARY DETENTION OF PERSONS ACCUSED OF CRIME.

Township trustees may not lawfully expend township moneys in the enlargement of a township hall in order to provide a place for the temporary detention of persons accused of crime.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1915.

HON. EARL K. SOLETHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 7, 1915, receipt of which is acknowledged, is as follows:

> "We have in this county, Ross township, which lies in the northern part of the county and on the outskirts of the city of Toledo. In this township is located the immense concern of the Ford Plate Glass Company and the unincorporated village of Rossford, whose population is about 2,000.
> "The township trustees have a town hall at this place and on account of the numerous criminal cases occurring in this section of the township, they desire to enlarge the town hall so as to include a jail, or rather, two cells for the temporary confinement of criminals. The estimated cost of this enlargement of the town hall will be about $200.00.
> "I have been unable to find any express statute allowing such expenditure other than by implication in section 3397 of the General Code, and I wish you would advise me as to whether this improvement would be legal under this section."

Your question is answered by the general statement that the maintenance of a jail or of a place for temporary detention of persons accused of crime is not a township function. The law makes no provision for the discharge of any such function by any township officer. That is, no township officer is designated as the jailer, nor is there any procedure for receiving and discharging prisoners confined in any such township institution. In short, the statutes relative to the townships expressly provide for various township institutions such as township halls, libraries, memorial buildings, hospitals, parks, street lights and cemeteries, and make no mention whatever of township jails or prisons. In the scheme of things in this state the purpose of maintaining a jail is either a county or municipal one, and it would not be lawful to levy taxes on the taxable property of a township for such a purpose.

> "If it is necessary, for just cause, to adjourn the examination of the accused, the magistrate may order such adjournment and commit him to the jail of the county, until such cause of delay is removed, but the entire time of such confinement in jail shall not exceed four days. The officer having custody of such person, by the written order of the magistrate may detain him in custody in a secure and convenient place other than the jail, to be designated by such magistrate in his order, not exceeding four days. The officer in whose custody any person is detained shall provide for the sustenance of such prisoner while in custody."

It will be seen that the place for the temporary detention of persons accused of crime and brought before a justice of the peace is the county jail. The authority of the justice of the peace or other magistrate, to give a written order to the officer having custody of the person charged with crime to detain him in custody in a "secure and convenient place," is not in my opinion sufficient authority for the township to levy taxes to furnish such a place and thus, in effect, to provide a township jail. It is the duty of the constable or other officer having the custody of the person to provide the place and also to provide for the sustenance of the prisoner while in custody, and neither of these obligations can be assumed by the township and thus shifted to the taxpayers thereof.

Of course, the township hall may be enlarged under the statute which you cite, but to provide ostensibly under these sections for the real purpose of constructing a place for the detention of persons accused of crime would be violative of the law.

I think I should state also that although section 3295, G. C., gives to township trustees the authority to issue bonds for the specific purpose for which municipalities may issue bonds, and although municipal corporations, under section 3939, G. C., may issue bonds "for erecting workhouses, prisons and police stations," yet it is apparent that these provisions do not have the effect of authorizing the improvement which you mention. It is not every purpose, mentioned in section 3939, for which by virtue of section 3295 township trustees may issue bonds, but only such purposes as constitute township purposes. The maintenance of a jail is not a township enterprise any more than the maintenance of a fire department or free public baths or municipal lodging houses or gas works or other public utilities are township enterprises.

For all the above reasons I am of the opinion that the proposed expenditure may not lawfully be made.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—CORPORATION NOT FOR PROFIT—FEE FOR FILING BASED UPON CAPITAL STOCK WHEN SUCH CORPORATION HAS CAPITAL STOCK.

The fee for filing articles of incorporation of a corporation not for profit and having a capital stock is based upon the amount of such capital stock and is not to be less than ten dollars in any case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested me to advise you as to the fee for filing the articles of incorporation of a corporation not for profit having a capital stock; the question being as to whether or not such a corporation should pay a filing fee of $2.00 or one based upon the amount of its capital stock, with a minimum of $10.00.

I quote the material provisions of section 176 of the General Code, which is the only section that need be considered in answering your question.

> "Sec. 176. The secretary of state shall charge and collect the following fees for official services:
> "1. For filing articles of incorporation whose capital stock is ten thousand dollars or under, ten dollars; of a corporation whose capital stock is over ten thousand dollars, one-tenth of one per cent. upon the authorized capital stock of such corporation.
> "4. For filing articles of incorporation of a mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock, or of other mutual corporations not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes and having no capital stock, twenty-five dollars, except as hereinafter provided.
> "5. For filing articles of incorporation formed for religious, benevolent or literary purposes; or of corporations not organized for profit and not mutual in their character, or of religious or secret societies; or societies or associations composed exclusively of any class of mechanics, express, telegraph, railroad or other employes, and formed exclusively for the mutual protection and relief of members thereof and their families, two dollars. * * *"

It is apparent at a glance that these provisions, considered together, are ambiguous on their face, so far as furnishing an answer to the question you ask is concerned. A corporation of the class described by you is one of those referred to in paragraph five as "corporations not organized for profit and not mutual in their character." If paragraph five is to be regarded as special and exclusive provision for this class of corporations, whether having a capital stock or not, then it is in apparent conflict with paragraph one of the same section. On the other hand, the use of the language "except as hereinafter provided" in paragraph four tends to support the conclusion that entire paragraph five is in the nature of an exception to paragraph four, which relates primarily to corporations having no capital stock.

In this state of the statute law the ambiguity may be resolved upon familiar principles by recourse to the pre-existing statute, which in this case was section 148a of the Revised Statutes; for the only changes which have been made in the statute were made in process of codification, the law not having been amended since 1910.

I find that paragraph five of section 148a was as follows:

> "5. For filing the articles of incorporation of corporations formed for religious, benevolent or literary purposes; or of such corporations as are not organized for profit, have no capital stock, and are not mutual in their character; or of religious or secret societies, or of societies or associations composed exclusively of any class of mechanics, express, telegraph, railroad or other employes, formed for the mutual protection and relief of the members thereof and their families exclusively, two dollars."

The words "have no capital stock" were dropped in process of codification, either through error (there are other probably accidental omissions in the section, as, for example, in paragraph one thereof) or in the belief that paragraph one provided fully and exclusively for the fee for filing articles of incorporation of companies having a capital stock.

It is my opinion that present section 176 is to be given the same substantial meaning as section 148a, Revised Statutes, and that, therefore, the fee for filing articles of incorporation of a company organized not for profit, but having a capital stock, is governed by paragraph one of said section 176, and it is based upon the authorized capital stock of the company, not to be less than ten dollars in any case.

I herewith return the proposed articles of incorporation of the D. K. E. Chapter House Company, with check, revenue stamps and letter attached thereto.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 45—WHERE CITIES HAVE A CERTAIN MINIMUM POPULATION THERE SHALL BE TWO EXECUTIVE OFFICERS "CONTROLLER OF FINANCE" AND "CITY TREASURER"—IN CERTAIN OTHER CITIES ONLY ONE SUCH OFFICER IS PROVIDED TO DISCHARGE DUTIES OF BOTH OF SUCH OFFICERS.

The general assembly is without power to provide for cities having a population of three hundred thousand or over, excepting those which have or may have adopted charters for their own government, a framework of government different from that applicable to all cities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1915.

HON. HARRY L. FEDERMAN, Chairman Cities Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for my examination amended senate bill No. 45 and certain proposed amendments thereto, the effect of which amendments is such as to provide that in municipal corporations having a certain minimum population there shall be two executive officers, designated, respectively, as the "controller of finance" and the "city treasurer"; whereas in all other cities by the provisions of the main bill one officer, to be known as the "controller of finance," is to discharge the functions of both such officers.

You request my opinion as to the constitutionality of this classification.

Since the well known decisions in State ex rel. Kniseley v. Jones, 66 O. S., 453, and State ex rel. v. Beacon, 66 O. S., 491, the question as to the power of the legislature to classify cities for the purpose of legislation respecting the form of municipal government has been, in a way, an open one. In these cases the supreme court wiped out, so to speak, all the mass of laws, nominally general and uniform, but substantially special and local, which had grown up under previous decisions of the court.

The ground of the decision in 1902, to be precise, was that the classifications that had theretofore existed were unreasonable and were such, in the language of the second branch of the syllabus in State ex rel v. Jones as to "evince the legislative intention that municipalities having substantially the same conditions and characteristics shall not enter and remain in the same class." But the court did not go so far in these cases as to hold that the legislature was without power to classify municipal corporations otherwise than in the manner in which they were then classified by the constitution, viz: into cities and incorporated villages, as is shown by the fifth branch of the syllabus which is as follows:

> 5. Whether the provisions of the 6th section, of article 13, ordaining that: 'The general assembly shall provide for the organization of cities, and incorporated villages, by general laws,' is an exclusive classification of municipalities into cities and villages, we do not determine."

See also on this point Gentsch v. State, 71 O. S., 151.

In the case last cited there is language, both in the syllabus and in the opinion, which asserts positively the right of the legislature under the constitution as it existed prior to 1913 to classify cities upon a general and reasonable basis for the purpose of providing by law for the organization thereof. However, this portion of the syllabus and opinion was concurred in by but three of the six judges then constituting the court. Two of the remaining judges did not sit and the third, Judge Shauck, did not concur in this portion of the decision, but placed his concurrence in the judgment upon other grounds stated in the syllabus and in the opinion, viz.: that the legislation complained of in the case and held constitutional by the decision related to the holding of elections, and was a part of the general election laws, and was not limited in its scope to municipal elections as such; therefore, the statute was not one for the organization of cities and villages, but was one respecting the conduct of elections.

It will be seen, therefore, that prior to November 15, 1912, the law respecting such a question as is raised by your inquiry was in a state of uncertainty.

In my opinion, however, the present constitutional provisions with respect to the organization and government of municipal corporations are substantially different from those in effect when the decisions cited were rendered. The former provisions were article 13, sections 1 and 6, which have never been expressly repealed. Section 6 of article 13 has, however, been supplanted by present article 18.

Such former provisions are as follows:

> Article 13, section 1: "The general assembly shall pass no special act conferring corporate powers."

Article 13, section 6: "The general assembly shall provide for the organization of cities, and incorporated villages, by general laws, and restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts and loaning their credit, so as to prevent the abuse of such power."

Article 18, sections 1 and 2, in force since November 15, 1912, are as follows:

"Section 1. Municipal corporations are hereby classified into cities and villages. All such corporations having a population of five thousand or over shall be cities; all others shall be villages. The method of transition from one class to the other shall be regulated by law."

"Section 2. General laws shall be passed to provide for the incorporation and government of cities and villages; and additional laws may also be passed for the government of municipalities adopting the same; but no such additional law shall become operative in any municipality until it shall have been submitted to the electors thereof, and affirmed by a majority of those voting thereon, under regulations to be established by law."

A comparison of the new constitutional provisions with the old ones will show that the following changes have been made:

1. The language "municipal corporations are hereby classified into cities and villages," which is found in article 18, section 1, was lacking in the former constitution, save by implication. The express provision that municipal corporations "are hereby" classified into cities and villages gives rise to the inference that this is the only classification of municipal corporations that may be made—that is, that the classification shall be constitutional and that the legislature shall have no power to make further classifications.

2. The old constitution provided that the general assembly should provide by general laws for the "organization" of cities and incorporated villages; whereas section 2 of article 18 provides that general laws shall be passed to provide for the "incorporation and government" of cities and villages. If there is a difference in the effect of these two provisions it would lie in the fact that the laws for the government of cities must be general as well as the laws for the mere incorporation of such municipalities.

3. The provision in section 2 for the passage of additional laws for the government of municipalities adopting the same and the provision of section 7 of article 18, not above quoted, that any municipality may frame and adopt a charter for its own government, point the way by which a municipality may avoid the effect of the general and uniform laws passed for the government of all cities. A strong inference is thereby raised that the same result can not be attained even to the extent suggested by the amendments pending before your committee in any other way.

Aside from the change in the language of the constitution and the doubt arising under the language of the constitutional provisions formerly in force, the amendments submitted by you to me raise another question, in that their effect is to make special provision for the city of Cincinnati, and that city alone. This is because there are but two cities in the state having a population of over three hundred thousand, and one of these cities, Cleveland, is governed by a self-adopted charter. While, technically, the statute so long as it is in force will apply to any city which may attain a population of over three hundred thousand and be governed by the general laws; yet looking through the form to the substance of the legislation in the manner in which the supreme court in 1902 viewed the conditions then confronting it, one can not escape the conclusion that the intention of the amendments is to make one provision for Cincinnati and another provision for all the other cities in the state. On the principles laid down in the case of State ex rel Kniseley v. Jones, supra, such legislation would have been invalid even under the former constitution.

Although the question is not free from doubt, I advise your committee that if the bill which has been submitted to me should pass and be approved with the amendments which I have considered, it would probably be held unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CONTRACTOR'S RIGHT TO COMPEL AWARDING OF CONTRACT, LIMITED—REQUIREMENTS MAY BE WAIVED BY COMMISSIONER IN AWARDING A CONTRACT.

A contractor cannot compel the state highway commissioner to award a contract to him unless the contractor has complied with all reasonable requirements of the highway commissioner as to the form of bids; but the highway commissioner may waive his own requirements and award a contract even though the proposal may not comply with all the regulations of the highway department where such a waiver will not work any prejudice to the rights of the public.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have two communications from you under date of May 3, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination the bids of certain contractors for inter-county highway work.

On the Wauseon-Morenci road in Fulton county, H. G. Zeller was the lowest bidder, but in filling out a blank form which bidders are required to use, he failed to write in words the amount of his bid, merely using figures, and these figures are written in pencil instead of ink.

On the Van Wert-Ottawa road, in Putnam county, bidders were required to submit their bids in two items, one item covering excavation and foundation course and the other item covering the top course and the finishing of bermes, ditches and slopes. Barnes & Almendinger were the lowest bidders. The estimated cost of item No. 1 was $7,062,88, and the estimated cost of item No. 2, was $7,386.56. In filling out their proposal for the work, Barnes & Almendinger failed to divide the amount bid between items No. 1 and No. 2, and bid $13,500 on item No. 1 and left blank the appropriate space for filling in the amount of their bid as to item 2.

The sections of the General Code relating to the letting of contracts for inter-county highway improvements contain no refernce to the form in which bids shall be received, and it is broadly provided in section 1202, G. C., that "the bids received for an improvement shall be filed and opened at the time stated in the notice and shall conform to such other regulations as the state highway commissioner may direct." This provision places it within the power of the state highway commissioner to make any reasonable regulations as to the form in which bids shall be received.

I learn by inquiry that certain regulations have been adopted by your department, and among these regulations are provisions to the effect that contractors in bidding upon inter-county highway improvements must use a blank form of proposal prescribed by the highway department; that the highway commissioner may, when in his judgment it is proper, require separate bids on separate items; and that the amount of a contractor's bid must be written out in the bid in words and also set forth in figures, and that this must be done in ink. The requirement that ink must be used is printed upon the blank form of proposal furnished by the highway department. I am unable to say that any of these requirements are unreasonable or that under the provision of section 1202, G. C., above quoted, the highway commissioner is without authority to make any of the regulations in question.

It remains to examine into the effect of the failure of the contractors in question, H. G. Zeller and Barnes and Almendinger, to comply with certain requirements of the highway department relating to the form of bids, the particular defects in their bids being set forth above. While a contracttor could not compel the state highway commissioner to award a contract to him unless the contractor had complied with all reasonable requirements of the state highway commissioner as to the form of bids, yet I am not prepared to say that the commissioner could not, if he deemed it proper, award a contract to a bidder who had failed to comply with certain requirements of the department relating to the form of his proposal. The requirements are imposed by a rule of the department and not by a legislative enactment, and I am of the opinion that in proper cases the commissioner may waive his own requirements and award a contract even though the proposal may not comply with all the regulations of the highway department.

The question of whether or not a particular case is a proper one for the exercise of this discretion and for the waiving of any requirements by the commissioner, depends upon whether or not such a waiver will work any prejudice to the rights of the public.

As to the requirements now under consideration, it is apparent that the requirement that the amount of a bid must be set forth in both words and figures and that this must be done in ink has for its purpose the elimination of any possibility of subsequent alteration or of misunderstanding as to the amount of a bid. If, therefore, you are able to determine with certainty the amount of the bid of H. G. Zeller, and if no question of subsequent alteration enters into the matter, then it is within your discretion to waive your requirements as to this matter and award the contract to Mr. Zeller. The same general rule would apply to the bid of Barnes and Almendinger, and if the division of the amount of the bid between the separate items be not important to your department or material to the proper handling of the work, then it is within your power to waive your requirement in this particular and award the contract to Barnes and Almendinger.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—NO AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY PUBLIC NURSES

The state board of health has no authority under existing laws for appropriation of funds to pay compensation and expenses of public nurse; nor is the state board of health authorized by law to employ public nurses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your request for an opinion dated April 30, 1915, which is as follows:

> "During the past two or three years in a number of cities in Ohio, the board of health has appointed 'public health nurses.' The question has been raised as to whether or not the board of health has the authority to employ a public health nurse and whether council has the authority to appropriate to the board of health the funds to pay the compensation and expenses of the nurse. I shall be very glad to have your opinion as to whether or not the board of health may legally employ a public health nurse.
> "In explanation, I enclose a statement by Mr. Bauman relative to his opinion of the state law as it relates to this subject."

With your letter you enclose a communication from Mr. James E. Bauman, assistant secretary of your board, in which he contends that there is ample authority under existing statutes to authorize council to make an appropriation to the board of health for the employment of a public health nurse. Mr. Bauman quotes a number of statutes under which the board of health operates, but notwithstanding all of his statements he is frank to admit that if the authority to employ a public nurse exists at all it is by inference.

I have read the letter of Mr. Bauman very thoroughly and while he presents the question in an attractive manner, I do not find from the authorities he quotes nor from any of the laws in existence, authority for the board of health to employ a public nurse. Particular stress is laid on the authority contained in section 4411 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "The board may also appoint as many persons for sanitary duty as in its opinion the public health and sanitary condition of the corporation require, and such persons shall have general police powers, and be known as the sanitary police, but the council may determine the maximum number of employes so to be appointed,"

> "The board shall determine the duties and fix the salaries of its employes; but no member of the board of health shall be appointed as health officer or ward physician."

The sections quoted above provide for the employment of persons to be known as "sanitary police" who shall have and exercise general police powers, and it is argued that because of the development of certain disease and the progress made in the determination as to cause and prevention of disease, that a broad interpretation would be given to the sections quoted above for the purpose of meeting the various situations which exist and which come under the control of the state board of health.

I am unable to place a public nurse in the class as comprehended by section 4411 of the General Code. The legislation had under consideration the question of the necessity of a nurse to be employed by the board of health, and in section 4436 of the General Code, provided as follows:

> "When a house or other place is quarantined on account of contagious diseases, the board of health having jurisdiction shall provide for all persons confined in such house or place, food, fuel and all other necessities of life, including medical attendance, medicine and nurses, when necessary. The expenses so incurred, except those for disinfection, quarantine, or other measures strictly for the protection of the public, when properly certified by the president and clerk of the board of health, or health officer where there is no board of health, shall be paid by the person or persons quarintined, when able to make such payment, and when not by the municipality in which quarantined."

The section quoted above contains the only authority which addresses itself to the employment of a nurse, and this is limited to special cases. It would appear, therefore, that if there be the need for a public nurse that is to be gathered from the very able argument of Mr. Bauman, the question is one which should be addressed to the legislature rather than to this office, as I am of the opinion that there is no authority on the part of council to appropriate to the board of health the funds necessary to pay the compensation and expenses of a public nurse, nor is there authority on the part of the board of health to employ such nurse, except that contained in section 4436 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARDS OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS—NOT REQUIRED TO PUBLISH NOTICE FOR EXAMINATION OF APPLICANTS FOR COUNTY TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES.

Under the provisions of section 7817, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 103 county boards of school examiners are no longer required or authorized to publish notice of the time and place of holding public meetings for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

HON. LEVI B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 4th, which is as follows:

> "Section 7817 of the General Code (104 O. L., page 103) fixes the dates for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates, but I can find no authority for having these dates published in the county newspapers or for paying the same if they are published.

"I have some bills of that character before me awaiting your opinion as to the legality of the same."

Section 7817, G. C., prior to its amendment in 104 O. L. 103, provided as follows:

"Each board (the county board of school examiners) shall hold public meetings for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of every month of the year, unless Saturday falls on a legal holiday, in which case, it must be held on the succeeding Saturday, at such place or places within the county as, in the opinion of the board, best will accommodate the greatest number of applicants. Notice thereof shall be published in two weekly newspapers of different politics printed in the county, if two papers thus are published, if not, then a publication in one only is required. In no case shall the board hold any private examination or antedate any certificate."

Section 7835, G. C., prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., 107, provides:

"Such board may contract for the use of suitable rooms in which to conduct examinations, for the printing of examination questions, may procure fuel and light, and employ janitors, to take charge of the rooms and keep them in order. Expenses so incurred, together with the cost of advertising notice of their meeting as required by law, shall be paid out of the county treasury on orders of the county auditor, who shall issue them upon the certificate of the president of the board, countersigned by the clerk."

Section 7817, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 103, provides:

"Each board shall hold public meetings for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of September, October, January, March, April, May and the last Friday of June and August of each year, unless any such day falls on a legal holiday, in which case, it shall be held on the corresponding day of the succeeding week, at such place within the county as, in the opinion of the board, best will accommodate the greatest number of applicants. In no case shall the board hold any private examination or antedate any certificate."

Section 7835, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 107, provides:

"Such board may contract for the use of suitable rooms in which to conduct examinations, may procure fuel and light, and employ janitors to take charge of the rooms and keep them in order. Expenses so incurred shall be paid out of the county treasury on orders of the county auditor, who shall issue them upon the certificate of the president of the board, countersigned by the clerk."

It will be observed that, in amending section 7817, G. C., the legislature omitted the provision requiring the publication of notice of the time and place of holding examinations of applicants for county teachers' certificates, and that section 7835, G. C., was amended by omitting from the provision authorizing the payment of expenses incurred in holding such examinations the words "together with the cost of advertising notice of their meeting as required by law."

It was clearly the intent of the legislature, in so amending section 7817, G. C., and in amending section 7835, G. C., to conform to section 7817, as amended, to do away with the publication of notice of holding said examinations as originally provided in section 7817, G. C., and to eliminate the expense incident thereto.

The act of the general assembly amending these sections became effective May 19, 1914.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that any publication of notice for the aforesaid purpose made on or after said date were without authority in law, and any bills for expense so incurred are not valid claims against this county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INSURANCE—INTER-INSURANCE EXCHANGE IS ENGAGED IN BUSINESS OF INSURANCE—PENALTY FOR ATTORNEY IN FACT AND POLICY HOLDERS—LIABILITY OF EXCHANGE FOR EXERCISING FRANCHISE OF WRITING INSURANCE.

The attorney in fact for the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange is an insurance agent under the provisions of section 644, G. C., and unless licensed is liable to the penalty prescribed in section 672, G. C.

The contracts entered into by the members of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange are contracts of insurance and the association being unauthorized by the superintendent of insurance to engage in the insurance business, the policy holders therein are liable to the tax of five per cent. under section 644-1, G. C.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange, each of the members thereof, and the attorney in fact are unlawfully engaged in the business of writing insurance contrary to the provisions of section 665, G. C., and subject to the penalty of section 672, G. C., and may also be ousted from exercising the franchise of writing insurance by proceeding in quo warranto.

COLUMBUS, MAY 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK TAGGART, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 20, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "I am enclosing herewith circular of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange, also blank power of attorney for one L.L.L., two original policies issued by this association to residents of the state of Ohio, three photographs of policies issued to residents of Galveston, Texas, receipt of money by L.L.L., and letter of Mr. L. to Mr. J. H., Cincinnati.
> "These exhibits show the plan that is being adopted by a class of individuals who are very industriously engaged in making insurance in this state.

"They are not authorized to do business within the state,—indeed it is doubtful if they can be so authorized. The so-called attorneys in fact solicit this class of business without being licensed as agents, and have no other authority save the signed power of attorney.

"What I am desirous of knowing is: First. As to the liability of the alleged attorney in fact under sections 644 and 672 of the General Code of Ohio. Second. I am desirous of knowing whether or not this is insurance, and, if authorized insurance, the liability of the alleged insured to pay the tax of five per cent. under section 644-1 and section 664-3.

"It is the contention of the people who are engaged in this business that section 664-3 relieves them from responsibility, but you will notice that these associations do not confine themselves to residents of this state, in fact, these people have gone over the entire state, and have included not only residents of the state, but citizens and residents of other states.

"I beg, also, to call your attention to section 665 of the General Code.

"It is very desirable that this question be settled, as this department is constantly called on to correct associations of this character who are transacting business in all parts of the state. If they are not authorized to write insurance, proceedings should be commenced to stop this business, and the taxes provided for in section 664-1 should be collected, and the persons making this insurance under the guise of acting as attorney in fact should be published. This department will co-operate with you in any way in arriving at the correct conclusion, and if violation of the law exists, will be pleased to assist your department in bringing offenders to task."

The circular of information of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange submitted with your letter contains the following paragraph indicating the method or plan of insurance:

"Each inter-insurer makes a deposit equal in amount to what he would pay as premium to stock companies for the same amount of protection for a like period of time. His proportion of payments for losses and expenses is to be paid from his deposit. At the end of twelve months one-half of the amount remaining of his deposits, after the payment of losses and expenses, is used to create a 'reserve fund.' The other half is returned to him in cash. When the amount to his credit in the reserve fund aggregates twice the amount of his annual deposit, and as long as his reserve fund is sustained at that figure, he shall have returned to him in cash, at the end of each succeeding year, all other savings."

The application for insurance signed by the insured is as follows:

"APPLICATION FOR INTER-INSURANCE

"To L.L.L., Attorney-in-Fact,

"c/o Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange,

"Cincinnati, Ohio.

"The undersigned, desiring protection against direct loss or damage by fire for one year, from the_____day of_____, 191__, to the_____day of_____, 191__, for an amount of _____dollars, hereby contracts to interchange indemnity with other contractors, subject to all the conditions set forth in the power of attorney given him to L.L.L., and agrees to make a deposit of _____dollars in cash.

"The property to be protected is located at---------- Description to follow.
"----------Signed

The following is the form of power of attorney which is printed on the back of the application above quoted, and is also signed by such applicant and referred to in the explanation:

"WHEREAS, There has been established at the office of L.L.L., in Cincinnati, Ohio, a bureau where merchants and manufacturers may interchange insurance for the protection of their respective properties and or interests, such bureau being called 'Merchants and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange.'

"NOW, THEREFORE, The undersigned, each severally for himself and not jointly, does hereby appoint L.L.L. our attorney for us and in our name, place and stead:

"To interchange indemnity against loss by fire with other signers of this or like contracts; to accept and make binding upon us, applications for such indemnity insurance; to subscribe with our name, or in his name as attorney-in-fact, issue, change, modify, re-insure, or cancel contracts therefor, containing such terms, clauses, conditions, warranties and agreements as he may deem best; to demand, receive, collect and receipt for all deposits, or sums paid in accordance with the terms of such contracts; to perform or waive all agreements or stipulations of any such contracts; to adjust and settle all losses; to give, receive or waive any notice or proofs of loss; to appear for us in any suits, actions or proceedings and bring, defend, prosecute, compromise, settle or adjust the same; and, in general, no matter whether specifically authorized herein or not, to do or perform every act that we, ourselves, could do in relation to the making, performance, compromise, settlement or adjustment of any contract of indemnity hereby authorized.

"As the purpose of this power of attorney is only to enable us, through our attorney, to exchange indemnity with other contractors, the exercise of the powers hereby granted shall be strictly confined to such purpose and be subject to the following limitations, viz.:

"First. Our liability, above the amount of our annual deposit and our surplus, shall be limited to ($150.00) one hundred and fifty dollars.

"Second. Our attorney shall not have power to bind us for the obligation of any other contractor, but he shall bind us separately and for ourselves alone.

"Third. Our attorney shall only bind us upon the same terms and conditions that he shall bind other parties signatory to this or like contracts.

"In order that the acts hereby authorized may be properly carried on, the same shall be conducted subject to the following regulations, viz.:

First. An advisory committee, composed of the signers of this or like contracts, shall be selected annually for a term expiring during the first week in January of each year, and in annually choosing successors, our attorney is authorized to ask all contractors to name in writing those parties whom they desire to serve as such committee. All moneys that may come into the hands of our attorney shall be deposited in banks or invested in securities subject to the approval of such committee, and all disbursements shall be by check, signed by said attorney, and our attorney is hereby authorized and instructed to pay out of our funds in his possession our proportion of any losses or other liability as adjusted or compromised and in case at any time the balance standing to our credit shall be insufficient to meet our proportion of any loss or losses or other liability, we hereby agree to remit on demand and we authorize said attorney to draw on us at sight for the necessary amount. If the liability of any member of said committee as an indemnitor shall be terminated for any reason, or if his power of attorney be revoked or cancelled, he shall cease to be a member of the committee and the attorney and the remaining members shall fill the vacancy. Said committee shall serve until their successors are chosen. The powers herein conferred upon said attorney may, at any time, be deputized by him to any other person he may select, subject to the written approval of the majority of said committee.

"Second. Said attorney shall keep separate account of all moneys due us, which shall be at all times open to our inspection. As compensation to the attorney (and in consideration of the guarantee of the solvency of the contractors) said attorney may deduct from any money of ours that may come into his hands, twenty-five per cent. thereof; in consideration whereof, he shall defray all expenses incident to the business hereby authorized, except legal expenses, taxes, or expenses of the advisory committee, of which we shall bear our pro rata share. Said attorney may transfer the office to any other place or places in the United States.

"Third. The signers hereof shall have no joint funds, capital, or stock, nor shall business be conducted by them jointly, nor shall they have any power to bind each other, but each shall act separately and not for any others.

"Fourth. There shall be set aside one-half of our savings as a surplus or reserve fund until such surplus or reserve fund shall equal twice the amount of our last annual deposit, and all other savings shall be returned to us annually in cash.

"Fifth. This power of attorney is strictly limited to the use and purpose herein expressed and to no other purpose, and may be terminated at any time by the undersigned or by the attorney, by either giving to the other ten days' notice in writing, and thereupon our attorney shall within thirty days completely liquidate our account and return to us any net surplus and reserve, provided, however, that there shall be at that time no outstanding unadjusted losses on which we are liable nor adjusted losses on which our liability is unliquidated.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, We have hereunto set our hands and seals the_____day of_____, 191__.

Witness_____ Seal.

_____ Seal."

The form of the policy of insurance submitted contains the following provisions:

"Each contractor contracting herein exclusively for such contractor alone, and each represented under separate power of attorney by L.L.L., of Cincinnati, Ohio, called herein the attorney, and it being understood that wherever in this contract the word 'contractors' occurs, it means, and shall be taken and construed to mean, each of the contractors individually, as if a separate contract were issued for each contractor, and as the consideration for and as a part of this contract that each of the contractors has entered into an agreement with each of the other contractors to exchange indemnity on the property of each other to the several amounts respectively authorized by and upon the terms and conditions expressed in said agreement, which is hereby made a part of this contract, it being thereby provided that no contractor shall in any event be made jointly liable with the others or with any one or any of the others or otherwise than severally."

A condition of said policy form printed in heavy type on the back thereof is as follows:

"In the event of litigation herein, to avoid a multiplicity of suits, no suit or other proceeding at law or in equity shall, in any event, be begun or maintained for the recovery of any claim upon, under or by virtue of this contract against more than one of the contractors at any time, nor in any court other than the highest court of original jurisdiction; nor unless the attorney in fact named herein shall have theretofore been given thirty days' notice in writing of the intention to bring suit under this contract; and, it is agreed between the insured and each of the contractors that a final decision in such suit, or other proceedings, shall be taken to be decisive of the similar claim, so far as the same may subsist, against each of the other contractors, absolutely fixing his liability in the premises; each of the contractors, in consideration of the entire stipulation, so far as he individually is or may be concerned, expressly agrees to accept and abide by the result of such final decision in the same manner and to the same effect as if he had been sole defendant in a similar suit or proceeding as to the similar claim against him, so far as the same may subsist, save and accept, however, as to the matter of costs and disbursements; the attorney being authorized as to each contractor, to receive and admit service of process in, and defend, compromise or settle any suit or other proceeding begun or maintained as aforesaid."

Sections 644 and 672 of the General Code referred to in your first question are as follows:

"Section 644. No person, company or corporation, in this state, shall procure, receive or forward applications for insurance in any company or companies not organized under the laws of this state, or in any manner aid in the transaction of the business of insurance with any such company, unless duly authorized by such company and unless duly licensed by the superintendent of insurance.

"Section 672. Whoever violates any provision herein relating to the superintendent of insurance or any provision of an insurance law of this state, for the violation of which no penalty is elsewhere provided, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not more than six months, or both."

The answer to your first question depends upon the meaning and scope of the words "company or companies not organized under the laws of this state" as used in section 644 supra. The attorney in fact is clearly an agent procuring and receiving applications for insurance, but do the several individuals who have appointed him as their attorney in fact constitute or come within the meaning of the word "company" as used in the said section?

Section 670, of the General Code, provides:

> "The provisions herein relating to the superintendent of insurance shall apply to all persons, companies and associations, whether incorporated or not, engaged in the business of insurance."

The substance of the language of this last section was a part of section 289 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio as enacted in 99 O. L., 131, which was by the codifying commission separated into four sections of the General Code, viz.: Sections 665, 666, 669 and 670. The language of section 289 of the Revised Statutes, which section was contained in chapter 8, title 3, was in part as follows:

> "The provisions of this chapter shall apply to individuals and parties, and to all companies and associations, whether incorporated or not, now or hereafter engaged in the business of insurance; * * *"

Section 644 of the General Code, above quoted, was section 283 of the Revised Statutes, and also a part of chapter 8, title 3. The word "company" in section 644 must therefore be construed in the light of the qualifying language in section 670 of the General Code. It should also be borne in mind that the General Assembly in the enactment of section 644 and other sections relative to the powers and duties of the superintendent of insurance had in mind and were attempting to restrict and regulate the business of insurance generally, and one cannot escape the conclusion that in enacting this particular section (Sec. 644) the legislative intent was to make sure of the authority and definitely locate and establish the responsibility for the actions and representations of insurance agents representing insurers not incorporated under the laws of Ohio, and that its provisions apply to agents of any foreign corporation or of any individual or unincorporated association of individuals residing in or out of the state; or in other words, that it required the licensing of all agents of any and all insurers, except agents of corporations organized under the laws of Ohio to conduct the business of insurance.

In the case of State v. Stone, 118 Mo., 388 (25 L. R. A., 243), the court say:

> "The word 'company' sometimes includes individuals as well as corporations so that as used in the Revised Statutes of Missouri of 1889 (Sec. 5910), providing that no company shall transact insurance business in this state without a certificate, the word 'company' will be held as including both company and association of individuals."

The facts in the above case were very similar to the facts in the case of State v. Ackerman, 51 O. S., 163, except that in the Missouri case the question was raised in a criminal prosecution upon an affidavit charging Stone with writing insurance without a license, while in the Ackerman case the question arose in a quo warranto proceeding.

> "The word 'company' may be construed to include all corporations, companies, firms or indiyiduals in statutes passed for the promotion of the public good, such as the enforcement of the collection of revenues, regulation of the exercise of public franchises, and in other similar matters. (Efland et al. v. Southern Railway Company, 146 N. C., 135, 59 S. E., 355.)"

Replying to your first question, I am of the opinion that the agents of all insurers, except of corporations organized under the laws of Ohio, are required by virtue of section 644 of the General Code, to secure a license from the superintendent of insurance, and that under the facts submitted, the attorney in fact for the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange is soliciting and procuring insurance without a license, contrary to section 644 of the General Code, and is subject to the penalty prescribed in section 672 of the General Code.

Although I have given you a categorical answer, yet I do not hesitate to say that the question asked is not easy of determination, that strong reasons and authorities of considerable weight can be produced leading to a contrary conclusion. All laws which make the doing of an act a criminal offense are by the courts construed strictly and in favor of the accused. Therefore, in view of the language used in section 644 of the General Code, it is very difficult to predict with certainty what construction will be given it by a court. I therefore advise, as more certain of accomplishing the purpose desired, a resort to the remedies hereinafter suggested in reply to your second question and to the other questions which have arisen in my own mind while engaged in solving the problem submitted.

> "Sec. 664-1. That all persons, companies, associations or corporations residing or doing business in this state that enter into any agreements with any insurance company, association, individual, firm, underwriter or Lloyd, not authorized to do business in this state, whereby said person, company, association or corporation shall enter into contracts of insurance covering risks within this state, with said unauthorized association, individual, firm, underwriter, or Lloyd, for which there is a premium charged or collected, the said person, company, association or corporation so insured shall, annually on the first day of July or within ten days thereafter return to the superintendent of insurance of this state, a statement under oath of all actual cost of indemnity and gross premiums paid or payable for the twelve months preceding on policies or contracts of insurance taken by said person, company, association or corporation and shall at the same time pay to said superintendent of insurance a tax of five per centum of the actual cost of indemnity paid or payable to any such association, firm or individual, or a tax of five per centum of the gross premiums paid or payable to any such insurance company, underwriter or Lloyd. All taxes collected under the provisions of this section by the superintendent of insurance shall be paid by him, upon the warrant of the state auditor, into the general revenue fund of the state.
> "Sec. 664-2. Any person, company, association or corporation failing or refusing to make the report required in section 1 of this act and to furnish all the data and information that may be required by the superintendent of insurance to determine the amount due, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, be fined not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense.
> "Sec. 664-3. No provision of this act shall be construed as extending to private citizens, firms or corporations, residents of this state, who seek to provide indemnity among themselves from fire, loss or other casualty, by exchange of private contracts for protection only and not for profit. Nor shall any provision of this act be construed as extending to fraternal beneficiary associations or members thereof."

In this connection it may be well to state that the constitutionality of the above section of the General Code has been questioned by reason of the fact that the so-called "tax" therein imposed is laid upon the insured rather than upon the insurer. The question has never been presented to the courts for determination, and the presumption must be in favor of the constitutionality of the law. The tax imposed is in the nature of a privilege tax or penalty assessed apparently to discourage the doing of the thing which is taxed or penalized. Assuming therefore that the tax imposed by sections 664-1 and 664-2, G. C., is a valid exercise of the legislative power, the class of agreements or contracts entered into by the several members of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange clearly constitute insurance within the definition of section 664-1 above quoted, and since neither the Inter-Insurance Exchange as an association or company nor the several individual members of the "Exchange" who have executed the power of attorney, are authorized by the superintendent of insurance to do an insurance business in Ohio, the insured are under the necessity of paying five per cent. tax provided for in section 664-1 of the General Code, unless they come within that excepted class described in section 664-3 of the General Code, quoted above.

The facts submitted in your letter and the exhibits reveal that the Inter-Insurance Exchange is not composed exclusively of members who are "residents of Ohio," but that its membership includes residents of other states.

I am therefore of the opinion that the five per cent. tax provided for in section 664-1 of the General Code, may be collected from all corporations, associations or individuals in Ohio carrying insurance policies in such Inter-Insurance Exchange, and that in default of making report and paying said tax as required in said section 664-1 they may be subjected to the penalty prescribed in section 664-2, and in addition thereto, the five per cent. tax may be collected from them by civil action.

Although you submit no direct questions relative thereto, you call my attention to section 665 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "No company, corporation or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein, or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

Under the facts stated, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Inter-Insurance Exchange is engaged in writing insurance in violation of the provisions of the last section, and is subject to the penalty prescribed in section 672 of the General Code. The attorney in fact is also, to say the least, directly aiding in the making of contracts substantially amounting to insurance with an association not authorized by the laws of Ohio and is therefore subject to a like penalty. A careful study of the power of attorney, the application for insurance and the policy form reveal also that each member of the Inter-Insurance Exchange is individually engaged in writing insurance contrary to the provisions of section 665 of the General Code, and liable to the penalty prescribed in section 672 of the General Code. Even though the members of the Inter-Insurance Exchange were limited strictly to "residents of Ohio" and thereby escape the tax prescribed in section 664-1 of the General Code, yet they would still be engaged in the business of writing insurance under the definition of section 665 of the General Code, and in order to conduct such business legally they must be authorized by the superintendent of insurance and otherwise conform to Ohio laws relative to the character of insurance written by them.

An examination of the entire plan of business of the Inter-Insurance Exchange, in connection with the decision of the supreme court of Ohio in the case of Ackerman v. State, 51 O. S., 163, leads directly to the conclusion that its plan of operation is very similar to the plan there under consideration of the court, and that the Inter-Insurance Exchange is an association of companies incorporated and unincorporated, and of individuals who are attempting to exercise the franchise of writing insurance without authorization from the state.

The plan of the Inter-Insurance Exchange is in many particulars so clearly identical with that described and considered in the Ackerman case that a natural inference arises that both plans had their origin in a common source, and I am of the opinion that under the ruling in the Ackerman case the members of the Inter-Insurance Exchange may by proceedings in quo warranto be ousted from transacting the business of insurance in Ohio.

It is brought to my attention from the facts presented that many Ohio corporations are subscribing to or becoming parties to inter-insurance or reciprocal insurance, and the question arises, have Ohio corporations, other than such as are organized to conduct an insurance business, authority under their charters to subscribe to or enter into a contract whereby they insure other corporations, associations or individuals. The answer is clearly "no." Corporations are limited to those express purposes for which organized, together with those impliedly necessary to carry out or accomplish the express purpose. It follows therefore that such corporations are exceeding their corporate authority and doing an ultra vires act, and in addition to the penalty imposed by law for the violation of the provisions of section 665 of the General Code, they may by suit in quo warranto, be ousted from entering into contracts of insurance.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF IMPROVED ROADS—WHEN APPOINTED UNDER SECTION 6997, G. C., MAY NOT BE PAID EXPENSES INCURRED FOR CAR FARE, LIVERY HIRE AND HOTEL IN ADDITION TO PER DIEM FIXED BY SAID SECTION.

"Superintendents of improved roads" appointed under section 6997, G. C., may not be paid expenses incurred for car fare, livery hire and hotel in addition to per diem fixed by said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 28, 1915, you submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "Can bills for car fare, livery hire and hotel expenses incurred by 'superintendents of improved roads,' appointed under section 6997, G. C., be legally paid from township funds in addition to the $4.00 per diem provided for in the section?"

Section 6997, G. C., provides:

> "Before entering upon the improvement of a road under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter, the trustees of such township shall employ a competent engineer, who shall be known as 'superintendent of the improved roads,' and who shall be paid not more than four dollars per day for the time actually employed, out of the funds raised for the improvement of roads and streets."

Nowhere in the statutes relative to an improvement of a road, under the provisions of the particular subdivision of the chapter, is there any provision for the payment to superintendents of improved roads of any expenses incurred by them, nor anything further by way of compensation. The superintendent employed under the provisions of section 6997, G. C., is supposed to present himself for work at the proper place and work on a per diem basis. Bills for car fare, livery hire and hotel expense are, under the opinion of the supreme court in the case of Richardson v. State ex rel, 66 O. L., 108, of a personal character. Such expenses are not to be compensated for unless there is clear provision of statute authorizing the same. Not finding any provison so authorizing them I am of the opinion that bills for car fare, livery hire and hotel expenses, incurred by superintendents of improved roads appointed under section 6997, G. C., cannot be legally paid from township funds in addition to the compensation provided in said section.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPOINTMENT TO FILL VACANCY IN OFFICE OF JUDGE OF COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF FIRST SUBDIVISION OF NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT—LENGTH OF SERVICE—HOW APPOINTMENT SHOULD BE MADE

An appointment to fill a vacancy in the office of judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district should be made to the office of "judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district" for the period beginning with the date of the appointment and ending with the election and qualification of the appointee's successor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 10, 1915, receipt of which is acknowledged, requests my opinion as follows:

> "Hon. John H. Fimple, judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district, composed of Carroll, Stark and Columbiana counties, has tendered his resignation to take effect as of date May 15, 1915. I am, therefore, called upon to make an appointment, and in filling such vacancy in this office, I desire to be advised, under the provisions of section 1532 of the General Code, as amended Ohio Laws, page 243, 1914, the term for which such appointment should be made and whether or not the appointment should be made 'has been duly appointed to the office of judge of the court of common pleas in Carroll county,' or 'has been duly appointed to the office of judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district."

I find upon investigation that Judge Fimple's term began January 1, 1911. Accordingly the position held by him was that described by you, viz.: "judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district."

Upon the principles worked out in an opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, which is too lengthy to be quoted herein, I advise that the appointment which you must make to fill the vacancy created by Judge Fimple's resignation is to the same office. That is, judge of the court of common pleas of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district. The appointment should be made for the period beginning with the date of the appointment and extending until the election and qualification of his successor. (Article IV, section 13 of the constitution.)

At the regular election for common pleas judges in the year 1916, there will be two positions to be filled, first: that of judge of the court of common pleas in Carroll county for the short term beginning with the qualification of the person elected and ending December 31, 1916, and second: the office of judge of the court of common pleas in Carroll county for the regular term beginning January 1, 1917, and ending December 31, 1922. The last statement results from the provision of section 1532, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 243, to which you refer. The other statements in this opinion are based upon the schedule to amended article IV, section 3 of the constitution which provides that:

"Each county shall continue as a part of its existing common pleas district and subdivision thereof until one resident judge of the court of common pleas is elected and qualified therein."

This provision controls to the exclusion of the third sentence of amended section 1532 insofar as that sentence is subject to such an interpretation as would constitute each common pleas judge a county judge "after the year 1914."

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROPRIATION TO SATISFY CLAIMS OF OWNERS OF ANIMALS DESTROYED BY AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION DOES NOT BECOME EFFECTIVE UNTIL AFTER NINETY DAYS AFTER FILING OF LAW IN SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE—SUBJECT TO REFERENDUM—LEGISLATURE WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO MAKE SUCH LAW AN EMERGENCY MEASURE.

An appropriation made to satisfy claims of the owners of animals destroyed by the agricultural commission in the eradication of contagious diseases among animals is not exempt from the referendum and does not become effective until after ninety days after the law making it is filed with the governor in the office of the secretary of state.

The general assembly is without power to make such an appropriation immediately effective by declaring it to be an emergency law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 12, 1915, which is as follows:

> "I very respectfully request an opinion from you as to whether appropriations recently made by the general assembly for payment of claims of those whose animals were destroyed in the attempt to eradicate the hoof and mouth disease can be made available before the expiration of 90 days. As you realize many of these people are in sore straits and are very desirous of receiving the money appropriated at as early a date as possible. If this appropriation were construed to be an appropriation for current expenses it of course would be immediately available. Shall be glad to have your opinion upon this matter and also as to whether such appropriation should be provided for in an emergency measure under the terms of the state constitution."

The constitution of the state, article 2, section 1d provides:

> "Laws providing for tax levies, appropriations for the current expenses of the state government and state institutions, and emergency laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, shall go into immediate effect. Such emergency laws upon a yea and nay vote must receive the vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each branch of the general assembly, and the reasons for such necessity shall be set forth in one section of the law, which section shall be passed only upon a yea and nay vote, upon a separate roll call thereon. The laws mentioned in this section shall not be subject to the referendum. (Adopted Sept. 3, 1912.)"

The statutes involved are as follows: being sections 36 to 38 inclusive of the act establishing the agricultural commission of Ohio, 103 O. L., 304-312, therein designated as sections 1114-1116, G. C. It appears that no appropriation was made, prior to the slaughter of the animals in question, for the uses and purposes of the agricultural commission in paying for slaughtered animals, but that the claims of the respective owners were presented to the general assembly for special allowance as claims against the state.

Although these claims constituted liabilities of the state in the sense that the subject-matter thereof was authorized by pre-existing law, yet in my opinion their satisfaction does not constitute a "current expense of the state government," within the meaning of the above quoted provision of the constitution. The term "current expenses" as therein used in my opinion means and refers to such expenditures as would ordinarily have to be made in order to discharge the functions of government. I think the intention of the framers of the constitutional amendment, and of the people in adopting it was that what might be termed anticipatory appropriations intended to provide funds in advance for conducting the normal operations of the different departments of the state government should be exempt from a referendum. I do not think it was the intention that appropriations to discharge liabilities lawfully incurred by a state department, but not within the normal or ordinary course of business of the department, the appropriations being made after incurring the liability, should be exempt from the referendum. In other words the current expenses of the state government are those expenses for which appropriations are made in advance, subject to qualifications which need not be discussed here. But an appropriation to discharge a liability, though lawfully incurred by a state department, is not one for a "current expense" if no appropriation was made in advance for such purpose and if the liability is one not ordinarily or customarily incurred by the department in the regular course of its business.

These statutes cited clearly evince the legislative intention that the agricultural commission shall not, itself, make the expenditure. It has authority to create claims, but the statute requires that the claims shall be made the subject of special appropriations. The statute, therefore, shows on its face that the payment of such claims is not a current expense of that branch of the state government entrusted to the administration of the agricultural commission. That is, expenditures of this class are not, under the statute, to be made from time to time by the agricultural commission, but are to be provided for by the general assembly at the biennial appropriation periods. Therefore, from another point of view expenses of this character are not "current." I, therefore, advise that the appropriations recently made by the general assembly for the payment of claims of those whose animals were destroyed by the agricultural commission, under the circumstances mentioned by you, will not become effective until the expiration of ninety days after the law making them was filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state.

I am further of the opinion that a law of this character cannot be made an emergency measure. The straits of those, the payment of whose claims is thus deferred, in nowise affect the public peace, health or safety, and any formal declaration to the effect that the public peace, health or safety required the immediate effectiveness of an appropriation law of this kind, if inserted in such law for the purpose of exempting it from the referendum and putting it into immediate effect, would in my opinion be a mere nullity.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

FAIR GROUNDS OWNED BY COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—AN ACT AUTHORIZING COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO LEVY A TAX AND ISSUE BONDS FOR IMPROVING SUCH GROUNDS, PROBABLY CONSTITUTIONAL.

In view of legislative and judicial history, the courts would probably hold an act authorizing county commissioners to levy a tax and to issue bonds for the purpose of improving fair grounds owned by a county agricultural society, to be constitutional.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested me to advise you as to the constitutionality of house bill No. 471, passed May 5, 1915, enacting section 9887-1 of the General Code, as follows:

> "Section 9887-1. In counties wherein there is a county agricultural society which has purchased a site whereon to hold fairs, or if the title to such grounds is vested in fee in the county, but the society has the control and management of the lands and buildings, if they think it for the interest of the county and society, the county commissioners may levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the county for the purpose of improving such grounds not to exceed one-tenth of one mill in any one year and not for a period of more than ten years; and in anticipation of the collection of this tax the commissioners may issue and sell the bonds of the county, bearing interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum payable annually."

This provision is similar in import and substantial effect, so far as your question is concerned, to sections 9887 and 9888 to 9892, inclusive, of the General Code. Both of these existing statutes authorize the payment from public funds to aid in the improvement of real estate used by a county agricultural society as a site whereon to hold fairs.

Sections 9880 and 9894, General Code, provide for public aid from the county treasury to an agricultural society for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs. The constitutionality of these provisions was upheld in Commissioners of Lawrence County v. Brown, 1 N. P. (n. s.) 357. The ground of the decision is that article VIII, section 4 of the constitution, prohibiting the loaning of the public credit to or in aid of any individual, company, corporation or association, does not apply to corporations formed for public purposes and not for profit, such as agricultural societies. (See also Zanesville v. Crossland, 8 C. C. 652.)

There might be said to be a distinction between the granting of public aid to an agricultural society for the purpose of encouraging the holding of fairs and for the purpose of paying for improvements on real estate, on the ground that though the corporation is not for profit, yet upon its dissolution the members would be entitled to its real estate; so that eventually the public aid might be diverted to private use. This contingency, however, is safeguarded in the related statutes. Section 9885, General Code, provides that when the county commissioners have paid money to aid in the purchase of a site, no mortgage shall be given by the agricultural society thereon without the consent of the commissioners; while section 9898, General Code, provides:

"When a society is dissolved or ceases to exist, in a county where payments have been made for real estate, or improvements thereon, or for the liquidation of indebtedness, for the use of such society, all such real estate and improvements shall vest in fee simple in the county by which the payments were made."

It is necessary only to add that county agricultural societies have no authority to declare dividends or otherwise to distribute profits among their members. So that even if such a society should not be dissolved, and its lands should be leased for private purposes, no benefit could thereby accrue to any individual.

The provisions of article VIII, section 4 of the constitution create some doubt in my mind, but in view of the decisions which I have cited and in view, too, of the fact that statutes of substantially the same character have supposedly been in force in this state for more than half a century and proceedings have been had thereunder without question, I am of the opinion that should section 9887-1 of the General Code, if enacted into law by the approval of house bill No. 471, be questioned in the courts its constitutionality would probably be sustained.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROVISIONS OF SUBSTITUTE SENATE BILL NO. 264 MAY EXCEED THE TAX LIMITATION OF THE SMITH LAW ONE-HALF MILL.

Under the provisions of substitute senate bill No. 264, now pending before the general assembly, the tax limitations of the Smith law, sections 5649-1 to 5649-5b, G. C., as amended 103, 104, Q. L. may be exceeded one-half mill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested my opinion as to whether the right to levy taxes as provided by substitute senate bill No. 264, now pending in the general assembly, is limited by the provisions of the Smith law, as found in sections 5649-1 to 5649-5b, General Code, (as amended in 103 and 104 O. L.).

This bill provides for the construction, maintenance and operation of a rapid transit and boulevard and parkway system by a municipality, acting through a board of rapid transit commissioners to be appointed as provided therein.

The funds to pay the cost of construction of such system are to be raised by taxation or by the issuance and sale of bonds of the municipality. Fifty per cent. of the cost of the boulevard and parkway may be assessed against abutting and benefited property, and bonds may be issued in anticipation of the collection of such special assessments.

Under the provisions of sections 7 and 8 of the bill, bonds may be issued for the construction of such system up to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars without a vote of the people, and with a vote of the people up to not to exceed "two per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation."

Section 11 of the bill contains the provisions for the raising of money to pay the interest on said bonds and to redeem the same (except special assessment bonds) and is as follows:

"Section 11. All rentals, payments and fees of every description and all other income, earnings or revenues, received from all persons, firms and corporations for the use of said depot terminals and railways, shall be kept in a separate and distinct fund, and after paying the expenses of the municipal corporation for the maintenance, conducting and managing said depots, terminals, and railways, including the setting aside of a reasonable sum annually for depreciation to be applied to the repair or replacement of any portion of said work, from the remainder of said receipts there shall annually be paid into the sinking fund of the city such sum or sums as are necessary for the payment of accruing interest on the bonds, if any, issued and outstanding for the construction of such rapid transit system, and for providing a sinking fund for the redemption thereof at maturity, and to the extent that such remainder shall not be sufficient for the said payment of the interest on said bonds and for the bonds issued during construction and for the accumulation of a sinking fund sufficient for payment thereof at maturity, the municipal corporation shall annually levy a tax sufficient for such purposes, and said taxes for bonds issued by vote of the people shall not be subject to any of the limitations provided by law for maximum tax rates on property in the municipal corporation, except the combined maximum rate, fixed in section 5649-5b of the General Code, and in addition thereto, one-half mill for the purposes herein authorized may be levied to the extent herein described in addition to all other tax levies provided by law.

"The surplus in any year above said expenses, depreciation charges, interest and sinking fund charges, shall up to the amount necessary to equal said deficiencies of previous years, be paid into the sinking fund of said city until the amounts paid into the sinking fund from the said revenues shall equal the total accrued interest and sinking fund charges on said bonds, and any amounts thus paid in on account of such past deficiencies may be applied to interest or sinking fund charges on any indebtedness of said city. Any surplus above said expenses, depreciation charges, current interest and sinking fund charges and reimbursement of past deficiencies of interest and sinking fund charges, may be used for the reconstruction of, improvement of, additions to, or extensions of such depots, terminals and railway equipment."

Under the bill as submitted to me the tax limitations of the Smith law may be exceeded one-half mill either for the direct tax levy provided under section 7 of the bill, or for interest and sinking fund levies on bonds issued by a vote of the people. Hon. Walter M. Schoenle, city solicitor of Cincinnati, who happened to be here on another matter, explained that it was not the intention of those who were asking for the bill to place any levy outside of the Smith law except a levy of one-half mill for interest and sinking fund purposes on bonds issued by a vote of the people. He has informed me that an amendment will be offered from the floor of the house striking the commas out of line 191 and striking from line 192 the words "for the purposes herein authorized" and striking out the remainder of the sentence after the word "levied," which will make that part of the section read "and said taxes for bonds issued by vote of the people shall not be subject to any of the limitations provided by law for maximum tax rates on property in the municipal corporation, except the combined maximum rate fixed in section 5649-5b of the General Code and in addition thereto, one-half mill may be levied."

If this is done then in my opinion no levy may be made in excess of the Smith law limitations except one-half mill for the purpose of interest and sinking fund for bonds issued under a vote of the people.

Your attention is called to the fact that under the provisions of section 11 above quoted, all earnings of such rapid transit system, over and above cost of maintenance, conducting and managing the same, are to be applied to the payment of interest on, and redemption of said bonds, and that taxes can be levied only when such surplus earnings are not sufficient for such purpose, and that any such taxes so levied and applied are to be returned to the sinking fund of the city out of any future surplus earnings of the rapid transit system, in which event such funds to be returned may be used to pay any indebtedness of the city.

This opinion is limited to the question of the application of the Smith law limitations, and no consideration has been given to any of the other provisions of the bill.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROPOSED SUBSTITUTE SENATE BILL NO. 187, PROVIDING FOR ISSUE OF BONDS IN AID OF CONSTRUCTING INTERSTATE CANALS CONNECTING LAKE ERIE AND HEAD WATER OF THE OHIO RIVER, UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me a proposed bill designed as a substitute for senate bill No. 187, recently vetoed by you, with a request for my opinion as to its constitutionality. The bill, like its predecessor, is entitled as follows:

> "A bill to authorize counties of this state to issue bonds in aid of the construction, by adjoining states, of interstate canals, partly within this state, connecting Lake Erie with navigable waters wholly or partly within such adjoining states; providing for the submission of the question of issuing such bonds to the electors of any county pursuant to the order of the court of common pleas made upon a petition of qualified voters who are freeholders; and requiring county commissioners to issue said bonds if a majority of the electors voting on the question vote in favor of such issuance, and repealing section 2503-1 of the General Code, as amended May 3, 1913 (Vol. 103, Ohio Laws, 473), and repealing sections 2503-2 and 2503-3 of the General Code."

Section 1 of the bill is in the abstract as follows:

> "Whenever by any present or future law, or laws, of any state of the United States adjoining this state, a commission or board of such adjoining state shall be authorized to construct, maintain and operate an interstate canal or waterway by a route partly within this state and partly within such adjoining state, connecting Lake Erie with any navigable waters wholly or partly within such adjoining state, * * * which law, or laws, shall provide for such construction by such voluntary contributions or appropriations in money, or bonds * * * in pursuance of the authority of any present or future laws, by the United States, certain of the several states thereof, and various counties, cities, towns, municipalities, or other political subdivisions of said states * * * for the collection of tolls and charges on such canal or waterway, * * * and for the distribution of any surplus revenues of such canal or waterway * * * among such contributors * * * pro rata * * *, thereupon it shall be lawful for any county in this state to issue bonds in aid of the construction of such canal or waterway as hereinafter provided."

Section 2 of the bill provides that at least one member of the commission or board of such adjoining state shall be a citizen and resident of the state of Ohio, and such canal or waterway shall be and remain exclusively a public enterprise under public management, control and operation, and free from any private management or interest whatsoever.

Section 3 provides in the abstract for the filing, with the clerk of the court of common pleas, "of any county of this state" of certified copies of the laws of such other state and of a petition signed by at least one hundred qualified electors, freeholders of the county, stating that in the judgment of the petitioners "such county, by reason of its location or commercial or industrial interests, will be benefiited by the construction of the canal or waterway authorized by such law, or laws, and that it is desirable that bonds of the county should be issued in aid thereof," and praying the court to order an election on the question of issuing bonds in aid of the canal, in such amount, etc., as may be stated in the petition. It is further provided that the court shall consider whether or not the petition is in proper form and if it is shall order it to be filed with the clerk and fix the date of hearing. The hearing is to be upon the form of the petition, merely, it being expressly provided that the court "shall not be required to inquire into the matters set forth upon the judgment of the petitioners as to the benefits to the county resulting from the construction of such canal or waterway, and the desirability of the issue of bonds, which matters shall be deemed to depend upon the result of the election prayed for." If the court finds that the petition is in form regular, it shall order the election. The section then provides for the machinery of holding the election, and that "if it shall appear * * * that at least a majority of all the votes cast for and against the proposed bond issue are in favor of said issue, the county commissioners shall issue the bonds so authorized, as hereinafter provided." It is also provided in said section that the "power hereby conferred shall not be deemed to be exhausted by a single submission to a vote and a favorable vote thereat."

Section 4 provides for the issuance of the bonds so required to be issued, and the making of tax levies for the payment of the same which are to be "within any limitation prescribed by law."

The foregoing constitute, in the abstract, all the provisions of the bill. There is no provision in the bill directly authorizing any other state to construct any public work in the state of Ohio, or granting to the officers of any such other state the privilege of the exercise of the power of eminent domain for such purpose, nor providing in any way for the acquisition of the necessary right of way in Ohio for the construction of such a canal as is mentioned in section 1. There are general provisions of the Ohio law relative to the organization and powers of ship canal companies. (Sections 9199-9228, inclusive, of the General Code.) One of the sections of this statute (section 9228), provides as follows:

> "Sec. 9228: Any company created under the laws of another state, or of the United States, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a ship-canal partly in such other state and partly in this state, with any kind of motive power, may exercise and enjoy herein all its powers, privileges, faculties, and franchises for the purposes of such canal and its business, not inconsistent with the laws of this state. Such companies shall be entitled to the rights or privileges granted, and subject to the requirements or restrictions imposed by law on ship canal companies organized under the laws of Ohio."

It is clear, however, that "a commission or board of such adjoining state," within the meaning of section 1 of the bill, would not be a "company created under the laws of another state, within the meaning of section 9228, G. C. Therefore, although foreign ship-canal companies have, by reason of the provisions of the sections referred to in section 9228 and of that section itself, the authority to "lay out, construct, maintain and operate with any kind of motive power a ship-canal" (section 9199), with power "by purchase, appropriation or otherwise" to "acquire lands necessary for making, preserving, maintaining, operating or using its canals" (section 9203), these powers would not be possessed by a department or agency of another state. Hence, in the absence of any authority in the bill for such agency of another state to acquire a right of way for a canal in Ohio, or even to operate a canal in this state, such authority does not exist.

If the issuance of bonds and the levying of taxes by counties in this state were made dependent, by the bill, upon the actual construction of a canal in this state, then because of the deficiency pointed out, the bill, if attempted to be enacted at all, would be merely inoperative. As a matter of fact, however, that is not the case. It is sufficient, under sections 1 and 3 of the bill, that the construction of the canal be authorized by any law or laws "of any state of the United States adjoining this state." When such laws have been passed and without any work being done or any route located except as to the general indication, in the laws, of the termini, the issuance of the bonds of any county may be compelled in the manner provided in the bill. This fact of itself constitutes a very serious objection to the bill, at least as to its policy, and it also necessitates the consideration of other questions presented by the bill. The first of said questions is as to whether or not the contribution by a county to an enterprise of this sort conflicts with article 8, section 6 of the constitution, which in part provides as follows:

> "No laws shall be passed authorizing any county, city, town or township, by vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation, or association whatever; or to raise money for, or to loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association."

For reasons which have already been stated I am of the opinion that a commission or board of an adjoining state could not be regarded as a "joint stock company, corporation or association," within the meaning of this section. The provisions of section 2 of the proposed bill, above referred to, would have the effect of a contractual obligation, in the event that money were actually contributed by any Ohio county to such an enterprise, and would in my opinion effectually preclude the canal from ever passing under the control and management of private interests.

A much more serious and fundamental question, however, has suggested itself to me. It will be observed that the bill authorizes one hundred electors of any county in the state to petition for an election and to submit to the qualified electors of the county the question of issuing bonds in aid of such canal, and provides that the result of the election shall conclusively determine that such county, by reason of its location or commercial or industrial interests, will be benefited by the construction of the canal; and that such result shall have the effect not merely of authorizing but of requiring the commissioners of the county to issue bonds in the amount voted upon and for the period of time specified in the petition.

Several reasons occur to me for holding such a scheme of legislation unconstitutional. In the first place, under the constitution of Ohio, as interpreted by our supreme court in Wasson v. Commissioners, 49 O. S., 822, and Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, 57 O. S., 436, a question as to whether or not a given locality will be specially benefited by a public improvement cannot be conclusively foreclosed by political action, but is one the determination of which rests with the courts. The opposite theory is one which obtains in the state of Pennsylvania, and indeed formerly obtained in the state of Ohio, and possibly still does obtain in this state as to municipal corporation. (See Goddin v. Crump, 8 Leigh (Va.), 120. Sharpless v. Phila., 21 Pa. St., 147. Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 1 O. S., 77-98. Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 O. S., 14-44.)

Counties, however, are not municipal corporations. They are "local subdivisions of a state, created by the sovereign power of the state, of its own soverign will, without the particular solicitation, consent or concurrent action of the people who inhabit them." "Whereas, a municipal corporation proper is created mainly for the interest, advantage, and convenience of the locality and its people; a county organization is created almost exclusively with a view to the policy of the state at large, for purposes of political organization and civil administration, in matters of finance, of education, of provision for the poor, of military organization, of the means of travel and transport, and especially for the general administration of justice." (Commissioners v. Mighels, 7 O. S., 110-119.)

The case last cited holds that the county commissioners, as a board, have some of the attributes of a corporation and constitute a public quasi corporation, but the people of the county, as a whole, do not constitute a body corporate, in the sense in which the people of a city or other municipal corporation may be said to constitute a body corporate. Hence, a county has no corporate functions or interests such as a municipal corporation is said to have, as distinguished from its governmental interests.

There will be found, in the above decision in Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, supra, language of a contrary import; but it must be borne in mind that the case itself arose under the constitution of 1802 and not under the constitution of 1851, and that after all the application of the doctrine now under discussion that was made in that decision was as follows:

> "The state had unlimited power to construct improvements of this character; and the selection of means and agencies to be employed for the purpose, was left exclusively to the general assembly. Counties and private corporations might lawfully be employed as such means and agencies, and invested with such powers as were necessary to accomplish the object."

So that it will be seen that Ranney J., conceived of the county, under the constitution of 1802, as a mere instrument or agency of the state for the execution of its policies.

In effect the present bill constitutes an attempt to impose the will of the state upon the county, for when the election has been held, upon the petition, the duty of the commissioners, under the bill, to issue the bonds, becomes mandatory. So that if we assume that the county is merely chosen as an instrument by which to carry out the state policy, and is not invested with corporate power or functions, we must inquire whether or not the county is an appropriate instrument, under the present constitution, for the discharge of a state function of this character.

Article 8, section 12 of the constitution, as amended September 3, 1912, provides as follows:

> "So long as this state shall have public works which require superintendence, a superintendent of public works shall be appointed by the governor for the term of one year, with the powers and duties now exercised by the board of public works until otherwise provided by law, and with such other powers as may be provided by law."

The statutes prescribing the powers and duties of the board of public works, and those of the superintendent of public works, as the successor of that board, show what is the well known fact, viz.: that the phrase "public works," as herein used, means and refers almost, if not quite exclusively, to canals. In other words, under the constitution and statutes of this state, aside from sections 2503-1 to 2503-3 inclusive, of the General Code, which the bill repeals and for which it is a substitute, the public canals of the stae constitute the public works of the state, and the same are to be superintended by the superintendent of public works.

Thus it is provided in section 412, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 120, that:

> "The superintendent of public works shall have the care and control of the public works of the state and shall protect, maintain and keep them in repair. The superintendent shall have the power to remove obstructions therein or thereto and shall make such alterations or changes thereof, and shall construct such feeders, dikes, reservoirs, dams, locks or other works, devices, or improvements as he may deem proper in the discharge of his duties. Subject to the approval of the governor, the superintendent of public works may purchase on behalf of the state such real or personal property, rights or privileges as it may be necessary, in his judgement, to acquire in the maintenance of the public works or their improvement subject to the approval of the governor."

And in section 415, as amended by the same act, that:

> "The superintendent of public works of Ohio shall have supervision of the public works of the state and shall make such rules and regulations for the improvement, maintenance and operation of the public works as shall be necessary to the proper conduct of the department.'

It follows, from these constitutional and statutory provisions, that the subject-matter of public canals, especially inter-county and interstate canals connecting the waters of Lake Erie with other navigable waters, is one of state-wide interest and concern. A public work of this sort is not a local improvement in any sense of the word, and if counties are to be employed in the aid of such an undertaking, such employment must be, as heretofore stated, either upon the theory that such subdivisions constitute municipal corporations so that they may, in their corporate (not governmental) capacity maintain public works of their own, as held in

Walker v. Cincinnati, supra, or because they are employed as means and agencies for the purpose of constructing improvements pertaining to the state, as such, as stated in Railroad Company v. Commissioners, supra. I think it is clear that Ohio counties have no corporate functions, so that the case of Walker v. Cincinnati, whatever be its present authority, could not be applied to counties. But I think, too, that where the purpose is admittedly a state-wide one, that is one the benefits of which are not peculiar to a county as a subdivision or locality but may spread throughout the state or throughout a large number of counties, and which is of a character similar to activities recognized by the constitution and laws of the state as pertaining to the state, as such, the county may not, on the theory of supposed local and special benefits, in addition to the general benefits, be specially burdened therefor. This was the holding in Wasson v. Commissioners and Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, supra. In the first of these cases the supreme court of this state held unconstitutional a law authorizing the commissioners of any county, upon a vote of the people, to donate money by the issuance of bonds and the levying of taxes for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the proposed Ohio agricultural experiment station and securing its location in such county. The court was cited, by the attorney general seeking to sustain the act, to all the decisions which I have mentioned, but held that under the constitution of 1851, and especially article 12, section 2 thereof, the substance of which is still in force, it was not competent for the legislature to authorize a county to levy taxes for a purpose state-wide in its character, even though a peculiar local benefit would accrue to the people of the county through the accomplishment of the purpose. The court in its opinion per Spear J. sharply distinguished general taxes from assessments on specially benefited property. If property is, in fact, specially benefited (which must be determined by judicial and not political decisions), then special taxes known as assessments may properly be imposed upon such property for the making of the improvement. But if the power exercised is the power of taxation, and the purpose for which the tax is levied is one that pertains to a district other than the one taxed, as well as to the district taxed, there may be no discrimination against the particular district with respect to the rate or amount of the tax, even though such district may be said to enjoy special benefits by reason of the improvement. The doctrine that the question of benefits and the scope of the purpose could be conclusively determined by such political action as submission to a vote of the people, was distinguished in the following language:

> "A question of constitutional power can not satisfactorily be solved by asking the advice of persons claimed to be specially interested. If it can be maintained that the general assembly may authorize Wayne county to assume this burden, it may, with still less doubt, require it to be done. That this station, if established, would prove of some slight local benefit to the people living immediately near it, and, in a lesser degree, to others within the county residing farther away, we need not stop to deny. It is enough for us to know that the principal object intended and authorized was a state institution, to be located, constructed, controlled and managed wholly by the state for the common good of the persons interested throughout the entire state, and that whatever benefit might accrue of a local character, would be merely incidental."

In Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, supra, the same principle was applied. The nature of this case is sufficiently disclosed by the following quotation:

> "It remains to inquire whether the purpose to be accomplished by the taxation in question is local to Cuyahoga county or general to the state.

That it is for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of an armory for the use of the national guard, the active militia of the state, is averred in the petition, admitted in the answer, and required by the act. The character of the guard and the purposes of its organization are not to be determined from evidence upon issues joined in the pleadings, but as matters of law from the constitutional and statutory provisions by which it is created and controlled.

"It is ordained in section 10, article 3 of the constitution, that the governor shall be commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the state. The ninth article of the constitution is devoted to the subject of the militia of the state, and the fifth section of that article imposes upon the general assembly the definite duty that it 'shall provide, by law, for the protection and safekeeping of the public arms.'

"Title 15 of the Revised Statutes, provides for the enrollment, organization, government, equipment and pay of the guard and the care of the public arms. The guard may be ordered into active service by the commander-in-chief, it is subject to his orders, and it is provided that 'the adjutant general shall, subject to the order of the governor, have control of all public arms, ammunition, accoutrements, etc., belonging to the state.' The character of the militia as a state organization is thus definitely fixed. It is not at all affected by the fact that it may sometimes be called upon to aid the civil authorities in the preservation of public order. That duty is as clearly due to the civil authorities of Lorain county as to those of Cuyahoga. It is equally due from the entire guard to the proper civil officers of every county and municipality of the state. That some incidental benefit would result to Cuyahoga county from the erection of a public building in its chief city is doubtless true. But any view which would recognize such incidental benefit as a proper basis for a local imposition, would equally justify a tax on the property of Franklin county for the erection of a state building for the use of this court.

"Nor is this question in any way affected by the fact that the legal title to the armory is in Cuyahoga county. The character of the imposition is determined by the fact that the armory is to be used for the accomplishment of duties which the constitution charges upon the general assembly and officers of the state."

The only distinction which can be made between these decisions and the case presented by the bill which you have submitted to me lies in the fact that in the cases cited the purposes for which the local tax was authorized were required by the state law to be administered by the state officers for the benefit of the people of the whole state; whereas under the bill no officer of the state is to have anything whatever to do with the proposed canal, although all other public works of the same character are to be administered by state officers. I do not think that this distinction creates a difference in the application of the true principle, which may be stated thus:

A county has no proprietary or corporate functions whatever; it may levy taxes only for governmental purposes; the nature of the purpose, as to whether it is local, pertaining to the people of a county, or state-wide, pertaining to the people of the whole state, is to be determined by the character of the enterprise contemplated, and cannot be conclusively determined by the general assembly itself or by any body of electors to whom it may seek to delegate such determination.

Measured by this principle, the constitutionality of the bill is, at the very least, extremely doubtful. The vice which inheres in the bill permeates the entire scheme which it seeks to legalize, as may be inferred from the statement that if the views above expressed are correct, no inter-county canal, intended for purposes of navigation, can be built at public expense save by the state itself.

Of course, if a county could not be authorized to build, maintain and operate a canal in conjunction with other counties for such a purpose, it follows that a county may not be authorized to contribute to the construction, maintenance or operation of such a canal.

In fact, the same objection would be to section 2503-1 to 2503-3 inclusive, of the G. C., as they would stand if the bill which you have handed to me should not become a law.

In addition to these objections I beg leave to point out that the bonds which may, and indeed must be issued under the bill, if a favorable vote is had in any county of the state, are to be provided for by taxation, within the limitations of the law, and yet there is no limit upon the amount of such bonds nor the number of years over which they may be spread. It is true that the section relative to the issuance of bonds provides that the same shall be issued "within any limitations prescribed by law," and that the term of the bonds shall not "exceed thirty years from the date." But inasmuch as there are no limitations upon the amount of the bonds which may be issued, for such purpose, by the county commissioners, the first of these limitations is of no avail; while the second of them operates in the wrong direction; for if the bonds should be issued at the outset of the proceedings, under the proposed scheme, it would certainly be some time before the canal would be in operation. Meanwhile the interest and sinking fund levies, on account of the bonds, would have to be made as provided in article 12, section 11 of the constitution. That is, levies would have to be made within the limitations of the law, and there being no practical limit on the amount of the bonds, and it being permissible to issue them for a relatively short period of time, the annual tax burden so created might very seriously impair the current revenues of any county issuing such bonds.

A great deal of light is shed upon the provisions of this bill by examination of the laws of Pennsylvania for 1911, page 55, and the laws of Pennsylvania for 1913, page 652, both of which acts evidently relate to the same scheme. The language of the bill, like that of section 2503-1 et seq., G. C., is taken almost verbatim from this Pennsylvania legislation. I have pointed out that the constitution of Pennsylvania is not like that of Ohio, and what may be done by the legislature of Pennsylvania is no criterion of what may be done by the legislature of Ohio.

Finally, article 1, section 10, of the constitution of the United States, provides in part as follows:

> "No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops, or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.'

The bill does not make the consent of congress a condition precedent to the issuance of such bonds which, if they have any force and effect at all, must be regarded as in the nature of contractual stipulations intended to be parts of a covenant between the issuing county and the "adjoining state." In short then the bill amounts to an attempt to authorize a county, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a canal by another state, to enter into an agreement or compact with such other state.

In the preceding portions of this opinion I have pointed out that counties, not being municipal corporations, may be authorized to act only as agencies of the state. An agent may not be granted authority which his principal does not possess. The state would have no authority, by virtue of the above quoted provision of the federal constitution, to enter into a compact with an adjoining state save with the consent of congress. Therefore, the state may not authorize any of its counties to enter into such a compact without its consent. This infirmity, it should be remarked, is present in present section 2503-1 to 2503-3 inclusive, of the General Code.

For the foregoing reasons I advise that in my opinion the bill which you have submitted to me should it be enacted in the form in which you have submitted it to me, would probably be held unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY—CAN LEGISLATE TO PREVENT THE PRACTICE OF DENTISTS USING FICTITIOUS NAMES—MAY REGULATE UNDER POLICE POWER.

It is not unconstitutional for the legislature to prevent the practice of dentistry under fictitious names, nor to regulate the same under the police power.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I have your letter of the 12th, as follows:

> "I very respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the constitutionality of amended senate bill No. 84, relative to the practice of dentistry. I direct your attention especially to the provision prohibiting the practice of dentistry under a firm name and to the section which gives the board power to revoke a certificate without hearing. I desire to know whether these provisions are in compliance with the constitution of the state of Ohio."

Answering your inquiry first as to the section which gives the board power to revoke a certificate without hearing, I beg to advise that in my opinion sections 1325, 1326 and 1327 of the General Code, contained in the bill, do not authorize the revocation of a certificate without a hearing, but on the contrary section 1326 specifically provides that,

> "No action to revoke or suspend a license shall be taken until the accused has been furnished a statement of the charges against him and notice of the time and place of hearing thereof. The accused may be present at the hearing in person, by counsel, or both. * * *"

Then follows provisions for the record of the hearing, with the right to review the order of revocation upon appeal in the common pleas court, and the judgment of the common pleas court may be reviewed on proceedings in error in the court of appeals. I do not find that the bill is faulty in this regard.

Answering your second inquiry relative to prohibiting the practice of dentistry under a firm name, I beg to say that I find that the section of the bill relating thereto is section 1329-1, which is as follows:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to practice or offer to practice dentistry or dental surgery, under the name of any company, association, or corporation, and any person or persons practicing or offering to practice dentistry or dental surgery shall do so under his name only; any person convicted of a violation of the provisions of this section shall be fined for the first offense not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars, and upon a second conviction therefor, his license may be suspended or revoked, as provided in section 1325 of this act."

The right of the state to regulate the practice of a profession, including dentistry, is not subject to question.

> "Where the successful prosecution of a calling requires a certain amount of technical knowledge and professional skill, and the lack of them in the practioner will result in material damage to the one who employs him, it is a legitimate exercise of 'police power' to prohibit any one from engaging in the calling who has not previously been examined by the lawfully constituted authority and received a certificate in testimony of his qualification to practice the profession.
> "The right of the state to exercise this control over skilled trades and the learned professions, with a single exception in respect to teachers and expounders of religion, has never been questioned."
> (Tiedman's State and Federal Control of Persons and Property, p. 241.)
> (Ohio v. Marble, 72 O. S., 21.)

The diploma or license granted by the state permitting a successful applicant therefor to practice dentistry in Ohio is individual and is not a grant of such license to form a company for the purpose of merging the individuality of the holder in a company, association or corporation. The criminal prosecution for violation of any statute regulating the practice of dentistry in Ohio is personal. It has long since been the law of this state that corporations may not be formed for professional business, section 8623 of the General Code providing that,

> "Except for carrying on professional business, a corporation may be formed for any purpose for which natural persons lawfully may associate themselves."

The constitutionality of this statute was sustained by our supreme court in the case of State ex rel. The Physicians Defense Company v. Laylin, Secretary of State, 73 O. S., page 90.

The object of the legislation evidenced in the bill under consideration is for the preservation of the life, health and comfort of the people.

I have examined with care the many authorities urged by Messrs. Miller and Foster, attorneys at law, as against the constitutionality of this act in the respects concerning which you inquire, but I do not find them sufficiently in point to be controlling. Omitting a review of other authorities which I have examined as bearing on the question which you present, I do not feel warranted in saying that amended senate bill No. 84 is unconstitutional on either of the grounds inquired about or for any other reason.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—APPROVAL OF PURCHASE OF BONDS OF DEER CREEK TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT OF PICKAWAY COUNTY, OHIO.

Approval of bonds in the amount of $20,000 purchased by the industrial commission of Ohio from the board of education of Deer Creek township rural school district, Pickaway county, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of May 5, 1915, containing certified copy of the resolution of the industrial commission of Ohio to purchase bonds of rural school district of Deer Creek township, Pickaway county, Ohio, in the amount of $20,000.00, and requesting my opinion relative to the validity of the said bonds and proceedings by virtue of which they were issued.

Under date of April 23, 1915, I received through the Honorable Meeker Terwilliger, prosecuting attorney of Pickaway county, a transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of Deer Creek township rural school district, and under date of April 29th, other amendatory and supplementary information was certified to me by Mr. W. T. Ulm, clerk of the said board of education.

I have carefully examined the proceedings of said board of education relative to the issuance of said bonds and find them regular and in conformity with the statutes. I have also examined the bonds in question, which are in the office of the treasurer of state, and I find them proper in form.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the bonds in question are legal and valid obligations of Deer Creek township rural school district of Pickaway county, Ohio, and approve the purchase of same by the industrial commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEPUTY INSPECTOR OF WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES—ACTUAL TRAVELING EXPENSES ALLOWED—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION MAY DESIGNATE OFFICE OR STATION FROM WHICH EXPENSES MAY BE ALLOWED.

Deputy inspectors of workshops and factories are permitted actual expenses while traveling on the business of the industrial commission. The commission may designate the office or station from which expenses may be allowed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 6, 1915, you submitted for my opinion thereon the following facts and inquiry:

> "A deputy inspector in the department of workshops, factories and public buildings lives at Gahanna (Franklin county); his district is Franklin and Pickaway counties, he spends 75 per cent. or more of his time in the city of Columbus; he travels between Gahanna and Columbus daily on the street railway line and obtains his noon day meal in Columbus. He is charging to the state the amount of his daily railway fare between Gahanna and Columbus and the costs of his noon day lunch.
> "Are these proper subjects for charges for which the state should pay?"

Under section 985 of the General Code a deputy or district inspector of workshops and factories "must devote his whole time and attention to the duties of his office."

Under favor of section 2250 of the General Code a district inspector of workshops and factories receives an annual salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum.

By the provisions of section 7871-7 of the General Code a deputy "shall be entitled to receive from the state the necessary and actual expenses while traveling on business of the commission either within or without the state of Ohio."

Under the language of this last section, to wit: "actual expenses while traveling on business of the commission" your question is one rather of fact than of law.

The law requires this inspector to travel over the counties of Franklin and Pickaway in the performance of his duties. He resides within the district at Gahanna. He has no fixed office or headquarters by virtue of law, and the commission has not assigned him any office or station to which he must report for service without expense to the state and from which he would be entitled to his expenses while traveling on business of the commission in the discharge of his official duties. It is within the power of the industrial commission to designate some place within his district other than his place of residence which shall be his official headquarters or station and the point from which his expenses, as provided by law, may be allowed.

In the absence of such a provision on the part of the commission, I am of the opinion that this inspector is entitled to his daily railway fare between Gahanna and Columbus, and the cost of his noon day luncheon, if the expense occasioned thereby is incurred while in the discharge of his official duties.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

SHERIFF—HUMANE OFFICER—AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY FOR A PERSON ACTING AS SHERIFF TO BE APPOINTED AS HUMANE OFFICER.

It is against public policy for a person acting as sheriff to be appointed as humane officer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of March 10th, you submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "May a sheriff be appointed as humane officer and draw an additional compensation for his services as such? If not, what findings should our examiners make in cases of this kind?"

The duties of the humane agent, commonly known as "humane officer," are found in the chapter relating to "humane society," being sections 10062 to 10084, inclusive, also section 13491 of the General Code.

There are various duties placed upon the humane officer which are also placed upon the sheriff of the county. There are, however, other duties placed upon the humane officer which cannot be performed by the sheriff of the county, as for instance, under section 10081 the humane officer, if he deems it for the best interest of a child, because of cruelty inflicted upon it, or of its surroundings, may remove it from the possession and control of the parents or persons having charge thereof summarily. Such a right is in no way granted by statute to the sheriff of the county.

There are also various duties that may be performed by the sheriff that cannot be performed by a humane officer.

There is no statutory inhibition against a sheriff acting as humane officer, nor against a humane officer acting as sheriff; nor am I able to find that the one office is in any way a check upon the other.

However, under the provisions of section 2833, G. C., the sheriff is required to "preserve the public peace." In view of the fact that the sheriff is made the conservator of the public peace of his county, he should be accessible both day and night and be at all times subject to call.

The law making it the duty of the sheriff to preserve the public peace and, therefore, be at all times subject to call differentiates said officer from the other county officers, and being so subject I am of the opinion that it is against public policy that he should hold any other public office which would interfere with his duties as sheriff, as above indicated.

Under the provisions of the statutes governing humane societies it is provided that the compensation for the humane agent shall be fixed, so far as the county is concerned, by the county commissioners at a monthly salary of not less than twenty-five dollars. Since the sheriff has certain duties to perform which are likewise placed upon the humane agent, it could be well said that in a given case he was receiving double compensation for the services performed and this, I believe, is against public policy.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is against public policy for a sheriff to be appointed as humane officer.

Since there is no statutory inhibition, and since one office is not in any way a check upon the other, I would not advise the making of any finding against a person who has been occupying the two offices simultaneously; but would suggest that your bureau notify those persons who are occupying the two offices simultaneously that either the one or the other should be given up.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

UNDER SECTION 6254, G. C., EACH ADVERTISEMENT IS TO BE MEASURED BY THE "EM QUAD" OF TYPE USED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of February 4th you submitted to this department for opinion the following inquiry:

> "May a newspaper, which publishes an advertisement in eight-point type, payable from public funds, be entitled to the same amount as if such publication had been made in six-point type? For instance, if an advertisement is set in compact form, six-point type, by one newspaper, would another newspaper, which set the same advertisement in eight-point type, be legally entitled to the same amount?"

Section 6254 of the General Code provides:

> "A square shall be a space occupied by two hundred and forty ems of the type used in printing such advertisements. Legal advertising shall be set up in compact form, without unnecessary spaces, blanks or head lines, and printed in type not smaller than nonpareil."

An "em" is defined by the Standard Dictionary as follows:

> "(2) Print—the square of the body of any size of type, used as a unit of measurement in computing the cost of composition."

"Em" as defined by Webster's Dictionary means:

> "(Print) The portion of a line formerly occupied by the letter "m," when a square, used as a unit for measuring printed matter."

An "em" defined in a work called "Proof Reading and Punctuation" by Adele Millicent Smith, as follows:

> "Em—the square of the body of a type. The amount of matter composed is estimated by ems."

The New English Dictionary defines "em" as follows:

> "In printing the square, formerly of the type 'm' used in typography as the unit for measuring and estimating the amount of printed matter in a line, page, etc."

In "The Americana" in an article on "Printing" the writer states what constitutes a font of type, and after giving a list of one hundred and twenty-nine characters, further states:

> "Besides this, there are required for filling the blanks between words, at the end of lines, etc., four sizes of spaces and four of quadrats. (The former and the smallest of the latter being subdivisions of the em (m) or square of the size of the type, one equal to it and the other two multiples of it) making altogether 137 sorts."

In the New International Encyclopedia under the heading "Printing," it is stated as follows:

> "The printer's unit of measurement by which the compositor is paid is the em in America and the en in Great Britain. The em is the square of the body of the type selected; the number of ems that fill a line multiplied by the number of lines in a page gives the total number of ems of the type in the page."

In a book entitled "The Practice of Typography" by Theodore Low Devinne at page 113, it is stated:

> "An em of any type is the square body of that type. As it is impracticable to count all of the bits of metal in a page the em is made a unit of superficial measure. The space that can be covered by one thousand em quadrats is reckoned as one thousand ems."

From the above it can readily be seen that the em referred to in section 6254 is what is familiarly known by the printers as the "em quad," which, of course, is the square of the body of the type.

A "square" is defined by the Standard Dictionary as follows:

> "'Square'—a given space in the column of newspapers or the like, considered as a unit of measurement for advertisements and ranging in depth from column width down to an inch; now mostly superseded by the inch or line as a unit."

Webster's Dictionary defines "square:"

> "(print)—a certain number of lines forming a portion of a column nearly square; used chiefly in reckoning the prices of advertisements in newspapers."

However, section 6254 itself defines what the square shall be in that it states that it shall be a space occupied by 240 ems.

With the above definitions in mind it can be readily seen that the unit of measurement of advertisements under section 6254 is the em of the type used in printing the advertisement in question, and has been so held by this department in an opinion to your department under date of January 19, 1915.

Whether or not there are more or less squares by the use of eight-point type setting up a given advertisement than in the use of six-point type, I am unable to say. However, in an opinion by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, found in the attorney general's report for 1913, page 225, rendered February 11, 1913, to your department, he states:

"I am informed by practical printers that a given advertisement when printed in eight-point type will not contain as many ems as if the same were printed in six-point type."

If the information obtained by Mr. Hogan was correct, the newspaper which publishes an advertisement in eight-point type would not be entitled to the same amount as if such publication had been made in six-point type, for the reason that the "em quad" of the type used in printing the advertisement is the basis of measurement.

Since each advertisement is to be measured by the em quad of the type used, the basis of payment of such advertisement is solely the amount of space occupied by the advertisement as measured by the particular em quad.

I have read the communication addressed to your department by the secretary of the Marion Tribune Publishing Co. My conclusion, however, is based upon the clear provisions of section 6254, General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT—BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS IMPLIED AUTHORITY TO REIMBURSE COUNTY SURVEYOR FOR ACTUAL EXPENSES—PAYMENT FROM COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION FUND.

Under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, the board of education of a county school district has implied authority to reimburse the county surveyor for his actual and necessary expenses incurred by him in rendering service to said board of education as required by said section.

Claims for such expenses may be paid out of the county board of education fund on the order of the county board of education and the warrant of the county auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Archie G. Holland, surveyor of Clermont county, under date of May 3, 1915, in which he refers to opinion 147 of this department, rendered to your bureau on March 18, 1915.

Mr. Holland's inquiry raises the question of the authority of the board of education of a county school district to reimburse the county surveyor for his actual and necessary expenses incurred in rendering service to said board, as required by the provision of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138. As this question is one of general interest throughout the state, I am addressing my opinion to you.

Mr. Holland's letter is as follows:

"I am writing you in regard to the surveys of schools where they are centralized. I received a letter from you stating that my services were to be given free of all compensation. I am out $23.00 now four days and three dollars expenses which I had to pay out of my own pocket.

There is talk of centralization almost all over the county. This work has to come at a time of the year when I have work almost every day, and if I have to keep on at it and work for nothing and pay my own expenses, it looks like I might as well quit. I don't mind doing a little work without compensation, but it looks to me like this is asking too much. The law says the county surveyor is to receive $5.00 per day for every day he works, and also his legitimate expenses. In the report of the state examiners they say I have only been charging about half what the former surveyors charged. I am also keeping a record; while I have had a good deal of trouble with it and it is in a poor form up to the first of the year, I think it is better than none, and I am getting it in pretty good shape this year. There has been no record kept by the county surveyor for many years.

"Please write and let me know if there is not some way I can get paid for the school work."

The opinion of this department above referred to does not pass upon the question of the authority of the county board of education to reimburse the county surveyor for his actual and necessary expenses incurred by him in rendering the services required by section 4736, G. C., as amended.

This section makes it the duty of the county surveyor to render services to the county board of education upon request being made by said board, and while said section does not expressly authorize said county board of education to reimburse the county surveyor for his actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of such duty, I am of the opinion that the authority of said board to require such performance, carries with it the implied authority to make such reimbursement. To hold to the contrary would, in effect, render this provision of the statute inoperative.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that claims for such expenses may be paid out of the county board of education fund on the order of the county board of education and the warrant of the county auditor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INJURIES SUSTAINED IN MILITARY SERVICE—CLAIMS MAY BE MADE AND PROVIDED FOR UNDER ARTICLE 2, SECTION 29 OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Claims for injuries sustained in the course of military service may be made and provided for under article 2, section 29, of the constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

HON. FRANK H. REIGHARD, Chairman of the Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This office is in receipt of the papers referred to you by the adjutant general relative to the claim of Mr. Floyd L. Reed, who is a member of Company B, Second Infantry, Ohio National Guards, and whose claim is put in language as follows:

"I am a member of Company B, 2nd Inf., O. N. G. I joined that organization May 31, 1913, and have been connected with it ever since.

"When I joined Company B, I was in good health and perfectly sound. Our company was ordered to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, July 13, 1914, for the purpose of being trained in military tactics. At the time of our arrival at Fort Benjamin Harrison I was as sound physically as the day I joined the Second Ohio Infantry.

"On Friday, July 17, 1914, we were ordered to prepare for a hike. On that day we marched a few miles out on the government reservation connected with Fort Benjamin Harrison and went into camp. That night I was on guard duty and was sick all night. The next morning about six o'clock we broke camp, marched about two miles where we had a sham battle. During the sham battle we rushed back and forth from one place to another. During this time I must have hurt myself. Immediately following this I was overcome by a severe pain in the lower right hand side of my abdomen. (The place where I afterward discovered I had been ruptured.) I fell out and was picked up later and taken to camp. When I got into camp I was sent to the hospital. An investigation of the hospital record will show that I was in the sick report from that time until we broke camp to go home, Monday, July 20, 1914.

"That night when I arrived at my home in Paulding I noticed a swelling where I had had such severe pains. The next day I called my home doctor, Dr. D. F. Russell, of Paulding, Ohio. Dr. Russell examined me thoroughly. He said that I had a hernia (rupture). He asked me what I had been doing and I told him, explaining all the circumstances and so forth. Dr. Russell said that I had undoubtedly contracted my hernia while on the hike Friday or in the sham battle on Saturday.

"Dr. Russell advised an operation. I at once began preparations to go to the hospital. On the third day of August, 1914, Dr. Russell and my father, C. O. Reed, took me to the Hope hospital, Ft. Wayne, Indiana. On that day I was operated upon for hernia and appendicitis by Dr. McOscar, who was assisted by Dr. Russel, of Paulding. Doctors McOscar and Russell operated on me for appendicitis because they said it was necessary on account of the operation for hernia, since I had chronic appendicitis, and if I had not been operated on for appendicitis at that time I might have had to undergo an operation for the same before I recovered from my operation for hernia. They said that would have proven fatal, so therefore my double operation was made necessary because of injuries I contracted while doing military duty for the state of Ohio.

"The cost of my operation was $200.00, and this added to the hospital fees and other necessary incidentals would make the total cost about $250.00.

"I did not recover from my operation in time to take up my work as a teacher in the Paulding township schools. When I recovered enough to take up my work all the schools were taken, and I could not get other employment that I was able to do.

"Thus, due to my operation, which was made necessary because of injuries incurred while doing military duty for the state of Ohio, I was not able to take up my work as teacher, thus losing me about $500.00 upon which I was totally dependent. This added to the cost of my operation would make a total loss of $750.00.

"There is a provision in the laws of the state of Ohio whereby a person disabled while doing military duty for the state of Ohio may be compensated for his doctor bill and other losses incurred.

"I would like to have a bill put before the legislature providing that the State of Ohio pay me, Floyd L. Reed, $750.00 to cover losses sustained by me and caused from disability contracted while doing military duty for the state of Ohio.

"I can furnish proof of the truth of my statements. I will have affidavits made out by parties who know the circumstances and facts of the case, and send them to you at once. I thank you for anything you may do for me. I assure you that I am wholly dependent on this, and hope that you can do something for me. * * *"

With the claim is forwarded various affidavits in support of the same, together with hospital receipts, doctors' receipts, etc., for medical service.

The case presented is one the merits of which cannot be determined in this office, as it is a matter simply of policy to be determined by the legislature after having investigated the facts and satisfying itself as to the justices and the merits of the claim. If the legislature, after such investigation, should be satisfied that the claim is a just one, it is my opinion that it has authority to act only under the provisions of article 2, section 29 of the constitution of the state of Ohio, which is as follows:

"No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid, on any claim, the subject-matter which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing law, unless such compensation, or claim be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MISDEMEANORS—COUNSEL—COMPENSATION FOR DEFENSE OF INDIGENT PERSONS—NOT PAYABLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY.

Payment of compensation to counsel assigned by the court for the defense of indigent persons charged with misdemeanors may not be made from the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 8, 1915, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"Section 13618, General Code, provides for the payment from the county treasury to an attorney, or attorneys, appointed to defend an indigent prisoner in felony cases. Examiners of this department have found in some counties where attorneys are paid for defending prisoners indicted under a misdemeanor charge. Can such payments be legally made? If not should our examiners make findings for recovery against attorneys so paid?"

Section 13616, G. C., provides for the service of a copy of indictment for felony upon the accused within three days after the filing thereof and a delivery of such copy in other cases upon request therefor. Section 13617 provides that after such copy has been served or opportunity had for receiving it, if the accused is without and unable to employ counsel, the court shall assign him counsel not exceeding two. The only provision for payment of compensation of counsel so assigned, is found in section 13615, G. C., referred to by you and which reads as follows:

> "Counsel so assigned in a case of felony shall be paid for their services by the county, and may receive therefor, in a case of murder in the first or second degree, such compensation as the court approves; in a case of manslaughter, not exceeding one hundred dollars, and, in other cases of felony, not exceeding fifty dollars. The auditor of such county shall not draw an order on the treasurer for the payment of such counsel until the account for such services has been presented to and allowed by the commissioners thereof."

The terms of this statute specifically limit such payment of compensation of counsel to felony cases and to such amounts as are allowed by the county commissioners after the approval thereof by the court, and only such compensation as is authorized by statute may be lawfully made. The answer to your first question must therefore be in the negative.

As to the finding which should be made in such case, it may be said that both the commissioners and the auditor were quite probably misled by the action of the court in approving the claim, and while the payment of the same should have been enjoined by the prosecuting attorney, this, however, would not validate the payment of compensation in such case in the face of the absence of statutory authority therefor.

Answering this question specifically, I am of the opinion that a finding should be made against attorneys who have received payment for defense of indigent persons charged with misdemeanors under assignment of the court from the county treasury.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONSTRUCTION OF A CONTRACT BETWEEN A GAS PRODUCING COMPANY AND A LOCAL DISTRIBUTING COMPANY—WHAT GROSS RECEIPTS OF DISTRIBUTING COMPANY ARE FOR PURPOSE OF EXCISE TAXATION—TAXES AND TAXATION.

A contract between a gas producing company and a local gas distributing company provides that the former shall furnish to the latter sufficient supply of gas, in consideration of which the former shall be entitled to a certain percentage of the gross collections of the latter. There is no means of measuring the amount of gas delivered by the one company to the other. The books of the distributing company and its mains and system are to be subject to inspection by the producing company. In spite of a recital in the contract that the gas upon entering the mains and distributing system of the distributing company shall be the property of that company, it is held that the case is governed by State v. Coshocton Gas Co., 12 N. P., n. s., 570, affirmed by the supreme court without report, and that the gross receipts of the distributing company for the purpose of excise taxation consist merely of the percentage of gross collections which under the contract it is permitted to retain for its own use, the remainder being receipts of the producing company and the enterprise, in law, being a joint one.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted for my examination an original and supplemental contract between the Springfield Gas Company and the Ohio Fuel Supply Company, and have requested my opinion as to whether or not the same are so similar to that involved in State v. Coshocton Gas Company as to make the decision therein controlling with respect to the amount of excise taxes collectible from the two above named companies.

The original contract in question was entered into in December, 1906. After reciting that the Springfield Gas Company is engaged in the business of selling and supplying natural gas in the city of Springfield, and that the Ohio Fuel Supply Company is a producer of gas and has a surplus supply over its present needs out of which it can supply the requirements of the Springfield company, the contract provides that the Ohio company shall deliver a supply of natural gas to the Springfield company and that the Springfield company shall furnish the right of way to enable the Ohio company to connect with its lines and install the proper connections and regulating devices; and that after May 14, 1909, the Springfield company shall pay seventy per cent. of the proceeds of its sales of gas to the Ohio company, provided that "in no instance or event, nor under any circumstances whatsoever, shall there be paid by the Springfield company to the said the Ohio company a less sum than nineteen (19) cents for each and every thousand cubic feet of natural gas supplied and delivered by the said Springfield company under these presents, subsequent to May 14, 1909."

The supplemental contract, which was made in the light of a change in the ordinance of the city of Springfield fixing the rates of the Springfield company, has the effect of avoiding this proviso of the original contract, though incorporating all the other provisions thereof; so that under the said supplemental contract the Springfield company is to sell its gas at thirty cents per thousand cubic feet, that being the price fixed by the ordinance, except as to certain public buildings in which the rate is to be fifteen cents per thousand cubic feet, and in both cases the Ohio company is to have seventy per cent. of the gross proceeds of sales.

The original contract further provides the conditions under which the Springfield company should furnish gas to its consumers. Meters are to be installed and meter readings made monthly, and a statement of such readings is to be rendered to the Ohio company. The books of the Springfield company are to be open to the inspection of the Ohio company. The mains and system of the Springfield company are by the contract required to be kept in good condition so as to avoid leakage and waste, and the Ohio company is given for its own protection the right of inspection of the entire system of the Springfield company. It is expressly recited in the fifth article of the original contract that > "Upon delivery of gas hereunder to the Springfield company it shall be the sole property of said company, and the Ohio company shall not thereafter be responsible for or on account of anything which may be done, happen or arise with reference to such gas, save so far as it shall be due to the acts of the Ohio company or its employes, and the Springfield company agrees to indemnify and save harmless the Ohio company from all claims, suits and damages on account of any conduct, act or thing which may be done, happen or arise with reference to such delivered gas, save as aforesaid."

In spite of this provision, however, there is no means under the contract of measuring the exact amount of gas which is actually delivered by one company to the other, the measurement for the purpose of compensation being made at the meters of the consumers. So that if any gas should be lost or wasted after passing into the lines of the Springfield company, the loss would fall in reality upon the Ohio company. Whatever be then the technical title of the Springfield company in the gas in its mains under the fifth article of the original contract, the substantial relation of the parties to the gas while in the mains in the proprietary sense cannot be altered by this recital, so long as there is no means of ascertaining how much gas has passed from the lines of one company to the lines of the other company.

There are other provisions in the contract for the protection of the respective parties, which in the aggregate, so to speak, have the effect of making the business in a sense a joint enterprise.

In State v. Coshocton Gas Co., 12 N. P. (N. S.), 570, subsequently affirmed by the supreme court, the court had before it a contract very much like the one now under consideration. In fact, I can find but one real difference between the two contracts as the Springfield contract is modified by the supplemental agreement, and that lies in the language of the fifth article of the original contract above quoted. It is true that Judge Rogers, in deciding the Coshocton Gas Company case, placed some stress upon the fact that the general property in the gas furnished by one company to the other in that case after it passed into the mains of the distributing company still belonged to the producing company. But even at that it was conceded by Judge Rogers that the distributing company had a special property in such gas. The fact that there was no means of measuring the amount of gas which was actually furnished by one company to the other is common in both cases, and this, I take it, is the determining factor. For, it was under circumstances of this sort that Judge Rogers used the following language:

> "The contract was more in the nature of one between factor and principal, governed, however, by a special agreement. Defendant undertook to dispose of the Buckeye company's gas for a compensation measured by a per cent. of gross receipts, and to pay the residue to the Buckeye company. On disposition of the product by defendant, and receipt of the proceeds, the relation of debtor and creditor did not arise; rather, defendant's relation to the fund was that of trustee to its principal, unless the latter saw fit to waive that relation.

"The object of the contract as contemplated by the parties was, by one performing certain parts and the other performing others under the contract, to produce a certain common fund for the benefit of both which was to belong to each in certain proportions. Neither at any time was entitled to the whole fund as a right of property, but each was entitled to a proportionate share as belonging to it. While the defendant in the conduct of the business under the contract received the gross sum, it did not all belong to defendant. The property right in seventy per cent. or eighty per cent. thereof, depending upon the circumstances, belonged to the Buckeye company, and was its gross receipts, and defendant held the same as agent for its principal.

"I am clearly of the opinion that the contract between the two companies did not contemplate a sale of gas to the defendant. If it did not, no general property right in or to the gas is vested in the defendant. It was a special right only. The defendant not having a general property right in the gas did not acquire a general property right in the proceeds of their combined enterprise, but only had a property right in the proportion of the proceeds to which, under the contract, it was entitled."

Thereupon, Judge Rogers reached the conclusion that the gross receipts of the distributing company for purpose of excise taxation consisted only of the thirty per cent. of the entire collections which it might retain for itself, the other seventy per cent. thereof being receipts of the producing company.

While, therefore, I can see a distinction between the two cases, I am of the opinion that should litigation arise respecting the effect of the contract which you have submitted to me, the same would be governed by the decision in State v. Coshocton Gas Company, supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXATION OF RAW MATERIAL OF A FOREIGN CORPORATION UPON WHICH AN OHIO CORPORATION PERFORMS WORK—FOREIGN CORPORATION LIABLE FOR SUCH TAXES—AN OHIO MANUFACTURER IS REQUIRED TO LIST ON AVERAGE BASIS OF SUCH PROPERTY OWNED BY HIM—FOREIGN CORPORATION SHOULD LIST AMOUNT ON HAND ON LISTING DATE IN TAXING DISTRICT IN WHICH PROPERTY IS SITUATED.

If an Ohio corporation performs work upon material furnished by a non-resident foreign corporation for compensation, at no time being the owner either of the raw material so worked upon or the finished product, with reference to the taxation of such property:

(1) It is taxable under section 5404, G. C., in the name of the foreign corporation; and the Ohio corporation is not required to list the property as a part of its manufacturer's stock nor to pay taxes on it.

(2) An Ohio manufacturer is required to list on the average basis such property only as is owned by him.

(3) There being no provision for listing property of the kind described on the average basis, it should be listed by the foreign corporation in the taxing district in which it is situated at the amount thereof on hand on the listing date.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of May 7th, requesting my opinion as follows:

"A foreign corporation which has not qualified to do business in the state of Ohio, contracts with an Ohio corporation to do certain labor upon material furnished by the foreign corporation. The Ohio corporation at no time becomes the owner of the raw material or finished product, and simply receives a profit for the labor performed in transforming the raw material into a finished product.

"Query 1. Is this personal property taxable under section 5404 in the name of the foreign corporation?

"Query 2. Is the property taxable to the Ohio corporation?

"Query 3. Section 5385 provides that the manufacturing company shall include the average value estimated, as hereinafter provided, of all articles purchased, received or otherwise held for the purpose of being used in whole or in part, etc., and of all articles which were at any time by him manufactured or changed in any way, either by combining, etc. section 5386 which provides the method of arriving at the average value, provides in part that the value shall be ascertained by taking the value of all property subject to be listed, on the average basis, owned by such manufacturer on the last business day.

"The last section seems to limit section 5385, and it becomes a question whether all property held for the purpose of rectifying, changing, etc., should be listed in arriving at the average value, or only such property as is owned by such manufacturer.

"Query 4. Under the conditions stated in the first query, if you reach the conclusion that the property is taxable in the name of the foreign corporation, should the average value be used in computing the taxable property, or just the amount of property on hand on listing date?"

Sections 5385 and 5386, General Code, are as follows:

"Section 5385. A person who purchases, receives or holds personal property, of any description, for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by manufacturing, refining, rectifying, or by the combination of different materials with a view of making a gain or profit by so doing, as (is) a manufacturer, and, when he is required to make and deliver to the assessor a statement of the amount of his other personal property subject to taxation, he shall include therein the average value estimated, as hereafter provided, of all articles purchased, received or otherwise held for the purpose of being used, in whole or in part, in manufacturing, combining, rectifying or refining, and of all articles which were at any time by him manufactured or changed in any way, either by combination or rectifying, or refining or adding thereto which, from time to time, he has had on hand during the year next previous to the first day of April annually, if he has been engaged in such manufacturing business so long, and if not, then during the time he has been so engaged.

"Section 5386. Such average value shall be ascertained by taking the value of all property subject to be listed on the average basis, owned by such manufacturer, on the last business day of each month the manufacturer was engaged in business during the year, adding such monthly values together and dividing the result by the number of months the manufacturer was engaged in such business during the year. Such result shall be the average value to be listed. A manufacturer shall also list at their fair cash value, all engines and machinery of every description used, or designed to be used, in refining or manufacturing, except such fixtures as are considered a part of any parcel or parcels of real property, and all tools and implements of every kind used, or designed to be used, for such purpose, owned or used by such manufacturer."

Primarily these sections are intended to provide a special method of listing and valuing manufacturers' stocks of materials and finished products. That is, the controlling idea of the sections relates to the manner of listing goods of a certain character, and not to the person who shall list them and the name in which they shall be listed.

The general policy of the state with respect to these matters is embodied in sections 5371 and 5372 of the General Code, the purport of which is that personal property shall be listed in the name of the owner thereof, even though required to be listed by some other person in a representative capacity.

Other statutes might be cited showing the policy of the state in this respect, but it is sufficient for the present purpose to state that inasmuch as sections 5385 and 5386 of the General Code do not primarily relate to or govern the matter of the name in which manufacturer's stock shall be listed, or the person liable for taxes thereon, they are not to be so interpreted as to establish a rule with respect to these matters inconsistent with the general policy of the state.

These two sections must be read together, as they relate to the same matter, and indeed were in substance both embraced in one section of the Revised Statutes.

So reading them, I reach the conclusion that the only property which an Ohio manufacturer is required to list on the average basis as therein provided is that which he owns.

The conclusion which I have reached is founded upon the conviction that the statutes are not ambiguous on their face, and that the meaning of the term "owned by such manufacturer" is unmistakable. Indeed, I am not so sure that this provision effects any real or substantial limitation of the language which is found in section 5385; for therein a manufacturer is defined as "a person who purchases, receives or holds personal property, of any description, for the purpose of adding to the value thereof, by manufacturing, etc., * * * with a view of making a gain or profit by so doing."

This language might be interpreted fairly as making the definition of a "manufacturer" dependent upon the purpose of making a gain or profit through adding to the value of property. That is to say, that the gain or profit must accrue through the addition to the value of the property. This is consistent with the primary rule as to the words "gain" and "profit." When one performs services for another and receives mere compensation therefor, such compensation is not "gain" or "profit" in the exact sense at least. So it might be held that the performance of services in working upon materials in such a manner as, in the ordinary sense of the word, would constitute manufacturing, does not constitute "manufacturing" as the term is used in section 5385 when the person performing the work is to be paid for it, and does not do the work with a view to deriving a gain or profit from any increase in the value of the property worked upon.

This view of the case makes the statute harmonious and intelligible and avoids any conflict between section 5385 and section 5386; but if there is a conflict between sections 5385 and 5386, resulting in a latent ambiguity, the legislative history of the statute shows clearly what the intention of the general assembly was.

> "Section 2742. Every person who shall purchase, receive or hold personal property of any description, for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by any process of manufacturing, refining, rectifying, or by the combination of different materials, with a view of making a gain or profit by so doing, shall be held to be a manufacturer and he shall, when he is required to make and deliver to the assessor a statement of the amount of his other personal property subject to taxation, also include in his statement the average value estimated, as provided herein with reference to merchants, of all articles purchased, received, or otherwise held for the purpose of being used, in whole or in part, in any process or operation of manufacturing, combining, rectifying or refining, which, from time to time, he shall have had on hand during the year next previous to the time of making such statement, if so long he shall have been engaged in such manufacturing business, and if not, then during the time he shall have been so engaged. Every such manufacturer shall also list at their fair cash value all articles on hand at the time when by law he is required to make his list, which had been by him manufactured, or changed in any way, either by combination, or rectifying, or refining, or adding thereto, one year or more previous thereto, and also the value of all engines and machinery of every description used or designed to be used in any process of refining or manufacturing (except such fixtures as shall have been considered a part of any parcel or parcels of real property), including all tools and implements of every kind used or designed to be used for the aforesaid purpose, owned or used by such manufacturer."

I call attention to two facts respecting this provision:

"(1) That the average value was to be estimated in the manner in which that of merchants' stocks was to be arrived at.

"(2) That the words 'owned by such manufacturer' were not in the section."

The statute with reference to merchant's stock clearly requires the merchant to list property of which he may not be the owner. So that if your question had been asked under original section 2742, R. S., a different answer might have been given.

Section 2742, R. S., was amended in 88, O. L., 341, so as to read as follows:

"Section 2742. Every person who shall purchase, receive or hold personal property of any description for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by any process of manufacturing, refining, rectifying, or by the combination of different materials with a view of making a gain or profit by so doing, shall be held to be a manufacturer, and he shall, when he is required to make and deliver to the assessor a statement of the amount of his other personal property subject to taxation, also include in his statement the average value estimated, as provided herein, of all articles purchased, received or otherwise held for the purpose of being used, in whole or in part, in any process or operation of manufacturing, combining, rectifying or refining, and, also, of all articles which were at any time by him manufactured or changed in any way, either by combination or rectifying, or refining or adding thereto, which, from time to time, he shall have had on hand during the year next previous to the first day of April annually, if so long he shall have been engaged in such manufacturing business, and if not, then during the time he shall have been so engaged. The said average value shall be ascertained by taking the value of all said property subject to be listed on the average basis, owned by such manufacturers, on the last business day of each month the manufacturer was engaged in business during the year, adding such monthly values together and dividing the result by the number of months the manufacturer was engaged in such business during the year and the result shall be the average value to be listed. Every such manufacturer shall also list at their fair cash value, all engines and machinery of every description used, or designed to be used, in any process of refining or manufacturing (except such fixtures as shall have been considered a part of any parcel or parcels of real property), including all tools and implements of every kind used, or designed to be used, for the aforesaid purpose, owned or used by such manufacturer."

It will be observed that by this amendment the legislature of 1891 did away with the use of the method applicable to ascertaining the average value of merchant's stock in measuring the average value of manufacturer's stock, and provided a new and distinct method of arriving at the average value of manufacturer's stock, both of materials and finished products. At the same time the words "owned by such manufacturers" were inserted in the statute.

The purpose of the legislature in making these amendments is clear and unmistakable. So that even if present sections 5385 and 5386 of the General Code be regarded as ambiguous, this ambiguity is resolved and the interpretation which I have given to them is fully justified by their legislative history.

Inasmuch as the scope of the sections is thus limited, and as they do not provide any machinery for listing on the average basis materials belonging to a non-resident, but held in Ohio for the purpose of manufacture, it follows that such materials are to be listed as ordinary property on hand on the listing date, and not on the average basis.

The owner of the property in the case submitted by you being a foreign corporation, the manner of its return is regulated by sections 5404 and 5405 of the General Code, which need not be fully quoted. These sections provide in effect that corporate property shall be returned in the counties in which it is situated, by the president, secretary and principal accounting officer of the company, and in the taxing districts in which it is situated. These sections, however, do not furnish the rule for determining where property is situated, and to determine this question recourse must be had to section 5371, General Code, which provides in part as follows:

> "Section 5371. * * * Merchants' and manufacturers' stock, and personal property upon farms shall be listed in the township, city or village in which it is situated. All other personal property, moneys, credits, and investments, except as otherwise specially provided, shall be listed in the township, city, or village in which the person to be charged with taxes thereon resides at the time of the listing thereof, if such person resides within the county where the property is listed, and if not, then in the township, city, or village where the property is when listed."

The property in question not being, technically, "manufacturer's stock," its situs is not governed by the first sentence of the above quotation, but by the latter part of the second sentence thereof. Inasmuch as the foreign corporation in question does not "reside within the county where the property is listed," the property should be listed in the "township, city or village where the property is when listed." In other words, the situs of the property in the case stated by you is in the taxing district in which it is held for purpose of manufacture, just as it would be if it could be regarded as manufacturer's stock.

Of course, under section 5328 of the General Code, the property, being tangible, is taxable in Ohio although belonging to a non-resident corporation.

I answer your questions, then, specifically as follows:

> "(1) The personal property in question is taxable under section 5404 in the name of the foreign corporation.
> "(2) The property is not taxable to the Ohio corporation.
> "(3) An Ohio manufacturer is not required to list all property held for the purpose of manufacture on the average basis, but only such property so held as is owned by him.
> "(4) The property in question should be listed at the amount thereof on hand in the taxing district where it is situated on the tax listing day, and not on the average basis."

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 12, 1915, as follows:

> "We herewith submit a letter from the board of deputy state supervisors of elections for Montgomery county, in which they request your opinion upon the following question:
> "'When must petitions for candidates for commissioner of the city of Dayton, Ohio, be filed with the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections for Montgomery county, Ohio?'"
> "We also enclose a copy of the proposed charter from the city of Dayton. Will you kindly give us your opinion upon the aforesaid question?"

The question submitted arises from the inconsistency of the provisions of the charter of the city of Dayton, Ohio, and section 4969, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 482.

Sub-division D of section 7 of the charter of Dayton, Ohio, provides.

> "All nominating papers comprising a petition shall be assembled and filed with the election authorities, as one instrument, at least thirty (30) days prior to the date of holding the primary election with respect to which such petition is filed * * *"

Section 4969, G. C., 103 O. L., 482, provides in part as follows:

> "All nominations for offices or places on the primary ballot other than those heretofore provided for shall be by nomination papers which shall be filed with the board of deputy state supervisors at least sixty days before the day of holding the primary election."

Your question then is whether the charter or the statute will control?

Section 3 of article 18, of the constitution, provides that municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-government, and under the provisions of section 8 of the same article, cities and villages are empowered to adopt charters for their local government entirely independent from the general laws of the state applicable to cities and villages which have not so adopted charters.

The commissioners referred to in your question are members of the governing body provided for in the charter adopted for the government of the city of Dayton, provision for the nomination and election of which is set forth therein. These officers are purely local in their every character and function and their nomination and election are within the exercise of the powers of local self-government authorized by the constitution of the state, pursuant to which the charter of the city of Dayton was adopted and by reason of which the people of such city were empowered to create such officers and provide for their nomination and election independent of the general provisions of the statutes of the state relative to the government of municipal corporations.

The people of the city of Dayton, having seen fit to incorporate into the basic law of their local government a provision as to the time for filing nomination papers of candidates for the officers of such municipality referred to by you and the nomination and election of such officers being, as above stated, an exercise of the powers of local self-government, the charter provision will govern irrespective of the statutory provisions relative to primary elections applicable to municipalities which are not under such charter government.

The statutory provision not being applicable to the nomination of candidates for commissioners in the city of Dayton, the amendment of the statute subsequent to the adoption of the municipal charter becomes immaterial.

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that nominating petitions for candidates for commissioners of the city of Dayton are required to be filed with the deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections of Montgomery county only thirty days prior to the date of holding the primary election.

The foregoing opinion is based solely upon the decision of the supreme court of this state in the case of Fitzgerald et al. vs. The City of Cleveland, 88 O. S., 338.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INTERURBAN RAILROAD—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO CONDEMN LAND HELD BY A BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES.

A traction company, owning or operating an interurban railroad, has no authority in law to condemn, for railroad purposes, a part of a tract of land the title to which is held by the board of education of a school district in trust for public school purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of April 21st you request my opinion as follows:

> "The Sciotoville (Scioto county) board of education, is having a controversy with the Ohio Valley Traction Company. The traction company has surveyed a contemplated traction line which passes through one side and corner of the school property of the Sciotoville village school district.
> "The questions we desire to ask are:
> "First: In your opinion is it possible for the traction company to condemn and purchase this school property from the board of education against the will of the board of education?
> Second: If the answer to the first question is in the affirmative would the board of education have grounds for a damage suit against the traction company in addition to the amount received in the purchase of the land?"

The provisions of sections 8759 et seq., of the General Code, conferring special powers upon a company, owning or operating a railroad, to acquire a right of way by agreement or by appropriation over public or private lands, are separate and distinct from the provisions of the statutes governing the operation of a street or interurban railway, as found in sections 9100 et seq., of the General Code.

In the case of Traction Co. v. Traction Co., 47, W. L. Bulletin 854, the court held:

> "A corporation which is described in its charter as a 'Traction Company' organized for the purpose of operating a 'traction railway,' and which is shown by such charter and by other evidence to be an interurban railway, is a street railway within the provisions of section 2780, 17 R. S., defining street railways."

In the case of Railway v. Traction Co., 4 C. C. (n. s.) 329, it was held that steam railroads and electric railways are classified and recognized as separate and distinct from each other by the statutes of Ohio, and statutes regulating the former are inapplicable to the latter unless an intention to the contrary clearly appears.

In the case of Railway v. Lohe, 68 O. S., 101, the court held that suburban and interurban railroads are street railroads within the meaning of the laws on street railroads.

The Ohio Valley Traction Company cannot, therefore, be considered a railroad within the meaning of the provisions of sections 8759 et seq., of the GeneralCode, and if said company has the authority to appropriate a part of the school property owned by the board of education of Sciotoville village school district such authority must be found in the provisions of sections 9100 et seq., of the General Code, under the chapter relating to street and interurban railways.

Section 9100, G. C., provides:

> "Street railways, with single or double tracks, side-tracks, and turn-outs, may be constructed or extended within or without, or partly within and partly without, any municipal corporation. Offices, depots and other necessary buildings therefor, also may be constructed."

Section 9101, G. C., provides:

> "The right to construct or extend such railway within or beyond the limits of a municipal corporation, may be granted only by its council, by ordinance; the right to construct such railway without the limits of a municipal corporation may be granted only by the county commissioners, by an order entered on their journal."

Section 9108, G. C., provides:

> "When the council or commissioners make such grant, the company or person to whom it is made may appropriate property necessary therefor, if the owner fails expressly to waive his claim to damages by reason of the construction and operation of the railway."

It will be observed that the provision "may appropriate property necessary therefor" is, by its terms, general in application.

The authority of said company to appropriate private property within said village for is corporate purposes, is clear under the provisions of section 9115, G. C., providing said company has secured a franchise from the council of said village.

Section 9115, G. C., provides:

> "When it is deemed necessary by a majority of the directors of a domestic or foreign corporation owning or operating a street railway in a municipality to appropriate private property therein, in order to avoid dangerous or difficult curves or grades, or unsafe or unsubstantial grounds or foundations or to extend or shorten its railway line, or to provide land on which to extend its power plant, such corporation may appropriate so much private property as is necessary for the extension of such power plant, or the construction, operation and maintenance of the tracks, poles, supports, wires, cables and necessary appliances of such railway other than power houses, machine shops, stations or substations in the manner and subject to the provisions of law for the appropriation of private property by corporations."

In the case of Railway v. Stoneware Co., 51 W. L. Bulletin, 421, the first branch of the syllabus provides:

> "An interurban electric railway company seeking a right of way through a municipality for the construction of its line is subject to the laws of the state respecting street railroads and not those respecting steam railroads, and may not appropriate private property for its purposes without first obtaining a franchise from the municipal council and complying with all the conditions providing for the regulation of street railroads."

However, the school land in question is not private property within the meaning of the provisions of section 9115, G. C., and even if we assume that the provisions of section 9108, G. C., apply to public, as well as to private, property, the question arises, may the Ohio Valley Traction Company, under the provisions of said statute, appropriate a part of the school ground, the title to which is held by the board of education of Sciotoville village district for public school purposes.

It is evident that if said traction company should secure a right of way over that part of the school ground described in your letter, and shown on the blue print attached thereto, it would prohibit the use of said part of said school ground for public school purposes, and would interfere with the use of the remainder of said ground for said purposes.

In the case of Board of Education, etc., v. Edson et al., 18 O. S., 221, the court held that a dedication for school purposes is for a specific use and confers no power of alienation so as to extinguish the use.

I quote the following from the opinion of the court in the case of Cincinnati International Railroad Co. v. Murray et al., 1 O. N. P. (n. s.), 301:

> "It is claimed that the St. Patrick's school property on Third street, in which a Catholic school is conducted, and which is open to all children, is property that is already applied to public use, and that the appropriation now sought for railroad purposes would destroy that use, and hence cannot be made. While it is true that this is a use of a public character, and in the highest degree commendable, yet the ownership is private, and the > general public have no right to command or demand its continuance. Randolph in his work on Eminent Domain, section 56, says: 'An essential feature of a public use is that the public may enjoy its benefits, and, if it be an undertaking for the performance of services, command the services.'"

It may be clearly inferred from the above opinion that if the ownership of the school property which the plaintiff sought to appropriate had been public so that the general public would have had the right to demand the continuance of its use for public school purposes, the court would have denied the right of the plaintiff to appropriate said property for railroad purposes.

Inasmuch as the statute does not by express terms, nor by necessary implication, confer the power on the Ohio Valley Traction Company to condemn the school land in question, the general rule applicable to your first question is stated in 15 Cyc., at page 614, as follows:

> "Where property has been legally condemned or acquired by purchase for a public use, and has been or is about to be appropriated for such use, it cannot be taken for another public use which will totally destroy or materially impair or interfere with the former use, unless the intention of the legislature that it should be so taken has been manifested in express terms or by necessary implication."

The title to the land which the Ohio Valley Traction Company desires to appropriate is held by the board of education of Sciotoville village school district in trust for public school purposes, and its use by said traction company for railroad purposes would destroy its use for public school purposes.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that said traction company cannot appropriate said land for railroad purposes.

This answer to your first question disposes of your second question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO EXPEND FROM STATE FUNDS MORE THAN ONE-HALF OF COST FOR AN INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT—APPLICATION OF THIS GENERAL LAW TO CONTRACT FOR IMPROVEMENT OF WALHONDING-NEW GUILFORD INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY.

The state highway commissioner has no authority to expend from state funds more than one-half of the cost of an inter-county highway improvement.

A contract for the improvement of the Walhonding-New Guilford inter-county highway in Coshocton county was forfeited and the balance of the funds appropriated by the county commissioners and set aside by the highway commissioner for the improvement in question, has been expended in an effort to complete the road by force account. The road is not yet completed. The only procedure open to the highway commissioner, under existing statutes, is to secure from the county commissioners an appropriation of one-half of the amount necessary to complete the work in question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 5, 1915, transmitting to me the correspondence and papers from your files, relating to the Walhonding-New Guilford inter-county highway improvement, with a request that I advise you how to proceed in the premises. From the mass of correspondence and other papers submitted to me, I gather the following facts:

On the 7th day of December, 1910, the county commissioners of Coshocton county made an application to the state highway commissioner for state aid in the construction of the highway in question, said highway being about two and one-half miles in length. This action on the part of the commissioners was had under the authority of old section 1185 of the General Code, 99 O. L., 309. On the 26th day of December, 1910, the township trustees of Perry township, by resolution, agreed to pay from the township funds twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense of so much of the improvement as was situated in Perry township, and on the 4th day of February, 1911, similar action was taken by the trustees of New Castle township. On the 26th day of January, 1911, state highway commissioner, James C. Wonders, acting under authority of old section 1189 of the General Code, 101 O. L., 285, made a finding to the effect that the road in question was of sufficient public importance to come within the purpose of the state highway act, and thereupon approved the application of the county commissioners of Coshocton county for state aid in the construction of said road. Following this action on the part of the state highway commissioner, it appears that several different sets of plans, specifications and estimates for the improvement of the road in question, were prepared by the state highway commissioner and approved by the county commissioners of Coshocton county, but it was finally determined in 1912 to improve the road in question by constructing the highway of bituminous macadam and the cost of this improvement was estimated by the state highway commissioner at $16,694.70. On the 2nd day of April, 1912, the county commissioners of Coshocton county adopted what is known as a "final resolution" with reference to the improvement of this road, and in this resolution the county commissioners determined that the highway should be constructed and that the work should be done under the supervision of the state highway commissioner.

In this resolution the plans, specifications and estimates prepared by the state highway commissioner were approved and adopted by the county commissioners who appropriated $8,347.35 to meet the county's share of the improvement, that amount being one-half of the total estimated cost and expense of construction. Bids for the construction of the improvement were called for by the state highway commissioner by advertisement properly made, and on the first day of June, 1912, a contract for the construction of the road was let to one Charles Bird, of Springfield, Ohio, his bid being $16,170.00. Bird entered into a written contract and furnished the bond required by law, and began work on the improvement. Under the terms of Bird's contract, he was to complete the construction of the highway in question by September 1, 1912, but this time was extended by the state highway commissioner until June 1, 1913. When that time arrived, Bird had still failed to complete the contract and the state highway commissioner undertook to complete the work by force account. In the meantime, on the 22nd day of April, 1913, the county commissioners of Coshocton county had made a supplemental appropriation for use in constructing this road, the amount of the same being $325.00. It will thus be seen that the total appropriation made by the county for the purpose of constructing the road in question, was $8,672.35, and the state highway commissioner set aside an equal amount of money for the same purpose, making the total amount available $17,344.70. It appears from the records of your department, that while Bird was engaged under his contract in attempting to build this road, he was paid the sum of $3,874.80, leaving in the fund available for the completion of the road, the sum of $13,469.90. Since Bird's contract was declared forfeited by the state highway commissioner, and since the commissioner began his attempt to complete the road by force account, the entire amount of money left in the fund set aside for the completion of this road, has been expended, but the road has not yet been completed. After expending all of the money in the fund and after incurring additional obligations to the amount of about $2,000.00, the state highway commissioner estimated that a sum not less than $5,904.04 would still be required to complete the road and at the request of the state highway commissioner suit was brought by the attorney general against Bird and his sureties, Pat Caffrey and J. S. Wagner, for the sum of $7,904.00, being the amount of obligations incurred by the highway commissioner over and above funds available, plus the estimated expense still required to complete the work. This suit was brought in the common pleas court of Clark county on January 9, 1915, and the defendants interposed a demurrer to the petition, which demurrer was argued and decided after I assumed office. The condition of Bird's bond was that, if awarded the contract, he would well, truly and faithfully comply with and perform each and all of the terms, covenants and conditions of the same on his part to be kept and performed, according to the tenor thereof, and that he would perform the work embraced therein upon the terms proposed and within the time prescribed and in accordance with the plans and specifications furnished therefor, and that he would pay all direct or indirect damages suffered or claimed during the construction of the road improvement, by reason of the construction thereof. It was held by the common pleas court of Clark county that the suit above referred to had been prematurely brought and that Bird and his bondsmen could not be required under the terms of the bond, to pay any money until the state highway commissioner had completed the road and ascertained the exact cost of construction or at least until the latter condition had been complied with by the commissioner. The court after observing that the state was not obliged to undertake to complete the work by force account, but might have re-let the work to some responsible contractor, and have at once sued upon the bond after letting the contract, held that if the highway commissioner did elect to complete the work by force account, then the commissioner must fully complete the work before bringing suit upon the bond, for the reason that the exact liability of the bondsmen must be determined before suit could properly be brought.

Another element entering into the case is the fact that the county auditor of Coshocton county has refused to pay the final estimate on this road for the reason that the road has not been completed and that in fact a great deal of work remains to be done upon it. The situation is a most unfortunate one, and while it may be truthfully observed that the state of Ohio is under a moral obligation to complete this road without cost to the county, over and above the $8,672.35, appropriated by the county commissioners for that purpose, I am unable to see how your department can meet this moral obligation under existing statutes.

Under the provisions of section 1206, G. C., as it stood at the time this improvement was projected, being 99, O. L., 314, and under the provisions of section 1207, G. C., as it now stands, your department is not authorized under any circumstances or conditions to expend from the inter-county highway fund more than fifty per cent. of the cost of an inter-county highway improvement. I am informed that the Walhonding-New Guilford road is not a main market road and therefore you would have no authority to take over the improvement and complete the same with funds appropriated for the construction of main market roads. The work never having been completed, it is apparent that it would be beyond your authority to regard this proposition as one of maintenance or repair and pay the further cost of completing the improvement from the maintenance and repair fund. The only procedure open to you under existing statutes, is to place all of the facts before the county commissioners of Coshocton county and secure from them a further appropriation of one-half of the amount necessary to pay outstanding obligations and complete the work in question.

I learn from your department that the estimated amount of $5,900.00 needed to complete the work and for which suit was brought against Bird and his bondsmen, will in all probability be insufficient and that it would not be surprising if as much as $10,000.00 should be required to complete the road. Should the county commissioners of Coshocton county see fit to enter into an arrangement of the nature above suggested and make an additional appropriation of one-half the amount needed to complete the road, and should said road be completed in pursuance of such arrangement, and suit be thereafter brought and recovery had from Bird and his bondsmen, then the amount of the recovery would be not only the expenditure of the state, but also the expenditure of the county over and above the contract price of $16,170.00.

I am aware that this construction of the law works a hardship on Coshocton county, which had a right to assume that the original estimate was substantially correct and that the funds of the county would be handled by the state highway department in the economical manner. The only other alternative I have to suggest, however, is such legislative action as might meet this and similar situations, if such there be. I note that house bill No. 54, being "An act to make appropriations to pay unauthorized deficiencies and liabilities existing prior to February 15, 1914," found in 104, O. L., 221, carries the following item:

> "For payment of obligations for labor and material incurred by the state highway commissioner in the construction by force account of the Chester state aid road. Petition No. 647, Meigs county, Ohio_____$4,600.16."

and also the following item:

> "For payment of obligations for labor and material incurred by the state highway commissioner in the construction by force account of the Chesterhill state road, petition No. 359, Morgan county, Ohio____$8,382.29."

I am informed by the representatives of your department and learn from an examination of your records, that the two appropriations above referred to were made to care for situations like the one now presented by the Walhonding-New Guilford inter-county highway improvement. It would, therefore, seem that the construction herein placed upon the law is that which has been followed in the past and that the previous interpretation of the law has been that the state highway commissioner could not, in any instance, even for the purpose of meeting a moral obligation of the state, pay more than one-half of the cost of an inter-county highway improvement.

It is respectfully suggested that the facts relating to this matter, as set forth herein, are such as to warrant a careful investigation on your part for the purpose of determining why this road is so far from completion, in view of the fact that a sum in excess of the original estimate has already been expended.

The correspondence and papers submitted to me are returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 482 UNCONSTITUTIONAL—INJURED CONVICT NOT ENTITLED TO AWARD FROM STATE INSURANCE FUND.

The general assembly may not direct the state industrial commission as the state liability board of awards to pay out of the state insurance fund compensation to a particular convict injured in the course of working for the state, the general provisions of the workmen's compensation act not applying to such convicts and the state insurance fund not having been collected or created for such purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1915.

HON. FRANK M. REIGHARD, Chairman Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your committee, through Mr. Morris, has submitted to me house bill No. 482—Mr. Bryson, with a request for advice as to its validity.

The bill in full is as follows:

> "A BILL to award relief to the estate of Jeff Goings, of Greene county, who died from injuries received in the employ of the state while a convict in the Ohio penitentiary.
> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:
> "Section 1. That the industrial commission of Ohio is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the probate court of Greene county, to the credit of the estate of Jeff Goings, late a convict, who was injured while in the discharge of his regular employment at the Ohio penitentiary, and who was afterward pardoned while still severely injured, and died shortly after from his wounds, the sum of five hundred and twenty-five dollars $525.00) with which to pay the funeral expenses, medical expenses, and other charges incurred by or for said Jeff Goings after his pardon from the penitentiary; said payment to be made by said industrial commission of Ohio from the state insurance fund."

which was passed under the special authority granted to the general assembly by article 2, section 35, of the constitution, as adopted September 3, 1912. The constitutional provision in full is as follows:

> "For the purpose of providing compensation to workmen and their dependents, for death, injuries or occupational diseases, occasioned in the course of such workmen's employment, aws may be passed establishing a state fund to be created by compulsory contribution thereto by employers, and administered by the state, determining the terms and conditions upon which payment shall be made therefrom, and taking away any or all rights of action or defenses from employes and employers; but no right of action shall be taken away from any employe when the injury, disease or death arises from failure of the employer to comply with any lawful requirement for the protection of the lives, health and safety of employes. Laws may be passed establishing a board which may be empowered to classify all occupations, according to their degree of hazard, to fix rates of contribution to such fund according to such classification, and to collect, administer and distribute such fund, and to determine all rights of claimants thereto."

The act provides generally for a state fund out of which compensation is to be paid to two classes of employes described in section 14 thereof (section 1465-61, of the General Code), as follows:

> "Sec. 1465-61. (Section 14.) The terms 'employe,' 'workman' and 'operative' as used in this act, shall be construed to mean:
> "(1) Every person in the services of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein, including regular members of lawfully constituted police and fire departments of cities and villages, under any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written, except any official of the state, or of any county, city, township, incorporated village or school district therein. Provided that nothing in this act shall apply to policemen or firemen in cities where policemen's and firemen's pension funds are now or hereafter may be established and maintained by municipal authority under existing laws.
> "(2) Every person in the service of any person, firm or private corporation, including any public service corporation employing five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment under any contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written, including aliens, and also including minors who are elgally permitted to work for hire under the laws of the state, but not including any person whose employment is but casual, or not in the usual course of trade, business, profession or occupation of his employer."

Sections 17 and 18 of the act provide for contributions to the fund for the purpose of providing compensation to the first class of employes defined in section 14, as follows.

> "Sec. 1465-64. (Section 17.) In the month of January, in the years 1914 and 1915, the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state, in favor of said treasurer as custodian of the state insurance fund, and for deposit to the credit of said fund, for a sum equal to one per centum of the amount of money expended by the state during the last preceding fiscal year, for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section 14 hereof, which said sums are hereby appropriated and made available for such payments; and thereafter in the month of January of each year, such sums of money shall in like manner be paid into the state insurance fund as may be provided by law; and it shall be duty of the state liability board of awards to communicate to the general assembly on the first day of each regular session thereof, an estimate of the aggregate amount of money necessary to be contributed by the state during the two years next ensuing as its proper portion of the state insurance fund.

"Sec. 1465-65. (Section 18.) In the month of December of each year, the auditor of state shall prepare a list for each county of the state, showing the amount of money expended by each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district therein for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section 14 hereof, during the fiscal year last preceding the time of preparing such lists; and shall file a copy of each such list with the auditor of the county for which such list was made, and copies of all such lists with the treasurer of state. Such lists shall also show the amount of money due from the county itself, and from each city, township, village, school district and other taxing district thereof, as its proper contribution to the state insurance fund, and the aggregate sum due from the county and such taxing districts located therein."

These sections were amended 105 O. L., ____, in respects immaterial in the present connection.

I take it from the mere fact that such a bill as is now before me has been offered it is assumed that a convict is not an "employe," "workman" or "operative" within the meaning of the first paragraph of section 14 of the workmen's compensation act, as above quoted. This assumption is, of course, correct. A convict, while he is required to labor for the state, does not work under "any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written." His service is involuntary and compulsory. Moreover, I am of the opinion that a convict is not a "workman" nor the state in its relation to such convict an "employer" within the meaning of article 2, section 35, of the constitution.

It follows that the state insurance fund, which is created under general laws for certain specific purposes, may not under those laws be lawfully paid out to furnish compensation to a convict.

I find two objections, which I think are insurmountable, to legislation of the character embodied in the proposed bill. They are as follows:

"(1) The state insurance fund is a trust fund created for a specific purpose and administered by a definite trustee, the 'board' referred to in the constitution and the 'state liability board of awards' referred to in the act. The legislature is in no sense the custodian or trustee of this fund. It has no control over the fund itself. It may by proper legislation prescribe the duties of the board, but, in my opinion, such legislation may not require or authorize the board to disburse the fund for any purpose other than those for which it was created.

"(2) Whatever legislative control the general assembly may have over the state liability board of awards in the disbursement of the state insurance fund, such control must be exerted by general laws. To provide that the state insurance fund may be paid out for the benefit of a class generally would be one thing; but to require that a specific sum be paid out of the state insurance fund for the benefit of a particular person is quite another thing. The subject-matter is of a general nature, and article 2, section 26, of the constitution, requires that laws pertaining to such subject-matter 'shall have a uniform operation throughout the state'."

To illustrate more perfectly, it might be competent for the general assembly to provide compensation out of the state insurance fund for a new class of workmen, but in such event the law would have to operate prospectively and provide the fund in the first instance; and under no circumstances would it be competent for the general assembly to provide retrospectively for compensation out of the state insurance fund to a particular person.

For all of the above reasons, I am of the opinion that house bill No. 482 is unconstitutional, and if passed and approved would be void.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—BEFORE ENTITLED TO A WARRANT FOR EXPENSE ALLOWANCE IN AN AMOUNT NOT TO EXCEED ONE-HALF OF HIS OFFICIAL SALARY, HE MUST GIVE BOND UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 3004, G. C., IN ADDITION TO HIS OFFICIAL BOND.

Before the prosecuting attorney of a county is entitled to a warrant from the county auditor for an expense allowance of an amount not to exceed one-half of his official salary, as authorized by the provision of section 3004, G. C., he must give the bond required by said section in addition to the official bond given by him as required by the provision of section 2911, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1915.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 4th you request my opinion as follows:

"I write to inquire whether or not it is necessary for a prosecuting attorney, who has given a bond in the sum of $1,500, as provided in section 2911, and whose salary is less than $1,500 per year, to give an additional bond before drawing the expense allowance provided in section 3004 of the General Code."

Section 2911, General Code, provides:

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, the prosecuting attorney shall give bond to the state in a sum not less than one thousand dollars, to be fixed by the court of common pleas or the probate court, with sureties to be approved by either of such courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him received in his official capacity. Such bond, with the approval of such court of the amount thereof and sureties thereon, and his oath of office indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the county treasurer."

The minimum amount of the bond which is required to be given by the prosecuting attorney under this statute is one thousand dollars ($1,000.00), and the amount of said bond is not determined by the amount of the salary of said officer. The fact that your salary is less than the amount of bond fixed by the court, under the provision of said section, would not, therefore, be material, in determining the answer to your question.

Section 3004, G. C., provides:

"There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Upon the order of the prosecuting attorney the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as the order designates, for such amount as the order requires, not exceeding the amount provided for herein, and to be paid out of the general fund of the county.

"Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court with sureties to be approved by either of said courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him, by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him, received in his official capacity. Such bond with the approval of such court of the amount thereof and sureties thereon and his oath of office inclosed therein shall be deposited with the county treasurer.

"The prosecuting attorney shall annually before the first Monday of January, file with the county auditor an itemized statement, duly verified by him, as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury. Provided, that as to the year 1911, such fund shall be proportioned to the part of the year remaining after this act shall have become a law."

While the conditions of the bond which a prosecuting attorney is required to give under the provision of section 2911, G. C., are the same as those of the bond required by the provision of section 3004, G. C., it will be observed that the amount of the bond required by the provision of section 3004, G. C., must be not less than the amount of the salary of said officer, and the primary purpose of requiring the bond under section 3004, G. C., as shown by the latter provision of said section, is to hold said officer accountable for the proper use of the allowance made to him under authority of said section.

The general purpose of the bond required by section 2911, G. C., is to secure the faithful performance of the official duties of the prosecuting attorney.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Slough, 12 O. C. C., 105, it was held that the omission from the official bond of the prosecuting attorney of the condition provided in section 2911, G. C., that he shall "pay over according to law moneys by him received in his official capacity" is not a fatal or serious defect, but is cured by the provision of section 6 of the General Code.

Section 6, General Code, provides:

> "A bond payable to the state of Ohio, or other payee as may be directed by law, reciting the election or appointment of a person to an office or public trust under or in pursuance of the constitution or laws, and conditioned for the faithful performance, by such person, of the duties of the office or trust, shall be sufficient, notwithstanding any special provision made by law for the condition of such bond."

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that before the prosecuting attorney of a county is entitled to a warrant from the county auditor for an expense allowance of an amount not to exceed one-half of his official salary as authorized by the provision of section 3004, G. C., he must give the bond required by said section in addition to the official bond given by him as required by the provision of section 2911, General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, WHICH LEASES ITS FAIR GROUND TO A CITY FOR PARK PURPOSES CAN RECEIVE AID FROM COUNTY TREASURY, WHERE IT USES ITS GROUNDS FOR FAIR PURPOSES.

An agricultural society which leases its fair grounds to a city for park purposes as provided in sections 4082-1 et seq., G. C., retaining, however, the right to use the grounds for fair purposes, is not thereby precluded from receiving aid from the county treasury under section 9894, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of May 13th requests my opinion as follows:

> "The agricultural society of Muskingum county, Ohio, own their own grounds, but on April 1, 1914, leased them to the city of Zanesville for park purposes under authority of section 4082-1 and 4082-2, General Code, for a period of forty years, retaining the privilege of the use of the grounds one week in each year for fair purposes, with the right to assemble material and prepare for said fair one week prior to the holding thereof.
> "Question: Does the Muskingum County Agricultural Society by reason of said lease forfeit their right to the maximum of $1,500.00 under authority of section 9894, General Code?"

The sections authorizing the leasing of the property of an agricultural society for park purposes are as follows:

"Sec. 4082-1. Any real estate controlled and managed by any agricultural society organized under the laws of Ohio, pertaining to agricultural societies, whether owned by it or by any county, or jointly by it and any county and which is situated within, adjacent to or near any municipal corporation and used as a site for fairs, may be jointly used as such site for fairs and also as a public park of such municipal corporation, although the title thereto shall remain in such agricultural society or county, or both such agricultural society and such county as the case may be.

"Sec. 4082-2. The duration of such joint use and all the terms and conditions thereof shall be such as may be agreed upon between such municipal corporation and such agricultural society or if such county has any interest in such real estate then such agreement shall be made between such municipal corporation on the one hand and such agricultural society and such county acting through its board of county commissioners.

"Sec. 4082-3. Such municipal corporation shall have the same authority and power to improve, equip and maintain such real estate as a public park and to do all things necessary for its use and enjoyment as such public park which it has under the laws of Ohio as to parks owned by it in fee."

The section authorizing and directing the county commissioners to grant public aid to agricultural societies for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs is as follows:

"Sec. 9894. When a county or a county agricultural society, owns or holds under a lease, real estate used as a site whereon to hold fairs, and the county agricultural society therein has the control and management of such lands and buildings, for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs, the county commissioners shall on the request of the agricultural society annually levy taxes of not exceeding a tenth of one mill upon all taxable property of the county, but in no event to exceed the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars, which sum shall be paid by the treasurer of the county to the treasurer of the agricultural society, upon an order from the county auditor duly issued therefor. Such commissioners shall pay out of the treasury any sum from money in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, in anticipation of such levy."

The only legal question which I discern is as to whether or not, under the circumstances mentioned by you, it may be said that the agricultural society "has the control and management of such lands and buildings."

The society owns the lands and buildings, and under its lease reserves to itself sufficient control and management thereof to enable it to hold agricultural fairs. This being the case, I am of the opinion that the making of the lease, which is authorized by law, under the terms and conditions described by you would not forfeit the right of the agricultural society to such public aid as it is entitled to under section 9894, General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—BOND ISSUE FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT WHERE PART OF ROAD LIES IN TOWNSHIP IN WHICH IS AN INCORPORATED VILLAGE—BEFORE MAKING LEVY, OTHER LEVIES SHOULD BE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION—DETERMINATION SHOULD BE THAT LEVY IS IN TEN MILL LIMITATION AND WILL NOT PROHIBIT OTHER LEVIES.

Before the commissioners of a county proceed to issue bonds and let the contract for the improvement of a road, under authority of sections 6926 to 6956, G. C., inclusive, as amended in 103 O. L., 198-204, a part of which lies in a certain township in said county in which is located an incorporated village, it is the duty of the said commissioners to take into consideration the levies that must necessarily be made on the taxable property within said village for the year 1915 and thereafter for municipal purposes, and for the purposes other than interest and sinking fund, for which the various taxing authorities may levy taxes on said property.

If said commissioners find that the levy for the proposed improvement can be made on the taxable property within said village, within the ten mill limitation, and that said levy will not prohibit the levies in said taxing districts for the other purposes above mentioned, said commissioners, having granted the petition for said improvement, may proceed with its construction, and for the purpose of providing for the payment of the cost and expense apportioned to said township in the manner provided by section 6931, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 199, said commissioners may levy a tax within the limitations provided in section 6945, G. C., as amended, upon the taxable property of said township, including the taxable property within said village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1915.

HON. MILTON HAINES, Prosecuting Attorney, Marysville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 21st, which is as follows:

"In compliance with your request as given to Mr. Beightler and myself, I shall try and give you the facts in the road case as I understand them.

"The road in question was granted by the county commissioners and is to be built under the provisions of a bill passed April 8, 1915, and known as house bill No. 544, and found in Vol. 103, Laws of Ohio, 1913, page 198.

"Section 6928 provides 'that a portion of the cost and expenses thereof which shall not be less than one-half nor more than two-thirds (one-half in this case) shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of the county against the taxable property of any township or townships in which such road may be in whole or in part, as authorized hereinafter. They shall also order the balance of said cost and expense be assessed upon and collected from the owners of said real estate benefited thereby and in proportion to the benefit to be derived therefrom by said real estate as determined by said commissioners.'

"Section 6945 says (in part): 'Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, but SUBJECT TO THE MAXIMUM LIMITATION UPON THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT of all levies now in force.'

"The road in mind lies partly in Claibourne township, Union county, Ohio, in which the village of Richwood (incorporated) is situated. The total rate for this village is 16.40 mills including the county emergency (flood) levy of 1.10 mills.

"The opinion desired is whether the commissioners have the power to proceed with the building of the road; and levy against the village of Richwood its proportionate share of the cost and expense of building said road with the tax rate of the village being 16.40 mills."

In response to my request for additional information relative to the tax levies for all purposes in the village of Richwood for the year 1914, I have your letter of May 6th in which you set forth the purposes for which the various taxing authorities made a levy on the taxable property within the corporate limits of said village, for the year 1914, and the rate for each purpose.

From your statement of facts it appears that the commissioners of Union county have granted a petition for the improvement of a certain road in said county, under authority of sections 6926 to 6956, inclusive, General Code, as said sections are amended in 103 O. L., 198-204, section 6956 being supplemented by section 6956-a, General Code. It further appears that a part of said road lies in Claibourne township within said county; that the village of Richwood is located within said township and that the aggregate rate of taxes for all purposes on the taxable property within said village for the year 1914 was 16.40 mills.

An examination of your enclosed statement of levies made by the several taxing authorities on the taxable property of said village for the year 1914, shows that the aggregate levy of 16.40 mills for all purposes, allowed by the county budget commissioners, was the maximum levy allowed by law. The levy of 1.10 mills by the commissioners of said county for flood emergency and the levy of 3.10 mills by the state for state highway improvement, were the only levies that were not subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 57.

It is evident that the levy for the proposed improvement must come within said fifteen mill limitation and, inasmuch as the cost and expense of said improvement will be incurred without a vote of the people, said levy must come within the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 552.

Section 6928, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 199, provides:

"The county commissioners shall order that a portion of the cost, and expenses thereof, which shall not be less than one-half, nor more than two-thirds of the total, shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of the county against the taxable property of any township or townships in which such road may be in whole or in part, as authorized hereinafter. They shall also order that the balance of said cost and expense be assessed upon and collected from the owners of said real estate, and from the real estate benefited thereby in proportion to the benefit to be derived therefrom by said real estate as determined by said commissioners."

I understand that the county commissioners acting under authority of this section provided by resolution that one-half of the cost and expense of making said improvement shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of the county against the taxable property of the townships in which said road is located, and that the balance of said cost and expense shall be assessed upon, and collected from the owners of the real estate situated within one mile of either side of said road, according to the benefits to be derived therefrom by said real estate as determined by said commissioners.

Section 6945, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 202, provides:

> "For the purpose of providing by general taxation a fund out of which not less than one-half nor more than two-thirds of the costs and expenses of all improvements made under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter can be paid, the commissioners are authorized to levy upon the taxable property of any township or townships within the county in which such improved road is to be or has been constructed, not exceeding three mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of the taxable property in such township or townships. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, but subject to the maximum limitation upon the aggregate amount of all levies now in force."

The levy for this improvement, together with other levies for interest and sinking fund purposes, will have to be placed on the duplicate before and in preference to all other items and for the full amount thereof, as required by the provision of section 5649-1, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 12, which provides:

> "In any taxing district, the taxing authority shall, within the limitations now prescribed by law, levy a tax sufficient to provide for sinking fund and interest purposes for all bonds issued by any political sub-division, which tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof."

In the case of Rabe et al. v. Board of Education, 88 O. S., 403, the fourth branch of the syllabus provides:

> "In determining the amount of income from taxes levied or to be levied that may be anticipated by an issue of bonds by any taxing authority, the calculation must be based on the same proportion of the total maximum levy in any one taxing district as the proportion of the maximum levy it is authorized to certify to the budget commissioners is to the total maximum levies that all the taxing authorities within that taxing district are authorized to certify."

At page 422 the court in its opinion said:

> "It would seem to be not only proper but necessary to take into account the future demands upon the school funds for school purposes in connection with the probable increase of the tax duplicate in determining just what income may be anticipated by the issue of bonds for the purchase of school property without detriment to the future imperative needs of the schools of that school district. This, of course, is a question for the determination of the board of education in the first instance, and a court of equity would not for this reason interfere to restrain the issue of these bonds, except for an abuse of discretion, and if the judgment of the board of education is acquiesced in by the tax payers of that school district and the bonds have been issued in good faith, it would then be too late to challenge its decision in this particular.

article 12) which provides that no bonded indebtedness of the state or any political subdivision thereof shall be incurred or renewed, unless in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds and provide for a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, it is of the utmost importance that at the time of the incurring of such indebtedness the other needs of the political subdivision proposing to issue the bonds should be taken into account, for this levy must continue during the term of the bonds in an amount sufficient to pay the interest and provide a sinking fund for their final redemption, even though the amount should exhaust the entire income available from taxation and without regard to the current expenses. In other words, under this provision of the constitution, the payment of interest and the retirement of bonds are to be provided for first, and the current expenses become a secondary consideration."

While it is presumed that the county commissioners at the time they granted the petition for said improvement had in mind the effect of a levy for said improvement on the taxable property of Claibourne township, including the taxable property of the village of Richwood, as limiting levies of the said taxing district for other purposes, I think that, inasmuch as the bonds for said improvement have not been issued and the contract has not been let, it is still the duty of said county commissioners, before proceeding with said improvement, to take into consideration the levies that must necessarily be made on the taxable property within said village for the year 1915 and thereafter, for municipal purposes and for the purposes other than interest and sinking fund, for which the various taxing authorities may levy taxes on said property.

If the county commissioners find that the levy for the proposed improvement can be made on the taxable property within said village, within the ten mill limitation, and that said levy will not conflict with the rule laid down by the supreme court in the case of Rabe et al. v. Board of Education, supra, I am of the opinion that said county commissioners, having granted the petition for said improvement, may proceed with its construction and, for the purpose of providing for the payment of one-half of the cost and expense apportioned to Claibourne township, in the manner provided by section 6931, G. C., as amended in 103, O. L., 199, said county commissioners may levy a tax within the limitations provided in section 6945, G. C., as amended, upon the taxable property of said township, including the taxable property within said village of Richwood.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 160—VOLUNTEER FIREMEN'S PENSION FUND.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 18, 1915.

HON. HARRY L. FEDERMAN, Chairman Cities' Committee, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In compliance with your request of May 18, 1915, I have examined house bill No. 160 in connection with Mr. Heinselman's request for an opinion "as to whether or not the firemen who served as minute men could participate in the pension provided for in this bill."

Section 1 of the bill provides a board of trustees for "the establishment and maintenance of a volunteer firemen's pension fund." This board is to consist of the ex-volunteer firemen of the municipality creating the fund.

Section 2 provides for the holding of an election by "the volunteer firemen's association."

Section 9 provides for the distribution of the fund, and curiously enough contains no positive provision on this subject, the language being that:

> "The board of trustees shall make all rules and regulations for the distribution of the fund, as to whom, including members or their widows, any portion of it shall be paid, and the amount thereof; provided, that no ex-volunteer fireman shall be eligible to receive a pension from such fund * * * unless he has served as a volunteer fireman for a period of at least five (5) years."

I assume that by the phrase "minute men" you mean volunteer firemen; that is, members of a volunteer association formed for the purpose of putting out fires and subject to the call of authorities of the municipality. Many such associations formerly existed and still exist in cities and villages where no regular fire department is maintained. I interpret your question, then, as inquiring as to whether a present member of a regular fire department, who formerly served as a member of a volunteer fire department, could participate in the pension provided for in the bill in its present form.

The bill clearly seeks to create a pension fund for ex-volunteer firemen who have served as such for a period of five years. This is a statement of the purpose of the bill; I express no opinion as to its constitutionality. There is no exception in the bill as to persons who have been volunteer firemen, but are now members of the regular fire department and actual or potential beneficiaries in the firemen's pension fund provided for by sections 4600-4615, inclusive, General Code.

Section 4613, G. C., provides as follows:

> "All persons drawing pensions or entitled to them from existing fireman's pension fund shall be and remain beneficiaries in pension funds created under this chapter in the same municipality where they are beneficiaries in such existing funds, and shall receive such amounts and be subject to the rules and regulations adopted by the board of trustees."

The phrase "existing fireman's pension fund," as used in this section, means in my opinion pension funds existing at the time of the passage thereof. Moreover it refers to a fireman's pension fund which is to be distingushed from a volunteer fireman's pension fund, such as is provided by section 160, G. C.

See also section 4614 wherein it is required that all funds belonging to "an existing fireman's pension fund in the municipality" be transferred to the board for the administration of the fireman's pension fund provided for by the related statutes. These sections then have no bearing upon the question. Except as might otherwise be provided by the rules which may be made by the board of trustees of the fireman's pension fund, under section 4612, and by the trustees of the volunteer fireman's pension fund, under section 9 of the bill, it would be possible for an individual to receive the benefits of both pension funds if he had served five years as a volunteer fireman and was, at the time, acting as a regular fireman.

I think I should point out that the emergency section of the bill, which is section 11 thereof, is not sufficient. I do not think that a bill of this kind can be made an emergency at all; but certainly there is no such statement of an emergency in section 11 as is required by the constitution. The presence of this section, in my opinion, endangers the whole bill.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TREASURERS AND SURETIES OF A COUNTY, TOWNSHIP, CITY, VILLAGE OR SCHOOL DISTRICT MAY BE RELEASED FOR LOSS OF PUBLIC FUNDS, WITHOUT SUBMITTING THE QUESTION OF RELEASE TO VOTE OF THE PEOPLE—CERTAIN RESTRICTIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On May 12, 1915, you submitted for my opinion thereon the following enquiry:

> "Can treasurers and sureties be legally released under sections 2303 to 2311, General Code, without submitting the question of release to a vote of the people?"

The seeming ambiguity contained in these sections of the General Code makes necessary a recourse to the Laws of Ohio, or year books containing the legislative enactments before the codification thereof. These sections 2303 to 2311, inclusive, of the General Code, were first enacted by the general assembly March 28, 1906, (98 O. L., 120). The act contains four sections. On March 9, 1908, the legislature amended section 1 of this act by inserting in the fourth line thereof the words: "have heretofore been or hereafter may be caused by fire."

With the aid of the separate enactments the interpretation of the codified form of the law becomes easier, and we find that the treasurers and the sureties may be released and discharged from liability to or demand of the county, township, city, village, or school district for the loss of public funds under the following conditions:

First. If the board of county commissioners, township trustees, city or village council, or board of education shall find that the treasurer was entrusted by law with the care of such public money, and that the loss thereof was not occasioned by his fault or negligence, and an entry of such finding shall be made upon the record book of the proceedings of such council or board. (Section 2304, of the General Code.) This finding is only a conditional release. Such council or board after "having first made and caused to be entered the finding of no fault or negligence as above provided, may, and they are hereby authorized, at the next ensuing general election to be held in such county, city, village, township or school district, respectively, to submit to the qualified electors of said county, city, village, township or school district interested the question of discharging such treasurer and sureties upon his official bond from liability on account of such loss of funds." Section 2307,of the General Code. (99 O. L., 388, section 1.)

Second. It is provided in said section 1 of the original act (section 2308 of the General Code), "If twenty-five per cent. of the qualified electors of such county, township, city, village or school district petition the council or board thereof for the privilege of determining by ballot whether such treasurer and the sureties on his official bond shall be released and discharged, such council or board shall submit the question to the qualified electors of the county, township, city, village or school district as herein provided."

Third. A further provision is contained in said section 1 of the original act (section 2305 of the General Code) that, "a taxpayer of the county, township, municipality or school district, affected may within five days after any finding or release or discharge provided for in this act is made, take an appeal therefrom to the common pleas court of the county and until such appeal is finally determined such finding and other proceedings shall not affect such release and discharge."

It therefore appears that the finding of such council or board, that the loss of the public funds entrusted to such treasurer was not occasioned by the treasurer's fault or negligence by a proper entry of such finding, is final and conclusive only, (1) when the question made by such finding is not referred to the electors of such political subdivision by the board or council; (2) when twenty-five per cent. of the qualified electors of such political subdivision do not petition such council or board for the privilege of determining by ballot whether such treasurer and the surety on his official bond shall be released and discharged; and (3) when no taxpayer of such political subdivision appeals from such finding to the common pleas court of the county. When the finding of such council or board is reviewed in any one of the three ways specified, the release of the treasurer and surety is dependent upon the result thereof; when not so reviewed such finding is a final release of the treasurer and his surety.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMMON PLEAS JUDGE—TERM OF OFFICE WHEN ELECTED IN 1904—LEGISLATURE LATER CHANGES TERM OF OFFICE—EFFECT OF SAME.

The term of office of a common pleas judge elected in 1904 for a five year term, commencing in 1905 and otherwise expiring in 1910, was by the act found in 98 O. L., 119, extended to January 1, 1911; so that a judge elected to succeed such a judge in November, 1910, should have taken office under such election on January 1, 1911, for a term of six years beginning on that date and his official salary and expense allowances should be computed on the basis of an official year co-incidental with the calendar year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

HON. A. G. REYNOLDS, Common Pleas Judge, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On April 29th you requested my opinion with respect to the merits of a question that has arisen between the auditor of state and yourself with regard to your allowance for expenses. It appears from the correspondence submitted by you that there is in reality but a single question involved in the matter, which may be stated as follows:

> "When does the official year of the position which you hold, which may be described as that of the additional judge in the third subdivision of the ninth judicial district, begin?"

This question in turn, of course, hinges upon the date on which your official term began.

You state in a second letter under date of May 15th, just received, that you first assumed office on January 9, 1909, under an appointment to succeed Judge Metcalfe, who resigned on that date to accept appointment as circuit judge to fill a vacancy. You were then elected to fill out the unexpired term and for the regular term succeeding, and are now serving the latter term.

I assume, therefore, that in entering upon your present term of service you were, so to speak, your own successor.

You state further that despite the somewhat ambiguous provisions of the act creating the judgeship which you hold (72 O. L., 192) to which I called attention in my letter of April 30th, requesting additional information, the occupants of this position have always commenced their respective terms on the 9th of February; that being in office in January, 1911, under the appointment and the (assumed) election to fill out the vacancy created by Judge Metcalfe's resignation, you received a commission for the regular term to which you had been elected, on the 16th day of the month, reciting that your term of office thereunder was for six years from the 9th of February, 1911, and that you qualified by taking oath and filing bond with reference to the 9th of February, 1911, and upon the assumption that that was the day on which you should have begun your regular term.

Your statement of facts makes the solution of the question which you present rather clear to me, and eliminates any necessity of going back to the law of 1872 or considering whether or not under that law the official term of the additional judge therein provided for should have commenced on the 9th day of February. It may be assumed for present purposes that the practice which you say had obtained during the existence of this judgeship was correct.

You say in your letter that Judge Metcalfe was your predecessor and that you were appointed to serve out his term. The question as to the commencement of your own regular elective term, then, is dependent upon the question as to the duration of the term which Judge Metcalfe would have served had he remained in office and which you were appointed to fill out.

I find upon examination of the election statistics in the office of the secretary of state that Judge Metcalfe was elected in 1904, just as I had assumed in my letter to you. He took office, therefore, in 1905, and had not the constitutional amendment adopted in that year and the legislation enacted in pursuance thereof intervened, Judge Metcalfe would have completed his term of office on or about February 9, 1910. However, it became necessary to extend this term of office in order to comply with the intent of section 17 of the constitution, and this was effected by the act found in 98 O. L., 119, to which I called your attention in my letter. Section 2 of the that law, which was fully quoted in the letter referred to, provides, you will observe, that the existing term of office of any additional judge which would otherwise expire in any even numbered year shall be extended to the first day of January of the odd numbered year next succeeding.

By virtue of this provision Judge Metcalfe, had he remained in office, would have received an extension not of one full year, but for the period of time intervening between February 9, 1910, and January 1, 1911. You, being his successor and filling out his term, were entitled to the benefit of the same provision. It follows very clearly, therefore, that your official term should have commenced and did commence on January 1, 1911. The commission which was issued to you was simply erroneous. You are, of course, familiar with the rule that a commission can not alter the law, and that any recitals therein which are inconsistent with the provisions of a statute or of the constitution are simply void.

I imagine that the question has not been raised before because you happened to be, as I have phrased it, your own successor. Therefore, the actual date when you ceased to serve under one appointment or election and commenced to serve under the other may not have been of any practical importance at the time.

As pointed out also in my letter of April 30th, the general assembly in 1914 was of the opinion that your term would end on December 31, 1916, and provided for the election of your successor for the term to commence on January 1, 1917 (104 O. L., 245).

I am satisfied, therefore, that your official term is coincidental with the calendar year and that your salary and expenses should be paid accordingly. The fact that for several years you have drawn monthly and quarterly salaries according to a year commencing on the 9th of February is not material, and merely serves to illustrate how easy it is for all concerned to fall into an error which becomes embarrassing to rectify when occasion requires.

I am sending a copy of this opinion to the auditor of state.

I take this occasion to thank you for supplying me with a full statement of the facts.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED HOUSE BILL NO. 414—EFFECT UPON TAX AND DEBT LIMITATIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have left for my examination amended house bill No. 414, requesting my advice as to its effect upon the tax and debt limitations.

I enclose herewith copy of an opinion which I prepared for Hon. A. R. Garver, chairman of the senate taxation committee with respect to this bill.

I find upon comparison that the bill which you handed to me is the same as that with respect to which I advised Senator Garver. For the sake of accuracy, however, I wish to make two corrections in the former opinion.

At page 3 thereof, I stated that the proviso in section 3942, General Code, is vague, in that it is perhaps doubtful as to whether thereunder bonds may not be issued to refund other bonds issued prior to the taking effect of the bill, as well as certificates of indebtedness so issued. A closer examination of the bill convinces me that there is no doubt about the application of the bill in this respect, and that it is only certificates of indebtedness issued under section 3913 of the General Code, in anticipation of the collection of general revenue fund by a municipal corporation, which may be thus refunded. I desire, however, to reiterate and reaffirm my observation with respect to the dangerous character of this provision in its present form.

The other correction which I wish to make is with respect to a statement made on page 4 of my previous opinion, wherein, in speaking of the amendment to paragraph "e" of section 3949, I characterize that amendment as "restrictive." I should say that in addition to the restrictive amendment in said section there is also a reference therein to bonds issued to refund certificates of indebtedness under section 3942, as amended by the bill, such bonds being taken by force of section 3949 out of the debt limitation. However, if the proviso in section 3942 were changed so as to obviate the danger to which attention is called in the opinion to Senator Garver, there would be no objection to this amendment in section 3949, which indeed would be necessary in order to make it consistent with the other section.

I think I should also observe with respect to the bill that section 3942 as amended has the effect not only of requiring all bond issues to be submitted to the people, with the exception of those specifically exempted from such requirement, but also all issues of notes. The bill itself also brings certificates of indebtedness within this requirement, but the amendments which you have submitted to me eliminate such certificates of indebtedness therefrom.

Coming now to the consideration of the amendments to the bill, as attached to the copy thereof which you have handed to me, I call attention to the fact that my criticism of the proviso of section 3942 is obviated by the amendment in line 42, which strikes out the words "taking effect" and inserts in lieu thereof the word "passage." If the bill has been so amended and passes in this form, what I said in my opinion to Senator Garver respecting the danger of the proviso as originally drafted would not be applicable to it. Instead of the proviso having the effect described, its effect would be as follows:

The section would substantially take out of the Smith law limitation levies for bonds issued for the purpose of taking up and funding certificates of indebtedness issued in anticipation of the general revenue fund by municipal corporations prior to the passage of the act. This would allow municipalities to take care of their present floating debts outside of all the limitations. The proviso would still make a breach in the Smith law, but the breach would be, so to speak, temporary and there would be no possibility of future action during the ninety-day referendum period such as was pointed out in my opinion to Senator Garver.

By striking out the words "five per cent." in line 47, the amendments keep such bonds within one of the limitations of the Longworth law as amended.

The amendment in line 86 makes section 5649-2 clearer than it otherwise would have been, but does not, in my judgment, alter its substantial effect as commented upon in my opinion to Senator Garver. In spite of the express reference in the amendment to the levy authorized in section 6859-1 of the General Code (the Hite state road levy), there would still be grave doubt as to whether or not this levy under the amended section would be within the ten mill limitation; while as to other special levies—flood emergency levies and certain road levies under laws passed since June 2, 1911, and originally intended to be outside the ten mill limitation, the section as amended would bring them all within that limitation.

An amendment of very great importance is that of Senator Pink in line 79. This amendment is designed to obviate the criticism of section 5649-2, as made in my opinion to Senator Garver. I fear that it goes too far in the accomplishment of this purpose. I very much prefer the form of the amendment which is referred to in my opinion to Senator Garver, and which may be phrased substantially as follows:

"except as otherwise specifically provided by any law passed subsequent to June 2, 1911, and prior to the taking effect of this act, authorizing any levy to be made outside of the limitations of this section."

While I do not undertake to say in absolute conviction that Senator Pink's amendment of this section would have the effect of taking out of the ten mill limitation of the Smith law all levies for specific purposes subject to a special limitation authorized by laws passed prior to June 2, 1911, and especially such levies authorized by such laws as under the terms of such laws (of which there were many) could be made "in addition to all other taxes," yet I should fear this result, which virtually put an end to the ten mill limitation of the Smith law and make the fifteen mill limitation thereof very difficult to administer. I am sure that this result is not desired by any one, and as a means of avoiding any danger of such result, rather than because of any clear opinion that such a result would follow from Senator Pink's amendment, I recomment that, if it is not too late, the other form of an exception, along the line above indicated, be adopted.

There are several other amendments which substantially affect the bill, but do not bear in any way upon the questions which you ask concerning its effect.

I might say too, that the general assembly should not amend section 5649-2 without also amending section 5649-3a. The supreme court, in the somewhat celebrated case of State ex rel. v. Sanzenbacher, 84, O. S., unreported, held that under the original Smith law the interest and sinking fund levies which were outside of the ten mill limitation were likewise outside of the interior limitations, on levies for municipal, county, township and school district purposes provided for by said section 5649-3a, although the last named section is silent with respect to any such exemption. Whether the supreme court reached this conclusion because of any supposed and necessary relation between the two limitations or not, cannot be stated, as the reasons upon which the conclusion was based have not been disclosed. However, it has become the settled understanding to regard any levies outside the ten mill limitation as likewise outside the five, three or two mill limitations. This understanding ought to rest upon a more substantial foundation than the decision in the Sanzenbacher case, and in order for legislation to be exact enough to avoid vexatious litigation, the full content of the law ought to be expressed on its face in unmistakable terms. Therefore, I suggest that if it is not too late, section 5649-3a be amended in the bill so as that the limitations therein provided for shall be subject to the same exceptions as the limitations provided for in amended section 5649-2.

I have treated the bill and the amendments separately because I was not advised as to whether the amendments had been agreed to by either branch of the general assembly.

Owing to the very limited time that I have been given to go over this bill, it has been impossible to do so with that care and detail which I prefer to give to opinions, but I am advised that you want this at once. The foregoing opinion is not to be taken as any recommendation of the policy of enacting such legislation.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FINANCE COMMITTEE—CLAIM OF P. B. JOHNSTON, FORMER EXAMINER OF BUREAU OF BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS FOR EXPENSES, HELD PROPER.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

HON. FRANK H. REIGHARD, Chairman Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The finance committe of the house of representatives, through Mr. Wydman, has requested my advice respecting the claim of P. B. Johnston, a former examiner of the bureau of building and loan associations for expenses for hotel and meals incurred in the city of Columbus while engaged in examining building and loan associations in that city, under direction of the head of the department of which he was a member.

The correspondence attached to the itemized statement of expenses shows that the head of the department of building and loan associations considered that the case was covered by the opinion of my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, to Honorable E. M. Fullington, given on May 6, 1911. That opinion holds that the official residence of examiners in the department of building and loan associations is not necessarily the city of Columbus; that in the appointment of examiners in this department it is within the province of the head thereof to designate the headquarters or official residence of such examiners, from which they shall be allowed traveling expenses; that appropriations were properly made by the general assembly from time to time for traveling expenses of such examiners; and that in the absence of such a designation of headquarters or official residence by the head of the department, an examiner's headquarters, from which he would be entitled to charge and receive necessary traveling expenses incurred in the performance of his duties under the orders of his superior, would be his domicile.

I concur in Mr. Hogan's opinion, which is substantially, though not perhaps exactly, identical with my own opinion respecting the place from which expenses may be charged by a district inspector of workshops and factories, given within the past few days to the industrial commission of Ohio. In fact the only difference between the two cases is that the examiners of the bureau of building and loan associations have no specific districts, but perform their services in such territory as may be assigned to them by the head of the department; whereas the inspectors of workshops and factories are appointed for particular districts. This difference in the facts of the two cases does not alter the legal principles involved.

The general rule is that a field man or traveling inspector or examiner is not presumed, as a matter of law, to have his official residence at the office of the department which he represents. His headquarters, if not otherwise designated by the department, are at the place where he resides.

I note that the claim is an old one, and that Mr. Hogan advised the finance committee of the 80th general assembly to make an appropriation for it. Why this was not done I am, of course, unable to state. It does not appear that the claim was disallowed originally or by the 80th general assembly because of the appropriation for traveling expenses having been exceeded, but rather because of a former holding that such expenses could not be paid. That being the case and the claim being as proper now as it was in 1913, I see no legal objection to its allowance and the making of an appropriation to pay it.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

LAND REGISTRATION ACT—FEES TO BE CHARGED BY CLERK OF COMMON PLEAS COURT—LIMITED TO THREE DOLLARS—PAID BY APPLICANT FOR EACH ENTRY OF APPEARANCE—CLERK NOT OBLIGED TO MAKE FINAL RECORD IN ORDINARY CASES.

In the land registration act, the fee to be charged by the clerk of the court is to be limited to three dollars, to be paid by the applicant, and three dollars for each entry of appearance either for joint or several defendants. Clerk not obliged to make final record in ordinary cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

HON. ELI H. SPEIDEL, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 12, 1915, which is as follows:

> "The clerk of the court of common pleas of this county has requested me to write you and ask whether or not you have ever rendered an opinion construing section 112 of the land registration act, found on page 957 of volume 103 of the Ohio Laws.
> "This section provides that the applicant shall pay to the clerk the sum of $3.00 which shall be in full of all clerk's fees and charges in such proceedings.
> "The clerk informs me that there are three cases pending at this time, and if the work required of the clerk, including the record and a certified copy of the record for the county recorder, was to be judged by the legal costs thereof in other cases, it would be at least $30.00 in each case.
> "If you have rendered an opinion construing this particular section of this law, I would be glad to have you furnish me a copy, and if you have not, will you kindly advise me whether or not, in your judgment, the sum of $3.00 is the maximum sum that may be charged by the clerk, however voluminous the record may be, or how much work the clerk must perform in any such case?"

Replying to your letter I beg to call your attention to the first two paragraphs of section 112 of the land registration act, (section 8572-112 of the General Code) to be found on page 957 of 193, Ohio Laws, and which are as follows:

> "Sec. 112. On the filing of an application for registration the applicant shall pay to the clerk of the court the sum of three dollars, which shall be in full of all clerk's fees and charges in such proceeding on behalf of the applicant. Any defendants, except a guardian ad litem, on entering his appearance by filing a pleading of any kind shall pay to the clerk of the court the sum of three dollars, which shall be in full of all clerk's fees in behalf of such defendant.
> "When any number of defendants enter their appearance as aforesaid at the same time, and in one pleading, but one fee shall be paid. Every publication in a newspaper required by this act shall be paid for by the party on whose application the order of publication is made, in addition to the fees above prescribed. The party at whose request or on whose behalf any notice is issued shall pay for the service of the same except when sent by mail by the clerk of the court or recorder."

Enclosed you will find a copy of opinion No. 1298, rendered by my predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, under date of December 14, 1914, from which I quote as follows:

"While in ordinary cases the court is to enter upon his journal the entire decree of registration, nevertheless, I think that it is competent to waive the making of final record in cases where there is no special reason for so doing, and this should be done under the order of the court, by authority of section 11605 of the General Code. The real requirements of the law will be met by the clerk's entering the orders and decrees of the court on the minutes of the journal and carefully collecting and binding all the papers together and transmitting them to the recorder's office where they will be permanently filed. If this course is adopted the decree settling title and also the decree of registration will be of record in the minutes of the courts; and the certified copy of the decree of registration, which under the law becomes the first certificate of title, will be of record in the recorder's office. The clerk must furnish the recorder with a certified copy of the entry. This is manifest from the provisions of section 23 of the land registration act, 103 O. L., 914, et seq."

I concur in the opinion referred to.

The provisions of section 8572-112 of the General Code, quoted above, are clear, and it is my opinion that the clerk's fee on filing an application under the above entitled act is limited to three dollars, and in addition thereto each defendant who separately enters his appearance is obliged to pay a fee of three dollars, and in cases where several defendants join in entering their appearance the fee is to be limited to three dollars.

Much has been said about the economical administration of this law, and notwithstanding the alleged hardship on the clerk to which you refer in your letter, no fee can be charged and collected, save those authorized by law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—PAROLE OFFICER—CHILD LABOR LAW—BOYS UNDER SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE ARE NOT PERMITTED TO WORK AT PLACES OF AMUSEMENT AFTER 6:00 P. M.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—A communication has just been received from Mr. D. D. Weaver, parole officer for the Boys' Industrial School, Lancaster, Ohio, the same having been written from Lima, Ohio, under date of May 17, 1915, and which is as follows:

"The commission has notified the Unique theatre at Fostoria, to discharge Wilbur Hahn, age 15, on account of the school law.

"This boy was working three nights a week of three hours each and never exceeded 10 hours per week.

"He is one of my boys and needs the money that he receives at this work. Will you kindly inform me if this boy has the right to work the above number of hours per week from 7 to 10 P. M.?

Under enquiry made of the Industrial Commission I find that under date of May 13, 1915, an order was issued to William Sipe, of the Unique theatre, Fostoria, Ohio, as follows:

"Boys under sixteen years of age must not be employed after six P. M. Order to be complied with at once."

The order in this case was issued under the provisions of section 12996, of the General Code, as amended on page 908 of 103 O. L., and which is as follows:

"No boy under the age of sixteen and no girl under the age of eighteen years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any establishment or occupation named in section 12993 (1) for more than six days in any one week, (2) nor more than forty-eight hours in any week, (3) nor more than eight hours in any one day, (4) or before the hour of seven o'clock in the morning, or after the hour of six o'clock in the evening. The presence of such child in any establishment during working hours shall be prima facia evidence of his employment therein. No boy under the age of eighteen years or girl under the age of twenty-one years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any establishment or occupation named in section 12993 (1) for more than six days in any one week, (2) nor more than fifty-four hours in any week, (3) nor more than ten hours in any one day, (4) or before the hour of six o'clock in the morning or after the hour of ten o'clock in the evening. In estimating such periods, the time spent at different employments or under different employers shall be considered as a whole and not separately."

Section 12993, of the General Code (page 907 of 103 O. L.), provides, among other things, as follows:

"No male child under fifteen years or female child under sixteen years of age shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in, about or in connection with any mill * * * place of amusement * * * or in the construction or repair of buildings, or in the distribution, transmission or sale of merchandise, nor any boy under fifteen or female under twenty-one years in the transmission of messages. * * *"

It is my opinion therefore that the commission has full authority to issue the order under the section quoted above, as there is no provision of law under which the youth referred to in Mr. Weaver's letter may be exempted from the provisions of the law.

A copy of this opinion has been forwarded to the superintendent of the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster for the information of Mr. Weaver and the other parole officers.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF DOCUMENTS DESIGNED TO CHANGE ROUTE OF INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY NO. 3 AND MAIN MARKET ROAD NO. 13—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—ERIE COUNTY.

Documents designed to change to a more practicable location the route of inter-county highway No. 3 and main market road No. 13, as submitted by the state highway commissioner, are in proper form.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 20, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 18, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I hand you herewith papers addressed to Hon. Frank B. Willis, governor of Ohio, and intended to designate a section of road in Erie county as inter-county highway No. 3, and main market route No. 13. This is a matter concerning which your office furnished this department with an opinion, as of May 12, 1915, in which you state that it was lawful for the highway commissioner to make such designation.
> "Will you kindly give these papers your examination and advise me if they are drawn in proper form?"

The two documents attached to your communication are addressed to Hon. Frank B. Willis, governor of Ohio, and are designed to be signed by you as state highway commissioner. Both documents are drawn in duplicate and the plan is that after the same are signed by you and approved by the governor, the original of each document is to be returned to your office and filed therein, and the duplicate is to be filed in the office of the governor.

There appears from the documents in question and also from the attached map, that it is your desire to change to a more practicable location a part of inter-county highway No. 3 and main market route No. 13, the portion of highway to be affected being located in Erie county, just outside the corporate limits of the city of Sandusky.

The document prepared by you and relating to the inter-county highway, is as follows:

> "Subject to your approval, I hereby change to a more practicable location the route of the Cleveland-Sandusky inter-county highway No. 3, in the following particular, to wit:
> "Beginning at the east terminus of the said Cleveland-Sandusky inter-county highway No. 3, thence in a general westerly direction along said highway as originally designated in Cuyahoga, Lorain and Erie counties, to an angle on the north-east side of the right-of-way of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, at a railroad crossing in the north-western part of Huron township, Erie county; thence, deviating from the original designated route of said highway and following a public road along the north-east side of said right-of-way, through Huron and Perkins townships, to where the said public road intersects the south corporation line of the city of Sandusky.

"Said change is made in order to avoid a dangerous railroad crossing and secure a more direct route, and the location of the same is indicated in green on the attached map of Erie county."

The document which you have prepared and which relates to the main market road, is as follows:

"Subject to your approval, I hereby change to a more practicable location the route of the Cleveland-Sandusky main market route No. 13, in the following particular, to wit:

"Beginning at the east terminus of the Cleveland-Sandusky inter-county highway No. 3, thence in a general westerly direction along said highway as originally designated in Cuyahoga, Lorain and Erie counties, to an angle on the north-east side of right-of-way of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, at a railroad crossing in the north-western part of Huron township, Erie county; thence, deviating from the original designated route of said highway and following the new routing of the same, which is located on a public road on the north-east side of said right-of-way, through Huron and Perkins townships, to where said public road intersects the south corporation line of the city of Sandusky.

"Said change is made in order to avoid a dangerous railroad crossing and secure a more direct route, and the location of the same is indicated in green on the attached map of Erie county."

It is my opinion that the form in which you have drawn these documents is a proper one and that when they have been executed by you and when your action has been approved by the governor, the documents in question will have the effect indicated above and desired by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANIES—DOING SOLELY REINSURANCE BUSINESS NOT LIABLE FOR FIRE MARSHAL TAX—LIABLE WHEN CONTRACT OF REINSURANCE IS ENTERED INTO IN OHIO.

Foreign fire insurance companies doing solely a reinsurance business covering risks in this state are not liable for the fire marshal tax, unless the contract of reinsurance is entered into in Ohio, which is a question of fact to be determined by the particular company and the superintendent of insurance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 20, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your department has certified to this department various claims, which had theretofore been certified to you by the superintendent of insurance, for what is familiarly known as the "fire marshal tax" on foreign insurance companies, which insurance companies, we understand, have been duly licensed to do business in Ohio—either a direct insurance business or a reinsurance business.

We notified the companies against whom the said claims were charged of the fact that the fire marshal tax had not been paid and demanded payment thereof. Several of the insurance companies so notified answered our letters, stating that they did solely a reinsurance business and, therefore, did not believe that they were within the provisions of section 841 of the General Code, which provides for the fire marshal tax.

"Reinsurance" is defined in May on Insurance, volume 1, section 11:

> Reinsurance defined: "It is a contract of indemnity to the reinsured, whatever be the subject-matter, and binds the reinsurer to pay to the reinsured the loss sustained in respect to the subject insured, to the extent for which he is reinsured, and not necessarily differing in form from an original insurance."

May on insurance, volume 1, section 12:

> "'The original contract,' says Emerigon, 'subsists precisely as it was made, without renewal or alteration. The reinsurance is absolutely foreign to the first insured, with whom the reinsurer contracts no sort of obligation. The risks which the insurer has assumed constitute between him and the reinsurer the subject-matter of the contract of reinsurance, which is a new contract, totally distinct from the first. It cannot, therefore, in the strict sense, be made with the party first insured, for this would be a simple rescission of the contract; nor does the latter by it acquire any rights against the reinsurer, in case of the insolvency of the reinsured, or any claim upon the money to be paid to the latter. If the insurer be not liable, he cannot recover of the reinsurer, for the reason that the insurer has no insurable interest, and can suffer no loss, where there is no liability.'"

On page 21 of volume 1, May on insurance, in a note under section 12, foregoing cited, the author suggests that the word "reinsurance" is "sometimes used to denote a contract by which an old company sells out to a new one, or becomes consolidated with it, so that the new company becomes liable directly to the insured. And it is always competent for the reinsuring company to agree to be directly liable."

In the discussion which is hereinafter set out I wish to be distinctly understood as not referring to the so-called reinsurance which is mentioned by Mr. May in the note as foregoing, but simply confine myself to a reinsurance which is, in the language of Mr. May, "a contract of indemnity to the reinsured."

Section 665, of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 665. No company, corporation, or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein, or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

Section 664-1, of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 664-1. That all persons, companies, associations or corporations residing or doing business in this state that enter into any agreements with any insurance company, association, individual, firm, underwriter or Lloyd, not authorized to do business in this state, whereby said person, company, association or corporation shall enter into contracts of insurance covering risks within this state, with said unauthorized association, individual, firm, underwriter, or Lloyd, for which there is a premium charged or collected, the said person, company, association or corporation so insured shall, annually on the first day of July or within ten days thereafter return to the superintendent of insurance of this state, a statement under oath of all actual cost of indemnity and gross premiums paid or payable for the twelve months preceding on policies or contracts of insurance taken by the said person, company, association or corporation and shall at the same time pay to said superintendent of insurance a tax of five per centum of the actual cost of indemnity paid or payable to any such association, firm, or individual, or a tax of five per centum of the gross premiums paid or payable to any such insurance company, underwriter or Lloyd. All taxes collected under the provisions of this section by the superintendent of insurance shall be paid by him, upon the warrant of the state auditor, into the general revenue fund of the state."

Section 9555, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"Sec. 9555. A fire * * * insurance company organized or existing under and by virtue of the laws of this state, by and with the approval of the superintendent of insurance, may reinsure all risks undertaken by it in any company authorized by law to transact a similar class of insurance business in this state. Nothing herein shall prevent such a company from reinsuring any risks or fractional parts thereof not situated in this state in any company or companies duly licensed by such superintendent or like authority, of the state in which such risks may be located, to transact the business of insurance in that state."

It is because of the above sections of the General Code, I take it, that the various foreign insurance companies which do solely a reinsurance business take out licenses authorizing them to do a reinsurance business in this state.

Should a foreign insurance company undertake to do an insurance or a reinsurance business covering risks in this state without being licensed so to do, the person from whom they obtain the business would be liable under section 664-1, of the General Code, foregoing set out, but that in no way determines the liability of such an insurance company to pay under the provisions of section 841, General Code, the so-called "fire marshal tax."

Section 841, of the General Code, provides in part as follows:

"Sec. 841. For the purpose of maintaining the department of state fire marshal and the payment of the expenses incident thereto, each fire insurance company doing business in this state shall pay to the superintendent of insurance in the month of November each year, in addition to the taxes required by law to be paid by it, one-half of one per cent. on the gross premium receipts of such company on all business transacted by it in Ohio during the year next preceding, as shown by its annual statement under oath to the insurance department. * * *"

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to the superintendent of insurance under date of December 10, 1914, he held that the fire marshal tax provided for by section 841, G. C., was to be computed upon the gross premium receipts of fire insurance companies without deduction of return premiums and considerations received for reinsurance, and I am informed that the fire insurance companies have acquiesced in the ruling given in said opinion. In said opinion, however, Mr. Hogan did not decide the proposition whether or not a foreign fire insurance company should be taxed upon the premiums received by it for reinsurance.

In the course of the opinion he states as follows:

> "The contention that premiums received by reinsuring companies are not subject to the tax (fire marshal tax), I think, is disposed of by what I have already said. The statute makes no allowance for deductions of this kind. The proposition that reinsuring companies should not be taxed upon such premiums, because the contracts are almost entirely made outside of this state and do not constitute business transacted in Ohio, can not be considered in this opinion. If the business is not transacted in Ohio, then the tax could not attach; but whether the business is transacted in Ohio is a question between the companies and the insurance department, and would depend, of course, upon the facts in each particular case."

I concur in what Mr. Hogan stated in that portion of his opinion foregoing quoted.

The question of whether or not under the provisions of section 841, G. C., a foreign insurance company is "doing business" in Ohio when it reinsures risks covered by other insurance companies in Ohio, and whether or not the premiums received by such reinsuring company would be considered as being received on business transacted by it in Ohio is primarily a question of fact which should be determined between the insurance company and the insurance department.

I venture it as a proper construction of law to say that if a foreign insurance company reinsures its risks in another foreign insurance company, the business of reinsuring would not be considered as business transacted in Ohio, since the contract of reinsurance would have been made entirely outside of the territorial limits of Ohio; that if a domestic insurance company reinsures its risks in a foreign insurance company, it would be a question of fact as to where the contract of reinsurance was entered into; but the fact that the foreign insurance company was licensed to do a reinsurance business in Ohio would place the burden upon said foreign insurance company to show that the business of reinsurance so entered into was so entered into outside of the limits of Ohio.

There has been another objection raised to the placing of the fire marshal tax upon reinsurance companies, on the ground that it is double taxation. With this I can not agree. The insurance company which takes risks is charged for doing business in Ohio, and the extent of its tax is fixed by the gross premiums received by it. The reinsurance company is also taxed for its privilege of doing business in Ohio, and its tax is fixed by the amount of gross premiums received by it. It is not the premiums that are taxed, but the premiums are simply taken as a basis for computing the amount of the tax to be charged for the doing of the business. This I do not believe can in any way be considered as double taxation.

In view of what has been said heretofore I shall not take any further action on the claims that have been certified to me against foreign reinsurance companies until the liability as set forth under this opinion is determined by the insurance department.

In conclusion permit me to inform you that section 841, of the General Code, has been amended at the present session of the legislature so as to read as follows:

> "Sec. 841. For the purpose of maintaining the department of state fire marshal and the payment of expenses incident thereto, each fire insurance company doing business in this state shall pay to the superintendent of insurance in the month of November each year, in addition to the taxes required by law to be paid by it, one-half of one per cent on the gross amount of premiums received by it from policies covering risks within this state during the preceding calendar year, after deducting return premiums and considerations received for reinsurance as shown by the next preceding annual statement, verified under oath as required under the provisions of section 9590, of the General Code. The superintendent of insurance shall pay the money so received into the state treasury to the credit of a special fund for the maintenance of the office of the state fire marshal. If any portion of such special fund remains unexpended at the end of the year, for which it was required to be paid, and the state fire marshal so certifies, it shall be transferred to the general revenue fund of the state.

"Upon failure or refusal to pay the tax, the superintendent of insurance may revoke or refuse to renew the license of said fire insurance company, and shall certify the fact of such failure or refusal to pay said tax to the attorney general, who shall thereupon begin an action against the company in the court of common pleas of the proper county, to recover the amount of the tax. If such company ceases to do business in this state, it shall thereupon make report to the superintendent of insurance and shall forthwith pay to the superintendent of insurance all taxes due and to become due from it."

Said amendment will not, however, be effective until August 9, 1915.

It is to be noted that under section 841, as above amended, a deduction is to be made of the considerations "received for reinsurance as shown by the next preceding annual statement."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL—NO LIMITATION ON COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AS TO TIME CONTRACT MAY RUN—CONTRACTS, HOWEVER, ARE SUBJECT TO CANCELLATION IF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH WITHDRAWS ITS APPROVAL.

County commissioners are not limited as to time in making contracts for care, treatment, etc., in a tuberculosis hospital of persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, but all such contracts are subject to cancellation if approval of institution or association be withdrawn by the state board of health.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1915.

HON. G. O. MCGONAGLE, Prosecuting Attorney, McConnelsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of May 18th, which is as follows:

"Under section 3143 of the General Code, as amended O. L., volume 103, page 492-3, may the county commissioners legally and properly contract for the care, treatment, etc., of the inmates of the county infirmary or other residents of the county suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis with an association or corporation incorporated under the laws of Ohio for the exclusive purpose of caring for and treating persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, for a period of ten years?"

Section 3143 of the General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 492, is as follows:

"Instead of joining in the erection of a district hospital for tuberculosis, as hereinafter provided for, the county commissioners may contract with the board of trustees, as hereinafter provided for, of a district hospital, the county commissioners of a county now maintaining a county hospital for tuberculosis or with the proper officer of a municipality where such hospital has been constructed, for the care and treatment of the inmates of such infirmary or other residents of the county who are suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis. The commissioners of the county in which such patients reside shall pay to the board of trustees of the district hospital or into the proper fund of the county maintaining a hospital for tuberculosis, or into the proper fund of the city receiving such patients, the actual cost incurred in their care and treatment, and other necessaries, and they shall also pay for their transportation. Provided, that the county commissioners of any county may contract for the care and treatment of the inmates of the county infirmary or other residents of the county suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis with an association or corporation incorporated under the laws of Ohio for the exclusive purpose of caring for and treating persons suffering from pulmonary tubercolosis; but no such contract shall be made until the institution has been inspected and approved by the state board of health, and such approval may be withdrawn and such contracts shall be cancelled if, in the judgment of the state board of health, the institution is not managed in a proper manner. Provided, however, that if such approval is withdrawn, the board of trustees of such institution may have the right of appeal to the governor and attorney general and their decision shall be final."

The question propounded by you, as I understand it, is whether or not a contract may be made by your county commissioners with an association or corporation incorporated under the laws of Ohio for the exclusive purpose of caring for and treating persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis for a period of ten years.

Upon an examination of the statutes it will be found that there are certain preliminary conditions which must be met before it is possible to enter into a contract under the section, namely, that the institution must be inspected and approved by the state board of health, and it is also provided that if the institution is not managed in a proper manner the approval of the state board of health may be withdrawn and as a result thereof any contract entered into with the institution shall be cancelled.

Hence it is my opinion that while there is no limitation as to the time for which a contract under the section quoted above may be made to run, yet all contracts made under the section are subject to termination at anytime when the state board of health shall withdraw its approval of the institution on account of improper management and when such finding is approved by the governor and the attorney general.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILLS NO. 160 AND NO. 362 DISCUSSED—MEANING OF PHRASE "EX-PART PAY FIREMEN" AND "EX-VOLUNTEER FIREMEN."

Whether "ex-part pay firemen" are included within the scope of the phrase "ex-volunteer firemen" depends upon the definition of both terms. The first term is unknown in the law; but the second term means and embraces all persons enrolling themselves as members of fire companies or fire departments, but not under any contract of employment binding them to render particular services, though they may be entitled to specific compensation for specific services, if rendered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1915.

HON. HARRY L. FEDERMAN, Chairman Cities Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to examine house bills Nos. 160 and 362, and to advise whether the subject-matter of house bill No. 362 is provided for in house bill No. 160.

Upon examination of the two measures I find that, with but one exception which I shall refer to, the first five sections of the two bills are substantially identical in phraseology and effect. House bill No. 160 contains ten sections and, in my judgment, sections 6 to 10, inclusive, thereof are necessary in order to make the bill workable; so that if house bill No. 362 relates to a subject-matter different than that to which house bill No. 160 relates, some such provisions as are found in sections 6 to 10, inclusive, of house bill No. 160 should be incorporated in the other bill.

The one respect in which sections 1 to 5, inclusive, of the two bills are not identical is that house bill No. 160 provides for a pension fund for "ex-volunteer firemen;" while house bill No. 362 provides for the creation (though not the disbursement) of such a fund for "ex-part pay firemen." Your question then resolves itself into an inquiry whether or not the term "ex-volunteer firemen" includes "ex-part pay firemen."

The statutes of this state do not recognize "part pay firemen." Two classes of firemen are provided for by the General Code, as it exists at present, viz.: regular firemen and volunteer firemen.

A fireman entering the employ of a city or village and receiving a regular compensation, but giving only a part of his time, would, in my opinion, not be a "volunteer fireman." On the contrary, he would probably be a regular fireman and subject to the benefits of the regular firemen's pension fund, unless the rules of the trustees of the particular fund would exclude him from its benefits. So that if such persons are meant by the use of the term "part pay firemen," my answer is that house bill No. 160 does not include the subject-matter of house bill No. 362.

If, on the contrary, a "part pay fireman," within the contemplation of house bill No. 362, is one who enlists in a volunteer hose or fire company, but receives from the public treasury a certain specific compensation for attending fires, a different question is presented. Such a person would not be a regular employe of the city, nor in any sense a member of its regular fire department. Some doubt as to whether or not he would be, in the exact sense, a volunteer fireman may be said to exist. (See Continental Hose Co. v. Fargo, 114 N. W., 834.)

All depends upon what is meant by the term "volunteer firemen," and particularly upon whether the definition of that term is predicated upon an obligation to attend all fires, or upon the receipt of compensation for attending any fires.

That is to say, if a person is a volunteer, who is not obliged to attend fires under any regular contract of employment, but who is nevertheless entitled to certain compensation if he does attend a fire, then one result follows: but if a person is not to be regarded as a volunteer fireman unless he serves without promise of compensation of any kind, another result follows.

There are no decisions in this state upon the subject, though the term "volunteer firemen" has been in the statutes for many years. My information and understanding is, however, that persons enrolling or enlisting as firemen and training themselves as such upon the understanding that should they attend fires they would be entitled to a certain sum for each fire attended, and perhaps to some other stipulated sum for each fire drill attended, constitute "volunteer firemen" where there is no contract of employment in the sense that the city or village is entitled to demand and receive the services of the firemen in any given case.

Upon this understanding I advise that a "volunteer fireman" is one who is not obliged by a contract of employment to be at the service of the city or village unless definitely excused therefrom, but who may nevertheless be a member of the fire establishment or department of the city or village, and as such entitled to certain specific fees or compensation for services actually rendered. If this is also the definition of the "part pay firemen" mentioned in house bill No. 362, I would be of the opinion that house bill No. 160 does provide for pensions for this class of ex-firemen.

I cannot answer your question more specifically than I have, because I do not know just what is meant by "part pay firemen." The term is unknown in the law, though it may have a meaning understood in the service.

I am unable to go further than to say that if the term "part pay firemen" means firemen who serve under a regular contract of employment, subjecting them to call at any time by the fire department authorities of the city or village, the substance of house bill No. 362 is not covered by house bill No. 160; but if the term applies only to firemen serving as volunteers but subject to compensation for services rendered, then house bill No. 160 does cover the same subject-matter as is covered by house bill No. 362.

This opinion is not to be construed as a recommendation one way or the other as to the policy of the proposed legislation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER.
Attorney General.

THE TIDE-WATER PIPE COMPANY — CRUDE PETROLEUM — OPERATION OF A PIPE LINE FOR TRANSPORTING CRUDE PETROLEUM THROUGH OHIO FROM ANOTHER STATE—WHEN SUCH OPERATION IS A "PUBLIC UTILITY."

The Tide-Water Pipe Company, a limited partnership organized under the laws of Pennsylvania for the purpose, among other things, of operating a pipe line for the transportation of crude petroleum, and actually operating such a pipe line in interstate commerce through the state of Ohio, though not voluntarily holding itself out as a common carrier, and though not exacting any charge for transportation as such, and though becoming the purchaser of all petroleum which passes through its lines, and though purchasing largely from a single producer and selling and delivering entirely to a single refiner, is a pipe line company and a "public utility" within the meaning of section 5415 and 5416, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On May 11th, you transmitted to this office the affidavit of W. S. Benson, vice-president of The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, and requested my opinion as to whether or not the company, doing business as described in said affidavit, is a "public utility" within the meaning of the Ohio statute and as such is required to make report of its property for valuation to the tax commission.

The affidavit embodies a statement of the following material facts:

The company, which is a limited partnership organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, owns and operates a pipe line running from Illinois through Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York to the seaboard. This pipe line is used by the company to transport crude petroleum from producing fields variously located outside of the state of Ohio to the refinery at the seaboard. In the entire history of its business operations, however, the company has never made a transportation charge, but at all times has purchased the oil in the producing field and sold it to a single refiner at the other terminus of the line.

The refiner referred to is The Tide-Water Oil Company of New Jersey. This company owns practically all the stock of The Tide-Water Pipe Company and practically all the stock of a corporation known as "The Associated Producers Company," which last named company produces crude petroleum by boring and operating wells in the producing fields.

The three companies are thus closely allied and affiliated, and their method of doing business is described, in the words of affiant, as follows:

> "That the output of oil from the wells of the Associated Producers Company is formally sold to The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, at the mouth of the wells in Illinois, and transported by the pipe company as its property to New York harbor and there sold to The Tide-Water Oil Company. The Associated Producers Company also owns a large acreage of oil and gas leases in the McKean county oil fields of Pennsylvania, through which the line of the pipe company runs; that there the production from the wells of the Associated Producers Company is likewise sold formally to The Tide-Water Pipe Company and transported to New York harbor and sold to the Tide-Water Oil Company for use in its said refinery. That the production of oil by the Associated Producers Company is not sufficient to meet the daily wants of the oil company at New York harbor, and The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, supplements such production by buying from other producers in Illinois, Indiana and Pennsylvania additional quantities of oil sufficient to meet the daily requirements of the refinery. This oil so purchased in Illinois and Indiana is purchased in the name of The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, paid for by that company, owned by that company, transported by that company through its line to New York harbor and there sold to the oil company."

It is further stated in the affidavit as follows:

"That The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, does not take into its line in the state of Ohio any oil whatsoever, neither does it make any deliveries of oil in the state of Ohio; all of the oil which it transports through its line in Ohio being produced in the states west thereof. That The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, does not in any way serve the public in the state of Ohio—all of the oil so transported by it through Ohio being its own oil, purchased by it as stated above and transported by it through its own pipe line as the owner of such oil to New York harbor and there sold to the oil company. That the transportation of oil through Ohio is only incidental to the production and refining thereof, and is a step to bring the oil in its crude state as produced from the wells to the refinery at New York harbor for refining into burning oil and its by-products. That the pipe company does not as a matter of fact operate as a common carrier in the state of Ohio; that all of the oil which it transports is, as stated above, its own property and transported and intended to be transported to the refinery at New York harbor for use therein.

"That it is absolutely necessary for the refinery to have a surplus of oil in tanks; that it cannot in good business practice rely upon its daily purchases or the production of its underlying corporations with which to meet the daily demands of its refinery at the harbor, and therefore The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Limited, for the protection of the refinery, buys and stores large quantities of crude oil so that the oil refinery may have at all times a quantity upon which it may draw for a regular and fixed daily consumption. That this oil so purchased and held is stored in iron tanks in the state of Illinois and in the state of New Jersey, waiting a market therefor as the demands of the oil refinery may create.

"That the purchase of oil from producers other than the Associated Producers Company is not only for the purpose, as stated above, of meeting the daily demands of the oil refinery, but also to have sufficient oil to fill its pipe line system and keep the same in good working order."

My predecessor, Mr. Hogan, in an opinion to the commission under date of May 20, 1913, dealt with the following facts:

"The Tide-Water Company, Limited, is a limited partnership organized under the laws of Pennsylvania. The partnership is authorized by its partnership articles to transport and refine petroleum as well as to buy and sell this commodity. It owns and operates a pipe line through Ohio extending from a point in Illinois to a point in Pennsylvania and has other lines in the states of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. A lengthy statement of facts is made from which, however, it is difficult to determine whether or not the company is actually engaged in the business of refining oil. The statement is made that 'we buy in Illinois, we transport it to Rixford (Ill.) * * * at Rixford it is transported by the main line to Bayonne (N. J.) * * *. Our income is derived from the sale of the oil at the seaboard to our own refinery. * * * We have no transportation charge for the oil coming in from any of these branches or any over the main line.'"

The only material difference between the facts as they were before my predecessor and those embodied in the affidavit which has been submitted to me lies in the fact, as now stated, that what appears to be the bulk of the purchases made by the pipe line company in the producing field, and constituting what might be called its "regular purchasing business," is made from the allied Associated Producers Company.

It now appears, therefore, that, except insofar as it is necessary in order to supply the refinery and to maintain at the refinery a surplus of crude petroleum to purchase oil from what might be termed "private producers," the main business of the three allied companies is conducted as follows:

The Producers Company drives and operates the wells and runs its oil into the lines of the pipe company, which "formally" pays for it. The pipe company, having thus "formally" bought the crude oil, transports the same to the refinery where it is sold to the oil company.

If these companies are as closely allied as one is led to believe from the statements in the affidavit, it is very clear, as therein stated, that "the transportation of oil through Ohio is only incidental to the production and refining thereof, and is a step to bring the oil in its crude state as produced from the wells to the refinery at New York harbor." In this connection, however, I feel constrained to observe that this statement might be made of the business of transporting crude petroleum through pipe lines as a whole.

Mr. Hogan, in his opinion to which I have referred (found in the report of the attorney general for the year 1913, at page 666) held upon the facts submitted to him that The Tide-Water Pipe Company was a public utility and a pipe line company under the tax commission act of 1911. Without repeating all of his reasons, I may say that, generally, I concur with him. There are, however, additional reasons, one of which at least could not be asserted by Mr. Hogan at the time his opinion was prepared, which, in my judgment, support the conclusion reached.

The statutes involved are sections 5415 and 5416, General Code, which provide in part as follows:

"Sec. 5415. The term 'public utility' as used in this act means and embraces each corporation, company, firm, individual and association, their lessees, trustees, or receivers elected or appointed by any authority whatsoever, and herein referred to as express company, telephone company, telegraph company, sleeping car company, freight line company, equipment company, electric light company, gas company, natural gas company, pipe line company, waterworks company, messenger company, signal company, messenger or signal company, union depot company, water transportation company, heating company, cooling company, street railroad company, railway company, suburban railroad company, and interurban railroad company, and such term 'public utility' shall include any plant or property owned or operated, or both, by any such companies, corporations, firms, individuals or associations.

"Sec. 5416. That any person or persons, firm or firms, co-partnership or voluntary association, joint stock association, company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated: * * *.

"When engaged in the business of transporting natural gas or oil through pipes or tubing, either wholly or partially within this state, is a pipe line company."

The Tide-Water Pipe Company from the facts above stated is clearly in the business of transporting oil through pipes or tubing in the state of Ohio, and, being such, it is a "public utility" as that term is used in section 5415, and the property which it operates in Ohio is also a "public utility" within the second meaning of that term as therein defined. This conclusion is not altered by the fact that the company buys "formally" at the producing field and sells at the refinery; nor by the fact that the purchases are from a limited group of producers and the sales to a single refinery. This is true for the reasons pointed out by Mr. Hogan in his opinion, which may be summarized by stating that the business of the company is essentially that of transportation, these features of the business being incidental to its transportation activities rather than paramount to them, and the fact that section 5416 does not, in words at least, require that a company in order to satisfy its definition of a pipe line company hold itself out to the public as a common carrier.

I am satisfied, however, that The Tide-Water Pipe Company, under the facts stated in the affidavit, is a "public utility" in every sense of the word; so that even if it be assumed that the business must be a quasi public business, as distinguished from a private business, and that this qualification is to be read into the definition found in section 5416, the business of the company would still constitute it a "public utility" within such a restricted definition of that term.

Much might be said respecting the reasons which may exist so as to charge a business with a public interest and make it a "public utility." The general statement may be made that professed willingness to serve all who may apply is not criterion of a public service business; and that there are some enterprises which can be conducted only subject to public regulation and control and to the right of the public to demand the service, whether the proprietor of the enterprise is willing or not. A very full discussion of these principles will be found in Wyman on Public Service Corporations.

The reason why it is unnecessary to go into such matters in detail exists in the decision of the supreme court of the United States, in the case of United States v. Ohio Oil Co., known as the "Pipe Line Cases," 234 U. S., 548. This, a very recent case, decided since Mr. Hogan's opinion was given to the commission, involved the interpretation and constitutionality of an act of congress amending the act to regulate commerce by the addition of a proviso as follows:

"The provisions of this act shall apply to any corporation or any person or persons engaged in the transportation of oil or other commodity, except water, and * * * gas * * * who shall be considered and held to be common carriers, within the meaning and purpose of this act."

The Tide-Water Pipe Company was the defendant in error in one of the cases taken to the supreme court, and insofar as the decision is applicable to the question now under consideration, the status of that company may be regarded as res adjudicata.

The ultimate question considered by the supreme court of the United States was as to whether or not the act of congress above quoted had the effect of depriving the pipe line companies of their private property by devoting it to a public use without due process of law, it being agreed by the court, and especially pointed out by the chief justice, who concurred in a separate opinion, that to make a purely private enterprise by legislative fiat subject to public use as a common carrier would be subversive of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. On this point the majority of the court, through Mr. Justice Holmes, used the following language:

> "The control of congress over commerce among the states cannot be made a means of exercising powers not intrusted to it by the constitution, but it may require those who are common carriers in substance to become so in form. So far as the statute contemplates future pipe lines and prescribes the conditions upon which they may be established there can be no doubt that it is valid. So the objection is narrowed to the fact that it applies to lines already engaged in transportation. But, as we already have intimated, those lines that we are considering are common carriers now in everything but form. They carry everybody's oil to a market, although they compel outsiders to sell it before taking it into their pipes. The answer to their objection is not that they may give up the business, but that, as applied to them, the statute practically means no more than they must give up requiring a sale to themselves before carrying the oil that they now receive. The whole case is that the appellees, if they carry, must do it in a way that they do not like. There is no taking and it does not become necessary to consider how far congress could subject them to pecuniary loss without compensation in order to accomplish the end in view. Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 323, 57 L. Ed. 523, 527, 43 L. R. A. (N. S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 357, 47 L. Ed. 492, 501, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561."

The chief justice, especially concurring and treating of the case of Uncle Sam Oil Company, which had been held by the majority of the court to be not subject to the provisions of the act for reasons growing out of the interpretation thereof, stated that he was unable to agree that the act on its face did not apply to that company, and then went on to use the following language:

> "But despite this I think the company is not embraced by the statute because it would be impossible to make the statute applicable to it without violating the due process clause of the 5th amendment, since to apply it would necessarily amount to a taking of the property of the company without compensation. It is shown beyond question that the company buys no oil, and by the methods which have been mentioned simply carries its own product to its own refinery; in other words, it is engaged in a purely private business. Under these conditions in my opinion there is no power under the constitution without the exercise of the right of eminent domain to convert without its consent the private business of the company into a public one.
> "Of course this view has no application to the other companies which the court holds are subject to the act, because as pointed out, the principal ones were chartered as common carriers, and they all, either directly or as a necessary result of their association, were engaged in buying oil and > shipping it through their pipes; in other words, were doing in reality a common carrier business, disguised, it may be, in form, but not changed in substance."

Mr. Justice McKenna, who dissented, based his entire opinion upon the opposite view of the same fundamental question.

It would seem, therefore, that the supreme court of the United States has held, as to The Tide-Water Pipe Company, that it is a "common carrier in substance," so that it may be compelled to become a common carrier "in form."

In reaching this conclusion the court considered, as the statement of facts and the briefs abundantly show, the fact that the company made no transportation charge as such and did not hold itself out as a common carrier, but purchased oil at one end of its line and sold it at the other. It also considered the close relation of The Tide-Water Pipe Company to The Tide-Water Oil Company and other affiliated companies—in fact all the facts which are before me in the affidavit of Mr. Benson.

I think there can be no question that a "common carrier in substance" is a "public utility" within any meaning that may be given to that term; and especially that a pipe line company which is so conducting its business as to be a "common carrier in substance" satisfies the broad definition of such a company in section 5416 of the General Code.

Another reason suggests itself to me in this connection:

Sections 10128 to 10134, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, provide that pipe line companies, among other companies therein named, may appropriate private property and, with the consent of the proper authorities, use public highways and lands for the purpose of laying pipes. While these sections have not been judicially interpreted in this particular, it seems that they may apply as well to companies organized under the laws of another state for the proper purpose as to domestic corporations—at least the regulatory provisions of the statute apply to all companies—and I am satisfied that a limited partnership or association organized under the laws of Pennsylvania is a "company" within the meaning of such regulatory provisions of the statute.

Section 10132 of the General Code provides specifically as follows:

> "Sec. 10132. Such company or companies, for the purpose of transporting natural gas, oils, water and electricity shall be a common carrier, and subject to all the duties and liabilities of such carriers under the laws of this state."

This statute is of purport similar to that of the federal statute recently passed upon by the supreme court of the United States. It may be true that The Tide-Water Pipe Company has never availed itself of the privilege of exercising the right of eminent domain. As much is to be inferred from the language of Mr. Justice McKenna in his dissenting opinion, at page 570, and from the abstract of the brief of counsel for The Tide-Water Pipe Company in the case above cited. But this would be immaterial if it were a fact, as it is if the Ohio statute is decided to be held applicable to foreign companies of the character of The Tide-Water Pipe Company, that that company could at any time exercise special rights and privileges afforded by the Ohio law. The Ohio statutes do not extend the right of eminent domain to such pipe line companies as hold themselves out to be common carriers, but the privilege is extended to all companies which are organized for the purpose of transporting petroleum; then, following a policy similar to that of the federal statutes, the statute makes all such companies common carriers. In other words, mere organization for the purpose of transporting oil is sufficient to vest the right in the company and impose upon it the obligation, the very purpose itself being, for reasons pointed out in the opinion of the supreme court of the United States, a quasi public one, without regard to the intent of the organizers of the company.

For these additional reasons, then, I concur in my predecessor's conclusion, and I am of the opinion that none of the special facts stated in the affidavit are sufficient to divest The Tide-Water Pipe Company of the character of a "public utility" within the meaning of the statutes which I have quoted.

Another question which asserts itself grows out of the close affiliations of the three companies above named, from which it follows that The Tide-Water Pipe Company may be regarded merely as an adjunct of The Tide-Water Oil Company. I do not find this fact to be material. In the very nature of the case the pipe line can not serve many refineries, and I imagine that in most instances business convenience and physical necessity dictate that practically the entire carrying capacity of a certain pipe line may be absorbed by a single refinery, or a small group of refineries. This very fact constitutes an additional reason for discounting the importance of considering whether or not a given company is actually holding itself out as a common carrier; for, being a carrier from one point to another, it could serve in that capacity only such producers as might conveniently run oil into its pipes and only such refiners as might be located conveniently to the termini thereof and these, especially the latter, being necessarily few in number, the natural tendency would in the business of any pipe line company be at all times toward taking on the character of a purely private enterprise at both ends of the line.

Nor would the fact that The Tide-Water Oil Company controls practically all of the stock of The Tide-Water Pipe Company and the Associated Producers Company be material.

While the substance and not the form must govern the application of rules of law, it must not be forgotten that neither the Associated Producers Company nor The Tide-Water Oil Company has any standing in Ohio under statutes above cited as a pipe line company. The promoters and individual owners of all three companies have thus separated their interests, and the separation is more than formal. They must have had some purpose in separately organizing The Tide-Water Pipe Company, and it is not difficult to conjecture what that purpose was. Undoubtedly they contemplated the exercise of the right of eminent domain should occasion require, whether such right has ever been exercised in any state or not. Moreover, some business at least is done with private individuals, from whom oil is purchased in the producing field; so that it is clear that the entire business activities of the three companies are not confined to their mutual dealings.

In this connection the case of State v. Factory Power Company, 16 N. P. (N. S.) 545, must be distinguished. The commission is familiar with the facts in that case. It is sufficient to state of them that they constitute a peculiar case, and that no general rule whatever is to be drawn from the decision. Certainly the decision could upon no theory be applied to the present case because The Tide-Water Pipe Company deals, as above stated, not only with the Associated Producers Company and The Tide-Water Oil Company, but also with individual producers from whom it purchases oil in the field.

I may add that whatever so-called mercantile activities the company may be said to have, these are shown by the affidavit to be subordinate in every respect to the discharge of the function of transportation.

It is my opinion, therefore, that The Tide-Water Pipe Company, Ltd., is a "public utility" within the meaning of the taxation laws of Ohio. Being engaged in Ohio solely in transporting interstate commerce, it is not, of course, subject to excise taxation nor to taxation on its franchise, even if under its peculiar form of organization it would be otherwise subject to the latter. It is, however, in my opinion subject to the requirement that it report its property holdings to the tax commission for assessment by the commission on the unit basis in accordance with the provisions of section 5424, of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNCIL OF CITY OR VILLAGE—HAS POWER TO LIMIT WEIGHT OF HEAVY TRAFFIC OVER CERTAIN STREETS, PROVIDING THERE ARE OTHER WAYS TO MAKE SUCH TRAFFIC REASONABLY CONVENIENT.

When from the nature of the improvement of a certain streets of a city or village, or for other reasonable cause, it becomes expedient or would promote the safety or convenience of public travel as a whole, the council may provide for the exclusion of heavy traffic over such streets, provided there remain other ways open to such traffic reasonably sufficient and convenient for its use.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 29, 1915, you requested my written opinion, as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Has council of a village (or city) the power to limit the weight of vehicle traffic passing over certain streets, or parts thereof? Certain villages desire to keep the enormously heavy trucks off of certain streets, and desire to know whether the power and authority is vested in council to control same."

Section 3616, G. C., provides:

> "All municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

Among the enumeration of powers of municipal corporations, section 3632, G. C., provides:

> "To regulate the use of carts, drays, wagons, hackney coaches, omnibuses, automobiles, and every description of carriages kept for hire or livery stable purposes; to license and regulate the use of the streets by persons who use vehicles, or solicit or transact business thereon; to prevent and punish fast driving or riding of animals, or fast driving or propelling of vehicles through the public highways; to regulate the transportation of articles through such highways and to prevent injury to such highways from overloaded vehicles, and to regulate the speed of interurban, traction and street railway cars within the corporation.

Section 3635, G. C., provides:

"To prescribe the width of the tires of wagons, carts, drays and other vehicles used in the transportation of persons from one part of the corporation to another, or in the transportation of coal, wood, stone, lumber, iron or other articles in the corporation, and establish stands for hackney coaches, cabs or omnibuses, enforce the observance and use thereof, and fix the rates and prices for the transportation of persons and property in such coaches or other vehicles from one part of the corporation to another."

The municipality in which a public way is located has been vested by the legislature with the supervision and control of such ways for public use, and is charged with the responsibility of keeping them in repair and reasonably suitable and sufficient for use by the public for purposes of travel.

It is within the authority of the council of a municipality to provide such reasonable regulations on the use of improved streets as are necessary to preserve the improvements and prevent their destruction by the conveyance thereon of over-loaded vehicles, or those which from the mode of their use are destructive of such improvements.

An apt statement of this principle is found in the case of Commonwealth v. Mulhall, 162 Mass, 496, where the court said:

"An ordinance of the city of Boston which provides 'no person shall carry or cause to be carried, in a vehicle in any street, a load the weight whereof exceeds three tons, unless such load consists of an article which cannot be divided,' is reasonable, constitutional and valid.

"We cannot say that the mayor and aldermen were in error in deciding that the use of heavily loaded vehicles is a matter affecting the public in the use of streets, which may be regulated under the statute, nor can we say that the ordinance is anything more than a regulation upon the necessity of which their judgement is final."

In the exercise of this power the council may classify the streets of a city or village with reference to the character of construction or material used, or having regard to the safety and convenience of public traffic, and may prescribe regulations or restrictions on the use of the streets for particular kinds of traffic, based upon said classification.

Travelers are entitled to a reasonably safe, convenient and practicable opportunity for travel and passage over the public ways, but when the use of certain streets for heavy traffic is inconsistent with their safe and convenient use for the purpose of other classes of traffic, or is more than ordinarily destructive of the character of the improvement thereon, while other ways suitable to the uses of such heavy traffic afford a reasonably convenient and sufficient opportunity for its passage, a regulation restricting such heavy traffic to the ways suitable to its use, tends to conserve the right of all and preserve the public improvements, and is the proper exercise of the authority granted to the municipality.

While I do not find that the exact question which you present has been passed upon by the courts of this state, yet an examination of the authorities of other states indicates that reasonable regulations of the use of streets by municipalities has generally been upheld by the courts.

In the case of State of Maine v. John Boardman, reported in 46 L. R., 750, the court said:

> "An ordinance restricting heavily loaded vehicles to a specified portion of the street is not reasonable, unless that portion is reasonably suited to the purpose, and cannot be enforced when that part of the street is absolutely impassable. * * *
> "Such a by-law does not deprive a person of any right; it simply regulates the exercise of it, and it can be readily seen that such a regulation may afford to all travelers much better opportunities for travel than they could otherwise enjoy.
> "In Com. v. Stodder, 48 Amer. Dec., 679, the court say: 'We cannot doubt that a by-law, reasonably regulating the use of the public streets of a city as to carriages of an unusually large size, or as to those which from the mode of using them would greatly incommode, if not endanger, those having occasion to use such public streets, would be valid and legal; and that such regulations might prescribe certain streets as route of travel for such vehicles and provide for their exclusion from certain other streets.'"

In the case of Cicero Lumber Co. v. Town of Cicero, 176 Ill., page 9, the court said:

> "Limiting the use of a street to a pleasure drive-way under authority of a general act of the legislature, is not a violation by the municiaplity of the trust upon which it holds such street for the public, as the legislature has full control of public streets, subject only to the constitutional restrictions and the private rights of property owners.
> "The property rights of parties in public streets, which the legislature must respect, are ordinarily such rights and easements as they have by virtue of their being owners of abutting property, and do not include the right to use every kind of vehicle thereon."

In People v. Wilson, 16 N. Y., Supp. 583, in discussing a similar question, the court said:

> "An ordinance of the city of Kingston prohibits any person from drawing or transporting a load or burden weighing from two and one-half to five tons over any macadamized, paved or top-dressed street of the city, in any vehicle having a tire less than four inches wide on its wheels. The power to make such an ordinance is not expressly conferred. The specific grant of powers for the making, grading and repairing streets, and for their care and superintendence, coupled with the power to make such ordinance for the purpose of executing such powers, vests in the common council the power to make such ordinances as shall be reasonable for the purpose. It is reasonable to protect paved streets from being crushed and ruined by loads of enormous weight, borne upon vehicles with wheels of narrow tires, which cut through the pavement, when a broader tire will bear the load without causing such injury. It is reasonable that the carrier of heavy loads should so exercise his own rights as not injuriously to affect those of others.

"Such an ordinance was upheld in People v. James, 16 Hun., 426, and we concur in the views there expressed upon the subject."

I am of the opinion that an ordinance which imposes restrictions upon the use of certain streets for purposes of heavy traffic, when from the nature of the improvement of such street, or the consequences of their use for such traffic, grounds exist for its application to such streets which do not exist as to other streets of the corporation of a different construction, capacity or location, is not, by reason of such limited application, void as discriminatory or unreasonable.

I advise, therefore, that when from the nature of the improvement of certain streets of a city or village, or for other reasonable cause, it becomes expedient, or would tend to promote the safety, or convenience of public travel as a whole, the council may provide by ordinance for the exclusion of heavy traffic from such streets, provided there remain other ways open to such traffic reasonably sufficient and convenient for its use.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SIGNATURES UPON A REFERENDUM PETITION OF A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION MAY NOT BE WITHDRAWN THEREFROM NOR ADDITIONAL SIGNATURES THERETO FILED AFTER SUCH PETITION HAS BEEN CERTIFIED TO DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS —SIGNATURES CANNOT BE WITHDRAWN NOR ADDITIONAL SIGNATURES BE ADDED AFTER EXPIRATION OF THIRTY DAYS SUBSEQUENT TO FILING.

Signatures upon a petition for the referendum of a municipal ordinance or measure may not be withdrawn therefrom nor additional signatures thereto filed after such petition has been certified to the deputy state supervisors of elections nor after the expiration of thirty days subsequent to the filing of such ordinance or measure with the mayor of the city or to the passage thereof by the village council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 3, 1915, as follows:

> "Under section 4227 of the General Code of Ohio, when an ordinance has been passed by the council of a city for a bond issue and the electors have filed a referendum petition with the city auditor, asking for a referendum vote on said ordinance, can some of the petitioners who have signed the referendum petition have their names stricken from said petition?
> "If, in your opinion, such petitioners can legally withdraw their signatures to said petition so as to reduce the number of signatures remaining on the petition to less than the requisite number required to make the petition legal, can a sufficient number of new petitioners be filed with the city auditor to make the petition sufficient to require an election on the aforesaid question?"

Your question refers only to referendum petitions, and to that this opinion is confined.

Section 4227-2, as amended in 104 O. L., 239, applies more particularly to the questions above submitted than does section 4227.

Section 4227-2, 104 O. L., 239, provides as follows:

> "Any ordinance, or other measure passed by the council of any municipal corporation shall be subject to the referendum except as hereinafter provided. No ordinance or other measure shall go into effect until thirty days after it shall have been filed with the mayor of a city or passed by the council in a village, except as hereinafter provided.
> "When a petition signed by ten per cent. of the electors of any municipal corporation shall have been filed with the city auditor or village clerk in such municipal corporation, within thirty days after any ordinance or other measure shall have been filed with the mayor, or passed by the council of a village, ordering that such ordinance or measure be submitted to the electors of such municipal corporation for their approval or rejection, such city auditor or village clerk shall, after ten days, certify the petition to the board of deputy supervisors of elections of the county wherein such municipality is situated and said board shall cause to be submitted to the electors of such municipal corporation for their approval or rejection, such ordinance or measure at the next succeeding regular or general election, in any year, occurring subsequent to forty days after the filing of such petition.

"No such ordinance or measure shall go into effect until approved by the majority of those voting upon the same. Nothing in this act shall prevent a municipality after the passage of any ordinance, or other measure, from proceeding at once, to give any notice, or make any publication, required by such ordinance or other measure."

From the above statutory provisions it will be readily observed that the petition therein referred to in no case has any operative force until either the period of ten days since the filing of the same has elapsed, or the period of thirty days after the ordinance shall have been filed with the mayor of a city, or have been passed by a council of a village, has elapsed.

If a petition containing the requisite number of valid signatures remains on file with the auditor of a city or clerk of a village, for the period of ten days prior to the expiration of the thirty-day period subsequent to the passage or filing of such ordinance, it then, upon the certification to the proper election officers, has the operative force and effect of conferring upon such election officer authority for holding an election at which the question of approval or rejection of such ordinance or measure is submitted to a vote of the electors of a municipality.

The legal force of such petition has then become operative and affected a public right; that is to say, has created, under the law, right in the public to have the question so submitted to a vote and set in operation the machinery provided therefor. If, on the other hand, a petition fulfilling all the requirements of the law is on file with the proper officer at the expiration of the thirty days after the ordinance shall have been filed with the mayor of a city or has been passed by the council of a village, its legal force becomes operative and suspends the going into effect of the ordinance or other measure until the same shall have been approved by a majority of those voting thereon, thereby affecting the public interest giving rise to the public right to have such measure or ordinance submitted to a vote.

Attention is called to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, upon the question submitted by you, rendered to Hon. William A. Hunt, solicitor of Salineville, Ohio, under date of April 19, 1913, found on page 1632 of the report of the attorney general for the year 1913, which holds:

"It is well settled that names may be withdrawn from a petition at any time before jurisdiction is acquired thereover by the board or officer entitled to exercise the same.

"When a petition for the referendum on a municipal ordinance, therefore, has been filed with the clerk of the village, the names may be withdrawn therefrom at any time prior to the certification of such petition to the board of elections by said clerk."

This opinion is based upon the decisions of the courts of this state, as follows:

Hayes vs. Jones, 27 O. S., 218;
Duttin vs. Village, 42 O. S., 215;
Cole vs. City of Columbus, 2 N. P. (n. s.) 563;

Haynes vs. Hillsboro, 3 N. P. (n. s.) 17;
Borwood vs. Board of Elections, 13 C. C. (n. s.) 465; and is supported by the case of

State ex rel. Moore vs. City of Seattle, 109 Pac. Rep. 309.

It is equally well settled by the above cases that after an authority conferred by such petition is once exercised or such petition operates to effect a public right or interest, names may not be withdrawn therefrom.

I am, therefore, of opinion that names may not be withdrawn from a petition for the referendum of a municipal ordinance after the certification thereof within the thirty day period for the reason that by such certification the authority by the petition conferred has been exercised and given rise to the public right to have such ordinance submitted to a vote of the people, nor may names be withdrawn from such referendum petition after the expiration of the thirty day period notwithstanding that it has not been so certified for the reason that the petition has then operated to suspend the taking effect of the ordinance, thereby effecting a public right and may not thereafter be revoked or modified.

In other words, persons who have signed such referendum petition may withdraw their names therefrom only prior to the certification of the petition and prior to the expiration of the thirty day period, and that no withdrawal may be made after either the certification or the lapse of the thirty day period.

As to your second question, it is held in State ex rel. vs. Graves, 90 O. S., 311, O. L. B., March 22, 1915, in effect that the withdrawal of names would not invalidate the signatures not so withdrawn.

It will be remembered that petitions may be presented in separate parts so long as each part is in compliance with all the requirements relative thereto. So that after the withdrawal of names from a valid petition, additional parts of such petition, if in all respects in compliance with the requirements of the law, might be filed within the thirty day period. If after the filing of such additional parts within the thirty day period, there is then on file with the clerk or auditor, in regular form a sufficient number of valid signatures, including those found on the part or parts of such petition theretofore filed and excluding signatures theretofore withdrawn, a court would look to the substance rather than the form, in my opinion, and in view that the intent and purpose of the law under such circumstances would be fully met, would hold such petition to be sufficient and valid. That is to say, there would then be that expression of a desire of electors for holding the proposed election, which in contemplation of the statutory provisions is necessary to confer upon the election officers authority for conducting such election when properly certified to them, and it would then be the duty of such auditor or clerk, upon the expiration of ten days from the filing of such additional parts as to bring the sum total of valid signatures within the requirement of the law, to certify the same to the proper election officers, and if such petition were on file with such officer at the expiration of the thirty day period, it would then operate to suspend the going into effect of such ordinance or measure.

I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that additional signatures may not be filed after the withdrawal of signatures from the original petition, except within the thirty day period after the filing of such ordinance with the mayor or its passage by the village council and prior to the certification of such petition by the city auditor or village clerk.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—MEMBERS SHOULD BE PAID COMPENSATION ONLY FOR DAYS ON WHICH BOARD IS ACTUALLY IN SESSION FOR OFFICIAL BUSINESS.

Members of the state dental board may be paid compensation only for the days on which such board is actually in session for the transaction of the business and performance of the official duties of such board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1915.

The Ohio State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 20, 1915, as follows:

> "The state dental board has asked me to send you this communication. The board up until the time ex-Attorney General Hogan went into office, received pay for one day when they were traveling. Dr. Smith, of Marietta, is compelled to always lose two days' time when the board is in session, and it is quite frequent that the board has a one day session, and according to the ex-attorney general's ruling, he can draw compensation for but one day, when it used to be that he was allowed for two days. It looks like an injustice to ask the members to lose three days' time from their office for one day's pay. You will find ex-Attorney General Denman ruled that the board should be allowed one day for traveling. Kindly give us your opinion as soon as possible on the matter."

I am unable to find any reported opinion of my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, upon the question submitted by you.

In an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. E. M. Fullington, auditor of state, under date of September 5, 1912, and found at page 124 of the report of the attorney general for that year, it is held:

> "Under section 1317 G. C., the members of the state dental board are entitled to ten dollars for 'each day actually employed in the discharge of his official duties and his necessary expenses incurred,' and no additional payment can be allowed for the days required to come to and return from the place where the meetings of the board are held."

Section 1317 G. C., provides for the compensation of members of the state dental board as follows:

> "Each member of the state dental board shall receive ten dollars for each day actually employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary expenses incurred. The secretary shall receive an annual salary to be fixed by the board, and his necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of his official duties. The compensation and expenses of the secretary and members and the expenses of the board, shall be paid from moneys received under this chapter, upon approval of the president and secretary."

It will be observed that the legislature has carefully restricted the compensation of members of the state dental board to $10.00 for each day "actually employed in the discharge of his official duties."

An examination of the statutes will fail to disclose any official duty imposed upon the individual members of the board, but on the contrary it clearly appears that every duty provided by law must be discharged by the entire board, so that no member of the state dental board may be engaged in the discharge of his official duties except during the time the board is actually in session.

I am, therefore, constrained to concur in the opinion of my predecessor, and therefore hold that members of the state dental board may not receive compensation for the time consumed in going to and from the place or places at which sessions of the board are held.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—INSURANCE COMPANY WHICH SEEKS TO COMBINE OBJECTS THAT MAY NOT BE PURSUED BY A SINGLE CORPORATION SUCH AS INSURANCE AGAINST LOSS BY FIRE AND AGAINST LOSS BY THEFT OF AUTOMOBILES—SUCH INCORPORATION DISAPPROVED.

An insurance company seeking incorporation under paragraph two of section 9510, G. C., may not have authority to insure against loss or damage by fire as such nor against loss or damage by theft of automobiles.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return herewith the proposed articles of incorporation of the Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company, without my approval endorsed thereon, for the following reason:

The purpose clause of the articles of incorporation is as follows:

> "Third. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of insuring owners of automobiles against automobile liability, automobile property damage, automobile collision, automobile theft, and damage to assured's automobile by fire.
> "Guaranteeing the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust who may be required to, or do, in their trust capacity, receive, hold, control, disburse public or private monies or property.
> "Also for the purpose of making all other insurance authorized under sections 9510, pgh. 2, 9511, and 9568 of chapter I, subdivision II, division III, title IX of the General Code of Ohio, 1910, and also of purchasing, leasing, holding and disposing of all property, personal and real, which shall be necessary or convenient; and the doing of all those things necessary or incidental to the prosecution of the business of such company and authorized under the laws of the state of Ohio."

The second clause of section 9510 of the General Code is as follows:

"(2) Make insurance on the health of individuals and against personal injury, disablement or death, resulting from traveling or general accidents by land and water; make insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property from cause other than fire or lightning; guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, who are required to, or, in their trust capacity do receive, hold, control, disburse public or private moneys or property; guarantee the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings required, or permitted in all actions or proceedings, or by law allowed; make insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes or persons other than employes and to indemnify persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations. * * *"

Section 9511 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Sec. 9511. No company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the above four mentioned purposes, and no company organized for either one of such purposes shall issue policies of insurance of any other. But companies organized under subdivision two of the preceding section, which do the business of guaranteeing the fidelity of persons, holding places of public or private trust, who are required to or in their trust capacity do receive, hold, control, disburse public or private property, and guaranteeing the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and executing and guaranteeing bonds and undertakings required or permitted in actions, proceedings or by law allowed, may indemnify bank depositors against loss by reason of bank suspension and failure."

The rule of the first sentence of section 9511 is further relaxed by the specific provision of section 9556 of the General Code, as follows:

"Sec. 9556. All companies organized or admitted for the purpose of insuring against loss or damage by fire, may insure against loss or damage by water, caused by the breakage or leakage of sprinklers, pumps, tanks, water pipes and fixtures connected therewith, and by lightning, explosions from gas, dynamite, gunpowder and other like explosions, and tornadoes and may also insure against loss by the theft of automobiles and accessories, and against damage thereto from this cause."

The purpose of insuring against loss or damage by fire is that contemplated by the first clause of section 9510 of the General Code.

From the express provisions of these sections it follows that under the second clause of section 9510, General Code, property may not be insured against loss or damage by fire, nor against loss by theft.

In short, the purpose clause of the enclosed articles of incorporation attempts to combine objects that may not be pursued by a single corporation organized under the laws of Ohio.

A fire insurance company may insure against loss or damage to automobiles by fire, water, lightning, certain explosions and tornadoes and by theft of automobiles and accessories; but such a company may not guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust or indemnify persons other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting to other persons. Conversely, a company having the power to insure against loss or damage resulting from accident to property, to guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust and to indemnify persons other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury, etc., may not insure against damage by fire as such, nor against loss or damage by theft.

For the foregoing reasons, I am unable to approve the articles of incorporation of the Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company.

I return herewith the check of the Lake Shore Banking and Trust Company in the amount of $50.00, payable to your order.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION — WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO SELL BROKEN AND WORN OUT TOOLS AND EQUIPMENT OF THE DEPARTMENT.

There is no authorization in the statutes for the sale by the state highway commissioner of broken and worn out tools and equipment belonging to the highway department. Such tools and equipment should be stored until such time as the legislature authorizes the sale of the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 8, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "We have a number of requests from our superintendents and foremen asking for authority to dispose of broken and worn out tools and equipment which have accumulated with the different outfits. The moving of some of this useless equipment has become quite a burden to the different construction gangs.
> "While this equipment is of no use to the state, we believe that some amount can be realized from its sale.
> "We are advised of no law permitting the department to sell or dispose of this equipment in any way.
> "In view of this situation, will you be kind enough to advise us just what action can be taken by the department for the disposition of these broken and worn out tools, etc."

I find no authorization in the statutes for the sale by the state highway commissioner of broken and worn out tools and equipment belonging to the highway department. The only suggestion, therefore, that I can make in the matter is that such tools and equipment be stored until such time as the legislature authorizes the sale of the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ASSESSMENTS—COSTS AND EXPENSE OF IMPROVING A HIGHWAY WHERE RAILROAD COMPANY OWNS A STRIP OF LAND WHICH ABUTS ON AN INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY—HOW ASSESSMENTS SHOULD BE MADE WHEN FEE TO SAID LAND IS AND IS NOT IN SAID RAILROAD COMPANY.

If a railroad company owns in fee a strip of land over which its railroad is operated and which abuts on an inter-county highway which is being improved, both the said strip of land and the land lying immediately back of said strip, may be assessed for part of the cost and expense of said improvement, under authority of section 1209, G. C., and in the manner provided by section 1208, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 456.

If the fee to said land is not in said railroad company, said strip of land should be assessed according to the benefits accruing to the owner thereof, the same as any other land abutting on said improvement, and the land lying immediately back of said strip is not subject to an assessment for said improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1915.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 7, 1915, which is, in part, as follows:

> "Referring to section 1208, 1913 Year Book, 103 Ohio Laws, at page 457, this part of the section bothers me:
> " 'Township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located.'
> "In our county of Richland we have a road running parallel with the Erie R. R. for a distance of nearly a half mile. The south line of the roadway is the north line of the right-of-way of said railroad company. According to this section only the owners of abutting property can be taxed. And part of this distance there is a piece about 4 rods wide probably 40 rods long belonging to the railroad company that is farmed or merely leased to some of their employes; the balance there is no farm land. The question arises, can the railroad company be assessed anything under this section for the payment of the new pike being built, or can we go across the railroad and assess those whose lands abut on the other side of the railroad track?
> "Second. There is one piece of land abutting on this property 20 rods wide at the point of abutment in the shape of a triangle, which contains about 150 acres. There is another piece 80 rods wide which contains about 30 acres. Should the assessment be made according to the rod frontage or the actual benefits taking into consideration the shape of the land? My judgment is it should be actual benefits regardless of the number of rod frontage. What is your judgment? Would like to know as soon as convenient to your department."

Section 1208, General Code, as amended 103 O. L. 456, relates to the apportionment of a part of the cost and expense of improving an inter-county highway, and provides as follows:

"Except as otherwise provided, one-fourth of the cost and expense of such improvement, except the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, shall be apportioned to the township or townships in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned, three-fifths shall be a charge upon the whole township or townships and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to the person affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expense of establishing township ditches. If the improvement lies in two or more townships, the amount to be paid by each shall be apportioned according to the number of lineal feet of the improvement lying in each township."

Section 1209, General Code, provides:

"If a railway corporation owns in fee a strip of land by the side of the highway to be improved on which it operates a steam or electric railroad, the land lying immediately back of such strip shall be regarded and treated as abutting upon such highway for all purposes of abutting ownership, and both such strip and the land lying immediately back thereof shall be assessed as provided in the preceding section."

The answer to your first question depends on the ownership of the strip of land over which the Erie railroad is operated and which abuts on the highway now being improved. If the railroad company owns in fee the said strip of land, then, under the provision of section 1209, G. C., both the said strip of land and the land south of and abutting on said strip, should be assessed for a part of the cost and expense of said improvement in the manner provided by section 1208, G. C., as amended. If, on the other hand, the fee to said strip of land is not owned by said railroad company, the provisions of section 1209, G. C., are not applicable to your question, and said strip of land should be assessed according to the benefits accruing to the owner thereof the same as any other land abutting on said improvement, and the land south of and abutting on said strip of land would not be subject to an assessment for said improvement.

Assuming that the fee to the strip of land over which said Erie railroad is operated is in the railroad company owning said railroad, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that under the provision of section 1208, G. C., as amended, the tracts of land, described in your letter and abutting on said strip of land, should be assessed for a part of the cost and expense of said improvement according to the benefits accruing to the owners of said lands and not according to foot frontage.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MAPS OF ELECTION PRECINCTS FURNISHED ONLY IN REGISTRATION CITIES—COST PAID FROM CITY TREASURY.

Maps of election precincts may be furnished and provided only in registration cities and the cost and necessary expense thereof is required to be paid from the treasury of such city upon vouchers of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections certified by its chief deputy and clerk on the warrant of the city auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 14, 1915, as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:
> "Are boards of deputy state supervisors of elections authorized to have maps made at the expense of the county?
> "Is the mention of maps as made in sections 4876 and 4878, General Code, only authorized to be used in registration cities, or are these sections broad enough to cover this question as to counties generally?"

The sections of the statutes referred to by you are as follows:

> "Section 4876. Subject to the control of the board, the clerk shall keep a full and true record of the proceedings of the board, file and preserve in its office all orders, rules and regulations pertaining to the administration of registration and elections, prepare and furnish, under the orders of the board, the registers, lists, books, maps, forms, oaths, certificates, instructions and blanks for the use and guidance of registrars, judges and clerks of elections and the board of canvassers; provide for timely furnishing of such officers therewith, and with the necessary supplies provided for them; to receive and keep close custody of the registrars and copies returned to such office, as herein provided, of records, papers and certificates of every kind relating to the office or administration of the board. He shall have the care of the ballot boxes while deposited at the office of the board, and perform such other or further duties pertaining to such office and affairs as are prescribed by the board.
> "Section 4878. The board of deputy state supervisors shall divide, define and proclaim the election precincts of such city and fix the boundaries thereof in the manner provided by law, and provide for furnishing to each registrar of electors and judges of elections a map and pertinent description of such divisions and boundaries and of changes which, from time to time, are made by them."

It will be observed that sections 4876, G. C., and 4878, G. C., were enacted in their present form prior to the codification of the statutory law of the state, April 23, 1904, 97 O. L., 193-194, in which act was first created in every county which contained a city wherein general registration of electors was required, a board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, and conferred upon the same the powers theretofore exercised by the boards of deputy state supervisors of elections and city boards of elections in such counties; then follows in the same section the provisions now found in section 4876, G. C. In the succeeding section of the same act is found the provisions now incorporated in section 4878, G. C., stated thus:

> "They shall divide, define and proclaim the election precincts of such city, authorized in section two thousand nine hundred and twenty-six, and the boundaries thereof, and provide for furnishing to each registrar of electors and judges of elections a map and pertinent description of such divisions and boundaries, and of any changes which from time to time are made by them."

Section 2926, as above mentioned, referred only to cities in which registration was required. From the above it appears quite clear that the authority and requirement for maps is limited to registration cities. It will be noted that under section 4876, G. C., the clerk of the board is required to "prepare and furnish, under the orders of such board, all the registers, lists, books, maps, forms," etc., while under section 4878, G. C., the board is required to "provide for furnishing to each registrar of electors and judges of elections a map and pertinent description of such divisions and boundaries and of changes which, from time to time, are made by them."

Although the clerk is required to "prepare and furnish" under the orders of the board, registers, books and lists, it is not believed that this may reasonably be construed to mean that the clerk should actually make such books and registers, nor can it be maintained that the phrase "prepare and furnish" would have a different application to maps than to books and registers in the light of the provisions of section 4878, G. C., which require the board to "provide for furnishing" such maps.

The provisions of section 2926-d of the act of April 23, 1904, supra, were incorporated in section 4946, G. C., and were amended in 103 O. L., 545, to read as follows:

> "The additional compensation of members of the board of deputy state supervisors and of its clerk in such city hereinbefore specified, the lawful compensation of all registrars of electors in such city, the necessary cost of the registers, books, blanks, forms, stationery and supplies provided by the board for the purposes herein authorized, including poll books for special elections, and the cost of the rent, furnishing and supplies for rooms hired by the board for its offices and as places for registration of electors and the holding of elections in such city shall be paid by such city from its general fund. Such expenses shall be paid by the treasurer of such city upon vouchers of the boards, certified by its chief deputy and clerk, and the warrant of the city auditor. Each such voucher shall specify the actual services rendered, the items of supplies furnished and the price or rates charged in detail."

While the term "maps" is not found in this section, its provisions as to registers, books, blanks, forms and other supplies preclude any idea that under section 4876, G. C., the clerk is required to prepare and furnish these articles and supplies without expense to the board. From the above it quite clearly follows, therefore, that the making of necessary and proper maps in registration cities is a proper item of expense to be incurred by the board to be paid either under authority of section 4821 or 5052, G. C., or under section 4946, G. C., above quoted.

Section 4821, G. C., provides that all necessary expenses of the board of deputy state supervisors shall be paid from the county treasury as other county expenses and section 5052, G. C., provides as follows:

> "All expenses of printing and distributing ballots, cards of explanation to officers of the election and voters, blanks, and other proper and necessary expenses of any general or special election, including compensation of precinct election officers, shall be paid from the county treasury, as other county expenses."

We have seen, however, that these maps are authorized and required only in registration cities and for use in the first instance or primarily in the registration of electors in the precincts thereof. The expense of such maps are then more properly incident to registration of electors than to the general supervision of elections or to the furnishing of ballots and supplies for general election purposes.

To answer your questions specifically, I am, therefore, of opinion that the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, are authorized to furnish maps only in registration cities and that the expense thereby incurred should be paid from the city treasury in accordance with the provisions of section 4946, G. C., above quoted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

"URGENT NECESSITY"—CONSTRUCTION OF ITS MEANING IN SECTION 7623, G. C.—FAILURE OF BOARD OF EDUCATION TO COMPLY WITH REQUIREMENTS OF THIS SECTION RENDERS CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A SCHOOL BUILDING VOID.

If the facts in the particular case do not justify a finding of "urgent necessity" by the board of education of a school district within the meaning of section 7623, G. C., a failure on the part of said board to comply with the requirements of said section renders the contract for the construction or repair of a school building void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 25, 1915.

HON. A. M. HENDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 11, 1915, which is as follows:

> "The board of education of Coitsville township, Mahoning county, has requested me to write you stating the following facts and submitting the following inquiry:
> "Along in the early spring of this year, the board advertised for bids for the furnishing of labor and material and construction of a school house in Coitsville township. A number of bids were submitted and the board attempted to take action upon the bids and passed a resolution to let the contract to one they deemed to be the lowest and best bidder, but upon examination of the various bids I find that the bid of the bidder to whom the contract was attempted by the board to be let was not either in form or in substance a proper and legal bid. The certified checks deposited with the various bids having been returned, and it being necessary to readvertise for bids, causing a delay of at least thirty days, I have been requested to write you for advice as to whether or not this contract could be let as being one of 'urgent necessity' in view of the fact that if it is necessary to readvertise and secure further bidding, the building cannot be constructed in time for occupancy at the beginning of the September term of this year. The schools of this township are very much overcrowded and there is considerable doubt as to just what disposition to make of the students if the school house in question cannot be completed by the middle of September or the beginning of the fall term.

"My opinion in the matter is that this is not a case of 'urgent necessity' particularly in view of the action already taken in reference to the contract, but I am writing you for this opinion at the request of the board."

Section 7623, G. C., provides in part as follows:

"When a board of education determines to build, repair, enlarge or furnish a school house or school houses, or make any improvement or repair provided for in this chapter, the cost of which will exceed in city districts, fifteen hundred dollars, and in other districts five hundred dollars, except in cases of urgent necessity, or for the security and protection of school property, it must proceed as follows:

"1. For the period of four weeks, the board shall advertise for bids in some newspaper of general circulation in the district and two such papers, if there are so many. If no newspaper has a general circulation therein, then by posting such advertisement in three public places therein. Such advertisement shall be entered in full by the clerk, on the record of the proceedings of the board," etc.

You inquire whether, in view of the facts stated in your letter, you have a case of "urgent necessity" within the meaning of the above provision of the statute.

In the case of Mueller vs. Board of Education, 11 N. P. (n. s.) 113, the court in its opinion said:

"Urgent necessity is a very strong expression. It means more than convenience and more than ordinary necessity. It is something that requires immediate action. Something that cannot wait. When pleaded as an excuse for failure to comply with any statutory requirement it must be decided by the circumstances of the particular case in which it arises. An illustration of a case which might arise under the statute referred to would be where there is but a single school building of which a number of pupils would be prevented from occupancy for a considerable time, and left without any chance for instruction pending the construction or repair of such building."

While there is no general rule by which the term "urgent necessity" or the term "for the security and protection of school property" as used in the above section, may be defined, and while each case must be determined upon its own facts and conditions, nevertheless, if the facts do not justify a finding of "urgent necessity" or that the "security and protection of school property" is at stake, a failure on the part of a board of education to comply with the requirements of said section would render the contract for the construction or repair of a school building, void.

From your statement of facts it is evident that at the time the board of education of Coitsville township rural school district by resolution determined that for the proper accommodation of the pupils of said district a new building should be constructed, the requirement of the statute that the board advertise for bids for a period of four weeks, could not have been dispensed with on the ground that the letting of the contract was a case of urgent necessity within the meaning of said statute.

In compliance with said requirement of the statute, the said board of education advertised for bids for the construction of said school building, several bids were received and the board attempted to award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder. It now appears that the bid accepted by said board and upon which it attempted to award said contract, is illegal and, the certified checks deposited with the various bids having been returned to the bidder, it now becomes necessary to readvertise for bids, causing a delay of at least thirty days, unless the requirement of the statute may now be waived on the ground that the letting of said contract is now a case of "urgent necessity" within the meaning of the saving provision of said statute.

While you state that if it is necessary to readvertise for bids the said building cannot be constructed in time for occupancy beginning with the fall term, that the schools of said township are overcrowded and that there is considerable doubt as to what disposition to make of the pupils, if the said school building is not completed by said time, it does not appear that any of said pupils of said district will be prevented from attending school because of the failure to complete said building by said time. On the contrary, I understand that said pupils will have practically the same accommodations at the beginning of said term as was had during the previous year and, while the schools of the district may be crowded and the pupils may be inconvenienced for a short time, it will be the duty of the board of education to make such arrangements for the reasonable accommodation of said pupils as will be possible under the circumstances, until such time as the new building will be ready for use.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the circumstances mentioned in your letter do not constitute a case of "urgent necessity" within the meaning of section 7623, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—HAS AUTHORITY TO RENEW WATER LEASES—CONDITIONS IN LEASES ALONG MIAMI AND ERIE CANAL LEASED TO CITY OF CINCINNATI.

The superintendent of public works has authority to renew water leases on that part of the Miami and Erie canal leased to the city of Cincinnati under an act found in 102 O. L., 168, being sections 14188-1 to 14188-8 of the appendix to the General Code. It must be expressly provided in such leases that the same are made subject to the right of the city of Cincinnati to at any time and without previous notice begin the work of improving the leased property, and that at such time as the city has completed the outlet referred to in the first paragraph of section 2 of the act, or at such time as it becomes necessary for the city in the construction of such outlet to shut off the water in the canal, and without any notice, such leases shall terminate, and that the lessees shall not have any right against the city of Cincinnati to have said city construct a conduit to supply water to them, or any right to receive water from such a conduit when constructed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 25, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of April 21, 1915, relating to the renewal of contracts for the use of water from that part of the Miami and Erie canal leased to the city of Cincinnati.

In this communication you call my attention to a letter addressed by you to my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on November 10, 1913, in which letter you called his attention to an act of the general assembly, passed May 15, 1911, and found in 102 O. L., 168, the act providing for leasing a part of the Miami and Erie canal to the city of Cincinnati as a public street or boulevard, and for sewerage and subway purposes. You especially directed attention in that letter to the second paragraph of section 2 of the act in question, which paragraph reads as follows:

> "And such permission shall be granted upon the further condition that said city shall adopt and construct appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal to be abandoned, in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts, in the same quantity and under the same conditions and at the same rate of rental provided for in said contracts, and provided further that during the period of construction of a street or subway or of appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water, as herein provided said city of Cincinnati shall cause no cessation or diminution of the supply of water to the said lessee water users to which they are entitled under their respective contracts or leases with the state of Ohio except in so far as such cessation or diminution of such supply of water may be absolutely necessary."

In your letter to Attorney General Hogan you further stated that the department of public works was placed in the position of supplying water which was being used by parties who had no longer a contract for the same and that it would be a hardship to the said concerns to cut off their supply of water and that it appeared unnecessary so to do since enough water was being carried down the canal to supply them. You further stated in your letter that it seemed clear to you that the city of Cincinnati had no rights or interests in the disposal of the water, since one of the conditions of the lease was that the city should build suitable works for the conveying of the water for the purpose of its use and to enable the state wholly to discharge its obligations; that the city of Cincinnati had thus far done nothing toward carrying out these conditions, and that the state had maintained the banks on that section of the canal and repaired them at various times and was still maintaining said canal at considerable expense. You concluded your letter by observing that the auditor of the state of Ohio required contracts as the basis for collection for water rentals, that several contracts had expired and that the parties still wanted to use the water, and you then inquired as to the right of your department to make provisional contracts which might run for so long a time as the city of Cincinnati did not fulfill the conditions of its contract with the state of Ohio, these contracts to be provisional in a sense that at any time the city of Cincinnati fully complied with all the terms and conditions of the act, the said contracts should cease.

In your communication to me you further call my attention to the fact that on April 27, 1914, my predecessor, in response to your communication to him above referred to, rendered an opinion upon the matter in question, holding, in brief, that the superintendent of public works might renew leases for the use of surplus water along the part of the canal leased to the city of Cincinnati, subject to termination when the city constructed the works provided for in section 2 of the act, authorizing the making of the lease (102 O. L., 168), such leases to be entered into for definite terms, subject to termination as above stated.

You then state that after receipt of this opinion, you began the work of renewing contracts to water users, when the city of Cincinnati, through its legal department, raised objections and that as a result of these objections, you have only made oral agreements which run from month to month, and the water users are paying for the services at the same rate as that stated in the written agreements entered into with the board of public works, which written agreements have now expired. Attached to your communication are two letters directed to you by Hon. Walter M. Schoenle, city solicitor of Cincinnati, which you state you are forwarding to me for the purpose of giving me an idea of the city's contention in this matter. You now request my opinion on the proposition and with it a general statement of your duties and obligations in the matter.

An answer to your question involves a consideration of several of the provisions of the act referred to, 102 O. L., 168, being sections 14188-1 to 14188-8 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio. The first section of the act provides that permission shall be given to the city of Cincinnati, in the manner provided in the act, to enter upon, improve and occupy forever, as a public street or boulevard, and for sewerage, conduit and, if desired, for subway purposes, all that part of the Miami and Erie canal from a point 300 feet north of Mitchell avenue to the east side of Broadway, but such permission shall be granted subject to all outstanding rights or claims, if any, with which it may conflict. The first paragraph of section 2 of the act provides for the construction by the city of an outlet for the discharge of the water of the canal, so as not to obstruct the flow of water through the remaining part of the canal. The second paragraph of section 2 of the act has been quoted in full above and is the section which more particularly concerns the present inquiry. Subsequent sections of the act provide for the appointment of arbitrators to ascertain and fix the actual value of the property in question, and the annual rental to be paid by the city to the state is to be determined by calculating four per cent. of the value so fixed. Upon approval by the city council of Cincinnati, of the valuation, and upon the governor being satisfied that the interests of the state are fully protected, and that the valuation placed upon the property is adequate, which fact shall be endorsed upon the lease by the governor, the governor is authorized to execute and deliver a lease to the city, the same to be for ninety-nine years, renewable forever.

The act contains a number of other provisions, with which we are not now concerned, but is silent as to certain important matters, leaving to construction to determine the rights of the parties to the lease. It may be observed in the first instance, that all the right, title and interest of the state passes under this lease, with the exception of the water in the canal. As to this water, the surplus part thereof is to be cared for by a suitable and sufficient work to be constructed by the city, which work will be used to convey this water by a route other and different from that which it now follows. As to water needed to supply lessees under contracts in force at the time the law was passed and still effective at the time the lease was executed, it is provided that the city shall adopt and construct appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to these lessees of the state. It would seem clear that since the property leased was to be valued at its actual value, and since the rental to be paid by the city was to be calculated upon the full actual value, that the primary purpose of the second paragraph of section 2 of the act was not to provide for a continuous, permanent and additional income to the state, over and above the rental to be paid by the city, but that the purpose of this provision was to enable the state to deal honorably and fairly with its then lessees, by carrying out the contracts under which it had already bound itself to furnish certain quantities of water to them, and that the income to be derived by the state was only incidental, resulting from the desire and purpose of the state to keep faith with its lessee water users. This is apparent from the language used in the paragraph in question, to which language reference is hereby made, and it is also apparent that this construction was put upon the act by the then attorney general, who was directed by the act to prepare the lease and who, in dealing with this feature of the matter in the lease, used the following language:

> "The party of the second part shall adopt and construct such appropriate works for the supplying of water to lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal hereinbefore described as shall be necessary in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations which rested upon the state on May 15, 1911, and are still resting on it, by virtue of certain contracts which subsisted on May 15, 1911, and which are now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts, in the same quantity and under the same conditions and at the same rate of rental provided for in said contracts, and provided further that during the period of construction of a street or subway or of appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water, as herein provided, said party of the second part shall cause no cessation of diminution of the supply of water to the said lessee water users to which they are entitled under their respective contracts or leases with the state of Ohio, except in so far as such cessation or diminution of such supply of water may be absolutely necessary."

Nothing is said in the act as to the time within which, after the execution of the lease, the city must construct the improvements contemplated, and the act is also silent as to the subject matter of your inquiry, and upon the further questions of whether the city or the state is entitled to receive the water rentals from the time of the execution of the lease to the time of the construction of the works referred to in paragraph 2 of section 2 of the act, as well as to whether the state or the city shall receive the water rentals after the construction of the works provided for in said paragraph. As a matter of fact, the property in question was appraised at $800,000.00, which appraisal was approved by the city council of Cincinnati and a lease was executed by the governor of Ohio on the 29th day of August, 1912, since which time the city of Cincinnati has been paying rental on said property at the rate of $32,000 per year, but so far the city has not undertaken to make any improvement on the property in question and the state is still in possession of the property and is charged with the care of the canal and its banks, and has been collecting the water rentals. I understand that the city of Cincinnati now has in contemplation a scheme of legislation, looking toward the improvement of this property. I also understand that when the city does take possession of the property in question and when it does begin work upon the scheme of improvement provided for by the act, then as a matter of fact and for obvious reasons the first thing that the city will have to do will be to construct the "suitable and sufficient works for a convenient outlet" referred to in the first paragraph of section 2 of the act in question. Not until this outlet is completed can the water of the canal or any part thereof be diverted from the present channel.

Having reference to the language used in paragraph 2 of section 2 of the act, to the effect that the city is to construct a conduit to supply lessee users of water "in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the term of said contracts" and keeping in mind the fact that since the execution of the lease on August 29, 1912, the state has been receiving a rental calculated upon the full value of the property, it is my opinion that the superintendent of public works has no right to renew leases or to make any new leases of water from the leased portion of the canal, which leases would extend beyond the time when the city constructs the outlet provided for by the first paragraph of section 2 of the act in question. To hold otherwise would be to charge the city with the construction of a conduit for supplying water users other than those contemplated by the act. In any renewals of water leases which renewals are made from the time of the execution of the lease to the city until the time when the city elects to actually begin work upon its scheme of improvement, the superintendent of public works should be very careful to provide that these leases must terminate whenever the city has constructed the outlet referred to above, or whenever it is necessary for the city in the construction of said outlet, to shut off the water in the canal.

It must also be taken into consideration that until such time as the city elects to proceed under the lease and improve the property leased, in the manner specified in the act, the state of Ohio is charged with the custody and care of that part of the canal leased. If for no other reason, this is true by reason of the fact that the state has no other channel through which to conduct the water of the canal which water belongs to the state and is not leased to the city and no other way of serving its lessee water users than by causing the water to flow through the present channel. Being charged with this expense, it is not only fair that any revenue derived from water rentals should go to the state of Ohio, but also equally fair that the state should utilize to the fullest possible extent any surplus water in this part of the canal, and that until such time as the city elects to construct an outlet for the water of the canal, the superintendent of public works has the right to renew expiring leases, the renewal leases to be subject to termination not when the city has completed all the works provided for in the act, but at any time when the city has completed the outlet provided for by the first paragraph of section 2 of the act, or when it becomes necessary for the city in the construction of such outlet, to shut off the water in the canal.

In the making of these leases, in order to avoid any future misunderstanding and possible litigation between the state, the city and the lessee water users, it should be expressly provided and stipulated that such leases are made subject to the right of the city of Cincinnati to, at any time, without previous notice, begin work upon the improvements in question, and that at such time as the city has completed the outlet referred to in the first paragraph of section 2 of the act, thereby making it possible to divert the water of the canal from the present channel, or at such time as it becomes necessary for the city in the construction of such outlet, to shut off the water in the canal, and without any notice, such leases shall terminate and that all rights of the lessees to receive water from the canal shall then cease and that such renewal leases shall not confer upon the lessees any right against the city of Cincinnati to have said city construct the conduit for the purpose of supplying water to said lessees, or any right in said lessees to receive water from such conduit when constructed. If desired by you, I will be glad to prepare a form of lease that will fully protect the rights of all parties concerned. This method of renewing leases will afford an income to the state so long as it is charged with the custody and care of this part of the canal, and at the same time will afford full protection to the rights of the city whenever it begins the actual work of improving the leased property.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 125—AMENDMENT TO SECTION 226 AS SUBMITTED CONFERS AUTHORITY UPON HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT TO SELL OR EXCHANGE OLD AND BROKEN TOOLS AND EQUIPMENT.

An amendment to section 226 of amended senate bill No. 125 as submitted by the state highway commissioner, if enacted into law, will confer authority upon the state highway commissioner to sell or exchange tools and equipment that have become broken, worn or otherwise unfit for the use of the highway department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner; Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 25, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I have your opinion stating that under the provisions of the Hite law, the state highway commissioner is not authorized to sell broken and worn out tools and equipment belonging to the state highway department.
> "As indicated in my letter to you of May 8th, this is a matter of importance to the department as the care of useless equipment is quite a burden, and it will not be practicable to store the same for various reasons, and I have thought it of sufficient importance to suggest to the conference committee having in charge the new highway code, the advisability of inserting a provision authorizing the sale or exchange, when necessary, of such equipment, by inserting after section 226 of the Cass bill, the following language:

" 'The state highway commissioner may sell tools and equipment of any kind purchased for the use of the state highway department, which tools and equipment have become broken, worn, or otherwise unfit for the use of the department, the sums realized from the sales thereof to be turned into the state treasury to the credit of the state highway improvement fund. He may exchange such broken, worn, or otherwise unfit tools and equipment for such other tools and equipment as the interests of the highway department require, for the use of said department. He shall make an annual report of such sales or exchanges to the governor, stating the articles sold or exchanged, and the prices fixed therefor.'

"However, before submitting this to the conference committee, I wish to secure your opinion as to whether or not the language used is apt and whether it will accomplish the desired purpose.

"I understand the legislature is to meet again on Wednesday of this week, and will, therefore, appreciate it if you will give this matter your preferred attention, furnishing me with your opinion Wednesday, if possible."

I have examined the proposed addition to or amendment of section 226 of amended senate bill No. 125, and it is my opinion that if the language suggested by you be added to said section and the same enacted in the law, the result will be to confer upon the state highway commissioner authority to sell or exchange tools and equipment that have become broken, worn and otherwise unfit for the use of the highway department. As I understand the situation, that is the purpose which you desire to accomplish in suggesting this amendment to the proposed highway code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

KENT STATE NORMAL SCHOOL—APPROVAL OF CONTRACT FOR POWER HOUSE.

The contract for the power house at the Kent State Normal School, including coal bins and tunnel connections, as a part of the heating plant and equipment, awarded to Robert H. Evans and Company, is regularly and legally executed and thereby approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1915

PROF. JOHN E. MCGILVREY, President of Kent State Normal School, Kent, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of May 24th, relative to the letting of contract for the power house, including coal bins and tunnel connections, which is as follows:

"In connection with the letting of the contract for the power house including coal bins and tunnel connections as a part of the heating plant and equipment provided for in the short appropriation bill, you will please find the following enclosures:

"1. Contract with R. H. Evans and Company, including bond;

"2. Proposals of E. H. Walker, Canton, Ohio; Cleveland Fireproof Construction Company, Cleveland, Ohio; R. H. Evans & Company, Columbus, Ohio;

"3. Affidavits of Cleveland Leader, Cleveland, Ohio; Cincinnati Times-Star, Cincinnati, Ohio; Toledo News-Bee, Toledo, Ohio; Columbus Dispatch, Columbus, Ohio; Kent Courier, Kent, Ohio;

"4. Resolution from the minutes of the board of trustees.

"Work on this power plant should begin at the earliest possible date since the use of our building next winter is conditioned upon its completion this summer. We shall appreciate it much if you will pass upon the legal questions involved promptly and communicate with us at the earliest possible date."

Together with your letter and the enclosures mentioned therein you forwarded a copy of the resolution from the minutes of the board of trustees of the meeting under date of May 22, 1915, which is as follows:

"Moved by Mr. Doyle, seconded by Mr. McDowell, that as R. H. Evans and Company is the lowest and best bidder in their proposal for the construction of the power house and tunnel connections to be erected at the Kent state normal school, the board of trustees of the Kent state normal school hereby award to R. H. Evans and Company the contract for the construction of said building on their bid of $59,869.00."

You also enclose a copy of the contract signed by Robert H. Evans and Company, contractors, by Robert H. Evans, and the board of trustees: Edwin F. Moulton, president; John A. McDowell, secretary, and Peter W. Doyle.

The contract referred to, in article 1, provides as follows:

"Article 1. The contractor under the direction and to the satisfaction of the board of trustees, their superintendent, and George F. Hammond, architect, acting for the purpose of this contract as agent of said owner, shall and will provide all material and perform all work mentioned in the specifications or shown on the drawings as prepared by said architect, for the construction and completion of the power house, including coal bins and tunnel connections, for the Kent state normal school; the stacks to be 125 feet high; common brick to be substituted for glazed brick except in engine room; outside, brick substituted for all stone except sills and coping; mechanical department finished as one room; cement substituted for composition floor; all retaining walls to be omitted.

"These drawings and specifications are identified by the file in the office of the auditor of state."

It is further provided in article 6 that the contractor is to complete all the work contemplated by this contract by October 1, 1915, and,

"Upon failure to have all work fully completed by the date above mentioned the contractor shall forfeit and pay or cause to be paid to the owner, the sum of fifteen ($15) dollars per day for each and every day thereafter the said work remains in an unfinished condition, for and as liquidated damages, and to be deducted from any payments due or to become due to said contractor."

Article 9 of the contract provides as follows:

"It is hereby mutually agreed between the parties hereto that the sum to be paid by the owner to the contractor for said work and material shall be the sum of fifty-nine thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine dollars ($59,869.00) subject to eliminations or additions as provided for in the proposal subject to additions and deductions as hereinbefore provided, and that such sum shall be paid in current funds by the owner to the contractor in installments as follows:

"Upon estimates issued by the architect about once a month as long as the work progresses. Said estimates to call for payments in accordance with the state law governing public buildings, provided, however, that nothing in this contract shall be construed to create an obligation or incur a liability against the state in excess of the appropriation made for the power house, coal bins and tunnel connections being a part of the heating plant and equipment for the Kent state normal school during the year of 1915, payments shall be made on all suitable materials furnished and delivered at the building site less fifty per cent.; provided, always, that all material delivered on the grounds and on which estimates have been based, is to become the property of the state and shall not be removed from the premises; the said fifty per cent. to be reserved until said material is in place in the building; and also payments on the material and work in place less five per cent. to be retained until the building shall have been completed and accepted by the party of the second part. The final payment shall be made within thirty days after the fulfillment of this contract. All payments shall be made upon written certificates of the architect to the effect that such payments are due.

"If at any time there should be any evidence of any lien or claim for which, if established, the owner of the said premises might become liable and which is chargeable to the contractor, the owner shall have the right to retain out of any payment then due or thereafter to become due, an amount sufficient to completely indemnify him against such claim or lien. Should there prove to be any such claim after all the payments are made, the contractor shall refund to the owner all monies that the latter may be compelled to pay in discharging any lien on said premises made obligatory in consequence of the contractor's default."

An examination of the proposals submitted discloses the fact that the total bid of the Robert H. Evans & Company amounts to $71,953.00, with an addition of $700.00 for an alternate bid, and a deduction amounting to $12,784.00 for an alternate bid such as has been specified in the contract, leaving the net bid amounting to $59,869.00, the amount specified in the contract. The bid of E. H. Walker, of Canton, Ohio, after making the additions and deductions on account of alternate bids, amounts to $64,490.00; while the bid of the Cleveland Fireproof Construction Company, after making the deductions on account of alternate bids, amounts to $77,647.00.

I find that the plans and specifications have been deposited with the auditor of state, that the notice of the time when, and the place where, sealed proposals would be received has been carefully carried out, and that the contract is in regular and proper form, and accompanied by a bond of the American Surety Company of New York in the sum of forty thousand dollars duly executed and attached to the contract.

It is my opinion, therefore, that inasmuch as the legal requirements have been met as to the advertising and the letting of the contract, and that the Robert H. Evans Company is the lowest and best bidder in their proposal, and that the bid of that company has been accepted by the board of trustees of the Kent state normal school and the contract awarded to it, the same should be and has been approved by the undersigned.

I return herewith the copies of contract and bond, together with the proposals submitted and the affidavits showing publication in the various newspapers referred to in your letter.

In view of the urgency stated in your letter, I am sending this approval at once rather than to retain it until I secure for my files a copy of the contract, and it is sent you with the understanding that immediately upon receipt of this letter you will forward to me a duplicate copy of the contract for the files of this office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED HOUSE BILL NO. 414—LIMITATIONS UPON CITIES AND VILLAGES INCURRING INDEBTEDNESS—LIMITATIONS UPON LEVYING OF TAXES BY TAXING DISTRICTS GENERALLY FOR CURRENT EXPENSES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have handed to me amended house bill No. 414—Mr. Jackson, with notes showing the insertion of numerous amendments which have not yet been printed but which have been incorporated in the bill. You ask me to advise you generally as to the effect of the bill.

I have previously prepared two opinions relative to this bill in different stages of its consideration by the general assembly, one to Hon. A. R. Garver, chairman of the senate taxation committee, and one to yourself; but as the bill has been substantially changed since these opinions were prepared, I deem it proper, in the interest of clearness, to disregard both of these opinions and to take up the various features of the bill anew in this opinion.

The bill affects two main subjects, viz.: The limitations upon the incurring of indebtedness by municipal corporations and the limitations upon the levying of taxes by taxing districts generally for current expenses. While these two subjects are practically related to each other, it will be convenient, I think, to observe the distinction between them, and to state that the amendments of sections 3941, 3942 and 3949 of the General Code in the bill do not in any way, as at present found in the bill, directly affect the tax limitations; whereas the amendment of section 5649-2, as at present found in the bill, does not in any way directly affect the debt limitations.

In order to express clearly the full effect of each class of proposed amendments it is advisable, I think, to make a general statement as to the state of the law now in force; then by comparing therewith the state of the law as it would be if the bill should be enacted in the form in which it has been presented to me, the exact purport and effect of the bill can be apprehended.

First, with respect to the debt limitations: The present sections of the General Code, which go by the name of the "Longworth act" (although as a matter of fact the original Longworth act of 1902 was repealed in 1911 and an entirely new law was then substituted therefor) are sections 3939 to 3954-1 of the General Code. Without quoting these sections as they are found in the General Code, I may say that for the purpose of the comparison which is to be made they may be said to have the following effect:

The group of related sections, which for convenience will be hereinafter designated as the present "Longworth law," begin by authorizing the council of a municipal corporation, by a two-thirds vote, to issue and sell bonds for certain specific purposes which are enumerated. This authority, however, is coupled with a restriction upon the total indebtedness which may be thus created in any one fiscal year, the limitation being one per cent. of the tax duplicate of the municipality. There is also a further restriction upon the net indebtedness which may be incurred by the council under the authority of the present Longworth act and the original Longworth act, which at present is two and one-half per cent. of the tax duplicate of the municipality. In other words, under the present law, the council of a municipal corporation without the authority of the electors may, by a two-thirds vote, incur bonded indebtedness for any of the purposes mentioned in the act, provided that there is not thereby incurred in any one year an aggregate indebtedness exceeding one per cent. of the tax duplicate of the municipality; and provided further that the incurring of a particular indebtedness will not so increase the net indebtedness of the municipality as to cause the latter to exceed two and one-half per cent. of such tax duplicate.

In order to understand fully the scope and effect of the present one per cent. and two and one-half per cent. limitations, however, certain qualifications must be made. The one per cent. limitation, as stated, applies to the total indebtedness; the two and one-half per cent. limitation applies only to the "net indebtedness." The "net indebtedness" as distinguished from the "total indebtedness" is defined as being the difference between the par value of outstanding and unpaid bonds and the amount held in the sinking fund for their redemption.

Again, the present law excepts certain bonds from computation or consideration in ascertaining and applying both these limitations; such bonds being those issued prior to April 29, 1902, or to refund bonds so issued; bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments; for the payment of obligations arising through emergencies caused by epidemics, floods, etc.; bonds issued to meet deficiencies in the revenues; under authority of a vote of the people as provided in section 3931 of the General Code; and bonds issued for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, improving and extending waterworks when the income from such waterworks is sufficient to cover the cost of all operating expenses, interest charges and to pass a sufficient amount to a sinking fund to retire such bonds when they become due.

Summing up, then, as to the power of council without a vote of the people to incur bonded indebtedness under the present Longworth act, the following further statement of the effect of such law in this particular may be made:

Council without a vote of the people may issue bonds to refund bonds representing indebtedness created or incurred prior to April 29, 1902, subject to no limitation whatever. Likewise subject to no limitation upon bonded indebtedness, such council without such vote may issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments, for the payment of obligations arising through emergencies caused by epidemics, floods, etc., and for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, improving and extending waterworks when the income from such waterworks is sufficient to cover the cost of all operating expenses, interest charges and to pass a sufficient amount to a sinking fund to retire them when they become due.

Council may also without a vote of the people issue bonds for any of the other purposes specified in the law in an aggregate amount, for all purposes, not exceeding one per cent. of the tax duplicate in any one year; provided that in the issuance of any bonds without a vote of the people the council does not cause the net indebtedness, representing the difference between the amount of the bonds outstanding at the particular time and the amount held in the sinking fund for their redemption, to exceed two and one-half per cent.; except that in ascertaining the amount of the net indebtedness outstanding, bonds which were issued prior to April 29, 1902, or to refund bonds so issued, or bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments, for the payment of obligations arising through emergencies, those issued to meet deficiencies in the revenues as provided in section 3931 of the General Code, and those issued for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, improving and extending waterworks when the income from such waterworks satisfies the requirements above expressed, are not to be counted.

With the above exceptions, however, all bonds issued by the council under the authority of the present Longworth act and its predecessor, the original Longworth act, outstanding at any one time, or, to be more exact, the difference between the total par value of such outstanding bonds and the amount held in the sinking fund for their redemption at such time, enter into and are to be counted in ascertaining such two and one-half per cent. limitation.

But under the present law the council has independent power to submit any bond issue, large or small, and whether otherwise required by the operation of the debt limitations to do so or not, to a vote of the electors. There is no limitation upon the amount of bonded indebtedness that may be incurred by a vote of the electors in any one year as such, the only limitation upon the incurring of bonded indebtedness by a vote of the electors is that in no event may the net indebtedness incurred by the municipality, that is, either by the council itself or by the vote of the electors, exceed five per cent. of the tax duplicate thereof. This limitation of five per cent. on the net indebtedness which may be created by a vote of the electors is arrived at, that is to say, by counting bonds outstanding at any one time, whether issued by the council itself or by the vote of the electors. Otherwise, it is defined like and subject to the same exceptions as the net indebtedness limitation of two and one-half per cent. applicable to the issuance of bonds by the council without a vote of the people. For a full definition of the scope and effect of the five per cent. limitation I refer you to the description which I have given of the two and one-half per cent. limitation, which applies as well to the five per cent. limitation, except that bonds issued by a vote of the people are not counted in ascertaining the two and one-half per cent. limitation, but are counted in ascertaining the five per cent. limitation.

Recapitulating then, the present Longworth act authorizes the council of a municipal corporation without a vote of the people to incur bonded indebtedness in any amount, for any purpose, subject only to the restriction that the total amount for all purposes incurred in any one year without a vote of the people must not exceed one per cent. of the tax duplicate, and the net amount of indebtedness which may be outstanding at one time by the act of the council without a vote of the people may not exceed two and one-half per cent. of the tax duplicate, such limitations of one per cent. and two and one-half per cent. being defined in the manner above described. With the vote of the people, however, a municipality may incur an indebtedness of any amount in any year, for any and all purposes, subject only to the restriction that the net indebtedness of the municipality created under the act, whether by vote of the people or without a vote of the people, may not at any time exceed five per cent. of the tax duplicate of the municipality, such five per cent. limitation being defined in the manner above described.

The foregoing are the limitations of the present Longworth act, so called. It would not be accurate, however, to suppose that bonds may be issued by municipal corporations only under the Longworth act. That law is intended primarily to limit the power of a municipality to incur general tax duplicate obligations. It is not even certain that its limitations do apply to all such bonds, though this may be assumed for present purposes. But the Longworth act does not in any way limit the independent authority of a municipal corporation to incur indebtedness under article XVIII, sections 10 and 12 of the constitution, which authorize the issuance of mortgage bonds constituting a lien against specific property, and not being a liability of the municipality as such in the sense that its general tax duplicate is pledged for the payment thereof.

One other matter should be mentioned in connection with the state of the existing law: The two and one-half per cent. and five per cent. limitations, above referred to, were originally four per cent. and eight per cent., respectively. When the Smith one per cent. law was passed and in anticipation of large increases in tax valuations through the instrumentality of that law and the 1910 quadrennial appraisement of real estate, it was deemed advisable to reduce these limitations to two and one-half per cent. and five per cent., respectively. This was done by providing in sections 3941 and 3946 of the General Code for limitations of four per cent. and eight per cent., respectively, and then providing in sections 3952 and 3954-1 for a reduction of these limitations on and after the first day of October, 1911, to two and one-half per cent. and five per cent., respectively.

This last statement brings me directly to the first change which amended house bill No. 414 makes in the existing law. This is effected by repealing sections 3948, 3952 and 3954-1 of the General Code, and putting the two and one-half per cent. and five per cent. limitations in amended section 3941. That is to say, the amendments of section 3941 in the bill do not effect in reality any substantial change in the law, but are merely made in the interest of clearness of expression and constitute rather codification than amendment in the exact sense.

In this connection, however, I point out that the words "except as may be otherwise specifically provided by law," which, I observe, have been added at the end of amended section 3941, are not in the present law. I do not believe that this phrase is necessary. Whether or not it weakens the section, I have been unable to determine in the limited time which has been given for the consideration of the bill. In my judgment, however, this language, inasmuch as it creates a doubt as to the interpretation of a provision that otherwise would be clear, ought not to be incorporated in the section.

But if section 3941 as amended in the bill is in substance merely a codification of the present law, other provisions of the bill constitute radical changes. The first important thing that should be mentioned is disclosed by the repealing clause, section 3 of the bill, which repeals section 3940 of the General Code. The effect of this repeal is to abolish the one per cent. limitation on the amount of bonds which may be issued by the council in any one year without a vote of the people. By referring to my discussion of the state of the existing law you will observe the effect of such a change. However, the change is not as far reaching in this particular as would otherwise be the case because of the provisions of amended section 3942 as carried in the bill.

Under section 3942 as amended in the bill, instead of council being authorized to incur bonded indebtedness for any particular purpose without limitation, except with respect to the aggregate amount incurred in any one year or the net amount outstanding at any one time, the rule is reversed and council is prohibited from incurring any bonded indebtedness, except as therein provided, without a vote of the people. In other words, the first great difference between the present Longworth law and the law as it would be if house bill No. 414 as amended should pass and become effective lies in the fact that under the former the submission of a bond issue to a vote of the people is, in a sense, the exception, while under the latter it is in the same sense the rule; under the former it is optional for council to submit a given bond issue to a vote of the electors, the only compulsion to do so resulting from the operation of certain limitations upon the aggregate amount of indebtedness which the council may incur, while under the latter submission to a vote of the people is compulsory as to all issues except those specifically mentioned in the section.

Before analyzing section 3942 as amended by the bill, then, it may be stated that its effect will make it more difficult for a municipal corporation to issue bonds, in that in a greater number of cases than under the present law submission to a popular vote will be required. I should state here, of course, that under other sections of the Longworth law which are not amended by the bill, two-thirds of the electors voting at the election upon the question of issuing bonds must vote in favor thereof in order to authorize their issuance.

The purposes for which indebtedness may be incurred by the council without a vote of the people are as follows:

> "(a) For the payment of obligations arising from emergencies resulting from epidemics or floods or other forces of nature.
> "(b) In anticipation of the collection of special assessments and for the purpose of paying the municipality's part of the cost and expense of improvements for which special assessments are levied; and for water-works improvements or extensions.
> "(c) To refund or extend the time of payment of bonds issued prior to January 1, 1913.
> "(d) To purify the sewage and the public water supply in obedience to orders of the state board of health issued prior to the passage of the act."

This provision as it now appears in the bill is inconsistent with the Bense act, which provides that when the state board of health requires a municipal corporation to purify its sewage or public water supply, council shall provide the necessary funds and in so doing may issue bonds up to five per cent. of the tax duplicate without submitting the question to any vote. The effect of adding the language "issued prior to the passage of this act" to paragraph "d" of section 3942, as amended, is to make it possible for one-third of the electors of a city or village to veto the orders of the state board of health.

> "(e) Mortgage bonds secured only upon the property and revenues of a public utility."

If this provision had been left out altogether it might, and I think would, follow, nevertheless, that the act would not apply to the issuance of such mortgage bonds in such a way as to require their submission to a vote of the people. However, it is proper to make some such exception for the sake of clearness. The language of paragraph "e" of section 3942, as amended, leaves much to be desired. It is evidently designed to make it clear that mortgage bonds are not to be subject to a vote of the people. If that is its intent its scope is too narrow in the following particulars:

(1) Mortgage bonds secured upon the property and revenues of a public utility are not the only kind of mortgage bonds which may be issued by a municipality under the home rule amendment. Section 10 of article XVIII authorizes a municipality appropriating or otherwise acquiring property for public use to acquire in furtherance of such public use an excess over that actually to be occupied by the improvement and to sell such excess with such restrictions as shall be appropriate to preserve the improvement made. In furtherance of such a purpose the section provides that

> "Bonds may be issued to supply the funds in whole or in part to pay for the excess property so appropriated or otherwise acquired, but said bonds shall be a lien only against the property so acquired for the improvement and excess, and they shall not be a liability of the municipality nor be included in any limitation of the bonded indebtedness of such municipality prescribed by law."

It will be observed that this class of mortgage bonds is not mentioned in paragraph "e" of section 3942 as amended.

(2) Public utility mortgage bonds are provided for by section 12 of article XVIII, which provides that the same shall be secured not only upon the property and revenues of the utility, but also "a franchise stating the terms upon which, in case of foreclosure, the purchaser may operate the same, which franchise shall in no case extend for a longer period than twenty years from the date of the sale of such utility and franchise on foreclosure." It is expressly provided in section 12 that public utility mortgage bonds may be issued beyond the general limit of bonded indebtedness prescribed by law.

Now, paragraph "e" of section 3942 as amended by house bill No. 414 is not a limit on bonded indebtedness; so that the self-executing provisions of the constitution removing debt limitations does not have the effect of making said paragraph "e" unconstitutional. That is to say, in spite of the language of sections 10 and 12 of article XVIII it would be competent for the general assembly to provide as to non-charter cities that mortgage bonds could be issued only upon a vote of the people, because sections 10 and 12 of article XVIII of the constitution do not prescribe what authority shall issue such mortgage bonds on behalf of the municipal corporation.

Therefore, even though it might be contended with some show of reason that paragraph "e" of section 3942 as amended is wholly unnecessary in the Longworth act, which is designed principally to limit general tax duplicate obligations, and would probably be construed as not applicable to the issuance of mortgage bonds, yet if any mention is to be made therein of mortgage bonds the language of the section should be consistent with the constitution. That is, if any mortgage bonds are to be made specifically exempt from the requirement of submission to popular vote, all mortgage bonds which a municipality may issue under the constitution should be made exempt.

"(f) In addition to the foregoing specific kinds of bonds, the issuance of which need not be authorized by a vote of the people, it is provided that for any of the purposes mentioned in sections 3939 and 3939-1 of the General Code bonds may be issued without a vote of the people, in an amount not exceeding one-twentieth of one per cent. of the tax duplicate in any one year, and not exceeding $75,000 in any one year, ' as may be otherwise specifically provided by law, for the purposes in each subdivision as numbered in sections 3939 and 3939-1 of the General Code.' ''

The apparent purpose here is to authorize an exception to the general rule that all bonds must be submitted to a vote of the electors, by permitting an aggregate indebtedness of one-twentieth of one per cent. to be incurred without a vote in any one year, subject to the proviso that not to exceed $75,000 for any one of the purposes mentioned in the Longworth act may be issued without a vote of the people in any one year. If this is the case, the intention is very awkwardly expressed. The language which I have quoted from paragraph ''f'' of section 3942, as amended, is almost meaningless. For example, the phrase ''as may be otherwise specifically provided by law'' certainly adds nothing to the section and tends merely to inject confusion. The phrase ''for the purposes in each subdivision as numbered in sections 3939 and 3939-1 of the General Code'' is evidently intended to convey the meaning that not more than $75,000 of indebtedness may be created under any one of the paragraphs of either of the two sections referred to in any one year. This would probably be the meaning which would be given to it by the courts. I am satisfied, however, that this phrase could be made clearer.

Though there are other provisions in section 3942 as amended by the bill which require attention and comment, it will be helpful to summarize at this point for purpose of comparison with the existing law. The amended section has the effect, as stated, of requiring all bond issues to be submitted to a vote of the people with certain exceptions. The rule then is that whenever council of a municipal corporation desires to issue bonds for any purpose whatever, except for the payment of emergency obligations, in anticipation of the collection of special assessments or for the municipality's part of the cost of improvements for which special assessments are levied, for waterworks improvements or extensions, to refund or extend the time of payment of bonds issued prior to January 1, 1913, for Bense act bonds ordered prior to the passage of the act, or mortgage bonds secured only upon the property and revenues of a public utility, and when the amount of such bonds, together with the amount of those theretofore issued in the given calendar year will exceed one-twentieth of one per cent. of the tax duplicate, or together with the bonds theretofore issued in the same year under the same paragraph of sections 3939 and 3939-1 will exceed $75,000, it must submit the proposition to the electors, who must approve it by a two-thirds vote.

This provision is a substitute for the one per cent. limitation of the present Longworth law, which the bill repeals. That is to say, all bonds mentioned in the subordinate paragraphs of section 3942 in the bill as exceptions to the general rule requiring submission to the electors may be issued with reference only to the two and one-half per cent. limitation; so that there is no limitation upon the amount of bonds to pay the municipality's part of the cost and expense of improvements for which special assessments are levied, bonds for the payment of obligations arising from emergencies resulting from epidemics or floods or other forces of nature, bonds issued for waterworks improvements or extensions, bonds to refund or extend the time of payment of bonds issued prior to January 1, 1913, bonds issued under Bense act orders made prior to the passage of the act and mortgage bonds secured only upon the property and revenues of a public utility which may be issued in any one year.

The two and one-half per cent. limitation, however, except as modified by amended section 3949, which will hereinafter be considered, continues to have the same effect which it always had. In other words, the requirement of section 3942, as amended, with reference to the submission to a vote of the people is independent of the present limitation of two and one-half per cent. So that it would be possible under the bill for the council of a municipal corporation to be required practically to submit a bond issue to a vote of the people because of the operation of the two and one-half per cent. limitation of the law, without regard to the exemptions in the subordinate paragraphs of section 3942, as amended by the bill; although the converse of this proposition is not true, in that the requirement of section 3942 that all bond issues, except those specifically enumerated, shall be submitted to a vote, is in no wise dependent upon the operation of the two and one-half per cent. limitation. So that in a given case submission to a vote would be required by section 3942 even though the general debt limitations would be in no wise endangered by the proposed issue.

I think I should point out that the bond issues specifically excepted from the rule requiring submission to the electors are, broadly speaking, those which are current as distinguished from those which involve embarking upon a substantially new enterprise. Moreover, the amount limitations of paragraph "f" of the section are so low as to preclude any substantial new enterprise from being undertaken without a vote. In this connection, I point out that under the existing law and constitution no new enterprise, great or small, could be foisted upon the people of a municipality by the council thereof without the consent of the former. The referendum powers reserved to the people prevent this. The difference, however, between the referendum and the limitations of the Longworth act is that the former requires the affirmative vote of a majority merely of the electors voting on the proposition in order to support an affirmative action; whereas the latter requires the concurrence of two-thirds of those voting on the proposition in order to support such action.

In this respect, too, a very nice question is raised as to the interpretation of the Longworth act as it would be amended by house bill No. 414 in connection with the initiative provided for by general statute and expressly reserved by article II, section 1-f of the constitution.

This question is too complicated to discuss fully here. I point out the difficulties that might arise by instancing a possible case: Let me suppose that citizens desiring an improvement involving the issuance of bonds circulate initiative petitions for the issuance of bonds and secure the holding of a special election, at which a majority of the votes cast on the proposition are in favor of it, though fewer than two-thirds of the electors so voting concur. That is, suppose the assumed facts to exist under house bill No. 414 as amended, should it become a law. I would not undertake at this time to prophesy the result. It will be observed, however, that section 3942 as amended prohibits bonds being issued except on the approval of the electors in the manner provided in sections 3943 to 3947 of the General Code. This means that no bonds shall be issued (with the exceptions therein enumerated) except upon the passage of a resolution by council fixing the time of an election at which the approval of two-thirds of the electors is to be secured. It means also, if it is to be given any effect whatever, that no bonds or notes shall be issued in any other manner. This is inconsistent with the initiative and referendum statutes and possibly, too, with the constitutional provision above cited.

There is some doubt as to the effect of the initiative and referendum upon the present Longworth law, but there is no such negative provision in the present Longworth law as there is in section 3942 as incorporated in the bill. An extreme consequence of this possible condition of affairs would be a holding that amended section 3942 is unconstitutional. A less extreme conclusion, but one fraught with ridiculous consequences, would be a holding that one election would have to be held on the ordinance authorizing the issue and sale of the bonds or notes, a majority being necessary to enact the ordinance, and another and separate election would have to be held to secure the approval of two-thirds of the electors. This latter conclusion is consistent with the exact phraseology of section 3942, which assumes that an ordinance authorizing the issue and sale of bonds is to be passed as an ordinance, but is not to take effect until the question is submitted to the electors and approved by two-thirds of those voting.

In addition to the features of section 3942 as amended in the bill to which attention has been called, the following deserve consideration:

(1) In the first place, the present Longworth act applies only to the issuance of bonds; that is to say, the limitations of one, two and one-half and five per cent. do not apply to other securities or evidences of indebtedness issued by a municipal corporation or its council. Section 3942 as amended by the bill, however, prohibits the issuance without a vote of the people not only of bonds, but also of notes. The original bill also included certificates of indebtedness, but mention of these securities has been stricken out of the bill by amendment, and it may be assumed, I think, that "certificates of indebtedness," in so far as they are to be distinguished from "notes" are not within the purview of the section.

The only "certificates of indebtedness" so called which are authorized to be issued by municipal corporations generally are those provided for in section 3913 of the General Code (repealed by the bill) which affords a means of borrowing money in anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year. The notes which a municipal corporation may issue are those provided for by section 3914, which provides for borrowing money in anticipation of special assessments, and those provided for by section 3916, which authorizes a municipality to borrow money for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness.

The special assessment notes are evidently not contemplated by section 3942 as amended, because they are excepted from its scope by paragraph "b" thereof, which has been referred to. Therefore, the only "notes" which by virtue of section 3942, as amended by the bill, may not be issued without the authority of a vote of the people, two-thirds of those voting concurring therein, are the notes which may be issued under section 3916.

The effect, therefore, of section 3942 as amended by the bill in this particular is to make the power of a municipal corporation to extend the time of payment of an unfunded debt contingent upon the approval of two-thirds of the electors voting on the proposition. This seems to be a very impolitic result. Municipalities sometimes suffer large judgments in damage cases. Such judgments are primarily a charge against the sinking fund, but in many instances the sinking fund is not able to provide for the payment of them. In such event section 3916 is the only means whereby the obligation may be met. To make the power to meet such an obligation in this convenient way dependent upon the approval of two-thirds of the electors is both cumbersome and dangerous.

This view of section 3942 as amended by the bill suggests other consequences that flow from the broad language used in the opening paragraph thereof. Without the word "notes" therein and without certain of the exceptions, such as that respecting mortgage bonds and that respecting Bense act bonds, it might be argued with great force that because of the position of the section in the Code the prohibition against the issuance of bonds without a vote of the people is limited to bonds issued for the specific purposes mentioned in section 3939, and such bonds only.

But having regard to the section as a whole, the above features of it in particular, and, what is most important, to paragraph "c" of the exceptions, it appears that the section is certainly broader in scope than the remainder of the act. That is to say, whereas the present Longworth law authorizes the issuance of bonds for certain specific purposes and imposes limitations upon the issuance of bonds for such purpose, section 3942, as the bill amends it, prohibits the issuance of any bonds, whether for the specific purposes mentioned in sections 3939 and 3939-1 or not, without a vote of the people, except only bonds mentioned in paragraphs "a" to "f," inclusive.

The effect of the section when given such a broad scope is problematical. Take, for example, bonds issued under section 3916 to extend the time of payment of indebtedness which the corporation is unable to pay at maturity. The section requires the approval of two-thirds of the electors for the issuance of such bonds unless for the refunding of bonds issued prior to January 1, 1913. So far as the refunding of bonds is concerned, this time limitation is proper, for bonds issued subsequently to January 1, 1913, can not be refunded (article XII, section 11 of the constitution effective on that date); but notes issued since that date and general unfunded obligations accruing either before or after that date may have to be extended at any time by reason of the operation of the tax limitations. To require the approval of the electors to such a necessary funding or refunding, especially when a two-thirds vote must be secured, is to place municipalities in danger of bankruptcy and their public property subject to the likelihood of being seized on execution; or else, taking the other view, with the statute law with reference to the incurring of indebtedness in such a shape, the courts may feel constrained to create implied exceptions to the tax limitation laws.

(2) There is also a proviso authorizing the issuance of bonds without a vote of the people for the purpose of funding certificates of indebtedness issued prior to the passage of the act under section 3913 of the General Code. This section has been referred to. Originally the bill provided that levies to pay the interest and principal on such bonds might be made outside of all tax limitations. This, however, seems to have been stricken out by amendment.

The effect of this proviso in its present form is to legalize what was apparently illegal, but what may have been dictated by extreme exigency, namely, the issuance of certificates "in anticipation of the general revenue fund" far beyond the actual returns from the levy for that fund; for section 3913 of the General Code contemplates at least that the certificates issued thereunder shall be paid at maturity, and it is not the intention that the certificates shall be issued unless the money to pay them is levied and in process of collection. Apparently, however, some cities have issued certificates "in anticipation of the general revenue fund" far beyond their reasonable "anticipation." That being the case, the proviso has the effect of permitting bonds to be issued to fund these certificates; but by limiting this authority to certificates issued prior to the passage of the act it closes the door to a repetition of such desperate measures. Moreover, section 3 of the bill repeals section 3913 entirely, thus doing away in the future (should the bill pass) with issuing certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of the general revenue fund.

One further general observation may be made respecting section 3942 as amended by the bill, and that is that the section restores, in effect, the theory of the original Longworth act as distinguished from the present Longworth law. It will be remembered that the original Longworth act neither required nor authorized the submission of bonds to a vote of the people until certain limitations had been reached; whereas the present law passed in 1911 authorizes council to submit any issue of bonds to a vote of the people, whether there is necessity for so doing in the light of the debt limitations or not. Section 3942 as amended does not authorize council upon its own motion to submit anything to a vote of the people. It now constitutes a requirement—not a power, with respect to the action of council. So that until bonds have been issued to the amount of one-twentieth of one per cent. of the tax duplicate, or to the amount of $75,000, for the purpose of any one paragraph of sections 3939 and 3939-1 of the General Code, or unless the particular bond issue will cause either of these limitations of paragraph "f" of section 3942 as it is incorporated in the bill to be exceeded, council would have no authority to submit any single bond issue to a vote of the people, although under the present law this might be done.

Summarizing the effect of the amendments of section 3942, then, I may say that in the first place it imposes a positive requirement independent of the debt limitations of two and one-half and five per cent., respectively, that all bond issues, with certain exceptions, shall be submitted to the people and receive an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the electors voting on the proposition. It applies to the issue of all bonds, whether under the Longworth act or not, and to funding or refunding notes as well. It reverses the rule respecting the submission of bond issues to a vote of the people, and thus has the effect of requiring the approval of two-thirds of the electors upon practically every new enterprise requiring the borrowing of money. A complete idea of the radical nature of the changes which would be made by the enactment of this section can be obtained by comparing my statement of its effect with my statement of the condition of the existing law.

Section 3949 is amended in the bill in five material particulars. The function of this section, as I have pointed out, is to define the phrase "net indebtedness" for the purpose of the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations and to specify the bonds which shall be considered in ascertaining such limitations. No change is made in the section with respect to its effect regarding the first of these two functions, the only changes being with respect to the bonds which shall not be counted in ascertaining the limitations.

(1) The first change lies in the omission of the words "one per cent." from the second sentence of the section. This is consistent with the repeal of section 3940, already alluded to.

(2) The second change is in paragraph "e." At the present this section exempts from consideration in arriving at the two and one-half and five per cent. limitation bonds issued to meet deficiencies in the revenues as provided in section 3931 of the General Code. This is qualified in the bill by the addition of the language: "If such issue is made to mature within ten years from date of issue." This qualification is reasonable and does not need to be more than mentioned herein.

There is also added to the language of paragraph "e," however, the following: "And bonds issued to redeem outstanding certificates of indebtedness under section 3942 of the General Code." The effect of this provision is to exempt such bonds from consideration in arriving at both the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations; whereas in section 3942 as amended in the bill, where such bonds are authorized it is provided that "with respect to said issue the limitation of two and one-half per cent. aforesaid shall not apply." In other words, section 3949 is inconsistent with section 3942 of the same bill, the one having the effect of taking bonds issued to redeem certificates of indebtedness out of both the limitations mentioned, and the other having the effect of taking them out of the two and one-half per cent. limitation only. This inconsistency should be corrected.

(3) The third material change consists of the description of the waterworks bonds which are not to be counted in ascertaining the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations.

Paragraph "f" of section 3949 of the present law provides as follows:

> "f. Bonds issued for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, improving and extending waterworks when the income from such waterworks is sufficient to cover the cost of all operating expenses, interest charges and to pass a sufficient amount to a sinking fund to retire such bonds when they become due."

The bill adds to the foregoing the following language:

> "and when such operating expenses and interest and sinking fund charges incurred or accrued during the last preceding calendar year were actually paid from the income of such waterworks."

The change here lies in the fact that whereas under the present law waterworks bonds need not be counted in ascertaining the debt limitations, if the income from the waterworks was sufficient to pay operating expenses and sinking fund charges, whether actually used for that purpose or not, the amended section makes it necessary in order that waterworks bonds shall be outside of the limitations, that the operating expenses and interest and sinking fund charges incurred during the preceding calendar year be actually paid from the income of the works.

This provision is perhaps clearer and more workable in some ways than that of the present law. I do not mean that the bill effects a change with respect to the issuance of bonds for a new waterworks, as, in my opinion, such bonds would at the outset be subject to all of the limitations under the present law. I do mean, however, that where a waterworks is a going concern and has a definite income, and it is proposed to issue bonds to make extensions or betterments, the present law would permit such bonds to be issued in the first instance without regard to any of the limitations, if the income from the works is sufficient to pay the operating expenses of the entire works and in addition thereto to pay the interest and sinking fund charges on account of the bonds then being issued.

The effect of the bill on waterworks bonds can be ascertained only by considering sections 3942 and 3949 as therein amended together. The first of these sections takes out of the general requirement that all bond issues be submitted to a vote of the people issues of bonds for "waterworks improvements or extensions." This exception, together with the repeal of the one per cent. limitation, makes the bill in one way more liberal with respect to the original issuance of waterworks bonds than the present law is, for under the bill all waterworks improvement and extension bonds can be issued without a vote of the people, regardless of the amount thereof, subject only to the two and one-half per cent. limitation; whereas under the present law such bonds could be issued without a vote of the people so as to exceed the one per cent. limitation only when the income from the waterworks was sufficient to pay, in addition to operating expenses, the interest and sinking fund charges on account of the bonds. However, the bill is more stringent with respect to waterworks bonds in its application to the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations, as I have pointed out, in that it requires that such bonds shall be counted in ascertaining such limitations, unless the interest and sinking fund charges and operating expenses of the preceding year have actually been paid from the income of the works.

(4) The next material change in the section is made by the addition of paragraph "g," which has the effect of taking out of the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations bonds issued to comply with orders of the state board of health.

(5) The next change made in the section consists of the addition to the catalogue of bonds exempt from the two and one-half and five per cent. limitations of mortgage bonds secured only upon the property and revenues of a public utility. The propriety of mentioning such bonds at all in the Longworth act has already been commented upon. Surely this clause is superfluous in section 3949, whatever may be the effect of the similar clause in section 3942; for assuming the clause to have the same effect as the descriptive clause in article XVIII, section 12 of the constitution (which is doubtful for reasons already pointed out), the constitutional provision referred to expressly provides that such bonds shall not be subject to debt limitations. Therefore, it is not necessary for the statute to take them out of any such limitations.

The foregoing comments all relate to those portions of the bill which affect debt limitations. We come now to consider section 5649-2 as amended in the bill. This is a part of the Smith one per cent. law, and its function is, and always has been, to define what is known as the "ten mill limitation" on current expense tax levies of all taxing districts. The limitation is defined as being one upon the aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied. It includes within the ten mills all levies not specifically exempted therefrom by the section itself. This might not be the case if there were not some exceptions in the section, in which event we might look elsewhere to find specific provisions constituting, under familiar rules, an exception to this general rule. But inasmuch as the section does except certain levies provided by other sections, the certain result is that levies not specifically excepted from the ten mills by the section itself are brought within that limitation.

The levies which are at the present time excepted from the ten mill limitation are as follows:

(1) In the first place they are those expressly excepted by present section 5649-2, namely, emergency levies provided for in section 5649-4, levies voted by the people under section 5649-5, and interest and sinking fund levies necessary to provide for indebtedness incurred prior to June 2, 1911, or subsequently to that date by a vote of the people.

(2) There are numerous levies provided for by laws passed after section 5649-2, and by such subsequently passed laws expressly made exempt from the ten mill limitation. For example, the flood emergency levies authorized by the act found in 103 O. L., 141; the so-called "Hite Road Law" levy provided for by section 6859-1 of the General Code; certain other road levies which I have in mind but have not specifically traced, and perhaps others. In short, the exact scope of the ten mill limitation as it now exists cannot be ascertained without examining laws providing for tax levies passed since June 2, 1911, and ascertaining whether or not such new levies are taken out of the ten mill limitation.

Section 5649-2 as amended by house bill No. 414 mentions two such levies, although the reference to one is erroneous. Its exceptions are as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in section 5649-4, section 5649-5, section 8859-1 and section 7908 of the General Code."

Of course, the reference to section "8859-1" is erroneous, there being no such section. What is meant is doubtless section "6859-1," and, when corrected in this particular, the provision would have the effect of taking the Hite road law levy out of the ten mill limitation as it was intended to be.

The reference to section 7908 has the effect of taking the levy for interest and sinking fund purposes for bonds issued for a municipal university subsequently to June 1, 1910, out of the ten mill limitation as provided by section 7908 as amended 103 O. L. 472.

My point here is that the Hite road law levy and the municipal university bond levies are the only levies, of all the possible levies authorized by laws passed since June 2, 1911, and by such laws made exempt from the ten mill limitation, which will be exempt from that limitation under section 5649-2 if it is enacted in the form in which the bill has been submitted to me. It may be the desire of the legislature to bring all such other levies within the ten mill limitation, and if that is the case, no criticism can be made of the bill in this particular. But if it is not the intention of the legislature to bring within the ten mill limitation any levies which are at present outside of that limitation, or to favor in this particular, so to speak, the Hite road law levy and municipal university levy, to the exclusion of other levies which have heretofore been in a similar situation with respect to the ten mill limitation, then some other and different language should be used in this connection. For a form of such language I refer you to my previous opinion to you respecting this same bill.

The principal change made in section 5649-2, however, is that which results from striking out the language: "heretofore incurred or any indebtedness that may hereafter be incurred by vote of the people" and inserting in lieu thereof the language: "existing at the time this act takes effect or which may thereafter be incurred." The language inserted does not add anything to the section as it would be if it was left out entirely. The object of the amendment is merely to do away with the distinction between levies for interest and sinking fund purposes on account of bonds issued by a vote of the people and such levies on account of such bonds issued without a vote of the people, and to take all interest and sinking fund levies outside of the ten mill limitation, whether the bonds were issued prior to June 2, 1911, or subsequently thereto, and whether issued under authority of a vote of the people or without such authority.

By a saving clause added at the end of the section it is made clear that the fifteen mill limitation is not to be affected by this amendment. The change is a very material one, however, with respect to its effect upon the ten mill limitation.

In this connection I refer you to my previous opinion, in which I pointed out that in order to be consistent the legislature should not amend section 5649-2 in this particular without also amending section 5649-3a. My reasons for this view are expressed in that opinion.

Section 2 has the effect of exempting "from this act" the act authorizing the creation of rapid transit commissioners in cities, passed on May 17, 1915. It is my impression that this bill carries its own tax and debt limitations. However this may be, section 2 does not have the effect of taking the bonds and levies authorized in the Rapid Transit Commission act out of all the limitations, because "this act" (i. e., house bill No. 414) is merely an amendment of certain sections of the Longworth and Smith laws, other sections not being necessarily affected thereby. In fact, section 2 of the bill is of doubtful import and effect in the use of the words "this act."

Broadly speaking, the bill palpably seeks to make it more difficult for municipalities to incur indebtedness and easier for them to pay it. I may be permitted to say that this general policy is not open to criticism, but is entirely praiseworthy. It seems to me, however, that in numerous respects which I have pointed out the policy of the bill is not well worked out. The measure is of such importance that it ought to be framed with unusual care.

There are several detailed questions of policy concerning which I have not felt called upon to express any judgment. For example, it occurs to me that the practical effect of the bill is to require a two-thirds vote of the electors in the acquisition or installation of any public utility, of any importance, unless it is desired to issue mortgage bonds which are of doubtful marketability.

Section 5 of article XVIII of the constitution provides for a referendum on the acquisition of a public utility which may carry by a majority vote; but a majority vote of the electors under a referendum would not be effective if a two-thirds vote were required to provide the necessary funds by the issuance of bonds other than mortgage bonds.

It may be desirable so to restrict the municipal corporations in these particulars, but it should be clearly pointed out that the bill has this effect.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR IN TITLE OF HOUSE BILL NO. 202, DOES NOT AFFECT SUBSTANCE OF BILL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 27, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested my opinion as to the effect of a typographical error in the title of house bill No. 202, passed May 20, 1915.

The error lies in the fact that the title recites that it is an act "To amend section 1447 of the General Code, whereas the main body of the bill, as well as other language in the title itself, shows that it is section 2447 that is to be amended.

In my opinion this discrepancy is to be treated as a mere clerical error and in nowise affects the substance of the bill.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 160—CREATING PENSION FUND FOR EX-VOLUNTEER FIREMEN—QUESTION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY OF BILL.

The provisions relative to holding of elections, in house bill No. 160, authorizing the creation of a pension fund for ex-volunteer firemen, are sufficiently definite and complete; but the definition therein of those qualified to participate in the benefits of such fund is so restricted as to make the whole bill probably unconstitutional.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 27, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to examine into the provisions of section 2 of house bill No. 160, passed May 19, 1915, and to advise you as to whether or not the provisions thereof constitute complete and effective machinery for holding the election of which it speaks.

The bill, as a whole, provides for pension funds for ex-volunteer firemen. The second section of the act is in full as follows:

> "On the second Monday of the month, following the passage of the ordinance providing for the establishment of such fund, an election shall be held to choose five trustees from the ex-volunteer firemen of such municipal corporation. The president of the council shall give notice thereof through the medium of at least one newspaper of general circulation, and by written notice to the volunteer firemen's association, at least one week before said election."

Section 3 relates also to the same subject and provides as follows:

> "Voting shall be by ballot, and the votes shall be canvassed by the president of the council or under his direction. The five members receiving the highest vote shall be elected for the ensuing year. In case of a tie vote it shall be decided by lot or in any other manner agreeable to the persons for whom such a tie vote was cast, which one of them shall have the office of trustee."

By themselves these two sections do not seem to afford complete machinery for holding the election referred to, in that they do not specify who shall be entitled to a vote at such election, or otherwise provide what might be deemed to be necessary details. However, I refer you to section 9 of the bill which contains the following proviso:

> "* * * Provided that no ex-volunteer fireman shall be eligible to receive a pension from such fund, or to hold office, vote for trustees, or in any way or manner participate in the benefits of such fund unless he has served as a volunteer fireman for a period of at least five consecutive years, and be of the age of fifty-five years when this law goes into effect."

In my opinion the language above quoted, in connection with the provisions of sections 2 and 3 of the bill, make it effective in the particular concerning which you inquire. That is to say, while it does not specifically provide that the election be held at any particular place, or otherwise regulate the manner of the casting of votes except to provide that voting shall be by ballot, yet the lack of such provisions would not, in my opinion, make the bill inoperative should it be approved.

I cannot refrain, however, from calling attention to what appears to be a serious question respecting the validity of the whole law arising out of the language of section 9, above quoted. Because of its peculiar phraseology, a person who had served for five consecutive years as a volunteer fireman would not be entitled to the benefits of the fund unless he had arrived at the age of fifty-five at the time the act took effect. Should he have the other qualifications but not arrive at that age until one day after the taking effect of the bill, it would not be possible for him to participate in the benefits of the fund. This seems to be violative of article I, section 2 of the constitution of the state which declares that our government is instituted for the equal protection and benefit of the people, and prevents the general assembly from passing laws which do not operate with equality upon all members of the class to which they naturally apply.

By limiting the benefits of the act to those persons who are of the age of fifty-five years when the law goes into effect, the bill creates a favored class by an arbitrary distinction, which has no relation to the main purpose of the bill.

While I would not go so far as to state positively that the bill would be held unconstitutional if tested in the courts, especially in view of the fact that you have not requested my opinion upon the question, yet I cannot avoid stating my conviction that the bill is violative of the constitutional principle to which I have referred.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VACANCY OF COMMON PLEAS JUDGESHIP WHEN ORIGINAL TERM EXPIRES DECEMBER 31, 1916—SUCCESSOR ELECTED IN YEAR 1916 BY ELECTORS OF COUNTY FOR SHORT AND LONG TERMS.

The successor of a person appointed in May, 1915, to fill a vacancy in the subdivisional comman pleas judgeship, the original term of which would expire on December 31, 1916, is to be elected at the regular election for common pleas judges in the year 1916 by the electors of the county in which the judge, whose office became vacant, resided at the time of his election. Such election would be for the short term intervening between the date thereof and December 31, 1916. At the same election there must be chosen a county common pleas judge for the regular term commencing January 1, 1917.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 27, 1915.

HON. FRED W. MCCOY, Prosecuting Attorney, Carrollton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 24, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "As you have been informed by me, Mr. Harvey J. Eckley has been appointed and commissioned judge of the court of common pleas, for the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district, to fill the vacancy occurring by the resignation of Hon. John H. Fimple, who was elected in 1910. The vacancy occurred on the fourteenth day of May, 1915. Mr. Eckley's commission is dated that day, on the fifteenth he qualified by taking the required oath of office. His commission recites that he is to 'serve until his successor is elected and qualified.'
> "The question arises: When is such successor to be elected?
> "Does the 'annual election' mentioned in section 13, of article 4 of the constitution, mean the annual election to be held in November, 1916, or the election to be held in November, 1915?
> "Is the successor to be elected by the electors of Carroll county only, or by the electors of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district?
> "Can a judge of the court of common pleas be elected in an odd numbered year?"

All the questions which you ask have been answered in other opinions of this department. I hand you herewith a copy of my opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices respecting several questions arising under the amended constitution and statutes respecting the election and compensation of common pleas judges, which answers your third question by holding that the successor of Judge Eckley is to be elected by the electors of Carroll county only.

I think you have already seen my opinion to Honorable Frank B. Willis, respecting the very situation concerning which you inquire, in which I state my conclusions respecting your other questions, my view being that under the present constitution no election for common pleas judge can be held in an odd numbered year. So that whatever may be said academically of the effect of article XVII of the constitution upon article IV, section 13 thereof, the latter provision cannot be held to authorize the election of a common pleas judge except in an even numbered year.

Inasmuch as my opinion to Governor Willis was very short and merely expressed my conclusions without stating the reasons therefor, I may refer, in support of my opinion as therein given, to the case of State ex rel. v. Metcalfe, 80 O. S. 244. The facts in this case were as follows: (See opinion, page 253 et seq.)

Judge Burrows commenced a term of six years as judge of the circuit court on February 9, 1903. He resigned on December 31, 1908, his resignation to take effect on January 8, 1909. At the November election in 1908 Hon. E. E. Roberts was elected to succeed Judge Burrows for the term commencing on the ninth of February, 1909, but died on November 22, 1908.

On January 4, 1909, Governor Harris appointed Judge Metcalfe to serve from January 9, 1909, until the election and qualification of his successor. Subsequently Governor Harmon appointed Mr. Hoyt to serve from February 9, 1909, until the election and qualification of his successor, and the controversy was as to whether Judge Metcalfe or Judge Hoyt was entitled to hold the office after January 9, 1909.

The question as to how long Judge Metcalfe's appointment by Governor Harris remained effective was, therefore, directly involved in the case. It was not, of course, strictly necessary for the court, in deciding in his favor as it did, to go further than to hold that the appointment of Mr. Hoyt by Governor Harmon was without effect and that Judge Metcalfe was entitled to continue to hold the office after February 9, 1909. However, Judge Spear did say, in his opinion, at page 271 that:

> "It follows, and as conclusion we hold, that section 13 of article IV of the constitution is still in force, and that it controls this case; that the death of Judge Roberts did not create a vacancy in the office of circuit judge; that the period between the end of the six years for which Judge Burrows had been elected and the election and qualification of a successor (November, 1910), became a part of Judge Burrows' term; that the resignation of Judge Burrows carried with it the balance of his entire term, including the interim above referred to; that Judge Metcalfe, by reason of his appointment and qualification, succeeded to all that Judge Burrows resigned, and was thus clothed with the power to hold the office until a successor should be elected and qualified, and that the appointment of relator to take effect February 1, 1909, was ineffective to give any title to the office. We desire to emphasize that the crucial question at issue is not whether or no, as a general proposition, by force of our constitution and laws, a judge holds over until his successor is elected and qualified. But the question is, What is the effect of an appointment to fill a vacancy? We think, for the reasons heretofore given, the effect distinctly prescribed by section 13 of article IV, viz.: to clothe the appointee with the power to hold until a successor is elected and qualified, affords the answer. If this is so, then the relator can have no possible standing to demand the office.''

If the court had regarded section 13 of article IV as requiring an election at the next succeeding November to choose a judge to succeed the appointed judge, the election in November, 1909, instead of November, 1910, would have been designated as the proper election. It is true that this point was conceded by both sides (see page 255 of the opinion). However, on page 257 of the opinion, in speaking of the effect of the various provisions of article XVII, Judge Spear says:

''That regarding vacancies in elective state offices is practically the equivalent of the provision of section 13 of article IV, although more comprehensive in its application.''

The first branch of the syllabus of this case is as follows:

''Article XVII of the constitution, adopted November 7, 1905, does not expressly repeal or abrogate section 13 of article IV of the constitution, nor is it in conflict therewith; and applying to the construction of the former section the established rule that repeals by implication are not favored, it follows that the clause of section 13 which provides that where 'the office of any judge becomes vacant before the expiration of the regular term for which he was elected, the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the governor until a successor is elected and qualified,' remains in force.''

It is significant that the court did not hold that entire section 13 of article IV remain in force, but only so much of it as is quoted in the above branch of the syllabus. Having regard to all these considerations, as well as to the argument of the opinion as a whole, which is too lengthy to be quoted here, it seems clear that the court held that that part of article IV, section 13 which provides that:

''* * * Such successor shall be elected for the unexpired term, at the first annual election that occurs more than thirty days after the vacancy shall have happened,'' is supplanted by that clause of article XVII, subsequently adopted, which provides as to all state officers that:

''* * * Every such vacancy shall be filled by election at the first general election for the office which is vacant, that occurs more than thirty days after the vacancy shall have occurred. The person elected shall fill the office for the unexpired term.''

Inasmuch as section 1 of article XVII provides that:

''Election for state and county officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the even numbered years,'' it follows, of course, that: "general election for the office of common pleas judge" can only be held in the even numbered years.

The legislature acted on this theory when it provided in the act found in 104 O. L. 243 that:

> "* * * When a vacancy may have occurred in the office of any judge of the court of common pleas, in office or elected thereto prior to January 1, 1913, his successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first annual election that occurs in an even numbered year more than thirty days after such vacancy may have occurred, and such election shall be by the qualified electors of the county in which the judge, whose office became vacant, resided at the time of his election."

The foregoing considerations constitute my reasons for holding, as I did in my opinion to the governor, a copy of which you have seen, that Judge Eckley's successor will be elected in November, 1916.

The above quoted provision of section 1532, as amended 104 O. L. 243, constitutes my reason for holding that the election in November, 1916, will be by the qualified electors of Carroll county only, not by those of the first subdivision of the ninth judicial district. I have fully developed my reason, on this point, in the enclosed opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

You will observe that in November, 1916, two positions will have to be filled, viz.: the office of common pleas judge for the term beginning immediately and extending to January 1, 1917, and the office of common pleas judge for the regular term of six years, beginning on said last named date.

Under the provisions of section 1532, supra, both of these positions will be filled by the same group of electors, viz.: those of Carroll county only.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN "INTERURBAN RAILROAD" AND RAILROAD—MANNER OF OPERATING PASSENGER AND FREIGHT TRAINS IS THE CRITERION.

A commercial railroad, organized and originally operated as such, does not lose its character and take on that of an interurban railroad, as to any part of its business, by installing electric cars for the transportation of passengers and operating such cars with relative frequent stops, when the train service is no more frequent than it was prior to electrification.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 27, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On May 20th, you sent to me a statement of facts and other data concerning the operations of the Lorain, Ashland & Southern Railroad Company, and requested my opinion as to whether the company's operations constitute it an "interurban railroad" within the meaning of section 5416 of the General Code with respect to its electric passenger service, it being conceded that with respect to its freight service the company is a ''railroad'' within the meaning of said section.

The company was organized as a commercial railroad company, and for a time conducted its operations in the usual manner; that is, both its passenger and freight trains were hauled by steam locomotives, the former making only station stops and there being but a limited number of such passenger trains per day. Recently, however, the company has discontinued the use of steam power in the propulsion of its passenger trains and, except on very infrequent occasions, uses electric cars for such service. These cars, which are operated over the entire line of the company, stop with relative frequency, as is shown by the time table issued by the company; that is, the stops are not limited to stations, but the cars also stop at cross roads. However, the company still operates but two trains a day each way over each of its divisions.

It will not be helpful in discussing this question to quote the definitions of section 5416 of the General Code, as it must be admitted that these definitions are neither complete nor satisfactory and fail to show any distinction whatever between an ''interurban railroad company'' and a ''railroad company.'' This is for the reason that the definitions employ terms which themselves require definition, so that in the final analysis the distinction between an ''interurban railroad'' and a ''railroad'' must be sought outside of the statute.

Of course, though the distinction is difficult to find, it is a very material one, for railroad companies are required to pay excise taxes on their gross intrastate earnings at the rate of 4 per cent., while the rate as to interurban railroads is 1.2 per cent.

The company relies upon the case of Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth Railroad Co. v. Poland, 10 N. P. (n. s.), 617, affirmed without report 88 O. S., 596. In this case Judge Kinkead, of the Franklin county common pleas court, after discussing the difficulty of distinguishing between an ''interurban railroad'' and what he called a ''commercial railroad,'' held on the specific cases before him that where a company originally incorporated as a steam railroad had so changed the character of its operations as to abandon steam except for very limited freight service, to run single cars propelled by electricity, to reduce its fares, operate passenger trains making very frequent stops on a comparatively frequent schedule, etc., it had become in contemplation of the taxation law an interurban railroad company instead of a steam railroad company; but that it was possible for a company to carry on both classes of business, in which event, if the earnings from the two classes could be separated, the company should pay excise taxes both as an interurban railroad company and as a steam railroad company, basing the one charge at the rate of 1.2 per cent. on the earnings from the one class of business and the other charge at the rate of 4 per cent. upon the earnings from the other class.

Judge Kinkead had three specific cases before him, in two of which the judgment of the court was that the company should pay taxes as an interurban railroad company only. The third case, in which the judgment was that the company should pay taxes on both classes of business, was as a matter of fact a separate action.

Of these three cases the first two only were taken to the supreme court and affirmed. The third case, as the commission knows, was never passed upon by any higher court. In point of fact, when the case reached the circuit court on appeal, the plaintiff company so amended its pleadings as to pray for a judgment to the effect that it should pay excise taxes on its entire business at the rate of 1.2 per cent.; and there being no real difference between the facts of this case and those of the two cases that went to the supreme court, they were all disposed of in precisely the same manner when the decision of the supreme court was rendered.

Thus it is seen that the affirmance by the supreme court of the case of Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth Railroad Co. v. Poland does not constitute an approval of Judge Kinkead's holding that the third company, which was the Youngstown & Ohio River Railroad Company, was liable for taxes in two capacities.

I mention these facts, however, merely to make clear what the supreme court of the state held in the case cited; for it is not necessary in order to answer your question to consider the correctness of Judge Kinkead's opinion that one company may be liable for excise taxes both as an interurban railroad company and as a railroad company, on separate branches of its business.

Upon careful examination of the record in the Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth Railroad Company case I find that the following conclusions of law are justified by the court's judgment:

In the first place, the distinction between an "interurban railroad" and a "railroad" is not determined by the motive power used. Therefore, the mere fact that an otherwise commercial railroad uses electricity to propel its passenger trains does not change the character of the operation.

It follows also from this conclusion that no particular type of motive power other than steam is necessary in order to constitute an interurban service as distinguished from a commercial service.

In the second place, the manner of operating trains, both passenger and freight, is the final criterion.

Now in the case cited, the two changes in the method of operation, other than that respecting motive power, were the change with respect to the number of stops made by each train or car and the change in the number of cars operated. There were other changes with respect to the operation of the freight service, but as freight operations are not involved in your inquiry I omit mention of them.

In the case which you submit there has been a change with respect to the frequency with which the passenger cars operated by the company stop, but there has been no change with respect to the number of trains or cars operated. The question is thus raised as to whether a change in the one particular, without a change in the other, is sufficient to change the character of the passenger service from that of a "commercial railroad" to that of an "interurban railroad."

In my opinion, both elements are necessary in order to effect a change in the character of the operation.

In Hocking Valley Railway Company v. the Public Utilities Commission, 92 O. S., —, decided May 16, 1915, and not yet reported, the Public Utilities Commission had ordered the railway company to continue to furnish a certain "interurban service" which it had undertaken, the question being as to the validity of this order. The court in sustaining the same found it necessary to determine what an "interurban service" is, and on that point used the following language, per Johnson, J.:

> "It is important that an adequate conception should be had of the meaning of the term 'interurban service.' It is obvious that the commission used the term as meaning a service consisting of cars or trains which are run more frequently than any through steam passenger service, and also a service in which frequent stops are made, so that patrons need not walk far along the line to arrive at the nearest stopping place. Such a service is to be distinguished from the ordinary passenger trains of steam railroads in that the latter do not stop except at regular stations > located in cities or villages, which are at intervals much greater than the stops which the evidence shows were made by the defendant on the portion of its line involved in this proceeding.''

In this case the court seemed to recognize the two distinguishing characteristics of an interurban service as distinguished from a commercial service, and the fact that both of them are mentioned shows that the court had in mind at least that both are necessary elements of the distinction.

I, therefore, conclude that the Lorain, Ashland & Southern Railway Company did not change the character of its passenger service from ''commercial'' to ''interurban'' merely by installing electric power and increasing the frequency of the stops made by its trains, when it did not at the same time commence the operation of trains on a relatively frequent schedule, such as is the rule in the operation of interurban railroads generally.

I may add that the figures submitted with the papers show that this railroad is essentially a commercial railroad, its passenger service being quite subordinate to its freight business; so that if it should be held, notwithstanding Judge Kinkead's decision with respect to the Youngstown & Ohio River Railroad Company, that a given corporation would be subject to excise taxation either as a commercial railroad company or as an interurban railroad company, without being permitted to divide its business and pay at a different rate on each class, then, in whatever light the passenber operations of the Lorain, Ashland & Southern Railroad Company might be viewed, the road as a whole would have to be regarded as a commercial railroad.

It is therefore my opinion that excise taxes should be charged against the Lorain, Ashland & Southern Railroad Company with respect to all of its earnings at the rate of 4 per cent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—COMPENSATION FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT IN TOWNSHIP—TRUSTEES PAID UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 6999, GENERAL CODE—TOWNSHIP TREASURER PAID UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 7015, GENERAL CODE—SERVICES OF TOWNSHIP CLERK GOVERNED BY SECTION 6999, GENERAL CODE—IN LIEU OF ALLOWANCE UNDER SECTION 3308, GENERAL CODE.

For the services rendered by the township trustees under the general plan of road improvement adopted by the electors of a township, under authority of section 6976, G. C., said trustees are to be compensated under authority of section 6999, G. C., and not under authority of section 3294, G. C., and for the services rendered by the township treasurer under such plan said treasurer is to be compensated under authority of section 7015, G. C., and not under section 3308, G. C.

For the services rendered by the township clerk in the performance of duties required by the statutes governing the aforesaid plan, said clerk is entitled to a reasonable compensation not to exceed $100.00 in any one year, to be allowed by the township trustees under authority of section 6999, G. C., and said compensation is in lieu of any allowance for said service under authority of section 3308, G. C., and is subject to the limitation of $150.00 a year provided by said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 27, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of May 12th you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "If a road that does not enter or run through a village or city in the meaning of section 6976 is improved by a board of township trustees under sections 6976 to 7018, General Code, can officials legally draw the compensation therein provided or should they draw their compensation as fixed by other sections? That is, should the treasurer be compensated under section 7015, General Code, or 3318, and township trustees under section 6999 or section 3294, General Code?
> "Should the clerk draw the additional compensation provided in section 6999, General Code?"

Section 6976 to 7018, inclusive, of the General Code, as found in the chapter relating to township roads, and under the subdivision of said chapter relating to roads partly in a municipality, provide a general plan for the improvement and maintenance of the roads of a township including a road running into or through a village or city within such township.

Upon the adoption of said plan by the majority vote of the qualified electors of such township voting at an election held for said purpose, ample authority is given for the administration of the work contemplated by such plan and to provide the necessary funds to pay the cost and expense of such improvement.

Under said plan the township trustees may improve any road in the township which has been designated by the commissioners appointed under authority of section 6982, G. C.

In case the township trustees determine to improve a road in the township, designated by said commissioners under authority of section 6985, G. C., and it happens that said road does not enter or extend through a village or city in said township, you inquire whether the trustees are to be compensated under section 6999, G. C., and the township treasurer under section 7015, G. C., or should said trustees be compensated under section 3294, G. C., and said treasurer under the provision of section 3318. G. C.

These sections provide as follows:

> "Section 6999. For the duties performed under the provisions of this chapter, the trustees, upon filing an itemized statement with the clerk of such township, as provided by law, shall receive two dollars per day for the time actually employed in addition to the fees allowed otherwise by law for other services. Such compensation shall not in any one year exceed one hundred dollars each, for the services performed under such subdivision. The trustees shall allow the township clerk for his services under such subdivision a reasonable compensation, not to exceed one hundred dollars in any one year.
> "Section 7015. The treasurer of such township shall receive and disburse all money arising from the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter. He shall receive as compensation therefor one-half of one per cent. of the first ten thousand dollars, or less, distributed in any one year, and one-fourth of one per cent. of any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, to be paid out of the township funds, and he shall not receive other compensation for services rendered under such subdivision.
> "Section 3994. Each trustee shall be entitled to one dollar and fifty cents for each day of service in the discharge of his duties in relation to partition fences, to be paid in equal proportions by the parties, and one dollar and fifty cents for each day of service in the business of the township, to be paid from the township treasury. The compensation of any trustee to be paid from the treasury shall not exceed one hundred and fifty dollars in any year including services in connection with the poor. Each trustee shall present an itemized statement of his account for such per diem and services, which shall be filed with the clerk of the township, and by him preserved for inspection by any person interested.
> "Section 3318. The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent. of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees."

It will be observed that for the duties performed by the township trustees under the provisions of sections 6976 to 7018, inclusive, of the General Code, each trustee, upon filing an itemized statement with the clerk as provided by law, is entitled to receive two dollars per day for the time actually employed "in addition to the fees allowed otherwise by law for other services."

Under section 7015, General Code, the township treasurer is required to receive and disburse all money used in the administration of the general plan of improvement, above referred to, and as compensation therefor he is entitled to one-half of one per cent. on the first ten thousand dollars, or less, distributed in any one year, and one-fourth of one per cent. on any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, to be paid out of the township funds, and he is not entitled to any other compensation for such services.

It is clear that the provisions of section 6999 and section 7015, G. C., are special in their application and do not conflict with the general provisions of sections 3294 and 3318, G. C.

Replying to your first question, I am of the opinion that, for the services rendered by the township trustees under the general plan of road improvement adopted by the electors of the township under authority of section 6976, et seq., of the General Code, said trustees are to be compensated under authority of section 6999, G. C., and not under authority of section 3294, G. C., and that, for the services rendered by the township treasurer, under said plan, said treasurer is to be compensated under authority of section 7015, G. C., and not under section 3318, G. C.

The latter part of section 6999, G. C., provides:

> "The trustees shall allow the township clerk for his services under such subdivision a reasonable compensation, not to exceed one hundred dollars in any one year."

Section 3308, G. C., provides:

> "The clerk shall be entitled to the following fees, to be paid by the parties requiring the service: Twenty-five cents for recording each mark or brand; ten cents for each hundred words of record required in the establishment of township roads, to be opened and repaired by the parties; ten cents for each hundred words of records or copies in matters relating to partition fences, but not less than twenty-five cents for any one copy, to be paid from the township treasury; ten cents for each hundred words of record required in the establishment of township roads, to be opened and kept in repair by the superintendents; for keeping the record of the proceedings of the trustees, stating and making copies of accounts and settlements, attending suits for any against the township, and for any other township business the trustees require him to perform, such reasonable compensation as they allow. In no one year shall he be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than one hundred and fifty dollars."

You inquire whether the clerk of the township, in the case above referred to, is entitled to compensation for services rendered, under the above provision of section 6999, G. C., in addition to the compensation authorized by section 3308, G. C.

The provision of section 6999, G. C., as above quoted, is special in its application, is not in conflict with the general provision of secton 3308, G. C., but is limited by the provision of the latter section.

It will be observed, under the provision of section 3308, G. C., that for any business which the township trustees may require the clerk to perform, other than that enumerated in said section, said trustees may allow reasonable compensation subject to the limitation that in no one year shall said clerk be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than one hundred and fifty dollars ($150.00).

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that for services rendered by the township clerk in the performance of duties required by the statutes governing the aforesaid plan of township road improvement, said clerk is entitled to a reasonable compensation not to exceed $100.00 in any one year, to be allowed by the township trustees under authority of section 6999, G. C., and that said compensation is in lieu of any allowance for such service under authority of section 3308, G. C., and is subject to the limitation of one hundred and fifty dollars ($150.00) per year provided by said section.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 469—CONFERS AUTHORITY TO LEASE CANAL LANDS ON CERTAIN BOARDS WHICH HAVE BEEN ABOLISHED.

House bill No. 469 seeks to confer authority to lease canal lands on certain boards which have been abolished. The bill may, therefore, be unworkable in its present form, and if time permits it would be wise to again amend section 13965 of the Appendix to the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have requested my opinion as to the effect of house bill No. 469 to which bill I called your attention several days ago. This bill is entitled "An act to amend section 13965 of the General Code, to provide for the extension of existing leases of state canal lands."

The section as amended follows the exact language of the old section, and also contains the following further and additional provision:

> "Any owner of an existing lease for state canal lands may surrender the same to the state in order to have the land described therein included in a new lease, which shall not be for a greater term than fifteen years, and the application therefor shall definitely set forth the reasons why an extension of the lease is desired, but before granting a new lease for such state canal land, the superintendent of public works must be satisfied that the extension of the lease is for the purpose of making a valuable improvement thereon, which the lessee could not otherwise afford to make for the remaining portion of the unexpired lease. When a new lease, which shall not be for a less rental than the original lease, has been granted and approved by the governor and the attorney general, the superintendent of public works shall cancel the original lease."

In repealing and re-enacting the section in question the author of the language used in the amended section, in so far as such amended section covers the exact subject-matter of the old section, apparently failed to note that the canal commission of Ohio, the board of public works of Ohio, and the office of chief engineer of public works of Ohio, have all been abolished by legislative enactment, and that there is not at the present time any canal commission, any board of public works, or any chief engineer of public works.

The duties of the board of public works and the Ohio canal commission in the selling or leasing of canal or state lands have by section 464, G. C., 103 O. L., 127, been cast upon the superintendent of public works. There is, therefore, grave danger that the section in its amended form, in so far as it relates to the making of new leases, is unworkable, for the reason that it seeks to confer the authority to make these leases upon officials and boards who have no existence at the present time. While it might be possible that the courts would give to this section as amended such an interpretation as to make it workable, yet if time and opportunity permit it would be advisable for the present legislature to take such action as would remove all doubt in the premises. This action would involve again amending the section by striking out the expressions "said commission," "the board of public works," and "the chief engineer of public works" wherever they occur in the section and substituting therefor the expression "the superintendent of public works." The section as redrafted in accordance with the above suggestion would read as follows:

> "That each and every tract of land, and any part of the berme bank of any canal, canal basin, reservoir and outer slope of the towing path embankment, which the superintendent of public works shall find to be the property of the state of Ohio, the use of which, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, if leased, would not materially injure or interfere with the maintenance and navigation of any of the canals of this state, shall be valued by the superintendent of public works at its true value in money, and if such land shall not then be under an existing lease, may be leased for any purpose or purposes other than for railroads operated by steam, but the superintendent of public works shall have power to make leases and prescribe regulations for the crossing of the canals, canal basins or canal lands by any railroad operated by steam, electricity or other motive power, or for the necessary use, for railroad purposes, of any part of the berme banks of a canal, canal basin or any portion of the canal lands for a distance not exceeding two miles, or if then under an existing lease, then at the expiration of such lease, may be leased on the terms and conditions hereinafter in this act provided for, but railroad companies unlawfully in the possession and use of state land at the date of the passage of this act shall take a lease thereon for the term of fifteen years in the same manner as when lands are leased for other purposes, or remove their tracks, buildings or other structures from said land. Any owner of an existing lease for state canal lands may surrender the same to the state in order to have the land described therein included in a new lease, which shall not be for a greater term than fifteen years, and the application therefor shall definitely set forth the reasons why an extension of the lease is desired, but before granting a new lease for such state canal land, the superintendent of public works must be satisfied that the extension of the lease is for the purpose of making a valuable improvement thereon, which the lessee could not otherwise afford to make for the remaining portion of the unexpired lease. When a new lease, which shall not be for a less rental than the original lease, has been granted and approved by the governor and attorney general, the superintendent of public works shall cancel the original lease."

I also call your attention to the fact that section 13695 is found in the Appendix of the General Code, and not in the General Code. If it should be deemed advisable to clear up by legislative action the matter first referred to herein, then the expression "General Code" as found in the title of the bill, and also in section 1 and section 2 thereof, should be changed to read "Appendix to the General Code."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 317 AMENDS HOUSE BILL NO. 29, ALTHOUGH NO REFERENCE IS MADE IN TITLE OR ENACTING CLAUSE OF LATTER BILL TO THE FORMER—INTENTION OF LEGISLATURE IS EXPRESSED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for inspection amended senate bill No. 317, and requested my opinion as to whether said bill is sufficiently definite and certain as to indicate what act it is intended to amend. The uncertainty arises out of the language used in the title of said act as well as in section 1. Said act is entitled:

> "An act to amend sections 31, 32 and 39 of the act entitled: 'An act to provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation and to repeal certain sections of the General Code, relating thereto.'"

Section 1 provides as follows:

> "Section 1. That sections 31, 32 and 39 of the act entitled: 'An act to provide for the listing and valuation of property for the purposes of taxation and to repeal certain sections of the General Code, relating thereto,' be and the same are hereby amended to read as follows:"

While no reference is made, either in the title or in section 1 of the act, to the date on which the act which it is sought to amend was passed, yet from a consideration of the entire act I am of the opinion that the intention of the legislature to amend what is known as the Parrett-Whittemore bill, being house bill No. 29, which passed the General Assembly on May 7, 1915, and by you approved on May 8, 1915, is sufficiently expressed. No other legislation of a similar nature has been enacted by any general assembly having the title quoted, and it is therefore evident that the Parrett-Whittemore bill is the legislation sought to be amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

P. S.—Amended senate bill No. 317 is herewith returned.

"Delaware Armory—Continued. After inspection and consideration of said bids it was unanimously

Resolved, That the bid of M. Gallup, of Defiance, Ohio, is the lowest bid which complies with the plans and specifications, and it is further determined that it would be to the best interests of the state to accept said bid without the maple flooring, it being the lowest bid with or without said flooring. The board, therefore, accepts the bid of M. Gallup for construction of the Delaware armory complete, according to plans and specifications, including material and labor and all branches of the work except the maple flooring, at the said bid price of seventeen thousand, nine hundred and sixty-six and 49/100 dollars ($17,966.49), and said M. Gallup is hereby awarded a contract for said work at said price, both award and contract being subject to the approval of the attorney general of Ohio. The contract bond is hereby fixed at $9,000.00.

"I hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the minutes of the Ohio state armory board.

(Signed) "B. L. BARGAR, Secretary."

The proposals of the five bidders referred to in the abstract from the minutes, together with the affidavit of publication submitted by you have been examined, and upon a comparison of the proposals it is found that the bid of M. Gallup, of Defiance, Ohio, is the lowest of those submitted providing for the construction of the Delaware armory, omitting the maple flooring specified.

I find that the notice to contractors, which was published in the Delaware Gazette for a period of four consecutive weeks to be regular, and also the proceedings of the state armory board awarding the contract to M. Gallup subject to the approval of the undersigned.

It is my opinion, therefore, that from all the facts before me the contract should be awarded to M. Gallup, of Defiance, Ohio, and when the contract is submitted to this office immediate attention will be given to the matter of its formal approval.

The proposals of the various officers, and the proof of publication are herewith returned to you for your files.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CAN SELL SCHOOL LANDS VALUED AT LESS THAN $300.00, IF A RESOLUTION PASSED BY THE BOARD DETERMINES THAT A FEE IS IN THE BOARD, THE LAND IS NOT NEEDED FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES AND THE SALE IS FOR THE BEST INTEREST OF THE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

The board of education of a school district, acting under authority of section 4749, G. C., may determine by resolution that certain real property which said boards owns in fee is not needed for school purposes and that it is for the best interest of the school district to sell the same, and if the value of said property is less than three hundred dollars the provisions of section 4756, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 536, are not applicable to the sale of said property and the same may be disposed of at private sale.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 20th, you request my opinion, as follows:

> "We are requested by the board of education of a special school district in this county to advise whether or not the board can sell outright a strip of school land for one hundred dollars after the adoption of said board of a resolution authorizing the sale and without posting notices or advertising?
> "Section 4756 of the General Code, governs the sale of school property by a board of education when the value of said property exceeds three hundred dollars, but we find no provisions governing sales when the value is less than three hundred dollars.
> "We are accordingly asking that you advise if it will be necessary for the board to take any action further than to adopt a resolution authorizing the sale in question."

Section 4749, G. C., provides:

> "The board of education of each school district, organized under the provisions of this title, shall be a body politic and corporate, and, as such, capable of suing and being sued, contracting and being contracted with, acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property, and taking and holding in trust for the use and benefit of such district any grant or devise of land and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property and of exercising such other powers and privileges as are conferred by this title and the laws relating to the public schools of this state."

Section 4756, G. C., as amended in 103, O. L., 536, provides in part:

> " When a board of education decides to dispose of real or personal property, held by it in its corporate capacity, exceeding in value three hundred dollars, it shall sell such property at public auction after giving at least thirty days' notice thereof by publication in a newspaper of general circulation or by posting notices thereof in five of the most public places in the district in which such property is situated. When the board has twice so offered a tract of real estate for sale at public auction and it is not sold, the board may sell it at private sale, either as an entire tract or in parcels, as the board deems best."

Providing the board of education of the school district owns in fee the strip of land, referred to in your inquiry, said board may, under authority of section 4749, G. C., determine by resolution that said strip of land is not needed for school purposes and that it is for the best interest of the school district to sell the same and, inasmuch as the value of said land is less than three hundred dollars, the provisions of section 4756, G. C., as amended, are not applicable to a sale made in accordance with the terms of said resolution.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that, upon the adoption of said resolution, said board of education may dispose of said tract of land at private sale.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 577 IS CONSTITUTIONAL—PROVISION FOR SIZE OF CABOOSE OF COMMON CARRIERS OPERATING MORE THAN TEN MILES OF TRACK.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me house bill No. 577, passed on May 19, 1915, with the request that I advise you as to the constitutionality of the proviso therein.

The bill is in form an amendment of section 8956-3, of the General Code, which, as amended, is as follows:

"Sec. 8956-3. Except as otherwise provided in this act, it shall be unlawful, from and after the first day of July, 1919, for any common carrier operating a railroad, in whole or in part, within this state, or any manager or division superintendent thereof to require or permit the use, upon such railroad, within this state, of any caboose car or other car used for like purpose, unless such caboose or other car shall be at least twenty-four feet in length, exclusive of platforms, and equipped with two four-wheeled trucks, suitable closets and cupola; provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to common carriers which operate less than ten miles of interstate railroad in Ohio."

The addition of the proviso in question constitutes the only change in the phraseology of the section affected by the amendment. (See the original section as enacted in 103 O. L., 719.)

The constitutional question which is raised arises under article I, section 2, a part of the bill of rights of the constitution of 1851, which provides in part as follows:

> "All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal protection and benefit. * * *"

No question arises under article II, section 26, which provides that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state, because the proviso does not affect the territorial operation of the law, as both the main part of the section and the proviso apply to all things of the classes named, wherever located in the state, and operate uniformly upon them.

State ex rel. v. Ferris, 53 O. S., 314.

I can find no decisions which are exactly in point under article 1, section 2 of the constitution. However, I think that the purport of the equality provision thereof is substantially the same as, and at least not more restrictive than, that provision of the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution which forbids a state to deny to "any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

State ex rel. v. Ferris, supra.

Therefore, it would seem that any authorities as to the interpretation of the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution in this particular would not only mark out the power of the state as such under the Federal Constitution, but would also serve to show the extent of the limitation imposed by the state constitution upon the general assembly of the state.

I am of the opinion that the proviso does not render the amended section unconstitutional.

The New York statute, forbidding the carrying of heating appliances of a certain type upon passenger cars, but excepting railroads less than fifty miles in length, was sustained as against an objection under the fourteenth amendment in N. Y. H. & H. R. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S., 628; while a full train crew law from which railroads less than fifty miles in length were exempted was sustained as against the same objection in C. R. I. & P. R. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S., 453.

The rule is that constitutional limitations requiring the equal protection and benefit of the laws do not forbid classification upon any reasonable basis. Where some reasonable basis of classification may be imagined, such a state of facts will be assumed, and the contrary must be clearly shown in order to strike the statute down. (Lindsley v. Carbonic Gas Co., 220 U. S., 61.) See Jeffrey Mfg. Co. v. Blagg, 235 U. S., 571, an Ohio case involving the constitutionality of the classification under the workmen's compensation act of establishments with those in which five or more workmen or operatives are continuously employed and those in which fewer are employed.

A reasonable basis for the classification which the proviso effects may be assumed to exist from the fact that interstate railroads less than ten miles in length will scarcely do any intrastate business at all; and although the law applies, in the absence of any federal legislation on the same subject-matter, to interstate trains as well as to intrastate trains, the primary object thereof is, and must be, limited to matters of state concern. In making a classification of this character some line must be drawn, and the mere fact that some relatively short distance other than ten miles might have been selected for such a purpose does not make the selection of that distance arbitrary and unreasonable in the legal sense.

This opinion is limited to the constitutionality of the bill as affected by the proviso.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MAIN MARKET ROUTE NO. XII—FROM VINTON VILLAGE THROUGH THURMAN AND WALES TO PATRIOT, INOPERATIVE—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION AND GOVERNOR MAY DESIGNATE AN ADDITIONAL INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY.

The last paragraph of section 6859-3, G. C., insofar as it seeks to designate a main market road from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, is inoperative; and will so remain unless the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the governor, designates an additional intercounty highway from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot. If the highway commissioner should see fit to designate such additional intercounty highway and such action should be approved by the governor, then the designation in question will become operative and the intercounty highway so designated will be the route of the main market road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 15, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Your attention is hereby called to the wording of the first and last paragraphs of section 6859-3, G. C., which read as follows:
> " 'Twenty-five per cent. of all moneys paid into the treasury of the state by reason of said levy shall be used for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of certain main market roads in said state, and the same shall be located along and upon the route of portions of said intercounty highways designated as follows, to wit:
> " 'Route No. XII, to be known as the Columbus and Ironton route, commencing at Columbus, thence in a southeasterly direction passing through Lancaster, Logan, McArthur, Hamden, Wellston, Vinton village, Thurman, Wales, Patriot, Waterloo to Ironton.'
> "Attached hereto is a copy of the map showing the officially designated intercounty highway system, as approved by Governor Harmon in December, 1912. You will note that there was no intercounty highway designated from Vinton village to Patriot by way of Thurman and Wales, in Gallia and Jackson counties.
> "Kindly render me a written opinion on the following points:

"(1) Is that part of main market route No. XII, described from Vinton village to Patriot, legally designated as a main market route?

"(2) If that part of main market route No. XII, described in section 6859-3 as leading from Vinton village to Patriot, is legally designated as a main market route, how is the exact route thus established to be determined?

"(3) Can main market road funds be applied on that part of main market route No. XII, as described in section 6859-3 as leading from Vinton village to Patriot?

"(4) Can intercounty highway funds be applied on that part of main market route No. XII, as described in section 6859-3 as leading from Vinton village to Patriot?"

As indicated by you, an answer to your questions involves a consideration of section 6859-3 of the General Code of Ohio, as found in 103 O. L., 155. In the first paragraph of this section, in dealing with the location of the various main market roads established by the act, the legislature provided that such roads should "be located along and upon the route or portions of * * * intercounty highways," thus clearly indicating a legislative intent to locate the main market roads designated by the act so that the routes thereof would follow roads already designated as intercounty highways. This paragraph of section 6859-3, G. C., may well be said to be declaratory of the general policy of the legislature in this matter. In the last paragraph of the section in question, indicating the course of main market route No. XII, to be known as the Columbus and Ironton route, commencing at Columbus and ending at Ironton, the legislature provided that the route should follow an established intercounty highway through Lancaster, Logan, McArthur, Hamden and Wellston to Vinton village. From Vinton village to Patriot, the general route as indicated by the legislature is through the villages of Thurman and Wales and does not follow the line of any intercounty highway. The remainder of the main market route from Patriot through Waterloo to Ironton, follows the line of a previously established intercounty highway.

Summarizing the above facts, it appears that in the first paragarph of section 6859-3, G. C., the legislature declared its general policy to be to establish main market routes upon the lines of previously established intercounty highways, but in designating main market route No. XII, the legislature seems to have endeavored to create an exception by establishing that part of main market route No. XII extending from Vinton village to Patriot over a highway not previously designated as an intercounty highway.

Under the familiar rule of construction that where there is in the same statute a particular enactment and also a general one, which in its most comprehensive sense would include what is embraced in the former, the particular enactment must be operative and the general enactment must be taken to affect only such cases within its general language as are not within the provisions of the particular enactment, it would seem clear, in the absence of any other difficulties, that the particular provisions of the last paragraph of section 6859-3, G. C., would prevail over the general provisions of the first paragraph of the section, and that there would appear a clear legislative intent to designate a main market route from Vinton village, through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, even though there be no previously established intercounty highway between Vinton village and Patriot.

A further difficulty is encountered, however, in giving effect to this legislative intent by reason of the fact that there exist several public highways extending from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot. In designating main market route No. XII from Columbus through Lancaster, Logan, McArthur, Hamden and Wellston to Vinton village, and in designating the same route from Patriot through Waterloo to Ironton, and in designating the eleven other main market routes provided for in the section now under consideration, this difficulty does not exist for the reason that all these points are connected by intercounty highways, which intercounty highways previous to the passage of the act in question, had been definitely designated in the manner provided by law, and their designation made a matter of public record.

As to the particular matter now under consideration, no intercounty highway has ever been designated as passing from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot. There being several different public highways extending from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, and the designation by the legislature of a main market route from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, not pointing out which one of these several highways is to be regarded as the main market road between the points in question, I am of the opinion that in the absence of further action, there is no way of giving effect to that part of the last paragraph of section 6859-3, G. C., which attempts to locate the route of main market road No. XII from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot.

Answering your questions specifically, I am of the opinion that as the matter now stands, no main market road can be regarded as having been designated from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, and that at the present time neither main market road funds nor intercounty highway funds can be legally applied to the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of any highway extending from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot.

I deem it proper, however, to call your attention to the fact that under section 1184-4, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 451, the state highway commissioner may, subject to the approval of the governor, designate additional routes as intercounty highways. Should you see fit to act under favor of this authorization and designate as an intercounty highway some one of the public highways from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, and should your action in this particular be approved by the governor, then that part of the last paragraph of section 6859-3, G. C., which is at present uncertain and inoperative, would become certain and operative. In other words, should you see fit to designate some public highway extending from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, as an additional intercounty highway, and should this action on your part be approved by the governor, then such additional intercounty highway so designated is to be regarded as the route of the main market road, and the designation attempted by the legislature will become effective. But unless and until you do designate, with the approval of the governor, some public highway extending from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, as an additional intercounty highway, the attempt of the legislature to designate a main market road from Vinton village through Thurman and Wales to Patriot, must be regarded as inoperative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BREWERY—BAR FIXTURES—THE CONSTITUTION PROHIBITS A BREWERY LOANING BAR FIXTURES TO A LICENSEE—LEGALITY OF SALE OR LEASE OF SUCH PROPERTY IS QUESTION OF FACT IN EACH CASE.

Article XV, section 9 of the constitution, and section 1261-34, G. C., (103 O. L., 222) prohibit a brewing company from loaning bar fixtures to a licensee; whether leasing of bar fixtures for compensation or sale upon deferred payments, secured by chattel mortgage, is prohibited by the constitution and law, is a question of fact to be determined from all the circumstances.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 8, 1915, as follows:

> "Kindly advise the state liquor licensing board whether under the law:
> "(1) A brewing company may loan bar fixtures to a licensee without compensation therefor, retaining the title in its own name?
> "(2) A brewing company may rent bar fixtures to a licensee receiving therefor compensation in the form of rent and retaining the title to the same in its own name?
> "(3) A brewing company may sell bar fixtures to a licensee, executing a bill of sale therefor, taking for deferred payments thereon a chattel mortgage to secure notes for balance due, in its own name?"

Each of the above questions involves a consideration of that part of article XV, section 9 of the constitution, as follows:

> "License shall not be granted to any applicant who is in any way interested in the business conducted at any other place where intoxicating liquors are sold or kept for sale as a beverage nor shall such license be granted unless the applicant or applicants are the only persons in any way pecuniarily interested in the business for which the license is sought and no other person shall be in any way interested therein during the continuance of the license; if such interest of such person shall appear, the license shall be deemed revoked."

and the same language is incorporated in section 1261-34, G. C., 103 O. L., 222.

Bar fixtures are generally recognized as being necessary to a convenient and perhaps successful conduct of the business of selling intoxicating liquors at retail, but there is no such necessity for a brewing company to possess them. The only apparent reason for a brewing company to own bar fixtures is to secure some advantage in the sale of its product. A brewing company which would allow a licensee to use its bar fixtures free of charge would only do so in pursuance of an agreement, expressed or implied, that such licensee would favor the product of that company. In other words, the supplying gratis by the brewing company of the bar fixtures would be a means employed by the brewing company to secure an interest in the licensee's business by putting him under obligations to buy that company's product. It seems to me that such a transaction would clearly be within the inhibition of both the constitution and the law hereinbefore referred to.

The transactions described in your second and third statements seem to me to be dependent upon the peculiar facts and circumstances that may surround each particular case and the good faith of the parties to the arrangement. If a brewing company, the owner of bar fixtures, should lease them to a licensee for an actual consideration wholly independent of the obligation, express or implied, that the licensee should in any way favor the lessor; or should sell such fixtures to such licensee upon credit, taking security therefor, and without any obligation, express or implied, that the licensee should in any way favor the vendor, such transactions would not violate the law.

However, the real intention of the parties can only be gathered from all the facts and circumstances of each particular case, and it seems to me to be impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule which should govern in all cases based upon the mere form. Mere form will not be sufficient, and in each case you should look beyond the form to the substance of the transaction and you will be justified in requiring the parties to clearly establish good faith in each such transaction.

I am not unmindful of the decision of the Lucas county court of appeals decided February 15, 1915, in the case of Kopaczewski v. Breweries Company, which is not in accord with the views above expressed. In this case the question involved was whether or not the Breweries Company, which deeded to D a piece of real estate upon which to conduct a saloon and containing a condition that the beer of the grantor should be sold upon the premises exclusively, was given such an interest in the business of the grantee as contemplated within the constitutional and statutory provisions above quoted.

The court, in considering that case, said:

> "We are not able to see how the transaction set forth in the petition is in any way in conflict with the language above quoted. No license to sell intoxicating liquors on the premises in question has been granted to the brewing company nor is the brewing company interested in the license which has been granted, nor in the business conducted on the premises. The only relation set forth in the pleading is one showing that the defendants are, and are required to be for a limited period of time, customers of the plaintiff in the event that they sell beer on the premises. If the contention in this respect of the defendant, Szparagowski, were correct, it would follow that his own license to conduct the business on the premises should be revoked. Of course, a brewing company is naturally interested in the success of its customers, but that interest is no different in a legal sense in this case from the interest which it has in the success of other customers. The fact that the brewing company is to furnish the entire supply of draught beer sold by the defendants does not give that company an interest in the business any more than an electric light company which supplied light for the saloon or a water company which supplied water, or a gas company which heated the saloon, would have an interest in the business there conducted. It is not such an interest as is within the inhibition of that section of the constitution from which quotation has been made."

With all due deference and respect to that court, but mindful of the conditions sought to be remedied by the constitutional amendment and the law enacted thereunder, I am unable to agree with the Lucas county court of appeals in the conclusion reached in the above case. While ordinarily I feel bound to follow the principle laid down in a decision of the court of appeals, yet the question involved in this case is of such importance and to my mind the decision of said court is so clearly wrong that I do not feel so bound in this matter.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that each case submitted to you presents a question for a determination of fact, and if you are satisfied that the transaction in question is one which would make the brewing company "in any way interested" in the business of the licensee, the license should either be refused or revoked, according as the case may be.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS CERTIFIED TO AUDITOR OF STATE AND ATTORNEY GENERAL UNDER SECTIONS 20 AND 268, G. C., BY RECEIPT OF PRINCIPAL WITHOUT INTEREST REQUIRES CONCURRENCE OF AUDITOR OF STATE AND ATTORNEY GENERAL.

The settlement of such claims as are certified to the auditor of state, under section 20 and to the attorney general under section 268, G. C., by receipt of principal without interest, requires concurrence of the auditor of state and the attorney general.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—We are in receipt of your letter under date of May 18, 1915, as follows:

> "In the matter of delinquent claims certified to this office and which we request payment of under sections 20, 259 and 268, General Code, I beg to submit for your consideration the following inquiries:
> "Section 268 provides: * * * 'Such claims shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the day on which they respectively fall due and, if the attorney general and auditor of state find there is a set-off or abatement to a claim, they may adjust it in such manner as they deem equitable. * * *'
> "In the event an offer is made to this office of the principal without the interest and we would accept the same in full of the account, would we be thus allowing a 'set-off or abatement to a claim?' With such an offer would it be necessary to obtain your concurrence to the same before we could accept it?
> "Again, after a claim has been certified to your office would a settlement by you without the interest, be allowing 'a set-off or abatement?' On such a settlement would the concurrence of this office be necessary?"

Section 20 of the General Code, requires an officer or agent of the state, coming into possession of a claim due and payable, on failure to collect such claim within sixty days, to certify it to the auditor of state.

Section 268 requires the auditor of state to keep an account of the claims reported to him, and to immediately give notice to the party indebted, of the amount and nature thereof, and if the same has not been paid within sixty days after notification the auditor shall file with the attorney general for collection or suit. Then follows the language which you have quoted in your letter.

It would appear that the claims that are certified to the auditor of state bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the date upon which they respectively fall due. Such being the fact, the interest becomes a part of the claim as much as does the principal.

The word "abatement" has various meanings in law, but as used in the statute referred to has the ordinary meaning of "abatement," as the term is defined by Bouvier in his law distionary, under the heading "In Contracts" as:

> "A reduction made by the creditor, for the prompt payment of the debt due by the payer or debtor."

and any reduction made, either on the principal or interest of a claim due, would be an "abatement," as used in the statute. Therefore, since interest is to be computed by the auditor of state upon claims received by him, and the interest is as much a part of the claim as the principal, the acceptance of an offer to pay the principal without interest in full of the account would be the allowance of an "abatement" to the claim, and as I view the statute would therefore require the concurrence of yourself and this department to the adjustment of such claim by the payment of the principal without interest, whether the claim be still in your hands for the sixty days mentioned in the statute or certified to this department.

You will understand, of course, that this opinion is written solely relative to the settlement of claims which, under the provisions of section 268, General Code, bear interest.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—NOT ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT FOR BOARD AND EXPENSES INCURRED BY THEM WHILE SERVING AS MEMBERS OF THE QUADRENNIAL AND ANNUAL BOARDS OF EQUALIZATION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1915.

HON. JOHN M. MARKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 24th, you submitted for my opinion the question as to whether or not you should bring suit to recover money drawn by the county commissioners for "board and expenses" incurred by them while serving as members of the quadrennial and annual boards of equalization.

I notified you several weeks ago that the supreme court of Ohio, in the case of State ex rel. Enos v. Stone, had held that county commissioners were not entitled to compensation while serving as members of the quadrennial board of equalization.

While it is true that the supreme court only passed upon the question as to the right of the county commissioners to receive compensation for services while acting as members of the quadrennial board of equalization in 1910, yet the reasoning of the court and the fact that section 5597 of the General Code (which was the section under consideration) included compensation not only for members of the quadrennial county board, but also for members of the annual county board of equalization, as found in the General Code at the time of its adoption by the general assembly in 1910, lead me to the conclusion that county commissioners are not entitled to compensation for serving as members of the quadrennial county board of equalization nor as members of the annual county board of equalization.

In regard to the question as to whether or not the county commissioners would be entitled while serving as members of either the quadrennial or annual board of equalization to expenses, either for board or for other expenses, it appears that prior to the county commissioners' salary law, which was first enacted on April 21, 1904, and which in words repealed "all other acts or sections of the Revised Statutes in so far as they may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act," a county commissioner, "except in counties where the compensation of county commissioners is now or hereafter may be fixed by a stated salary" (section 897-5, R. S.), was entitled in addition to salary and mileage "any other reasonable and necessary expense actually paid in the discharge of his official duties not exceeding two hundred dollars in any one year." But since the enactment of the county commissioners' salary law fixing the compensation of county commissioners at a stated salary, the provisions of section 897-5 of the Revised Statutes are no longer in force and effect, and were not carried into the General Code.

Prior to the enactment of said county commissioners' salary law the commissioners were likewise entitled to mileage, but upon the enactment of such salary law it was so enacted as to fix a stipulated annual salary, which under the provisions of section 897-2 of the Revised Statutes was declared to be "in full of all services rendered as such commissioner."

Section 897 of the Revised Statutes is now section 3001 of the General Code, and in such section there is no mention whatever made of the right of the commissioners to either mileage or actual and necessary expenses.

Consequently, I am of the opinion that county commissioners while acting as members of the quadrennial or annual board of equalization are not entitled, and have not been since the enactment of the county commissioners' salary law, to either mileage or expenses; and if the same has been received by them it has been an illegal expenditure of money from the county treasury. Consequently, I believe that you should bring suit for the recovery of such moneys.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—MEMBERS OR SECRETARY MAY BE PAID BY INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION FOR SERVICES RENDERED AN INJURED EMPLOYE.

Members of the state dental board or the secretary thereof may be paid compensation for medical, nurse or hospital services rendered, or medicines furnished to an injured employe when deemed proper, by the industrial commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

HON. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary, The Ohio State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 20, 1915, as follows:

> "Will you kindly advise me whether or not it is lawful for a member of the state dental board, and particularly myself, as I am on a salary, to do dental work for, and receive compensation from the state industrial commission?"

which is supplemented under date of May 24, 1915, as follows:

> "I will do as you suggest and cite a possible case:
> "'A laborer has his jaw broken or has several teeth knocked out or injured while at work. The company that employs him carries state liability insurance. The services of a dentist are necessary in this case and the company or it's regular physician usually employs any dentist they wish. After the dentist has rendered his services, he receives his compensation from the state industrial commission.'
> "I wish to know whether or not it is proper for a member of the state dental board and particularly for me (as I am on a salary as secretary) to do this work and receive pay from the commission?"

Members of the state dental board are appointed by the governor under authority of section 1314, G. C., and receive as compensation for their services as such members, the sum of ten dollars for each day actually employed in the discharge of official duties as provided by section 1317, G. C. By section 1315, G. C., such board is required to elect a secretary and is authorized by section 1317 to fix the annual salary of such secretary.

Authority of the industrial commission to pay for services of dentists under the circumstances stated in your communication, if the same exists, must be found in the provisions of section 1465-89, G. C. (103 O. L., 88), which reads as follows:

> "In addition to the compensation provided for herein, the board shall disburse and pay from the state insurance fund, such amounts for medical, nurse and hospital services and medicine as it may deem proper, not, however, in any instance, to exceed the sum of two hundred dollars; and, in case death ensues from the injury, reasonable funeral expenses shall be disbursed and paid from the fund in an amount not to exceed the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, and the board shall have full power to adopt rules and regulations with respect to furnishing medical, nurse and hospital services and medicine to injured employes entitled thereto, and for the payment therefor."

While dental services are not here specifically mentioned, it is believed that in view of the manifest policy and purpose of the workmen's compensation law in which this section was enacted, the courts to effect such purpose would not hesitate to give to the terms "medical, nurse and hospital services and medicine" such construction as would include the services of a dentist in those cases in which the same was necessary for the proper treatment of an injured employe.

It will be noted, however, that the state is particularly protected against fraud or exorbitant charges in these cases in that the amount to be so paid is dependent entirely upon the discretion of the industrial commission, in addition to a maximum limit thereon.

It is not made altogether clear as to whom such payments are to be made, whether to the employe as a reimbursement or to the person by whom such services are rendered. The board is authorized to adopt rules and regulations with respect to the furnishing of medical, nurse and hospital services and medicines, and the matter as to whom payment should be made is deemed to be within the control of the board under such rules and regulations.

Section 12911, G. C., provides as follows:

"Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit, by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or a public institution with which he is not connected, and the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

It will be observed that the provisions of this section are confined to contracts "for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance."

It cannot be maintained that the services of a dentist under the circumstances set forth would constitute either property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the industrial commission, within the meaning of those terms as above used, and I am unable to find any further provision of statute that would operate as an inhibition against any member of the state dental board rendering dental services to an injured employe, payment for which may be made by the industrial commission under section 1465-89, G. C., supra.

I am, therefore, of opinion that a member of the state dental board or the secretary thereof, may render dental services to an injured employe, payment for which service is made by the industrial commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STREET PAVING—CITY COUNCIL AUTHORIZES THE KIND OF MATERIAL TO BE USED FOR PAVING CITY STREETS.

The council of a city is the proper authority to determine the kind of material that shall be used in the pavement of the city streets, and the board of control cannot authorize the director of public service to contract for a different kind of material.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

HON. MERLE N. POE, Prosecuting Attorney, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 27, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I am requested to seek your opinion as to which of the bodies, the board of control or the city council, is the proper authority to determine the kind of material that shall be used in the pavement of city streets, the council in the preliminary legislation having reserved the right to select the material to be used.
> "I regret that I am not able to give you my notion of the law, but the request comes just now from the city authorities and they are very desirous of hearing from your department by Tuesday, June 1st."

In the enactment of the Municipal Code of 1902, the legislature, as a general plan or scheme in the organization of cities, divided and specified their powers as legislative, executive and judicial.

The legislative power of cities was vested in a council, to be elected as provided in section 4206, G. C., and furthur, as to the powers of the city council, section 4211, G. C., provides:

> "The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title. All contracts requiring the authority of council for their execution shall be entered into and conducted to performance by the board or officers having charge of the matters to which they relate, and after authority to make such contracts has been given and the necessary appropriation made, council shall take no further action thereon."

As to the executive power of cities, section 4246, G. C., provides:

> "The executive power and authority of cities shall be vested in a mayor, president of council, auditor, treasurer, solicitor, director of public service, director of public safety, and such other officers and departments as are provided by this title."

Section 4323, G. C., provides that in each city there shall be a department of public service which shall be administered by a director of public service.

Section 4402, G. C., makes provision for a board of control consisting of the mayor, director of public service and director of public safety, and section 4403 provides that no contract in the department of public service or the department of public safety, in excess of five hundred dollars, shall be awarded except on the approval of the board of control, which shall direct the director of the appropriate department to enter into the contract.

With respect to the powers of the director of public service, as an administrative officer of the department of public service, in the government of cities, section 4325, G. C., provides:

> "The director of public service shall supervise the improvement and repair of streets, avenues, alleys, lands, lanes, squares, wharves, docks, landings, market houses, bridges, viaducts, aqueducts, sidewalks, play grounds, sewers, drains, ditches, culverts, ship channels, streams and water courses, the lighting, sprinkling and cleaning of public places, the construction of public improvements and public works, except those having reference to the department of public safety, or as otherwise provided in this title."

Section 4328, G. C., provides:

> "The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

While the awarding of a contract in excess of $500.00 cannot be made by the director of public service without the approval and direction of the board of control, as required by section 4403, G. C., no legislative power is conferred on said board by statute and its authority, in so far as the selection of a particular kind of material for the improvement of a street is concerned, is no greater than that of the director of public service.

I call your attention to an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to Hon. G. T. Thomas, city solicitor of Troy, Ohio, February 3, 1913, as found in volume 2 of the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1913, at page 1468. The questions raised by Mr. Thomas were as follows:

> "First. Has council power to determine the particular material with which a street may be paved?
> "Second. Can the director of public service select a material in the paving of a street, other than that prescribed by council in the ordinance to proceed with the improvement?

After a careful consideration of the provisions of the statutes applicable to said questions, Mr. Hogan held that by virtue of section 3825, G. C., council is authorized to determine the character of the materials which may be used in the improvement of streets and that under this authority council can select one specific material or it can name two or more kinds of material and leave the final decision to the director of public service, and that the director of public service has no power to change the material where council has named a specific kind of paving to be used in such improvement. The opinion further holds that where the council of a city determines in the ordinance to proceed with an improvement, that a street shall be paved with a certain kind of paving, the director of public service has no authority to contract for a different kind of paving for such street.

I concur in this opinion, and, replying to your question, I am of the opinion that the city council is the proper authority to determine the kind of material that shall be used in the pavement of city streets, and that the board of control cannot authorize the director of public service to contract for a different kind of material.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF HEALTH—HAS NO AUTHORITY TO ORDER COUNCIL TO INSTALL A SEWER—MAY ABATE CONDITIONS DETRIMENTAL TO PUBLIC HEALTH—EMERGENCY BONDS FOR SEWER CONSTRUCTION—MAY NOT BE ISSUED EXCEPT IN CASE OF EPIDEMIC OR DANGEROUS DISEASE.

The board of health has no authority to order council to install a sewer, but may abate conditions detrimental or injurious to the public health.

Emergency bonds for the construction of the sewer may not be issued except in case of epidemic or threatened epidemic or during the unusual prevalence of a dangerous communicable disease.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is in receipt of a communication from Mr. Frank J. Doorley, city solicitor of Sidney, Ohio, asking for an opinion on the following state of facts:

> "Linn street, lying on the outskirts of, but within, the corporate limits of the city of Sidney, has no sanitary sewer connections and is at a distance of about 330 yards from the closest point at which a connection could be made. To make a connection would cost about $2,000.00. A large number of the residents on Linn street have water in the cellars under their houses continually owing to the lack of this sewer connection. Today the board of health visited the street and came to the opinion that to have the water continue in the cellars would be dangerous to the public health in that locality.
> "The city council has refused to make this sewer connection for the reason that its practice has been to pay for sewer extensions from the general fund and that the general fund is now needed to pay the regular expenses of the city.
> "If, however, bonds could be issued that might be paid for as emergency bonds are paid from the excess over the one per cent. tax limit, this method of installing it would be taken.
> "I would, therefore, ask: 1. Can the board of health order this sewer installed as a measure necessary to protect the public health?

2. If it can so order, may the sewer be paid for by issuing emergency bonds payable from the tax receipts from the rate over the one per cent. limit? 3. If the board of health does so order, is council bound to install the sewer or must the board of health look after the installation?

"I would cite you the following as being applicable to the matter: G. C., 4413, 4451 and 5649-4."

Section 4450, of the General Code, is as follows:

"In the case of epidemic or threatened epidemic or during the unusual prevalence of a dangerous communicable disease, if funds are not otherwise available, the council of a municipality may borrow any sum of money that the local board of health deems necessary to defray the expenses necessary to prevent the spread of such disease. Such money may be borrowed until the next levy and collection of taxes is made, at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum. Thereupon the board may expend the amount so authorized to be borrowed, which amount, or so much thereof as is expended, shall be a valid claim against the municipality from the fund so created."

In order to enable the board of health to proceed under the section quoted above it is necessary that there be a condition of epidemic or threatened epidemic, or unusual prevalence of a dangerous communicable disease, and from the facts submitted by Mr. Doorley such a condition does not exist, therefore, there can be no authority for the board of health to act under the section referred to.

The authority conferred by section 4421, of the General Code, may be invoked by the board of health for the purpose of abating the condition referred to in his letter in view of the fact, as he states, that the board has determined that the condition referred to is dangerous to the public health. I do not find any provision of law which would authorize the board of health to order the city council to provide the sewer service referred to, but I invite your attention to chapter V, division VII, of the Municipal Code, entitled "Assessments" and particularly to sections 3812, 3871 and 3882 of the General Code, as under these sections the council may proceed either to establish sewer districts for the entire corporation or for such part of it as may be without sewer service.

It is, therefore, my opinion, in answer to your first question, that the board of health is without authority to order the sewer installed as a measure necessary to protect the public health, and that council is the proper body to provide the means for such sewer.

In answer to your second question, emergency bonds may not be issued for the purpose of providing the sewer in view of the fact that the conditions set forth do not warrant a proceeding under section 4450 of the General Code quoted above.

Your third question comprehends the possibility of the authority of the board of health to order the installation of the sewer which has been disposed of above.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary, Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of May 28th, with which you enclose duplicate copies of the form of contract for the construction of the Delaware armory, together with a copy of the contract bond in the sum of nine thousand dollars.

I have examined the copy of the form of contract, which provides for the building of the armory by M. In the future in submitting matters of this kind, I would request that you submit the contracts and bonds after the same have been duly executed, so that the approval of this office may be given with a view to a consideration of every feature of the matter.

PRIZE FIGHT—BOXING EXHIBITION—WHERE FACTS INDICATE THAT CONTESTANTS ARE PAID AND A BOUT REALLY IS A "PRIZE FIGHT," THE SAME SHOULD BE ENJOINED.

Where contestants in bouts, boxing exhibitions, or prize fights draw crowds for the promoters and thus demand rewards for themselves and the facts indicate that the contestants are paid and a "prize" is awarded, such an exhibition would be a "prize fight" and should be enjoined.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

HON. CHAS. F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 22, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Assuming that the Majestic Bath Club is an athletic association, duly incorporated under the laws of the state of Ohio, and which has a gymnasium for the benefit of its members, I desire to know whether, having obtained a permit from the mayor of the city of Lorain, it may legally conduct public boxing exhibitions outside of its gymnasium, the exhibition being participated in by noted pugilists who prior to the exhibition have entered into articles of agreement with reference to weight, duration of rounds, rest periods and the rules under which the contest is to be held, and presided over by well known referees, each contestant having the seconds usually present at a prize fight, the ring being the regulation ring, and all of the other surroundings similar to those present at a prize fight. No decisions have been given at these contests, and aside from the fact that the participants have been raised and lowered in the pugilistic world in accordance with the showing made at these contests, no prize, reward or honor is at stake, the consideration for the appearance of the contestants being agreed upon before the contest.

"It is my opinion that, under section 12803, G. C., neither public gymnasiums nor athletic societies are permitted under any circumstances to hold such an exhibition as above described, to which admission is charged, and I call your attention to the language appearing in the case of State ex rel. v. Hobart, 11th Ohio Decisions, page 198, which is as follows:

" 'Quite different is a boxing match in a gymnasium or athletic club, institutions organized by men of serious purpose, who appreciate the need of physical culture and exercise, so that they may be the better fitted to pursue the ordinary vocations of life, occupations honorable and useful, of profit to themselves, and which organized society requires should be carried on for its needs. Boxing is a favorite form of amusement and is healthful exercise for men of use in the world and with whose pursuits it has no connection, but is merely incidental with other forms of exercise to the proper maintenance of the physical nature. In this sense, and no other, the term "boxing exhibition" is used in the permissive clause of section 6890, Rev. Stat., and it should not be forgotten for a moment that even such a boxing match for a prize is under the law of Ohio a prize fight, and cannot be given.'

"I am not disposed to interfere with legitimate, clean sport, but I am disposed to prevent, if possible, contests which are illegal, and I respectfully request that you give me your interpretation of these statutes to aid me in determining whether this is, or is not, a violation of the law.

"As this contest is to be staged in the early part of June, and the organization plan to erect a large structure to accommodate the crowds which will be present, I would appreciate an early reply."

Your inquiry concerns itself with the distinction between the term "prize fight" as used in sections 12800 and 12801, G. C., and the term "sparring or boxing exhibitions" as used and referred to in sections 12802 and 12803, G. C. It is a matter of law as to what constitutes a prize fight and the term "prize fight" is susceptible of legal definition. The difficulty encountered is in applying to the facts which engage your attention, the legal definition of the term "prize fight."

As noted in a previous opinion to you under date of April 29, 1915, a prize fight has been defined as a pugilistic encounter or boxing match for a prize or wager, and this definition was quoted with approval in the case of Seville v. State, 49 O. S., 117, 131.

In the case of People v. Taylor, 96 Michigan, 576, the court says that to constitute prize fighting, there must have been an expectation of reward to be gained by the contest or competition, either to be won from the contestant or to be otherwise awarded; and there must have been an intent to inflict some degree of bodily harm upon the contestant.

In the report of the case to which you refer, State ex rel. v. Hobart, 11 O. D., 166, 8 O. N. P., 246, decided in 1901, you will find an opinion upon this subject rendered to Hon. Julius Fleischmann, by Hon. Wade H. Ellis, who was at that time assistant corporation counsel of the city of Cincinnati. This opinion by Mr. Ellis was referred to by Judge Hollister in deciding the case in question, as a most creditable legal document and as stating clearly the law on the questions involved in it. In this opinion Mr. Ellis says that prize fight is an engagement between two persons contesting with their fists for physical supremacy, intending in some degree to do bodily harm to each other and expecting as a result of the contest to receive some honor, reward or emolument. Mr. Ellis points out that it makes no difference whether the contest is with or without gloves nor what kind of gloves are used, and that it makes no difference in Ohio whether the contest is given in public or private. It is also immaterial whether the bodily harm inflicted or intended to be inflicted is slight or serious, nor whether the contest is for "points" or to a "finish," nor whether it is for a limited number of rounds or until a decision is rendered. The prize need not be in any particular form; it may be an honor or a fixed sum or a proportion of the receipts taken at the door.

In the case of State v. Purtell, 56 Kan., 479, cited by Mr. Ellis in his opinion to the mayor of Cincinnati, the court held that it was not indispensable that the prize or reward should be given to the successful contestant alone. The court pointed out that the evil designed to be remedied by a statute against prize fighting is that class of brutal exhibitions for giving which considerable sums of money are paid, and observed that the statute cannot be evaded by rewarding the unsuccessful as well as the successful combatant.

In the light of the above decisions, a prize fight, within the meaning of the Ohio statutes, may be defined as an engagement between two persons contesting with their fists for physical supremacy, either in public or private, and with or without gloves, intending in some degree to do bodily harm to each other, and having received or expecting to receive some reward or emolument for engaging in such contest.

You state that no prize, reward or honor is at stake in the contests to which you refer, the consideration for the appearance of the contestants being agreed upon before the contest. If by this you mean to say that either one or both of the contestants are paid or promised any reward, compensation or emolument for their appearance, then I have no hesitation in saying that the contests to which you refer are prize fights, and the fact that such compensation is in no way dependent on the outcome of the contests, is immaterial. In other words, the fact that the consideration for the participation of the contestants is agreed upon, or even agreed upon and paid, before the contest, would not serve to rob the contests of their character as prize fights. I am not unmindful of the fact that under the decision in the case of State v. Aston, 57 O. S., 672, 39 W. L. B., 117, a bona fide athletic club may hire persons to engage in a boxing contest, and pay them a definite compensation; and that if such persons do not intend to harm each other and do not harm each other, such contest is not a prize fight. Such a contest may be lawfully given by a bona fide athletic club, provided the proper written permission be first obtained, and in my opinion the holding of such a contest in a place other than the regular gymnasium of such club, would be immaterial.

But in the case now under consideration, it is obvious that no such boxing contest is intended. The facts that these so-called boxing exhibitions are to be held outside the gymnasium of the Majestic Bath Club, in a large structure especially designed to accommodate the crowds which it is expected will be present; that they are to be participated in by noted pugilists who, prior to the exhibitions, have entered into articles of agreement with reference to weight, duration of rounds, rest periods and the rules under which the contest is to be held, and presided over by well known referees; that each contestant is to have the "seconds" usually present at a prize fight; that the ring is to be the regulation ring; and that all the other surroundings are to be similar to those present at a prize fight; taken together, point unmistakably to the fact that what is here intended and what will in fact occur, will be not a sparring or boxing match, but a fight. The surrounding facts stated by you leave no room to doubt the real character of the proposed encounters. Unless they be fights in which the contestants intend to inflict bodily harm upon each other, they will fail utterly to attract the crowds which are expected; and if one of these contests were to occur and the participants were not to strike each other hard and often and with intent to do bodily harm to each other, then both the participants and the promoters would be denounced as swindlers by those in attendance.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the earning ability of such men as you describe is enhanced or curtailed by the actual results of such contest. The fact that no formal decision is given does not evade the law. There is actually a real decision in the minds of the spectators and of the so-called sporting public, and there is always a decision in fact in the news accounts of these bouts. As these men are successful, their ability to draw crowds for the promoters and thus to demand greater rewards for themselves is augmented. It is, therefore, upon the success or failure in such a contest that the chances of the contestants rest for similar engagements. A prize is defined as anything of value that is taken or secured by chance, effort or desert. All of the facts stated, together with the fact that each of these contestants is paid for his appearance in the contest, satisfy me that the proposed contest is in fact a proposed prize fight, and that it will be your duty to enjoin the same.

It would be no defense in a prosecution for engaging in or aiding such a contest that the same was held by a bona fide athletic club and that written permission had been obtained from one of the officials named in section 12803.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

IMPROVEMENT OF ROAD IN VILLAGE BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND VILLAGE COUNCIL—AN IMPROVED COUNTY ROAD LYING IN A VILLAGE MAY BE FURTHER IMPROVED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ON PETITION OF MAJORITY FOOT FRONTAGE—ASSESSMENT BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS LIMITED TO PART REQUESTED BY PETITION—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY USE DISCRETION AS TO PAYMENT OF COST—COUNCIL OF VILLAGE MUST PROVIDE FOR ADDITIONAL COST WHEN IT AUTHORIZES ROAD TO BE IMPROVED AT A GREATER WIDTH THAN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS CONTEMPLATE.

Under section 6903, et seq., G. C., a part of an improved county road lying within the corporate limits of a village may be further improved by the county commissioners of a county in which said village is located, on a petition signed by the owners of at least a majority of the foot frontage on said part of said road.

Under the provision of section 6904, G. C., the authority of the county commissioners as an assessing board for the purpose of assessing a part or all of the damages, costs and expenses incident to the improvement of a part of a county road within the corporate limits of the village within said county, is limited to the improvement of the part of said road prayed for in the petition of the abutting property owners filed with said commissioners, under authority of section 6903, G. C.

Under the provision of section 6906, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 6904, G. C., the county commissioners have the discretion to determine in view of the facts and circumstances of the particular case, that it is equitable and proper to pay the entire cost and expense of improving a part of a county road within the corporate limits of a village within said county, to the width prayed for in the petition of the abutting property owners, out of the county treasury or out of any state and county road improvement fund available for said purpose.

Under the provisions of section 6905-1 to 6906, G. C., inclusive, the council of said village, having determined to improve said part of said road to a greater width than is contemplated in the proceedings for such improvement by the county commissioners, has authority to provide sufficient funds to pay such costs and expense as is made necessary by the additional width to which the same is to be improved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1915.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 17, 1915, which is as follows:

"I would like for you to render an opinion upon the following subject:

"May 6, 1913, the council of the village of Oakwood, Ohio, passed an ordinance providing for the improvement of a certain county road running through said village to a greater width than provided for in a certain petition filed with the county commissioners of Paulding county, Ohio, on the 7th day of May, 1913, under section 6903, of the General Code of Ohio, asking for the grading, draining, guttering, curbing, etc., of a certain street, which was an improved county road wholly within the corporate limits of said village and not extending beyond the same in either direction, which road had heretofore been stone and top dressed with gravel by the county commissioners under the two-mile pike assessment act and the joint improvement by the commissioners and village council, was to be made in accordance with the provision of sections 6903 to 6914, of the General Code of Ohio.

"I enclose you herein a full copy of all of the proceedings to this date in said matter. The village has proceeded to raise by selling its bonds, the sum of $6,113.76, which has been deposited with the county treasurer of this county to be applied in payment of its share of the cost by reason of the increased width of the road.

"I would like to have your opinion as to the law upon the following facts:

"First. Can the citizens of a municipal corporation on an improved county road wholly within the municipal corporation which has heretofore been built of stone and gravel by a petition to the county commissioners thereafter when the contemplated improvement does not extend beyond its corporate limits, ask for the improvement of the same street and road in accordance with the provisions of section 6903, of the General Code?

"Second. Do the county commissioners, under section 6904, of the General Code, act as an assessing board for the purpose of estimating the cost of the whole improvement, including the increased width thereof or only that part petitioned for?

"Third. Under sections 6905-3 and 6905-4, does the village council assess the cost of the improvement for the increased width of the street?

"Fourth. Can the county commissioners pay all the expense of this improvement as petitioned for to said board, under section 6906, of the General Code of Ohio, of the width of 12 feet and the village pay the expense of the increased width of the street? The surveyor's estimate places all of this cost of the 12 feet upon the county originally petitioned for.

"Fifth. Are the proceedings of this kind legal without the commissioners sitting as an assessing board under section 6904 and assessing the damages, cost and expense of the improvement upon the abutting property owners according to the front footage or benefits?"

From your statement of facts and from the copies of certain resolutions enclosed by you, I understand that on May 7, 1913, the owners of a majority of the foot frontage abutting on a part of an improved county road within the corporate limits of the village of Oakwood, in Paulding county, filed a petition with the commissioners of said county, asking for the improvement of said part of said road by grading, draining, curbing and paving the same to the width of 12 feet, under authority of section 6903 et seq. of the General Code; that the council of said village, acting under authority of section 6905-1, G. C., determined to improve said part of said road to a greater width than was contemplated by the proceedings for said improvement by said county commissioners, and declared its intention so to do in the resolution of May 6, 1913, a copy of which is enclosed. Said resolution designates the points between which it is desired to increase the width of said proposed improvement and the width to which the same shall be improved.

Acting under authority of section 6905-3, G. C., said village council has issued bonds and the sum of $6,113.76 realized from the sale of said bonds has been deposited with the county treasurer to be applied to the payment of the village's share of the cost and expense of said improvement, by reason of the increased width of said part of said road, as provided in section 6905-5, G. C.

It further appears that the county commissioners have approved said resolution of said council, have granted the petition for said improvement and have adopted the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates for said improvement to the width indicated in said resolution, and are about to let the contract for said improvement. Several questions are asked by you which, by their terms, are somewhat general in application, but, in asking said questions, you evidently had in mind the facts relative to the particular improvement above referred to.

Sections 6903 to 6914, inclusive, of the General Code, provide a scheme for improving a county road or part thereof. These sections were formerly known as sections 4637-1 to 4637-11, of the Revised Statutes of Ohio.

In the case of the State of Ohio ex rel. Witt v. Craig, et al., 22 O. C. C., 135, the court held that the provisions of section 4637-1 et seq. of the Revised Statutes, confer authority upon county commissioners to improve a part of a county road lying within the limits of a municipal corporation.

Section 6903, G. C., provides:

> "On a petition therefor signed by the owners of at least a majority of the foot frontage on a county road or part thereof, the county commissioners may do any one or more of the following acts or things:
> "1. Cause the county surveyor to establish a grade along it, or part thereof, subject to their approval;
> "2. Cause it or part thereof to be widened, altered or established to a greater width than 60 feet and not more than 100 feet, to be determined by the viewers as provided in this chapter;
> "3. Grade, drain, curb, pave and improve it or part thereof."

I do not think the fact that the part of the county road, within the limits of the village of Oakwood, has heretofore been improved with stone and gravel by the county commissioners, is material as affecting the answer to your first question.

Replying to said question, I am of the opinion that, under section 6903 et seq., of the General Code, a part of an improved county road lying within the corporate limits of a village, may be further improved by the county commissioners on a petition signed by the owners of at least a majority of the foot frontage on said part of said road.

Section 6904, G. C., provides:

> "The county commissioners may assess the damages on account of the widening, altering or establishing of such road, or part thereof, and the costs and expenses of any or all of the improvement or such part of said damages, costs and expenses as they deem equitable under the circumstances, upon the taxable property abutting upon the road or part thereof, either according to the foot frontage or according to the benefits. The commissioners shall be an assessing board for the purpose of assessing the damages, costs and expenses, as herein set forth, upon the abutting property as aforesaid."

Section 6905, G. C., provides:

> "The board of county commissioners may enter into an agreement with the board of trustees of any township or the council of any village, or both, into or through which a state or county road improvement is contemplated, whereby said board of trustees or council may assume and pay such a proportion of the costs and expenses of such improvement not assessed upon abutting land in accordance with section 6904, of the General Code, as may be agreed upon between said board of county commissioners and said board of trustees or council, and such agreement or agreements may be entered into at any time before the contract for said improvement is let.''

I do not understand that an agreement was made between the county commissioners and the village council, as authorized by section 6905, G. C., whereby the village is to pay any part of the cost and expense of improving said part of said road to a width of 12 feet, as petitioned for by the abutting property owners. On the contrary, it appears that the county is to bear all of said expense and the village is to pay the cost and expense incident to the increased width indicated in the resolution of said village council, and as shown on the plans prepared by the county surveyor and adopted by the county commissioners. The provisions of sections 6905-1 to 6905-6, inclusive, of the General Code, are applicable to the case where a part of the county road to be improved lies within the corporate limits of a village, and the council of said village determines, as in the case above referred to, to improve said part of said road to a greater width than is contemplated by the proceedings for said improvement by the county commissioners.

Section 6905-1, G. C., provides:

''Whenever any portion of a road to be improved under the provisions of this act lies within the corporate limits of a village, and the council of said village decides to improve any part of said road within its corporate limits, to a greater width than is contemplated by the proceedings for said improvement by the board of county commissioners, such council may, by resolution, at any time before bids for said improvement are advertised for, declare its intention so to do, which resolution shall indicate the points between which it is desired to increase the width of said proposed improvement, and the width to which it desires the same to be improved. A certified copy of such resolution shall be filed with the board of county commissioners.''

Section 6905-2, G. C., provides:

''If the board of county commissioners approve the same, said board shall have prepared the necessary plans, profiles, specifications and estimates for the improvement of such portion of said road to the width indicated in said resolution. The estimates therefor shall set forth in detail the probable cost and expense of so much of said improvement as is made necessary by reason of the same being improved to said increased width. After the plans, specifications, profiles and estimates have been returned to the county commissioners by the county surveyor, and by them approved, the commissioners shall cause to be filed a copy thereof with the clerk of said village. Said plans, profiles, specifications and estimates shall also show what proportion of said increased cost is made necessary by improving street intersections.''

Section 6905-3, G. C., provides:

''Upon receipt of such copy the council of such village by taking such action as is authorized by law for the improvement of its streets, may issue and sell its bonds in anticipation of the collection of the special assessments by it to be made upon the benefited property, or to be paid by any street railroad company operating in said road within the limits of said village, and for the purpose of meeting such cost and expense of such improvement as is by law required to be paid by said village, and the amount of the total estimated cost and expenses of so much of said improvement as is by law required to be paid by said village and the amount of the total estimated cost and expenses of so much of said improvement as is made necessary by reason of the additional width to which the same is to be improved. The proceeds of said bonds shall be paid into the county treasury, into a fund to be established for the purpose and in the manner hereinafter specified.''

Under the provisions of section 6905-3, G. C., the village council has authority to issue bonds to provide a fund sufficient to pay such cost and expense of said improvement as is made necessary by reason of the additional width to which the same is to be improved. The authority of said council to issue bonds is limited, however, by section 6905-4, G. C., which provides in part:

''* * * * * The authority herein given to the village, to issue and sell its bonds for the purpose of this act, and to levy assessments to pay for the same, shall be subject to all the limitations and conditions imposed by law upon municipal corporations in the issue and sale of bonds for street improvements.''

Replying to your second and third questions, I am of the opinion that under the provision of section 6904, G. C., the authority of the county commissioners as an assessing board for the purpose of assessing a part or all of the damages, costs and expenses incident to the improvement of that part of the county road within the corporate limits of the village, is limited to the improvement of the part of the said road as prayed for in the petition; said assessment to be made according to foot frontage or according to benefits accruing to the owners of said property, as said commissioners may determine, and that, under the provision of section 6905-3, G. C., the village council is authorized to act as an assessing board for the purpose of placing additional assessments against said abutting property, according to the benefits accruing to the owners thereof, for the purposes mentioned in said section.

Section 6906, G. C., provides:

''The county commissioners may order such part of the damages, cost and expense of such improvement as they deem equitable, to be paid out of the county treasury, or any state and county road improvement fund.''

You inquire whether the county commissioners have authority, under section 6906, G. C., to pay all the expense of said improvement to the width of 12 feet, as petitioned for by said abutting property owners, and whether the village may pay the exact expense made necessary by reason of the additional width, and whether such proceedings are legal without the commissioners sitting as an assessing board under section 6904, G. C., and assessing a part or all of the damages, costs and expense incidental to said improvement upon the abutting property according to foot frontage or according to benefits.

Section 6905-4, G. C., further provides:

''On the adoption by the council of the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates, so prepared by the county commissioners, and the filing of the same with the village clerk, the council may adopt such legislation as is required by law for the improvement of its streets and the sale of its bonds, and pay for the same. * * * * *''

Section 6905-5, G. C., provides:

''The county commissioners shall thereupon receive bids for and let the contract for improving such portion of said road as lies within the village, at the same time and in the same manner as contracts for other road improvements are let. The total cost and expense of advertising said additional work shall be paid for by the order of the county commissioners on the warrant of the county auditor, out of the fund established as hereinbefore set forth. Any money left in said fund after the completion of said work and payment therefor, shall be refunded to the village through which said improved road extends, to be by it disposed of according to law. All damages to abutting property within said village, by reason of the improvement of the said road, shall be paid for by said village.''

Replying to your fourth question, I am of the opinion that, under the provision of section 6906, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 6904, G. C., the county commissioners have the discretion to determine, in view of all the facts and circumstances of your particular case, that it is equitable and proper to pay the entire cost and expense of said improvement to the width of 12 feet, as prayed for in the petition of the abutting property owners, out of the county treasury or out of any state and county road improvement fund available for said purpose, and that under the provisions of section 6905-1 to section 6905-6, inclusive, of the General Code, said village council, having determined to improve said part of said road to a greater width than is contemplated by the proceedings for said improvement by the county commissioners, has authority to provide sufficient funds to pay such cost and expense as is made necessary by the additional width to which the same is to be improved.

The resolution of the county commissioners adopting the plans and specifications for said improvement, as prepared by the county surveyor, contains the following provision:

''The board believes the construction of this improvement to be for the public convenience and utility and hereby expresses itself as willing to proceed with the same as soon as the corporation of Oakwood shall have performed their part by selling the bonds of said village of Oakwood for their proportion, and turned the amount into the county treasurer, when this board will order the necessary transfer of funds to provide for the payment of the county's share of the cost and expense of the said proposed improvement.''

Replying to your fifth question, I am of the opinion that the county commissioners, having determined to pay all of the cost and expense of said improvement to the width of 12 feet, as prayed for in said petition, out of the county treasury, exercised their authority under sections 6904 and 6906, G. C., and that the proceedings of such county commissioners in this respect are legal.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—THE AUTOMOBILE OWNERS' MUTUAL LIABILITY AND CASUALTY COMPANY—APPROVAL.

Approval of articles of incorporation of The Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 1, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return to you herewith, with my approval endorsed thereon, proposed articles of incorporation of The Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company, a former draft of which I was unable to approve.

The purpose clause of the articles still leaves something to be desired, in that it does not specify that the damage to automobiles which is to be insured against is to be that arising from cause other than fire or lightning. I have determined, however, not to make this technical defect the basis of a second rejection of the articles, for the reason that the clause as a whole clearly specifies that the company is to be organized under paragraph 2 of section 9510 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

I hereby certify that I have examined the foregoing articles of incorporation of The Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company, and that the same are found by me to be in accordance with the provisions of chapter 1, subdivision II, division III, title IX, part second of the General Code of Ohio, and not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state and of the United States.

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—THE MERCHANTS' MUTUAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATION DISAPPROVED

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 1, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return to you herewith the proposed articles of incorporation of The Merchants' Mutual Insurance Association, without my approval, and with the advice that they may not be filed nor recorded, for the reason that the purpose clause thereof fails in any respect to comply with sections 9593 and 9594 of the General Code.

The clause itself is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of insuring its members against loss or damage by fire and lightning to dwellings, business buildings and business stocks located in the state of Ohio."

Its deficiency may be measured by the following requirements of the statute:

(1) The kinds of property proposed to be insured must be specifically designated, and as the statute respecting the classes of property which may be insured by such corporations is itself specific, it would seem that some more definite description of the personal property which it is proposed to insure than "business stocks" should be set forth therein.

(2) The articles of incorporation of such a company must specifically set forth that one of its objects is to "enforce any contract * * * entered into (by the members of the association) whereby the parties thereto agree to be assessed specifically for incidental purposes and for the payment of losses which occur to its members."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HAWK BOUNTIES—APPROPRIATION FOR SUCH PURPOSE MUST FIRST BE MADE BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—MAXIMUM LIMITATION TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS.

House bill No. 79, passed March 8, 1915, and given section numbers 5831-1, 5831-2 and 5831-3, G. C., will apply only to hawks killed after such act goes into effect.

Under said act the township clerk cannot issue any certificates for hawk bounties until the township trustees have made an appropriation for that purpose. It is the duty of the trustees to make some appropriation for that purpose, if there be available funds in the township treasury, but the size of such appropriation within the maximum limitation of two hundred dollars rests in the discretion of the trustees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 21, 1915, in which you request my interpretation of house bill No. 79, passed March 8, 1915, and entitled "An act to provide a bounty for the killing of hawks." The act contains three sections which have been numbered 5831-1, 5831-2 and 5831-3 of the General Code. The act was filed in the office of the secretary of state March 10, 1915, and in the absence of a referendum will go into effect June 9, 1915. Section 5831-1, G. C., being the first section of the act, reads as follows:

> "That a bounty of one dollar shall be allowed and paid, in the manner hereinafter provided, for each chicken hawk, American goshawk, blue hawk, Cooper hawk, sharp shinned hawk, or duck hawk, killed in this state by an inhabitant thereof."

You inquire as to whether the law applies to hawks killed after the passage of the act and before June 9, 1915, or only to hawks killed on or after June 9th. While section 2 of the act, being section 5831-2, G. C., requires the person applying for a bounty to take each hawk to the clerk of the township in which such hawk was killed, yet the bounty is in fact to be paid for the killing of the hawk and not for its delivery to the clerk. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the law will not apply to hawks killed prior to June 9, 1915.

Sections 2 and 3 of the act provides that upon the delivery of a hawk to the township clerk he shall issue and deliver to the applicant a certificate stating the bounty to which the applicant is entitled, but such certificate shall not be issued unless there is a fund in the township treasury out of which such bounty may be paid and that such fund shall be set apart out of the general fund of the township by appropriation therefor by the township trustees, which fund in no year shall exceed the sum of two hundred dollars. You state that certain township trustees of your county are threatening to provide no fund in the township treasury out of which such bounties may be paid, their object being to prevent the clerk from issuing certificates for hawk bounties; and you inquire as to what the effect will be in case the trustees of any township fail to set apart out of the general fund of the township by appropriation therefor, any fund out of which such bounties may be paid.

The law provides that the clerk shall not issue any certificates for hawk bounties unless there is a fund in the township treasury out of which such bounties may be paid, and an appropriation by the township trustees is required in order to create such a fund. It follows that until the trustees have acted in the matter and set apart by appropriation for the purpose of paying these bounties, a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars in any one year, no certificates for such bounties can be issued by the township clerk. The maximum limitation on this fund is two hundred dollars per annum, but the statute does not fix any minimum limitation, the amount of the appropriation being left within the discretion of the trustees, with the one limitation that it must not exceed two hundred dollars. While no certificates can be issued by the clerk until the appropriation has been made by the trustees, yet the language of the statute is that such fund shall be set apart. I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is the clear duty of a board of township trustees to make some appropriation not exceeding two hundred dollars, provided there be available funds in the township treasury from which such appropriation can be made, but the size of the appropriation within the maximum limitation of two hundred dollars rests within the discretion of the trustees. When the appropriation made by the trustees is exhausted, no more certificates may be issued by the clerk. This opinion is based on the assumption that there will be no referendum on this law and that the same will go into effect June 9, 1915.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATUTE PROHIBITING SALE OF CERTAIN DRUGS—SECTION 12672, G. C., AS FOUND IN 103 O. L., 505, IS REPEALED BY SECTION 12672, G. C., AS FOUND IN 103 O. L., 304, 340.

Section 12672, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 505, is repealed by section 12672, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 304, 340. This opinion is based on the decision of the court of appeals of Lucas county in the case of James H. Lathrop v. The State of Ohio, decided March 27, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. OTHO W. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 28, 1915, in which you state that a defendant has pleaded guilty to a violation of section 12672, G. C., 103 O. L., 505, the section in question being one prohibiting the sale, etc., of certain drugs. You now inquire as to the proper interpretation of the following language found in the section in question:

> "If it be made to appear to the court that the person so convicted is addicted to the use of any of the above mentioned drugs or substances, the court, with the consent of such person, may commit such person to a hospital or other institution for the treatment of such person."

In this connection permit me to call your attention to the decision of the court of appeals of Lucas county, in the case of James H. Lathrop v. The State of Ohio, Case No. 311. This case was decided March 27, 1915, and so far as I am informed, is not yet reported. The court in this case held that section 12672, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 505, was repealed by section 12672, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 304, 340. Under this decision there is not now in force any statutory provision such as the one about which you inquire. It should be added that unless the indictment in the case about which you inquire is so drawn as to be good under section 12672, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 304, 340, then the defendant is not charged therein with any offense under the laws of this state.

I enclose a copy of the decision referred to above.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY—PROPERTY FURNISHED BY THE STATE FOR USE OF MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY MUST BE DELIVERED TO SECRETARY OF STATE AT CLOSE OF THE SESSION.

Property furnished by the state for use of members of the general assembly must be delivered to the secretary of state at the close of the session and the auditor of state must see that such property is properly delivered before any further salary is paid to a member or employe of the general assembly until he has accounted for the public property in his charge and keeping.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. ALFRED ROBINSON, Sergeant-at-Arms, House of Represenatives Eighty-First General Assembly, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am just in receipt of your letter of June 2d, which reads as follows:

> "Enclosed please find resolution requested. Awaiting your written opinion, I remain,
> "Respectfully,"

The subject-matter of the opinion desired being explained by you orally this morning as that arising under my letter of June 1st, to the secretary of state, which is as follows:

> "DEAR SIR:—Sunday's newspapers carried the story that books, stationery, and other property furnished for the use of members of the general assembly were either being disposed of by members or shipped to the members' homes. I beg to call your attention to section 49 of the General Code of Ohio, which provides as follows:
> "'Immediately after the close of a session, the sergeant-at-arms of each house shall take charge of the books, stationery and other property furnished for the use of such house or a member or officer thereof, and cause such property to be delivered to the secretary of state, who shall give duplicate receipts therefor. The sergeant-at-arms shall deposit one of such receipts with the auditor of state.'
> "I would thank you to advise me whether or not all of this property has been delivered to you."

and with a further statement that you are proceeding to box up, preparatory to shipping away, books, stationery, etc., furnished to the officers and members of the house at state expense.

The resolution to which you refer in your letter reads as follows:

"H. R. No. 47.
"81st General Assembly, Regular Session.
"HOUSE RESOLUTION .

"Directing the packing and shipping of the contents of the desks of members of the house, after the adjournment.

"Resolved, That when this house adjourns sine die, Frederick Blenkner, third assistant sergeant-at-arms, is hereby directed to box and ship by express, charges prepaid, to each member and officer the contents of his desk; the charges for making the boxes and the express charges on same to be paid out of the appropriate fund of the house on vouchers approved by the speaker. The third assistant sergeant-at-arms is also authorized to employ such help as he may require to assist in so packing and shipping the property of members of the house, said employes to receive the same compensation per diem they received during the session and to be paid out of the appropriate fund of the house on the approval of the speaker. Be it further "Resolved, Immediately after the adjournment of the general assembly, each member of the house is requested to lock his desk and deliver the keys thereto, together with the key to his postoffice box, to the postmaster of the house.

"(Signed) JOHN P. MAYNARD.

"Adopted May 20, 1915."

Section 31 of article II of the Constitution provides:

"The members and officers of the general assembly shall receive a fixed compensation, to be prescribed by law, and no other allowance or perquisites, either in the payment of postage or otherwise; and no change in their compensation shall take effect during their term of office."

Section 49 of the General Code provides:

"Immediately after the close of a session, the sergeant-at-arms of each house shall take charge of the books, stationery and other property furnished for the use of such house or a member or officer thereof, and cause such property to be delivered to the secretary of state, who shall give duplicate receipts therefor. The sergeant-at-arms shall deposit one of such receipts with the auditor of state."

If the property referred to in house resolution No. 47 above quoted is private property of members of the house, then no public money may be spent in either making boxes or in paying express charges or for labor incident to the packing of such private, personal property. On the other hand, if the property referred to in the resolution be such as was furnished for the use of the members or officers of the house by the state, then it is your duty as sergeant-at-arms, under section 49 of the General Code above quoted, to deliver each and all of said property to the secretary of state, receiving from him duplicate receipts therefor. One of these receipts you shall retain as your own protection, and the other shall be deposited with the auditor of state.

The property furnished for the use of either the house or a member or officer thereof of the general assembly, is furnished for public and not private purposes, and the ownership to said property never at any time vested in any member or officer of the general assembly, and no officer, member or employe of the general assembly, or either branch of said assembly, has any more right to order such property boxed up at public expense and sent to him for his private use, than would the governor or the attorney general, or any other state officer, have to clean out their respective offices of everything in them, including the carpets on the floor, when they retire.

Your statement that it has been the custom for many years to ignore the provisions of section 49 of the Code is probably true, but no such custom can override the plain provisions of the Constitution or laws. The general assembly and its members must obey these laws. Neither does the fact that the members of the legislature are still in office alter the situation any. The statutes of this state, which it is not competent to change by such a resolution above quoted, provide for the furnishing of supplies at public expense for use only in the general assembly, and not at the home or private office of the members. It is further provided, as above set out, that at the close of the session (and this means each and every session) it is the duty of the sergeant-at-arms to take charge of this property and turn it over to the secretary of state.

You will see to it that duplicate receipts for all property are filed with the auditor of state, as I shall advise the auditor of state to pay no further salary to any officer, member or employe of the general assembly, until such officer, member or employe has accounted for the public property in his charge and keeping.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

437.

AUDITOR OF STATE—SHOULD PAY NO FURTHER SALARY TO ANY OFFICER OR MEMBER OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY UNTIL THE PUBLIC PROPERTY IN HIS CHARGE HAS BEEN ACCOUNTED FOR.

The public property referred to in section 49, G. C., must be accounted for before further salary is paid to any officer, member or employe of the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Enclosed I hand you a copy of opinion No. 436 this day rendered Hon. Alfred Robinson, sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives of the 81st general assembly.

In this connection permit me to say that it is my opinion that you should pay no further salary to any officer or member of the general assembly until such officer or member has accounted for the public property in his charge and keeping.

Under section 49 of the General Code, which provides:

> "Immediately after the close of a session, the sergeant-at-arms of each house shall take charge of the books, stationery and other property furnished for the use of such house or a member or officer thereof, and cause such property to be delivered to the secretary of state, who shall give duplicate receipts therefor. The sergeant-at-arms shall deposit one of such receipts with the auditor of state,'' it will be the duty of the sergeant-at-arms of the respective branches of the legislature, after having taken charge of the books, stationery, and other property furnished for the use of such house or member or officer thereof, to deposit same with the secretary of state and receive from said secretary of state duplicate receipts, one of which must be deposited with you.

It is my opinion that it is your duty to see that the public property referred to in section 49 above quoted is fully accounted for.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

438.

HOUSE BILL NO. 457—SHOULD BE VETOED FOR REASON THAT SENATE BILL NO. 250 ALREADY APPROVED, CONTAINS THE SAME PROVISIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my opinion house bill No. 457, which contains reference to ''The Agricultural Commission,'' which commission has been abolished by senate bill No. 250.

I beg to advise you that the provisions of house bill No. 457 are contained almost verbatim in senate bill No. 250, which heretofore has been approved by you. House bill No. 457 should, therefore, be vetoed for the reason not only that it is unnecessary, but its reference to ''The Agricultural Commission'' would cause such a degree of uncertainty as to endanger the bill if it became a law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

439.

THE PHRASE ''NEXT REGULAR COUNTY ELECTION'' AS USED IN SECTION 3061, G. C., HAS REFERENCE ONLY TO THE NOVEMBER ELECTION IN THE EVEN NUMBERED YEARS AT WHICH COUNTY OFFICERS ARE ELECTED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. CHARLES L. BERMONT, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours of May 27, 1915, as follows:

''An application has been made to the commissioners of Knox county, Ohio, for an appropriation of $10,000.00 to aid in the construction of a state armory building in Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

"There is no memorial building fund in the treasury of this county which can be paid over to the state armory board as provided in section 3063-1, G. C.

"Section 3061, G. C., provides how this memorial building fund may be raised by the submission to popular vote at the next regular county election of the question of the issue of bonds for that purpose.

"I have interpreted the words 'next regular county election' to mean the next election at which county officers are to be elected, but this interpretation does not meet with universal approval, and I have been requested to submit the same to your office for an opinion as to when this question of issuing bonds as above mentioned may be submitted to the electors."

Section 3061, G. C., provides:

"Immediately upon the appointment and organization of such board of trustees, they shall certify to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county, the fact of their appointment and organization, and direct the submission to popular vote at the next regular county election of the question of the issue of bonds in the amount so named in the original resolution, and of the erection and maintenance of the memorial building contemplated. Such deputy state supervisors shall submit the question to popular vote at the next regular county election with such forms of ballot as the deputy state supervisors prescribe, and shall certify the result of the election to the board of trustees. If a majority of the votes cast upon the question is in favor of the issuance of such bonds and the construction and maintenance of such memorial building, the board of trustees shall proceed as hereinafter authorized."

The general understanding of a county election is an election at which all the qualified electors of the county, and only the electors of such county, are entitled to vote upon the same question or for the same officer or officers. An election of county officers, an election upon a county bond issue, or, formerly, an election to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within the county, are instances of what in common parlance is termed a county election. A regular election is generally deemed to be, under the present state of the law, that election which is regularly held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November of each year as distinguished from an election held at a different time under a special authority or provision therefor, or at which some special question or matter is submitted to a vote of the electors. Elections are more frequently held for the election of officers and those elections which are required to be held at certain fixed dates are usually and properly termed regular elections.

I, therefore, concur in your opinion that the phrase "next regular county election" as used in section 3061, G. C., above quoted, refers only to the November election in the even numbered years at which county officers are elected.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION—UNAUTHORIZED TO PAY COSTS IN PROSECUTION OF MISDEMEANORS BEFORE MAGISTRATE—COMMISSION CAN PAY COURT COSTS IN CASE OF HUTCHINSON V. THE AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION.

The agricultural commission is unauthorized to issue vouchers for the payment of costs in the prosecution of misdemeanors before magistrates.

The agricultural commission may issue voucher for the payment of the judgment of the court of common pleas in the case of Rufina Hutchinson v. The Agricultural Commission under the facts stated in this opinion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

The Agricultural Commision of Ohio, Department of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Response to your request for an opinion has been much delayed awaiting submission of further facts as suggested in our letter under date of April 26, 1915.

You submit cost bills from the court of the mayor of Mansfield, Ohio, in two criminal causes instituted in that court by complaint charging resistance of an officer, filed by one G. S. Mechling and entitled the State of Ohio v. Austin Lybarger, and the State of Ohio v. Christian Dinninger, Percy Dinninger, Roy Dinninger, Merrill Dinninger and Carl Dinninger, and ask me to "advise whether these cases are presented in proper form, and whether the agricultural commission is authorized to issue vouchers in payment of the same?"

The offense of resisting an officer is a misdemeanor under the provisions of section 12858, G. C.

While it is not so stated in your letter, I learn from personal inquiry that there was no conviction in either of these cases.

It is the general policy of the law that officers of the state or political subdivision thereof may not make expenditures of public funds without express statutory authority therefor. Exceptions to this general rule are confined to cases in which such expenditures are necessary and essential to the performance of a duty specifically imposed by law. It is the exception rather than the rule generally, that persons responsible for the prosecution of misdemeanors are liable for costs, and such exception is founded upon the provisions of section 13499, G. C., under which a magistrate may, before a warrant is issued in a misdemeanor case, require the complainant to secure the costs of the prosecution, and in no other case in a prosecution before a magistrate, may a complainant be held liable for costs therein. It will be further noted that there is an additional limitation upon the above exception, in that sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables, marshals, deputy marshals, watchmen and police officers, when in the discharge of their official duties, are specifically taken out of such exception under the provisions of section 13499, G. C., etc. Thus is made manifest the legislative purpose that in no case shall those officers especially charged with the duty of enforcing criminal statutes, be held liable for costs in any case prosecuted before a magistrate.

Hence in the absence of statutory authority for the payment of costs in such case by the agricultural commission, there is an express statutory exemption from any requirement of the same by a magistrate. Furthermore, it is only in felony cases upon conviction that authority will be found for payment of costs in criminal cases from the state treasury, except by special provision therefor, and there appears no such special provision at this time applicable to the present case.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the agricultural commission is without authority to pay the costs as shown by the bill submitted in these criminal prosecutions, and from this it follows that the form in which the same are presented is immaterial. You also submit with your communication a certified copy of journal entry of the court of common pleas of Richland county, Ohio, in the cause of Rufina Hutchinson, plaintiff, v. The Agricultural Commission of Ohio, et al., defendants, under date of January 8, 1915, as follows:

"IN THE COMMON PLEAS COURT, RICHLAND COUNTY, OHIO.

"Rufina Hutchinson, Plaintiff, v. The Agricultural Commission of Ohio, et al., Defendants.	Journal Entry.

"This cause now coming on to be heard upon the motion of the defendant, the agricultural commission of Ohio, to dissolve the temporary restraining order herein issued in the case, and the court being fully advised in the premises, overrules the said motion, but modifies the restraining order heretofore issued, and the said defendants and each of them are enjoined from killing the cattle described in the petition on the premises of said plaintiff and from burying the said cattle on the said premises. Said defendants not having filed any answer in said cause said injunction is hereby made perpetual and the defendants and each of them are perpetually enjoined from killing the cattle on the said premises of plaintiff or burying the same thereon. All at the costs of the defendants herein, taxed at $89.15.

"The State of Ohio, Richland County, ss.

"I, J. V. Finney, clerk of the court of common pleas, within and for the aforesaid county and state, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original journal entry now on file in said clerk's office in the cause.

"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of this said court, at Mansfield, this 8th day of January, A. D., 1915.

"(Signed), J. V. FINNEY,
"Clerk of Common Pleas Court."

This was a civil action against the agricultural commission and other officers and agents of the state, seeking to perpetually enjoin the defendants from killing certain alleged infected cattle upon the premises of the plaintiff.

The court as shown by the certified journal entry, prior to January 8, 1915, made the temporary restraining order theretofore granted perpetual, and rendered judgment against the defendants for costs, taxed at $89.15, a summary of which costs accompanies such journal entry.

You inquire whether the agricultural commission is authorized to issue voucher in payment of this judgment? This is now a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction against the agricultural commission, the authority for the payment of which depends solely upon whether there are funds appropriated sufficient for the payment of the same.

It will be observed that this judgment was a liquidated and outstanding claim against the commission prior to the repeal of house bill No. 47, 104 O. L., 64, in which was included an appropriation of $1,000.00, under maintenance F-9, that is to say, for contingencies. I learn from inquiry at the office of the auditor of state that there is of that appropriation unexpended, an amount in excess of $300.00.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the agricultural commission is authorized to issue voucher for the payment of the above judgment and that the certified copy of the journal entry, together with the summary statement of the costs, is sufficient in form.

It is suggested, however, that this opinion applies only to the facts of this particular case and may not be taken as authority for the payment of costs by the agricultural commission in other cases.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CANDIDATES FOR ASSESSOR—MAY HAVE NAMES PRINTED UPON BALLOTS BY FILING PETITION SIXTY DAYS PRIOR TO AUGUST PRIMARY—CANDIDATES MAY ALSO BE NOMINATED BY HAVING NAMES WRITTEN UPON BALLOTS AS IN CASE OF NOMINATION FOR OTHER OFFICES.

Candidates for the office of assessor as provided by section 17 of an act "to provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation," etc., filed in the office of secretary of state, May 11, 1915, may have their names printed upon the ballots by filing a proper petition with the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county in which primary elections are authorized to be held sixty days prior to August 10, 1915, or candidates for such office may be nominated by having their names written upon the ballots the same as in the case of nomination for other offices and the ballots may be so printed as to permit the writing in of the names of candidates for such office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 24, 1915, as follows:

> "We herewith submit for your opinion the following question:
> "An act of the legislature 'To provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation and to repeal certain sections of the General Code relating thereto,' was filed in this office May 11, 1915.
> "Section 17 provides as follows:
> " 'At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers as follows: Municipal corporations divided into wards, one assessor shall be elected in each ward; in villages one assessor shall be elected; in cities not divided into wards, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, shall, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, within ten days after this act shall become effective, divide such cities or such part or parts thereof as may be located in their county, into such number of assessment districts as in the judgment of the county auditor may be necessary in order to provide for the assessment of all the property therein; a division so fixed shall remain in effect for a period of four years, at the expiration of which and quadrennially thereafter a like division shall be made in the same manner, and by the same authority,' etc.

"The primary election will be held on the 10th day of August, 1915. The above act will take effect on the 9th day of August, 1915, providing no referendum is filed.

"Question: May candidates for assessor be nominated at the primary election where primaries are to be held on the 10th day of August by filing a primary petition sixty days before said primary election, or should a blank space be left on the primary ballot for the name of persons to be written on said ballot and thereby nominated as assessors, or must all nominations of candidates for assessor be made by petitions to be filed before the November election of 1915?"

Barring the contingency of the filing of a referendum petition thereon the law from which you quote will, at the time of holding the primary election of August 10, 1915, be effective and the elective office of assessor will have been created. Such assessors are by the provisions of the section above quoted required to be elected at the regular November election, 1915. While the law above referred to is not at this time effective in a technical sense, it is deemed to be of sufficient force to warrant an assumption for the purposes of your inquiry that at the time such primary election is required to be held it will be operative and in effect.

Notwithstanding the suspension of the operation of this law the provisions of the statute for the nomination of officers to be elected at the November election, 1915, are now in full force and effect, and the fundamental purpose of conducting such primary election as is required to be held on August 10, 1915, is the designation or nomination of candidates for such offices as are required to be elected at such subsequent November election.

In view of this sole and fundamental purpose of the conducting of such primary election, and that as above stated the law referred to by you warrants the assumption that it will be effective at the time such primary election is actually held, I am, therefore, of opinion in answer to your inquiries that candidates for the office of assessor, as is provided in the act referred to by you from which the provisions above quoted are taken, may be entitled to have their names printed upon the official ballot for the August primary 1915, by filing with the deputy state supervisor of elections of the county sixty days prior to such primary election a petition therefor, as required by section 4969, G. C., 103 O. L., 482, and that the names of persons may be written upon such ballots for nomination of candidate for such offices in the same manner as provided in other cases, and that the ballots should be so printed as to provide a space in which such names may be written, in the same manner as in the case of nominations for other offices on the primary ballot. Nominations made in either of the above ways will not preclude the nomination of candidates by petitions filed sixty days prior to the election in accordance with section 4999, G. C., et seq., 103 O. L., 944. It may be observed, however, that in the event a referendum petition upon the above law is filed prior to the ninth day of August, 1915, the nomination of candidates for assessor at the August primary will be of no force, effect or validity.

It will also be noted that nominations made by writing names upon the ballot where there occurs a vacancy for any office are subject to the provisions of house bill No. 286, filed in the office of the secretary of state May 3, 1915, as follows:

"That in the event of any office for which nominations are sought to be made at any primary election, and for which no nominating petitions or declarations of candidacy have been filed within the time prescribed by law by or in behalf of any candidate of a political party, so that in so far as such office is concerned, there is a vacancy on the primary ballot to be nominated, no valid nomination shall be made for such office unless the name of the person attempted to be nominated and receiving the highest number of votes for said office, shall have been written on at least eight per cent. of all the ballots containing such vacancy, which have been voted at such primary election."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 15—JURY COMMISSIONERS—TIME OF EMPLOYMENT LIMITED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion amended senate bill No. 15.

The first change sought to be made in the existing law is to limit the number of days that the jury commissioners of each county may be employed in counties in which there is but one common pleas judge, to ten days instead of twenty days in each year.

Your memorandum states that this bill "allows jury commissioners in large cities to be assigned clerks." This is a mistake. It does permit jury commissioners to be designated and appointed assignment commissioners. This is no change from the present law. I am not advised of any abuse that exists under the present law which permits jury commissioners to be employed not to exceed twenty days. Neither am I in a position to state definitely that ten days in any one year will be sufficient for the work of the jury commissioners in counties having but one judge. However, it seems to me that ten days ought to be ample time for the work.

The proposed change in section 11424 is the result of practical experience. Under the present law the jury commissioners retain the keys and jurors may not be drawn until the jury commissioners have been found and they have unlocked the wheel. In cases coming under my personal observation the necessity of going out in the country and hunting up the jury commissioners has caused a delay of a day at a time in the courts, besides considerable expense and in one recent instance where the venire had been exhausted in a murder case it not only delayed the proceedings for half a day, but cost the county ten dollars in extra expense to draw the names of eight jurors.

I am of the opinion that it would be better, as is provided in amended senate bill No. 15, that the court should be the custodian of the keys. However, this bill does not remedy the condition at which it was aimed.

Section 11426 which remains untouched by the bill under consideration requires the clerk to draw the names from the jury wheel in the presence of the jury commissioners, so that ordinarily nothing is to be gained by taking the custody of the keys away from the jury commissioners when the jury commissioners are required to be present at the drawing of jurors unless it be such a case as recently occurred where one of the jury commissioners came in from the country to attend the drawing of names and left his keys at home.

I herewith return amended senate bill No. 15.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF HOUSE BILL NO. 130.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion house bill No. 130, specifically asking as to the effect of the words "to do" and the policy of the new matter.

I am of the opinion that the language used in original section 12875 "organized and doing" is to be preferred over "to do" in the present bill. However, I am of the opinion that the courts would construe them to be of the same effect.

As to the new matter contained in the bill, it expresses the law as it has been held to be by the courts in the absence of express statutes. I am of the opinion that the enactment of the statute is advisable. However, I might add that the inclusion of "county treasurer" and "trust funds" may raise some slight question as to just what is meant by "trust funds," but I am clearly of the opinion that the courts would hold that only such matters as were referred to in section 2983 were included therein.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that this bill should be approved.

I am returning house bill No. 130.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 121—WHETHER THE WORD "TRUSTEE" SHOULD BE CONSTRUED AS PLURAL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion amended senate bill No. 121, asking the specific question as to the effect of the use of the word "trustee" rather than "trustees."

The section referred to belongs in part 1, title 12, division 6, chapter 1 of the General Code, and therefore section 27 of the General Code is applicable thereto.

Section 27 of the General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"In the interpretation of parts first and second, unless the context shows that another sense was intended * * * words * * * in the singular include the plural number."

I am of the opinion that under the section last referred to it would be the duty of the court to read the word "trustee" in amended senate bill No. 121 as if it had been enacted "trustees."

Amended senate bill No. 121 is returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BONDS—ARMORY SITE—SECTION 3939, G. C., IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL AND VOID IN SO FAR AS IT AUTHORIZES MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS TO ISSUE BONDS FOR PURCHASING REAL ESTATE FOR ERECTION OF AN ARMORY—SUCH BONDS ARE INVALID.

Section 3939, G. C., insofar as it authorizes municipal corporations to issue bonds for the purpose of purchasing real estate to be donated to the state of Ohio as a site for the erection of an armory is unconstitutional and void, and bonds issued for this purpose are invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am unable to advise the commission to invest in the bonds of the city of Mt. Vernon, provisionally accepted by the commission on May 6, 1915, a transcript of the proceedings in the issuance whereof has been submitted to me.

The bonds are sought to be issued under favor of section 3939 of the General Code, which expressly authorizes the issuance of bonds "for purchasing real estate with a building or buildings thereon, to be used for public purposes, or to be donated to the state of Ohio by deed in fee simple as a site for the erection of an armory." The latter part of this provision is, in my opinion, unconstitutional.

Ordinarily I would not be disposed to question the constitutionalty of an act of the general assembly. In this case, however, I feel that I cannot do otherwise than express the view that the statute is void, for two reasons:

(1) The industrial commission as an investor is entitled to advice from this office on precisely the same basis that any private investor should be advised by his counsel.

(2) The unconstitutionality of the statute is so clearly established by the decisions of the supreme court of this state as to remove all doubt.

See Wasson v. Commissioners, 49 O. S., 622;
Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, 57 O. S., 436.

The issuance of bonds by a municipal corporation for the purpose of purchasing and donating a site to the state for armory purposes necessarily involves the levying of taxes upon the taxable property in the municipal corporation for the payment of the bonds and interest thereon.

The principle of the decisions cited is that a tax may not be levied within one of the subdivisions of the state for a purpose which pertains to the state at large, regardless of supposed incidental and peculiar benefit to the subdivision. It is also distinctly held in the case last above cited that securing a site for an armory and constructing and maintaining the same are state purposes, and that purchasers of local bonds issued for such purposes are charged with notice of their invalidity.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 140 WOULD TEND TO CONFUSE LAWS NOW IN FORCE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion amended senate bill No. 140, and ask me as to the policy of said bill.

Section 13117 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Whoever, with intent to defraud, executes and delivers a false or fictitious warehouse receipt, acknowledgment, or other instrument of writing, to the purport and effect that a person held or had received in store, or held or had received in a warehouse, or in another place, or held or had received into possession, custody, or control, goods, wares, or merchandise, when such goods, wares, or merchandise were not held, or had not been received, in good faith, by such person; or, whoever indorses, assigns, transfers, or delivers, or attempts to indorse, transfer, or deliver to a person, such false or fictitious warehouse receipt, acknowledgment, or instrument of writing, knowing it to be such, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years."

While the examination of the bill has necessarily been hurried, in my opinion section 13117 covers everything that is proposed to be covered in said bill No. 140, and I can see no necessity for such a provision.

It occurred to me from the peculiar language of amended senate bill No. 140 that possibly some court had held that section 13117 applied only to a warehouseman, but careful search of all the current reports fails to disclose any case whatever bearing upon this matter. If such a holding was made it must have been under the mistaken apprehension that section 13117 was a part of the warehouse receipts act enacted a few years ago. However, such is not the fact, as section 13117 has been in force for many years, having been enacted in the 54th Ohio Laws, page 132, and it applies to all persons whether a warehouseman or not, and covers forging and uttering of a forged bill by providing that whoever indorses, assigns, transfers, or delivers, or attempts to do so, a false or fictitious warehouse receipt, etc., shall be imprisoned.

In the absence of further information showing necessity of amended senate bill No. 140, it is my opinion that your approval of this bill would only tend to confuse the laws now in force upon the subject.

I return herewith amended senate bill No. 140.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 154—ITS EFFECT UPON HOUSE BILL NO. 249.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion house bill No. 154, asking specifically as to its effect upon house bill No. 249, passed April 1st, and approved April 2, 1915.

In the drawing of house bill No. 249, the amendment of sections 1819, 1820, 1948, 1949, 1950 and 1956, in 103 O. L., page 446, was entirely overlooked. The language of section 1841, as set forth in house bill No. 154, is proper, while the following language in house bill No. 249:

> "and the powers and duties of the board of state charities under sections 1819, 1820, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1952 and 1956 of the General Code, shall cease and thereafter devolve on the board of administration alone from and after August 15, 1911," is unnecessary, because the powers and duties of the state board of charities under the sections named were transferred to the board of administration by the act found in 103 O. L., 446.

The balance of house bill No. 249, while desirable, is not absolutely essential, as I believe that the board of administration has the implied power, in the absence of that section, to require the information therein provided for. Hence section 1841, as set forth in house bill No. 154, is to be preferred to the same section as set forth in house bill No. 249 heretofore approved. The amendment of section 2068 takes away the right to admit a limited number of suitable patients, not to exceed ten per cent. of the total capacity, for any sum less than $5.00 per week. However, sections 1815-13 and 1815-14 make adequate provision for the same purpose. In other words, while still allowing persons to be cared for who are not financially able to pay $5.00 a week, it requires the difference between the amount that such person is able to pay and $5.00 a week to be made up by any person legally responsible for the support of the inmate, or in the event that there is no person legally responsible for such support, the county in which the inmate had his last legal residence must make up the difference from its poor fund. I see no objection to this provision, as it is and has been for some time the policy of the state to require the subdivisions to bear the expense in state institutions of inmates from those subdivisions.

Section 1815-15 provides that while county commissioners may agree to support or aid in the support of a resident of their county in the Ohio state sanitorium, they cannot be compelled to do so if the county is maintaining a county tuberculosis hospital, or has joined in the erection or maintenance of a district tuberculosis hospital, or has contracted with proper authorities for the treatment of such persons. I think this is an eminently fair provision. Many thousands of dollars have been spent by the various counties in the erection of a county tuberculosis hospital or a district tuberculosis hospital, and it is not fair to ask them in addition thereto to contribute to the maintenance of tubercular patients at the Ohio state sanitorium as long as the county tuberculosis hospital or the district tuberculosis hospital is not full.

I return herewith house bill No. 154.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 217—COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES OF JUDGES OF COMMON PLEAS AND COURT OF APPEALS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion amended senate bill No. 217, passed by the general assembly on May 27, 1915.

This bill amends section 2253 of the General Code, as last amended in 104 O. L., 251, and makes the following changes in the present law:

1. It deprives judges of the courts of appeals of their allowance for actual and necessary expenses, not exceeding three hundred dollars in any one year, incurred while holding court in counties in which they do not reside other than under an assignment of the chief justice of the court of appeals to hold an additional court of appeals in another district. That is to say, under sections 1528 and 1529, G. C., judges of the courts of appeals are entitled to five dollars a day while holding court in another appellate district under assignment of the chief justice of the court of appeals, such allowance being in lieu of all expenses. Under section 2253, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 251, such judges were allowed their actual and necessary expenses, not exceeding three hundred dollars in any year, for holding court in a county other than that in which they reside—that is, for example, in another county in their own appellate district. This has been taken away by senate bill No. 217.

2. The limit upon the expense allowance of common pleas judges for holding court outside of their respective counties, otherwise than under assignment of the chief justice of the supreme court by virtue of section 1469, is reduced from three hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars. This change, however, does not affect judges elected prior to June 8, 1914.

3. The per diem allowance of common pleas judges from the county treasury for services under assignments of the chief justice of the supreme court in aiding and disposing of business of some county other than that in which they reside is reduced from ten to five dollars.

4. The limitation of three hundred dollars upon the allowance of actual and necessary expenses of common pleas judges, incurred by them under assignments by the chief justice in aiding and disposing of business of some other county than that in which they reside, is removed; there is, under amended senate bill No. 217, no limitation on the amount of actual and necessary expenses which may be charged against other counties under the amended section.

The bill also provides that judges of the courts of common pleas in adjoining counties may exchange service and assist one another and may hold court in any county within the state where their services may be required, or may be requested by the resident judges. This provision, however, is unnecessary. The chief justice of the supreme court, in a letter under date of March 27, 1915, to Hon. J. S. Thomas, judge of the common pleas court of Scioto county, used the following language:

> "I hold that the constitution, where it says that common pleas judges may temporarily preside or hold court in any county of the state, conferred jurisdiction and power upon the judges to do the very thing suggested in the constitution, and that they may arrange among themselves, in an informal manner, for exchanges such as were made under the former practice.
> "My idea is that you, for instance, could exchange with Judge Corn, of Ironton, Judge Stephenson, of West Union, or, for that matter, with any other common pleas judge in the state of Ohio without any special designation by the chief justice."

In view of this authoritative interpretation of the law as it now exists, it seems that the first sentence of section 2253, General Code, as amended by the bill, is unnecessary. Of course, if common pleas judges have the right to hold court in any other county in the state, without the assignment of the chief justice, then present section 2253, General Code, affords to them reimbursement for actual and necessary expenses so incurred, not exceeding three hundred dollars in any year.

The only other material change in the section is the provision that the expenses shall be paid upon sworn itemized accounts, which, in the case of payment from the state treasury, are to be filed monthly.

The subject of compensation and expenses of common pleas judges and judges of the courts of appeals has given this department and the department of the auditor of state, and the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices therein, a great deal of trouble. It would seem that amended senate bill No. 217, should it become a law, would still further complicate the subject.

I herewith return the bill referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF HOUSE BILL NO. 687—TEACHERS' INSTITUTES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination house bill No. 687. This bill probably grows out of a ruling by this department to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, opinion No. 245, dated April 15, 1915, which held that:

"Superintendents and teachers may not be paid for attending a teachers' institute held subsequent to May 20, 1914, unless such institute was duly authorized to be held by the county board of education."

It appears that there had been some misunderstanding and confusion upon the subject and boards of education were seeking to pay superintendents and teachers for attending institutes which had not been properly authorized by the county board of education.

It is the manifest policy of the law that teachers' institutes shall be subject to the control and supervision of the county boards of education, and that the same shall be conducted in accordance therewith, is made a condition precedent to the payment of teachers and superintendents for their attendance. In other words, it was clearly the purpose of the legislature that teachers and superintendents should receive pay for attending only such institutes as might be held under the provisions of section 7868, G. C., and formally authorized and approved by the county board of education.

The bill seeks to authorize boards of education to pay teachers for attendance at institutes not held in accordance with law. Exception might well be taken to the fact that the bill undertakes to authorize boards of education to pay teachers who attended "county teachers' institutes" during the year 1914, and it is doubtful whether or not under a strict interpretation of the law there was such a thing as "a county teachers' institute" held after the time section 7868, as amended, went into effect, unless the board by formal resolution decided that one should be held. However, the intention of the legislature is, as I take it from the above bill, clear that teachers are to be paid for attending a "supposed" county teachers' institute, and further that all teachers who have received pay for attending such supposed county teachers' institutes shall be relieved from reimbursing the treasury for the money received for such attendance.

While one naturally has sympathy for the teacher who has attended under instructions of the board of education, and feels that such teacher should be paid, yet it is of very, very doubtful policy to enact any law which provides, as in the bill under consideration, that "all payments heretofore made by boards of education to teachers for such attendance at teachers' institutes during the year 1914 are hereby declared to be legal and valid, and all boards and officers making such payments are hereby relieved from any liability therefor." This is in effect establishing the precedent that if officers or boards disregard the law they may appeal to the legislature and have their acts condoned.

House bill No. 687 is returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EFFECT OF SENATE BILL NO. 315.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted for my examination and opinion senate bill No. 315.

Taking this bill up in the order in which the sections appear in the bill:

There are two important changes in section 3295: (a) Specifically authorizing municipalities to issue bonds "for the purpose of providing funds to pay the township's share of the cost of any improvement made under an agreement with the county commissioners." I do not at the moment recall any improvement which may be made under agreement with the county commissioners, where there is no provision for raising funds. From the tenor of the bill it is apparent to me that this provision was inserted to take care of improvements made under section 6905-1 of the Code. This last section, however, has been repealed by the highway bill and other provisions substituted therefor.

Section 132 of the highway bill (amended senate bill No. 125) makes complete provision for the municipality to sell bonds in such cases.

(b) The second new provision in section 3295 is

> "All bonds heretofore issued by township trustees under assumed authority for the improvement of roads in connection with county commissioners, shall, in so far as the same might otherwise be held invalid on account of the absence of power of such trustees to issue bonds for such purpose, be held to be legal, valid and binding obligations of the township issuing such bonds.''

This is similar to a provision in senate bill No. 220 on which I have heretofore rendered an opinion, and which bill was vetoed by you. The language in the present bill is, however, more guarded and more limited than in amended senate bill No. 220.

Taking up section 6912-1 in the bill:

This section in the Code was a part of one of the schemes of road building. All the other sections authorizing the building of roads in the manner to which section 6912-1 would be applicable have been repealed in the highway bill (amended senate bill No. 125). Section 6912-1 was also repealed therein. To allow this bill to become a law containing this section would add considerably to a confusion of the road laws which it was the purpose of the highway bill to eliminate. There will be nothing left in the Code upon which this section could operate. The things sought to be accomplished by this section are cared for in sections 131, 132 and other sections of the highway bill. While not in the exact terms of senate bill No. 315, yet from my hurried examination I believe the provisions of the highway bill to be ample.

Taking up section 3939. In the first place there are two sections 3939 in the Page and Adams edition of the General Code. My predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion found in volume I, page 228, of the attorney general's reports for 1913, held that the section appearing last in said Code under the section number of 3939 was the operative section, and in this I concur. The bill under consideration makes no reference to the fact that there are two sections 3939 in said Code, and while it could be worked out all right there would still be room for more or less dispute, as is shown by the fact that the editors of the Code found it necessary to publish both sections with the explanation ''Because of doubt as to which statute is in force, both are given.'' However, the only change of consequence in this section is in subdivision 22 thereof, which adds the new matter:

''Whether such resurfacing, repairing or improving is done directly by the municipal corporation or contracted by it, or by the county commissioners under an agreement with the municipal corporation by which it has agreed to assume and pay any part of the cost thereof.''

Whether or not a municipality may enter into a contract with the county commissioners for the resurfacing, repairing or improving of roads, will, I believe, depend upon the provisions of the highway bill. I have not had time to properly digest the provisions of the highway bill.

The matters involved in this bill are so complicated that the short time allowed by the necessities of the case does not admit of the careful investigation I would prefer to make. However, from the hurried examination of the bill I am of the opinion that its approval would lead only to complications and not be of any particular benefit.

Senate bill No. 315 is returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MEMBERS OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY—SUPPLIES FURNISHED—STATIONERY, BILL BOOKS, JOURNALS, ETC.—SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION TO OPINIONS NUMBERS 436, 437.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In response to your request as to whether or not opinions Nos. 436, to Sergeant-at-Arms Robinson, and No. 437, to you, cover such items as letterheads upon which the members' names had been printed, the bill books and journals, which could be of no value to the state:

The articles named by you do not come within the opinions referred to, and I consider them personal property of the members, which could not be used by the successors of the members or anyone else, and they are of no value whatever to the state. Bills and journals were printed for public distribution.

The opinions were intended to cover such things as the General Codes, unused stationery, supplies, etc., etc., which the state would be compelled to buy again for the next general assembly, even if no extraordinary session of the present one were had. In other words, they were to cover the state's property.

You state also that, following the custom of years, the employes of the general assembly had, prior to the rendering of my opinions, incurred some expenses in making boxes. To the extent that such expenses were incurred prior to the opinions, I am willing that it would be overlooked this last time, but this principle will not apply to any expressage paid and such expressage, if paid, should be refunded.

It is not my purpose to attempt to carry the law to a ridiculous conclusion, yet, on the other hand, the real spirit and purpose of the law must be observed.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

GRAND AND PETIT JURORS—PER DIEM EXPENSES FOR TRAVEL TO AND FROM COURT HOUSE—MILEAGE FROM RESIDENCE TO COURT HOUSE LEGAL WHEN COURT DISMISSES SAID JURORS FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

An order of the court allowing jurors, grand and petit, per diem for days necessarily used in travel in reaching court house or returning therefrom; also mileage from residence to court house on returning to court after several days adjournment, is legal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—Under date of May 25, 1915, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith sending you a copy of an order made by a judge of the court of common pleas directing the clerk of the court to make certain payments of mileage and per diems to jurors. Because of this question being liable to come up from any county at any time, we would like your written opinion as to whether this court order is a legal one as to the payment of jurors."

The copy of the order of the court, enclosed in your letter, is as follows:

"ORDER FOR COMPENSATION OF JURORS.

"The clerk of this court is hereby directed to pay grand and petit jurors as follows:—in addition to the regular fee of two dollars per day and mileage on first appearance—the per diem fee for each day or portion of day necessarily used in travel to enable him to be present at the time ordered by the court, throughout the term, whether that day be Sunday or any day of the week, or necessarily used in reaching his home after being excused by the court; and should any juror be excused before the end of the week to appear at a later date, he shall receive mileage from his home to the court house on his return, whether the day of his return be Sunday or any other day of the week; but he shall not receive mileage if no day intervenes except Sunday."

The section of the General Code which fixes the compensation and mileage of both grand and petit jurors is section 3008, which reads as follows:

"Each grand or petit juror drawn from the jury box pursuant to law, each juror selected by the court as talesman as provided by law, and each talesman, shall receive two dollars for each day of service, and if not a talesman, five cents each mile from his place of residence to the county seat. Such compensation shall be certified by the clerk of the court and paid by the county treasurer on the warrant of the county auditor."

The above order of court covers two matters: One the per diem compensation of the grand and petit jurors and the other the mileage of both grand and petit jurors. In regard to the compensation of grand and petit jurors it is to be noted that the order provides that each grand and petit juror shall be entitled to the per diem allowed under the provisions of section 3008 for each day or portion of day necessarily used in travel to enable him to be present at the time ordered by the court.

In the case of State ex rel. Beverstock et al. v. Merry, Auditor, 34 O. S., 137, the first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

"Under section 22 of the act to regulate the fees of jurors, etc. (73 Ohio L., 134), jurors are to be allowed compensation for days spent in whole or in part in going to and returning from court, and for days of attendance during the term, whether impaneled or not; and the clerk is not authorized, in addition to such days, to certify that the jurors are entitled to compensation for days as to which they were discharged and not in attendance."

Section 22 of the act referred to in said case provided, among other things, that "each petit juror shall be allowed the sum of two dollars for each and every day he may serve."

I do not see any distinction between the phrase "for each and every day he may serve and the phrase used in section 3008, G. C., "for each day of service." In the opinion in that case the court laid down the following at page 100:

"Jurors should be allowed compensation for every day spent in going to and returning from court, and for every day they are in attendance at the county seat as jurors, whether they are impaneled or not; fractions of a day to be counted as an entire day in estimating compensation.

"It follows that where, as in this case, jurors are discharged from attendance by order of the court for several consecutive days at a time during the term, the clerk is not authorized to certify that the jurors are entitled to compensation for the days they were so discharged, and not required to be in attendance."

I do not find that the case in the 34th Ohio State, above referred to, has been in any way overruled. Consequently, I am of the opinion that jurors, both grand and petit, are, under the decision above referred to, entitled to a per diem fee for each day or portion of day necessarily used in travel to enable him to be present at the time ordered by the court, or necessarily used in reaching home after being discharged by the court.

The word "necessarily" as used in the above order makes it clear that there must be some necessity for the juror to leave his home earlier than the day on which he is required to report for attendance to the court, or some necessity for him to postpone his return until the following day after being dismissed. The necessity must not be one of personal convenience, but one which arises by reason of lack of railroad facilities or some similar reason.

The next question involved in your inquiry is relative to the payment of mileage to jurors under the order of the court that "should any juror be excused before the end of the week to appear at a later date, he shall receive mileage from his home to the court house on his return," etc. In the first place it is to be noted that there is nothing in the order of the court which attempts to allow a juror mileage from the court house to his home, upon being excused by the court, as in fact he could not be, under the opinion of Hon. U. G. Denman, former attorney general, as found on page 656 of the report of the attorney general for the year 1909, Mr. Denman holding that under the provisions of section 5182, R. S., now section 3008, G. C., jurors both petit and grand, may only be allowed mileage to county seat and not returning.

The question involved here, however, is when a juror has been excused and therefore allowed to return home he can, on again returning to the court, be allowed mileage from his home to the court house.

Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, former attorney general, in an opinion rendered May 9, 1912, attorney general's report for 1912, page 1306, held that under section 3008 both grand and petit jurors are entitled to mileage from their places of residence to the county seat on the day they are summoned, but are not entitled to mileage for each day of service. In the report of the same year at page 1388, the attorney general held that if grand jurors are adjourned by order of the court, subject to the call of the clerk, they would, in the interest of economy and justice, be entitled to mileage from their place of residence to the court house upon returning upon the call. His reasoning is as follows:

"There is no provision in the above statute (Sec. 3008, G. C.), that mileage shall only be paid once, nor is there any provision that such mileage shall not be paid more than once. The statute is silent upon the subject and should, therefore, receive a reasonable construction.

"It is contemplated that whenever a grand jury is brought together, such jury shall consider all the business before it without adjournment, except from day to day, and that after such business is completed the said jury will be discharged finally. However, if in the interest of public justice and economy it is deemed advisable by the court to adjourn said jury, subject to the call of the clerk instead of holding it together during the entire term, and thus allow the jurors to return to their respective homes I believe a reasonable construction of the statutes in question would entitle said grand jurors to their mileage in returning to the performance of their duties upon order of the court and call of the clerk.''

There is no distinction that occurs to me between the mileage to be allowed to a petit or a grand juror when the court adjourns its session over a number of days. In the case found in the 34th Ohio State, hereinbefore referred to, it is distinctly held that where, as in this case, jurors are discharged from attendance, by order of the court, for service during the term, the clerk is not authorized to certify that jurors are entitled to compensation for the days they were so discharged and not required to be in attendance.

In view of the fact that jurors would not be entitled to their per diem compensation when the court dismisses them for several days, it would seem only just that said jurors should be entitled to mileage from their place of residence to the court house, on their return to duty after such adjournment, and since, as was pointed out by Mr. Hogan in the opinion referred to, there is nothing in section 3008 that states that a juror shall only be entitled once to mileage from his residence to the court house, I am of the opinion that it is proper for the court to make an order that jurors who are temporarily excused and therefore not required to give daily attendance to the court may, upon returning upon the order of the court, be entitled to such mileage. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the order of the court submitted by you is in all respects legal and proper.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE OF CHICAGO JUNCTION—TRANSCRIPT FOR BOND ISSUE APPROVED.

Transcript for bond issue for improving waterworks, village of Chicago Junction, approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 4, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"IN RE:—Bonds in the amount of $3,000.00 of the village of Chicago Junction, issued for the purpose of improving the waterworks of said village and securing a more complete enjoyment thereof.

Under date of June 1, 1915, I received from Mr. Leonard S. Wise, solicitor of the village of Chicago Junction, Ohio, a transcript of the proceedings of the officers of said village relative to the issuance of the above bonds. I have carefully examined said transcript, and I am of the opinion that the council of said village are authorized by law to issue said bonds for the purpose named; that their proceedings and the proceedings of the other officers of said village, relative thereto, are regular and in conformity with the statutes; that the amount of the said bonds, together with the other indebtedness of said village, does not exceed any limitations imposed by law, and that said bonds, when properly drawn, executed and delivered, will constitute valid legal obligations of the said village.

As the bonds have not yet been prepared and executed, I suggest that when they are delivered to the treasurer of state that they be presented to me for approval as to their form and proper execution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 312—ITS SCOPE AND EFFECT—EXCISE AND PROPERTY TAX OF TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE COMPANIES—TIME OF FILING REPORTS CHANGED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 5, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—At the request of Hon. J. H. McGiffert, chairman of the tax commission of Ohio, I am directing to you the following opinion respecting the scope and effect of amended senate bill No. 312 passed by the general assembly on May 27, 1915. This bill amends sections 5449, 5450, 5451, 5458, 5470 and 5474 of the General Code, and enacts a supplementary section, No. 5473-1.

This legislation relates primarily to the date as of which certain reports shall be made to the tax commission for excise and property tax purposes by telegraph and telephone companies.

Under the present law express, telegraph and telephone companies make but one report to the tax commission which serves the uses of the tax commission in assessing their respective properties and in ascertaining the amount of their gross receipts for excise tax purposes as well.

The making of this report and the form thereof are provided for by sections 5449 and 5450 of the General Code. This report is, by the present sections, required to be filed on or before the first day of August, and in the case of telegraph and telephone companies it is required to contain a statement of the entire gross receipts, "including" certain specified things, for the year ending the thirtieth (30th) day of June (paragraph 14 of section 5450), and a statement of facts bearing upon the value of its property as of the 30th day of June.

I am informed that at the time this legislation was drafted it was represented that express companies had to make certain reports to the federal government as of the 30th day of June, and the desire was to accommodate such companies by making their reports to the state officers relate to the same date.

I am also informed that perhaps since the sections of the General Code, to which I have referred, were enacted, the federal government has prescribed a different date, namely, the 31st day of December as the date as of which reports shall be made to it by telephone and telegraph companies, though express companies are still required to report as of the 30th day of June to the federal government.

It appears, therefore, that the present bill may have been and doubtless was passed at the instance of telegraph and telephone companies and for the purpose of extending to them the same accommodation that had been extended to express companies in 1911.

Section 5449, as amended by the bill, leaves the date of filing the statement by express companies as it has been, namely, the first day of August, but changes that date as to telegraph and telephone companies to the first day of March. The section still applies to all three classes of companies, but prescribes different dates, as aforesaid.

Section 5450 is amended in two particulars. In the first place the date as of which the facts relating to the property valuations of the respective companies shall be reported is similarly changed as to telegraph and telephone companies to the 31st day of December, and left as to express companies at the 30th day of June as it is in present section 5450.

In the second place the paragraph which in present section 5450 prescribes that telephone and telegraph companies shall report in this statement their gross receipts for the year ending the 30th day of June (paragraph 14 referred to above), is dropped from the section. The substitute for this paragraph is found in section 5473-1, as enacted in the bill to which I shall hereafter allude.

Section 5450 of the present law requires the commission to assess the property of express, telegraph and telephone companies on the first Monday in September. This is changed in the bill by amending the section so as to provide that this assessment shall be made, as to telegraph and telephone companies, on the first Monday in July, leaving the first Monday of September as the date for the assessment of the property of express companies.

A similar change, with respect to the certification by the commission to the county auditor, is made by amending section 5458, the date for such certification, as to telephone and telegraph companies, being changed from the third Monday of September to the second Monday of July. It is to be noted, in this connection, that the commission is given but one week between the date of its assessment and the date of its certification as to telegraph and telephone companies, whereas it is given two weeks as to express companies, and under the present law has two weeks as to telegraph and telephone companies. As these dates are undoubtedly directory, this shortening of time is immaterial, in my opinion.

The foregoing are all the changes made by the bill with respect to property valuations. The next change occurs by amendment of section 5470 which, in its present form, requires reports from public utilities generally for excise tax purposes, but excludes from the requirement express, telegraph and telephone companies because these companies have heretofore, as I have stated, filed but the one report. The change consists in striking out of the exception clause reference to telegraph and telephone companies, thus making it obligatory on such companies to report on or before the first day of August. The next change which is made is in the language of section 5474, which prescribes the contents of the report to be made by public utilities generally for excise tax purposes. Telegraph and telephone companies, having been placed in the catalogue of the utilities required to file reports, by the amendment to section 5470, would be subject to section 5474 unless expressly excepted therefrom. It is desirable to except them from this section because the contents of the reports which should be made by them (at present prescribed by paragraph 14 of section 5450), are not exactly the same as those of the reports required to be made by public utilities generally and at present prescribed by section 5474, G. C. Therefore the words "telegraph and telephone companies" are inserted in section 5474 by the bill and in the clause defining the utilities excepted from its provisions.

It is seen, therefore, that so far in the bill, so to speak, telegraph and telephone companies are required to report annually to the commission for excise tax purposes, and I may add are subject to an excise tax of 1 2-10 per cent. as to telephone companies and 2 per cent. as to express companies, of their gross receipts. This latter result is brought about by the fact that sections 5483 and 5485 of the General Code, imposing the tax, are not in any way affected by the bill, nor are sections 5475, providing that the commission shall ascertain and determine the receipts, and 5481 providing that the commission shall certify to the auditor of state the amount ascertained, in any wise affected thereby.

But while so much of the machinery of the tax is afforded by the law as it would be changed if the bill should go into effect without section 5473-1, there would be no provision as to what should be reported by telegraph and telephone companies. Therefore, it is necessary that section 5473-1 be enacted for this purpose.

In drafting section 5473-1, the author of the bill evidently took paragraph 14 of section 5450, to which I have referred, and perhaps intended to copy it verbatim and give it the section number 5473-1. Through what appears to be a clerical error the word "in" is inserted in the second line of the section. The insertion of this word makes nonsense out of the section. I am clearly of the opinion that it will be regarded by the courts, should any question arise, as a mere clerical error of a harmless character. It might be captiously argued, however, that by its insertion the legislature has required what shall be contained in the entire gross receipts of telegraph and telephone companies, but has failed to require that the entire gross receipts should be reported. I think I should advise you of the possibility of the making of such a contention, but I am bound to say that I do not think it could possibly be sustained in view of the other provisions of the law unaffected by the bill, to which I have referred.

The effect of the bill, in short, is to require two reports instead of one from telegraph and telephone companies, so that their property reports may be filed as of the same date as of which such companies are required to file reports with the federal government, without affecting the date as of which and on which reports are to be filed for excise tax purposes. This is the primary purpose of the bill and is properly worked out with the one exception of the clerical error in section 5473-1, to which I have referred.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 209—DESIGNED TO PROTECT LOANS UPON REAL ESTATE BY BUILDING AND LOAN COMPANIES AND OTHER MORTGAGES—PRIORITY OF LIENS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 5, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—You have submitted to me for inspection amended senate bill No. 209, and request my opinion as to the effect of this act.

This act is primarily designed to make it possible for building and loan companies and other mortgagees to safely loan their funds upon real estate which is to be improved either by the construction of new buildings or additions or betterments to old ones, by providing a method by which building and loan companies may obtain a priority of lien for the mortgages taken by said companies and yet to fully protect the rights of subcontractors, material men and laborers.

Most funds derived from building and loan mortgages are paid out upon estimates, and the law as it now stands only gives building and loan companies priority of lien from the date when the money is actually paid out, regardless of the date of the mortgage.

This act provides that building and loan companies may have priority of liens from the date of the filing of their mortgages, provided they comply fully with all the provisions of this act.

The most important change in the law is to the effect that no money shall be paid out by the mortgagee until the expiration of fifteen days from the time of the filing of the mortgage. This is done for the purpose of giving notice to all subcontractors, material men and laborers that a loan will be made to the owner of the premises with a priority of lien to the mortgagee. During this time it is made the duty of subcontractors, material men and laborers to make known to the owner and the mortgagee of the amount of their claims. When this is done, the mortgage fund becomes a trust fund for the payment of these claims and, in my opinion, fully protects the interests of subconstractors, material men and laborers.

The act provides for the order of priority of liens and is designed to eliminate much litigation that results from the present law.

In my opinion this act puts into better and fairer effect the constitutional amendment of 1912 than the one now existing, and ought to be approved.

Amended senate bill No. 209 is returned herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT CONTRACT—THE J. W. RUSK CONSTRUCTION COMPANY—WHERE CONTRACTOR MISCALCULATES AMOUNT OF STONE TO BE FOUND IN VICINITY OF IMPROVEMENT TO BE MADE AND BIDS AT TOO LOW A FIGURE, SUCH CONTRACTOR IS REQUIRED TO COMPLETE THE WORK ACCORDING TO PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS WITHOUT ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION.

Where a contract was let August 4, 1914, by the state highway commissioner to The J. W. Rusk Construction Company, for the improvement of section 2 of the Mansfield-Norwalk Road, I. C. H. No. 287, Richland county, the company is required under its contract to complete the work according to the plans and specifications without additional compensation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 5, 1915.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1915, in which you state that last year the county commissioners of Richland county made application for state aid in the construction of a certain highway and let a contract under the state aid section for improving a certain two mile stretch of road in Richland county. The engineer calculated that the county could save money by using for the sub-base stone that could be obtained in the fence corners and on the fields in the nearby vicinity. All the stone to be found in the vicinity of the improvement has been used and only one-sixth of the road is completed, the engineer having miscalculated the amount of stone that could be obtained in the neighborhood. You further state that the contract was sold according to specifications calling for stone as suggested and that now the state inspector refuses to allow any more of the stone on hand to be used for the base. Your letter indicates that there is, however, some sandstone in the neighborhood that could be obtained. It is estimated that the added cost of finishing the base by the use of hard limestone, instead of native stone obtained in the vicinity, is $2,600.00. You indicate that there is some kind of an agreement between the county commissioners and the state highway commissioner that this added cost is to be divided between the county and the state, and inquire as to what law governs in such a case. You indicate that your difficulty is as to the method of raising the county's proportion of the added expense and suggest a bond issue of $1,300.00 by the county under section 1223, G. C., or a transfer from the county building fund, the county road fund and the general county fund being practically exhausted.

I ascertain by inquiry at the office of the state highway commissioner and by an investigation of the records in that office, that the road to which you refer is section No. 2 of the Mansfield-Norwalk road, I. C. H., No. 287. The contract for the construction of this section of road was let on August 4, 1914, by the state highway commissioner to the J. W. Rusk Construction Co. upon its lump sum bid of $23,500.00. The contract was not let by the county commissioners and as the improvement was one involving the expenditure of state funds, could have been let only by the state highway commissioner. The engineering work on this improvement was handled by the employes of the state highway department. I learn from the division engineer in charge of your county that your information that all the native stone to be obtained in the vicinity has been exhausted and that only one-sixth of the road has been completed, is correct.

The contract and the plans and specifications which are referred to in the contract and made a part thereof contain no reference to stone obtainable in the vicinity of the improvement. The contract contains a stipulation that the contractor "will perform the work * * * in accordance with the plans and specifications furnished therefor and to which reference is here made, and the same are made a part hereof as if fully incorporated herein." The plans and profile show that the base of the proposed improvement is to be three inches in thickness at the sides and four inches in thickness at the center, if built of material other than broken stone, which material meets the requirements of the general specifications. If the base is constructed of broken stone, then it is to be four inches in thickness at the sides and six inches in thickness at the center. At no place in the plans and specifications is there any language indicating that the contractor was limited to the use of stone to be found in the vicinity of the improvement or any language indicating that the contractor was to be excused from performance or given any extra compensation in case the stone found in the vicinity of the improvement was insufficient in quantity to complete the base. I am informed by the representatives of the state highway department that under the general specifications referred to in the contract, properly broken sandstone can be used in the construction of the base, and I am further informed that the action of the inspector in refusing to permit the use of certain stone now on hand is based on the fact that such stone is made up of disintegrated material and other material unfit for road building.

Under section 1204, G. C., the state highway commissioner is authorized to let a contract for extra work resulting from unforeseen contingencies not included in the original contract, but the present case cannot be said to fall within the provisions of this section. The contractor agreed to build the road in question for a fixed compensation according to certain plans and specifications, which plans and specifications contain no reference to the place from which the material for the road is to be obtained. In my opinion it is the duty of the contractor to fully complete the road according to the plans and specifications, and there is no authority in the county commissioners or in the state highway commissioner to allow any extra compensation or to pay the contractor any sum of money in addition to its bid for doing the thing which it is bound to do under the terms of its contract. There being no authority under the facts and circumstances of this case for entering into any supplemental contract with the J. W. Rusk Construction Co., your inquiry as to the manner of obtaining funds to meet the county's share of the expense becomes immaterial.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION—BIDS FOR DEPOSITORY—BANK OR BANKS OFFERING HIGHEST RATE OF INTEREST SHOULD BE AWARDED CONTRACT.

The board of education of a school district in which but one bank is located, having determined by resolution to invite bids from the several banks in the county, including the bank located in said district, should let the contract for the deposit of its funds to the bank or banks offering the highest rate of interest for the full time the funds, or any part thereof, are on deposit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 5, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 25th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "May a board of education of a township in which there is one bank, after inviting bids from other banks in the county, under section 7607 of the General Code contract with the bank in said township as depository, when such bank in the township bids more than 2 per cent. for the funds, but which bid is lower than other bids received by the board from other banks in the county?"

Under the provision of section 7604, G. C., it is the duty of the board of education of any school district, by resolution to provide for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of its treasurer.

Section 7607, G. C., provides:

> "In all school districts containing less than two banks, after the adoption of a resolution providing for the deposit of its funds, the board of education may enter into a contract with one or more banks that are conveniently located and offer the highest rate of interest, which shall not be less than two per cent. for the full time the funds or any part thereof are on deposit. Such bank or banks shall give good and sufficient bond, or shall deposit bonds of the United States, the state of Ohio, or county, municipal, township or school bonds issued by the authority of the state of Ohio, at the option of the board of education, in a sum at least equal to the amount deposited. The treasurer of the school district must see that a greater sum than that contained in the bond is not deposited in such bank or banks, and he and his bondsmen shall be liable for any loss occasioned by deposits in excess of such bond."

It will be observed that this section does not, by its terms, require the board of education of a school district, containing less than two banks, to advertise for bids in letting the contract for the deposit of its school funds. Said section authorizes said board of education to enter into a contract with any bank or banks, conveniently located, which offer the highest rate of interest, not less than two per cent., for the full time the funds or any part thereof are on deposit, and which qualify in the manner provided in said section.

The procedure of the board of education of a school district under section 7607, G. C., differs from that required by section 7605, G. C., which provides that:

> "In school districts, containing two or more banks, such deposit shall be made in the bank or banks, situated therein, that, at competitive bidding, offer the highest rate of interest which must be at least two per cent. for the full time funds or any part thereof are on deposit,'' and which qualify as therein provided.

Under this section the board of education has no discretion except to determine the sufficiency of the security offered by the successful bidder.

It does not follow, however, that a board of education proceeding under section 7607, G. C., may not in its discretion advertise for bids in letting the contract for the deposit of its funds.

In referring to the board of education of a township in which there is but one bank, I assume that you refer to a township rural school district in which but one bank is located.

The board of education of such a district, having proceeded in the manner provided in section 7607, G. C., you inquire whether said board, after inviting bids from other banks in the county in which said rural school district is located, may let the contract to the bank located in said district, if the rate of interest offered by said bank is more than two per cent. for the full time the funds or any part thereof will be on deposit, but is less than the rate of interest specified in other bids received by said board from other banks in said county.

Section 7608, G. C., provides:

> ''The resolution and contract in the next four preceding sections provided for, shall set forth fully all details necessary to carry into effect the authority therein given. All proceedings connected with the adoption of such resolution and the making of such contract must be conducted in such a manner as to insure full publicity and shall be open at all times to public inspection.''

I call your attention to an opinion rendered by former Attorney General U. G. Denman to Hon. Harry C. Pugh, prosecuting attorney of Muskingum county, under date of June 9, 1910, as found at page 788 in the annual report of the attorney general for that year. Referring to the provisions of sections 7607 and 7608 of the General Code, Mr. Denman said:

> ''I am of the opinion, under the above quoted provisions of sections 7607 and 7608 of the General Code that boards of education should, at the time of the adoption of the resolution providing for the deposit of the funds of their school district, determine what banks are 'conveniently located' for the deposit of such funds and should designate in such resolution the territory within which they deem banks to be conveniently located for the purpose of such deposit. I do not wish to be understood, however, in this particular to hold that boards of education may arbitrarily decide as to such convenience of location; their discretion in this particular must, of course, be reasonably exercised.
> ''I am further of the opinion that upon such determination and the passage of such resolution, the board of education should obtain bids from all banks located in the territory so designated by them. This may be done by advertisement and by sending notices to all such banks. It would seem clear from the above quoted provisions of the General Code, and I am of the opinion, that the legislature intended such deposit of funds to be made only after the fullest of competition between the banks 'conveniently located' as to the school district, the funds of which are to be deposited, and, therefore, a board of education could not designate in such resolution particular banks in a certain territory to be 'conveniently located' to the exclusion of other banks in the same territory. In other words, all of the proceedings in regard to the deposit of school funds by board of education must be carried out with the utmost fairness and publicity with the view to obtaining the highest rate of interest payable on such funds.''

I concur in the above opinion, and in answer to your question, I am of the opinion that the board of education of the school district referred to in your inquiry, having determined by resolution to invite bids from the several banks in the county, including the bank located in said district, should let the contract for the deposit of its funds to the bank or banks offering the highest rate of interest for the full time the funds or any part thereof are on deposit.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXATION OF INTANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY BELONGING TO ESTATE OF DECEASED RESIDENT OF ONE COUNTY WHEN THE TWO EXECUTORS ARE RESIDENTS OF DIFFERENT COUNTIES AND NEITHER EXECUTOR EXERCISES CONTROL OVER ESTATE TO EXCLUSION OF THE OTHER—HALF OF PROPERTY TO BE TAXED IN EACH OF COUNTIES WHERE EXECUTORS RESIDE.

Intangible personal property, belonging to the estate of deceased resident of "county A," in the possession of two executors, one a resident of that county and the other a resident of "county B," the evidences of the title to which are kept in "county C," are, when neither of the two executors exercises any peculiar management or control over the estate to the exclusion of or in preference to the other, subject to be listed for taxation, one-half of the total value thereof in county A and one-half of such total value in county B.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1915.

The Honorable Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of May 27, 1915, you submit for my opinion the following facts:

> ''The will of William Hayner, deceased, a resident of Troy, Ohio, named A. F. Broomhall, of Troy, and Walter Kidder, of Dayton, executors. The executors are not under bond; the securities are kept in Cincinnati and not in the possession and under the actual control of either executor to the exclusion of the other, but are controlled jointly, neither executor having any special authority over the other. As a matter of convenience the clerical work is done at the office of the Hayner Distilling Company, Dayton.
> ''In 1913 the joint executors returned all the property of the decedent in Miami county. In 1914 one-half was returned in Miami county and one-half in Montgomery county.''

My advice is requested as to the situs of the property of the estate for taxation.

Because you refer to the property as the ''securities,'' I assume that the assets of the estate concerning which you inquire are intangible and consist of moneys, credits and investments in bonds or stocks. This opinion will accordingly be limited to the facts as so interpreted.

The statutory provisions respecting the place of listing property and the duty to list have been the same for many years. They are at present found in sections 5370, 5371 and 5375 of the General Code, which are as follows:

> "Sec. 5370. Each person of full age and sound mind shall list the personal property of which he is the owner, and all moneys in his possession, all moneys invested, loaned, or otherwise controlled by him, as agent or attorney, or on account of any other person or persons, company or corporation, and all moneys deposited subject to his order, check, or draft; all credits due or owing from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, whether in or out of such county; and all money loaned or pledged on mortgage of real estate, although a deed or other instrument may have been given for it, if between the parties, it is considered as security merely. The property of * * * an estate of a deceased person, by his executor or administrator. * * *
> "Sec. 5371. A person required to list property, on behalf of others, shall list it in the township, city, or village in which he would be required to list it if such property were his own. He shall list it separately from his own, specifying in each case the name of the person, estate, company, or corporation, to whom it belongs. Merchants' and manufacturers' stock, and personal property upon farms shall be listed in the township, city or village in which it is situated. All other personal property, moneys, credits and investments, except as otherwise specially provided, shall be listed in the township, city or village in which the person to be charged with taxes thereon resides at the time of the listing thereof, if such person resides within the county where the property is listed, and if not, then in the township, city or village where the property is when listed.
> "Sec. 5375. A person required to list property, upon receiving a blank for that purpose from the assessor, or, within five days thereafter, shall make out and deliver, annually, to the assessor, a statement, verified by his oath, of all personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, annuities, or otherwise, in his possession, or under his control, on the day preceding the second Monday of April of that year, which he is required to list for taxation, either as owner or holder thereof, or as parent, husband, guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, accounting officer, partner, agent, factor, or otherwise."

It was under these statutes, or their predecessors phrased in substantially the same language, that the supreme court decided the cases of:

> State ex rel. v. Mathews, 10 O. S., 431.
> Todd v. Hughes, 3 Ohio Law Journal, 206.
> Brown v. Noble, 42 O. S., 406.
> Sommers v. Boyd, 48 O. S., 648.

In the first of these cases it was held that moneys, credits, bonds and stocks of an estate, in the possession of three executors residing in the same township, but in different taxing districts and having joint control thereof, should be divided for purposes of taxation between the two taxing districts in which the executors resided, one-third of the value of the estate being assignable, so to speak, to each executor and given a situs at his domicile. This rule was constructed by the court to supply an admitted deficiency in the statute.

In the second case cited it was held that the assets of an estate, in the possession of four executors, three of whom resided in the county of the testator's domicile, two in one taxing district and one in another, and the fourth in another county, should be listed, one-fourth in the taxing district of the residence of the one executor who resided in the county of the testator's domicile and the remaining three-fourths in the taxing district in which the two executors resided, that being the taxing district of the testator's domicile, so that no part of the estate was held to be taxable in the county in which the fourth executor resided. The exact facts in this case are not available, it never having been fully reported. It does not appear, for example, whether the estate consisted of tangible or intangible property, and whether the two executors residing at the domicile of the testator had any peculiar possession or control thereof. The case, therefore, is not of much value in the solution of the question which you submit.

In the third case above cited it was held that an estate, in the possession of two administrators residing in different counties, should be listed as an entirety by the administrator having the actual possession and control thereof, and in the county wherein he resided. In this case it appeared that the second administrator, by agreement, permitted the first administrator to hold the actual possession of and exercise actual control over the assets of the estate.

In the fourth case above cited it was held that the estate of a deceased ward should be listed by his administrator and not by his guardian, and that notwithstanding the fact that the administrator lived in a county other than that in which the ward and his guardian had been domiciled, and the fact that the evidences of the credits due the estate were physically present in the latter county, the administrator should list the estate in the county of his own residence.

The following rules can be gleaned from the foregoing decisions:

(1) The place where the evidences of title and indebtedness representing intangible property belonging to the estate of a deceased person may be actually kept is, of itself, without weight in determining the situs of such property for taxation.

(2) The territorial jurisdiction of a court appointing an executor or administrator is not of importance in determining the situs. This rule is not varied in the decision of Tafel v. Lewis, 75 O. S. 182, wherein it was held that bonds belonging to the estate of a deceased person, a resident of a foreign country held by an executor appointed by the probate court of Hamilton county and actually in his possession, were taxable in that county even though the beneficiaries of the estate were also residents of a foreign country. While the physical location of the bonds and the jurisdiction of the court were both alluded to, it appears from careful examination that the court's decision was founded upon the possession and control of the executor, the jurisdiction of the court being referred to merely to show that his possession and control were lawful.

(3) Where an estate is being administered or executed by more than one person, and it consists of intangible property, each of the administrators or executors will be deemed, in the first instance, to have jointly with the others possession and control of the whole estate, and in law to have an individual legal or representative interest, so to speak, in the whole thereof, the value of which is an aliquot part of the whole, and where this is the case the duty of listing the whole estate cannot be put upon one executor or administrator to the exclusion of the others, so that each must list an aliquot part.

(4) But where one of several executors or administrators has, by agreement among them, the actual possession and control of the assets of the estate—that is, manages the estate in the active sense—the duty of listing the whole estate is thereby cast upon him to the exclusion of the others; in such event the legal fiction, which the law constructs to satisfy the equities of a case where there is no managing executor or administrator, but all of several executors or administrators exercise equal control or dominion over the property, is discarded and the situs of the property is the domicile of such managing executor or administrator.

The rule, in short, is worked out by giving due weight to each of the provisions of the statutes which I have quoted, and particularly to that provision of section 5371 of the General Code defining taxable situs, which is to the effect that "A person required to list property, on behalf of others, shall list it" where he would be required to list it if it were his own. The theory is that where there are several executors or administrators, but one of them is the actual manager, he is the "person required to list the property" because of the provisions of sections 5370 and 5375 which make possession and control the criterion as to whether or not a person shall list in a representative capacity.

You state in your letter that one executor resides in the county of the testator's domicile and another in another county, that the securities belonging to the estate are kept in a third county as a matter of mere custody; that there is no managing executor, even the clerical work not being done by one to the exclusion of the other.

The rules above laid down, applied to the facts which you state, necessitate the conclusion that one-half of the property should be returned in Miami county and one-half in Montgomery county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD CONSTRUCTION BY HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—FAYETTE, ALLEN, TUSCARAWAS AND JEFFERSON COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination final resolutions for the following roads:

Springfield-Washington C. H., Fayette County, Petition No. 972, I. C. H., No. 197;

Lima-Ottawa (Hospital), Allen County, I. C. H., No. 129;

West Lafayette-New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas County, Petition No. 1642, I. C. H., No. 408;

Ohio River, Jefferson County, Petition No. 1231, I. C. H., No. 7.

In reference to the resolutions for the Springfield-Washington C. H. and Lima-Ottawa (Hospital) roads, it appears on the face of the resolutions that the contemplated improvements are less than one mile in length, but it does not appear affirmatively on the face of the resolutions that the contemplated improvements are extensions of or connected with a permanently improved road, street or highway of approved construction. If it be a fact that these improvements are extensions of or connected with a permanently improved road, street or highway of approved construction and this fact be made to appear by your certificate endorsed on the resolutions, then the resolutions will be regular in form and entitled to approval.

In reference to the resolution for the West Lafayette-New Philadelphia road, it appears on the face of the resolution that the same was adopted by the county commissioners on the 29th day of December, 1913, whereas the certificate of the clerk of the board of commissioners recites that the resolution was adopted on the 22nd day of March, 1915. Either the copy of the resolution or the certificate of the clerk should be corrected to correspond with the fact, and when this correction is made the resolution will be entitled to approval.

The same situation exists in reference to the resolution pertaining to the Ohio river road. The resolution on its face appears to have been adopted on the 26th day of December, 1913, whereas the certificate of the clerk of the board of commissioners recites that the resolution was adopted on the 27th day of April, 1915. A correction making either the copy of the resolution or the certificate correspond with the fact, will remove this discrepancy. It also appears that the improvement contemplated under this resolution is less than one mile in length, but it does not appear affirmatively that the contemplated improvement is an extension of or connected with a permanently improved road, street or highway of approved construction. If such be the fact, it would be proper for you to so certify on the resolution, and after the correction above suggested has been made and your certificate placed on or attached to the resolution, the same will be in regular form and entitled to approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF CERTAIN FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS—WOOD COUNTY, RICHLAND COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of May 28th and June 5, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

> Toledo-Perrysburg, Wood County, Petition No. 1418, I. C. H. No. 53;
> Mansfield-Galion, Richland County, Petition No. 1138, I. C. H., No. 202.

In reference to the final resolution for the Toledo-Perrysburg road, permit me to call your attention to the fact that the chief clerk of the highway department has certified on this resolution under date of May 28, 1915, to the effect that $24,833.48 of state funds was available for the improvement. House bill No. 709, appropriating unexpended balances for the use of the highway department, which unexpended balances had lapsed on March 12, 1915, was not filed in the office of the secretary of state until June 5, 1915. It is therefore apparent on the face of the resolution that the chief clerk's certificate is incorrect, or at least was incorrect on the day it was made, May 28, 1915.

As to the final resolution for the Mansfield-Galion road, the copy of the resolution recites that the same was adopted on March 19, 1915, whereas the certificate of the clerk of the board of commissioners of Richland county shows that the resolution was adopted on April 2, 1915. This resolution should be returned to the clerk of the board of commissioners of Richland county for correction, and when corrected so that the date of the passage of the resolution as set forth in the copy of the resolution and in the clerk's certificate is identical, the resolution will be in regular form.

For the reasons above stated, I am returning the two resolutions in question without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS—CHAMPAIGN, HURON, WILLIAMS, FULTON COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of June 2nd and June 4, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination final resolutions for the following roads:

Troy-Urbana-Southern, Champaign County, Petition No. 633, I. C. H., No. 471;
Plymouth-Norwalk, Huron County, Petition No. 1087, I. C. H., No. 292;
Bryan-Pioneer, Williams County, I. C. H., No. 306;
Archbold-Fayette, Fulton County, Petition No. 1228, I. C. H., No. 301.

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF VILLAGE OR RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICTS OR UNION OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS—CONTRACTS OF EMPLOYMENT PRIOR AND SUBSEQUENT TO MAY 27, 1915—EFFECT OF SENATE BILL NO. 323 AMENDING SECTION 4740, G. C.—BOARDS OF EDUCATION MAY ANTICIPATE THE PROBABLE GOING INTO EFFECT OF AMENDATORY ACTS—AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 282 MAKES IT MANDATORY UPON COUNTY BOARDS OF EDUCATION TO REDISTRICT SUPERVISION DISTRICTS INTO DISTRICTS CONTAINING NOT FEWER THAN THIRTY TEACHERS—COUNTY BOARDS OF EDUCATION MAY REDISTRICT UPON PETITION OF THREE-FOURTHS OF PRESIDENTS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE DISTRICTS CONSTITUTING COUNTY DISTRICT.

Contracts entered into prior to May 27, 1915, under section 4740, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 141, in village or rural school districts, or unions of school districts, for supervision purposes for the employment of part time superintendents for periods of time extending beyond the taking effect of senate bill 323 passed by the 81st general assembly, amending said section 4740, are not subject to impairment by anything contained in said last amendment. In districts which are discontinued as supervision districts by such last amendment, that is to say, in districts not maintaining a first grade high school, such superintendents so employed are entitled to perform similar services, at the same compensation, during the life of their contracts, or to damages for breach of the contract, although the position of part time superintendent is abolished by the amendment referred to.

Such contracts in such districts entered into on or after May 27, 1915, however, must be regarded as having been made in contemplation of the possible going into effect of amended senate bill No. 282, passed on that day and amending section 4740 in this respect similarly to the amendment of that section effected by senate bill No. 323. Therefore, superintendents so employed after said date cannot complain of the effect of the statute upon the powers and duties of the board of education with which they contract, and the abolition of their positions by the taking effect of the act would not constitute an impairment of such contract.

Amended section 4740, G. C., as incorporated in senate bill No. 323, puts an end to state aid for the salaries of part time superintendents in separate supervision districts. This amendment of the law applies to the salaries of superintendents employed prior to May 27, 1915, state aid not being one of the obligations of such contracts, and the district having no contractual relation to the state with respect to state aid.

Technically, boards of education may not act under section 4740 as amended in 1915 until the amendatory acts become effective. It would be proper, however, for boards of education to anticipate the probable going into effect of such amendatory acts and to make their arrangements conditionally in view thereof.

Amended senate bill No. 282, passed May 27, 1915, makes it mandatory upon the county board of education to redistrict the county district into supervision districts containing not fewer than thirty teachers. Superintendents employed prior to that date by districts having fewer than thirty teachers (and more than twenty) are, notwithstanding the change in the law, entitled to similar work at the same salary for the balance of the terms of their respective contracts, if the same extend beyond the date when the amendment becomes effective, or to damages as for the breach of such contracts. Superintendents employed after such date, however, may not complain of the change in the law, as they must be deemed to have contracted with knowledge of the probability of the amendment going into effect.

Under section 4738, G. C., as amended in 1914, a county board of education may redistrict the county district into supervision districts at any time upon petition of three-fourths of the presidents of the boards of education of the districts constituting the county district. All contracts with district superintendents made under this section must be deemed to have been made subject to the exercise of this power; so that if a county board of education acts prior to the taking effect of the amendments of 1915, upon the petition of three-fourths of the presidents of the several boards of education, and so redistricts the county district as to make compliance with the new law possible, superintendents employed prior to May 27, 1915, cannot complain of such action.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 1, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Please give the department of public instruction your opinion on the following questions:
> "Sec. 4740 of the General Code, which prescribes the manner of election of part time district superintendents and also the conditions under which such part time district superintendents may be employed has been amended. The amendment will take effect August 26, 1915. Previous to August 26, 1915, practically all of these district superintendents will have been employed. The maximum term of their re-employment is three years. Under the present law the state pays a certain part of the salaries of the part time district superintendents. Under the amended section 4740, the state will pay no part of the salaries of these superintendents.
> "1. Will the contracts made under section 4740 of the present General Code be valid contracts after the amended section 4740 takes effect? If so, will the state be obligated to pay its part of the contract?
> "2. Will the boards of education have the right to act under the amended section 4740 before August 26, 1915? (This is the date on which the amended section 4740 goes into effect.)
> "3. Will a contract of a district superintendent made before August 26, 1915, be valid after August 26, if such superintendent supervise less than thirty teachers?"

Under the provision of section 4732, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 134, each county board of education was required to meet on the third Saturday of July, 1914, and organize in the manner therein provided.

The provision of section 4738, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, required said board of education, within 30 days after organizing, to divide the county school district into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts, and that the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district should be not less than 20 nor more than 60.

Section 4739, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, provides:

> "Each supervision district shall be under the direction of a district superintendent. Such district superintendent shall be elected by the presidents of the village and rural boards of education within such district, except that where such supervision district contains three or less rural or village school districts the boards of education of such school districts in joint session shall elect such superintendent. The district superintendent shall be employed upon the nomination of the county superintendent, but the board electing such district superintendent may by a majority vote elect a district superintendent not so nominated."

Section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, provides:

"Any village or rural district or union of school districts for supervision purposes which already employs a superintendent and which officially certifies by the clerk or clerks of the board of education on or before July 20, 1914, that it will employ a superintendent who gives at least one-half of his time in supervision, shall upon application to the county board of education be continued as a separate supervision district so long as the superintendent receives a salary of at least one thousand dollars and continues to give one-half of his time to supervision work. Such districts shall receive such portion of state aid for the payment of the salary of the district superintendent as is based on the ratio of the number of teachers employed to forty, multiplied by the fraction which represents that fraction of the regular school day which the superintendent gives to supervision. The county superintendent shall make no nomination of a district superintendent in such district until a vacancy in such superintendency occurs. After the first vacancy occurs in the superintendency of such a district all appointments shall be made on the nomination of the county superintendent in the manner provided in section 4739. A vacancy shall occur only when such superintendent resigns, dies or fails of re-election.

"Any school district or districts, having less than twenty teachers, isolated from the remainder of the county school district by supervision districts provided for in this section shall be joined for supervision purposes to one or more of such supervision districts, but the superintendent or superintendents already employed in such supervision district or districts shall be in charge of the enlarged supervision district or districts until a vacancy occurs."

Amended senate bill No. 282, passed by the general assembly, and approved by the governor on May 27, 1915, will become effective August 26, 1915, unless a petition for a referendum be filed prior to said date. This bill amends sections 4738 and 4740 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., so that said sections will read as follows:

"Sec. 4738. The county board of education shall divide the county school district, any year, to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty. The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts. The county board of education may at their discretion, require the county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village or rural schools of the county. This shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools.

"Section 4740. Any village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes which maintains a first grade high school, and which employs a principal, shall, upon application to the county board of education before June 1st of any year, be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent. Such district shall continue to be under the direct supervision of the county superintendent until the board of education of such district by resolution shall petition to become a part of a supervision district of the county school district. Such principals shall perform all the duties prescribed by law for a district superintendent, but shall teach such part of each day as the board of education of the district or districts may direct. Such district shall receive no state aid for the payment of the salaries of their principals, and the salaries shall be paid by the boards employing such principals.''

I note, however, that section 4740, G. C., has been further amended by senate bill No. 323, approved June 2, 1915, and which will be effective on or about September 2, 1915, so as to read as follows:

''Sec. 4740. Any village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes which maintains a first grade high school and which employs a superintendent shall upon application to the county board of education before September 10, 1915, or before June 1st, of any year thereafter, be continued as a separate district under the direct supervision of the county superintendent. Such district shall continue to be under the direct supervision of the county superintendent until the board of education of such district by resolution shall petition to become a part of a supervision district of the county school district. Such superintendents shall perform all the duties prescribed by law for a district superintendent, but shall teach such part of each day as the board of education of the district or districts may direct. Such districts shall receive no state aid for the payment of the salaries of their superintendents, and the salaries shall be paid by the boards employing such superintendents.''

In order to answer your question fully it will be necessary, I think, to define what the exact purport of this legislation is.

As the law existed prior to the amendments of 1914, any village, township or special district might employ a superintendent (section 7705), and by the same section any two or more such districts might unite in employing a superintendent.

Under the provisions of sections 7669 and 7670 of the General Code, as they then existed, a township and a village maintaining a high school of any grade or two adjoining township school districts maintaining such a high school might unite such districts for high school purposes.

The amendments of 1914 preserved the latter right, merely amending sections 7669 and 7670 so as to use the term ''rural school district'' instead of ''township school district,'' but repealed the provision authorizing township, special and village school districts, as such (or as rural school districts), to employ superintendents, and at the same time took away the power which had formerly existed to unite with other similar districts in the employment of a superintendent.

However, in putting into effect the scheme of district supervision the general assembly deemed it proper to recognize village and rural school districts, and unions of such districts, which at the time of the passage of the act were then employing superintendents and which certified on or before July 20, 1914, that they would employ a superintendent, who gave at least one-half of his time to supervision. This was the purpose of section 4740 as it appears in 104 O. L. 141. In terms and in effect the section "continues" as separate supervision districts only such village or rural districts, or unions thereof, as were at the time of the passage of this act employing superintendents, and upon the conditions that such superintendents should receive a certain minimum salary and give one-half of his time to supervision work. It will be observed that section 4740 as it appears in 104 O. L., 141, applies to districts and unions of districts employing a superintendent, regardless of whether or not any high school is maintained in such district or union of districts.

Section 4740, as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, and by senate bill No. 323, in terms "continues" as a separate district for supervision purposes a village or rural school district or union of school districts for high school purposes. Now, a village or rural school district or a union of school districts for high school purposes which maintains a high school (or, to be more exact, a first grade high school) did not constitute a separate supervision district under the amendments of 1914. So that on the face of section 4740 as amended by the two bills there is a contradiction in terms.

Looking further, however, into senate bill No. 323, I discover that the districts therein described may be "continued" as separate supervision districts upon application to the county board of education "before September 10, 1915, or before June 1st, of any year thereafter," and that "such district shall continue to be under the direct supervision of the county superintendent until the board of education of such district by resolution shall petition to become a part of a supervision district. * * *" The last of these two quoted provisions makes it clear that an annual application is not necessary to continuance when once the status of a separate supervision district is achieved. Therefore, what seems to be the controlling intention of the section as amended by senate bill No. 323 is that the districts therein referred to may be not only "continued" as separate supervision districts, but also established as such upon application prior to the specified dates.

It is true that this is a departure from the policy of section 4740 as it was amended in 1914. In a way it enlarges the class of districts referred to by that section, in so far as districts and unions of districts that maintained first grade high schools and did not employ superintendents are permitted to become separate supervision districts. In another way it restricts the class because whereas under original section 4740 as amended in 1914 any village or rural school district, or union of school districts, which employed a superintendent was to be continued as a separate supervision district, under the same section as amended in senate bills No. 282 and No. 323 only such village or rural school districts, or unions of school districts, for supervision purposes which maintain a first grade high school may be continued as a separate supervision district.

The effect, then, of the first change which was made by the present session of the general assembly in section 4740 of the General Code was to eliminate as separate supervision districts all village or rural districts, or unions of such districts, for supervision purposes which employed superintendents, but which did not maintain first grade high schools. Such districts have no rights whatever under section 4740 as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, and the purport at least of the section is to require a consolidation of such separate supervision districts (if any) with some other territory in the county district for district supervision purposes, unless such district can satisfy the requirements of a supervision district as otherwise provided by law.

Another change which was made by amended senate bill No. 282 was the elimination of the employment of a superintendent as a condition of continuance as a separate supervision district and the substitution therefor of the employment of a principal. That is, the intention of section 4740, as amended in amended senate bill No. 282, appears to be that any separate supervision district existing under favor of section 4740 as amended in 104 O. L., 141, may continue to exist without the necessity of employing a superintendent, as such, provided that the high school principal shall, together with the county superintendent, act as the district superintendent. The purport of this change at any rate is to do away with superintendents in such districts and to cast their duties, at least in part, upon the high school principal employed therein (it being understood, of course, that the high school must be a first grade high school).

However, the enactment of senate bill No. 323 makes still another change in the terminology of the law. Section 4740 as amended by this bill still applies only to districts, or unions of districts, maintaining a first grade high school, but instead of making the continuance as a separate supervision district contingent upon the employment of a principal only, and casting the duties of supervision in part upon such principal, this act restores the condition that a superintendent shall be employed.

In view of this change, I am of the opinion that the general assembly in making it intended that the amendment of the section in amended senate bill No. 282 should never become effective.

At the same time section 4740 as last amended, viz.: By senate bill No. 323, does not prohibit the employment of a principal for the high school which is maintained; it merely requires as a condition of continuance as a separate supervision district the employment of a "superintendent."

This statement of the effect of the law is made because your first question must be answered, first, with reference to the different classes of districts formerly subject to section 4740 of the General Code as amended 104 O. L., 141, and second, with respect to the date on which the contracts about which you inquire are entered into.

As to a village or rural school district, or union of school districts, for high school purposes which maintains a first grade high school and employs a superintendent, it makes no difference when the contract for the employment of the superintendent is made, because such a contract would be valid under section 4740 in any of its forms (except that application for continuance as a supervision district must be made after senate bill No. 323 becomes effective and prior to September 10, 1915).

As to a village or rural school district, or union of school districts, for high school purposes heretofore employing a principal, but no superintendent, no contract can be lawfully entered into for the employment of a superintendent, at present. After section 4740 as amended by senate bill No. 323 goes into effect, such a contract may be made, because such a school district (if any such there be) is permitted by the terms of section 4740 as amended by senate bill No. 323 to be "continued" (that is, having regard to all the language of the section, to be established) as a separate supervision district upon the employment of a superintendent and upon application to the county board of education as therein provided.

As to a village or rural school district, or union of school districts, for supervision purposes which has heretofore employed a superintendent, but does not maintain a first grade high school, i. e., either maintains no high school at all or maintains a second or third grade high school, the purport of the law is to make it impossible for such a district to continue further as a separate supervision district. It is as to this class of districts that your first question arises.

Recapitulating, then, the exact question which I have considered in answering your first general question is as to the binding force of a contract for the employment of a superintendent entered into under original section 4740 as amended 104 O. L., 141, in a village or rural school district, or union of school districts, for supervision purposes, not maintaining a first grade high school.

While the legislature may by statute abolish such a position, the person legally employed for a period extending beyond the time when the statute abolishing the position went into effect would have to be given similar employment by the board of education, or, as pointed out hereafter, he would probably have a cause of action for damages against the school board, as the superintendent of public schools is an employe and not an officer.

Ward v. Board of Education, 21 O. C. C., 699.

Where a board of education at the time of the passage of the act amending section 4740 in 104 O. L., 141 was employing a superintendent, and such board of education, through its clerk, on or before July 30, 1914, certified that such board of education would employ a superintendent at not less than the minimum salary provided by law who would devote at least half of his time to supervision, and a contract was entered into between such board of education and such superintendent in conformity with said statute for a period extending beyond May 27, 1915, or where that same superintendent had, subsequent to the beginning of the school year 1914 and prior to May 27, 1915, been elected for a period extending beyond May 27, 1915, such contract is binding upon the board of education to provide similar employment for said superintendent or respond in damages.

While, as stated above, the legislature may abolish such position, the board of education under a contract extending beyond the time of the abolition of the position must provide employment of a like character, at the same compensation, or respond in damages. (Of course, with the consent of the superintendent and the board of education the employment would not have to be of the same character.) The measure of damages would be the difference between the contract price and any earning that such superintendent made, or should have made, between the breach of the contract and the expiration of the original term thereof or the bringing of the action. While such superintendent would not be obliged to take any kind of employment, he would be obliged to be reasonably diligent in securing like employment in the neighborhood. Teaching would doubtless be held to be like employment, as under the amendment of 1914 and his acceptance of employment or acquiescence in the employment thereunder, he ceased to be a superintendent only, if he had been such prior to that time, and became a teacher as well. After May 20, 1914, on which date the act found in 104 O. L., 133, went into effect, a superintendent could have been employed in such district, to fill a vacancy or otherwise, only for the term of one year, as he would then have been a district superintendent under section 4741, G. C.

On and after May 27, 1915, amended senate bill No. 282, and on and after June 2, 1915, senate bill No. 323 became, and will become, a part of any contract which has been entered into since the time when they were, respectively, filed in the office of the secretary of state. Though not in effect technically on account of the referendum period, nevertheless, it is my opinion that they are such laws as would be held to be a part of any contract made since their enactment, or at least it would be held that the contract was made in contemplation of the probable going into effect of such a law.

Stating it somewhat differently, contracts entered into since May 27, 1915, are subject to be defeated by the going into effect of the above mentioned senate bills.

You also inquire in your first question as to whether the state will be obligated to pay "its part of the contract." In this connection I observe that the amended law withdraws state aid for the payment of the salaries of district superintendents employed under section 4740. In other words, state aid is, according to the terms of the act, withdrawn from all classes of districts which may continue as separate supervision districts under section 4740 as amended. The withdrawal of state aid will be effective when amended section 4740 goes into effect.

I am of the opinion that the withdrawal of state aid in nowise affects contracts entered into with district superintendents under section 4740. The provision for the furnishing of state aid to districts is not in the nature of a contract as between the state and the district, but is merely a provision for the raising and distribution of public revenues for a certain purpose. On the other hand, it is not one of the "obligations" of the contract between the district and the superintendent. The right of the superintendent to receive the salary agreed upon at the time of his appointment is in nowise affected substantially by the withdrawal of state aid. In other words, the state might withdraw state aid at any time without affecting the legal rights of superintendents under contracts.

Therefore, in my opinion, the state will not be obligated to pay state aid as to any of the contracts referred to in your first question and covered by the preceding discussion.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that, technically, boards of education have no authority to act under the amendment of section 4740, General Code, effected by amended senate bill No. 282 or that effected by senate bill No. 323 prior to the date when said bills will, respectively, become effective. However, it is apparent from what I have stated that in those classes of districts in which these amendments will be material, every action of the board of education taken after the respective dates of the passage of these two bills must be taken in the light of the possibility or probability of their becoming effective.

In those districts, or unions of districts, which maintain first grade high schools, but have not heretofore employed superintendents, no action can be taken under the enlarged powers of such districts as provided by section 4740, as amended by senate bill No. 323, until that bill goes into effect. This is the case in a technical and exact view of the law. However, there is no objection to the board of education of such a school district, anticipating application to the county board of education, entering into negotiations with a suitable person to act as part time superintendent and teacher under the provisions of section 4740, and the making of complete arrangements, subject only to the making of the application and the establishment of the district as a separate supervision district after senate bill No. 323 goes into effect.

Your third question involves consideration of amended section 4738 of the General Code, as amended by amended senate bill No. 282. This section requires that the county board of education shall "divide the county school district any year to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, * * * the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty."

In my opinion, this statute is mandatory. Therefore, when the act amending section 4738 takes effect it will be the duty of the county board of education to divide the county school district into proper supervision districts in accordance with its terms. This duty, to be sure, will have to be performed after August 26, 1915, and before the opening of the school year; but in spite of the brief period of time within which the action must be taken I think the statute clearly requires it.

But though this is true as a general principle, the statute cannot be applied so as to impair the obligation of valid contracts. On principles already laid down a contract for the employment of a district superintendent for a specified district, entered into prior to May 27, 1915, may not be impaired by subsequent legislation, and a person so employed is entitled to carry out the terms of his contract, subject only to the law as it existed when the contract was entered into.

Now section 4738 of the General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 140, authorized the county board of education "upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county" to redistrict the county. This provision was in the law when every contract of employment of a district superintendent now existing was entered into. It was, therefore, an element of every such contract, and no district superintendent could complain if his district were changed or abolished and his duties thereby affected by a redistricting upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county.

But while this particular kind of a redistricting was in the contemplation of the parties to any contract entered into prior to May 27, 1915, they did not contemplate, of course, the mandatory redistricting required by section 4738 as amended by amended senate bill No. 282; therefore, in my opinion, a district for which a superintendent was employed prior to May 27, 1915, may be changed so as to affect the terms of his contract only upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, and as to such supervision districts section 4738 does not apply—that is to say, the requirement that the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty and the requirement that the board of education shall divide the county district into supervision districts, so defined, though mandatory, cannot be so applied as to oust a district superintendent employed prior to May 27, 1915, or materially to alter the terms of his contract, without incurring liability to him.

But as to district superintendents employed on or after May 27, 1915, upon principles already laid down the same rule does not apply. Such contracts of employment were made in contemplation of the possible or probable going into effect of amended senate bill No. 282 and the carrying out of its requirement that the county school district be redistricted for district supervision purposes into districts containing not less than thirty teachers.

The obligation of such a contract, therefore, would not be impaired by carrying section 4738 into effect, even though such action might result either in materially changing the duties of the district superintendent or in abolishing his district and position.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES IN WHICH THERE IS NEITHER A VILLAGE NOR A CITY CANNOT SUBMIT TO ELECTORS THE ADOPTION OF ROAD IMPROVEMENT AND THEREFORE CANNOT IMPROVE ROADS UNDER SECTION 6976, G. C.

The trustees of a township in which neither a village nor city is located, cannot submit to the qualified electors therein the question of adopting the general plan of road improvement provided by sections 6976, et seq., G. C., and cannot, therefore, improve the roads of such township under authority of said sections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of May 28th you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Can trustees in a township in which there is neither a village nor a city; improve the roads therein under sections 6976 et seq?"

I deem it proper to call your attention to amended senate bill No. 125, being an act "to provide a system of highway laws for the state of Ohio, and repeal all sections of the General Code, and acts inconsistent herewith." This bill, as passed by the general assembly, was approved by the governor and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, and will become effective, therefore, September 4, 1915.

By provision of section 305 of said act, sections 6976 to 7108, inclusive, of the General Code, are repealed. However, section 302 of the act provides:

> "This act shall not affect pending actions or proceedings, civil or criminal, pertaining to the construction, improvement, maintenance, supervision or control of highways, bridges and culverts, brought by or against the county commissioners, county surveyor, township trustees or road superintendent under the provisions of any statute hereby repealed, but the same may be prosecuted or defended to final determination in like manner as if such statute had not been repealed."

Section 303 of the act provides in substance that said act shall not affect any rights acquired or obligations incurred under or by virtue of any law repealed by said act prior to the time when said act or any section thereof takes effect.

The answer of your question is therefore confined to proceedings by township trustees commenced prior to the date when the aforesaid act will become effective.

Sections 6976 et seq. of the General Code, as found in the chapter relating to township roads and under the subdivision of "roads partly in a municipality," provide a plan for improving the roads of a township including a road extending into or through a village or city, upon the adoption of such plan by the qualified electors of such township.

Section 6976, G. C., as originally enacted in 92 O. L., 63, provided as follows:

> "Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio that the trustees of any township in this state in which no free turnpikes have been constructed or in the course of construction, shall, when the petition of one hundred or more of the tax payers of such township, including any village therein, is presented to them praying for the improvement of the public roads and streets of such township and village submit the question of the improvement of said roads and streets to the qualified electors of such township and such village, at the next general election held after the presentation of such petition.''

This section was amended in 97 O. L., 550, by the act of the general assembly, entitled ''An act to authorize the improvement of public roads of townships including streets of cities or villages therein, and to repeal sections 1 to 25, inclusive, of an act passed April 16, 1900, Ohio Laws, Vol. 94, page 284.'' This section, as amended, and as now in force, provides:

''The trustees of a township, when the petition of one hundred or more of the taxpayers of such township is presented to them, praying for the improvement of the public roads within such township and including a road running into or through a village or city, shall submit the question of the improvement of said road to the qualified electors of the township at the next general election or at a special election, held after presentation of such petition.''

While this section does not, by its terms, confine the location of the village or city to the township in which the qualified electors may adopt the aforesaid plan of road improvement, it seems clear that this was the intention of the legislature in amending said section, and I am of the opinion that said statute must be so interpreted.

Upon examination of the various sections of the General Code applicable to the improvement and repair of township roads, it will be observed that several different plans for such improvement or repair are provided for and the plan outlined in sections 6976 et seq. of the General Code is distinguished from other plans provided in other sections in that the provisions of sections 6976 to 7108, inclusive, of the General Code are only applicable to a township in which a village or city is located.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that the trustees of a township in which neither a village nor city is located, cannot submit to the qualified electors therein the question of adopting the general plan of road improvement provided by sections 6976 et seq. of the General Code and cannot, therefore, improve the roads of such township under authority of said sections.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

National banks cannot act as trustees under a mortgage to secure bonds, or as registrar of stocks and bonds without complying with the laws of Ohio governing trust companies.

National banks and state banks are not authorized in Ohio to act as administrators or executors. They may act as registrars of stocks and bonds upon complying with the laws of Ohio governing trust companies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 22nd, requesting my opinion as follows:

"Section 11-k of the federal reserve act permits the federal reserve board

" 'To grant by special permit to national banks applying therefor, when not in contravention of state or local law, the right to act as trustee, executor, administrator, or registrar of stocks and bonds, under such rules and regulations as the said board may prescribe.' "

"Section 9796-3 of the General Code, provides:

" 'No state bank or national bank shall act as administrator, executor, trustee or registrar of stocks and bonds. Provided, however, that trust companies organized under the laws of Ohio shall have the same powers in the acceptance and execution of trusts which are now conferred upon them by law, and other state banks and national banks may have the same power in the acceptance and execution of trusts which are now conferred by law upon trust companies, upon such state banks and national banks, complying with all the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts.'

"We have had the following questions submitted to us a number of times:

" '1. Can a national bank act as trustee under a mortgage given to secure bonds, or as registrar of stocks and bonds, without complying with the laws of Ohio governing trust companies?

"'2. Can a national bank, or a state bank not having trust company powers, act as administrator, executor, or registrar of stocks and bonds, by complying with the laws of Ohio governing trust companies?'

"This matter appears perfectly clear to us, but for our further guidance we would appreciate your opinion in the premises."

By the express terms of section 9796-3 of the General Code, quoted in your letter, national banks cannot act as trustees or registrars of stocks and bonds, without first "complying with all the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts."

I, therefore, answer your first question in the negative.

For the purpose of answering your second question, in part at least, I call attention to the case of Schumacher v. McCallip et al., 69 O. S., 500, the first branch of the syllabus of this case being as follows:

"Trust companies are without capacity to receive and exercise appointments as administrators of the estates of deceased persons because the legislation evincing an intention to clothe them with such capacity (sections 3821-C—3821-F, Revised Statutes) is void, being of a general nature and not of uniform operation throughout the state as required by section 26 of article II of the constitution."

The court, at page 509 of the opinion, in commenting upon the statutes prescribing the order in which competent persons are entitled to receive appointment as administrators and executors of estates, uses the following language:

"First, husband or widow of the deceased; second, the next of kin of the deceased; third, a creditor of the deceased; and, fourth, an appointment from the other classes failing, 'such other person as it shall think fit; provided, however, that letters of administration shall not be issued upon the estate of an intestate until the person to be appointed has made and filed an affidavit that there is not, to his knowledge, any last will and testament of the alleged intestate.' Not only does the latter section confer no authority for the appointment of a trust company, but by prescribing an indispensable condition, with which a corporation cannot comply, it forbids the conclusion that such authority is conferred by either section. Apart from this consideration, the view suggested conflicts with the established and very familiar doctrine that corporations have only such authority as is vested in them by the law of their creation."

Under authority of the decision of the supreme court in the above case, trust companies cannot be appointed as administrators or executors in Ohio. Since the statutes confer upon national banks and state banks, upon complying with certain requirements, regulations and conditions, only such powers in the acceptance and execution of trusts as are now conferred by law upon trust companies, it follows that, if trust companies themselves cannot in Ohio act as administrators or executors, there is no authority for the appointment of national or state banks as executors or administrators under any condition.

Trust companies do, however, have authority in Ohio to act as registrars of stocks and bonds (section 9817 of the General Code); they may also under section 9828 of the General Code, be appointed as trustees under any will or instrument creating a trust for the care and management of property. Therefore, a national or state bank which has complied with "all the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies" in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts, is authorized to act in Ohio as a registrar of stocks and bonds, or to accept and execute other trusts to the same extent and with the same authority as trust companies.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MOTHERS' PENSION ACT—LAW APPLICABLE TO "COMMON LAW" WIFE.

Relief under the mothers' pension act may be extended to common-law wife if mother of children and otherwise coming under the terms of the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1915.

HON. GEORGE M. HOKE, Probate Judge, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of June 5th, in which you ask for an opinion, and which is as follows:

> "I hereby wish to ask you to give me an official opinion in answer to the following question:
> "A and B are the parents of children as the fruit of a common law marriage. A, the father, dies leaving children not entitled to an 'age and schooling certificate.' Is B, the mother of such children, entitled to an allowance for partial support of such children under section 1683-2 and -3 of the General Code, commonly known as the 'mothers' pension law?'
> "I have a case of this kind and I would greatly appreciate an early reply, as the mother is very much in need of the relief if the law is broad enough to reach her case."

Section 1683-2 of the General Code (103 O. L., page 877), is as follows:

> "For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled for work by reasons of physical or mental infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive an age and schooling certificate, and such mothers and children have been legal residents in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make an allowance to each of such women, as follows: Not to exceed fifteen dollars a month, when she has but one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, and if she has more than one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate it shall not exceed fifteen dollars a month for the first child and seven dollars a month for each of the other children not entitled to an age and schooling certificate. The order making such allowance shall not be effective for a longer period than six months, but upon the expiration of such period, said court may from time to time, extend such allowance for a period of six months, or less. Such homes shall be visited from time to time by a probation officer, agent of an associated charities organization, a humane society, or such other agents as the court may direct, provided that the person who actually makes such visits shall be thoroughly trained in charitable relief work, and the report or reports of such visiting agent shall be considered by the court in making such order."

Section 1683-3 of the General Code (103 O. L., 878), is as follows:

> "Such allowance may be made by the juvenile court, only upon the following conditions: First, the child or children for whose benefit the allowance is made, must be living with the mother of such child or children; second, the allowance shall be made only when in the absence of such allowance, the mother would be required to work regularly away from her home and children, and when by means of such allowance she will be able to remain at home with her children, except that she may be absent for work for such time as the court deems advisable; third, the mother must, in the judgment of the juvenile court, be a proper person, morally, physically and mentally, for the bringing up of her children; fourth, such allowance shall, in the judgment of the court, be necessary to save the child or children from neglect and to avoid the breaking up of the home of such woman; fifth, it must appear to be for the benefit of the child to remain with such mother; sixth, a careful preliminary examination of the home of such mother must first have been made by the probation officer, an associated charities organization, humane society, or such other competent person or agency as the court may direct, and a written report of such examination filed.''

The state of facts presented by you assumes that A and B were husband and wife under a common-law marriage. An examiation of the authorities leads to the conclusion that common-law marriages are recognized as valid in Ohio when the attendant facts and circumstances surrounding such marriages evidence the mutual intention of the parties to live together permanently as man and wife. In the case of Umbenhower v. Labus, 85 O. S., 238, it was held that,

''An agreement of marriage in praesenti when made by parties competent to contract, accompanied and followed by cohabitation as husband and wife, they being so treated and reputed in the community and circle in which they move, establishes a valid marriage at common law, and a child of such marriage is legitimate and may inherit from the father.''

The provisions of law quoted above providing for mothers' pensions are enacted as part of the juvenile court law, section 1683 of the General Code being as follows:

''This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child, in order that it may be educated and cared for, as far as practicable in such manner as best subserves its moral and physical welfare, and that, as far as practicable in proper cases, the parents, parent or guardian of such child may be compelled to perform their moral and legal duty in the interest of the child.''

The application or enforcement of the law imposes a wide discretion in the juvenile judge, he being clothed with judgment as to the law and the facts. The law referred to has for its primary purpose the care, maintenance, education, etc., of the child, and through its provisions affords the mother of the child or children, as the case may be, when under the various provisions of section 1683-3, the means whereby the purpose may be carried out.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that a common-law wife, the mother of children, and whose circumstances otherwise are as described in the section quoted above, is eligible for relief under the mothers' pension act as provided therein.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CONTRACTOR MAY FURNISH WORKMEN AT PER DIEM COMPENSATION TO A UNIVERSITY WHICH CONTROLS AND DIRECTS THE KIND OF WORK PERFORMED BY THE WORKMEN— WARRANT DRAWN ON AN APPROPRIATION FOR "PERSONAL SERVICE" LEGAL.

A warrant may be drawn on appropriation for "personal service" in favor of a contractor for per diem compensation of workmen furnished by him to university, said workmen to do work assigned by university and solely under its direction and control.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 8, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 25, 1915, you wrote me as follows:

"In the discharge of my official duties, there has arisen a question as to whether a warrant can be issued on a voucher drawn against an appropriation for 'personal service,' in payment for the services of third persons, there being no privity of contract between such third persons and the agents of the state.

"The following is a recital of the facts in a specific case in which such a situation is present:

"Ohio university, on May 11, 1915, presented at this office, for the issuance of my warrant, a voucher drawn on the university's appropriation for 'personal service A-2, wages,' in favor of Knowlton and Breinig (presumably members of a copartnership). The items for which payment is claimed are as follows:

"Services of W. H. Herron, 123 hours @ 50c per hour	$59 50
Services of H. P. Knowlton, 9½ hours @ 47c per hour	4 46
Services of Jess Orr, 32 hours @ 35c per hour	11 20
Services of James Mace, 72 hours @ 47c per hour	33 84
	$109 00

"The days on which the above services were performed are shown on the voucher. The voucher also show G. E. Knowlton to be the first-named member of the firm.

"The following is a copy of the correspondence which passed between this office and the university, in the premises:

"(COPY).

"'May 19, 1915.

"'MR. H. H. HANING, Treas., Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

"'DEAR SIR:—We have issued warrant No. 65941 for $109.00 on your voucher No. 170, in favor of Knowlton and Breinig. This voucher is to cover work done by contract, at Ellis hall and agricultural building, and is drawn on personal service A-2.

"'Nowhere does it appear that either Knowlton or Breinig performed any personal service, for which the charge is therein made, but all the labor for which this voucher goes to pay was performed by third parties, presumably employed by Knowlton and Breinig. While it is true that the amount of the voucher is for services rendered, it can in nowise be construed as constituting "personal" service, as we believe was contemplated when the word was adopted and used in the appropriation bill. Were the appropriation to cover "impersonal" service, I do not think the word "personal" would have been used, and I would therefore request that you designate what classification in maintenance this voucher is properly chargeable to. Your early advice will be appreciated.

" 'Very truly yours,
" 'A. V. DONAHEY,
" 'Auditor of State.'

" 'May 22, 1915.

"'HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

" 'DEAR SIR:—Your letter of some days ago regarding warrant No. 65941, for $109.00 to cover voucher No. 170 in favor of Knowlton and Breinig is at hand. In answer would say that this was not contract labor, but men hired by the day. The only way you can get competent labor, anything like skilled mechanics, is to get them of a contractor, as I did in this case, when they are not employed full time by the contractor.

" 'On referring to our short budget, I find that the money was appropriated to take care of the item mentioned under "personal service." If we were to make any change in this item, we will be short on maintenance and long on personal service. And while you may be technically right in your contention that this is "impersonal service" I am positive that the money was requested and appropriated to cover this specific item under "personal service." I think from 60 to 80 per cent. of our wages, as requested, would be identical with this bill, therefore I hope that you can see your way clear to let this stand as it is, as it is somewhat difficult to have funds transferred.

" 'Thanking you for past favors, I beg to remain
" 'Very truly yours,
" 'H. H. HANING.'

"Kindly advise me as to what, in your opinion, is the proper construction of the words 'personal service,' as used in house bill 314, eighty-first general assembly, in relation to the facts herein given."

The appropriation referred to is the one passed by the general assembly on March 12, 1915, and the appropriation is as follows:

"OHIO UNIVERSITY—
"Personal Service—
"A-2 Wages ---------- $1,393.00"

There is no doubt, from the fact that the voucher is drawn in favor of "Knowlton and Breinig;" that the items to be paid are for the services of four men at a certain price per hour; and that the money to be paid under a warrant drawn in pursuance of the voucher is to be paid to a firm or persons other than those who actually performed the labor. But this, to my mind, does not necessarily control as to whether or not the moneys so paid may be paid from the personal service appropriation. In the letter of Mr. Haning hereinbefore quoted he says that "this was not contract labor, but men hired by the day. The only way you can get competent labor, anything like skilled mechanics, is to get them of a contractor as I did in the case, when they are not employed full time by the contractor.''

It would appear, therefore, that the men who were obtained from the contractor were obtained to do such work as the university should put them to and they were not hired for any particular specific job of work. From what has been stated by Mr. Haning I assume that the men who were obtained in the manner specified were absolutely and solely under the control of the university authorities and in nowise under the control of Knowlton and Breining in the pursuance of the work which they did for the university.

There is, as I view it, a distinction between the employment of men in the manner above specified and the entering into a contract with a contractor for a particular job of work, the compensation therefor to be estimated by the number of hours of work necessary to complete the said job. Your question is as to whether a warrant can be issued on a voucher drawn against an appropriation for ''personal service,'' in payment for the services of third persons, there being no privity of contract between such third persons and the agents of the state. It should be observed, however, that there is privity between the state and the firm furnishing the services of the third parties.

My answer thereto is that if the men employed on the work of the university, though obtained from a contractor, are to perform no particular ''job'' of work, but simply to do such work as the university might direct, and who are under the control and direction of the university in the doing of the work, the services for such men could be paid from ''personal service.'' But if a contract is entered into by the university with a contractor for a particular piece of work, the work to be done under the supervision and direction of the contractor, the amount thereof cannot be paid from the appropriation for ''personal service'' even though the amount of the contract is to be estimated by the number of hours required to perform the work.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BONDS OF CARROLL COUNTY DISAPPROVED—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ADVISED NOT TO ACCEPT SAME—NO PROVISION FOR SINKING FUND.

Bonds of Carroll county, Ohio, for $7,000.00 held invalid and the industrial commission advised not to accept the same because there is no provision made in the legislation authorizing the issuance of said bonds for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on and to provide a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds at maturity.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE:—Bonds of Carroll county, Ohio, in the sum of $7,000.00, accepted by resolution of the industrial commission of Ohio, May 13, 1915, subject to the approval of the attorney general.

The transcript of the proceedings relative to the issuance of the bonds above mentioned was not submitted for my consideration until May 22, 1915.

I have carefully gone over the transcript as submitted and beg to report as follows:

The resolution adopted by the county commissioners of Carroll county authorizing the issuance of said bonds to the amount of seven thousand dollars for the purpose of constructing the superstructure of what is known as "Magnolia Bridge" over Big Sandy creek, located west of the village of Magnolia, Carroll county, Ohio, which is the only legislation, as shown by the said transcript, under authority of which said bonds are issued does not contain any provision for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity.

Section 11 of article XII of the Ohio constitution is as follows:

> "No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

A compliance with this provision of the constitution is essential to the validity of the bonds issued by the officers of any political subdivision of Ohio. (Link v. Karb, 89 O. S., 326.)

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the bond issue under consideration is invalid, and advise your commission not to accept the same.

In event the county commissioners by proper proceedings correct their former action by the adoption of a new resolution, and in the anticipation of a possible resubmission to me of the question of the validity of said bonds, I suggest that the following additional information be furnished in the transcript:

1. A certificate showing who are the duly elected and qualified commissioners of Carroll county, the character of the meeting at which the resolution was passed, and the number of members present.

2. A certificate showing the total bonded indebtedness of the county, the total amount of the tax duplicate, the total tax rate and the several items which constitutes this rate.

3. The form of bond and the coupon proposed to be issued.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CORPORATION ORGANIZED UNDER LAWS OF OHIO—MAY NOT CONVERT PREFERRED STOCK INTO COMMON STOCK BY AMENDMENT UNDER SECTION 8719, G. C.

A corporation organized under the laws of Ohio may not convert preferred stock into common stock by amendment under section 8719, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 7th, transmits to me a certificate of amendment of the articles of incorporation of the Minerva Hardware Manufacturing Company.

The amendment changes the fourth article of the articles of incorporation of the company so as to read as follows:

> "Fourth. The capital stock of said corporation shall be twenty thousand dollars ($20,000.00) divided into two hundred (200) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100) each."

The certificate shows that the amendment was adopted "by the votes of the owners of all of its capital stock."

The fourth article of the articles of incorporation of the company as shown by the records in your office is at present as follows:

> "Fourth. The capital stock of said corporation, common and preferred, shall be twenty thousand dollars ($20,000.00) consisting of one hundred and twenty (120) shares of common stock of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each, and eighty (80) shares of preferred stock of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each; the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to a dividend of six per cent. per annum, payable annually, out of the surplus profits of the company for each year in preference to all other stockholders, and such dividends shall be noncumulative.

"Such preferred stock shall not be entitled to representation on the board of directors of said company and shall have no voice in the management of said company; and such preferred stock shall not be entitled to vote at any stockholders' meetings unless and until default be made for two years in the payment of said annual dividends.

"Said preferred dividends of six per cent. as above provided, shall be the full measure of the such preferred stock to participate in the earnings of said company.

"Said preferred stock shall be a first lien upon the assets of said company after the payment of debts and liabilities, and said dividend of six per cent. shall be a preferred lien upon the net earnings of said company."

You request my opinion on the following question:

"May an Ohio corporation change issued or unissued preferred stock to common stock by amendment under the provisions of section 8719, G. C.?"

Section 8719, General Code, provides in full as follows:

"Sec. 8719. A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state, may amend its articles of incorporation as follows:

"1. So as to change its corporate name, but not to one already appropriated, or to one likely to mislead the public.

"2. So as to change the place where it is to be located, or its principal business transacted.

"3. So as to modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purposes for which it was formed.

"4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, nor the purpose of its original organization substantially changed."

Section 8720, General Code, provides that amendments may be adopted by a vote of the owners of three-fifths of the capital stock then subscribed, at a meeting whereof certain notice has been given; but this notice may be waived by the holders of all the capital stock consenting thereto in writing. (Section 8723, G. C.)

It is obvious that the proposed amendment does not modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purposes for which the company was formed. It is also obvious that nothing has been added to the articles in their present form. On the contrary, a great deal of language has been stricken out of them.

Whatever may be the policy of the law in authorizing the addition of something which is omitted from the articles, and which might lawfully have been provided for originally therein, without authorizing the striking out of anything which is in the articles and might lawfully have been omitted therefrom in the first instance, the statute, nevertheless, has this effect. Its terms are plain and there is no reason for interpretation.

I, therefore, conclude and advise that an Ohio corporation may not change authorized preferred stock to authorized common stock by amendment, under the provisions of section 8719, General Code. In the view which I take of the question, it makes no difference as to the result whether at the time of the amendment the preferred stock which is authorized has been issued or not, nor that the action of the stockholders is unanimous.

In an opinion to you under date of April 20, 1915, I advised that the result sought to be accomplished by an amendment of the character now presented by you may not be accomplished by an amendment adding to a capital stock clause, providing for the issuance both of common and preferred stock, a clause to the effect that the preferred stock therein provided for upon retirement shall be converted into common stock and may be issued as such. This holding was based upon a reason which, in addition to the reason hereinbefore stated, is applicable to the precise question now presented, viz.: That by converting authorized preferred stock into authorized common stock a corporation in effect increases its common stock. Originally the phrase "capital stock" contemplated common stock only, and this was the state of the law when what is now section 8719 of the General Code was last amended (83 O. L., 193).

In this view of the case an amendment of the kind now under consideration would have the effect of increasing the capital stock, and as such would be specifically prohibited by the last sentence of the fourth paragraph of section 8719, G. C. I refer you to the previous opinion above mentioned for a more complete discussion of this principle.

The original certificate of amendment, with revenue stamp attached thereto, is enclosed herewith, and you are advised that you are without authority to receive and file the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF CERTAIN FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT—SANDUSKY COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 7, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Fremont-Castalia Road, Sandusky County, Petition No. 1176, I. C. H., No. 281;

Sandusky-Clyde Road, Sandusky County, Petition No. 1171, I. C. H., No. 276.

Permit me to call your attention to the fact that the certified copies of both resolutions recite that the same were adopted by the county commissioners of Sandusky county on the 23rd day of December, 1913. The certificates of the clerk of the board of commissioners of Sandusky county recite that the resolutions were adopted on the 27th day of May, 1915. It is manifest that either the certified copies of the resolutions or the certificates of the clerk of the board of county commissioners are incorrect. The resolutions should be returned to the clerk of the board of county commissioners of Sandusky county for the purpose of having this error corrected.

I am, therefore, returning the same without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MIAMI AND ERIE CANAL—FORM OF AGREEMENT FOR WATER LEASES ON THAT PART OF THE CANAL LEASED TO CITY OF CINCINNATI.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 1, 1915, transmitting to me a copy of the form of contract which your department is now using in the leasing of water for industrial purposes from the canals of the state. You request me to indicate the conditions which should be inserted in the renewal of water leases on that part of the Miami and Erie canal leased to the city of Cincinnati under an act of the general assembly, passed May 15, 1911, and found in 102 O. L., 168, being sections 14188-1 to 14188-8 of the Appendix of the General Code of Ohio. The following would be a proper form of agreement for use in renewing the leases in question:

"AGREEMENT.

"This agreement made this ---------- day of ----------, 19--, by and between the state of Ohio, acting by and through the superintendent of public works, duly authorized by law in the premises, party of the first part, and ----------, party of the second part, Witnesseth:

"That the party of the first part, in consideration of the rents hereinafter stipulated, and upon the express condition that the party of the second part shall, during the whole term of this agreement, comply with the conditions and limitations hereinafter contained, agrees to permit said party of the second part to insert into the level of the Miami and Erie canal next above lock No. ----------, a ---------- for the purpose of drawing so much of the water introduced into said level, either for the lockage of boats or otherwise, and which is not subject to lease for manufacturing purposes, as will flow through said ---------- for the term of ---------- years from ----------, except as otherwise hereinafter provided.

the cost of said repair if done by the state or its agents, and said party of the second part shall also be liable for all damages that may accrue from said breach or other injury.

"Said party of the second part shall pay to the state of Ohio for the right to use said water the yearly rental of ----------dollars, in advance, on the first day of ---------- in each and every year. Said payments shall be made to the superintendent of public works at his office in Columbus, Ohio, or to such other agent of the state as is duly authorized to receive the same.

"Said party of the second part hereby assumes all risk of being deprived of the use of said water during the time occupied in repairing the canal, or when the water is necessarily drawn off for any other purpose. In case said party of the second part shall fail to pay said rent for more than one month after the same falls due, or shall in any respect fail to fulfill all the engagements of said party herein expressed, any authorized agent of the state shall have full right and power to enter upon and take possession of the premises, and shut off the water hereby permitted to be drawn, and resume all the rights and privileges hereby granted. It is further mutually understood and agreed that the state reserve the right to resume the use of the water hereby permitted to be drawn out, whenever the agents of the state may deem it necessary for the purposes of navigation, and from the time of such resumption the parties to this agreement shall be absolved from all further liabilities hereunder.

"The rights herein conferred upon the party of the second part are granted, subject to all the rights of the city of Cincinnati under a certain lease executed to said city on the 29th day of August, 1912, by the state of Ohio, acting by and through the governor thereof, said lease being executed under and by virtue of an act of the general assembly of Ohio, passed May 15, 1911 (102 O. L., 168), and being sections 14188-1 to 14188-8, inclusive, of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio; and subject to all the rights of the city of Cincinnati under the several acts of the general assembly of Ohio amendatory of or supplementary to said sections 14188-1 to 14188-8, inclusive, of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio. It is hereby expressly understood and agreed that if at any time during the continuance of this agreement said city of Cincinnati shall complete the outlet referred to in the first paragraph of section 2 of said act, said section being section 14188-2 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio, or shall complete a similar outlet at any other point under and by virtue of the authority of said several acts of the general assembly of Ohio amendatory of or supplementary to said sections 14188-1 to 14188-8, inclusive, of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio; or if at any time during the continuance of this agreement the city of Cincinnati in the construction of the outlet referred to in said original act (102 O. L., 168), or in the construction of any outlet under and by virtue of the authority of said amendatory and supplementary acts of the general assembly of Ohio, shall shut off the water in said canal; then this agreement shall at once terminate, and no notice to the party of the second part shall be required to terminate the same, and all rights of the party of the second part to receive water from said canal under this agreement shall thereupon cease. It is further expressly understood and agreed that this agreement shall not confer upon the party of the second part any right against said city of Cincinnati to have said city construct a conduit for the purpose of supplying water to said party of the second part, or any right in said party of the second part to receive water from any conduit constructed by said city.

"In testimony whereof the parties have executed this agreement on the day and year first above written.

"THE STATE OF OHIO.

---------- "By ----------

---------- "Superintendent of Public Works."

---------- ----------

As pointed out in my opinion to you under date of May 25, 1915, a form of lease containing the conditions set forth above will fully protect the rights of the city of Cincinnati, and at the same time enable the state to derive an income from the water in that part of the canal leased to the city until such time as the state is relieved of the expense of caring for the banks.

SHERIFF NOT ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT FOR FUEL IN ADDITION TO ALLOWANCE "FOR KEEPING AND FEEDING PRISONERS IN JAIL."

Sheriff is not entitled to reimbursement for cost of fuel used in preparation of food for prisoners in addition to allowance made "for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1915.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 5, 1915, you requested my opinion upon the following question:

"Are the county commissioners authorized to make an allowance to the sheriff for fuel used in cooking and preparing meals for the prisoners in the county jail?"

Section 2850 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The sheriff shall be allowed by the county commissioners not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail, but in any county in which there is no infirmary, the county commissioners, if they think it just and necessary, may allow any sum not to exceed seventy-five cents each day for keeping and feeding any idiot or lunatic. The sheriff shall furnish at the expense of the county, to all prisoners confined in jail, except those confined for debt only, fuel, soap, disinfectants, bed, clothing, washing and nursing when required, and other necessaries as the court in its rules shall designate."

In view of the fact that the sheriff is paid so much per day for keeping and feeding the prisoners in jail, it is his duty to cause to be prepared the meals he furnishes the prisoners. Fuel is necessary in order to prepare the meals; therefore, I am of the opinion that the fuel used in cooking and preparing meals for the prisoners in the county jail is to be paid for by the sheriff, and that the county commissioners are not authorized to make an allowance in addition to the amount paid him for keeping and feeding prisoners, to reimburse him for the fuel used in cooking the meals of such prisoners.

MUNICIPALITY HAVING CHARTER—SURPLUS REVENUES FROM MUNICIPALLY OWNED WATERWORKS MAY BE USED FOR GENERAL MUNICIPAL PURPOSES.

A municipality operating under a charter may lawfully provide in its charter that the surplus revenues arising from the operation of a municipally owned waterworks plant may be used for general municipal purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 2, 1915, you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "May the revenues arising from the operation of a municipal waterworks plant be legally used for general purposes if there is a surplus in said fund not needed for the operation and maintenance of the plant, or would a reduction of the rentals charged consumers be required by law?
> "The question arises in the city of Dayton, Ohio, which is a charter city, and it is claimed by the city commission that they have such power."

The answer to your question rests primarily upon an interpretation of the charter of the city of Dayton. The purpose of article XVIII of the constitution is to grant "home rule" to such municipalities as care to avail themselves of it. Outside of limiting the tax rate and power to incur debts, providing for due administration of justice through courts, protecting the public peace and health, requiring reports as to their financial condition and transactions, providing for the examination of vouchers, books and accounts, the legislature has no control over a municipality which has adopted a charter. Therefore, unless the question propounded by you involves a conflict between the charter and some provisions of the state constitution or the provisions of laws within the competency of the legislature to pass, respecting municipalities operating under a charter, I feel that it would be improper for me to attempt to interpret the charter.

Without looking into the charter of the city of Dayton, but simply assuming that it grants the powers claimed for it by the city commission, the only matter for investigation presented by your inquiry is, whether such a provision in the charter of the city of Dayton is in conflict with the constitution of the state of Ohio.

Section 7 of article XVIII of the constitution provides that:

> "Any municipality may frame and adopt or amend a charter for its government and may, subject to the provisions of section 3 of this article, exercise thereunder all powers of local self-government.

Section 3 of the same article, referred to in section 7 above quoted, imposes no other limitations upon the exercise of the powers of local self-government than that the local police, sanitary and other similar regulations shall not conflict with general laws.

Municipal waterworks constitute a municipal utility, managed and conducted by the municipality in its proprietary capacity as distinguished from its governmental capacity. It is clear that the local regulations which are under section 3 of article XVIII of the constitution to be subordinate to the general laws are those of a governmental character only. It follows, therefore, that the provisions of a municipal charter pertaining to the exercise by the municipality of its corporate or business functions are in no way subordinate to or controlled by the provisions of the general laws enacted for the government of municipalities generally. On the contrary, it seems reasonably clear that such general laws would not be applicable at all in a municipality operating under a charter unless the municipality had as a part of its charter, either expressly or by necessary implication, adopted such general laws." It is true that the field now under discussion has not been extensively developed by judicial decisions in this state. I believe that cases are now pending involving questions which might be considered as related to the one upon which my opinion has been requested. However, I believe the general rule will be established, at least as applied to the business functions of a municipality, that the general statutes of the state have no application in a municipality operating under a charter.

But while the statutes of the state for the government of municipalities generally do not apply to the business functions of such municipalities as have framed and adopted a charter, I am clear that the general limitations of the constitution of Ohio do apply to the legislative powers of such a municipality.

It is, then, this general constitutional question which I have considered in answering your question and not any question arising out of the provisions of the Dayton charter, whatever they may be.

All such questions may be merged into a single question, which may be stated as follows: Does the production, by a municipal corporation operating under a charter duly adopted, of a surplus from the operation of a public utility and the devotion of such surplus to the general purposes of such a municipality violate any provision of the constitution of Ohio or constitute taxation for local purposes, which is subject to the control of the state legislature?

The answer to this question is in the negative.

I may add that so far as the policy of the state in the past and as at present applied to municipalities other than those which have adopted charters is concerned, the laws of the state contemplate the creation of a surplus from water rentals (See section 3959, G. C.). It has not been the policy of the state to limit the rates strictly to such as might pay the mere operating expenses and bond and interest charges of the plant.

The present policy of the state as applied to charter cities is to be found in sections 4, 6 and 12 of article XVIII of the constitution. The first of these sections in effect authorize the municipality to acquire, construct, own, lease and operate any public utility, the product or service of which is to be supplied to the municipality or its inhabitants, and by condemnation to acquire the use of, or full title to, the property and franchise of any company supplying such service.

Section 6 of the same article authorizes the surplus product of a municipality owned and operated utility to be disposed of and permits the production of surplus product to the extent of fifty per cent. of the total service or product supplied within the municipality.

Section 12 of the same article authorizes the issuance of mortgage bonds for the acquisition, construction or extension of a public utility and requires that in the event of the issuance of such mortgage bonds they shall be secured not only by the property and revenues of the utility, but also by a franchise, stating the terms upon which, in case of foreclosure, the purchaser may operate the same, which franchise shall in no case extend for a longer period than twenty years from the date of the sale of such utility and franchise on foreclosure.

For the sake of accuracy I may add that not every waterworks activity of a municipal corporation is, strictly speaking, of a business character. The furnishing of water for fire protection is held to be governmental, but this distinction is of no importance in connection with the question under consideration.

As I take it, the reasonableness of the water rates is not involved in your question.

Specifically answering your question: A municipality operating under a charter may lawfully provide in its charter that the surplus revenues arising from the operation of a municipally owned waterworks plant may be used for general municipal purposes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LEASE TO RUSSELL POINT POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY, A PARTNERSHIP, DISAPPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of June 2, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination a lease to Russell Point Power and Light Company, a partnership. In the body of the lease it is recited that the same is executed to "Russell Point Power and Light Company, partnership," while the lease is signed by W. H. Boyd, C. F. Mitchell and H. Jos. Thompson. I am informed that as a matter of fact the persons signing the lease are the members of the partnership in question, but this fact does not appear from the lease. The lease should be drawn to W. H. Boyd, C. F. Mitchell and H. Jos. Thompson, partners, doing business under the firm name of Russell Point Power and Light Company.

I am informed that this lease meets with no opposition from other lessees of the state, and that they are in fact desirous of having this pole line constructed in order that they may secure current for lighting their cottages. I think, however, that the clause protecting other lessees should be redrafted to afford full protection, and suggest the following language:

> "This lease is executed and the rights herein conveyed shall be subject to all the rights of all other lessees of the state of Ohio; and the party of the second part, before erecting any pole upon state land already under lease and before stringing any wires or cables over any state land already under lease, shall obtain the written consent of the present lessee, and this lease shall not confer any right to erect any pole upon or to string any wire or cable over state lands already under lease unless and until the written consent of the lessee or lessees of such lands be first obtained; and in locating poles along the embankment the poles shall be set three feet back of the top of the outer slope, and as nearly as possible upon the dividing lines between embankment lots that have heretofore been leased for cottage site purposes.''

Both in the original draft of the above paragraph of the lease and in the original draft of the succeeding paragraph, the expression ''party of the first part'' is used where the expression ''party of the second part'' is intended. The correction is made in the language suggested for the paragraph first above referred to, and should be made in the succeeding paragraph.

For the reasons above stated, I am returning this lease without my approval.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ELECTORS, RESIDENTS OF A COUNTY FOR PURPOSE OF ATTENDING SCHOOL ARE DISQUALIFIED FROM VOTING AT PRIMARY ELECTION, HELD AUGUST 10, 1915—HOUSE BILL NO. 56 NOT EFFECTIVE AT TIME OF PRIMARY.

House bill No. 56, passed May 19, 1915, will not operate to remove the restrictions of section 4867-1, G. C., (103 O. L., 243) upon the qualifications of electors to vote at the primary election to be held August 10, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 4, 1915, as follows:

''We submit the following question to you for an opinion:

''An act of the legislature, passed May 19th, approved by the governor May 25th, and filed in this office on the 27th day of May, provides as follows:

''To repeal section 4867-1 of the General Code and amend section 5061 of the General Code, restoring the election franchise to the citizens of the state.

''Question: Will persons coming under the provisions of this act be entitled to vote at the primary election to be held on the 10th day of August, 1915?''

The act of which you refer is house bill No. 56, passed at the recent session of the general assembly, the purpose of which was to remove certain restrictions of an act passed April 11, 1913, 103 O. L., 243, upon the qualifications of electors to vote who are residents of a county merely for the purpose of attending school.

college, academy, university or other institution of learning, and not intending to reside in said county when they shall have ceased to attend such school, college, academy, university or other institution of learning and to render it lawful for persons who are otherwise qualified to vote at all elections in the county in which they may be residing solely for the purpose of attending school or other institution of learning. Your inquiry refers particularly to the primary elections to be held August 10, 1915.

Section 4980 of the General Code relative to the qualifications of electors to vote at primary elections, provides in part as follows:

> "At such election only legally qualified electors or such as will be legally qualified electors at the next ensuing general election may vote and all such electors may vote only in the election precinct where they reside." * * *

Under section 1c, article II of the constitution, house bill No. 56, referred to in your communication, will not become effective until 90 days from the date on which the same was filed in the office of the secretary of state, to wit, August 25th, or 15 days after the primary referred to. At any time prior to August 25th a referendum petition may be filed to submit this law to a vote, in which event those electors affected by the same will not be entitled to vote at the election in November, 1915, in the county in which they reside solely for school purposes within the meaning of sections 4867-1 and 5061, as amended in 103 O. L., 243. In other words, a nomination made at the August primary, if such person were permitted to vote, might be controlled by electors who, by reason of the filing of a referendum petition on the law under consideration after such primary election will continue to be disqualified to vote at the November election in the county in which such nominations are made. That is to say, a candidate might be deprived of a nomination by electors who are now and will be disqualified to vote at the November election in the county in which such candidates sought nomination. To hold that restrictions upon the qualifications of electors under sections 4867-1 and 5061, G. C., 103 O. L., 243, are now removed for the purposes of the primary election to be held on August 10, 1915, by the enactment of house bill No. 56, is to completely override the constitutional provision above referred to. The question here under consideration is distinguishable from that of nominations of assessors considered in an opinion rendered by this office, in that if not referred, the law requiring an election of assessors will be effective when the primary election is held and if such law is referred, the rights of no electors can be substantially affected by the holding in that opinion, the only result thereof being that all action taken toward the nomination of assessors at the primary will be in every respect a nullity.

I am, therefore, of opinion that house bill No. 56 may not operate to qualify electors to vote at the primary election to be held on August 10, 1915, who are disqualified under the provisions of sections 4867-1 and 5061, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 243.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

A FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANY MAY BE ADMITTED TO OHIO TO WRITE POLICIES FOR ONE OR MORE CLASSES OF INSURANCE MENTIONED IN SECTION 9510, G. C., IF AUTHORIZED SO TO DO BY ITS FRANCHISE—CORPORATE AUTHORITY.

The American Automobile Insurance Company of St. Louis, Mo., or any other foreign insurance company with like corporate authority, may be admitted to write policies of insurance in Ohio covering any one or more of the classes of insurance mentioned in section 9510, of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. FRANK TAGGART, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 3, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

"The American Automobile Insurance Company, of St. Louis, Missouri, is incorporated by the laws of the state of Missouri. It is authorized, among other things, 'to make all kinds of insurance on automobiles and all other cars and vehicles, etc.' Section 6996 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, as amended in 1913, is as follows:

"'Also to make all kinds of Insurance on automobiles and all other cars and vehicles, provided that any company which confines its business to insurance upon automobiles and other cars and vehicles shall also have the right to insure the owners of said automobiles, cars and other vehicles against liability for damage arising out of the ownership or operation of such automobile, cars or vehicles to the person or property of others.'

"Article 1, Section 1 of the by-laws of the company provides:

"'The business of this company shall be limited to the writing of all kinds of insurance on automobiles and motor vehicles, including fire, theft, collision, property damage and liability, and all other kinds of insurance relating to automobiles and motor vehicles.'

"The company has heretofore been admitted and licensed in this state as follows:

"'Make insurance upon automobiles against loss or damage by fire, theft, transportation; loss or damage resulting from accident to property; and make insurance, except employer's liability insurance, to indemnify persons and corporations against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from automobile accidents to other persons or corporations as prescribed in section 9510, of the General Code of Ohio.'

"Section 9510 provides:

"'A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to --------(a part of paragraph 2, section 9510) make insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property for cause other than fire or lightning.'

"Section 9511 provides:

"'No company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the above four mentioned purposes, and no company organized for either one of such purposes shall issue policies of insurance of any other.'

"Section 665 provides:

"'No company, corporation or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto have been complied with.'

"In the case of the State ex rel. Sheets, Attorney General, v. The Aetna Life Insurance Company, the supreme court announced this rule:

"'In the absence of any statute in Ohio prohibiting life insurance companies from doing an employer's liability insurance in this state and the business itself being by statutes expressly authorized, a life insurance company incorporated and organized under the laws of a sister state and empowered by its charter to engage in the business of employers' liability insurance may by the comity that prevails between the states be licensed and permitted to transact such business in this state, although our statutes have not in expressed terms conferred upon domestic life insurance companies authority to engage in or transact that particular kind of insurance.'

"I am desirous of your opinion whether this company can continue doing 'fire, theft, collision, property damage and liability insurance, and all other kinds of insurance relating to automobiles and motor vehicles,' in view of the seeming conflict between these classes of insurance as is set out in section 9510 and section 9511, which prohibit domestic companies from combining in one policy insurance covering fire, theft, liability, property damage and collision in connection with automobiles, and whether it is the opinion of your department that this company and any other company writing such insurance in one policy should be required to discontinue the same."

Section 9510, referred to and quoted in part in your letter, enumerates four distinct class of insurance business which certain companies may be admitted or organized in this state to carry on. If there were no other limiting or restricting provisions of law, then any domestic company organized under said section, or any admitted foreign company, having authority therefor under its corporate franchise, might write policies of insurance under any one or more of the four classes enumerated in said section 9510 of the General Code. Section 9511 of the General Code, however, which before the enactment of the General Code formed, as did also section 9510, supra, a part of section 3641, Revised Statutes, prohibits companies organized in Ohio from issuing policies of insurance for more than one of the four classes enumerated in section 9510 of the General Code. I find in no other section of the General Code a similar restriction or limitation placed upon foreign insurance companies admitted to do business in Ohio. Therefore, under the rule of comity existing between states, as well as by the specific enabling effect of paragraph one of section 9510 of the General Code, a foreign corporation may, within the limits of its corporate franchise issue policies for more than one of the four classes enumerated in section 9510; unless a legislative policy to restrict foreign corporations in the same manner as domestic corporations is elsewhere clearly evidenced.

It becomes important, therefore, to determine whether there exists in Ohio such a policy of limiting foreign corporations to the doing of only such things as domestic corporations may do. In this connection I call attention to section 178 of the General Code, which provides the method by which foreign corporations for profit may secure a certificate from the secretary of state to do business in this state. This section in terms permits the licensing of a foreign corporation with wider latitude in doing business in this state than is conferred upon domestic corporations, the only limitation being that the purposes for which such foreign corporation is admitted must be such as one or more domestic corporations may lawfully engage in. Although foreign banking, insurance, building and loan and bond investment corporations are excepted from the provisions of section 178, yet the policy of the state permitting a foreign corporation to engage in business the scope of which is broader than that which may be delegated to a single domestic corporation is apparently recognized. The exception of insurance and other companies from the application of section 178 is because this section deals primarily with powers and duties of the secretary of state, and foreign insurance companies must secure admission through the superintendent of insurance rather than through the secretary of state.

> "In the absence of legislative prohibition, a foreign corporation which is authorized to write distinct classes of insurance may by comity engage in its multiform business within this state subject to the restrictions of its charter provisions and such regulations and conditions as have been imposed by the legisalture."

(United States Fidelity Co. v. Linehan, 73 N. H., 41.) At page 44 of the opinion the court say:

> "The nature of the applicants' business is undoubtedly to be considered by the commissioner, as evidence, upon the question of its reliability as a business corporation; and it is conceivable that that alone might warrant his finding of the fact of its unreliability; also, the difficulty of computing the ratio between its reserve fund and its liabilities is an evidentiary fact bearing upon the question of its financial soundness. * * * If by reason of the dual character of its business, he was unable to determine the question of its liability, or if he was satisfied that such business combination rendered this company unsafe in fact for public patronage, his refusal to grant it a license would seem to have been amply justified."

A similar question arose in the case of People ex rel v. The Fidelity Casualty Company, 153 Ill., page 25. The first two branches of the syllabus in this case are as follows:

> "1. INSURANCE, foreign company may make multiform risks. There being no prohibition in the statute of Illinois against the doing of multiform insurance, the comity that prevails between the states permits a foreign corporation to do such insurance in this state, although our statute does not authorize the formation of companies for that purpose.
> "2. The absence of authority in our statute to organize such companies is not an implied prohibition of the transaction of multiform insurance by a foreign company within the state."

At page 33 of the opinion the court uses the following language:

> "It seems to be one of the contentions of appellant, that since a company cannot be organized, under the laws of this state, to do the different classes of insurance business done by appellee, therefore there is an implied prohibition that forbids the transaction of a multiform insurance business by one and the same company within the limits of the state,—in other words, that the doing of such multiform insurance business is in violation of the spirit of its laws. We are not satisfied of the soundness of this position. It is admitted that our statutes do not, in express terms, prohibit a company from doing more than one kind of insurance. The rule is, that where there is no positive prohibitive statute, the presumption, under the law of comity that prevails between the states of the union, is, that the state permits a corporation organized in a sister state to do any act authorized by its charter or the law under which it is created, except when it is manifest that such act is obnoxious to the policy of the law of this state."

It seems to me that in the case submitted by you there is even stronger reason for the holding that the company under consideration may be authorized to do more than one class of business enumerated in section 9510, by reason of the fact that said section specifically recognizes the right of foreign insurance companies to be admitted for such purposes. The mere fact that the legislature in the same act, General Code, 9511 (97 O. L., 408), provided that domestic companies cannot engage in more than one of the several classes of business enumerated does not, to my mind, indicate that the same rule was intended to be applied to foreign corporations. It is rather an indication that the legislature intended to make a distinction and to establish a definite policy relative to companies organized under the laws of this state.

I am therefore of the opinion that the American Automobile Insurance Company, or any other foreign insurance company with like corporate authority, may be admitted in Ohio and authorized to carry on or continue the business of writing in the same or several policies more than one of the classes of insurance mentioned in section 9510 of the General Code, if it is able to and does satisfy the superintendent of insurance as to its financial responsibility, worth and standing, and otherwise complies with Ohio laws relative to securing admission and conducting its business.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF HEALTH—HEALTH OFFICER CAN BE EMPLOYED TO PERFORM PHYSICIAN'S SERVICES IN QUARANTINE CASES—COMPENSATION IN ADDITION TO SALARY.

A board of health is empowered to employ a health officer to perform physicians' services in quarantine cases, under section 4436, G. C., and said health officer may be compensated by the municipality in addition to his salary for such services as are not within his duties as health officer when the persons quarantined are unable to pay.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 3, 1915, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:

"May the health officer of a city serve as physician in quarantine cases (smallpox) and receive additional compensation for such service, the same to be fixed by the board of health? If such compensation can be legally paid, is it required that the same be fixed by the board of health prior to the rendition of the service? See enclosed letter of Dr. W. H. Knauss, health officer of Newark, Ohio, which we would ask you to return with your reply."

Under the provisions of section 4404, G. C., the council of a city is required to establish a board of health. Section 4408, G. C., provides in parts as follows:

"The board of health shall appoint a health officer, who shall be the executive officer. He shall furnish his name, address and other information required by the state board of health. * * *"

Section 4411-1, G. C. (103 O. L., 436), is as follows:

"The board shall determine the duties and fix the salaries of its employes; but no member of the board of health shall be appointed as health officer or ward physician."

Section 4428, G. C., authorizes the board of health, upon reasonable belief of the existence of an infectious or contagious disease, to quarantine a house or locality and to restrain the persons within such house or locality, and section 4436, G. C., provides as follows:

"When a house or other place is quarantined on account of contagious diseases, the board of health having jurisdiction shall provide for all persons confined in such house or place, food, fuel, and all other necessaries of life, including medical attendance, medicine and nurses, when necessary. The expenses so incurred, except those for disinfection, quarantine or other measures strictly for the protection of the public, when properly certified by the president and clerk of the board of health, or health officer where there is no board of health, shall be paid by the person or persons quarantined, when able to make such payment, and when not by the municipality in which quarantined."

By the provisions of this section the duty is imposed upon the board of health to provide medical attendance when necessary to persons under quarantine, and when such persons are unable to pay for the same the municipality is required to do so.

Whether or not the health officer appointed may receive compensation for such service, involves a consideration of sections 3808 and 12912, G. C. Section 3808, G. C., provides that no officer of a corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. Section 12912, G. C., provides as follows:

"Whoever, being an officer of a municipal corporation or member of the council thereof or the trustee of a township, is interested in the profits of a contract, job, work or services for such corporation or township, or acts as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer, in work undertaken or prosecuted by such corporation or township during the term for which he was elected or appointed, or for one year thereafter, or becomes the employe of the contractor of such contract, job, work or services while in office, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than six months, nor both, and forfeit his office."

Attention is called to opinions of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, found at pages 249 and 292 of the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1913, in which opinions it is held in effect that a "health officer" is not an officer of a city within the meaning of the term officer as used in sections 3808 and 12912, G. C., and that such health officer may be appointed as special agent for vaccinations under section 4449, G. C., and draw compensation therefor from city funds.

While the appointee under the provisions of section 4408, G. C., supra, is there termed a "health officer" and is declared to be the "executive officer" of the board, that of itself is not conclusive of the meaning of the term "officer" as found elsewhere in the statutes, and although it is held in the case of State v. Craig, 69 O. S., 236, that a health officer was not an employe within the meaning of that term as used in section 189 of the municipal code, with reference to "employes then serving in the health department," it will be noted that the conclusion of the court was based solely upon the ground that the "health officer" was designated an officer elsewhere in the statutes and this interpretation of the term "employe" was confined to its use in the particular statute referred to. This interpretation of the term "employe" was not necessary to the decision of the case and the court in fact based its judgment upon another ground stated in the succeeding paragraph of the opinion. It therefore does not follow from the decision of the court that a health officer may not be an employe of the board for other purposes and within contemplation of other statutory provisions.

That the appointee of the board of health is not an officer, seems to be supported by the case of State ex rel. v. Jennings, 57 O. S., 415, the second branch of the syllabus being as follows:

> "To constitute a public office * * * it is essential that certain independent public duties, a part of the sovereignty of the state, should be appointed to it by law, to be exercised by the incumbent, in virtue of his election or appointment to the office, thus created and defined, and not as a mere employe, subject to the direction and control of some one else."

The appointee of the board of health has no authority independent of the board, and no duty except as determined by the board further than to furnish his name, address and other information required by the state board.

It may be further observed that in addition to the fact that such appointee serves only at the will of the board and is entirely subject to its discretion and control, and takes no oath of office nor gives any bond, no salary or compensation is provided for such appointee except authority therefor to be found within the terms of section 4411-1, G. C., supra, which authorizes the board to determine the duties and fix the salaries of its "employes." In view of the extent and nature of the duties which the board is authorized to impose upon such appointee as its "executive officer" (section 4408, G. C.), it seems conclusive that it was the legislative purpose that the salary of such appointee be fixed by the board, and it therefore follows that such appointee is an employe of the board within the meaning of that term as used in said section 4411-1, G. C., supra.

For these reasons I therefore concur in the opinion of my predecessor that a health officer appointed by a city board of health is not an officer of a municipality within the meaning of that term as used in section 3808 and 12912 of the General Code, and that therefore such health officer may lawfully be paid from the funds of the municipality for services rendered to persons who are unable to make payments for the same within the terms of section 4436 of the General Code, when such services do not come within the duties of such health officer as determined by the board and for which he receives compensation in the salary by the board fixed for such appointee.

Of course, the salary fixed by the board and paid to such appointee is in full compensation for all those services by him rendered which are within the duties by the board determined to be performed by him as health officer and such appointee is not lawfully entitled to any further or additional compensation for the performance of any service which comes within his duties as prescribed by the board of health to be performed by him as health officer.

You next inquire if it is required that compensation so authorized to be paid for medical attendance in quarantine cases be fixed by the board of health prior to the rendition of the service.

No statutory requirement that contracts for such services be entered into between the board and the physician prior to the performance of the service, will be found except that section 4411-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 436, supra, be given such construction as to include within the term "employes," physicians engaged by the board to give medical attendance in quarantine cases. It will be observed that the board is there required to determine the duties and fix the "salaries" of its employes. The compensation of physicians for medical attendance in quarantine cases would not be held to be a salary. The term salary as here used, carries with it rather the idea of a regular periodical payment of a fixed sum for a continued service, and to my mind does not comprehend the payment for medical attendance in more or less isolated cases.

While it may be in most cases a matter of good business policy for the board to have some understanding or agreement as to the rate of compensation to be paid in such cases, and this I think it would have full authority to do, prior to the performance of the service, in my opinion the board is not by law required to determine prior to the rendition of the service the compensation to be paid therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

POLICEMEN AND FIREMEN—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 4383, G. C., FOR RELIEF OF DISABLED POLICEMEN AND FIREMEN BY CITY ORDINANCE—SUCH RELIEF PRECLUDES COMPENSATION UNDER WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.

An ordinance for the relief of policemen and firemen authorized by section 4383, G. C., is valid, and under it the auditor may pay the salary of such disabled policeman or fireman.

Policemen and firemen compensated under such ordinance or through policemen or firemen's relief fund or pension fund are not entitled to compensation under the workmen's compensation act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is in receipt of a request for an opinion from Mr. Clyde C. Porter, city solicitor of Tiffin, Ohio, which is as follows:

"On the 13th day of January, 1913, the city council of the city of Tiffin, Ohio, duly passed an ordinance providing for the relief of policemen and firemen when disabled in the discharge of duty, a copy of which ordinance, prepared by the city auditor, is herewith enclosed.

"Our auditor inquires as to whether or not he shall continue 'to pay salaries when no services have been rendered, especially when disability continues longer than two or three months.'

"The city council has authority, under section 4383 of the General Code, to provide 'for relief out of the police or fire funds of members of either department temporarily or permanently disabled in the discharge of their duty.'

"The question has been raised as to whether or not 'disability' includes sickness or means simply physical injury from accident, or otherwise.

"In view of the fact that the city employes, firemen and policemen, are under protection of 'the workmen's compensation act' there is some doubt as to the validity of this ordinance; also whether or not a policeman or fireman entitled to relief under the 'compensation act' can draw the allowance from the state and also his salary from the city under this ordinance or can elect to take under the ordinance or under the 'compensation act.' We are informed that employes have drawn relief from the 'compensation act' and enough from the city under this ordinance to equal their regular salaries. This, to us, does not appear to be legal.

"Will you kindly give us your opinion in the matter, especially considering what the auditor asks?"

With his letter he encloses a copy of the ordinance referred to therein, which copy is as follows:

"To provide for the relief of policemen and firemen when disabled in the discharge of duty.

"Be it ordained by the council of the city of Tiffin, state of Ohio:

"Section 1. That when a policeman or fireman is disabled or incurs a sickness while in the discharge of duty he shall be entitled to receive and shall receive his regular salary upon furnishing to the city auditor a certificate of a duly qualified physician certifying to such disability or sickness.

"Section 2. That such relief shall be paid out of the police or fire funds, as the case may require.

"Section 3. This ordinance shall be in force and effect from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

"Passed this 13th day of January, A. D., 1913.

"Attest: T. J. K.,

"A. J. H. President."

Section 4383 of the General Code is as follows:

"Council may provide by general ordinance for the relief out of the police or fire funds, of members of either department temporarily or permanently disabled in the discharge of their duty. Nothing herein shall impair, restrict or repeal any provision of law authorizing the levy of taxes in municipalities to provide for firemen's police and sanitary police pension funds, and to create and perpetuate boards of trustees for the administration of such funds."

Under the provisions of the section quoted above, the city council would have authority to provide for the relief of policemen and firemen as has been done in the ordinance quoted above, and the auditor would have the authority to pay the salaries of such disabled policemen and firemen under the terms of the ordinance.

I am of the opinion that the words, "disabled in the discharge of duty" as found in section 4383 of the General Code, are not to be limited to such disabilities only as follow physical injuries from accident, but that they mean disability following whatever may be the proximate cause, so long as it is incurred in the discharge of their respective duties of policeman or fireman.

I might here call attention to the fact, though not exactly in point, that the supreme court is now considering whether occupational disease is embraced within the term "injury" as used in the workmen's compensation act. This department is contending for the negative of that proposition.

If a municipality has established a policemen's or firemen's pension fund under sections 4600, et seq., of the General Code, the member of such police or fire department may not in any event receive relief from the workmen's compensation fund. (Section 1465-16.)

The letter and the spirit of the workmen's compensation act are based upon the theory of compensation for disability, and when the injured party has been compensated through the payment of his salary for time lost and for medical services made necessary through an injury, there is no such disability as would entitle him to compensation under that act.

Coming to the last question in Mr. Porter's letter, namely the resort to the workmen's compensation act for the purpose of compensating a policeman or fireman who has suffered disability and which policeman or fireman is compensated through an ordinance passed under authority of section 4383 of the General Code: In the first place, compensation may be paid from the workmen's compensation fund only following an accidental injury, excluding mere sickness or disease (unless, of course, the supreme court should hold in the case now before it that accidental injury as used in the act includes occupational diseases). In other words, the authorization for payment under section 4383 of the General Code is broader than under the workmen's compensation act.

But, even in cases which otherwise come clearly under the provisions of the workmen's compensation act, if the injured person has been compensated through the payment of his salary during the time lost and for medical services made necessary through the injury, he would not be entitled to compensation under the act.

Under the ordinance of the city of Tiffin a policeman or a fireman receiving compensation thereunder, to wit, his regular salary, would not be entitled to compensation other than medical, nurse and hospital service, and medicines as might be allowed by the industrial commission, and this notwithstanding the contribution by the city of Tiffin to the workmen's compensation fund.

In re Claim No. 4268 of the industrial commission of Ohio, A. Costello, claimant, it was held by the industrial commission, under date of May 19, 1913, and I think rightly, as follows:

> "In this claim the fact of injury, the resulting loss of time and the average weekly wage is sufficiently clear, the sole question being whether the claimant is entitled to compensation for his injury, in view of the fact that he was working under a contract of employment providing for an annual compensation, without deduction for loss of time occasioned by an injury resulting in temporary disability, it appearing further that the claimant has been fully paid in accordance with the terms of his contract for the period of time covered by his disability.
> "The act contemplates compensation covering the impairment of the earning capacity to the extent of two-thirds thereof, exclusive of the first week of the disability. Section 1465-65 of the General Code (section 26 of the workmen's compensation act of 1911, 102 O. L., 524). As the injury to the claimant did not result in any impairment of his earning capacity, and as the act does not contemplate compensation on account of the injury itself or the pain or the suffering resulting therefrom, we do not think that the claimant is entitled to an award and his claim will therefore be denied."

I might add that contribution to the workmen's compensation fund for policemen and firemen is mandatory upon a city which does not maintain a policemen's or firemen's pension fund under sections 4600, et seq., of the General Code, while relief under section 4383 is permissive only.

Further, I am of the opinion that the ordinance referred to is valid and that its existence precludes any disabled policeman or fireman from receiving from the workmen's compensation fund anything other than such reasonable allowance for medical, nurse and hospital service and medicines as may be allowed by the industrial commission.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to Mr. Clyde C. Porter, city solicitor of Tiffin, Ohio, and to the industrial commission of Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CONTRACT—WATER COMPANY, PRIVATE CORPORATION—VOTE OF PEOPLE NOT NEEDED—TEN-YEAR LIMITATION APPLIES—COUNCIL MAY ISSUE BONDS FOR FILTRATION PLANT—LIMITATIONS.

A contract between a municipal corporation and a private corporation, whereby the latter is to furnish a supply of water to the former, which is to filter and distribute the same, is not governed by section 3981, G. C., and need not be submitted to a vote of the people.

Such a contract, however, may not be made for a period exceeding ten years, that being the limitation of section 3809, G. C.

Council of such municipal corporation may issue bonds for the installation of the filtration plant and distribution system in order to carry out such a contract, provided the amount of such bonds, together with other bonds issued during the same year, does not exceed one per cent. of the tax duplicate of the municipality; and provided further that the amount thereof, together with other bonds then outstanding, will not cause the net indebtedness of the corporation outstanding to exceed two and one-half per cent. of such tax duplicate, in either of which events the bonds may be issued only upon a vote of the people.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 8, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

"1. May a village enter into a contract with a private corporation to furnish water supply for a period of thirty-one years, the village to own and operate the purification plant and distribution system, and must said contract, if it can be made for a period of thirty-one years, be submitted to a vote of the people under section 3981, General Code?

"2. If the bond issue for the construction of the distribution lines and filtration plant exceeds one per cent. of the tax duplicate ($170,000.00) must the same be submitted to a vote of the people, and if it is found to be necessary to do so, may the contract for water supply and the bond issue be voted upon at the same time?"

Your statement of your first question together with the statements in a letter addressed to you by the solicitor of the village of East Youngstown make it clear that the corporation with which the contract is to be made is not to furnish water either to the municipality or to its inhabitants in the sense that it is to make deliveries or even to furnish a supply of what is actually delivered for public and private use; but that the company is merely to deliver to the city a sufficient amount of raw water which the city is to filter, distribute and sell.

Section 3981, G. C., provides as follows:

"A municipal corporation may contract with any individual or individuals or an incorporated company for supplying water for fire purposes, or for cisterns, reservoirs, streets, squares and other public places within the corporate limits, or for the purpose of supplying the citizens of such municipal corporation with water for such time, and upon such terms as may be agreed upon. But such contract shall not be executed or binding upon the municipal corporation until it has been ratified by a vote of the electors thereof, at a special or general election, and the municipal corporation shall have the same power to protect such water supply and prevent the polution thereof as though the waterworks were owned by such municipal corporation."

It is apparent that the proposed contract is not one for supplying water for fire purposes because the company is not to deliver the water ready for use for such purposes; it is not one for supplying streets, squares and other public places within the corporate limits because the water is to be delivered at the filtration plant; it is not one for the purpose of supplying the citizens with water for the reason that the water is to be delivered to the citizens by the city itself, and in a state different from that in which it is delivered by the company to the city.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that section 3981 does not require the proposed contract to be submitted to a vote of the people.

I cannot refrain, however, from calling attention to section 3809, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 526. This section provides in full as follows:

The council of a city may authorize, and the council of a village may make, a contract with any person, firm or company for lighting the streets, alleys, lands, lanes, squares and public places in the municipal corporation, or for furnishing water to such corporation, or for the collection and disposal of garbage in such corporation, or for the leasing of the electric light plant, and equipment, or the waterworks plant, or both, of any person, firm, company or municipality or for the purchase of electric current for furnishing light, heat or power to such municipality or the inhabitants thereof for a period not exceeding ten years, and the requirement of a certificate that the necessary money is in the treasury, shall not apply to such contract, and such requirement shall not apply to street improvement contracts extending for one year or more, nor to contracts made by the board of health, nor to contracts made by a village for the employment of legal counsel, nor to contracts by a municipality for the leasing or acquisition of the electric light plant and equipment, or the waterworks, plant, or both, of any person, firm or corporation therein situated."

I am of the opinion that the proposed contract is a contract "for furnishing water to such corporation," within the contemplation of this section.

Section 2702, R. S., the predecessor of section 45 of the Municipal Code, which has become sections 3806-3809, inclusive, G. C., was interpreted as not applicable to contracts extending beyond one year.

Defiance v. Council, 13 C. D., 96.
Water Company v. Defiance, 90 Fed., 453.

However, section 2702 contained no exceptions like those now incorporated in section 3809, G. C. That is to say, the original Worthington law, so called, simply prohibited the making of any contract when it could not be certified that money was in the treasury unappropriated for any other purpose and sufficient in amount to discharge the obligation of the corporation. The courts simply held that it could not have been intended that this restriction should apply to contracts not to be performed within one year, and which, therefore, for obvious reasons ought not to be discharged out of the revenues of any one year.

In my opinion the present law has the contrary effect. Otherwise section 3809 is absolutely without effect. Such contracts as are therein authorized to be made without a certificate "for a period not exceeding ten years" may virtually not be made at all for a period exceeding ten years for the very reasons which were pointed out by the courts in interpreting old section 2702, R. S.

Does the phrase "for a period not exceeding ten years" modify all that precedes or merely the last preceding clause.

Viewing the section from the standpoint of strict grammatical construction, one would be obliged to conclude that the modifying effect of the phrase in question is limited to the next preceding word or phrase subject to modification. However, when the whole section is studied, and due weight is given to the repetition in the latter part of the section beginning with the words "and such requirement shall not apply," and the mention in that part of the section of certain contracts which, if it had been intended that the time limitation clause should not modify all that precedes, might have as well been placed in the first part of the section and the repetition thus avoided, very strong ground appears for interpreting the statute, regradless of technical rules of grammer, so as to make the phrase apply to all which precedes. In other words, consideration of the section as a whole shows very clearly that the legislature intended that none of the contracts, mentioned in that part of the section which precedes the phrase "for a period not exceeding ten years," should be exempt from the requirements of the preceding sections unless for a period not exceeding ten years.

Accordingly, it is my opinion that it is not lawful for a municipal corporation, subject to the general laws of the state, to enter into a contract with a private corporation to furnish water to the corporation for a period exceeding ten years. So that on this account the first part of your first question must be answered in the negative.

Answering your second question I beg to state that under sections 3939-3954-1, inclusive, of the General Code, generally known as the Longworth law, the council of a municipal corporation is without power to issue bonds for the purpose of constructing water distribution lines and a filtration plant without a vote of the people if the amount of the bond issue exceeds one per cent. of the tax duplicate, but may issue without a vote of the people if the amount of the bonds is less than that, unless the particular issue, together with the other issues made in the same year, would exceed one per cent. of the duplicate, and unless further such proposed issue, together with such other issues outstanding at the time, would cause the net bonded indebtedness of the municipality to exceed two and one-half per cent. of the tax duplicate, in either of which events the issue would have to be submitted to a vote of the people.

The answer which has been given to your first question obviates the necessity of answering the remainder of your second question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—WHAT CONSTITUTES "REPAIR" OF A HIGHWAY—SUBSTANTIAL PART OF ORIGINAL IMPROVEMENT MUST REMAIN TO BE A REPAIR.

In order to constitute a "repair" of a highway it is first essential that there must have been an improvement of the highway, and that this improvement must have fallen into decay, either slight or extensive. Some substantial part of the original improvement must remain, and the proposed operation, to be a repair, must contemplate the use of that part of the old improvement still remaining, and must further contemplate a completed work that will be substantially like the original.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "We have for this department, as you know, three funds for the construction and repair of roads,—i. e., the inter-county highway fund, the main market funds, and the maintenance and repair fund, the law providing that certain funds shall be devoted to the repair and maintenance of certain roads.
> "I am asking you for an opinion as to where the repair stops and construction or improvement begins.
> "To be more specific, it is now proposed to resurface a section of inter-county highway No. 81, in Mahoning county, extending north and east from the village of Canfield, a distance of about two miles. It is contemplated to use substantially the present grade of the traveled road. The macadam now there will be used as a foundation course but it will be necessary to straighten up margins and in places widen a portion of the roadway. A top course of macadam will be imposed on this foundation course and bound with bitumen and the shoulders of the road brought to proper grade.
> "The point we wish decided is, can we legitimately pay for the above mentioned repairs from the repair fund?"

Your request involves a construction of section 6309, G. C., 104 O. L., 6, the section reading as follows:

> "The revenues derived by registration fees provided for in this chapter shall be paid by the secretary of state weekly into the state treasury. Any surplus of such revenues which may remain after the payment of the expenses incident to carrying out and enforcing the provisions of this chapter shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of the public roads and highways of this state, under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department."

In appropriating the surplus of automobile registration fees remaining after payment of expenses, the legislature has followed substantially the language of section 6309, G. C. It therefore becomes important to determine the meaning of the word "repair" as used in said section and in the various appropriation measures adopted by the legislature. The verb "repair" is defined in the Standard dictionary as follows: (1) "to mend, add to or make over"; (2) "to restore to a sound or good state." The noun "repair" is defined in the same work as follows: "restoration after decay, waste, injury or partial destruction." In order to constitute a repair it would seem in the light of the above definitions that there must first have been a work of some kind, and this work must have fallen into a state of decay. The extent of the decay does not seem to be material, so long as some substantial part of the original work remains. When the above situation exists, a repair would consist in restoring the work in question to its originally sound and good state, utilizing a substantial part of the original work and so conducting operations that when they are completed the new work will be substantially like the old. Applying these general principles to the word "repair" as used in connection with a highway, it is first essential that there must have been an improvement of a highway and that this improvement must have fallen into decay, either slight or extensive. Some substantial part of the original improvement must remain, and in order to constitute a repair the proposed operation must contemplate the use of that part of the old improvement still remaining and must further contemplate a completed work that will be substantially like the orignal. It will not, however, rob a contemplated operation of its character as a repair merely because it is proposed to so conduct the operation that the highway when repaired will possess certain improvements as compared with the original work. In the specific instance referred to by you, it is my opinion that the facts that some slight alterations are to be made in the grade of some parts of the road, that the margins are to be straightened up and that the roadway is to be widened in places will not change the character of the proposed operation as a repair. The present cuts and fills will be utilized, substantially the present grade will be followed and the old macadam not worn away will be used as a base. The road was originally constructed as a macadam road, a very substantial part of the old construction still remains and is to be utilized in the new work, and when the new work is completed the result will be a road of substantially the same general type as the original improvement; and I am of the opinion that you may properly regard this contemplated improvement as a repair and pay for it accordingly. I would have no hesitation in saying, however, that if it were planned to change the general type of the road, as, for instance, by paving with brick a road originally surfaced with macadam, then the proposed operation could not properly be regarded as a repair.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—PRESIDENT'S AND SECRETARY'S TRAVELING EXPENSES FOR ATTENDING HEALTH CONFERENCE LEGAL.

Reimbursement for traveling expenses of the president and secretary of the state board of health for attending the thirteenth annual conference of state and territorial health authorities with the surgeon general of the United States public health service and conference of state and provincial boards of health of North America held at the same time may be legally made from the state treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 28, 1915, you submitted for my opinion the following:

"The state board of health has presented two vouchers to this department requesting the auditor of state's warrant for traveling expenses to Washington, D. C., and return, viz.:

"Dr. H. T. Sutton ---------- $56.18

"Dr. E. F. McCampbell ---------- 57.36

"Enclosed is copy of resolution passed by the state board of health, authorizing the secretary, president and vice-president to attend national convention.

"1st. Do sections 1232 to 1261-15, authorize such expenditure to be made by members of the state board of health?

"2nd. Do the same laws permit the state board of health to designate their secretary or other employe to attend such conventions and be paid their actual and necessary traveling expenses?"

The copy of the resolution which you enclosed is as follows:

"EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

"A regular meeting of the state board of health was held at the Boody House, Toledo, Ohio, Wednesday evening, March 24, 1915, at 8 o'clock.

"There were present Messrs. Sutton, Miller, Grube, MacIvor, Brown, Hasencamp and Howell.

"The secretary called attention to the thirteenth annual conference of state and territorial health authorities with the surgeon general of the United States public health service in Washington, D. C., May 13, 1915, and the conference of state and provincial boards of health of North America to be held in that city May 14, 1915.

"It was moved by Dr. Grube and seconded by Dr. Hasencamp that the secretary be delegated to attend the conference with the surgeon general, May 13th, and that the president, vice-president, and secretary be appointed delegates to the conference of state and provincial boards of health of North America, to be held on May 14 and 15, 1915.

"Those voting in the affirmative were Messrs. Sutton, Miller, Grube, MacIvor, Brown, Hasencamp and Howell.

"In the negative, none."

After receipt of your request for opinion Mr. Laylin of this department, was asked by the secretary of the state board of health as to whether or not an official opinion had been requested in regard to the voucher in question, and upon an answer in the affirmative Dr. E. F. McCampbell, secretary and executive officer of the board of health stated that he desired to advise us in writing as to the position of the board in the matter, and on June 1, 1915, he submitted to this department a letter which is as follows:

"In conformity with the suggestion of one of your special counsel, Mr. Laylin, I take the liberty of addressing you in regard to an opinion governing the legality of certain personal expense vouchers, which opinion has been asked for by the auditor of state. The two expense accounts, the legality of which was questioned by the auditor of state, are those of the president of the state board of health, Dr. H. T. Sutton, and myself. In conformity with an act of congress, approved July 1, 1902, provision is made for the surgeon general of the United States public health service to hold an annual conference with the state and territorial health authorities relative to certain interstate public health matters. The state board of health under date of March 24, 1915, passed a motion which designated the president, vice-president, and secretary and executive officer to represent the department at the meetings in Washington. A copy of this motion was attached to the vouchers which were sent to the auditor's office. These annual conferences with the U. S. public health service are of vital importance to the various states. It is well recognized, of course, that disease is neither a local nor state matter. It is plainly a matter of national importance and it is only by means of the states co-operating with the federal government that the interstate spread of disease is checked. It is, of course, largely a function of the United States government to prevent the introduction of disease from other countries.

"I am enclosing herewith a copy of the program followed at the meeting on May 13th. You will note that the principal subject under consideration was the interstate quarantine regulations. These are being redrafted by the federal government. It will be noted from the program that all the subjects under consideration were of vital concern to the state.

"It has long been a custom for the meeting of the conference of secretaries of state and provincial boards of health of North America to be held on the day following the meeting with the surgeon general of the U. S. public health service and to be continued until the business is completely transacted. At these conferences the health authorities of the various states meet together for the discussion of public health matters which largely concern the states themselves. A copy of this program is also enclosed for your information.

"In closing I wish to say that it would be exceedingly unfortunate if the state of Ohio, the fourth state in the Union in population, should be prevented from participating in these conferences. Personally I have always felt that in attending these conferences I was proceeding legally in conformity with section 1234, G. C., and have always held the view that if the board passed a resolution directing me, as secretary and executive officer, to perform some service that of necessity the service must be performed. I am informed that the state board of health has been proceeding on the basis that it had authority to send some of its own members to these conferences, such authority being derived from a broad interpretation of section 1237 and section 1239, G. C.

"This department will await your ruling in this matter with great interest. Thanking you very kindly for many considerations, I am

"Yours very truly,

"E. F. McCAMPBELL,

"Secretary and Executive Officer."

With his letter Dr. McCampbell enclosed a pamphlet showing the general program and matters covered in the conferences. Dr. Sutton, who requests reimbursement for traveling expenses, is the president of the state board of health, and Dr. McCampbell, who likewise requests reimbursement for traveling expenses, is the secretary and executive officer of such board.

Under the provisions of section 1235 of the General Code, each member of the state board of health is entitled to a per diem of five dollars "for each day employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary traveling and other expenses while engaged in the business of the board." The secretary of the state board of health, under the provisions of section 1234, G. C., is required to "perform the duties prescribed by the board and the provisions of this chapter." In regard to the traveling expenses of such secretary it is provided in said section "the necessary traveling and other expenses incurred by the secretary in the performance of his official duties shall be paid by the state on the warrant of the auditor of state upon the certificate of the president of the board."

It is to be noted from the above, that a member of the state board of health is only entitled to traveling and other necessary expenses "while engaged in the business of the board," and that the secretary is only entitled to traveling and other expenses "in the performance of his official duties."

It therefore must be determined as to whether or not the attendance by the president or the secretary at the "annual conference of state and territorial health authorities called by the surgeon general of the United States public health service, is performing services "in the business of the board" or "in performance of official duties."

The statute of the United States, referred to by Dr. McCampbell in his letter, is section 9146 of the United States Compiled Statutes, 1913, and reads as follows:

> "When, in the opinion of the surgeon-general of the public health and marine-hospital service of the United States, the interests of the public health would be promoted by a conference of said service with state or territorial boards of health, quarantine authorities, or state health officers, the District of Columbia included, he may invite as many of said health and quarantine authorities as he deems necessary or proper to send delegates, not more than one from each state or territory and District of Columbia, to said conference: Provided, that an annual conference of the health authorities of all the states and territories and the District of Columbia shall be called, each of said states, territories, and the District of Columbia to be entitled to one delegate: And provided further, that it shall be the duty of the said surgeon-general to call a conference upon the application of not less than five state or territorial boards of health, quarantine authorities, or state health officers, each of said states and territories joining in such request to be represented by one delegate."

The above statute authorizes the surgeon-general to invite as many health and quarantine authorities as he deems necessary to send delegates to a conference, and further provides that "an annual conference of the health authorities of all the states and territories and the District of Columbia shall be called, each of said states, territories, and the District of Columbia to be entitled to one delegate." The above statute places the duty upon the surgeon-general to call an annual conference, under said section, but there is no attempt, in said statute, to require the attendance of delegates of state boards of health at such conferences, and in fact, as I view it the United States would have no authority whatever to require such attendance. Therefore, there is no duty placed upon the state board of health to send a delegate, nor upon the secretary thereof to attend, in his official capacity, any such conference, so-called, unless directed so to do by a valid order of the board.

Under section 1237, G. C., the state board of health is charged with the supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people, and upon this board is conferred "supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, modify, relax or abolish." These are far-reaching powers on a subject of first importance to the state and its people, and are to be construed in the light of the purpose sought to be accomplished. The dangers to life and health are by means confined within state borders. To intelligently establish quarantines, or to modify, relax or abolish a quarantine will very frequently demand a personal investigation outside of the state, and it would be false economy to say that while thousands upon thousands of dollars might be spent to stamp out disease when once it comes within our borders, no money could be spent in necessary investigation to prevent it getting into the state. There is nothing in the statutes which leads me to the conclusion that the legislature has adopted any such policy of false economy.

In addition to section 1237 there will be found in section 1239, G. C., a duty imposed upon the board of health to make careful inquiry as to the cause of disease and to collect, preserve and disseminate information in respect to the matters under the jurisdiction of the board.

I agree with Dr. McCampbell that the subject-matters under consideration in Washington at the time of the incurring of the expenses referred to are of vital importance to the state of Ohio. However, that alone would not be sufficient to authorize any expenses in connection therewith, but it seems clear to me that the attendance at such a conference by a duly authorized representative of the board of health, as is referred to in your inquiry, is authorized under the statutes above quoted, and that such representative of the board of health should be reimbursed for his actual and necessary expenses thereby incurred.

I am very much opposed to junkets, and this opinion is not to be taken as placing a stamp of approval upon or acquiescence in any proceeding of that kind. Each case must stand upon its own facts, interpreted according to law in the light of the purpose sought to be accomplished by the law.

I take it that your inquiry does not impose any criticism of the expense or of the wisdom of the proceeding, but only seeks to find whether there is authority in law for the payment of the expense. Such a position is to be commended.

I, therefore, hold that as a matter of law warrants should be issued upon both vouchers referred to in your inquiry as being expenses properly incurred under the circumstances by representatives of the board of health in the discharge of their duties.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

"JERUINJER," A TEMPORARY HOME AND HOSPITAL FOR THE INDIGENT, EVEN THOUGH OPERATIONS ARE PERFORMED THERE, IS NOT AN INSTITUTION COMING WITHIN THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2502, G. C.—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS CANNOT AUTHORIZE PAYMENT OF MONEY UNDER SECTION 3138-1, G. C.

"Jeruinjer," a temporary home and hospital for the indigent, located at Mansfield, Ohio, is not such an institution as is contemplated within the provisions of section 2502, G. C., nor is the resolution adopted by the county commissioners, as submitted, sufficient to permit payment of money to such institution under section 3138-1, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1915.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 3, 1915, you submitted for my consideration the following:

> "I am herewith enclosing a letter received by our county auditor, from E. N. Halbedel, which explains itself in part, and the reference made here to Attorney General Hogan's ruling is not quite in conformity with the facts in our case.
> "Jeruinjer is a private home owned by one of our citizens who from his generous disposition has purchased this home and several organizations of the city have furnished different rooms and he takes in all the downs and outs—people who have no place to go that are in dire need of help; some who are not residents of the town, county, or township and cannot get into the infirmary. The institution is doing a great deal of good, but thus far has been run almost entirely by the help of some of the churches, and mostly by the Rev. S. P. Long, the founder.
> "We have a city emergency hospital which receives $2,500.00 a year from the city budget. We have no other hospital in the county and this is open to emergency cases only. No contagious diseased patient will be admitted.
> "Our commissioners recently passed a resolution granting $600 a year for this Jeruinjer hospital on the section suggested in the letter to our county auditor. I had already ruled that their resolution was void, inasmuch as I do not believe that it comes under that section.
> "Will you please give me your opinion as soon as possible? It is certainly a worthy cause and ought to be helped by the county if there is any law permitting it. But I take it that neither one of these statutes mentioned permits such expenditures of money inasmuch as there is no organization and no corporation, merely a private individual ownership, although open to all nationalties and all creeds."

With your letter you enclosed a letter from the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices written to your county auditor under date of April 28th, in response to a letter from such auditor to the bureau. The letter from the auditor to the bureau is under date of April 23rd, and is as follows:

> "Mansfield, Ohio, April 23, 1915.
> "E. N. Halbedel, Columbus, Ohio.
> "DEAR SIR:—We have in Richland county, a hospital for charitable purposes, known as Jeruinjer, which is owned and controlled by S. P. Long.

"This property stands on the tax duplicates of Richland county in the name of the said S. P. Long.

"The board of county commissioners has passed a resolution authorizing the county auditor to pay to the said S. P. Long, six hundred dollars ($600.00) for the year 1915, to reimburse him for the treatment, maintenance and support of the indigent poor of said county.

"The county commissioners advise me that this resolution was passed under authority of sections 2502 and 3138-1, G. C. I cannot reconcile this resolution with sections 2502 and 3138-1 for the reason we have an emergency hospital in Mansfield supported by public funds. The city of Mansfield made a levy sufficient to raise twenty-five hundred dollars for the emergency hospital, for the year 1914; also for the reason that the board of county commissioners has not entered into an agreement of any kind with Mr. Long.

"I am mailing to you a copy of the resolution passed by the board of county commissioners and I should like very much to have you advise me as to whether or not I have authority to issue a warrant on the county treasury for the amount of six hundred dollars ($600.00).

"Yours very truly,
"John A. Dalton,
"Auditor Richland County."

Enclosed with the letter of the auditor to the bureau, foregoing mentioned, was a copy of a resolution passed by the county commissioners of Richland county, as follows:

"RESOLUTION

"In the matter of the payment of six hundred dollars from the poor fund of Richland county to Jeruinjer hospital. } April 23, 1915.

"WHEREAS, the county of Richland does not contain a hospital supported by public funds and whereas there is a hospital, known as Jeruinjer, which was organized by S. P. Long for purely charitable purposes, and which hospital is in no sense a sectarian institution and is in fact a non-sectarian institution, in which the indigent poor of said county may be received and for years have been receiving, free of charge, needed medical and surgical attention,

"Therefore, Be It Resolved by the board of county commissioners of Richland county, Ohio, that the sum of six hundred dollars ($600.00) be paid from the said county poor fund in equal payments as of the first day of July, 1915, and on the first day of January, 1916, to the said S. P. Long for the reimbursement of said hospital for the treatment, maintenance and support of the indigent poor of said county.

"And the auditor of said county is hereby directed to issue his warrant on the county treasurer of said county in favor of S. P. Long for the sum of three hundred dollars ($300.00) payable on July 1, 1915, from the poor fund of said county, also for the sum of three hundred dollars ($300.00) on the first day of January, 1916.

"Moved by Ed. G. Lemon, seconded by Henry Bolus, that the above resolution be adopted.

"Those voting in favor of said resolution were Lemon and Bolus, whereupon said resolution was declared duly passed.

"Henry Bolus,
"Ed. G. Lemon,
"County Commissioners."

The reply of the bureau to the letters of the auditor so enclosed with the letter of the county commissioners is as follows:

"We have worried and fretted a great deal over your question as to whether the appropriation made by resolution of your county commissioners in favor of a hospital known as Jeruinjer hospital is a legal one. You state that the commissioners make this appropriation under sections 2502 and 3138-1, General Code. In each of these sections it seems that the law contemplates that when aid is given it is to a hospital organized, or incorporated; i. e., we assume that the sections require that the institution be under the management of some association, or organization of persons. From your letter we assume that no such organization exists, but that it is owned and maintained by an individual.

"Attorney General Hogan has rendered two opinions on the subject of aid to hospitals, one you will find in the annual report of the attorney general, 1911-1912, page 1067, and the other in the annual report of the attorney general 1912, page 1346. We call your attention to these opinions in order that you may read them and see whether they, in any way, might be made to apply to the hospital in question, and we would further advise that you take this matter up with your prosecuting attorney as we have not the means of knowing the exact local conditions and we refrain from making a ruling that might be an injustice to a worthy institution when not knowing all the facts of the case. Should your prosecutor be in doubt in regard to the matter, upon his request and a statement of facts we could get a written opinion from the attorney general should you desire same.

"Yours very truly,
"Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices.
"By E. N. Halbedel."

After the receipt of your letter, and being unable to ascertain the facts sufficiently in order to properly consider your question, this department wrote you under date of May 12th, requesting further facts, and under date of June 4th you wrote us in answer to said letter advising us that Dr. S. P. Long was, under separate cover, sending us more literature and a letter showing exactly what was being done at his institution. Under date of June 5th, we received the letter from Dr. Long, which is as follows:

"Mansfield, Ohio, June 4, 1915.

"Attorney General, State of Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—Sometime ago the commissioners of Richland county, recognizing what I have done for the helpless of this county and what I have saved for the county, donated $600.00 for the coming year, basing their action on the section 3138-1 (house bill No. 44) page 67, Laws of Ohio 103, 1913. The people were pleased with the action of the commissioners, but our auditor is afraid that he might have some trouble because 'Jeruinjer' is private property. However, I want to remind you that it is not the custom for a man to give the whole use of his private property wholly for charity; and in this case there is no corporation in the county for this purpose. We are crowded now from cellar to attic with the helpless and the citizens are glad that the commissioners have recognized the fact that I need a little help to carry on this work for humanity. I open the door for all religions and ages and races. It is an inn like the one between Jerusalem and Jerico for the ruined man. Out of this last sentence you can dig my newly coined name 'Jeruinjer.' I ask you to give me the interpretation of the spirit of the law. I do this at the request of Mr. T. B. Jarvis, our noble prosecuting attorney, who is in perfect sympathy with Jeruinjer, as I believe that all our citizens are. It is the only absolutely charitable institution in this county. We never make a charge for any one who enters and we help to give people a new start in life. I cannot keep up all the cost myself, and the announcement that the commissioners have offered me $600.00 to help along the next year which will mean a saving to the county of much more, if it were not paid, would only hinder others who have been kind enough to lend a helping hand to withdraw their support, and I would be worse off than if nothing had been offered. Let me assure you that I want nothing but the interpretation of the spirit of the law. I maintain that the law includes any place in a county where the helpless can be cared for—the places mentioned in the law being the only kind known as a rule.

"Yours truly,

Enclosed with said letter was a certain pamphlet, relative to the Jeruinjer home, on the back of which is stated:

"POLICY OF THIS HOME.

"(1) It is not a prison, nor a hospital, nor an infirmary."

Dr. Long likewise enclosed us two clippings from newspapers.

From all of the foregoing it appears that this institution is in fact not a hospital, but simply a home wherein the indigent are temporarily taken care of.

The county commissioners, from the letter of the county auditor, advised that the resolution, under which the six hundred dollars ($600.00) is to be paid, was passed under authority of sections 2502 and 3138-1 of the General Code.

Section 2502, G. C., provides as follows:

"Except in counties containing hospitals supported by public funds, the commissioners of any county, in their discretion, may pay to a hospital organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes, in which the indigent poor of the county may receive free of charge needed medical and surgical treatment, a sum not to exceed twenty-five hundred dollars each year. Such amount shall be paid from the county poor fund in equal payments on the first day of January and July, and shall be for the maintenance and support of such indigent poor and the reimbursement of such hospital for treatment thereof. Nothing herein shall authorize the payment of public funds to a sectarian institution."

It is to be noted, relative to said section, that it only applies to "a hospital organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes." From the facts which I have obtained from you and Dr. Long, I do not think that the Jeruinjer home can in any way be considered as a hospital organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes, even though, as stated in your letter of June 4th, delicate operations are performed there when the emergency hospital in the city of Mansfild is full.

The mere fact that surgical operations are performed in the home does not, as I view it, constitute such a home a hospital.

Section 3138-1, G. C., 103 O. L., page 67, provides as follows:

> "Section 3138-1. That the board of county commissioners of any county may enter into an agreement with a corporation or association, organized for charitable purposes, or if there is no such corporation or association, then with any corporation or association organized for the purpose of maintaining and operating a hospital in any county where a hospital has been established, or may hereafter be established, for the care of the indigent sick and disabled, excepting persons afflicted with pulmonary tuberculosis, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between said commissioners, and such corporation or association, and said commissioners shall provide for the payment of the amount agreed upon, either in one payment, or installments, or so much from year to year as the parties stipulate."

Under this section the county commissioners are authorized to enter into an agreement "with a corporation or association organized for charitable purposes," "for the care of the indigent sick and disabled" except tuberculosis patients, on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon, the payment for which may be made in either one payment, or installments, or so much from year to year as the parties stipulate.

There is nothing in the resolution of the county commissioners, hereinbefore set forth, which undertakes in any way to show that the county commissioners and the Jeruinjer home have agreed upon any terms and conditions for the care of the indigent sick and disabled. In fact, the sole purpose which, from the facts submitted to me, seems to be a laudable one, was to contribute, for the support and up-keep of said home, the sum of six hundred dollars ($600.00) per year, but as I view the situation the Jeruinjer home does not come within the provisions of section 2502, nor does the agreement attempted to be made by the county commissioners in any way come within the purview of section 3138-1. The sole object of the resolution seems to be to attempt to aid this private home from municipal funds, and that, I am of the opinion, the county commissioners are not authorized to do. Such being the case, I am of the opinion that the resolution, adopted by the county commissioners to aid the Jeruinjer home, hereinbefore in full set out, is void, and the county auditor would be unauthorized to pay the money over based upon said void resolution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PUBLISH A REPORT FOR SCHOOL YEAR.

The board of education of a county school district has no authority in law to publish a report of the schools of said district for the school year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1915.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 9, 1915, which is as follows:

> "We are in receipt of a communication from A. G. Yawberg, secretary of the county school board of this county in which he says:
> "'The county board of education wish to issue in a 9x12 pamphlet form, a printed report covering school conditions during the year. In this report they wish to show school conditions as they were found, school attendance, tax rate, amount of money spent for tuition and contingent purposes, amount of money received from the state, and a general statement regarding the progress of the schools in each district.'
> "He further states that prosecuting attorneys in different parts of the state have ruled that the county school boards have authority to make such a report, to be paid for out of the public funds, and he asks the opinion of this office upon that question.
> "Our examination of the statutes leads us to the conclusion that county boards of education have no such authority, inasmuch as there is neither express provision to that effect, nor any provision from which such authority can be clearly inferred. In addition, the fact that the legislature has specifically authorized the publication of courses of study (see section 4737, General Code, as amended February 5, 1914; 104 O. L., 133, at 140), would seem to require the inference that no other publication was intended to be authorized.
> "In view of this apparent difference of opinion, and of the general importance of the question throughout the state, we respectfully request your opinion upon the question.
> "We understand that if the publication of this report is to be of value, it must be done within the very near future, and we shall therefore especially appreciate it if you can give us an early reply."

Under the provision of section 4728, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 136, the supervision and control of each county school district is vested in a county board of education composed of five members. The county board of education fund under the control of this board is created from the following sources:

(1) Under the provision of section 4744-3, 104 O. L., 143.

> "The county auditor when making his semi-annual apportionment of the school funds to the various village and rural school districts shall retain the amounts necessary to pay such portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents as may be certified by the county board. Such amount shall be placed in a separate fund to be known as the 'county board of education fund.' The county board of education shall certify under oath to the state auditor the amount due from the state as its share of the salaries of the county and district superintendents of such county school district for the next six months. Upon receipt by the state auditor of such certificate, he shall draw his warrant upon the state treasurer in favor of the county treasurer for the required amount, which shall be placed by the county auditor in the county board of education fund."

(2) The surplus transferable from the dog tax fund under section 5653, G. C., 104 O. L., 145; said surplus to be transferred to the county board of education fund at the direction of the county commissioners.

(3) Under the provision of section 7820, G. C., 104 O. L., 104, all fees collected by the clerk of the board of county school examiners from applicants for examination, are paid into the county treasury and set apart by the county auditor to the credit of the county board of education fund.

Out of this fund expenditures are expressly authorized as follows:

Section 4734, G. C., 104 O. L., 137, provides that:

"Each member of the county board of education shall be paid his actual and necessary expenses incurred during his attendance upon any meeting of the board. Such expenses, and the expenses of the county superintendent, itemized and verified shall be paid from the county board of education fund upon vouchers signed by the president of the board."

Section 4744-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 142, provides that the salary of the county superintendent shall be fixed by the county board and shall be paid out of the county board of education fund, and further provides that said board may allow said superintendent a sum not to exceed $300.00 per annum for traveling expenses and clerical help.

Section 4743, G. C., 104 O. L., 142, provides that the compensation of the district superintendent shall be paid out of the county board of education fund on vouchers signed by the president of the county board.

Section 7860, G. C., 104 O. L., 156, provides that the expense of conducting the county teachers' institute shall be paid out of the county board of education fund.

Under the provision of section 4744-6, G. C., 104 O. L., 143, the county commissioners are authorized and required to provide and furnish offices in the county seat for the use of the county superintendent. This statute does not by its terms provide the fund out of which the expenditure of money for this purpose shall be made, but inasmuch as the county commissioners are required to incur this expense, the same should be paid out of the general expense fund of the county.

On careful examination of the statutes governing the powers and duties of the county board of education and limiting the expenditure of public funds by said board, I fail to find any provision either requiring or authorizing said board to publish the report referred to in your inquiry or to expend money for this purpose. Inasmuch as there is no duty on the part of said board to publish such report, there can be no implied authority in such board to incur the expense incident to such publication.

As suggested by you, the fact that the legislature has specifically authorized the publication of courses of study by the county board of education under the provision of section 4737, G. C., 104 O. L., 140, in a measure at least justifies the inference that their authority in this respect is limited to the express provision of the statute.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that the county board of education is without authority in law to publish the report referred to in your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—HAVE IMPLIED AUTHORITY TO CLOSE PUBLIC HIGHWAY WHILE REPAIRS ARE BEING MADE—MUST PROVIDE OTHER RIGHT-OF-WAYS—AFTER SEPTEMBER 4, 1915, COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT HAS AUTHORITY TO CLOSE PUBLIC HIGHWAY.

In the present state of the law, township trustees have implied authority to close a public highway during the process of construction or repair carried on under their direction when such closing of the highway is necessary, provided they do not unreasonably interfere with the rights of persons desiring to use the highway. If there is no other convenient road available for the use of travelers, the trustees must provide a right-of-way for the use of persons desiring to travel on the highway to be closed. Section 170 of amended senate bill No. 125 which in the absence of a referendum will go into effect September 4, 1915, will confer express authority in this particular on the county highway superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1915.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 2, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I write to ask who, if any one, has the power to close a portion of an inter-county highway when same is being made into a stone road, under the authority of, and at the expense of township trustees.
> "I could find no express authority for this. I simply ask, therefore, whether or not in your opinion section 1226 could be so construed as to cover such a case."

Section 1226, G. C., to which you refer, provides for the closing of a highway whenever such action appears necessary to the state highway commissioner, provided the work is being done by the state highway department.

The first sentence of the section in question reads as follows:

> "If it shall appear necessary to the highway commissioner to close a highway or section thereof which is being constructed, improved or repaired under this act, in order to permit a proper completion of such work, he shall execute a certificate and file the same in the office of the county commissioners of the county in which such highway is situated."

By the use of the expression "under this act," the force of the authorization contained in this section is limited to improvements carried forward by the state highway department. It is true that under section 1197, G. C., it is provided that nothing in the chapter relating to the state highway commissioner shall be construed as preventing or forbidding the local authorities from constructing, maintaining or repairing any part of the inter-county highways or main market roads, provided, however, that the plans and specifications shall first have been submitted to the highway commissioner and shall have received his approval. It is evident that the township trustees in the case cited by you are proceeding under the permission given by section 1197, G. C., but neither the act containing section 1226, G. C., nor any part of the law relating to the state highway department provides any machinery by which trustees may improve a road; and the trustees must, therefore, proceed under some one of the several schemes for road improve ment provided for elsewhere in the General Code. It is, therefore, apparent that section 1226, G. C., has no application to the facts stated by you.

I find no place in the General Code any express provision authorizing township trustees to close a highway or any portion thereof during the process of construction or repair carried on by them. It is my opinion, that even in the absence of such express authorization, township trustees possess a certain limited authority in this particular.

Public officers have not only the powers expressly conferred upon them by law, but they also possess by necessary implication such powers as are requisite to enable them to discharge the official duties devolved upon them. 23 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 2nd Ed. p. 364.

Public officials have such powers as are expressly granted to them and also such powers as are necessarily implied from the powers expressly given. State ex rel. v. Commissioners, 8 N. P. (n. s.) 281, 20 O. D., 679.

While it is true that express grants of power to public officers are ususally subjected to a strict interpretation, yet such grants are to be construed as conferring not only the powers expressly granted, but also such powers as are necessarily implied. (Mechem on public offices and officers, section 511.)

It is therefore my opinion that while no express statutory authority exists in township trustees to close a road while the same is being improved by them, yet the power expressly given them to improve roads carries with it by necessary implication the power to close a road when such power is necessary in the exercise of the powers expressly granted. In other words, township trustees have implied authority to close a public highway during the process of construction or repair carried on under their direction when such closing of the highway is necessary, provided they exercise this authority in such a manner as not to unreasonably interfere with the rights of persons desiring to use the highway. In case the trustees exercise the power to close a highway during construction or repair work, and there is no other convenient road available for the use of travelers, it would be the duty of the trustees to provide a right-of-way for the use of persons desiring to travel on the highway to be closed. From the fact that this power of township trustees is implied rather than expressed, it also follows that the action of the trustees in this particular will be subject to a strict construction, and the power should therefore be exercised only in clear cases and where it is manifestly necessary that the highway be closed in order to allow the proper execution of the work under construction.

The above opinion is based on the present state of the law and I deem it proper in this connection to call your attention to amended senate bill No. 125, passed by the general assembly May 17, 1915, approved by the governor June 2, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5th. Unless there should be a referendum on this law, it will go into effect on September 4, 1915. Section 170 of the act in question which has been numbered section 7213 of the General

Code, will, when it goes into effect, apply to the situation presented by you, and will confer express authority in this particular upon the county highway superintendent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOSPITALS FOR INSANE—INQUEST OF LUNACY—NON-RESIDENT OF STATE—COSTS NOT RECOVERABLE—RULES OF ADMISSION OF NON-RESIDENTS APPLICABLE GENERALLY TO HOSPITALS FOR INSANE APPLY TO LONGVIEW HOSPITAL.

Costs made in an inquest of lunacy of a non-resident of the state may not be recovered by the county in which the inquest is held, or by the board of administration, or by the state in its own name, from the county of the foreign state in which the insane person has a legal residence.

The rules as to the admission of non-residents applicable generally to hospitals for the insane apply also to Longview hospital.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1915.

HON. W. E. HASWELL, Secretary Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—With your letter of May 27th you enclose a letter from Hon. Wm. H. Lueders, probate judge of Hamilton county, to which is attached a bill of costs made and paid by Hamilton county in the matter of one Verna Eads, an insane person, together with copy of a letter to the commonwealth attorney of Kenton county, Kentucky.

The question presented by the enclosures and submitted by you for my opinion is as to whether the costs made in an inquest of lunacy in the matter of a non-resident of Ohio can be recovered from the county of the foreign state of which the insane person is a legal resident.

I assume that the person referred to has been dealt with under the provisions of sections 1817 to 1820 of the General Code, amended in part in 103 O. L., 446.

These sections provide in effect that whenever application is made to a judge of the probate court for the commitment of a person to a hospital for the insane, the judge shall ascertain the legal residence of such person, and, if he finds that the person has not a legal residence in this state, and is of the opinion that the person should be committed or admitted to the institution, shall notify the Ohio board of administration, giving his reasons for requesting commitment.

Said sections further provide that the board of administration at any time upon investigation, either before or after the admission or commitment to an institution, may transport a person not having a legal residence in Ohio to his legal residence at the expense of this state.

Section 1950 of the General Code, as amended 103 O. L., 447, further enforces this policy by prohibiting the admission of any person who has not resided in the state one year next preceding the date of application, except by authority of the Ohio board of administration.

These provisions apply to Longview hospital (section 1947, G. C.).

The sections cited do not provide any different rule for the payment of costs made in inquests of lunacy, where the subject is a non-resident of the state or county, than obtains in a case where the subject is a resident. The costs in all cases are to be paid by the county. (Sections 1602, 1981, 1982 and 2031, of the General Code.)

Should it appear upon the hearing of an application for admission to any state hospital, including Longview hospital, that the subject of the inquest has not a legal residence in the county, but did have a legal residence elsewhere in the state, such finding would not have the effect of making the costs payable out of the treasury of the county in which the person had a legal residence, nor of giving to the county where the inquest was held, when such county has paid the costs, a claim against such other county for reimbursement. In other words, the expense of holding an inquest of lunacy is a county expense, regardless of the legal residence of the subject of the inquest and regardless of the outcome of the inquest itself.

This being the case, it follows that neither the state of Ohio nor Hamilton county has any claim against Kenton county, Kentucky, which is the county in which the person in whose case the costs in question were made legally resides.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

GOVERNOR—EFFECT OF VETO OF CERTAIN ITEMS OF AN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The inclusion by the governor in a message vetoing certain items of an appropriation bill of the general introductory language of one of the sections of that bill will be deemed to have been made solely for the purpose of identifying the succeeding items therein mentioned. Such inclusion has no effect whatever upon the status of such general language.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 11, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 9th is as follows:

> "In the veto of the governor to the general appropriation act of the general assembly we find the following item:
> "'Section 3. The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917.'
> "As we are now setting up the appropriations in our books, and are uncertain as to the meaning of this item of veto, will you kindly render us an opinion as to its meaning and what operation it has?"

I have before me a copy of the message of the governor disapproving certain items in house bill No. 701, and quote therefrom enough thereof to show how your question arises:

> "TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY:
> "* * * * * *
> "The items disapproved are as follows:
>
> "Exceptions
> "1. * * * * * *
> "8. OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.
> "G—Additions and Betterments—
> "G—1 Lands—
> "75 acres Hess tract, Clinton township.....$55,000.00
> "12 acres (more or less).....5,000.00
> "Section 3. The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917.
> "9. OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION
> "Columbus State Hospital—
> "Two cottages to complete, $70,000.00; to be reduced to one cottage to complete $35,000.00
> "* * * * * *
> "Excepting the foregoing items hereby disapproved, house bill No. 701 is filed herewith in the office of the secretary of state with my approval."

As you know, the detailed items of appropriation in house bill No. 701 are provided for in two sections of the bill. Section 2 provides that

"The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

Then follow the items appropriated, subject to the general provisions of this introductory clause.

Section 3, the introductory clause of which has been quoted, is of similar purport, except as to the dates mentioned therein.

It is clear to me that the only reason for the mention or inclusion in the veto message of the general provisions of section 3 was to show that the items mentioned in the message following section 3 were items in section 3, and not items in section 2, and so as to show further that the items preceding section 3 were items appropriated in section 2 of house bill No. 701.

I may add that the authority of the governor under the constitution is limited to disapproval of items of an appropriation bill. He may not veto sections, or parts of sections, as such. This being the case, his message would not be, of course, susceptible to such an interpretation as would make it appear that he had attempted to exceed his authority, when any other reasonable interpretation could be given to it.

I therefore advise that the inclusion of the general language of section 3 in the governor's veto message, in the manner above referred to, is immaterial and without any effect whatsoever, save as showing that the items grouped in the message under the numbers "9" to "14," inclusive, are items found in section 3 of house bill No. 701. It seems to me that the governor has chosen the most convenient and certain method of designating the items disapproved by him by quoting the general clause of section 3.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT —RICHLAND AND ERIE COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 10, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Mansfield-Galion, Sec. "L," Richland county, petition No. 1138, I. C. H. No. 202;

Cleveland-Sandusky, Erie county, petition No. 1125, I. C. H. No. 3.

I find these resolutions in regular form and am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

In approving the resolution as to the Mansfield-Galion road, I am not to be taken as in any way passing upon the regularity or legality of a certain resolution of the board of trustees of Madison township, Richland county, attached to the resolution adopted by the commissioners of Richland county, my approval extending only to the resolution adopted by the commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOATS AND WATERCRAFTS UPON OHIO RIVER BORDERING STATE OF OHIO—MUST PAY LICENSES—AMENABLE TO SECTION 6324, G. C.

The provisions of section 6324, G. C., are applicable to boats and watercrafts upon the waters of the Ohio river bordering the state of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours under date of June 9, 1915, as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
>
> "Do the provisions of section 6324, General Code, apply to boats or watercrafts on the Ohio river?
> "The reason we ask this question is that we are informed that police officers in the city of Cincinnati are arresting persons living in house boats on the Ohio river for failure to disclose licenses as provided by this section, and the probate judge of Hamilton county has requested our examiner to secure your written opinion upon this matter."

Section 6324, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "A person shall not live in or occupy a boat or watercraft as a place of residence or abode, or for the purpose of engaging in business, trade or traffic on a navigable water or its tributaries within the jurisdiction of this state until there has been granted to such person, by the probate court of the county in which such boat or watercraft shall lie or ply, a license to so live in or occupy such boat or watercraft."

Your question then resolves itself into whether or not a boat or watercraft upon the Ohio river opposite the state of Ohio, is within the jurisdiction of this state within the terms of the statute above quoted.

While this is not a criminal statute, it is clearly a police regulation. Section 3620, G. C., is a statute of similar character, which requires that the owner or keeper of a wharf boat on the Ohio river shall keep it open at all hours for the accommodation of the traveling public and for receiving and discharging freight.

Section 5947, G. C., prohibits the keeping of a ferry across a stream bounding on a county in this state without having obtained a license therefor. Thus the legislative policy of the state to assert jurisdiction over that part of the Ohio river flowing along the border of the state is made manifest. Such jurisdiction is sustained in the case of State v. Savors, 15 C. C. (n. s.) 65, in which it is held that the state of Ohio has jurisdiction over criminal offenses committed upon the Ohio river opposite the boundary of the state of Ohio. Also in the case of State v. Kendle, 8 N. P. (n. s.) 109. These were cases of prosecution for the selling of intoxicating liquors upon the Ohio river opposite "dry territory" in Ohio. That is to say, violations of the criminal statutes of the state of Ohio, committed beyond or without the low water mark of the Ohio river, bordering this state on the western or northwestern side thereof.

The civil jurisdiction of this state over the Ohio river along its borders is as fully sustained by both reason and authority as is the criminal jurisdiction.

The decision of the court in the case of State v. Savors, supra, was based largely upon that of Wedding v. Meyler, 192 U. S., 580; 48 L. Ed., 570, in the opinion of which case Holmes, J., says:

> "In 1789 the state of Virginia passed a statute known as the Virginia compact. This statute proposed the erection of the district of Kentucky into an independent state upon certain conditions. One of these was: Sec. 11. 'Seventh, that the use and navigation of the river Ohio, so far as the territory of the proposed state, or the territory which shall remain within the limits of this commonwealth, lies thereon, shall be free and common to the citizens of the United States, and the respective jurisdictions of this commonwealth and of the proposed state on the river as aforesaid shall be concurrent only with the states which may possess the opposite shores of the said river.' 13 Hening, St. at L. 17. (The previous cession by Virginia of its rights in the territory northwest of the Ohio had been on condition that the territory so ceded should be laid out and formed into states. Act of December 20, 1783, 11 Hening, Stat. at L. 326). The act of congress of February 4, 1791, Chap. 4 (1 Stat. at L. 189) consents and enacts that the 'district of Kentucky, within the jurisdiction of the said commonwealth' of Virginia, shall be formed into a new state, and admitted into the Union. As a preliminary it recites the consent of the Virginia legislature by the above act of 1789.
> "Under article 4, section 3, of the constitution, a new state could not be formed in this way within the jurisdiction of Virginia, within which Kentucky was recognized as being by the words last quoted, without the consent of the legislature of Virginia as well as of congress. The need of such consent also was recognized by the recital in the act of congress. But as the consent given by Virginia was conditioned upon the jurisdiction of Kentucky on the Ohio river being concurrent only with the states to be formed on the other side, congress necessarily assented to and adopted this condition when it assented to the act in which it was contained. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 87, 5 L. ed. 547, 569. Thus, after the passage of the two acts, it stood absolutely enacted by the powers which between them had absolute sovereignty over all the territory concerned, that when states should be formed on the opposite shores of the river they should have concurrent jurisdiction on the river with Kentucky. 'This compact, by the sanction of congress, has become a law of the Union. What further legislation can be desired for judicial action?' Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 566, 14 L. ed. 249, 269."

Thus it is clearly settled that the state of Ohio has both civil and criminal jurisdiction over the waters of the Ohio river beyond the territorial limits of the state of Ohio, technically speaking, to wit, the western or northwestern low water mark of said river. Jurisdiction in this sense is unqualified and such jurisdiction is defined by Chief Justice Robertson in Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana, 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669, 673, as follows:

> "Jurisdiction, unqualified, being, as it is, the sovereign authority to make, decide on, and execute laws, a concurrence of jurisdiction, therefore, must entitle Indiana to as much power—legislative, judicial and executive—as that possessed by Kentucky over so much of the Ohio river as flows between them."

It will be observed from the decision in the case of Wedding v. Meyler, supra, that Ohio stands in the same light in respect to jurisdiction over the Ohio river as does Indiana, and that by virtue of the Virginia compact, Ohio has full jurisdiction and authority to administer its law below low water mark on the Ohio river.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your question, that the provisions of section 6324, G. C., referred to, are applicable to boats and watercrafts on the Ohio river bordering on the state of Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—NO AUTHORITY TO CREATE NEW SCHOOL DISTRICT WITHIN SUCH COUNTY DISTRICT FROM ONE OR MORE EXISTING DISTRICTS OR PARTS—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 4736, G. C., 104 O. L., 138.

The board of education of a county school district has no authority under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 138, or under any other statute now in force, to create a new school district within such county district from one or more existing districts or parts thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1915.

HON. HAROLD W. HOUSTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 2, 1915, which is as follows:

"I desire the opinion of your department on the following questions:

"1. Did a county board of education, during the month of May, 1915, have the authority, under section 4736, G. C., or any other law, to create a rural school district?

"2. If your answer to the above question is in the affirmative, would members of the board of education who, by the creation of a new district, would become non-residents of the original district, from which the new district was created, thereby lose their membership in such original board of education?

"These questions are, I believe, cleared up in the new school law, but, as indicated above, this situation developed under the law as it stood prior to the enactment of the present law, which will soon go into effect."

Section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, provides in part as follows:

"Sec. 4736. The county board of education shall as soon as possible after organizing make a survey of its district. The board shall arrange the schools according to topography and population in order that they may be most easily accessible to pupils. To this end the county board shall have power by resolution at any regular or special meeting to change school district lines and transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another. A map designating such changes shall be entered on the records of the board and a copy of the resolution and map shall be filed with the county auditor. In changing boundary lines the board may proceed without regard to township lines and shall provide that adjoining rural districts are as nearly equal as possible in property valuation. In no case shall any rural district be created containing less than frfteen square miles."

This section has been amended by amended senate bill No. 282, as passed by the general assembly, approved by the governor and filed in the office of the scretary of state May 27, 1915, so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 4736. The county board of education shall arrange the school districts according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to pupils and shall file with the board or boards of education in the territory affected, a written notice of such proposed arrangement; which said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed, unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education, a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of school districts so proposed. The county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof. The county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district and direct an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness belonging to the newly created district. Members of the boards of education of the newly created district shall thereafter be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the boards of education of the village and rural districts."

Section 4736, G. C., has been supplemented by sections 1 and 2 of amended senate bill No. 267, passed by the general assembly May 27th, approved by the governor June 4th and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915. These sections provide as follows:

"Section 1. In rural school districts hereafter created by a county board of education, a board of education shall be elected as provided in section 4712 of the General Code. When rural school districts hereafter so created, or which have been heretofore so created, fail or have failed to elect a board of education as provided in said section 4712, or whenever there exists such school district which for any reason or cause is not provided with a board of education, the commissioners of the county to which such district belongs shall appoint such board of education, and the members so appointed shall serve until their successors are elected and qualified. The successors of the members so appointed shall be elected at the first election for members of the board of education held in such district after such appointment, two members to serve for two years and three members for four years. And thereafter their successors shall be elected in the manner and for the term as provided by section 4712 of the General Code. The board so appointed by the commissioners of the county shall organize on the second Monday after their appointment.

"Section 2. All appointments of a board of education for such rural school district heretofore made by the commissioners of the county to which such rural school district belongs shall be held to be legal, valid and binding upon such rural school district, and to give such appointed boards the same authority as have other rural school district boards. All proceedings, otherwise legal under the laws applicable to rural school boards, heretofore or hereafter had by such boards so appointed shall be held legal, valid and binding upon such school districts. The bonds heretofore, or hereafter, issued and sold by any such rural school district having a board of education heretofore, or hereafter, appointed by the commissioners of the county to which such district belongs, shall not be declared to be invalid by reason of any want of authority of such board of education of such district to provide for the issuing and sale of such bonds, but, if regularly issued for a lawful purpose and sold for not less than par and accrued interest such bonds shall be held to be legal, valid and binding obligations of such district issuing the same."

It will be observed that the legislature, in amending section 4736, G. C., by amended senate bill No. 282, and in supplementing said section by amended senate bill No. 267, clearly authorizes the county board of education to create a new school district from one or more existing school districts or parts thereof, and makes ample provision for the appointment of members of the board of education for such new school district until such time as the members of said board may be regularly elected, so that, after said bills become effective, the authority of the county board of education in this respect will not be questioned.

However, amended senate bill No. 282 will not become effective until August 26, 1915, and amended senate bill No. 267 will not become effective until September 4, 1915.

The answer to your first question must be determined by reference to the provisions of the statutes as now in force, the authority of the county board of education to change school district lines and to transfer territory being limited to the above provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138.

It will be observed that under the provisions of the said statute the county board of education has power "to change school district lines and transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another." This does not mean that a county board of education, in transferring territory from one district to another, can dissolve an existing rural or village school district. The power to dissolve a rural district and join it to a contiguous rural or village school district is governed by the provisions of sections 4735-1 and 4735-2 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., 138.

The procedure governing the dissolution of a village school district containing a population of less than fifteen hundred is governed by the provisions of section 4682-1 of the General Code, as found in 104, O. L., 133.

On the other hand, I do not understand that the county board, under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as now in force, can, by transferring territory, create a new district from one or more existing school districts or parts thereof.

The power of the county board of education under this statute must be strictly construed and is limited to transferring territory "from one rural or village school district to another." The provision: "In no case shall a rural district be created containing less than fifteen square miles," is not a grant of power to the county board to form new school districts from existing districts or parts thereof. On the contrary, I am of the opinion that said provision is a limitation on said board to the extent that in changing district lines and transferring territory from one district to another, no school district shall, as a result of such action, contain less than fifteen square miles.

Under section 4736, G. C., as now in force, no provision is made for the appointment or election of members of the board of education for a new school district, while, as before stated, said section as amended by amended senate bill No. 282 and supplemented by amended senate bill No. 267, expressly provides for such appointment and election. This strengthens the contention that the legislature, in amending said section in 104 O. L., 138, did not vest the county board of education with power to create a new school district.

Replying to your first question: I am of the opinion that the board of education of the county school district has no authority under the provisions of section 4736, as amended in 104 O. L., 138, or under any other statute now in force, to create a new school district within such county district from one or more existing districts or parts thereof.

This answer to your first question disposes of your second question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

POLICE AND FIRE DEPARTMENTS OF A CITY—REMOVAL OR RETIREMENT FROM OFFICE—FAILURE TO APPEAL TO CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION WITHIN THE TIME REQUIRED BY STATUTE CONSTITUTES FORFEITURE OF OFFICE.

A member of the police or fire department of a city who, upon removal or retirement, fails to appeal to the civil service commission of the city within ten days thereafter, as provided by section 4505, G. C., forfeits any right he may have had to reinstatement in his former position by action of the civil service commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1915.

State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a request for an opinion involving an interpretation of the state civil service law from the city solicitor of Toledo. The question is one of general interest to all municipalities of the state, and I take the liberty therefore of directing to the commission an answer to the solicitor's question.

The city solicitor encloses correspondence disclosing the following situation:

A member of the fire department of the city of Toledo was, without his application or consent, retired on pension under a rule of the trustees of the firemen's pension fund adopted shortly prior to his retirement, and by the action of the director of public safety.

He did not appeal within ten days thereafter to the civil service commission, as provided by section 4505, General Code, but after repeatedly requesting and demanding of the director of public safety that he be permitted to perform the duties of his former position, he applied to the civil service commission about six months after his retirement for reinstatement, on the ground that he was illegally removed from the service of the city.

> "May the civil service commission act in the premises, or is the failure of the applicant to appeal within ten days sufficient of itself to deprive it of authority so to act?

Section 4505, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 4505. Any person in the police or fire department who is suspended, reduced in rank or dismissed from the department by the director of public safety may appeal from the decision of such officer to the civil service commission within ten days from and after the date of such suspension, reduction or dismissal, in which event said director shall, upon notice from the commission of such appeal, forthwith transmit to the commission a copy of the charges and proceedings thereunder, and the commission shall hear such appeal within ten days from and after the filing of the same with it, and may affirm, disaffirm or modify the judgment of the director of public safety, and its judgment in the matter shall be final. The commission, in all hearings or appeals before it, shall have the same powers to administer oaths and to secure the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers as are conferred in this chapter upon the mayor."

This section was not replaced when the state civil service law was passed (103 O. L., 698), although it was mentioned in the title of the act.

My predecessor advised the commission to this effect in December, 1913 (annual report of the attorney general for that year, page 742; pamphlet "opinions of the attorney general of Ohio with reference to the civil service law of Ohio," page 37); and on May 23, 1914, my predecessor advised further that there was nothing inconsistent between the general provisions of the civil service law and section 4505 of the General Code; so that the latter is not to be regarded as having been repealed by implication when the former was enacted.

In these opinions I concur, particularly in view of the fact that section 4505 of the General Code is mentioned in section 31 of the civil service act (section 486-31, General Code); so that the legislature's failure to repeal it in the repealing clause cannot be regarded as accidental; and so that further the intention of the legislature, as gathered from the whole civil service law of 1913, was evidently that section 4505, G. C., should continue to be substantially, as well as technically, in effect as against any claim that might be asserted respecting its conflict with any provision of the civil service act.

This section of the General Code gives to persons in the police or fire department a higher degree of protection than that which is accorded by the general provisions of the civil service act to persons in other departments of the classified service of a city. The latter may be dismissed at any time for sufficient cause without the protection of an appeal to the civil service commission (section 486-17, G. C., 103 O. L., 707), and I am unable to find in the civil service act any express or implied authority on the part of a municipal civil service commission to compel the reinstatement of a person in the classified service who has been discharged or removed.

However, the effect of the general provisions of the civil service act in the specific case which has been submitted to me is neither material on the one hand, nor are sufficient facts on which to base a statement as to whether such general provisions (should they be deemed to apply) have been complied with furnished, as it does not appear whether or not the director of public safety has furnished to the member of the fire department who was removed "his reasons for the same" and otherwise complied with section 486-17, G. C., above cited.

I am clearly of the opinion, however, that a member of the police or fire department, entitled as he is to the benefits of section 4505 of the General Code, must accept also the burdens thereof; and if he fails to avail himself of the privilege therein given to him of appealing to the civil service commission, (which in the event of such appeal and upon being satisfied that his removal was not legal, could have ordered his reinstatement) he forfeits all right to such reinstatement; and that the civil service commission of a city, not having been appealed to, as provided in section 4505, G. C., is without authority to order his reinstatement as such.

If the local civil service commission is of the opinion that the power of removal has been abused, or that the provisions of the civil service act have been violated (which I am unable to determine as a matter of law), the commission may make an investigation and a report thereof to the mayor, who, if the case warrants, may take such action as he is authorized to take under section 496-22 of the General Code (103 O. L., 710. This, however, is as far, in my opinion, as the local civil service commission is authorized to go under any circumstances in the particular case which I have considered.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL AT NEW LYME, OHIO—BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—DUTY AS PROVIDED IN HOUSE BILL NO. 413 NOT MANDATORY.

House bill No. 413, providing for the establishment of an agricultural school at New Lyme, Ohio, Ashtabula county, and authorizing the board of trustees of Ohio State University to conduct the same and to receive and control certain property, does not impose upon the trustees of the Ohio State University the mandatory duty of taking possession of the property or operating and conducting the school; so that in the absence of any appropriation available to such trustees for such purpose, and if the funds of the existing institution proposed to be taken over by the state are not sufficient to enable the trustees to conduct said school, they may and should decline to accept the property thereof and otherwise to act under said bill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1915.

HON. W. O. THOMPSON, President Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 8th, requesting my advice upon the following question:

On May 14, 1915, the general assembly passed house bill No. 413, which was approved by the governor on May 26, 1915, and by him filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 27, 1915. The law thus enacted is in full as follows:

"AN ACT.

"To create and establish a state agricultural school at New Lyme, Ashtabula county, Ohio, and to authorize the board of trustees of the Ohio State University to receive and control certain property for the use and benefit of said school.

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:

"Section 1. There is hereby created and established a state agricultural school to be located at New Lyme, in the county of Ashtabula, to be connected with the Ohio State University, and under the supervision and control of the board of trustees of said university.

"Section 2. Said board of trustees may receive and hold in trust for the special use and benefit of said state agricultural school, any grant, gift, or bequest of land or personal property, and also the lands, moneys, notes, mortgages and other personal property now held in trust for educational purposes by the board of trustees of New Lyme Institute located at New Lyme in the county of Ashtabula.

"Section 3. The board of trustees of the Ohio State University, in connection with the faculty thereof, shall provide for teaching in said school during a period of at least eight months in each year, such branches of learning as are related to agriculture, the mechanic arts, home economics and such other scientific and classic studies as will prepare students for efficient citizenship, for vocational and industrial pursuits, and for admission to colleges and universities."

In the so-called "sundry appropriation bill," the general assembly made specific appropriations for the equipment of the school thus provided for and for teaching therein. The governor vetoed these appropriations.

"Is it the mandatory duty of the trustees of the university to act under house bill No. 413, or may they decline to take over the property of the school and operate it as provided in that act?"

The fact that the general assembly made specific appropriations for the equipment of and teaching in the proposed New Lyme agricultural school, together with the fact that the appropriations in house bill No. 701 (the general appropriation bill) are made for the Ohio State University, as such, establish the conclusion, in my mind, that the general appropriations for the university are not available for the purposes for which the vetoed appropriations would have been available. That is to say, although the board of trustees, in connection with the faculty of the Ohio State University, are to maintain and operate the New Lyme agricultural school under house bill No. 413, yet as an institution it is separate and apart from the Ohio State University, and an appropriation for the uses and purposes of the Ohio State University is not available for expenditure in connection with the New Lyme state agricultural school.

It is to be observed in this connection that a separate appropriation is made by the general appropriation bill for agricultural extension, which is a work carried on under the supervision of the trustees of the Ohio State University by members of the faculty thereof.

These facts, in connection with the fact that separate appropriations were actually made for the New Lyme school, produce the conclusion which I have expressed.

It appears on the face of house bill No. 413 that what is at present "New Lyme Institute" is an educational trust. Its property and endowments are private property devoted to a public use. The legislature does not possess the power to deprive the present trustees of their property without their consent. The act, therefore, cannot go into operation unless the trustees of New Lyme Institute are willing to transfer to the board of trustees of the Ohio State University the lands, moneys, notes, mortgages and other personal property held by them in trust for educational purposes.

Moreover, if the trustees, being without funds of the state for the maintenance of the school, are unable to operate it by the use of the income from its endowments and tuitions, etc., the taking over by the trustees of the university of the property and assets of the institute would result in a breach of trust.

Indeed some question exists as to whether or not section 24 of the General

Code would apply to the trustees in conducting the school of New Lyme and require that all income, except so much of the tuitions as might be necessary to make refunds incident to conducting the school, be paid as received weekly into the state treasury.

There is also some question as to whether or not endowment funds which the trustees are authorized to receive would not have to be paid into the state treasury and become a part of the irreducible debt of the state; although without exhaustive examination of these two questions, I am inclined to think that both of them would be answered in the negative.

It is my opinion, however, that the effect of house bill No. 413 is to create and establish the state school when, and only when, the trustees of New Lyme Institute are willing to transfer the property now held by them in trust for educational purposes to the trustees of the university; and I am further of the opinion that even if the trustees of New Lyme Institute should profess to be willing to transfer the property to the trustees of the university, the latter would not be obliged to accept the same until satisfied that they are in a position to carry out the terms of the trust. So that if the fact that there is no appropriation available for the equipment and conducting of this school would disable the trustees of the university from conducting the school, they should, in my opinion, refuse to accept the property.

The foregoing comments relate to the acceptance by the trustees of the Ohio State University of the property now held in trust by the trustees of New Lyme Institute. Of course, the duty to maintain the school and to provide for the teaching of the branches specified in section 3 of the act therein is contingent upon the acceptance of the property, and contingent further upon the making of an appropriation, if such appropriation is necessary.

Though a statute may command a state officer, in mandatory terms, to perform an act involving the expenditure of public money, he cannot be compelled to perform it if the necessary funds are not provided by appropriation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS—SHARES OF STOCK NOT SUBJECT TO STATE OR LOCAL TAXATION.

Shares of stock in federal reserve banks are not subject to state or local taxation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—A question has been raised as to the taxability of shares of stock in federal reserve banks, and, in compliance with the request of Mr. McGiffert, I am addressing an opinion to the commission respecting the same.

The act of congress approved December 23, 1913, provides, in section 2 thereof, for the organization in certain federal reserve cities, to be designated, of "federal reserve banks." Within thirty days after notice from the organization committee, every national banking association within each district is required to subscribe to the capital stock of such federal reserve bank, and, under certain conditions, individuals, partnerships and corporations, other than national banks, may subscribe to such capital stock, without, however, acquiring by the issuance of such stock any voting power.

Without alluding further to the provisions of the federal reserve act, I may observe that the foregoing features thereof make it apparent that federal reserve banks are in no sense "national banking associations," within the meaning of the section of the Revised Statutes of the United States permitting the states to tax shares of stock of such national banking associations. (Section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.)

This of itself would produce the result that all the property belonging to a federal reserve bank, and any interests therein, would be exempt from taxation by or under authority of any state.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat., 316.
Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat., 738.

However, section 7 of the federal act contains specific provision respecting the subject of taxation of federal reserve banks and the interest therein by the states, as follows:

> "Federal reserve banks, including the capital stock and surplus therein, and the income derived therefrom, shall be exempt from federal, state and local taxation, except taxes on real estate."

It is, therefore, my advice to the commission that shares of stock in a federal reserve bank, whether owned by member banks or by any individual firm or partnership, are exempt from state and local taxation, and that the only property belonging to or pertaining to federal reserve banks which is subject to state and local taxation is the real estate thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—TERMS OF PRESENT MEMBERS NOT AFFECTED BY RECENT AMENDMENT TO DENTAL LAWS—AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 84.

Neither the terms of the present members of the state dental board nor the incumbents at the time amended senate bill No. 84 becomes effective, will be affected by reason of the amendment of section 1314, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1915.

The Ohio State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of May 22, 1915, in reference to amended senate bill No. 84, passed May 7, 1915, in which you request an opinion upon the following questions:

> "First. Will section 1314 of the new law depose the whole board, or the three members of the old board not appointed by the present governor?

"Second. Will the recently confirmed members have to be reappointed and sworn in again, or will this only apply to the three members of the old board not appointed by the present governor, or does it affect the board at all?"

Section 1314, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 84, passed May 7, 1915, and approved by the governor May 17, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 19, 1915, provides as follows:

"Section 1314. The governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint a state dental board consisting of five persons each of whom shall be a graduate of a reputable dental college and shall have been in the legal and reputable practice of dentistry in the state at least five years next preceding his appointment. One member shall be appointed each year as the respective terms of the present incumbents expire, and shall serve for the term of five years and until his successor is appointed and qualified. No person so appointed shall be an officer of a dental college or a member of the faculty thereof, or serve to exceed two terms."

It will first be observed that amended senate bill No. 84 is not an emergency law as defined in section 1d of article II of the constitution, and is therefore subject to the provisions of section 1c, article II of the constitution, and by reason thereof will not go into effect until ninety days after it was filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state.

Since amended senate bill No. 84 does not take effect until the expiration of ninety days or until approved by the majority of those voting on the same if a referendum is had thereon, the repealing clause thereof is accordingly postponed and the original section will continue to be operative until that time.

McArthur v. Franklin, 16 O. S., 193.

A comparison of the amended section with original section 1314 will disclose that the only change in phraseology made by the amendment is the insertion of the phrase "shall be a graduate of a reputable dental college and" after "whom," and the words "and reputable" after "legal" in the first sentence of the original section, and the phrase "as the respective terms of the present incumbents expire," after the word "year" in the second sentence of said amended section.

In 36 Cyc. 1084, it is said:

"The repeal and simultaneous re-enactment of substantially the same statutory provisions is to be construed not as an implied repeal of the original statute, but as a continuation thereof."

From this it would appear that any change in meaning of amended section 1314, G. C., must be derived from the variation of its phraseology, from the difference in its terms, and unless some substantially different provision governing the appointment of the members of the state dental board is found, the provisions of the original section relative thereto will be deemed to continue. It would not be seriously contended that either of the first two changes in terminology found in the amended section, would affect the appointments of members of the board appointed and qualified prior to the taking effect thereof.

The third and last change noted is the provision that one member shall be appointed each year, "as the respective terms of the present incumbents expire."

It is believed that this language clears away any ambiguity that might have otherwise arisen from the substantial re-enactment of original section 1314, G. C. To my mind the manifest purpose of this phrase was to make it clear that the appointments referred to in the amended section were to be made only at the expiration of the terms of the "present incumbents." When this law becomes effective, it will speak from the date of its going into effect and the phrase "present incumbents" will mean those persons who are duly appointed, qualified and acting members of the board of that date.

I am, therefore, of opinion, in answer to your inquiries collectively, that if amended senate bill No. 84 goes into effect, neither the terms of the present members nor the terms of the then incumbents will be affected by reason of the amendment of section 1314, G. C., therein enacted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MEMBERS OF COUNCIL—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION FOR SPECIAL MEETINGS AND ADJOURNED MEETINGS WHEN HELD ON DIFFERENT DAYS.

Members of council are entitled to compensation for special meetings when held on different days.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—On June 3, 1915, you requested my opinion upon the following question:

> "Are members of village councils entitled to receive two dollars for attending an adjourned session of a regular or special meeting of council? The question is, whether the word 'meeting' in section 4219, General Code, permits a charge for regular and special meetings only, or does it include adjourned sessions of such meetings?"

Section 4219 of the General Code fixes the compensation of members of a village council as follows:

> "* * * Members of council may receive as compensation the sum of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year."

There is nothing in the above provision to indicate whether the legislature intended any particular kind of meeting as the one for which a member of council should receive compensation. There are, of course, regular meetings, special meetings and what are termed adjourned meetings; that is to say, meetings which are held upon adjournment to a fixed day from a former meeting, either special or general.

In view of the fact that the legislature did not indicate any particular kind of meeting, and the fact that the total sum to be received during any one year is limited, I am of the opinion that the word "meeting," as used in the General Code, permits a charge not only for regular and special meetings, but would also include adjourned meetings, on different days.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF PETITION FOR REFERENDUM OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 72—WEIGHING OF COAL AT THE MINES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1915.

HON. GEORGE B. OKEY, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for my certificate a petition for referendum, the synopsis of which reads as follows:

> "The act, known as amended senate bill No. 72 (the Gallagher act), was passed May 15, 1915, approved May 26, 1915, and amends sections 978-1, 978-2, 978-3 and 978-6 of the General Code of Ohio, relating to the weighing of coal at the mines."

I hereby certify that the foregoing synopsis is a truthful statement regarding the above entitled law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MAYOR—NO JURISDICTION AGAINST MINOR—MUST TRANSFER CASE TO JUVENILE COURT—FEES FOLLOW CASE—HOW PAID.

A mayor has no jurisdiction to dispose of a case against a minor under eighteen years of age other than to transfer the case to the juvenile judge. Fees and costs originally made, are to follow the case for allowance and payment under section 1682, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is in receipt of a request for an opinion from Mr. Fred S. Scott, city solicitor of Nelsonville, which request is made by him at the instance of Nathan Hill, mayor of the city of Nelsonville, and is as follows:

> "Have the police officers of our city authority to make arrests and bring before me as such mayor, minors under the age of eighteen years for the violation of laws of the state of Ohio and city ordinances, and have I, as such mayor, authority under section 1659, of the General Code of Ohio, to certify such minor defendants to and before the probate judge, acting in the capacity of juvenile judge of Athens county, Ohio?

"Will costs created in the bringing of such minor defendants before me as such mayor for the violation of state laws follow the case upon certification by me as such mayor to said probate judge?

"(Change from 1659, G. C., to 103 O. L., 874, 17 to 18 years.)

"Sec. 1659, 103 O. L., 874, Ohio Laws. 'When a minor under the age of eighteen years is arrested, such child, instead of being taken before a justice of the peace or police judge, shall be taken directly before such juvenile judge, or, if the child is taken before a justice of the peace or a judge of the police court, it shall be the duty of such justice of the peace or such judge of the police court, to transfer the case to the judge exercising the jurisdiction therein provided.'

"This section seems to divest justices of the peace and police judges of jurisdiction to hear complaints against minors under eighteen years of age. It is to be observed that the mayor is not included in this section, and it does not expressly apply to his court according to said section.

"Sec. 4534, 102 O. L., page 476. 'In felonies and other criminal proceedings not herein provided for, such mayor shall have jurisdiction and power, throughout the county, concurrent with justices of the peace, * * *'

"Lately it has been the practice of the probate judge of Athens county, acting in the capacity of juvenile judge to disregard certifications of cases where minors under the age of eighteen years have been brought before the mayor of the city of Nelsonville, Ohio, for the violation of state laws and requiring complainants to file an additional affidavit before him as such juvenile judge, allowing officers of the city of Nelsonville no fees for making original arrests or expenses incurred.

"I would be pleased to have an opinion as to whether or not mayors have power under section 1659 by reason of section 4534 to certify minor defendants under the age of eighteen years to and before the juvenile judge, and if there is any provision as to cost incurred in mayors' courts."

Section 1659, of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 874, is as follows:

"When a minor under the age of eighteen years is arrested, such child, instead of being taken before a justice of the peace or police judge, shall be taken directly before such juvenile judge; or, if the child is taken before a justice of the peace or a judge of the police court, it shall be the duty of such justice of the peace or such judge of the police court, to transfer the case to the judge exercising the jurisdiction herein provided. The officers having such child in charge shall take it before such judge, who shall proceed to hear and dispose of the case in the same manner as if the child had been brought before the judge in the first instance."

Under the provisions of section 1639 of the juvenile court law:

"Courts of common pleas, probate courts and insolvency courts and superior courts, where established, shall have and exercise, concurrently, the powers and jurisdiction conferred in this chapter. * * *"

It is further provided that:

"Judges of such courts * * * at such times as they determine, shall designate one of their number to transact the business arising under such jurisdiction. * * *"

When such a designation has been made, all cases of violation of the law involving minors under the age of eighteen years are within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, at least in the first instance, subject to the transfer of jurisdiction by the juvenile judge, as provided for in section 1681, of the General Code, which is as follows:

"When any information or complaint shall be filed against a delinquent child under these provisions, charging him with a felony, the judge may order such child to enter into a recognizance, with good and sufficient surety, in such amount as he deems reasonable, for his appearance before the court of common pleas at the next term thereof. The same proceeding shall be had thereafter upon such complaint as now authorized by law for the indictment, trial, judgment and sentence of any other person charged with a felony."

Section 1682, of the General Code, is as follows:

"Fees and costs in all such cases with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court."

While there is no provision of law authorizing mayors to certify minor defendants under the age of eighteen years to and before the juvenile court under the provisions of section 1659 of the General Code, quoted above, it is provided that when a minor under the age of eighteen years is arrested, if taken before a justice of the peace or police judge such police judge or justice of the peace shall transfer the case to the judge exercising jurisdiction as juvenile judge, and it is expressly made the duty of the officer having such minor in charge to take the minor before the juvenile judge, who shall proceed to hear and dispose of the case in the same manner as if the child had been brought before him in the first instance.

Section 4534, of the General Code, is as follows:

"In felonies, and other criminal proceedings not herein provided for, such mayor shall have the jurisdiction and power, throughout the county, concurrent with justices of the peace. The chief of police shall execute and return all writs and process to him directed by the mayor, and shall by himself or deputy attend on the sittings of such court, to execute the orders and process thereof and to preserve order therein, and his jurisdiction and that of his deputies in the execution of such writs and process, and in criminal cases, and in cases of violations of ordinances of the corporation shall be co-extensive with the jurisdiction of the mayor therein. The fees of the mayor in all cases, excepting those arising out of violation of ordinances, shall be the same as those allowed justices of the peace for similar services, and the fees of the chief of police or his deputies in all cases, excepting those arising out of violations of ordinances shall be the same as those allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases."

It is my opinion, therefore, that under the provisions of section 1659, of the General Code, as amended and quoted above, the juvenile judge has exclusive jurisdiction to try and dispose of cases involving violations of law by minors under the age of eighteen years, subject to the exceptions made in section 1681, of the General Code; and that while a mayor has no jurisdiction to finally dispose of such a case he is, by the provisions of section 1659, of the General Code, authorized to transfer the case to the juvenile judge, it then becoming the duty of the officer having the minor in charge to take him before such juvenile judge.

Section 1659 of the General Code, quoted above does not specifically mention mayors; however, there can be no question but that it was the intention of the legislature to vest the jurisdiction over minors under the age of eighteen years in the juvenile court for final disposition, except when the charge involving such minor was a felony. Therefore a mayor has no jurisdiction to dispose of a juvenile case brought before him other than to transfer it to the juvenile judge of the county.

It is not necessary or requisite that a new affidavit be filed when such transfer is made, and the fees properly made in the first instance may be allowed and follow the case for payment under the provisions of section 1682 of the General Code.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to Mr. Fred S. Scott, city solicitor of Nelsonville, also to Mr. Nathan Hill, mayor of Nelsonville, for their information.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF MT. VERNON, OHIO, FOR ISSUANCE AND SALE OF BONDS TO INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION OF OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE:—Bonds of the city school district of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, in the amount of $50,000.00 accepted by the industrial commission under resolution of June 1, 1915.

I hereby certify that I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of the city school district of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, relative to the issuance and sale of the above bonds, also the specimen bond with the coupon attached. I find that said bonds are issued for the purpose authorized by law; that the proceedings of the said board of education and other officers have been regular and in conformity with statutory provisions; that the amount of said bonds and of the tax levy which will be necessary to pay interest thereon and to create a sinking fund sufficient for their redemption when due exceeds no statutory limitation; and that the form of the said bonds and coupons, as indicated by the specimen copy, is properly drawn.

I therefore certify that said bonds, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute, in the hands of the legal holders thereof, valid obligations of the said city school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO, VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.
GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE:—Bonds to the amount of $5,000.00 of the Reynoldsburg village school district, Franklin county, Ohio, accepted by resolution of the industrial commission of Ohio, on June 1, 1915.

I have carefully examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of the Reynoldsburg village school district, Franklin county, Ohio, which was submitted to me June 12, 1915, and I am of the opinion that said board of education has acted under the authority and in compliance with the laws of Ohio relative to the issuance of said bonds; that the same are not in excess of any statutory limitation upon the bond-issuing authority of the said school district, and that a sufficient tax levy can be made within the limitations prescribed by law to pay the interest and create a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds as they become due, and that said bonds, if properly prepared and executed, will be valid and binding obligations of the said village school district.

As no form of the proposed bonds and coupons has been submitted for my approval, I suggest that final acceptance be withheld until I have an opportunity of inspecting the executed bonds and coupons.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MOTHERS' PENSION ACT—DIVORCE—IMPRISONMENT OF HUSBAND PRIOR TO GRANTING DIVORCE—WIFE ELIGIBLE TO MOTHERS' PENSION.

Divorce of wife from husband, who prior to the divorce was imprisoned, does not render her ineligible to relief under the mothers' pension act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 8th, which is as follows:

> "We are enclosing herewith a letter from Hon. A. C. Risinger, juvenile judge of Preble county, and would request your written opinion upon the same. As the judge insists that this is rather urgent, an early reply is requested."

With your letter you enclosed a communication from Juvenile Judge A. C. Risinger, of Eaton, Ohio, which is as follows:

> "Ida Kennedy files her application in Preble juvenile court for mother's allowance. She was divorced from her husband, Marion Kennedy, on December 28, 1914, on account of his aggressions. However, on October 19, 1914, he plead guilty of forgery and was committed and is now imprisoned in the Mansfield Reformatory. All the facts as to her necessitous condition and need of assistance in order to abide with her child of tender years are in her favor. She is rather influentially represented and I have indicated to her representative my skepticism as to the claim of propriety of an allowance in that her ex-husband is a prisoner but not an existing husband. It is urged that the conditions are such as to come within the spirit of the statute. In order to satisfy parties and make sure of correctness I place the matter before you in the hope that you will render me assistance by your advices. The child is sick and the parties are rather insistent and impatient. An early reply, consistent with official convenience, will be quite satisfactory."

The application filed by Ida Kennedy, referred to in the judge's letter, is based on the fact that Marion Kennedy, from whom she was divorced on December 28, 1914, is imprisoned in the Mansfield Reformatory.

Section 1683-2, of the General Code, (103 O. L., 877) is as follows:

> "For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled for work by reason of physical or mental infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners, or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive an age and schooling certificate, and such mothers and children have been legal residents in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make allowance to each of such women, as follows:

Not to exceed fifteen dollars a month, when she has but one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, and if she has more than one child not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, it shall not exceed fifteen dollars a month for the first child and seven dollars a month for each of the other children not entitled to an age and schooling certificate. The order making such allowance shall not be effective for a longer period than six months, but upon the expiration of such period, said court may from time to time, extend such allowance for a period of six months, or less. Such homes shall be visited from time to time by a probation officer, agent of an associated charities organization, a humane society, or such other agents as the court may direct, provided that the person who actually makes such visits shall be thoroughly trained in charitable relief work, and the report or reports of such visiting agent shall be considered by the court in making such order."

In the section quoted above it will be noted that the provision relative to imprisonment is to be read as follows:

"For the partial support of women * * * whose husbnads are prisoners, * * *"

The purpose of the mothers' pension act is to supply aid to mothers who have lost the support of their husbands through some of the causes enumerated in section 1683-2, to the end that the mother may have the means necessary to "save the child or children from neglect, and to avoid the breaking up of the home of such women," as provided in section 1683-3 of the General Code (103 O. L., 878).

In your letter you refer to the fact that as the woman referred to is divorced from her husband some question has arisen as to her eligibility for relief under the statute. There is evidently no question but that Ida Kennedy was eligible to receive relief during the interval between the date of the imprisonment of her husband and the time of securing her divorce. The question naturally arises as to what bearing the divorce had on her rights, if any, which accrued prior to the divorce.

The mothers' pension law was by act of the legislature made a part of the juvenile court law, and in accordance with the provisions of section 1683, of the General Code, is entitled to a liberal construction to the end that its purposes may be carried out fully.

The securing of the divorce by Ida Kennedy did not remove her disability in the slightest.

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on a similar provision of the mothers' pension law to Hon. Charles Krichbaum, under date of January 29, 1914, he held as follows:

"The third case which you mention is one which, in my opinion, falls within the provisions of the law. Section 1683-2, the pertinent provision of which has already been quoted, mentions the desertion of the husband, continuing for a period of three years, as a condition of relief. Nothing is said about divorce. If the actual desertion, on the part of the husband, is established, in my mind, it is immaterial whether a divorce has been obtained by the mother on that account, or not."

I am in entire accord with the holding of Mr. Hogan, supra, and it is my opinion that, subject, of course, to your determination of the various questions of law and fact which may be involved, the fact that Ida Kennedy is now divorced from her husband, who was imprisoned while her husband, does not of itself render her ineligible to relief under the mothers' pension act.

A copy of this opinion has been forwarded to Judge Risinger for his information.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—HAS AUTHORITY TO REQUIRE DRINKING CUPS AT SODA FOUNTAINS TO BE CLEANSED IN BOILING WATER OR REQUIRE INDIVIDUAL SANITARY DEVICES TO PROTECT HEALTH.

When by reason of the repeated use thereof, infectious and contagious diseases are communicated through the medium of drinking cups, glasses, vessels, spoons, etc., at soda fountains to that degree which substantially affects the public health, the state board of health is authorized to make a rule or regulation prohibiting the repeated use of such cups, etc., that have not been thoroughly cleansed by washing in boiling water or in lieu thereof to permit the use of sanitary devices for individual use only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 15, 1915.

The State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your request for an opinion as follows:

> "Has the state board of health the authority to adopt an order prohibiting the use at soda fountains and like places of any drinking cup, glass, vessel, spoon, etc., that has not been thoroughly cleansed by washing in boiling water after use by each individual, or in lieu of such procedure to permit the use of sanitary devices for individual use only?"

Section 1237, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of health has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

The provisions of section 1237 above quoted confer upon the state board of health the power to make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, and it is assumed that the purpose of the board in making such an order as that about which you inquire, is to prevent the spread of such diseases by the repeated use of various utensils at public soda fountains without sterilization.

The state board of health is charged with the exercise of a public function primarily for the protection and conservation of the public health and is concerned with isolated individual cases only insofar as the same constitute a menace to the public health. The purpose of this regulation, as above stated, in itself assumes that the repeated use at soda fountains of drinking cups, glasses, vessels, spoons, etc., which have not been cleansed and sterilized by washing in boiling water, constitutes a medium through which contagious and infectious diseases are spread and communicated. This is a question of fact of controlling influence in determining whether or not the contemplated order is reasonable and necessary. It is the fundamental purpose of the legislation of the state relative to matters of health, that the same be made applicable to conditions existing or which may with some degree of certainty be anticipated rather than to mere theory. Hence, that such order as suggested may be reasonable and necessary to the protection and preservation of public health, it must be first determined as a matter of fact that without the enforcement of such order, rule or regulation, under known existing conditions, or conditions which may be reasonably anticipated, such spread of such contagious and infectious diseases will be effected as will in a substantial way be detrimental to the public health. In other words, such order is not made either necessary or reasonable by the mere fact that it is possible that a contagious and infectious disease may be communicated through the medium of drinking cups, etc., at soda fountains, not sterilized, as suggested, in isolated cases, but it is essential that such order be reasonable and necessary, that conditions be such that it may be reasonbly anticipated that the communication of such contagious or infectious diseases through the medium of drinking cups, etc., at soda fountains in the absence of such order or sterilization is of sufficient frequency to affect the public health in some substantial way, is distinguished from a mere speculative impairment of the same.

Legislation for the protection of the health of the people is clearly an exercise of the police power by the legislature which may be delegated by it to such agencies as it may deem best suited for the purpose. That the state board of health should have control of a matter such as the prevention of the spread of diseases is apparent from the nature of the case, involving, as it does, the necessity for uniformity in all parts of the state.

While there has been no judicial decision on the particular question asked by you, the decision of the case of Board of Health v. Greenville, 86 O. S. 1, involving the authority of the state board of health to make orders requiring the purification of sewage and public water supply, is in point. In that case the court discussed the power of the state board of health to make such orders quite fully and sustained the constitutionality of that law in every respect. The following is from the opinion of the court at page 21:

> "This particular legislation now under consideration is designed to preserve and protect the public health and comfort, and, therefore, falls directly within the police power of the state. This power includes anything which is reasonable and necessary to secure the peace, safety, health, morals and best interests of the public. It is now the settled law that the legislature of the state possesses plenary power to deal with these subjects so long as it does not contravene the constitution of the United States or infringe upon any right granted or secured thereby, or is not in direct conflict with any of the provisions of the constitution of this state, and is not exercised in such an arbitrary and oppressive manner as to justify the interference of the courts to prevent wrong and oppression."

The powers of the state board of health to make rules and regulations under section 1237, G. C., are analogous to the powers to make orders for the purification of sewage and public water supply to such an extent that it can be said that the powers of the state board of health under section 1237 are broad enough to support an order such as you suggest, providing the same is reasonable and necessary The means to be used to accomplish the desired purpose are in the discretion of the state board of health subject to the same limitations as to reason and necessity.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that if your board finds that disease is being or has been spread among the people to a degree substantially affecting the public health through the repeated use, without sterilization, of glasses, spoons and other utensils at public soda fountains and that a rule requiring that all such utensils should be thoroughly cleansed by washing in boiling water after use by each individual or by the installation of sanitary devices for individual use only, would in a substantial way effectively prevent such spread of disease, the board has the power to make such an order and that it is the duty of the local officials to enforce the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO CONTRACT WITH ELECTRIC COMPANY TO CONSTRUCT AT COUNTY'S EXPENSE ELECTRIC LINE FROM COMPANY'S PLANT TO CHILDREN'S HOME—SURPLUS OF SPECIAL TAX LEVY MUST BE TRANSFERRED BY COMMISSIONERS TO SINKING FUND—TRANSFER OF COUNTY FUNDS THAT MAY BE MADE ON ORDER OF COMMON PLEAS COURT—COMMISSIONERS MAY ISSUE BONDS IF ELECTORS APPROVE FOR LIGHTING BUILDINGS AT SAID HOME—IMPLIED AUTHORITY TO PROPERLY FURNISH COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME IN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The commissioners of a county have no authority in law to enter into a contract with an electric company, according to the terms of which said electric company would construct, at the expense of the county, an electric line from its light plant to the children's home in said county, over which line said electric company would furnish current to said home for lighting purposes.

Under the provisions of section 5654, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 521, it is the duty of the county commissioners to transfer any surplus of the proceeds of a special tax levy, which cannot be used, or is not needed, for the purpose for which said tax was levied, to the sinking fund of the county, and, upon their failure to make such transfer, said surplus automatically reverts to said sinking fund.

The commissioners of a county may, on the order of the common pleas court, upon application made under authority of section 2296, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L. 522, and in compliance with the requirements of section 2297, et seq., G. C., transfer a part of any county fund, other than the proceeds or balances of special levies, loans or bond issues, not needed for the purpose for which said fund is established, to another fund or to a new fund by them created.

Where the commissioners of a county, acting under authority and in compliance with the provisions of section 3077, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 889, have submitted to a vote of the electors of said county the question of establishing a county children's home and the issue of bonds or notes of the county to provide funds therefor, and, the vote being favorable, said commissioners have proceeded to purchase a site and erect buildings thereon for said home, under authority of section 3078, G. C., said commissioners may issue additional bonds for the purpose of securing the necessary funds to provide for the proper lighting of said buildings, in compliance with the provisions of section 3079, G. C., if, upon submitting the question of said additional issue to a vote of the electors of the county, in the manner provided by section 3077, G. C., as amended, the vote of said electors is favorable to said additional issue.

The county commissioners have implied authority, under the provisions of section 3078, G. C., to properly furnish the county children's home before turning the same over to the management and control of the trustees of said home, appointed under authority of section 3081, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1915.

HON. CHARLES L. BERMONT, Prosecuting Attorney, Mr. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 5th you request my opinion, as follows:

"In 1912, the commissioners of Knox county, Ohio, submitted to the electors of Knox county, the question of establishing a children's home for Knox county and the issue of county bonds to provide funds therefor. The vote at said election was favorable to said question and $25,000.00 in bonds were issued.

"In 1905, the commissioners made a levy by virtue of section 14654, G. C., to aid a private children's home and about $6,000.00 was realized as a result of said levy. For some reason the said sum of $6,000.00 was never turned over to the trustees of said private children's home, but has remained in the county treasury to the credit of the orphans' home fund.

"In 1913, a levy was made by the commissioners for the purpose of maintaining the county children's home, for which they were about ready to let the building contract, and about $5,000.00 has been realized from this levy.

"It now becomes necessary to have an electric light line constructed from the city of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to this children's home, which will necessitate an expenditure of about $1,000.00.

"The question that I now want to propound is 'Can any part of the $6,000.00 or the $5,000.00 mentioned above be used for the purpose of constructing this electric light line and if not have the commissioners power to borrow money for this purpose?

"The commissioners are without funds to do this work unless they have the power to borrow money or can use a part of the sums above stated.

"I desire to further inquire as follows:

"Section 3081 of the General Code reads as follows: When the necessary site and building are provided by the county, the commissioners shall appoint a board of four trustees, etc.

"Whose duty is it to furnish this children's home with furniture, etc.? Is it the duty of the commissioners or would the trustees have authority to do this under section 3104?"

In answer to my request for additional information relative to the terms of the proposed contract between the commissioners of Knox county and the Mt. Vernon Electric Company, I have your letter of June 2nd, which is as follows:

"In answer to your letter of May 29th, I will say that the county commissioners met yesterday, and I took up the question of the contract they were contemplating making with the electric company of this city.

"They informed me that the only contract they had thought of making with this electric company was one for furnishing current for the county children's home, but this home is at such a distance from the city that the electric company will not build and maintain the line leading to it, and this would have to be done by the commissioners.

"The commissioners further informed me that they had never contemplated furnishing the property owners along this line with electricity.

"If you should determine that the commissioners are without authority to build this line, I think that they would install an electric plant of their own at this home, providing that they can get the available funds."

In submitting to the electors of Knox county the question of establishing a children's home for said county, and the issue of bonds to provide funds therefor, the commissioners of said county acted under authority of section 3077, which, prior to its amendment in 103 O. L., 889, provided as follows:

"When in their opinion the interests of the public so demand, the commissioners of a county may, or upon the written petition of two hundred or more taxpayers, shall, at the next regular election submit to the qualified electors of such county, or of the counties forming a district, the question of establishing a children's home for such county or district, and the issue of county bonds or notes to provide funds therefor. Notice of such election shall be published for at least two weeks prior to taking such vote, in two or more newspapers printed and of general circulation in such county or in the counties of the district, and shall state the maximum amount of money to be expended in establishing such home."

Section 3078, G. C., provides:

"If at such election a majority of electors voting on the proposition are in favor of establishing such home, the commissioners of the county, or of any adjoining counties in such district, having so voted in favor thereof, shall provide for the purchase of a suitable site and the erection of the necessary buildings and provide means by taxation for such purchase and the support thereof. Such institution shall be styled the children's home for such county or district."

Section 3079, G. C., provides:

"In anticipation of the collection of taxes levied or to be levied for the purchase of such site and erection of such buildings, or for the purchase of a suitable site and buildings already erected thereon, the commissioners of any county may issue the notes or bonds of the county, to bear interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, which shall not be sold for less than their par value."

I understand that the building for the children's home is not yet completed and that the county commissioners find that they will not have sufficient funds to provide for the lighting of said building.

In your first letter you inquire whether the said commisioners may use any part of the sum of $6,000.00, in the county treasury to the credit of the orphans' home fund, or of the $5,000.00 in said treasury to the credit of the children's home maintenance fund, for the purpose of constructing an electric light line from the city of Mt. Vernon to said children's home according to the terms of the proposed contract referred to, or, if they can not use a part of either of said funds, whether they may borrow money for said purpose.

While I am of the opinion that the authority of the county commissioners to purchase a site and erect a building for the county children's home, under the above provisions of the statute, carries with it the implied authority to provide for the proper lighting of such home, I find no provision of the statute under which said county commissioners have either express or implied authority to enter into a contract with the electric company of Mt. Vernon, according to the terms of which said electric company would construct an electric light line from said city of Mt. Vernon to said children's home, at the expense of the county, and furnish current to said home for lighting purposes at a charge to be agreed upon between said county commissioners and said electric company. I am of the opinion, therefore, that said county commissioners have no authority in law to make such a contract with said electric company.

However, since receiving second letter, I have been informed by Mr. P. S. Kelser, of your city, that the county commissioners are about to abandon the plan of contracting with the electric company and have about decided to provide for their own lighting system, as they find it will be much less expensive than the former plan.

In my conversation with you over the telephone you confirmed this information given by Mr. Kelser and further stated that the sum of $6,000.00 which was raised by the county commissioners by tax levy in 1905 was never turned over to the trustees of the orphans' home in said county, owing to the fact that at that time there was a dispute as to the proper disposition of the fund; that said orphans' home was no longer in existence and that the said sum of $6,000.00 is in the treasury to the credit of the said orphans' home fund.

Section 5 of article XII of the constitution provides:

> "No tax shall be levied, except in pursuance of law; and every law imposing a tax, shall state, distinctly, the object of the same, to which only, it shall be applied."

It is evident, however, that, inasmuch as the orphans' home, to aid which the county commissioners of Knox county in 1905 made a levy under authority of the statute now known as section 14654 of the Appendix to the General Code, is no longer in existence, the aforesaid sum of money in the county treasury to the credit of said orphans' home fund is no longer needed for the purpose for which such levy was made.

I call your attention to the provisions of section 5654, as amended in 103 O. L., 521, which are as follows:

> "The proceeds of a special tax, loan or bond issue shall not be used for any other purpose than that for which the same was levied, issued or made, except as herein provided. When there is in the treasury of any city, village, county, township or school district a surplus of the proceeds of a special tax or of the proceeds of a loan or bond issue which cannot be used, or which is not needed for the purpose for which the tax was levied, or the loan made, or the bonds issued, all of such surplus shall be transferred immediately by the officer, board or council having charge of such surplus, to the sinking fund of such city, village, county, township or school district, and thereafter shall be subject to the uses of such sinking fund."

It was the duty of the commissioners of Knox county, when the above amendment to section 5654 became effective, to immediately transfer the aforesaid sum of $6,000.00 from the orphans' home fund to the sinking fund of said county, commonly known as the county debt fund, and upon their failure to make such transfer I am of the opinion that said sum automatically reverted to said county debt fund under the above provisions of the statute, so that no part of said sum may now be considered available for any purpose other than for sinking fund purposes.

Section 2296, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 522, provides:

> "The county commissioners, township trustees, the board of education of a school district, or the council, or other board having the legislative power of a municipality, may transfer public funds, except the proceeds or balances of special levies, loans or bond issues, under their supervision, from one fund to another, or to a new fund created under their respective supervision, in the manner hereafter provided, which shall be in addition to all other procedure now provided by law."

If any part of the sum of $5,000.00 in the county treasury to the credit of the children's home maintenance fund will not be needed for such purpose, or if any part of any county fund, other than the proceeds or balances of special levies, loans or bond issues, is not needed for the purpose for which said fund was established, I am of the opinion that the county commissioners may, on the order of the common pleas court, upon application duly made under authority of section 2296, G. C., as amended, and in compliance with the requirements of sections 2297, et seq., of the General Code, transfer such part of said fund to the children's home building fund, to be used by said county commissioners in establishing a proper lighting system for said building.

The only authority conferred by statute upon the county commissioners to borrow money for the purpose of establishing a county children's home is found in sections 3077, et seq., of the General Code, as above quoted. Inasmuch as this authority has been exercised and bonds were issued by a vote of the electors of Knox county, I am of the opinion that it will be necessary for said county commissioners to submit to the electors of Knox county the question of issuing additional bonds for the purpose of securing the necessary funds to provide for said lighting system, in the manner provided by section 3077, G. C., as amended, and that if the vote of said electors is favorable to said additional issue the same may be made in compliance with the requirements of section 3079, G. C.

You further inquire whether it is the duty of the county commissioners to provide the necessary furniture for said children's home, upon the completion of the construction of the building for said home, or whether this duty is placed upon the trustees of said home by the provisions of section 3104, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 893.

Section 3081, G. C., provides for the appointment of four trustees for the county children's home after the necessary site and buildings have been provided by the county.

After said trustees have been appointed and have been placed in charge of the children's home, it becomes their duty, under section 3104, G. C., as amended, at the time of making their annual report to the county commissioners, to file with said commissioners an estimate in writing of the wants of said home for the succeeding year, said estimate to specify separately the amount required for each of the following purposes, to wit: First, maintenance; second, repairs; third, special improvements.

Under the provisions of section 3104, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 103 O. L., 893, the trustees of the children's home were required to report quarterly to the commissioners of the county the condition of the home and at the time of making such report to file with said commissioners an estimate in writing of the wants of said home for the succeeding quarter. In such estimate said trustees were required to specify separately the amounts needed for each of the purposes enumerated therein, the seventh item being for furniture.

Under the provisions of the statute as amended, the trustees are only required to make an annual report to the county commissioners and to estimate the needs of the home for the succeeding year under the three general heads as above set forth.

While I think that the trustees of the home, under the provisions of the statute as amended, still have authority to request an allowance for the purchase of such additional furniture for the home as they may deem necessary, under the general head of "maintenance," and that the county commissioners, under authority of section 3105, G. C., may make an appropriation for this purpose, I do not think that the provisions of section 3104, G. C., as amended, taken in connection with the provisions of sections 3105 and 3106, G. C., confer authority upon said trustees to equip the children's home with furniture in the first instance.

Under section 3078, G. C., the county commissioners have authority to provide for the purchase of a suitable site and the erection of the necessary buildings for the county children's home and to provide means by taxation for such purchase and the support thereof.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that said commissioners have the implied authority under the above provisions of section 3078, G. C., to properly furnish the building for said children's home before turning the same over to the management and control of the trustees of said home.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—AUTHORITY OF OFFICIALS TO REPAIR A DIRT ROAD PARALLEL TO AND IN CONNECTION WITH IMPROVED ROAD.

The official or officials charged by statute with the repair of an improved state, county or township road, have authority to repair a dirt road parallel to and in connection with said improved road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1915.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 19, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I am writing you in regard to repair of dirt roads running parallel, and along side of improved roads.
> "I have been unable to find any law upon the subject, other than an opinion of Attorney General Hogan. In this opinion, Mr. Hogan placed the duty of repair of such dirt roads upon the township trustees, i. e., not upon the improved road authorities.
> "I have always felt, as do most of our attorneys here, that this opinion could not have taken into consideration all the facts. It is highly impracticable for two sets of authorities to attempt to repair separately what is, in fact, but one road. The conflicts which will necessarily arise in repairing such roads independently, could be avoided if the duty of repair of both roads could be placed on the stone road commissioners. The trustees, in this county at least, did not make their levy in anticipation of handling the repair of such dirt roads. If Mr. Hogan's opinion is sound, the deterioration of such dirt roads, in this county, is sure to follow.
> "I hope, therefore, Mr. Turner, that you will take this matter under consideration and render your own opinion as to who bears the duty of repairing dirt roads that run parallel to improved roads."

Permit me to say that upon careful examination of the files of this office I do not find that this department has ever rendered an opinion upon the question submitted.

The only provisions of the statutes applicable to dirt roads parallel to and in connection with improved roads, are found in sections 1221 and 7045 of the General Code. Section 1221, G. C., provides:

> "Nothing in this chapter (relating to the state highway department) shall prevent the state highway commissioner or other authority having jurisdiction of such highway (a state highway), from constructing a dirt road parallel with and along side an improved road, if in his or their judgment such construction is necessary."

Section 7045, G. C., relates to the roads of a township or an election precinct therein where the trustees have created such township or part thereof into a road district, under authority of sections 7033, et seq., of the General Code, and have submitted the question of improving the roads of such district to a vote of the qualified electors therein. This section provides as follows:

> "Thereupon (after a favorable vote of the electors) the trustees shall determine the order and manner in which the public ways shall be improved, beginning, so far as practicable, with the main roads. In improving such public ways the macadamized or graveled portion shall be located, when practicable, so as to leave sufficient space for a dirt road at its side. The graveled or macadamized portion shall be not less than eight nor more than fourteen feet in width, and the gravel or macadam shall be not less than twelve inches in depth at each outer side."

I deem it proper to call your attention to amended senate bill No. 125 entitled "An act to provide a system of highway laws for the state of Ohio and to repeal all sections of the General Code and acts inconsistent herewith." This bill was passed by the general assembly May 17th and will become effective September 4, 1915. By the provision of section 305 of said bill, the above sections of the General Code are repealed and the provisions of said sections are not re-enacted by said bill.

I find no provision of the statutes as now in force, nor do I find any provision in amended senate bill No. 125 expressly authorizing township trustees or any other official or officials to keep in repair the dirt roads above referred to.

Section 241 of said amended senate bill No. 125 provides in part:

> "The public highways of the state shall be divided into three classes, viz.: state roads, county roads and township roads."

Section 244 of said amended senate bill provides:

> "The state, county and township shall each maintain their respective roads as designated in the classification herein above set forth; provided, however, that either the county or township may, by agreement between the county commissioners and township trustees, contribute to the repair and maintenance of the roads under the control of either. The state, county or township or any two or more of them, may by agreement, expend any funds available for road construction, improvement or repair upon roads inside of a village or a village may expend any funds available for street improvement upon roads outside of the village and leading thereto."

While section 7060-1, General Code, as found in 103 O. L., 402 (the provisions of which are substantially re-enacted in sections 80 to 84, inclusive, of amended senate bill No. 125), authorizes and requires the trustees of a township to provide for dragging the graveled or unimproved roads of a township in the manner therein provided, I do not think said provisions of said statutes are applicable to a dirt road parallel to and in connection with an improved road, as referred to in sections 1221 and 7045 of the General Code, for the reason that said dirt road cannot be considered as separate and distinct from said improved road. On the contrary, I am of the opinion that said dirt road is a part of said improved road and is constructed for the purpose of relieving said improved road of a part of the traffic during certain months of the year by affording an extra driveway for said traffic.

I am informed by Mr. A. H. Hinkle of the state highway department that wherever a dirt road has been constructed parallel to an improved road, under authority of section 1221, G. C., the state highway commissioner has considered it as merely a part of said improved road and that, in repairing the improved road, it has been the practice of said department to grade and crown said dirt road and to provide proper drainage for it so that it will be available for traffic during the summer and fall seasons of the year.

As I view it, the repair of the dirt road is incidental to the preservation of the improved road with which it is connected and of which it is a part.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the official or officials charged by statute with the repair of an improved state, county or township road, have authority to repair the dirt road parallel to and in connection with said improved road.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MOTION PICTURE FILMS—SHALL BE APPROVED BY OHIO BOARD OF CENSORS BEFORE EXHIBITION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Motion picture films, which have not been approved by the Ohio Board of Censors may not be exhibited in the public schools of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Department of Film Censorship, Columbus, O.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested my written opinion in answer to an inquiry submitted to you by Superintendent R. J. Kiefer, of the Bellefontaine schools, enclosing with your request certain correspondence of Superintendent Kiefer, which, being somewhat lengthy, need not be quoted but may be summarized as follows:

> A large number of industrial establishments are offering motion picture films at a very nominal expense, which are considered of great value in the teaching of industries, geography and related topics and which have not been submitted to the Ohio board of censors for their approval and would not be offered if censoring were required. Superintendent Kiefer, after statement of facts, inquires as follows:
> "Do the words 'publicly exhibited' in section 871-49, 103 O. L., prevent use of films not bearing the stamp of the Ohio board of censors before classes of geography, for instance, in educational institutions, especially public schools, for purely instructive purposes when no admission is charged?"

Under the act creating the Ohio board of censors of motion picture films and prescribing the duties and powers of such board, 103 O. L., page 399, it is provided:

"Section 871-48. It shall be the duty of the board of censors to examine and censor, as herein provided, all motion picture films to be publicly exhibited and displayed in the state of Ohio. * * *

"Section 871-49. * * * Before any motion picture film shall be publicly exhibited, there shall be projected upon the screen the words 'approved by the Ohio Board of Censors' and the number of the film.

"Section 871-52: Any person, firm or corporation who shall publicly exhibit or show any motion picture within the state of Ohio unless it shall have been passed, approved and stamped by the Ohio board of censors or the congress of censors, shall upon conviction thereof be fined not less than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars nor more than three hundred ($300.00) dollars, or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both, for each offense."

In determining the scope of the application of the foregoing provisions of the act relating to the "public exhibition" of motion picture films, regard must be had to the purposes and objects sought to be accomplished, and the evils to be remedied by the aforesaid legislation.

The act is manifestly one in the nature of a police regulation and to provide for an official examination and criticism of pictures to be offered for public exhibition, to the end that such exhibitions may not be offensive to the course of good government or subversive of good morals and the peace and welfare of society.

While it cannot be maintained that the statutory provisions here referred to are limited in their application to theaters and similar places of public amusement, it cannot be denied that the class of motion pictures exhibited in places of this character was the occasion of this legislation and their regulation constituted its primary purpose. Indeed, it may be argued with much force that the legislature had in mind the passage of the statutory provisions here referred to the regulation only of those exhibitions of motion pictures projected for profit or public amusement and entertainment, or as incidental to or advertisement of some other business or enterprise.

Yet the application of a statute will not be limited to some concrete and specific wrong to be remedied to the exclusion of other conditions and facts clearly within the meaning of the terms of the statute as well as its spirit. While exhibitions in public theaters may have been manifestly the occasion for such legislation, their regulation cannot be said to be all that is comprehended within its clear and manifest purpose.

The full purpose of the picture censor legislation comprehends the protection of the public and perhaps more particularly the youth of the state from the exhibition of all those pictures which may fairly be held to be detrimental to the moral culture, educational advancement and wholesome amusement and recreation of the members of society as a whole, and may not, to my mind, be limited to that very considerable portion of the populace which in all propriety attend public theaters and like places of amusement and entertainment.

It therefore follows that the phrases "public exhibition" and "publicly exhibited and displayed" should be given such construction within reason and the ordinary significance of the terms as will affect a substantial accomplishment of the purpose sought. These phrases are more or less relative in their application and it can not be said that the line of demarkation between a public and private exhibition may be stated with mathematical precision, but in view of what we determine to be the manifest purpose of this legislation, it is not deemed to necessitate any strained construction of the express terms thereof to say that an exhibition of motion pictures in the public schools, although confined to certain designated classes, constitutes a public exhibition within the meaning of the statutes under consideration. A promiscuous exhibition through the public schools of the state or even of a single city or district, can not be said in consistency with the general acceptation of the meaning of those terms, to be a private exhibition. The schools in which it is proposed to exhibit pictures are not in any sense private in character. The private benefit or advantage to be gained by individuals in attendance is only incidental to their public purpose. They are institutions to which a very considerable portion of society is generally admitted.

It may be argued with much force that motion pictures are a valuable aid to scientific investigation and educational advancement, but of this fact we can not say that the legislature was unmindful and hence had it been contemplated that such exhibitions should be permitted within the schools and other public institutions of similar character, appropriate provision would have been made therefor.

I am therefore of opinion, answering your question more specifically, that the class of picture films referred to in your inquiry may not lawfully be exhibited to classes in the public schools of the state except such films be censored according to the provisions of the statutes herein before referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General

CLERK OF JUSTICE OF PEACE COURT IN CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE —WHEN CITY AND TOWNSHIP LIMITS CO-EXTENSIVE—CONSTRUCTON OF SECTION 3512, G. C.

The clerk of justice of peace court, when limits of city and township are co-extensive, provided by municipal ordinance under section 3512, G. C., is a city employe and included in the classified service of civil service.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 18, 1915.

The Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge your request for a ruling on the status of the clerk of the justice of the peace in Akron township, Summit county, which is as follows:

> "The civil service commission of Akron, Ohio, has submitted to this commission the following question and request that we get your ruling thereon. The city of Akron embraces all of Akron township, Summit county, Ohio. The city council has fixed the salaries for justices of the peace in Akron township and has also passed an ordinance providing for a clerk of the justice's court. The local commission desires to know whether or not this clerk is in the classified service. In view of the fact that they have made a special request for an opinion of the attorney general, we do not deem it proper to answer this question ourselves.

"For your further information, we attach the letter of the president of the commission, in which all the facts are set forth."

With your request you enclose a letter from Mr. Charles Smoyer, president of the civil service commission of the city of Akron, which letter is as follows:

"Our local commission (Akron) is in considerable doubt with reference to a situation which has arisen over the position of clerk of the justice's court of Akron. If the precise point in question here has not been settled, we would much appreciate it if you would obtain the opinion of the attorney general with reference to it.

"The city of Akron embraces all of Akron township, Summit county, Ohio. By virtue of the statutes, the city council was empowered to fix salaries of the justices of the peace in Akron township. This the council has done and has further passed an ordinance providing for a clerk of the justice court. The question now is whether this clerk is subject to an examination before the local commission, the office being what amounts to a township office. I do not understand that the civil service law has any application to any township official.

"We have felt that the matter is of such importance to be submitted to the attorney-general and I should not be surprised if his office has already considered the identical matter.

"We should very much appreciate any information you can give us or can obtain for us as to whether or not we should examine the clerk of the justice court of Akron township."

A copy of the ordinance passed by the city council, and referred to in your letter, was procured from the city clerk, and I quote from its provisions as follows:

"Section 1. That the justice of the peace of Akron township, Summit county, Ohio, shall appoint a clerk who shall be a competent stenographer, at a salary not exceeding $75.00 per month, who shall be designated clerk of the justice court. Said clerk shall give bond in the sum of $1,000.00, conditioned according to law, and it shall be his or her duty, under direction of said justices of the peace to receive and file all papers and documents left at the offices of the said justices for filing, and receive and give receipts for all moneys paid in any case, civil or criminal, before any of said justices of the peace, and to pay over the same to the justices of the peace to whom the same are payable, and enter on proper dockets, and to record and index all cases civil and criminal commenced before said justices of the peace, and to perform such other and further duties as the justices of the peace may require."

The ordinance referred to was adopted under and pursuant to the provisions of section 3512 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, all township offices shall be abolished, and the duties thereof shall thereafter be performed by the corresponding officers of the city or village, except that justices of the peace and constables shall continue the exercise of their functions under municipal ordinances providing offices, regulating the disposition of their fees, their compensation, clerks, and other officers and employes. Such justices and constables shall be elected at municipal elections. All property, moneys, credits, books, records and documents of such township shall be delivered to the council of such city or village. All rights, interests or claims in favor of or against the township may be enforced by or against the corporation."

In the case of McGill v. The State, 34 O. S., 228, the court, in passing on a statute similar to section 3512 of the General Code, said, at page 251:

"The act of May 7, 1872, (69 Ohio L., 23) preserves the corporate existence of such township for the sole purpose of electing justices of the peace and constables, evidently to meet the constitutional requirement that justices of the peace shall be elected by townships. But for all other purposes the township organization in this class of cities and villages is abolished."

Under the facts stated in your letter, Akron township being entirely within the city of Akron, the only township officers retaining a status as such under the provisions of section 3512 of the General Code, are the justices of the peace and constables, and as held in the case of McGill v. The State, 35 O. S., 228, supra, the provision for their continuance as township officers was evidently inserted to conform to the constitutional provision governing the election of justices of the peace.

In view of the provisions of section 3512 of the General Code, abolishing township officers, it is my opinion that the clerk of the justice court of Akron township, Summit county, Ohio, elected under a municipal ordinance is an employe of the city of Akron and not coming within the list of unclassified employes, is to be regarded as within the classified list of civil service employes.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to Mr. Charles Smoyer, president of the civil service commission of Akron, for his information.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AUDITOR OF STATE—HAS AMPLE POWER TO CONDUCT A SALE AND DECLARE THE PURCHASER—STATE LANDS—AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 293.

Under amended senate bill No. 293 the auditor of state has ample power to conduct a sale and declare the purchaser.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 12th you inquire as follows:

"Amended senate bill No. 293, a copy of which we attach, provides for the execution of a deed to be prepared by the auditor of state for certain lands in Montgomery county. The law makes provision for the advertising of notice of sale and for the payment into the state treasury of the purchase money, and the preparation and execution of the deed, but we are in doubt whether the auditor of state has any powers in the premises to conduct a sale and declare the purchaser, unless this power is to be implied from the direction that he publish the fact that he will so do. Will you kindly advise me of my duty under this act?"

Amended senate bill No. 293 is as follows:

"AN ACT

"To authorize the sale of certain real estate in Montgomery county.

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:

"Section 1. The governor is hereby authorized and directed to execute and deliver to the highest bidder of Dayton, Ohio, a proper deed in the name of the state of Ohio, conveying all the right, title and interest of the said state in and to the following described real estate, to wit:

"Being a tract of land situate in Sec. 32, T. 2, R. 7 M. R.'s., Montgomery county, Ohio, and more particularly described as follows:

"Beginning at the intersection of the north line of the Shantz road and the south right of way line of the D. L. & C. Ry. Co.; thence westwardly along the north line of the Schantz road to the N. and S. half section line of section 32, T. 2, R. 7, M. R.'s, said line being also the east boundary line of the Woodland Cemetery Association land extended southwardly to the Schantz road; thence northwestwardly along the said half section line and the east boundary line of the Woodland Cemetery Association's land extended southwardly to the south right of way line of the D. L. & C. Ry. Co.; thence eastwardly along the south right of way line of the D. L. & C. Ry. Co., to the place of beginning, containing 0.56 acres more or less.

"Section 2. Said conveyance shall be made only after the auditor of state of Ohio shall have caused notice of the sale of said land to be inserted weekly, in a newspaper printed and of general circulation within the county of Montgomery, Ohio, for a period of four consecutive weeks prior to a date to be fixed therefor by said state auditor. The said notice shall provide that on said date so determined, the said auditor will sell the land hereinbefore described at public auction at his office at twelve o'clock noon to the highest bidder therefor, but in no event shall the same be sold for less than seven hundred fifty dollars. Upon the payment into the state treasury by the successful bidder of the purchase price the auditor of state shall prepare such deed and the same shall be executed by the governor under the great seal of the state and be countersigned by the secretary of state.

"Filed in office of secretary of state June 1, 1915.'

Said act becomes effective on August 31, 1915.

From a reading of the above act, I am of the opinion that the auditor of state has ample power in the premises to conduct a sale and declare the purchaser.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

INHERITANCE TAX—DEDUCTION SHOULD BE MADE FROM ESTATE FOR SAID TAXES WHERE A CONTRACT HAS BEEN MADE BY HEIRS OF AN INTESTATE PERSON TO PAY A CLAIM OF A CREDITOR OF THE ESTATE.

A sum paid by the collateral heirs of an intestate to a person claiming as a creditor of the estate of the decedent should be deducted from the estate for inheritance tax purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1915.

HON. HOMER O. DORSEY, Probate Judge, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 16th requests my opinion as follows:

"The administrator of the estate of Mary H. Firmin advises me that he is under the impression your department has rendered an opinion on the question involved in the statement below, but he is unable to find such opinion among the reports. If the question has been passed on I should be glad to have you cite me to the report or send me a summary of the finding if it is not in the printed reports.

"STATEMENT

"Mary H. Firmin, a resident of Hancock county, died intestate October 14, 1914, leaving a brother and three sisters her sole heirs at law. She left an estate appraised at approximately $30,000.00 which came to her from her deceased husband, Lorenzo Firmin. After the death of Mary H. Firmin a nephew of Lorenzo Firmin, who had lived in the family for many years, and who had performed service for both, made claim to a part of the estate based on a verbal promise made to him by Lorenzo Firmin and Mary H. Firmin. A settlement was made between the heirs of Mary H. Firmin and this nephew and a written contract entered into the terms of which are in substance that in consideration of his accepting the appointment as administrator and in consideration of services rendered to Mary H. Firmin, and in consideration of his agreement to make no charge for his services as administrator or as agent for the parties in the settlement of the estate, the heirs agree tc pay to this nephew twenty per cent. of the net amount of the estate, out of the proceeds as reduced to cash, which will amount to about $5,000.00. $3,130.00 has been paid on this contract and about $1,000.00 more due.

"Query: Is the amount paid on this contract a proper deduction in fixing the amount of inheritance tax the heirs are required to pay?"

As I understand your statement of the question, the nephew of whom you speak did not assert any claim as heir or distributee, but merely set up a claim against the estate for services rendered to the decedent. That is to say, if his claim was valid it was a debt of the estate.

My predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to Hon. Harry P. Black, prosecuting attorney of Seneca county, on August 15, 1912, (annual report of the attorney general for that year, page 1430) held that debts are to be deducted from the value of an estate subject to the inheritance tax for the purpose of ascertaining the taxable value of the latter.

I take it from your letter that you have the reports of the attorney general and that it is, therefore, not necessary for me to supply you with a typewritten copy of the opinion referred to.

You will observe that the authorities are reviewed by Mr. Hogan, and that his conclusion is reached after a full investigation into the general purport of our own statutes and decisions under similar statutes.

You will observe that Mr. Hogan points out that presumably the appraisement of the estate as certified by the probate court is final, and that the fact that the debts of the estate may materially reduce the value of the inheritances does not alter the duty of the probate judge to certify to the county auditor a copy of the inventory; so that where the inheritors claim the benefit of the deduction of debts of the estate they should proceed under sections 5343 and 5344 of the General Code, to have the estate re-valued for the purposes of the inheritance tax.

For the manner in which Mr. Hogan has worked the matter out in detail I refer you more particularly to the opinion cited.

Your question differs from the one considered by Mr. Hogan only in the fact that the claim has been compromised by the heirs and personal representatives with the claimant. This fact does not alter the case.

(See In Re Pepper's estate, 159 Pa. state, 509; In Re Kerr's estate, Ib., 512.)

In these cases, under a law like that of Ohio, it was held that where devisees and legatees have compromised with contestants of a will, or with persons claiming title adversely to the decedent, and such compromise is approved by the court before distribution is ordered, the devisees and legatees are taxable only upon the shares actually received by them, after deducting the amount paid to the adverse claimants.

I take it from your statement of the facts that the compromise was approved by you as probate judge.

If there had been a will, and if the adverse claim had been asserted by the claimant in the capacity of an inheritor, the same result, so far as the remaining heirs are concerned, would have followed; but the share of the estate paid to the claimant, if sufficient in amount, would in that event have been taxable.

In this case, inasmuch as the claimant asserts his right in the capacity of a creditor of the estate of the decedent, the amount paid to him is not taxable.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

PROPERTY OF DECEDENT PERSON—WHERE CORONER TAKES AN INVENTORY OF MONEYS FOUND ON BODY OF PERSON FOUND DEAD SAME SHOULD BE PAID EITHER BY THE CORONER OR BY PROBATE JUDGE TO THE EXECUTOR OR ADMINISTRATOR OF SUCH DECEDENT—CLAIM OF UNDERTAKER FOR BURIAL OF BODY SHOULD BE PRESENTED TO SUCH EXECUTOR OR ADMINISTRATOR.

Where the identity of a person found dead, and of his personal representatives is known, moneys found on his person and inventoried by the coroner, as required by statute, should be paid either by the coroner or by the probate judge to the executor or administrator of such decedent, and the claim of an undertaker for the burial of the body should be presented to such executor or administrator.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1915.

HON. FRANK DELAY, Probate Judge, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 14th, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, is as follows:

"I respectfully ask the opinion of your office upon the application of sections 2861, 2862 and 2863, G. C., to the following state of facts:

"One C. D. was recently found killed by a train, an inquest was held by the coroner, and an inventory as required by 2861 filed in this office, accompanied by $17.31 in money. The deceased, whose identity is fully established, leaves a wife and young child. The undertaker who buried him also has a claim for his services.

"What disposition should be made by this court of the money so placed in his hands?"

The statutes cited by you are as follows:

"Sec. 2861. The inventory and the return shall be made separately from the finding as to the death, and together with all the articles and moneys described in the inventory, shall be returned by the coroner or other officer, to the probate court.

"Section 2862. In case the name of the deceased person is unknown, the probate court shall make such order for the preservation of the property found on the person, other than money, as may be necessary for the future identification of the person, but if known, the court shall make such other order as to it seems best. The money found shall be applied, first, to pay the expenses of saving the body of the deceased and of the inquest and burial, and the remainder, if any, shall be paid into the county treasury and become a part of the general fund.

"Sec. 2863. When property, other than money, is found upon such person, and is not identified or claimed within one year from the time the probate court received it, after giving public notice for the period of ten days in some newspaper of general circulation in the county, the court shall proceed to sell it at public sale, and pay the proceeds thereof into the county treasury, to the credit of the general fund. If at any time thereafter, proof is made to the satisfaction of the probate court or the county commissioners, of the right of any person or persons, by inheritance or otherwise, to such funds or any part thereof, the court or commissioners shall certify the fact to the county auditor, who shall thereupon draw a warrant on the treasurer of the county, in favor of such claimant or claimants, for the sum so paid into the treasury. The prosecuting attorney of each county shall prosecute in the name of the state all suits necessary to enforce the provisions of this and the preceding section."

In connection with these statutes there should be read the following, which are in pari materia:

"Sec. 2859. When an inquest is held, as part of his finding the coroner shall give a description of the person over whose body the inquest is held, which description shall specify the name, age, sex, residence, place of nativity, color of the eyes, hair, marks, and all other particulars which may assist in the identification of the person. The coroner shall also make an inventory of all articles of property found on or about such person, describing them as minutely as can conveniently be done, and of all moneys, specifying the amount, kind and denomination thereof.

"Sec. 2860. If the friends or relatives of the deceased are known, the coroner immediately after such finding, shall give them notice, by letter or otherwise. If the friends or relatives are unknown, the coroner shall advertise in one newspaper in the proper county. In either case the coroner shall state in the notice the fact of the death, and his findings, and give a substantial description of the property mentioned in the inventory.

"Sec. 2864. No provision of this chapter shall interfere with the rights of any legally appointed and qualified administrator or executor, but such moneys and effects shall be delivered to such administrator or executor, whether before or after return thereof to the probate court."

The legislative intent embodied in these statutes is clear to me. An inventory is required in all cases; but moneys and effects belonging to a deceased person whose identity is known, and for whose estate an administrator or executor has been appointed, need not even be delivered and paid to the probate court, but it will be a sufficient return to account for them by stating that they had been delivered and paid to such an administrator or executor.

These detailed provisions are intended to apply to cases in which the identity of the deceased and his friends and relatives is unknown.

It is my opinion, therefore, that in the case you submit the money which has been paid into court should be delivered and paid to the executor or administrator of the deceased. The undertaker of whom you speak must look to the executor or administrator for the satisfaction of his claim.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CONTRACT WITH THE H. E. CULBERTSON COMPANY—ESTIMATED PART OF COST MAY BE PAID CONTRACTOR WITHOUT RELEASING SURETY.

Under the contracts with The H. E. Culbertson Company for the construction of the National road between Zanesville and Hebron in Muskingum and Licking counties, and under the proposal and contract bonds executed by the company, it is within the power of the state highway commissioner to pay to the contractor a portion of the retained estimates without releasing the surety. It would however be the part of wisdom to first obtain the formal written consent of the surety company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 14, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "In the contract of The H. E. Culbertson Company for the construction of the National road between Zanesville and Hebron in Muskingum and Licking counties, there is to date a retained percentage on the work done to the amount of something less than $45,000.00.
> "Mr. Culbertson has appealed to me for a partial allowance of this retained percentage of approximately $25,000.00 to permit him or assist him in carrying on the work.
> "If this request is granted, I will ask you what effect it would have on the contract and bond for the completion of the work.
> "I am advised by the resident engineer that the remaining portion of the work is relatively heavy and expensive to construct. While Mr. Culbertson's reputation as a contractor is good, there might be an inducement by releasing a liberal portion of the percentage retained for him to abandon the contract and involve us in vexatious delays and legal entanglements."

I have examined the contracts and bonds to which you refer and find in the specifications which are referred to in the contracts and made a part thereof, the following clause:

> "Forms and methods of payments. At the end of each month, providing the work is progressing satisfactorily, there will be made an estimate of the amount and value of material in place and work done. Eighty-five per cent. of the value so determined, less any previous payments made, will be paid to the contractor on or before the tenth day of the succeeding month. The commissioner may, at his discretion, allow a partial estimate for material delivered on the improvement. No monthly payments as a rule will be made for any amount less than five hundred dollars. Any or all estimates may be withheld indefinitely until any or all of the orders given by the commissioner, in compliance with and by virtue of the terms of the contract, have been complied with by the contractor. No partial payment shall be construed as an acceptance by the commissioner, of any material furnished or work done."

The proposal and contract bonds furnished by The H. E. Culbertson Company contain the following clause:

> "And the said surety hereby stipulates and agrees that no changes, extensions, alterations, deductions, or additions, in or to the terms of the said contract, or in or to the plans and specifications accompanying the same shall in any wise affect the obligation of said surety on its bond."

In the absence of the above quoted stipulation found in the proposal and contract bonds, I would have no hesitation in saying that if the contracts called for the retention of fifteen per cent. out of each estimate and you should subsequently modify the contracts by paying to the contractor a part of the percentage so retained, the effect of such subsequent modification in the contract would be to release the surety at least to the extent of the amount of the retained percentage paid to the contractor under the arrangements subsequently made. In the particular case under consideration, however, the surety company has expressly stipulated and agreed that no changes in the terms of the contracts shall in any wise affect the obligation of the surety on its bonds. The time of payments and the percentage of estimates to be retained are terms of the original contracts and in the bonds given to secure the performance of the contracts, the surety company has expressly agreed that its obligation on its bonds shall not be in any wise affected by changes in the terms of the contracts.

It is, therefore, my opinion that should you see fit to modify the original contracts and pay to the contractor a part of the retained percentage of the estimates already allowed, such action on your part would have no effect upon the bonds given by the contractor.

Should you see fit to pay the contractor a part of the retained estimates, it would however be the part of wisdom to first obtain the formal written consent of the surety company signing the bonds, and this consent should be executed by the proper officers of the company and not by an agent.

In this opinion I am passing only upon the legal feature of the matter expressly covered and do not desire to be taken as in any way advising either for or against the wisdom of releasing and paying to the contractor any part of the estimates retained by the state highway department, under the terms of the original contracts. The question of whether or not you should pay to the contractor any part of the percentage of estimates retained by you is one policy for your department, and it is manifest from your letter that you are fully advised as to the grave responsibilities involved in such action.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION APPROVED—THE MERCHANTS' MUTUAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of June 17, 1915, enclosing for my examination the proposed articles of incorporation of The Merchants' Mutual Insurance Association, of Holgate, Ohio.

I find that said proposed articles of incorporation are drawn in accordance with chapter 1, subdivision 2, division III, title IX, part second of the General Code of Ohio, and that the same are not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of Ohio, or of the United States.

EDWARD C. TURNER,

"Third Tract. Beginning at the southeast corner of lease lot No. 96. in sections Nos. 15 and 21, town No. 9, range No. 14 of the Ohio company's purchase and thence running north 4¾ degrees east, along the east line of said lot, 69.19 chains to the south line of one hundred and sixteen acres described in the deed of Lovina H. Silvus and Eber G. Silvus and wife to the state of Ohio, dated May 14, 1904, and recorded in deed book 93 at page 331 of record of deeds of Athens county, Ohio; thence north 68 degrees west, along the south line of said one hundred and sixteen acre tract, 15.21 chains to the middle of the county road; thence south 41 degrees west, along the middle of said road, 9.83 chains to the north line of lease lot No. 98; thence south 84 degrees east, along the north line of said lot No. 98, 11.57 chains to the northeast corner thereof; thence south 4¾ degrees west, along the west line of said lease lot No. 96, 65.57 chains to the southwest corner thereof; thence south 85¼ degrees east, along the south line of said lease lot, 9.00 chains to the place of beginning, excepting and reserving 16.27 acres off of the south end of said lease lot, and containing, after such exception, 53.13 acres, more or less."

Also the following described real estate situate in Athens township, Athens county, Ohio, and bounded and described as follows:

"First Tract. 16.27 acres off of the south end of lease lot No. 97 in sections Nos. 15 and 21, town No. 9, range No. 14, of the Ohio company's purchase.

"Second Tract. 16.27 acres off of the south end of lease lot No. 96 in sections Nos. 15 and 21, town No. 9, range No. 14 of the Ohio company's purchase."

The first three tracts above described are contained in the deed of Lovina H. Silvus, widow, and Eber G. Silvus and Rosetta Silvus, his wife, to the state of Ohio, executed May 27, 1915, before W. E. Peters, notary public in and for Franklin county, Ohio. The last two tracts above described are contained in an option to the state of Ohio, executed by Lovina H. Silvus, Eber G. Silvus and Rosetta Silvus, under date of May 27, 1915, which deed and option accompanied the abstract of title.

I have carefully examined the abstract of title and from such examination am of the opinion that on the 13th day of April, 1915, Lovina H. Silvus and Eber G. Silvus were seized of an estate in fee simple to said premises, subject only to the following:

(1) The taxes for the last half of the year 1914, due June, 1915, amounting to $43.95.

(2) The taxes for the year 1915, the amount of which are as yet undetermined.

(3) The right of William P. Wyatt to cut and remove timber from said premises until February 1, 1916, under and by virtue of a contract entered into by and between Eber G. Silvus and said William P. Wyatt, January 10, 1914.

I have also examined the deed from Lovina H. Silvus and Eber G. Silvus and wife, above referred to, and find that the same is in proper form.

The abstract, deed and option are herewith returned.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—TITLE TO SCHOOL PROPERTY VESTS IN BOARD OF EDUCATION OF CONTIGUOUS RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT WHEN VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT IS DISSOLVED—PRIOR INDEBTEDNESS OF VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT SUBJECT TO TAX OF ONLY THAT SUBDIVISION.

Upon the dissolution of a village school district under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 133, the title to the school property of said district passes to and vests in the board of education of the contiguous rural school district to which said village school district is joined, but only the property within the limits of said village school district will be subject to a tax levy for the payment of any indebtedness incurred by the board of education of said village school district, and the board of education of said rural school district has no authority in law to assume said indebtedness or to levy a tax to provide a fund for the payment thereof, either upon the property within the limits of said village school district or upon the general duplicate of the rural school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 9th, you request my opinion as follows:

"Recently Gratis township rural school district voted on the proposition to dissolve said district and annex to West Elkton village school district under provisions of 4735-1 of the General Code of Ohio. The proposition failed by one vote. The township now wants the village school district to vote under section 4682-1 on the question of dissolving the village school district and becoming a part of Gratis township rural school district. The West Elkton village school district has a bonded indebtedness of about $20,000.00. The board of education of Gratis township rural school district want to know if they can enter into a contract with the W. Elkton school district to assume this bonded indebtedness and have the same become a debt of the whole of said rural school district in the event that said village district dissolves. Under section 4689 of the General Code, as we understand it, the village could not dissolve until they had provided for taking care of this bonded indebtedness just the same as a municipal corporation. This would practically result in maintaining two tax rates for the same taxing district in the event that the village voted in favor of dissolving. No one wants this situation and the township board would like to, in consideration of the township receiving the school property of the West Elkton village district in case of dissolution, assume and agree to pay this bonded indebtedness and have the same tax rate all over the same taxing district. Can this be done? Mr. McCurdy of the bureau of uniform information says that it is being done and has been done all over the state. We would like to have your opinion on the subject at as early date as possible as they would like to have the vote as soon as they can. In the event that the contract cannot be made, or the indebtedness taken over by the township board, there will be no vote. Will you kindly give us your opinion on this subject?"

Your question has been answered in opinion No. 287 of this department, rendered to Honorable F. C. Goodrich, prosecuting attorney of Miami county, under date of April 26, 1915. This opinion holds that, upon the dissolution of a village school district under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 133, the title to the school property of said district passes to and vests in the board of education of the contiguous rural school district to which said village school district is joined, but only property within the limits of said village school district will be subject to a tax levy for the payment of any indebtedness incurred by the board of education of said village school district, and the board of education of said rural school district has no authority in law to assume said indebtedness or to levy a tax to provide a fund for the payment thereof, either upon the property within the limits of said village school district or upon the general duplicate of the rural school district. The opinion further holds that if the levy for the payment of such indebtedness will not have been made by the board of education of said village school district at the time of dissolution of said village school district as a separate taxing district, and its board of education as its taxing authority, must continue for the purpose of levying a tax for the payment of such indebtedness until such time as said indebtedness will have been paid.

I enclose herewith copy of this opinion.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISTRICT ASSESSOR—TRANSFER OF TERRITORY ON TAX LIST FROM ONE SCHOOL DISTRICT TO ANOTHER—LATEST DATE FIRST MONDAY IN JUNE.

The latest date on which a district assessor may be required to transfer territory on his tax list from one school district to another, on account of changes in the boundaries of school district lines made by the county board of education, is the first Monday in June.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 15th, requesting my opinion

> "as to the latest date on which a district assessor may be required to transfer territory on his tax list from one school district to another, on account of changes in the boundaries of school district lines made by the county board of education."

You refer to the case of State ex rel. v. Craig, 21 O. C. C., 13.

This case involved the question of the levy of municipal taxes in territory annexed to a village. It was held, in effect, that in the absence of special provisions to the contrary the boundaries of a taxing district for a given taxing year are to be determined as of the date on which the final act of the authorities levying on behalf of such district may be committed.

At that time the statute with reference to municipal corporations required the certification of the levy by the municipal authorities to the county auditor on or before the first Monday in June of each year. There was special provision for the making of the levy in annexed territory after that date, but the requirements of this provision had not been complied with. The annexation, however, had occurred prior to the first Monday in June, and it was held that the auditor could be compelled by mandamus to extend the municipal levy upon the duplicate of the annexed territory under these circumstances.

In my opinion, the principle involved in this case is sound and of universal application.

School taxes were formerly required to be levied "on or before the first Monday in June of each year" when the levy was to be made by the board of education, and "on or before the first Monday in August of each year" when the levy was to be made by the county commissioners, who have authority to act in case the board of education neglects its duties.

(See section 7594, General Code.)

The former date happens to be the same as that provided in section 5649-3a of the General Code, which requires the levying authorities of the various taxing districts "on or before the first Monday in June, each year" to submit an annual budget to the county auditor.

It is true that the budget commission does not meet for the purpose of acting on such budgets until the first Monday in August. (See section 5649-3b of the General Code, as amended 103 O. L., 552 and 104 O. L., 237; also as amended by house bill No. 342, filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state April 30, 1915, and effective July 30, 1915.)

It is true also that these dates are all directory insofar as the validity of any levy which may be made thereafter is concerned; but for the purpose of ascertaining the territory within which a given levy is to apply they are, in my opinion, determinative; and this is clearly the case if force is to be given to the decision cited.

Under the provisions of section 4736 of the General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 138, district lines may be changed by the county board of education at any time, but if such boundaries are changed after the first Monday in June in any year the levies must be made according to the original district lines, and the adjustment of revenues between or among the districts affected must be made under the provisions of section 4696 of the General Code, which is to the effect that "when territory is transferred from one school district to another, the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer * * *."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAX COMMISSION—FORM FOR MAKING RETURNS OF INCORPORATED COMPANIES—OFFICERS OF CORPORATIONS NOT REQUIRED TO ANSWER ALL QUESTIONS ON BLANK FORMS SUBMITTED—HOW TO COMPEL ANSWER FOR SUCH RETURNS.

The tax commission has authority to prescribe the form of blanks for making returns of incorporated companies, and in the exercise thereof may lawfully include in the blank forms questions the answers to which would be of assistance to the district assessor in making such revision and correction of corporate returns as he is authorized by statute to make, including questions contained in district assessors' form No. 10. However, the officers of corporations are not required to answer all such questions on the blank forms, though answers may be compelled in separate proceedings to inquire into the correctness of such returns under sections 5399 to 5403, inclusive, G. C. Such information may be used by the district assessor in verifying and checking up the return of the corporation, but not directly as the basis of an assessment of the corporate property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—With your letter of May 25th you enclose a communication from the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, signed by its secretary, the purport of which is that the executive office of the association has advised the manufacturing corporations which are members of the association that they are not obliged to answer certain questions on the first page of the blank form of returns of incorporated companies prescribed by the commission for use by the district assessors in the year 1915.

The secretary of the association asserts the claim that these questions, some twenty-eight in number, have no relation to the valuation of the taxable property of corporations for taxation, and will in no respect aid the taxing officers in arriving at a proper valuation of such property; that on the contrary many of the questions constitute an illegal and unwarranted inquisition into the private affairs of corporations and provide a means by which unprincipled persons may use information extorted in this way, to the injury of those required to answer the interrogatories; and that questions which may be admitted to have some bearing upon the value of the property of corporations are covered by other questions in the blank form and are therefore unnecessary.

The secretary of the association also states that the questions, or at least some of them, were originally prescribed by the commission upon the theory that it was possible and proper to assess the property of a corporation upon its unit value as a going concern, and calls attention to the fact that the supreme court of this state has held that this theory is erroneous and that the property of a corporation is to be considered and assessed distributively, without regard to such enhancement of value as the whole plant or property of the corporation might acquire by reason of the use of the different kinds or items of such property together for a common purpose; in other words, that what constitutes a particular subject of assessment and valuation, belonging to a corporation, is the same as what constitutes a particular subject of assessment when belonging to an individual.

In your letter you state the reasons of the commission for the inclusion in the blank forms of the questions to which objection is made. The questions are as follows:

"1. Name of corporation----------
"2. Organized under the laws of the state of ----------
"3. Location of principal office as specified in articles of incorporation ----------
"4. Authorized capital stock ----------
"5. Capital stock issued and outstanding----------
"6. Par value of each share ----------
"7. Market value of each share ----------
"8. Actual value (if there is no market value) of each share --------
"9. Surplus, undivided profits and reserve ----------
"10. Capital stock representing patents or good will ----------
"11. Bonded indebtedness ----------
"12. Assessed value of real estate in said county in daily operation ----------
"13. Assessed value of other real estate in said county ----------
"14. Fire insurance carried on building in said county ----------
"15. Fire insurance carried on personal property in said county ------
"16. Money on hand or in bank in said county on the day preceding the first Monday of April, 191--, ----------
"17. Money in bank outside of said county on the day preceding the the first Monday of April, 191--, ----------
"18. Accounts receivable on the day preceding the first Monday of April, 191--, ----------
"19. Other credits on the day preceding the first Monday of April, 191--, ----------
"20. Accounts and bills payable on the day preceding the first Monday of April, 191--, ----------
"21. Last inventory of real property in said county ----------
"22. Last inventory of personal property in said county ----------
"23. Last inventory of real property in Ohio and outside of said county ----------
"24. Last inventory of personal property in Ohio outside of said county ----------
"25. Last inventory of real property outside of Ohio ----------
"26. Last inventory of personal property outside of Ohio ----------
"27. Date of last inventory taken ----------
"28. Merchandise, stock, machinery or other property on consignment on the day preceding the first Monday of April ----------"

Your statement of the commission's view as to these questions and the reasons for incorporating them in the blank is as follows:

"Questions 1 to 3, inclusive, are necessary in order to procure the name of the corporation to be taxed and the situs of its property.

"Questions 4 to 15, inclusive, bear upon the total value of the property of the company and are used, not for the purpose of fixing the valuation upon the basis of capitalization, but for the purpose of giving the district assessor an opportunity to know whether the aggregate of all the items of property returned by the company bears some relation to the capitalization. The answers to these questions are used as a basis of inquiry upon notice to the corporation to appear before the district assessor and not for fixing arbitrary valuations in accordance with the capital.

"Questions 16 and 17 are asked in order that the district assessor may see that the corporation—if an Ohio corporation—returns not only money located in the county in which the corporation has its principal office, but also the money on deposit in other places. It frequently finds in incorporated companies a failure to report for taxation money on deposit in other counties which is taxable in the county where the corporation is located.

"Questions 18, 19 and 20 are asked for the purpose of making a distinction between accounts receivable and bills receivable, and other forms of credits. It is frequently found that accounts receivable are not returned as credits, or at least not at their true value.

"Questions 21 to 28, inclusive, bear upon the value of the property reported on the second page of the blank under items 1 to 12, inclusive.

"The commission believes that it is fully warranted in law in prescribing these questions to be answered by an incorporated company and desires your opinion in the matter.

"Concerning the second paragraph of the enclosed letter, the commission desires to say that the blank for 1915 was not issued under a theory that it was possible and proper to assess the property of a manufacturing corporation upon its unit value, as a comparison of the blank for 1915 with that of 1914, clearly indicates."

No question is raised by the Ohio Manufacturers' Association as to the authority of the commission to prescribe proper blank forms for use in making returns of the property of incorporated companies. The statutes clearly confer this power and duty upon the commission. (See section 5624-8, G. C., section 55 of the Warnes law, so-called, 103 O. L., 800.)

Right at this point, however, I am constrained to advise that there is no direct obligation on the part of the officers of any corporation to answer on the blank form any of these questions; so that the advice which the secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association says has been given to the corporate members of such association is technically correct, though not necessarily for the reasons assigned by him in his letter to the commission.

Sections 5404 and 5405 of the General Code, require the proper officers of every incorporated company, except those whose taxation is otherwise specifically provided for, to list the personal property thereof for taxation and to return the same to the auditors of the respective counties where the property is situated. Section 5406, General Code, provides for furnishing the necessary blanks for making such returns. This is as far as the statutes go in imposing duties upon the officers of corporations. They are required to list and return the property of their respective corporations, but not to answer questions bearing upon the correctness of their own valuations of such property.

The provision which is lacking here is one like section 1465-18, of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Sec. 1465-18. Each company, firm, corporation, person, association, co-partnership or public utility, shall furnish the commission in the form of returns prescribed by it all information required by law and all other facts and information, in addition to the facts and information in this act specifically required to be given, which the commission may require to enable it to carry into effect the provisions of the laws which the commission is required to administer, and shall make specific answers to all questions submitted by the commission."

In my opinion, some such provision as this is necessary in order to impose any specific duty upon the officers of corporations to answer on such blank form such questions as those about which you inquire.

It is true that section 55 of the Warnes law, supra, after giving to the tax commission the authority which has been described, provides further that > "* * * All persons required to list property for taxation shall use true copies of such blank forms."

This provision, however, does not, in my opinion, have the effect either of authorizing the commission to prescribe anything but a form for listing property or of requiring persons required to list property to do anything except to list property. That is to say, the answers to the questions which have been quoted do not constitute a listing of property. On the contrary, they merely afford information by the use of which the taxing authorities may form a judgment as to whether or not the property actually listed on another page of the blank is fully listed, or listed at its true value in money by the officers of the corporation.

While the authority of the commission to prescribe a form of tax list, including these questions, cannot be doubted, its authority to require answers to them as a part of the act of tax listing cannot be sustained; and the duty of the persons required to list to answer such questions cannot be predicated upon their duty to "use true copies of such blank forms."

My predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to the commission respecting a similar question, (found in the report of the attorney general for the year 1912, page 545) held that such questions might properly be prescribed in the blank forms and that corporations should answer all such pertinent questions so prescribed, for the reason that if answer were not made the county auditor (the then assessing officer) might, in the exercise of the powers of inquiry and correction given to him by sections 5398 to 5403, inclusive, of the General Code, call their officers before him and examine them generally as to facts bearing upon the correctness of the valuations given in their original returns, compelling answers to all such pertinent questions by proceedings in contempt as provided in section 5403 of the General Code.

Mr. Hogan did not hold that the officers of corporations were under any direct, legal obligation to answer the questions prescribed in the blank form, but merely that the county auditor had the power to ask such questions in another proceeding, so that a corporation might avoid the necessity of such separate proceeding by answering them in the first instance.

When I express the view, then, that such general questions, assuming them to bear upon the value of the corporate property as such, need not be answered by the officers making out the returns, except at their pleasure, I do not in any way modify Mr. Hogan's opinion.

There remains to be considered the question as to whether or not the questions, about which the Ohio Manufacturers' Association complains, may be properly prescribed by the commission, it being understood that there is no direct obligation to answer them.

As I have stated, Mr. Hogan's conclusion in the opinion to which I have referred was that because the county auditor was authorized to correct returns he might lawfully make such inquiries of the officers of corporations required to make returns as would aid him in arriving at the true value in money of the property returned; so that the blank prescribed for his use by the tax commission might lawfully contain such questions.

Of course, at the present time the power and duties of the county auditor, both with respect to the assessment of corporate property and with respect to making corrections, are vested in and imposed upon the district assessor (section 5 of the Warnes law, section 5585, G. C.).

The following is an abstract of such powers formerly possessed by the auditor but now possessed by the district assessor:

(1) To "ascertain and determine the value of the property of such (incorporated) companies." (Section 5405, General Code.)

This provision makes the auditor in effect the assessor as to the property of incorporated companies. In this respect there has been a change in the phraseology of the section, as prior to its amendment in 102 O. L., 60, the statute did not contain this language.

(2) To "have the property valued and assessed" if "of the opinion that false or incorrect valuations have been made, that the property of the corporation or association has not been listed at its full value, or that it has not been listed in the location where it properly belongs, or if no return has been made." (Section 5406, General Code.)

Of course, this provision seems to be inconsistent with the direct assessing power given to the auditor (and now the assessor) by section 5405, G. C. However, it has been held in several cases that the return of an incorporated company made under oath is still entitled to the presumption which was originally accorded to a return made under oath, and which is still accorded to a sworn return of an individual. So that changes in valuations as fixed by the officers of the corporation in listing its property are still said to be additions or deductions from original returns instead of original assessments by the auditor.

This was seemingly one of the points decided in the case of Champion Coated Paper Co. v. Long, treasurer, referred to by the secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association. A somewhat similar holding was made in the case of Fearon Lumber & Veneer Co. v. Robinson, auditor, 18 C. C. (n. s.) 146, in which it was decided that an annual county board of equalization was without power to add to the return of an incorporated company after the amendment of section 5405, G. C., without notice and without placing a statement of the facts upon its records, such a return being a "return made under oath."

These decisions make the question as to the status of the return of an incorporated company in the hands of the auditor somewhat doubtful, being seemingly inconsistent with the plain requirement of section 5405, to the effect that the auditor shall ascertain and determine for himself the true value in money of the property of the corporation, from which the inference seems irresistible that the valuations placed upon its property by the corporation are not primarily binding upon the auditor, as formerly. At any rate, the situation is such as to call for a further examination into the powers of the auditor in revising and correcting corporate returns, assuming them to have the status of original assessments or valuations.

Section 5406, G. C., as above quoted, provides in terms that the auditor, if he is in doubt as to the correctness of a return made by an incorporated company, "shall have the property valued and assessed," but affords no machinery whatever for such valuation and assessment. There is machinery, however, for the correction of corporate returns, which will be hereinafter dealt with.

(3) To correct corporate returns under section 5399, General Code, which provides that if any person required to make return to the auditor fails to make a return, makes return of a portion only of his taxable property, or fails to return his taxable property or any part thereof according to the true value in money, the auditor (now, of course, the assessor) shall "ascertain as near as practicable the true amount of personal property, moneys, credits and investments that such person ought to have returned or listed, and the true value at which it should have been taxed in his county for not exceeding the five years next preceding the year in which the inquiries and corrections provided for in this section and in the next preceding and the next two succeeding sections are made."

This section applies "to all kinds of omitted property for the taxation of which, for any of the years in which it was omitted, provision has not been made by law." The exact effect of this provision is not clear, the question being as to whether it authorizes corrections to be made for the current year. This is expressly authorized by section 5401 as to returns of assessors, but inasmuch as corporate property is not assessed through assessors, some doubt is raised as to whether section 5401 applies, in view of the reference to the "next two succeeding sections" in section 5399. However, in State ex rel. v. Halliday, 61 O. S., 352, it seems to have been assumed that the power to correct for the current year existed. Bradbury, C. J., stated in the opinion at page 373, that > "if any mistakes or errors occur in these returns either on the part of the persons making them or of a county auditor, whether such mistakes and errors consist in omitting to return all property lawfully taxable, or in the values placed on that returned, or both, there is provided by law an appropriate remedy for the same."

and the context makes it seem that Judge Bradbury had in mind proceedings by the county auditor, for in the previous sentence he said:

> "The duty of fixing its value for taxation and making return thereof to the county auditor devolved on its officers and agents, subject, of course, to the control and revision of the former."

It seems, therefore, that the statutes so far abstracted have been interpreted together so as to give the auditor the power to revise and correct the returns of corporations as to the current year, as well as to the five years next preceding. This is further exemplified by the reference in section 5403, G. C., which provides generally for proceedings in the probate court to compel persons to appear before the county auditor and give testimony, to "proceedings against companies or corporations required to make return to the county auditor for taxation."

Reading all the sections together, it is clear that the auditor has at least the power to revise and correct corporate returns, and in that capacity to summon persons to appear before him and give testimony and, by the proceedings provided by section 5403, G. C., to compel answers to questions put to them by him "touching the matter under examination."

Assuming for the moment that the district assessor, succeeding to the powers of the auditor, would have the right to question the correctness of a return made by a corporation, to call its officers before him and examine them under oath as to the value of such property, and instead of doing this, for his own convenience, may submit certain questions which will assist him in determining the correctness of the return and incorporate them in the blank form of return, leaving it optional with the officers of the company to answer them or not, at the peril of being called before the assessor, there remains to be considered the question as to whether the specific questions to which your inquiry relates are material as reflecting upon the value of the different items of corporate property.

As you state in your letter, the first three questions are necessary in order to procure the name of the corporation to be taxed and the situs of its property. No objection can be made to these questions.

No objection can be made to questions 12 and 13, relating to the assessed value of real estate. To be sure, these questions are asked in another form on the second page of the blank, but the questions on the first page are more specific and afford a means of comparison by which the assessor can better arrive at the assessed value of the real estate in the county used in daily operation, on the basis of which, in part, he must distribute the value of the personal property as determined by him under section 5405 of the General Code, which requires that when the value of the personal property is ascertained it "shall be apportioned by the auditor to such * * * taxing districts * * * in proportion to the value of the real estate and fixed property included in the return, in each of such * * * taxing districts."

The 15th question, relating to fire insurance carried on personal property in the county, is certainly pertinent. In inquiring as to the correctness of a return of personal property, the assessing officer may, in my opinion, investigate the amount of fire insurance carried thereon, for reasons which it seems to me are obvious.

Questions 16 to 28, inclusive, cannot be objected to. It is true that these questions are in a way covered by the return itself and the questions asked on the other pages of the blank, but, as you state in your letter, experience shows that property is likely to escape returns and taxation when it is listed in the ordinary way, and these questions, by the additional detailed information which may be elicited, are of undoubted pertinency and value in checking the more general return.

The 4th to the 11th questions on the first page of the blank, together with the 14th, present a more difficult problem. It is true, of course, that the capital stock, surplus and bonded indebtedness of a corporation do not reflect directly upon the value of the separate articles of personal property which it may own, but rather upon the value of the corporation's property considered as an entirety or unit and as a going concern. You state in your letter that such questions are asked "not for the purpose of fixing the valuation upon the basis of capitalization, but for the purpose of giving the district assessor an opportunity to know whether the aggregate of all the items of property returned by the company bears some relation to the capitalization. The answers to these questions are used as a basis of inquiry upon notice to the corporation to appear before the district assessor and not for fixing arbitrary valuations in accordance with the capital."

You make this statement with respect to questions 4 to 15, inclusive, and it is to be noted in this connection that the assessed value of the real estate and fire insurance carried on personal property, together with the questions to which I have referred, would have to be asked in order to give a true index to the value of the corporate property as a unit.

There is no question in my mind that the secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association is correct in assuming that this group of questions at any rate is designed to show what the unit value of the corporation's property is. Does it, however, follow that because the assessment may not be made on the unit basis the assessing officer is precluded from considering the unit value of the property, in an effort to account for all the corporate property considered distributively and to assign to each item thereof its proper distributive value?

I think the answer to this question is in the negative. I see no objection to a district assessor ascertaining what the value of the entire property of a corporation is and then proceeding, by inquiry or otherwise, to resolve the unit value into its component parts, so long as the corporation is permitted to explain what is represented by its capital stock, surplus and bonded indebtedness and to have proper deductions made for good will or earning capacity, management and profits, patent rights and other non-taxable elements, and so long as the assessor must actually and separately value each group or item of things constituting personal property.

It seems to me that the unit value might, in many conceivable cases, afford a very valuable index to the distributive value in just this way.

In this connection I observe that the 10th question inquires as to the "capital stock representing patents and good will"; that the 12th and 13th questions relate to the assessed value of real estate. Where the property of a corporation is all located in one county, a deduction of the values scheduled in answer to these three questions from the gross sum arrived at by adding together the actual value of the capital stock and the bonded indebtedness should, in almost every case, furnish a very close criterion to the actual physical value of the personal property. This might not have been true in former years when real estate was valued for taxation quadrennially, but under the present law, when real estate is supposed at least to be assessed annually at its true value in money, there should be no difference between the actual value of real estate as assets of the corporation and the assessed value thereof; at least there should be no difference for purposes of taxation.

Of course, the result arrived at in this way is the mere suggestion as to what the aggregate value of the different items of personal property is, and can be used by the assessor only in checking such aggregate value with the figures returned by the corporation itself, and not as the basis of any unit assessment.

The question being, then, as to whether the group of questions last considered is pertinent and material in an inquiry as to whether or not a corporation has returned all of its taxable personal property, I am of the opinion that the answer thereto is in the affirmative.

Of course, where the property of a corporation is situated in more than one county, these questions would be of no value whatever without other questions which are included in the list, such as the value of property located outside of the county. However, questions 21 to 26, inclusive, cover more or less accurately the necessary facts to apply the other group of questions which has been considered even to corporations in this situation.

Even the technical rules of evidence, which by no means govern taxing boards and officers in the inquiries which they are authorized to make, justify the use of such evidence as this in arriving at the facts sought to be established. As Professor Wigmore says in his work on Evidence,

> "the second axiom on which our law of evidence rests is this: All facts having a rational probative value are admissible, unless some specific rule forbids."

I have explained why the going concern value of the property of a corporation, taken in connection with the facts showing what deductions should be made therefrom, tends to prove the aggregate distributive or physical value of the property. The only technical rule of evidence which could be invoked to prevent the admission of such evidence which occurs to me is what is known as the "best evidence rule." That is, it might be asserted that actual view of the property, investigation into the market value of each class of property considered distributively, etc., afford better evidence of such value than facts of the kind which have been discussed.

I do not think the taxing authorities are bound by the "best evidence rule." Be that as it may, however, value is after all but a question of judgment and opinion, and is never a perfectly demonstrable fact. It is provable by view, by estimation and by opinion testimony. Hence, it seems that any evidence having probative worth is properly admissible. Admissibility falls short of proof or demonstration (Wigmore, section 12). So evidence of this character may, in many conceivable cases, fall short of proving or demonstrating anything with respect to the aggregate physical or distributive value of the personal property of the corporation. This, however, does not destroy its relevancy.

In State ex rel. v. Jones, auditor, 51 O. S., 492, at pages 512 et seq., will be found a discussion of the relation between the value of the capital stock of a corporation and the value of its tangible property, as well as of the philosophy underlying the so-called "unit rule." The language of the opinion of the court in this case bears out the statements herein made.

I conclude, therefore, that all of the questions which the commission has prescribed on the blank forms for the returns of incorporated companies are questions which the district assessor is entitled to ask in order to assist him in arriving at the physical and distributive value of the property of such a company. Being such, I am further of the opinion that they may lawfully be incorporated in the form of returns. As previously stated, such companies are not required to answer these questions on the blank forms in the sense that any penalty may be visited upon them for failing to do so, nor in the sense that their return without answers to these questions would not be a valid return. So that if the officers of a corporation prefer to answer these questions personally upon being called before the district assessor for the purpose of inquiry and correction, they may take this course. Should they fail or refuse to answer such questions in such a proceeding, however, they may, under the provisions of section 5403 of the General Code, be compelled to do so by proceedings in the probate court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CONTRACTS MAY BE ENTERED INTO IN ANTICIPATION OF MONEYS THAT WILL COME INTO STATE TREASURY AT AUGUST, 1915, SETTLEMENT—CERTAIN CONDITIONS.

The state highway commissioner may at the present time enter into contracts in anticipation of the moneys that will come into the state treasury at the August, 1915, settlement, provided such contracts are so arranged that it will not be necessary to actually make any payments to contractors from the proceeds of the August settlement until the funds have come into the state treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 17, 1915, in which you state that you are submitting, under separate cover, final resolutions relating to inter-county highway improvements, that these resolutions call for a sum larger than that available from the proceeds of the February, 1915, settlement, now in the state treasury and appropriated by house bill No. 314, and that you desire my opinion as to whether or not your department may legally enter into contracts at this time in anticipation of the moneys that will come into the state treasury at the August, 1915, settlement and which moneys are appropriated in the first item of house bill No. 709.

While the resolutions submitted by you do not raise the question which you propound, I deem it proper, nevertheless, to answer your inquiry, inasmuch as this question will necessarily arise in the near future.

A similar question was answered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion to the state highway commissioner rendered May 23, 1914, in which it was held that it was both proper and legal for the state highway department to contract for the aggregate amount of money that had been levied and appropriated for the entire tax year, even though the second installment of the tax had not come into the state treasury and would not come into the state treasury until August, for the reason that such installment of tax had been levied, placed on the duplicate and was in the process of collection and would be in the state treasury before it was actually needed and before the fund arising from the first installment of the year's tax would have been exhausted in payments to contractors on estimates.

I concur in the views expressed by my predecessor in the opinion above referred to.

Under the appropriation measures now in force and relating to the inter-county highway funds of your department there are, therefore, now the following sums available for contract purposes:

> "1. The item of $780,976.50 carried by house bill No. 314 and being $8,874.73 for each county.
> "2. The item of $478,138.67, being the second item carried by house bill No. 709 and being a sum equal to the balances which existed in the inter-county highway fund to the credit of the several counties of the state, with certain exceptions, on the 12th day of March, 1915, and which balances were lapsed by the provisions of house bill No. 314.
> "3. The sum of $707,100.00, being the first item carried by house bill No. 709 and being the sum of $8,035.22 for each county, this being the proceeds of the August, 1915, settlement and being the appropriation about which you specifically inquire."

The item of $780,976.50 carried by house bill No. 314 and the item of $478,138.67, carried by house bill No. 709, represent funds now in the state treasury and the item of $707,100.00, carried by house bill No. 709, represents the money that will come into the state treasury at the August, 1915, settlement.

Under the terms of house bill No. 314 the item carried by that bill is now available for contract purposes and under the provisions of house bill No. 709 the various items carried in that bill were available for contract purposes as soon as the bill became a law, which was on June 4, 1915, unless the fact that certain items in the bill represent moneys that are not yet in the state treasury should be taken to require an opposite conclusion.

It is a matter of common knowledge that it requires a considerable time, even after a contract is let, before the work can be so far prosecuted by the contractor as to require or even warrant the payment of estimates.

The appropriation about which you inquire, as has before been observed, represents a tax that has been levied, placed on the duplicate and is in the process of collection and that will come into the state treasury at the August, 1915, settlement and the legislature has appropriated the same and sought to make it available for contract purposes at the present time. To hold that contracts might not be entered into, where the contractors are to be paid either in whole or in part from this appropriation, would serve no useful purpose and the only result would be to delay the letting of contracts until so late in the working season that little could be accomplished by the contractors before the coming of bad weather would interfere with the work.

Answering your question specifically, it is, therefore, my opinion that you may at the present time enter into contracts in anticipation of the moneys that will come into the state treasury at the August, 1915, settlement. The only precaution to be observed by you in the premises being to so arrange the contracts that it will not be necessary to actually make any payments to the contractors from the appropriation about which you inquire until after the funds represented by such appropriation shall have come into the state treasury.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CONTRACTS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS SHOULD FILE WRITTEN AGREEMENT WITH HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER AS TO AMOUNT COUNTY WILL PAY BEFORE STATE SHOULD CO-OPERATE WITH LOCAL AUTHORITIES—ATTORNEY GENERAL SHOULD APPROVE CONTRACT AS TO FORM AND LEGALITY.

Under section 1212, G. C. 103 O. L., 457, no contract should be let by the state highway commissioner or work done by him where the co-operation of the local authorities is contemplated unless the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement is to be made shall have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance the share of the cost and expense over and above the amount to be paid by the state, and such agreement shall have been filed in the office of the state highway commissioner with the approval of the attorney general thereon as to form and legality.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 17, 1915, transmitting to me for my examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

"Paulding-Woodburn, Paulding county, Pet. No. 1404, I. C. H. No. 433.
"Toledo-Wauseon, Fulton county, Pet. No. 1221, I. C. H., No. 20.
"Mansfield-Norwalk, Richland county, Pet. No. 822, I. C. H. No. 287.
"Mansfield-Shelby, Richland county, Pet. No. 823, I. C. H. No. 436."

As to the resolutions pertaining to the improvements in Paulding and Fulton counties, I find the same to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning these resolutions with my approval endorsed thereon.

In reference to the two resolutions pertaining to improvements in Richland county, it appears that these resolutions were adopted by the board of county commissioners of Richland county on July 18, 1914, and were received by the then state highway commissioner on July 23, 1914. These resolutions were not submitted to the then attorney general for approval and on August 4, 1914, contracts for the construction of the improvements covered by these resolutions were awarded to The J. W. Rusk Construction Company and this company is now engaged upon the work and has been paid substantial estimates.

The letting of contracts to The J. W. Rusk Construction Company for these improvements, without first securing the approval of the attorney general upon the resolutions, was in violation of the plain provisions section 1212, G. C., 103 O. L., 457, which provides in part that no contract shall be let by the highway commissioner or work done by him where the co-operation of the local authorities is contemplated unless the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement is to be made shall have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance the share of the cost and expense over and above the amount to be paid by the state and that such agreement shall be filed in the office of the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the attorney general thereon as to form and legality.

In the instances now under consideration the agreements required by section 1212, G. C., were made by the county commissioners, but the approval of the then attorney general was not secured. I find that these resolutions are in regular form and that they would have been entitled to approval had they been presented to my predecessor, in office at the time they were received by the then state highway commissioner, on July 23, 1914.

Without herein passing upon the effect of the failure of your predecessor to secure the approval of the then attorney general to these final resolutions before letting contracts for the improvements in question, and without passing upon the question of whether or not an approval of the resolutions by this department at the present time would serve to cure any infirmities existing by reason of the facts above stated, I am returning the resolutions, with my approval endorsed thereon and with the further observation, as above indicated, that the letting of the contracts in question was premature and that, under section 1212, G. C., no contracts of this character should have been let until the agreement of the county commissioners to assume the share of the cost and expense over and above the amount to be paid by the state were filed in the office of the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the attorney general endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MEMBER OF BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHAT CONSTITUTES TEMPORARY REMOVAL FROM DISTRICT—NO VACANCY IN BOARD IN CASE OF TEMPORARY REMOVAL.

Where the facts in a particular case show that the removal of a member of the board of education of a school district is only temporary; that he maintains a home in said district during his absence and that he fully intends to return to said district at a specified time, said removal does not create a vacancy in said board of education within the meaning of section 4748, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 1st, you request my opinion as follows:

"Frank Bradney was elected as a member of the board of education for Meigs township, Adams county, Ohio, at the last regular election and was qualified and has acted as such member until the present time.

"On March 1, 1915, he removed to an adjoining township, as he claims, temporarily, with the intention of returning to Meigs township and claims Meigs township as his voting place and place of residence. Since his removal from the township he has continued to attend the meetings of the Meigs township board and desires to continue a member of this board. Has his removal created a vacancy under section 4748 of the General Code of Ohio?"

In answer to my request for additional information you state that the said Frank Bradney, member of the board of education of Meigs township rural school district, is married; that he has moved his household goods into the adjoining township and his family is living there; that it was his purpose in moving into said adjoining township to raise a crop during the present year and he contemplates moving back into said school district when the crop is gathered; that he still maintains a home in said school district and so stated in the local paper before moving into said adjoining township.

Section 4748 of the General Code provides:

"A vacancy in any board of education may be caused by death, nonresidence, resignation, removal from office, failure of a person elected or appointed to qualify within ten days after the organization of the board or of his appointment, removal from the district or absence from meetings of the board for a period of ninety days, if such absence is caused by reasons declared insufficient by a two-thirds vote of the remaining members of the board, which vote must be taken and entered upon the records of the board not less than thirty days after such absence. Any such vacancy shall be filled by the board at its next regular or special meeting, or as soon thereafter as possible, by election for the unexpired term. A majority vote of all the remaining members of the board may fill any such vacancy."

It will be observed that this section specifically provides that a vacancy in any board of education may be caused by removal from the district. The question arises whether, in view of the facts submitted by you, the removal of the member in question created a vacancy within the meaning of the above provision of the statute.

In an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. Frank W. Miller, superintendent of public instruction, under date of June 19, 1914, the question asked by Mr. Miller was as follows:

"A legally elected member of the Canton board of education has temporarily removed from the city of Canton. Under these conditions is he still a member of the said board of education with all the rights and powers of a member of the said board?"

As stated in the opinion, it appeared from the statement of facts attached to said inquiry that the member of the board of education of the Canton city school district had removed from said school district for an indefinite period of time and was living on a farm outside of the said school district of the city of Canton.

Mr. Miller's question was answered by reference to the provisions of section 4748, G. C., as above quoted. The opinion held that the word "may" used in said section, should be read as "shall," and that the removal of said member of the Canton board of education from the city school district of Canton created a vacancy on said board within the meaning of the statute.

From the statement of facts upon which the above opinion was based, it will be observed that the member in question had removed from the Canton city school district for an indefinite period of time and that he was not maintaining a home within said district. There is nothing in said statement of facts to show that the removal of said member was only temporary and that it was his intention to return to said school district at any specified time in the future.

The facts in the case under consideration are materially different from those in the case above referred to. The member of the board of education of Meigs township rural school district is maintaining a home in said district, and before removing to the adjoining township he made public a statement to the effect that his removal was only temporary, and that he intends to return to said home in said district in the fall of the present year. He still claims Meigs township as his voting place and place of residence. He has continued to attend the meetings of the board of education of said school district and desires to continue a member of said board.

It seems clear, therefore, that the removal of said member is only temporary and that he fully expects and intends to return to his home in said school district at the time above stated.

Mechem, in his work on Public Offices and Officers, at section 438, lays down the following rule:

> "Where the law thus requires the officer to reside within the district which he represents, and a fortiori so where it expressly declares that his removal from the district shall create a vacancy, a permanent removal from the district represented will be deemed an abandonment of the office and a vacancy will result.
> "But a merely temporary removal for a limited time and with no intention to abandon or surrender the office or to cease to perform its duties, will not have this effect."

In support of this proposition the following authorities are cited:

Yonkey v. State, 27 Ind., 236.
Curry v. Stewart, 8 Bush (Ky.) 560.
State v. Graham, 26 La. Ann. 568.
People v. Parker, 3 Neb. 409.

In the case of Curry v. Stewart, supra, the court held that temporary absence from the district represented for the purpose of engaging in business for a limited time will not amount to an abandonment of the office, but that a permanent removal by an officer from the district represented will at once ipso facto affect the office.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that, in view of the facts in this particular case, the removal of said member from said rural school district into the adjoining township does not create a vacancy within the meaning of section 4748, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—CONTRACT TO BUILD EXTENSION TO MIDDLETOWN DAM—AMOUNT TO BE PAID.

Under the facts as submitted by the superintendent of public works, Frank J. Davis, who contracted to build an extension dam and buttress to the Middletown dam is now entitled to receive the sum of $1,969.16 and no more.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 21, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 1, 1915, relating to a certain contract entered into on September 23, 1913, between the state of Ohio, acting by and through yourself as superintendent of public works, and Frank J. Davis, of Middletown, Ohio, the contract being for the furnishing of material and the building of an extension dam and buttress to the Middletown dam near Middletown, Ohio. Under the terms of this contract the work was to have been completed by January 1, 1914, but on December 20, 1913, the time for the completion of the contract was extended to April 1, 1914, and the fact of this extension in time was endorsed by you on the original contract.

In the last of March, 1914, a freshet in the Miami river washed away the temporary dam which was built by the state to supply the feeder to the canal and also serve as a cofferdam for the new construction being carried on by Mr. Davis. You state that when the first of April came the work comprised within the Davis contract was in such condition that, acting under the terms of the contract and following the advice of the then attorney general, your department revoked the contract and took over the work under the terms described in sections 27 and 28 of the general specifications, said specifications being referred to in the contract and made a part thereof.

The contract in question was on a unit price basis, and the estimated amount of work was only an approximation. You state that the nature of such work makes it impossible to do otherwise than to approximate the amount of excavation, backfill, number of yards of concrete, etc., and that such work must therefore of necessity be let on a unit price basis rather than on lump sum bids. The contractor was given four estimates on the work done by him, the first being given November 5, 1913, and the last February 5, 1914. The aggregate of these estimates was $9,897.70, of which sum $7,918.16 was paid to the contractor, while twenty per cent. or $1,979.54 was under the terms of the contract retained by you.

You state that the department of public works took charge of the contract on the 3rd day of April, 1914, purchased the necessary material, supplied the equipment and hired the men, and completed the work at a cost substantially below the maximum estimate. The contractor was given an allowance for all material ordered by him and used by the state, and such of his machinery as could be used by the state was overhauled and he was allowed the customary price for the use of the same. The contractor was allowed the sum of $1,138.75 for the use of his tools and for material left by him, and was charged with the sum of $1,149.13, being the cost of repairing and cleaning his machinery and the cost of restoring a wall which has been built by the contractor and for which he had been paid, but which was destroyed by the freshet late in March, 1914. The above mentioned charge against the contractor exceeds the credit allowed to him for the use of tools and machinery by $10.38.

The work was completed by the state in September, 1914, and a controversy has arisen as to the amount of compensation, if any, which the contractor is entitled to receive, one theory being that the contractor is now entitled to receive the twenty per cent. retained by the state out of the estimates allowed to him for work actually done by him, less the sum of $10.38 referred to above, while the contractor maintains that he is entitled to receive not only the retained per cent. amounting to $1,979.54, but also the difference between his bid for the work not done by him and the actual cost to the state of doing such work, this difference amounting to a very considerable sum by reason of the fact that the state was able to do the work at a cost substantially below the amount of the contractor's bid.

Sections 27 and 28 of the general specifications referred to by you are as follows:

> "Section 27. If at any time the superintendent of public works shall be of the opinion that said work is unnecessarily delayed and will not be finished in the time named in contract, he shall notify the contractor in writing to that effect. If the contractor shall not within five days thereafter take such measure as will, in the judgment of the superintendent, insure the satisfactory completion of the work, the superintendent shall notify the aforesaid contractor to discontinue all work under the contract, and the contractor hereby agrees that he will immediately respect said notice and stop work and cease to have any right to possession of the ground.
> "Section 28. Should the superintendent notify the contractor to discontinue work, as provided in section 27, he may then place the required number of persons as he may deem advisable, by contract or otherwise, on the work and use such materials and tools as he may find thereon, or procure other materials and masonry equipment to complete the said work, and shall all costs and expenses thus incurred for labor, materials, and equipment to said contractor, and the costs and expenses so charged shall be deducted and paid out of any moneys due, or that may thereafter become due, to the said contractor; and in case such costs and expenses are less than the sum which would have been payable to the contractor under his contract (if the same had been completed by him), he shall be entitled to receive the remainder or difference; and in case said costs and expenses are greater than said sum, then the contractor, or his sureties, shall pay to the state of Ohio, department of public works, the amount the costs and expenses are in excess of the said sum, the payment of which, to be made within 20 days after receiving notice thereof."

The provisions of sections 27 and 28 of the general specifications, quoted above, were also incorporated in the contract, and the specifications further provide that the superintendent of public works may at any time prior to, or within ten days after the date named in the contract for the completion of the work, grant an extension of time for said completion and fix a definite date to which the extension of time is granted.

You state that your department took over the work under the terms of sections 27 and 28 of the specifications, and from the files in your office it appears that on April 3, 1915, you addressed the following communication to the contractor:

> "Agreeable to our conversation of March 30th and also of April 2nd, I wish to notify you that your contract for constructing the extension dam at Middletown is annulled, and we shall proceed to finish the work as provided in sections 27 and 28 of said contract."

Despite the language used by you in your communication to me and in your letter to the contractor, quoted above, it is apparent that you could not be held to have taken over the works under sections 27 and 28 of the specifications, for these sections apply only to the taking over of the work during the time given to the contractor for completion. If your statement that you took over the work under these sections were correct, then the present claims of the contractor as to the amount of compensation due him would also be correct. The very fact that your department did not take over the work under sections 27 and 28 is to my mind the decisive fact in the controversy now existing between the state and the contractor.

The contractor agreed to complete the work in question by January 1, 1914. On December 20, 1913, the superintendent of public works extended the time for completion to April 1, 1914. The contractor failed either to complete the work or to make substantial progress on the same by April 1, 1914, less than twenty-five per cent. of the work being finished on that date, and the superintendent of public works did not grant any further extension of time. It is apparent from the terms of the contract and specifications that the parties regarded the time of completion as one of the essential elements of the contract. When the superintendent of public works took over the work on April 3, 1914, he could not have been acting under sections 27 and 28 of the specifications or under the corresponding provisions of the contract, because the same were by their terms limited to the taking over of the work before the time named in the contract for its completion, on account of unnecessary delays on the part of the contractor, which delays might threaten the completion of the work within the time fixed in the contract.

It is not every breach of a contract that will operate to discharge the same, but in the case now under consideration it is evident that there was such a breach on the part of the contractor as to operate as a discharge. As before observed, the contract and specifications point unmistakably to the fact that the parties to the contract had in mind that time was an essential element.

Although given one extension of three months, the contractor failed to complete more than about twenty-five per cent. of the work and by his delay in violation of the terms of his contract, the work which he had completed and for which he had been allowed estimates, was left in such shape that it was badly damaged by a freshet in the last of March, 1914; whereas, had the contractor kept his contract, the work would have been so far advanced at the time of the freshet as to have escaped any damage therefrom. The contractor having broken his contract, and sections 27 and 28 of the specifications and the corresponding provisions of the contract not having any application to the facts now under consideration, I am of the opinion that the claim of the contractor, insofar as it extends to the difference between the amount of his bid and the cost to the state of doing the work after he had broken his contract, must be rejected. Any other conclusion would not only do violence to the terms of the contract and give an unwarranted application to sections 27 and 28 of the specifications, but it would also put a premium on inefficiency and delay on the part of contractors on public work of this class; and in this particular case a different conclusion would allow the contractor, after a breach of the contract on his part, to reap a reward of several thousand dollars from his own delay and the further fact that the state was subsequently able to complete the work at a cost substantially below the contractor's bid.

As to the $1.969.16 held by the state out of the estimates allowed the contractor, the controlling purpose in retaining the same was to protect the state in case of a subsequent breach on the part of the contractor. While the contract was subsequently broken by the contractor, yet it appears that no damage resulted to the state. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the contractor should be paid the sum of $1,969.16, being the sum retained by the state out of estimates allowed the contractor for work actually done by him, less the $10.38 referred to above. As previously indicated, the contractor will not be entitled to receive any sum in excess of this amount.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CLERK OF BOARD MAKES ANNUAL SETTLEMENT WITH COUNTY AUDITOR WHEN SCHOOL TREASURER HAS BEEN DISPENSED WITH—CLERK NOT ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION AND MILEAGE WHICH WAS FORMERLY ALLOWED TREASURER FOR MAKING SETTLEMENT.

Section 4770, G. C., is not repealed by implication by the provisions of section 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 158. The provisions of section 4770, G. C., are still in force and taken in connection with the provisions of section 4782, G. C., as amended, and section 4783, G. C., prescribe the duties of the clerk of the board of education of a school district in making the annual settlement with the county auditor.

The clerk of a board of education which has dispensed with its school treasurer, under authority of section 4782, G. C., as amended, is not entitled to the compensation and mileage formerly allowed to said treasurer, under authority of section 4771, G. C., for making the anual settlement with the county auditor, as required by the provision of section 4770, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of May 4, 1915, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

"Section 4782, as amended in 104 Ohio Laws, has been construed that it is compulsory for the boards of education to dispense with the services of a school treasurer.

"Section 4770 provides that the treasurer of the school funds shall, within the first ten days of September, each year, settle with the county auditor for the preceding school year.

"The last quoted section has not been repealed, but there is no treasurer with whom the county auditor can settle. Is the section (4770) repealed by implication?

"Section 4771 provides for the payment of the school treasurer for making such settlement. Section 4771 has not been repealed.

"Section 4782 provides that the clerk of the board of education shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties, and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts.

"Is the clerk to make settlement with the county auditor, and in case he does so, is he entitled to the payments prescribed by section 4771?"

Section 4782, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 158, provides:

"When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, shall dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

This section, prior to its amendment, provided in part:

"When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, may dispense with the treasurer of the school moneys belonging to such school district. * * *"

It was evidently the intent of the legislature in changing the word "may" to "shall," to make it compulsory for the board of education of a school district, which has provided a depository for the school moneys of such district, to dispense with the office of school treasurer, and the latter provision of said section, as amended, places the duties heretofore performed by said treasurer, upon the clerk of said board of education.

Section 4783 of the General Code, provides:

"When the treasurer is so dispensed with, all the duties and obligations required by law of the county auditor, county treasurer or other officer or person relating to the school moneys of the district shall be complied with by dealing with the clerk of the board of education thereof. Before entering upon such duties, the clerk shall give an additional bond equal in amount and in the same manner prescribed by law for the treasurer of the school district."

Section 4770, G. C., provides:

"Within the first ten days of September, each year, the treasurer (treasurer of the school district) shall settle with the county auditor for the preceding school year, and for that purpose he shall make a certified statement showing the amount of money received, from whom, and on what account, the amount paid out, and for what purpose. He shall produce vouchers for all payments made. If the auditor, on examination, finds the statement and vouchers to be correct, he shall give the treasurer a certificate of the fact, which shall prima facie be a discharge of the treasurer for the money paid. When the treasurer's term begins on the first day of September, the annual settlement shall be made by the outgoing treasurer."

In a school district in which a clerk of the board of education, by giving the additional bond required by the latter provision of section 4783, G. C., has succeeded to the duties of the school treasurer under the above provision of section 4782, G. C., as amended, said clerk is required by the provision of section 4770, G. C., to make a settlement with the county auditor within the first ten days of September, each year, and the duty of the county auditor, relating to the school moneys of said district, is complied with by dealing with said clerk, according to the provisions of section 4783, G. C.

Replying to your first question, I am of the opinion that section 4770, G. C., is not repealed by implication by the provisions of section 4782, G. C., as amended.

The provisions of section 4770, G. C., are still in force, and, taken in connection with the provisions of section 4782, G. C., as amended, and section 4783, G. C., prescribe the duties of the clerk of the board of education in making the annual settlement with the county auditor.

You inquire whether the clerk of a board of education which has dispensed with its school treasurer under section 4782, G. C., as amended, having made the annual settlement with the county auditor, as required by the provision of section 4770, G. C., is entitled to the compensation and mileage authorized by section 4771, G. C., which provides:

"For making such settlement, the treasurer shall be entitled to receive the sum of one dollar, and also five cents per mile for traveling to and from the county seat, to be paid from the county treasury, on the order of the county auditor."

While the clerk, in the case above referred to, is required by the provision of section 4782, G. C., as amended, to "perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district," and it therefore becomes his duty to make the annual settlement with the county auditor as required by section 4770, G. C., the statutes do not expressly provide that said clerk shall receive additional compensation for the performance of said additional duties, or that he shall be reimbursed for actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of said duties.

In the case of the State ex rel. Thomas L. Pogue, prosecuting Attorney, v. Charles A. Groom, acting city solicitor, of the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, 91 O. S., 1, decided by the supreme court November 24, 1914, the fourth branch of the syllabus provides in part:

"The general assembly has the authority to create new duties and require such duties to be performed by the incumbents of an existing office," etc.

In this case the court had reference to the duties to be performed by a member of the board known as the budget commissioners for the annual adjustment of the rates of taxation, for the performance of which no additional compensation is authorized by statute.

Section 4781, G. C., provides:

> "The board of education of each school district shall fix the compensation of its clerk and treasurer, which shall be paid from the contingent fund of the district. If they are paid annually, the order for the payment of their salaries shall not be drawn until they present to the board of education a certificate from the county auditor stating that all reports required by law have been filed in his office. If the clerk and treasurer are paid semi-annually, quarterly, or monthly, the last payment on their salaries previous to August 31st, must not be made until all reports required by law have been filed with the county auditor and his certificate presented to the board of education as required herein."

I call your attention to an opinion of this department rendered by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to Hon. B. F. Enos, prosecuting attorney of Guernsey county, on September 12, 1914. Mr. Enos in his request for an opinion, after quoting the provisions of section 4781, G. C., and of 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 159, asked the following question:

> "I would like to have your written opinion as to whether the clerk is entitled to extra compensation in performing the duties of the treasurer or is he only entitled to the same compensation that he received before these additional burdens were cast upon him."

In answer to this question, Mr. Hogan, after a careful consideration of the provisions of the statutes applicable thereto, held that the clerk of the board of education may receive extra compensation for the performance of such additional duties and that the board of education has the right to fix the compensation of such clerk when he is required to perform said additional duties, because of the dispensing of the school treasurer under the provision of section 4782, G. C.

I concur in this opinion and enclose herewith copy of the same.

The first part of your second question has been answered in the affirmative and, replying to the second part of said question, I am of the opinion that the clerk of a board of education which has dispensed with its school treasurer, under authority of section 4782, G. C., as amended, is not entitled to the compensation and mileage formerly allowed to said treasurer, under authority of section 4771, G. C., for making the annual settlement with the county auditor, as required by the provision of section 4770, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION—DISPOSAL OF STRUCTURES ERECTED ON FARM OF STATE VETERINARIAN AND USED FOR SERUM PLANT—INFECTED BUILDINGS.

There can be no objection to the Agricultural Commission disposing of certain infected buildings used for serum plant erected on farm of Dr. Paul Fischer, state veterinarian, under the facts submitted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1915.

The Agricultural Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 7, 1915, as follows:

"At a meeting of the agricultural commission held May 18, 1915, the following resolution was, on the motion of the Commissioner Williams, supported by Commissioner Strode, unanimously adopted:

"'That a committee of appraisal and adjustment, consisting of Dr. C. E. Thorne, director of the experiment station division, W. G. McCracken, chief engineer, Ohio State University, and Harry C. Holbrook, architect, of Columbus, Ohio, be appointed to visit the farm of Dr. Paul Fischer, located near Reynoldsburg, Ohio, inspect and appraise the value of the buildings in question and to determine a reasonable rental, either based upon the acreage or otherwise, for the land used by the state as a serum farm.'

"The committee met, visited the farm of Dr. Paul Fischer, inspected the premises and made its report to the agricultural commission.

"At a meeting of the commission held June 4, 1915, the following resolution, on the motion of Commissioner Price, supported by Commissioner Williams, was adopted:

"'That the report of the committee appointed to inspect and appraise the value of the buildings and to determine a reasonable rent, if any, for the use of the land belonging to Dr. Fischer as a state serum farm, be received and referred to the attorney general for approval. If approved by the attorney general and the terms are satisfactory to Dr. Fischer, then the said Dr. Fischer shall give a bond for the performance of the obligations required by the report of the committee.'

"The original of the committee's report is herewith enclosed, and the report no doubt contains all the information necessary to guide you in the consideration of this question.

"The agricultural commission will thank you for as prompt a report as your convenience will permit."

With the above communication you submit also a report of the committee referred to, as follows:

"To the Agricultural Commission of Ohio:

"We, the undersigned, duly appointed to appraise and adjust the value of the buildings located on the farm of Dr. Paul Fischer, state veterinarian, at Reynoldsburg, Ohio, do hereby submit the following report:

"We find that out of funds appropriated in 1909, five frame buildings were constructed by day's labor out of material taken from a discarded exhibition building at the Ohio state fair grounds. These buildings were originally of a temporary nature and constructed for their respective purposes in such a way as to be of little value for other purposes.

"A sixth building was constructed three years ago out of new lumber, but as it is built on wood post foundation, it cannot be removed.

"On account of the highly infectious nature of hog cholera, the entire group of buildings being used for the manufacture of preventative serum should not be moved or the buildings wrecked and the lumber sold.

"As the state has used the land of Dr. Fischer for the past seven years, and the matter of a proper rental has never been determined, we feel that the operation of this serum plant has deprived him of the use of his farm, and advise that the buildings in question be given to Dr. Fischer, in lieu of all rental, claims and damages of whatsoever nature he had or may have against the state.

"We believe, also, that Dr. Fischer should give a guarantee or bond that he will not sell or dispose of these buildings to outside parties who may remove or wreck same, or that in case he should sell his entire farm with buildings standing thereon, the test pen and infected booths be destroyed by fire, thereby removing this source of infection.

"Believing that this is the best method of disposing of these structures and that the best interests of the state are thus served, we beg to remain."

Bearing in mind the rule that the powers of public officers are limited to those expressly granted by statute and only such implied powers as are essential and necessary to the performance of the duties so expressly imposed, or the exercise of powers expressly granted, it must follow that unless some statutory authority may be found therefor, your commission would, to my mind, be unauthorized to sell or dispose of property of the state of Ohio. However, from the facts stated in your communication, I doubt whether, under familiar rules of real estate law, the property really belongs to the state of Ohio.

In this particular case I see no harm in carrying out the proposed arrangement. There is no provision in law for the attorney general, either approving or disapproving such an arrangement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 197—COUNTY AUDITOR MAKES ANNUAL REPORT FOR THIS YEAR—STATUTE REQUIRING COUNTY COMMISSIONER'S REPORT REPEALED, 106 O. L.

If a referendum petition is not filed on amended senate bill No. 197, county commissioners do not make an annual report this year, but the county auditor makes an annual report.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—Under date of June 18, 1915, your department sent a letter to this department and enclosed a letter from Mr. John Scott, clerk of the board of county commissioners of Franklin county, Ohio, and requested my opinion thereon. The said letter of Mr. Scott is as follows:

> "An examination of the bills passed by the general assembly discloses the fact that senate bill No. 197 repeals the law requiring the county commissioners to prepare and publish an annual report; the law enacted providing that the county auditor shall make and publish a report in lieu thereof.
> "A question has arisen in my mind as to whether a report for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1915, should be made by the county commissioners or by the county auditor. This question arises as a result of the provisions of the constitution as to the right of referendum. I do not know the exact date of the filing of this bill with the secretary of state, but in any case, the ninety day limitation for the purpose of a referendum will expire between the date the report covers and the date on which the same is required to be submitted and published.
> "Will you not advise me at once in this matter, inasmuch as if the report is to be made by the county commissioners, it is necessary that the preparation thereof be started at once?"

Amended senate bill No. 197 is an act to amend sections 2507, 2508 and 2509, and to repeal sections 2404 and 2697 of the General Code. Said act was filed in the office of the secretary of state June 4, 1915, and will therefore be effective on September 3, 1915. Prior to the going into effect of said act the sections amended and repealed thereby will be in full force and effect.

Section 2507, prior to its amendment, provided that on or before the third Monday in September of each year, the county commissioners shall make to the court of common pleas of the county a detailed report of their financial transactions during the year next preceding such date.

Section 2508, prior to its amendment, provided that such reports shall be published immediately in certain newspapers.

Section 2509, prior to amendment, provided that each county commissioner shall forfeit and pay into the county treasury five dollars for each day that the making and filing of such report is delayed after the third Monday in September.

Section 2404, repealed by amended senate bill No. 197, provided that at the September session (to wit the first Monday in September) the county commissioners shall examine and compare the accounts and vouchers of the county auditor and treasurer, count the funds in the treasury, and direct the auditor to publish an exhibit of the receipts and expenditures for the past year.

Section 2697, prior to repeal by amended senate bill No. 198, provided for a joint statement of the county treasurer and the county auditor to be signed by them and published, giving the amount of moneys and other assets remaining in the county treasury, at the close of business on the last day of August.

Amended senate bill No. 197 provides for the making of a complete detailed report in writing, of all the financial transactions of the county for the fiscal year ending August 31st, by the county auditor, said report to be made on or before the 30th day of September, annually. (Section 2507.) It further provides that the auditor shall forfeit and pay into the county treasury five dollars for each day after the 30th day of September that the making and filing of the report is delayed, and a further sum on failure to have the same published. (Section 2509.)

As before stated this bill becomes effective on September 3rd. When the third Monday of September of this year arrives, former section 2507 will have been repealed and now section 2507 will be in effect. Therefore, on said date there will be no law under which the county commissioners are required to make a report, and no forfeiture for delay can attach for failure so to do. When the 30th day of September of this year arrives section 2507 as amended will be in force and said section requires the county auditor to make a complete detailed report of the financial transactions of the county for the fiscal year ending August 31st. Under the provisions of section 2509 there is a forfeiture for delay to be charged against said county auditor. It is true that section 2507, prior to amendment, authorizes the county commissioners to make their annual report on or before the third Monday in September, but there can be no mandatory duty for them to do so before the third Monday in September, and when the 30th day of September arrives, under section 2507 as amended, it will be the duty of the county auditor to make a report of the financial condition of the county.

I am therefore of the opinion that a report for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1915, should be made by the county auditor, under amended senate bill No. 197, and that no report is to be made this year by the county commissioners.

The above opinion is written on the basis that a referendum petition be not filed on amended senate bill No. 197.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE TO REAL ESTATE FOR ARMORY AT CHILLICOTHE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1915.

Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Sometime since Hon. John A. Poland, of Chillicothe, Ohio, transmitted to me for examination abstract of title to the following described real estate, situate in the city of Chillicothe, county of Ross, and state of Ohio, and described as follows:

"Beginning at a point in the north line of Riverside street, fifty (50 ft.) feet easterly from the northeast intersection of Paint and Riverside streets; hence with the north line of said Riverside street extended westerly, crossing said Paint street diagonally, two hundred and eighteen and nine-tenths (218.9 ft.) feet to a point; thence parallel with said Paint street, northerly, three hundred and forty-nine (349 ft.) feet to a point; thence at right angles to said Paint street easterly, two hundred (200 ft.) feet to a point; thence at right angles and parallel with said Paint street, southerly, two hundred and sixty (260 ft.) feet to the point of beginning."

I have carefully examined said abstract of title and from such examination am of the opinion that on the 8th day of May, 1915, the date of said abstract, the city of Chillicothe, Ohio, was possessed of an estate in fee simple in said real estate, free and clear from all incumbrances whatever, and that by proper instrument can convey to the state of Ohio an estate in fee simple to said real estate.

I am not in this opinion passing upon the authority of the city of Chillicothe to join with the county in the erection of a joint memorial armory building.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS—WHEN FUNDS TO PAY SAME ARE DIVERTED BY OFFICERS OF CITY, BONDS TO EXTEND TIME OF PAYMENT MAY BE ISSUED.

When the general revenue fund received from taxes and revenue funds at the next semi-annual settlement which are by law appropriated for the payment of certificates of indebtedness theretofore issued under authority of section 3913, G. C., has been misappropriated or diverted by the officers of the city without the fault of the holders of such certificates and the same remain unpaid, the city may issue bonds under sections 3916 and 3917, G. C., for the purpose of extending the time of payment of such certificates.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 2, 1915, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"If a city council has authorized the issuance of certificates of indebtedness under section 3913, General Code, to provide for the city's portion of special assessment improvements, the same to be redeemed within six months, may such indebtedness be refunded by issuance of bonds under sections 3916 and 3917, General Code, if the proceeds from tax levy have not produced sufficient moneys to provide for other municipal purposes and the redemption of such indebtedness at maturity?"

Section 3913, G. C., to which you refer, is as follows:

"In anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year, such corporations may borrow money and issue certificates of indebtedness therefor, signed as municipal bonds are signed, but no loans shall be made to exceed the amount estimated to be received from taxes and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections for such fund, after deducting all advances. The sums so anticipated shall be deemed appropriated for the payment of such certificates at maturity. The certificates shall not run for a longer period than six months, nor bear a greater rate of interest than six per cent., and shall not be sold for less than par with accrued interest.

Certificates of indebtedness may be issued only in anticipation of the collection of general revenue fund. The general revenue fund of a municipality is not defined in statutory terms but as here used is deemed to include the aggregate revenues of such municipality from whatever source derived other than those funds specifically set apart by law as for instance interest and sinking fund, and from which the semi-annual appropriations may properly be made. From this general revenue fund appropriations may be made for the portion of the cost and expense of special assessment street improvements required to be paid by the city.

Under the provisions of section 3820, G. C., municipal corporations are required to pay not less than one-fiftieth of all cost and expense of improvements for which special assessments are levied in addition to the cost of intersections. Such expense may be paid from any funds in the treasury properly appropriated for that purpose, or the municipality may issue and sell bonds to pay its part of the expense of such improvement under section 3821, G. C., or may issue certificates of indebtedness under section 3913, G. C., in an amount not to exceed the amount estimated to be received from taxation and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections for the fund from which such indebtedness is properly payable. It is specifically provided that the sums so anticipated and necessary to pay the certificates of indebtedness authorized by section 3913, G. C., when the same shall become due, shall be deemed appropriated for their payment. It therefore becomes the duty of the city auditor and treasurer of such municipalities, immediately after the next semi-annual settlement, to set apart a sufficient amount of the proper fund to pay all outstanding certificates of indebtedness issued under said section at maturity, and it is specifically provided that no such certificates of indebtedness should be outstanding for a longer period than six months. That is to say, at the time of the next succeeding semi-annual settlement, an amount of the funds sufficient to cancel all outstanding certificates at maturity is by force of law appropriated for that purpose and the city auditor and treasurer are wholly unauthorized to pay out such funds for any other purposes and would be liable to the city on their official bonds for all such misappropriations. If under this condition and state of facts it develops that there is a deficiency in the funds for current expenses or other proper purposes, it becomes incumbent upon the fiscal authorities of the municipality to make provision therefor in such manner as is authorized by law, and there would be neither occasion nor authority for the issuance of bonds for the payment of certificates of indebtedness theretofore issued under said section 3913, G. C.

It may be further observed that in view of the provision for the payment of of such certificates of indebtedness they should, in every case where authorized to be issued, be made to mature immediately subsequent to the next succeeding semi-annual settlement and that the city auditor and his sureties are liable for the diversion of any part of the fund by law appropriated for the payment of such certificates or any misapplication thereof.

Your inquiry, however, comprehends additional facts not therein stated. I am informed that in the case to which you have particular reference, no funds have been set aside for the payment of outstanding certificates and there are not now in the municipal treasury any funds out of which payment may be made or which may be set aside for the payment of such certificates at maturity. In other words, funds appropriated by law for the discharge of the certificates of indebtedness issued under authority of section 3913 as stated by you, have been expended without authority for other purposes, and there is no money in the treasury of the city out of which such payment of certificates may be made, and your inquiry is whether or not under this state of facts bonds may be issued under sections 3916 and 3917 for refunding or extending the time of payment of such indebtedness.

Section 3916 and 3917, G. C., to which you refer, read as follows:

> "Section 3916. For the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation the corporation is unable to pay at maturity, or when it appears to the council for the best interest of the corporation, the council thereof may issue bonds of the corporation or borrow money so as to change but not to increase the indebtedness, in such amounts, for such length of time and at such rate of interest as the council deems proper, not to exceed six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually.
> "Section 3917. No indebtedness of such municipal corporation shall be funded, refunded, or extended, unless it shall first be determined to be an existing valid and binding obligation of the corporation by a formal resolution of the council thereof. Such resolution shall also state the amount of the existing indebtedness, to be funded, refunded or extended, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear, and the place of payment of principal and interest."

It will be noted that under the authority of section 3916, G. C., the council of a municipality may issue bonds extending the time of payment of any indebtedness under either of two existing conditions. First, when by reason of the limitation of taxation the corporation is unable to pay the same and second, when it appears to the council for the best interest of the corporation that the time of payment of such indebtedness be so extended. Assuming then, as above stated, that the certificates referred to constitute a valid indebtedness of the city, it only remains to be determined by the council to be for the best interest of the corporation to bring them within the authority of this section when standing alone, to issue bonds for the purpose of extending the time of payment. The authority conferred by section 3916, G. C., is limited by section 3917, G. C., supra, which makes it a condition precedent that the council determine by formal resolution what is above assumed, viz., that the certificates represent an existing valid and binding obligation to the corporation and such resolution shall further state the amount of indebtedness to be extended or refunded, the amount of the bonds to be issued, their number and denomination, date of maturity, rate of interest and place of payment.

The certificates of indebtedness were in the first instance payable from that part of the general revenue fund of the city by law appropriated for their discharge. But since they were not so paid the question now arises as to whether or not they become a claim against or indebtedness of the city generally. In Dillon on Municipal Corporations, section 860, it is said:

"Where a city has authority to create and contract with reference to a particular fund, and to make the debt payable therefrom only, or where by law the debt or obligation is chargeable against, and payable only out of the particular fund, a warrant drawn on such fund is chargeable against and payable only from that fund, and there can be no recovery from the city, unless there is some breach of duty on its part * * *. But a city which contracts with reference to a special fund, and issues a warrant payable therefrom, is under the duty of performing all the legal steps necessary to the raising of the fund."

Warner v. New Orleans, 167 U. S., 478;
New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S., 129.

"If moneys belonging to the particular fund have been received by the city, a diversion of these moneys from the fund is a breach of contract for which the city is liable to the holder of the warrants drawn on the fund."

State v. Pillsbury, 30 La. Assn., 705;
Vallian v. Newton County, 81 Mo., 591;
Ayers v. Thurston County, 63 Neb., 96;
Pine Tree Lumber Company v. Fargo, 12 N. D., 360;
R. R. V. N. Bank v. Fargo, 14 N. D., 88;
Potter v. New Whatsom, 20 Wash., 589;
O. C. N. Bank v. Laconm, 27 Wash., 259.

That the funds for the payment of the certificates were in the treasury and available for their payment at the semi-annual settlement next succeeding their issue, comes of necessity and that the diversion thereof was a violation of the duty of the city and a breach of its contract all beyond the control and without the fault of the holders of the certificates is conclusive, and by reason thereof such certificates continue to be a valid and binding obligation of the city and to my mind an indebtedness within the terms of section 3916, G. C., supra.

The fact that the agents or officers of the city by whom these funds were misappropriated, are liable to the city on their official bonds therefor and that such officers ought to be made to respond to such liability will not in any respect discharge the obligation of the city to pay. Nor would any liability of such officer upon his official bond to the holder of any such certificate discharge the obligation of the city thereon.

I am therefore of opinion that the city council is authorized to issue bonds under the provisions of sections 3916 and 3917, G. C., to extend the time of payment of the certificates issued under section 3913, G. C., where the funds appropriated by law for the payment of such certificates have been misappropriated by the officers and agents of the city and without any fault on the part of the holder of such certificate.

Bonds issued under authority of sections 3916 and 3917, G. C., are subject to the provision of section 5649-1, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 12, making it necessary that the taxing authorities of the city levy a tax sufficient to provide a sinking fund for the payment of such bonds at maturity, together with interest on the same, and the further provision of section 11 of article 12 of the constitution, which requires that in the legislation under which indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision shall be made for levying and collecting annually an amount sufficient to pay interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their redemption at maturity.

It should be observed, however, that the conclusion herein would not be applicable to certificates issued in excess of the amount of the general revenue fund in good faith, estimated to be received from taxes and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections for such fund after deducting all advances.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS WITH POPULATION OF TWO THOUSAND OR MORE—MAY NOMINATE INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL AND WARD OFFICES BY PETITION—ELECTIONS.

Independent candidates for municipal and ward offices in municipalities with a population of two thousand or more may be nominated by petition under the provisions of section 4999, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 844.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

HON. CHAS. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of yours under date of June 16, 1915, as follows:

> "We herewith submit to you for opinion the following questions:
> "'How and under what section of the General Code can independent candidates for municipal or ward officers in municipalities containing a population of more than two thousand have their names placed on the ballot?'"

The nomination of candidates for public office by petition was first authorized in this state by section 12 of the act of April 30, 1891, 88 O. L., 449, which first provided for the nomination of candidates for any state, county, or city, by petition signed by a certain prescribed number of the electors of such state, county or city, respectively.

This provision was followed in the same section of this act by the provision that nominations of candidates for other offices might be made by petitions signed by a distinctively different number of qualified electors of the district or division for which such candidates were to be nominated.

This section was amended on April 18, 1892, 89 O. L., 432, by omitting candidates for state offices from its provisions and including candidates for township or municipal offices and candidates for members of the board of education and also changing the number of petitioners necessary in Cuyahoga and Hamilton counties.

By the amendments of the chapter of which this section is a part, in the act of April 8, 1898, 93 O. L., 94, the above provisions were re-enacted verbatim. This section was again amended by section 7 of the act of April 23, 1904, 97 O. L., 226, to read as follows:

> "Nominations of candidates for any county, township, municipal or ward office, or members of the board of education may be made by nomination papers, signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than three hundred qualified electors of the county, or fifty qualified electors of the city, or twenty-five qualified electors of the township, ward or village, or twenty-five electors of either sex of the school district respectively; except in counties containing annual registration cities, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for every fifty persons who voted at the next preceding election in such county. Nominations of candidates for other offices may be made by nomination papers, signed for each candidate by qualified electors of the state or the district or division for which such candidates are nominated, not less in number than one for every one hundred persons, who voted at the next preceding general election in the state or such district or division. * *"

By codification of 1910, the provisions here quoted were designated and made to constitute sections 4996 and 4999 of the General Code, except for the elimination of members of the board of education from the provisions of section 4996, G. C., by reason of the amendment of section 3897-a R. S., 97 O. L., 340, which was carried into the General Code as sections 4997 and 4998 thereof, and by the act of May 10, 1911, 102 O. L., 120, the latter section was amended to include candidates for United States senator.

We may also note here the provisions of Sec. 7, Article 5 of the constitution of Ohio, as adopted September 3, 1912, as follows:

> "All nominations for elective state, district, county and municipal offices shall be made at direct primary elections or by petition as provided by law, and provision shall be made by law for a preferential vote for United States senator; but direct primaries shall not be held for nomination of township officers or for officers of municipalities of less than two thousand population, unless petitioned for by a majority of the electors of such township or municipality. * * *"

Sections 4996 and 4999, G. C., were amended by the act of April 10, 1913, 103 O. L., 844, to read as follows:

> "Section 4996. Nominations of candidates for any elective office in any township or in any municipality which at the last preceding federal census had a population of less than two thousand, may be made by petitions, signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than twenty-five qualified electors of such township or village.
> "Section 4999. Nominations of candidates for other offices, may be made by petitions, signed for each candidate by qualified electors of the state or the district, or county for which such candidates are nominated, not less in number than one for each one hundred persons who voted at the next preceding general election in the state, district or county."

From the above it conclusively appears that the phrase "other offices" as used in section 4999, G. C., prior to the amendment in 103 O. L., 844, supra, had reference solely to offices other than county, township, municipal or ward offices or members of the board of education as enumerated in sections 4996 and 4997, G. C., so that prior to such amendment the nomination of candidates for all county, township, municipal or ward offices and members of the board of education by petition was governed exclusively by sections 4996, 4997 and 4998 of the General Code, and provided a separate and distinct scheme of nomination for the nomination of candidates for the offices therein named from that provided for the nomination of candidates for other offices as provided in section 4999 of the General Code, the latter including within its terms by reference such offices as were not specifically enumerated in the preceding section herein last referred to. By the amendment of section 4996, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, supra, there were eliminated from its provisions county and municipal and ward offices in municipalities with a population of two thousand, or it was made to include only elective offices in a township or a municipality with a population of less than 2000. Section 4999, G. C., in its present form is dependent, as it was in the original enactment, upon reference to the preceding statutes above referred to for any significance of meaning whatever.

Whether "other offices" as now used in section 4999, G. C., has any broader or different meaning by reason of the amendment in 103 O. L., 844, supra, is not free from doubt. In its original use, however, it is believed to have been the legislative purpose to include within the meaning of the phrase "other offices" all those elective offices within the state not theretofore specifically enumerated, and if this purpose followed the amendment last referred to, any exclusion of offices from the terms of section 4996, G. C., would result in an addition of the offices so excluded to those offices included within the meaning of "other offices" as found in amended section 4999, G. C. This view is supported by the addition of "county" in section 4999, G. C., as last amended, and is at the same time weakened by the omission therefrom of any reference to any municipal or ward offices. If on the one hand it be held that "other offices" is in the amended section restricted to its original meaning, the word "county" must be read out of section 4999, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., and on the other hand if this phrase is construed to include all those offices within the state not now specifically enumerated in sections 4996 and 4997 of the General Code, it will necessitate reading into this section the term "municipal" and "ward offices."

In view of the general policy of the authorization of the nomination of candidates for office by petition, which had been consistently maintained from the act of April 30, 1891, supra, until the amendment of sections 4996 and 4999, G. C., 103 O. L., I am inclined to the view that it was the purpose and intent of the legislature that such policy be continued and that candidates for all offices within the state not enumerated in sections 4996 and 4997, G. C., as the former was amended, 103 O. L., 844, supra, should be authorized to be nominated by petition under the provision of section 4999, G. C., as amended by the act herein last referred to.

I am therefore of opinion that independent candidates for municipal and ward offices in municipalities with a population of two thousand or more may be nominated by petition under the provisions of section 4999, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 844.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—VICE-PRESIDENT, DULY ELECTED, MAY ACT AS PRESIDENT WHEN OFFICE OF LATTER IS VACATED BY RESIGNATION OF PRESIDENT.

The vice-president of the board of education of a school district, duly elected by the members of said board under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, may act as president of said board and perform the duties of said office which has been vacated by the resignation of the president of said board from said office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 20, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

"The president of the Caldwell special school district has moved away and resigned from the board. The board was duly organized with president, vice-president and clerk as provided by section 4747 of the General Code.

"Of course the vacancy can be filled under the provisions of 4748 for a member of the board.

"The question now arises whether the board has authority to elect a president at this time, or whether the vice-president shall be the president for the unexpired term for which the outgoing president was elected.

"Section 4747 is the only section I am able to find with reference to organization.

"Section 4753 relative to pro tempore president and clerk which seems to have been passed before 4747 provided for a vice-president and I find nothing setting forth the duties or powers of the vice-president.

"This question is important at the present time as the meeting for the election of a member of the county board will be held next Saturday, June 26th, and we do not want any question of legality of election of such member to be questioned on this proposition."

Section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, provides:

"The board of education of each city, village and rural school district shall organize on the first Monday of January after the election of members of such board. One member of the board shall be elected president, one as vice-president and a person who may or may not be a member of the board shall be elected clerk. The president and vice-president shall serve for a term of one year and the clerk for a term not to exceed two years. The board shall fix the time of holding its regular meeting."

There is no express provision of the statute prescribing the duties of the vice-president of a board of education, duly elected under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4747, G. C., as above quoted, or authorizing said vice-president to act as president of said board in case of the resignation of the president from office.

It will be observed, however, that under the above provisions of section 4747, G. C., a president and vice-president shall be elected for a term of one year, at the meeting of the board held on the first Monday of January after the election of the members thereto. No provision is made for filling a vacancy in the office of president which may occur during the term for which he is elected. While section 4753, G. C., provides that if the president or clerk is absent at any meeting of the board the members shall choose one of their members to serve in his place pro tempore, this statute clearly applies to temporary absence as distinguished from a vacancy and its provisions are not necessarily inconsistent with the provisions of section 4747, G. C., for the reason that in the case of temporary absence of both president and vice-president, the provisions of section 4753, G. C., would still apply. If the view be taken that the provisions of section 4753, G. C., are inconsistent with those of section 4747, G. C., the provisions of the latter section, being of subsequent enactment, must control. The legislature, in authorizing a board of education to elect a vice-president at the same time and for the same term as the president, must have intended that the office of vice-president shall have a definite relation to the office of president in so far as the duties of the latter office are concerned.

The Standard dictionary defines the word "vice" as used in the above connection, as follows:

> "Used with official names to form compound words each of which denotes one who has the right to act on occasion in place of the officer designated or one who is just below such officer in rank."

It seems clear therefore that, where the president of a board of education resigns his office at any time during the term for which he is elected, the vice-president has authority to perform the duties of said office and to act as president of said board during the remainder of said term.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that the vice-president of the board of education of the Caldwell school district, duly elected by the members of said board under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 4747, G. C., as amended, may act as president of said board and perform the duties of said office which has been vacated by the resignation of the president of said board from said office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE—CLASSIFICATION OF APPLICANTS IN ACCORDANCE WITH POLITICAL AFFILIATIONS, INEFFECTIVE—FIXING OF DEFINITE TERM OF SERVICE OF APPOINTEES NOT INCONSISTENT WITH CIVIL SERVICE LAWS—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—STEAM ENGINEERS.

The provisions of section 1040, G. C., classifying applications for appointment under the civil service law, in accordance with political affiliations, is ineffective.

The fixing of definite term of service of appointees under civil service is not inconsistent with civil service laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter asking for an opinion relative to the application of the civil service law to the positions of district examiner of steam engineers, which letter is as follows:

> "The industrial commission of Ohio has received from the state civil service commission a list of names which purports to be an eligible list of persons eligible to appointment to the position of district examiner of steam engineers in the Cincinnati district. Upon this list appear the names, general averages and addresses of the supposed eligibles. There is no designation of the party politics of the supposed eligibles.
> "The industrial commission respectfully requests an opinion as to whether or not the provisions of section 1040, General Code, are still in effect, in view of the civil service status of steam engineers, particularly that part of said section which provides that 'not more than five of said district examiners so appointed shall be members of the same political party, each of whom shall be a competent and practical steam engineer, and shall serve for a term of three years and until his successor is appointed and qualified.'
> "The two points about which we are in doubt are: (1) the provision which requires that not more than five of said district examiners shall be of the same political party, and (2) that part of the section which fixes the term of service for three years, inasmuch as appointments made under the civil service law do not seem to be made for a definite period."

In your letter you refer to section 1040 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "The chief examiner of steam engineers shall divide the state into ten districts. With the approval of the governor he shall appoint an assistant chief examiner and ten district examiners of steam engineers, provided, however, that not more than five of the said district examiners so appointed shall be members of the same political party, each of whom shall be a competent and practical steam engineer, and shall serve for a term of three years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified. Upon the resignation, removal or death of the chief examiner, assistant chief examiner, or a district examiner, the vacancy shall be filled for the unexpired term in the manner provided for the original appointment."

No question is raised as to the particular positions being included in the classified service of the civil service of the state, save as to how that status may be affected by the provision in section 1040 of the General Code, quoted above, as follows:

> "* * * not more than five of the said district examiners so appointed shall be members of the same political party * * * each of whom shall serve for a term of three years * * *"

Section 486-2 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 698, which is section 2 of the civil service act, is as follows:

> "Method of appointment. On and after January 1, 1914, appointments to and promotions in the civil service of this state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof shall be made only according to merit and fitness to be ascertained as far as practicable by examination which, as far as practicable, shall be competitive; and, on and after January 1, 1914, no person shall be appointed, removed, transferred, laid off, suspended, reinstated, promoted or reduced as an officer or employe in the civil service under the government of this state, the counties, cities, and city school districts thereof, in any manner or by any means other than those prescribed in this act."

Rule 10 of the state civil service commission, is as follows:

> "Appointments, promotions and retentions in the classified service of the state shall be determined on the basis of merit alone, and lack of merit shall be the only consideration in reduction and removals."

Section 6 of rule 5 of the state civil service commission, is as follows:

> "No question in any examination shall in any way relate to political or religious opinions or affiliations, nor shall any appointment to, promotion or reduction in, or removal from the classified service be influenced in any manner by politics or religion."

In section 486-7, of the General Code, (103 O. L., page 700) which is section 7 of the civil service act, under the head of "Powers and Duties," the first power enumerated is as follows:

> "First: Prescribe, amend and enforce rules for carrying into effect section 10 of article 15 of the constitution of Ohio, and the provisions of this act, and such rules shall have the force and effect of law."

Section 486-11 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 703) which is section 11 of the civil service act, contains in sub-section 5 a provision as follows:

> "(5.) Such other information as may be reasonably required touching the applicant's merit and fitness for the public service; but no enquiry shall be made as to any religious opinions or political affiliations of the applicant."

It will be noted from a reading and consideration of the foregoing provisions of the civil service law and the rules of the state civil service commission quoted, which rules, under the provisions of section 486-7 of the General Code, supra, are to have the force and effect of law, that under the present existing civil service law which governs the appointment in the civil service of the state, save in the particular cases where exception has been made, there is not only no machinery provided for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of section 1040 of the General Code, with reference to the political affiliation of the applicant, but on the contrary, by the express provisions of the law, any reference to politics in connection with appointments is prohibited.

The state civil service commission, in certifying the eligible list in the case under consideration, would be unable to classify the eligibles thereon along political lines and it is my opinion, in answer to your first question, that the provisions of section 1040 of the General Code, with reference to political affiliation is rendered ineffective by the civil service act and does not control in the appointment of district examiners of steam engineers therein provided for.

Coming to your second question asking for an opinion as to "that part of the section (1040, G. C.) which fixes the terms of service for three years, inasmuch as appointments made under the civil service law do not seem to be made for a definite period," permit me to say that the civil service law expressly recognizes the existence of definite terms in the classified service under the provisions of section 486-17 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 707) which, in part, is as follows:

> "Reductions, suspensions and removals. No person shall be discharged from the classified service, reduced in pay or position, laid off, suspended or otherwise discriminated against by the appointing officer for religious or political reasons. In all cases of discharge, lay off reduction or suspension of a subordinate, whether appointed for a definite term or otherwise * * * the appointing officer shall give * * * such subordinate * * * time to file an explanation. * * *"

In the case of State ex rel. v. Schneller, Vol. 15, N. P. N. S., 438, this question was considered at length, and in the decision the court, at page 445, says:

> "But there is nothing inconsistent between the provisions of the civil service act and statutes fixing definite periods of time during which appointees shall hold certain offices or perform certain duties. Every provision of the civil service act would apply to the incumbent of such an office, without regard to how he was appointed, but his term of office would not be lengthened.

It is my opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that that part of section 1040, General Code, which provides for a term of three years for district examiners of steam engineers is in full force and effect and that its application to appointees under the civil service act is in harmony therewith.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to the state civil service commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—QUORUM AUTHORIZED TO TRANSACT BUSINESS WHEN THERE IS A VACANCY—MAY DO SO UNTIL APPOINTMENT AND QUALIFICATION OF AN ELECTOR TO FILL SUCH VACANCY.

A quorum of the board of county commissioners is authorized to transact business of the county in case of a vacancy in such board by death, resignation or removal, until the appointment and qualification of an elector to fill such vacancy is made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1915.

HON. JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 16, 1915, as follows:

"Confirming telephone conversation with your Mr. Ballard, upon request of the auditor of this county, I would appreciate an opinion from you as to the existence or non-existence of a board of county commissioners, and, in the event of the non-existence of a board, the legality of any action which the two remaining commissioners, acting in unison, may attempt.

"On the night of the 26th of May, County Commissioner Frank Westfall was killed in an automobile accident here. His body was not recovered until June 3rd. The board authorized to fill the vacancy has been unable to agree upon a successor, and we are still without a third commissioner.

"On June 2nd the attention of this office was directed to the fact that the remaining two commissioners were attempting to do business, make contracts, and spending money for new improvements, etc. I thereupon, after investigation of the law, wrote them as per copy of my letter attached thereto.

"As we construe section 2408 of the General Code, the official representative of the county, vested with authority to contract, to sue and be sued, and to conduct the business of the county, consists of a 'board of county commissioners * * * of three persons, who shall be elected biennially,' etc. While the statute contemplates that two members of the board shall constitute a quorum, in our opinion there must be a board of three members before there can be a quorum thereof.

"Strange to relate, a thorough search of the books discloses no parallel situation. The importance of the matter and the amount of work pending in this county seem to warrant our requesting an opinion from you as to your view of the situation."

Section 2395, G. C., to which you refer, and section 2403, G. C., provide as follows:

"Section 2395. The board of county commissioners shall consist of three persons, who shall be elected biannually, and hold their office for two years, commencing on the third Monday of September next after their election."

"Section 2403. A majority of the board shall constitute a quorum at any regular or special meeting."

In the case of Cupp v. Commissioners, 19 O. S., 173, it was held that a quorum of the board of county commissioners, as defined by section 2403 of the General Code, as above quoted, were authorized to transact business of the board in a proceeding for locating and establishing ditches, drains and water courses, as in other cases. That is to say, a quorum—or a majority of the board of county commissioners, as the term is used in section 2395,—had full power and authority in the exercise of the functions of such board.

Attention is called to the provisions of section 2397 of the General Code, which are as follows:

> "If a vacancy in the office of commissioner occurs more than thirty days before the next election for state and county officers, a successor shall be elected thereat. If a vacancy occurs more than thirty days before such election, or within that time, and the interest of the county requires that the vacancy be filled before the election, the probate judge, auditor, and recorder of the county, or a majority of them, shall appoint a commissioner, who shall hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified."

From an examination of the provisions of this section, it will be noted that if a vacancy occurs either more than thirty days before such election in which event a successor is required to be elected at the next election for state and county officers, or within the period of thirty days prior to such election it is discretionary with the probate judge, auditor and recorder of the county, or a majority of them, to appoint a qualified elector to fill such vacancy. That is to say, the appointment to fill such vacancy depends upon the judgment of the appointing authority in determining whether or not the interests of the county require that such appointment be made prior to the election and qualification of a successor to fill such office. Thus it is manifestly within the contemplation of the legislature that such vacancy may continue for a period even longer than thirty days prior to the election and qualification of an elector to fill such vacancy, unless it be determined by the appointing authority that the interests of the county should require that an appointment to fill such vacancy be made during such interval. Though it appears clear from the above that a vacancy in such office may continue even for a longer period than thirty days, it cannot be maintained that it was contemplated by the legislature that the business of the county should be completely suspended during such period. On the contrary, it seems quite clear that the provisions of section 2397 would not have been so enacted except in view of the authority conferred upon a quorum of such board by the provisions of section 2403, G. C.

That the vacancy to which you refer has occurred a very considerable time previous to the next election for state and county officers, is a matter that would enter materially into the consideration of the appointing authority in determining whether or not the interest of the county requires that the vacancy so occasioned be filled, and if in view of this length of time and the volume and importance of the business of the county such appointing authorities determine that it is for the best interests of the county that such vacancy be filled by appointment, it then becomes their duty to proceed as expeditiously as is consistent with a proper performance thereof, to make such appointment. Until such appointment is made, however, and the appointee qualifies for the discharge of his duties, I am of the opinion that it is not only within the power and authority of the present members of the board of county commissioners, but their duty to proceed with the transaction of the business of the county in such manner as in their judgment is to the best interests of the county and in the discharge of such duties as are imposed upon them by law, and every action taken by them in all other respects according to law are valid and binding upon the county.

Attention is directed to the case of the State ex rel. Pogue v. Groom, 901 O. S., 1, decided by the supreme court November 30, 1914, in which the court, referring to section 5649-3b, G. C., prior to its amendment in 103 O. L., 552, said:

> "It is true that this section is subject to the same objection urged against these amendments, yet it is expressly provided that a quorum of the budget commission is authorized to transact business, and at least two of the members designated by the original act to serve as members of the county budget commission are county officers elected by a constitutional majority of the electors of the county."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SENATE BILL NO. 314 CONSTITUTIONAL—GOVERNOR'S APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL COMMON PLEAS JUDGE FOR LORAIN COUNTY, VALID.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of a letter from you dated May 25, 1915, but which was not received in this department until the afternoon of June 16, 1915. Your letter is as follows:

> "Will you kindly advise this department in the following matter:
> "An act was passed (senate bill 314) providing for an additional judge of the court of common pleas for Lorain county. A judge was appointed by the governor for said additional office. No election had been held, and no judge had been theretofore elected to such office. The appointment being merely to fill a judgeship provided by the general assembly until an election could be had pursuant to law.
> "We would like to know whether such judge was legally appointed or whether such appointment was unconstitutional."

Senate bill No. 314, to which you refer is in full as follows:

> "AN ACT.
> "To provide for the election and appointment of an additional judge in Lorain county.
> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:
> "Section 1. From and after the passage of this act, two-thirds of the members elected to each house thereof concurring, there shall be one additional judge of the court of common pleas, in and for Lorain county, who shall reside therein.

"Such additional judge shall be elected every six years, beginning in 1916, and to hold his office for a term of six years, commencing on the 9th day of January, A. D., 1917, next after his election.

"Until such additional judge of the court of common pleas is so elected and qualified, the governor shall appoint such additional judge.

"Vacancies occurring in the office of such additional judge in Lorain county, shall be filled in the manner prescribed for the filling of vacancies in the office of judge of the common pleas court.

"He shall exercise the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties as the judges of the court of common pleas; and shall receive the same compensation as is provided by law for the judges of the court of common pleas in Lorain county.

"Section 2. This act is hereby declared to be an emergency law necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. The necessity arising from the fact that by reason of the large number of both civil and criminal cases now pending in the court of common pleas of said county, occasioned by the rapid increase in population and growth of commercial business and the consequent inability of one judge to try and hear the same with reasonable promptness, the public peace, health and safety are thereby menaced."

There is no question here as to the intention of the legislature. That is made sufficiently clear by the express direction to the governor to appoint an additional judge until the election of the first judge therein provided for and his qualification thereunder.

I also call attention to the emergency of the bill, which makes it clear that the general assembly desired to provide Lorain county with an additional judge immediately.

The question raised by you is quite similar to the situation following the amendment of the constitution providing that:

"The supreme court shall, until otherwise provided by law, consist of a chief justice and six judges * * *. The judges of the supreme court shall be elected by the electors of the state at large."

Under the constitution no chief justice, the office of which had been created by the amendment, could be elected until November, 1914.

The General assembly in 1913, by an amendment of section 1467, G. C., (103 O. L., 408) provided that:

"Until a chief justice is so elected and qualified the governor shall appoint a chief justice."

The right of the legislature to enact such a provision and of the governor to act thereunder was much discussed at the time, but no one ever challenged the validity of the enactment or of the appointment by the governor. Of course, mere acquiescence does not make law, but it sometimes tends strongly to show what the law is.

While the legislature would have been without the power to authorize the governor to appoint a chief justice or judge of the supreme court for a constitutional term, it was within the power of the legislature to provide that until a chief justice could be elected under the constitution the governor might make a provisional or initiatory appointment.

While it is true that the amendment of section 1467, G. C., authorizing the governor to appoint a chief justice was the carrying out of the constitutional provision, it is also true that the creation of an additional judgeship is just as fully authorized as was the office of chief justice. To my mind the difference is one of degree rather than principle and the analogy is sufficiently complete to say that there is no difference in principle.

Section 3 of article IV of the constitution provides:

> "One resident judge of the court of common pleas, and such additional resident judge or judges as may be provided by law, shall be elected in each county of the state by the electors of such county * * *."

Section 1 of article XVII of the constitution provides:

> "Elections for state and county officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the even-numbered years * * *."

It is within the province of the legislature to provide for an additional resident judge in any county in any year. It is not possible, however, to elect a judge save at the November election in the even-numbered years.

While the legislature could not provide for the appointment regularly or beyond the period when an election might be held lawfully, I am clearly of the opinion that where the legislature creates an additional judgeship it may, if it sees fit, confer upon the governor power to fill the office until an election may be held.

If the present legislature had attempted at the session just past to create a judeship to become effective after the November, 1916, election, it could not have authorized the governor to appoint to such office, for between the passage of the act and the beginning of the office it would have been possible to have held an election.

I, therefore, hold that it was within the power of the legislature to pass senate bill 314 and that thereunder the governor had the power to appoint an additional judge for Lorain county until a lawful election could be held to fill the office.

I presume that your question arises out of the fact that you will be called upon to issue warrants upon the treasury for the salary of such judge and I, therfore, advise you further that even if it should be held that the appointment was not valid, that such judge would at all events be held to be a de facto officer, and while payments out of the public treasury could not be compelled by the de facto officer, yet where the compensation has been paid to a de facto officer it may not be recovered and the officer disbursing the same would not be liable therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE, ARMORY AT PIQUA, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

The Ohio State Armory Board, Col. Byron L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt, for examination and approval, of the abstract of title to and deed from The Orr Felt and Blanket Company to the state of Ohio for the following described real estate situated in the city of Piqua, county of Miami and state of Ohio, to wit:

"First Lot. Being the ground occupied by the original mill and mill yards, and bounded on the north by the south end of Spring street, said south end of Spring street there being co-incident with the south side of Water street; on the east by the west line of lot number ten hundred and forty-nine (1049) in said city; on the south by the Great Miami river; and on the west by the east lines of lots numbers nineteen (19) and forty-one (41), in said city; said first lot being the lands lying immediately south of the present termination of spring street in said city, and having formerly been the south end of said street; and including therein also that piece of land which was formerly a part of Spring and Water streets in said city and which is within lines running as follows, that is to say: Commencing at the northeast corner of the formerly called Piqua Woolen Mills; thence north fourteen (14) feet; thence west fifty-seven and one-half (57½) feet; thence south to the north wall of said mills; thence east to the place of beginning; said last described parcel of land being the premises described in the resolution of the city of Piqua council, passed June 3, 1885, and found in council record four (4), at page 548, of said city; and also described in a vacating ordinance of said city passed July 20, 1885, and title to which was quieted in the former owner The F. Gray Company, in action number twelve thousand and ninety (12090) in the common pleas court of Miami county, Ohio, in a decree entered in said action by said court on May 2, 1892, which will be found in journal thirty-five (35), at page three hundred and forty-two (342) of the records of said court, and a transcript of which will also be found in the deed records of said Miami county, in book ninety-four (94), page six hundred and eight (608); also

"Second lot. Being the ground occupied in part by the new addition to said mill on the west of the old building and being described as being all of those portions of lots numbers nineteen (19) and forty-one (41), in said city, according to the original plat and also according to the present numbering, which lie east of the Miami and Erie canal; said lots having been numbered respectively thirty-two (32) and thirty-three (33) on Bevins map of Piqua; also

"Third lot. Being the ground occupied in part by the brick warehouse of said company, and being a part of the aforesaid lot number ten hundred and forty-nine (1049) in said city; the portion herein and hereby conveyed being bounded by lines which begin, run and terminate as follows: that is to say, commencing at the junction of Spring and Water streets in said city, at the south side of Water street; and running thence east with Water street, eighty-nine (89) feet; thence south to the Great Miami river; thence westerly with the meanderings of said river, to a point on a line which would be a projection of the east line of said Spring street; thence north to the place of beginning. * * *"

I have made a careful examination of said abstract and as a result of such examination I find that no liens or incumbrances against said premises are disclosed by the abstract except the second half of the 1914 taxes amounting to $38.68 and the undetermined taxes for the year 1915, and the balance of the special assessments for construction of certain sewers and pavements, amounting to $190.53.

No examination appears to have been made of the records of the United States court, and I would suggest that a certificate of the clerk of said court, as to the existence or non-existence of judgments against The Orr Felt and Blanket Company, be attached to the abstract. The deed from the Orr Felt and Blanket Company to the state of Ohio is duly signed and acknowledged and is in proper form, and I am of the opinion that upon the discharge of the above mentioned liens the grantee will acquire, by said deed, a good and sufficient title to said premises in fee simple.

The abstract of title and deed are herewith transmitted to you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED IN CASE CHARGES ARE FILED AGAINST MEMBER OF SAID COMMISSION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I am in receipt of your request for opinion under date of June 22, 1915, which reads as follows:

"Please advise me as to what is the proper procedure in the case of proceeding with charges against a member of the state civil service commission of Ohio."

Section 486-3 of the General Code (103 O.L., 699) provides in part as follows:

"Section 486-3. * * * The governor may remove any member of the state civil service commision of Ohio at any time for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, having first given to such commissioner a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity to be publicly heard in person or by counsel in his own defense, and any such act of removal by the governor shall be final.

"A statement of the findings of the governor, the reasons for his action and the answer, if any, of the commissioner, shall be filed by the governor with the secretary of state and shall be open to public inspection. * * *."

(1) The first step, being the one conferring jurisdiction, is the filing with the governor of written charges against the member of the commission upon the ground of either, any two, or all of the following, to wit: inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office.

These charges should embody facts which in judgment of law constitute one or more of the above mentioned statutory grounds.

(2) A copy of said charges duly certified by the governor as a true copy, should be served personally upon the commissioner by some person designated by the governor, and such person should make return to the governor showing personal service of the charges upon the accused commissioner. It will not be sufficient that the written charges simply allege that the commissioner was inefficient, or that he had neglected his duty, or that he had been guilty of malfeasance in office, for such allegations would be merely legal conclusions. The charges should contain a recital of facts which constitute one or more of the statutory grounds.

(3) Accompanying the charges should be a notice from the governor stating the time when and place where said commissioner will be given an opportunity to be publicly heard in person or by counsel in his own defense. The time set in the notice should give the accused a reasonable opportunity to prepare his answer and be present at the appointed place. What is reasonable time is dependent upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

(4) At the time set for the hearing, or at any time prior thereto between the date of the service of a copy of the charges and the time set for the hearing thereon, the defendant will have the right to file an answer to the charges.

(5) The statute does not require that evidence in addition to the charges filed be offered on behalf of complainant or, in other words, to support the charges. On the other hand, the governor may, in his sound discretion, hear or receive evidence other than the charges, but which must be material and relevant to the charges contained in the written copy served upon the accused.

However, it should be here pointed out that the supreme court of Ohio has at least seemed to have held that evidence to support the charges must be offered. See State ex rel. Meader et al., v. Sullivan, 58 O. S., 504-516. In view of this last mentioned case it would be the safer course to pursue to require evidence in support of the charges though, as above stated, I am of the opinion that the charges when signed by the person who prefers them constitute at least a prima facie case and place the burden upon the accused to refute them. This is contrary to the ordinary procedure in a court of justice where it is required that evidence to support an indictment must be offered first or the charge fails. Hence, in the application of the above suggestion care must be exercised that no injustice is done the accused.

(6) At the time and place appointed the charges as filed, a copy of which had theretofore been duly served upon the accused, should be read publicly and the accused called upon to offer his defense thereto in person or by counsel.

(7) I am of the opinion that under the cases decided by the supreme court of Ohio the governor would not have the right arbitrarily to refuse to hear any witnesses offered by the accused as to matters tending to exculpate the accused from the charges as filed. The number of witnesses or the limitation beyond which the testimony on behalf of the accused might go in addition to and outside of that material and relevant as a defense will rest in the sound discretion of the governor. In the absence of abuse of such discretion the courts would be without power to interfere upon such ground.

(8) No evidence may be offered and considered against the accused, however, which is not relevant and material to the charges as filed, or at least in rebuttal of such evidence as the governor has allowed the accused to offer. The governor will be the sole judge of the relevancy, materiality, weight and sufficiency of all evidence offered, and unless there was a clear abuse amounting to unfairness to the accused the courts would not be authorized to review such matter.

(9) Whether or not testimony shall be given under oath rests in the sound discretion of the governor. However, the governor would not be authorized to require the evidence of the accused or his witnesses to be given under oath if the evidence in support of the charges was not also given under the sanctity of an oath.

(10) Neither the governor, the person or persons preferring the charges, nor the accused have any power to compel the attendance of witnesses nor may a witness be compelled to be sworn. Documentary evidence and signed writings may be admitted providing they are communicated to the accused.

From the foregoing it will be seen that common sense and fair play, rather than any technical rules, are to govern the procedure. Where charges have been filed with the governor embodying facts which in judgment of law constitute either inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office on the part of a member of the state civil service commission, a copy of the charges has been served upon the accused member, such accused member has been given reasonable notice of the time and place when and where such charges would be heard publicly and the accused has been given a full and fair opportunity to be heard in his own defense, either in person or by counsel, and testimony is offered in support of the charges (the charges themselves may be offered as a part of the testimony), the action of the governor is final and cannot be reviewed by the courts.

A statement of the findings of the governor, the reasons for his action and the answer, if any, of the commissioner shall be filed with the secretary of state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FORM OF COMMISSION FOR APPOINTMENT BY GOVERNOR DURING RECESS OF SENATE WHEN CONFIRMATION BY THAT BODY IS REQUIRED BY STATUTE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of June 21, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Will you kindly advise this department the correct form and wording to be used in commissioning an appointee requiring confirmation of the senate during the recess of that body? The forms in use by this department in commissioning appointees are hereto attached."

I have examined the forms attached to your letter and am of the opinion that none of them are exactly appropriate for the purpose referred to by you.

Section 12, G. C., provides as follows:

> "When a vacancy in an office filled by appointment of the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, occurs by expiration of term or otherwise during a session of the senate, the governor shall appoint a person to fill such vacancy and forthwith report such appointment to the senate. If such vacancy occurs when the senate is not in session, and no appointment has been made and confirmed in anticipation of such vacancy, the governor shall fill the vacancy and report the appointment to the next session of the senate, and, if the senate advise and consent thereto, such appointee shall hold the office for the full term, otherwise a new appointment shall be made."

It is obvious that under the second division of this section the tenure of a person appointed by the governor, when the senate is not in session, is for the full term unless the senate, at its next session, fails to advise and consent to the appointment, or the governor fails to report the appointment to the next session of the senate.

None of the forms which are attached to your letter contain blanks for the insertion of the official term for which the appointment was made, but I am informed that it is customary to write in the designation of the term thus:

"* * * Whereas _____ of _____ county has been duly appointed to the office of_____, for the term of _____ years commencing on the _____ day of _____. * * *"

This practice, which has evidently been followed in the past, cannot be substantially objected to, and in view thereof the blank form of the commission to be used in making appointments of the kind referred to by you should be as follows:

"KNOW YE, That whereas _____ of _____ county, has been duly appointed to the office of _____ (here state the name of the office and the regular or unexpired term thereof for which appointment is made) when the senate was not in session.

"THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in the governor by the constitution, and in pursuance of a provision of the statutes, I do hereby commission him, the said _____, _____ to be _____, authorizing and empowering him to execute and discharge, all and singular, the duties appertaining to said office, and to enjoy all the privileges and immunities thereof during the aforesaid term, if the senate at its next session advise and consent to the said appointment; otherwise until his successor is appointed and qualified according to law."

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

VACATIONS—OUTSIDE OF A FEW STATUTES APPLYING TO PARTICULAR POSITIONS THERE IS NO STATUTORY AUTHORIZATION—QUESTION LEFT LARGELY TO THE SOUND DISCRETION OF THE HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT—PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

Public officials have such powers only as are either conferred expressly or by necessary implication. Outside of a few statutes applying to particular positions there is no statutory authorization for vacations. The commonly accepted theory and practice of vacations on pay is that they will be granted at a time in the year when the work of the department is slack and where those who remain on duty will be able to care for the work of those who are absent. In this way there is no loss to the state and at the same time the employe who gets the vacation earns it by making up for the time out in helping care for the work while his fellow-employes are taking their vacations. I know of no statutory authority for the payment of employes for services not rendered.

However, it is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule to cover all cases, as they will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. I feel that within a well guarded zone such matters should be left largely to the sound discretion of the head of the department, such head of department being careful not to abuse the discretion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 9, 1915, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "Please advise the industrial commission whether or not unused personal service funds which have accrued since February 16, 1915, are available for payment of temporary clerks who are employed by this commission to render services during the absence of regular clerks who are absent on leave with pay (vacation period)."

Public officials have such powers only as are either conferred expressly or by necessary implication. Outside of a few statutes applying to particular positions there is no statutory authorization for vacations. The commonly accepted theory and practice of vacations on pay is that they will be granted at a time in the year when the wok of the department is slack and where those who remain on duty will be able to care for the work of those who are absent. In this way there is no loss to the state and at the same time the employe who gets the vacation earns it by making up for the time out in helping care for the work while his fellow-employes are taking their vacations. I know of no statutory authority for the payment of employes for services not rendered.

However, it is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule to cover all cases, as they will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. I feel that within a well guarded zone such matters should be left largely to the sound discretion of the head of the department, such head of department being careful not to abuse the discretion.

One of the members of your commission has informed me that you desire the opinion not only as applied to vacations, but as to the hiring of temporary clerks irrespective of the question of vacations, and what follows hereafter will be based on that phase of the question.

Your question is so general that I shall have to assume an interpretation of it.

I take it that the "funds" which you mention are those available under appropriation accounts created by the partial appropriation bill of 1915, house bill No. 314. If that is the case I call your attention to the fact that section 2 of the bill provides that:

> "Moneys appropriated in the preceding section shall not be in any way expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to February 16, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1915."

It follows that if there is an unexpended balance in any of the appropriation accounts created by this bill, the same cannot be used to pay for services rendered subsequently to June 30, 1915, under any circumstances whatever.

Still assuming that you are referring to the expenditure of moneys under authority of the appropriation made in the bill above referred to I beg leave to point out that the appropriations, on account of personal service, to the industrial commission show an aggregate of $149,285.00 for specified salaries; an appropriation of $405.00 for mechanical and clerical labor and an appropriation of $3,020.00 for unclassified service described as "fees for local medical examinations, etc."

In my opinion the appropriation for wages—"mechanical and clerical labor" may be used for the purposes referred to provided the services for which payment is made are rendered prior to June 30, 1915.

I am of the opinion that the appropriation for "personal service"—unclassified—fees for local medical examinations, etc., may not be so used. If there had been no appropriation to the commission for "mechanical and clerical labor," and if the appropriation for "unclassified personal service" had not been qualified by the clause "fees for local medical examinations," etc., a contrary result might have followed. But the legislature has clearly distinguished, in the language used by it, between extra clerk hire and unclassified personal service so as to indicate that the former is not included in the latter.

The appropriations for salaries, aggregating as aforesaid $149,285.00, are all specific. In the first place they are divided by departments as: salaries in the mining department, in the department of boiler inspector, workshops and factories, film censorship, examiner of steam engineers, state insurance, investigation and statistics and general offices.

In the second place these salaries are appropriated specifically for certain designated positions except in such instances as in which lump sums are appropriated for a specified number of clerks. Thus, in the mining department there is an appropriation for the salary of the chief clerk and also a lump sum appropriation for the salary of two clerks. This is an instance of what occurs in the case of appropriations for each of the departments.

These appropriations being specific, you are advised that no transfer can be made, under favor of section 3 of the bill, from one such appropriation account to another. Therefore, the only questions which could possibly be considered respecting the use of these appropriations may be stated thus:

(1) If a clerk, for whose salary a specific appropriation has been made, is employed at less than the amount appropriated for the period between February 15th and June 30th, may the difference between the amount of the salary paid to him under the terms of his employment and the amount in the appropriation for the salary of his position be paid to another who takes his place while such clerk is absent on leave with pay, provided such extra services are rendered prior to June 30th?

(2) Where there is a lump appropriation for a specified number of clerks, and the specified number is employed but at a compensation, in the aggregate, less than the amount appropriated for the period, may an extra clerk be employed under the circumstances above mentioned and paid out of the balance in such appropriation account, the services being rendered prior to June 30, 1915?

(3) Where there is a lump appropriation for a specified number of clerks, and fewer than the specified number are employed, may the balance or unused portion of such appropriation account, set aside for payment of a salary of a position which has not been permanently filled, be used to pay such an extra clerk?

The answers to the first two questions are, in my opinion, in the negative for the reason that the legislature has, by the form of its appropriation, specified that the sums appropriated shall be paid to a certain number of persons, or rather to the incumbents of certain specified positions. Such appropriations are, therefore, not available to pay extra clerk hire under any circumstances.

But where a lump sum appropriation has been made for a specified number of clerical salaries, and one of the positons thus appropriated for is not filled, and there remains therefore an unused balance, there is nothing to prevent the industrial commission from filling such theretofore vacant position (that is, vacant from the viewpoint of the appropriation bill) even for a brief period of time and temporarily, and paying the compensation of the person so employed from the unused balance of such appropriation account.

The third question suggested by me is therefore answered in the affirmative.

Repeating my answers to your general question I beg to advise, first, that the apropriation of $405.00, under the designation "A2 wages—mechanical and clerical labor," is available to pay for services such as you describe if rendered prior to July 1, 1915, and that where there is a lump sum appropriation for the salaries of a specified number of clerks of a certain class, and fewer than the number of clerks whose salaries are thus appropriated for have been actually employed, a person temporarily employed may be paid from the balance or unused portion of such appropriation provided the services are rendered prior to July 1, 1915. In this last connection, however, I should observe that an unused balance, of the character which I have last described, in an appropriation for the salaries of clerks of one class, may not be used to pay the compensation of an extra or temporary clerk performing services of another class.

I call your attention further to the fact that the foregoing will not apply to the appropriations available on and after July 1, 1915.

I trust that the foregoing answers the question which you have in mind.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—WHAT FACTS CONSTITUTE AN EXCUSE BY AN ADMINISTRATOR IN NOT PAYING TAX AT TIME REQUIRED BY STATUTE—ANCESTRAL AND NON-ANCESTRAL VALUES—LITIGATION—PENALTY.

Where the collateral heirs of an intestate decedent are of remote degrees of relationship and reside in various parts of the United States, so that the administrator in the exercise of due diligence was unable for some time to acquire the information necessary to enable him to distribute the estate or to know the number and amount of the various shares into which it is to be divided; and, where, moreover, part of the real property of the estate, which constitutes the major portion of its value, is ancestral and part is non-ancestral and litigation arises as to the inheritance thereof which is not terminated for some time, failure of the administrator to pay the collateral inheritance tax on the various shares thereof within one year after the death of the decedent, if due to such causes, is excusable and the eight per cent interest provided for by section 5335, G. C., being in the nature of a penalty, should not be collected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 26, 1915.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 21st, enclosing a statement of facts with reference to the administration of the estate of Hugh McFall, late of the city of Mansfield, and requesting my opinion as to the collection of the eight per cent. interest on the taxable inheritances under the circumstances therein detailed.

It appears from the statement of facts that the decedent died intestate, and that his estate consisted principally of real property. His heirs were all collateral, the degrees of relationship being in each case quite remote. The administrator was unable to determine who were the proper distributees of the estate and in what proportion the estate should be distributed to them, because not only of the difficulty of ascertaining the exact degrees of relationship, but also because of the fact that part of the estate was ancestral and part was non-ancestral. Moreover, the heirs resided in different parts of the United States and it was difficult to obtain information as to their identity, and even as to their number at the date of the testator's death.

There was considerable litigation in connection with the estate, such litigation involving almost half of the property of the estate in value. This litigation was finally disposed of in February, 1915, and complete information as to the identity of the heirs was received within the last month.

The administrator is now ready, and has at all times during the last month been ready, to pay the tax, but the question is as to his liability for the eight per cent. interest under the provisions of section 5335 of the General Code, which is in part as follows:

> "* * * If such taxes are not paid within one year after the death of the decedent, interest at the rate of eight per cent. shall be thereafter charged and collected thereon. * * *"

In my opinion, this interest is not collectible under the facts as stated by you. I refer you to the case of In re Bates' Estate, 7 N. P. (n. s.) 625, in which it was held that the eight per cent. interest provided by the statute is a penalty, and that, therefore, it will not be enforced except where the failure to pay the tax is the result of some positive neglect or default on the part of the executor; so that when a valid reason exists for delay, even though not amounting to actual impossibility of ascertaining the amount of the tax, as in the case of contingent remainders, etc., the penalty will not be enforced.

In the case cited the court refused to enforce the penalty because it was generally supposed for some time that the collateral inheritance tax law was unconstitutional on account of the decision of the supreme court relative to the direct inheritance tax. During the period of time in which this was the state of the public mind and until the supreme court had held the collateral inheritance tax law to be constitutional, the court held that an executor or administrator was justified in declining to pay the tax, and that, therefore, the penalty for failure to pay was not collectible.

The Bates case is an extreme application of the doctrine that is recognized in other states.

> See: In re Banks, 5 Pa. Co. Ct., 614; People v. Prout, 53 Hun. 541; State v. Pabst, 139 Wis., 561.
> Contra: Shelton v. Campbell, 109 Tenn., 690.

Although the rule is not uniformly adhered to, it was followed, as I have pointed out, in the only case which has been decided in Ohio on the subject, and, accordingly, I think that it is the rule to be followed in Ohio.

In my opinion, if the administrator of the estate named by you used due diligence to ascertain the identity and relationship of the heirs of the decedent, and if the litigation was of such a character as to suspend the determination of the method of distributing the estate (which I take it was the case), the facts stated by you constitute a sufficient reason for the failure on the part of the administrator to pay the tax, and the penalty should not be collected. This follows because under the Ohio law the tax is assessed against the various shares, and not against that part of the estate which is distributed to collateral relatives in bulk; so that so long as there is any bona fide question as to the amount of each distributive share passing to a collateral relative, and it is not known to what extent the exemptions will cut down the aggregate taxable value of the estate the tax cannot with accuracy and safety be computed and paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BUILDING—CONTRACT MUST BE AWARDED UNDER ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS BEFORE ANY LIABILITY RESTS WITH THE STATE.

Not until a contract is awarded under an advertisement for bids under sections 2314, et seq., G. C., is there any liability on the part of the state to pay contract price.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 26, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 22, 1915, you submitted for my opinon the following:

> "If an advertisement is inserted before July 1, 1915, for bids for the construction of a building under the provisions of sections 2314, et seq., of the General Code, does such advertisement create a liability to the extent that at the end of the advertising period a contract or contracts could be entered into after July 1, 1915, payable from the appropriations available prior to July 1, 1915?"

The mere insertion of an advertisement, in a newspaper, calling for bids for the construction of a building under the provisions of sections 2314, et seq., of the General Code, does not create any liability on the part of the state for payment of anything other than costs for such advertisement.

Not until a contract is awarded under an advertisement for bids is there any liability on the part of the state to pay the contract price, and funds not available at that time cannot be applied to such contract. Therefore, your question is answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—PATENTED ARTICLES MAY BE USED IN ROAD CONSTRUCTION—LIMITATION IS THAT ARTICLE BE FURNISHED TO ALL CONTRACTORS AT A FIXED AND REASONABLE PRICE.

The state highway commissioner may specify and use patented articles in road construction, provided there is filed with him an agreement on the part of the person or company owning the patent and producing the patented article to the effect that said person or company will furnish such article to all contractors desiring to bid on the work at a certain fixed and reasonable price.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 26, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 5, 1915, in which you state that the state highway department is frequently importuned to specify and use patented materials in highway construction, and that by reason of the fact that such materials are patented, their production is limited to certain firms or individuals. You observe that many of such products are not without merit, as for example Warrenite, and you transmit to me a number of documents relating to Warrenite, and ask my opinion as to the right of the state highway department to specify and use this and other materials similarly protected by a patent. Accompanying your communication is a copy of the specifications for Warrenite road on any approved form of foundation, and the specifications enclose a blank form of agreement, containing the following clause:

> "Warren Brothers Company, owner of the patents used in the construction of the Warrenite road, shall file with the proper official or board, which is about to receive bids for the work, a properly executed binding agreement to furnish to any contractor desiring to bid for the work all the necessary Warrenite surface material, mixed ready for use, and Warrenite cement, and the sand, gravel or stone screenings for the surface finish course, in accordance with sections, 'wearing surface' and 'surface finish,' at a definite reasonable price per ton. Said price shall include a license to use all of the patents required in the construction of the Warrenite road as herein specified."

A question very similar to the one now propounded by you was passed upon by the circuit court of Lucas county in the case of Holbrook v. Toledo, 18 O. C. D., 284. That case involved the question as to whether a city in calling for bids for a street improvement may advertise for and accept a construction, the materials entering into which or the method and proportions of assembling which, are covered by letters patent. Plaintiff sought to enjoin the city officials of Toledo and others, from proceeding under contract awarded to one Streicher, and it was charged in the petition that the contract in question involved a misapplication of the funds of the city and an abuse of its corporate powers, for the reason that the specifications for the construction of said improvement called for Warren's bitulithic pavement exclusively, and that certain elements entering into said pavement were covered by letters patent, as were also the machinery and appliances for laying said pavement and the process of mixing the materials used therein, and that by reason thereof no person could make use of any of the machinery, appliances, methods or materials so covered by letters patent, save and except upon the consent of said Warren Brothers Company.

It was averred, by reason of the above situation, that there could not have been such competitive bidding for the improvement as is contemplated by the laws of the state of Ohio. The court held against the contention of the plaintiff, observing that no provision of law directly prohibited a contract of this character, and that the statutes of Ohio did not set forth the terms upon which a patented improvement might be used.

The court in the concluding portion of its opinion, used the following language:

> "Not much encouragement would be given to the inventor of a patented pavement if his market were restricted to individuals, if municipalities were shut out of the number of the purchasers of that which he has invented. Individuals do not ordinarily buy pavements. And the question then comes, whether it is public policy to discourage invention along this line, which in the end may insure to the highest benefit of the cities. We have passed through very many stages of bad roads; from the old clay roads, the corduroy and the plank roads, through the divers forms of pavement. Now we have the bitulithic pavement, which has been selected by this board of public service, and it has seemed to this court, and to each member of it, that it is wise that the people, who have organized themselves into municipalities, should be free to avail themselves of every beneficent invention, keeping pace with the world's progress."

The statute relating to the board of public service which had sought to award the contract in the above case, required the letting of the contract to the lowest and best bidder. The only similar statute relating to your department is section 1201, General Code, which requires the highway commissioner to award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder. I see no distinction between the case passed upon by the circuit court of Lucas county and that which now presents itself, unless it be that in the case now under consideration a greater degree of competition is preserved, inasmuch as any contractor may do the work and a considerable part of the materials may be obtained from any source, and the patented articles consisting of the binder and the screenings for the surface finish course may be obtained by any contractor at a certain fixed price, which price shall also include a license to use all the patents required in the construction of Warrenite road.

I am not unmindful of the fact that section 3811, G. C., provides that no municipal corporation shall adopt plans or specifications for a public improvement, required by law to be made by contract, let after competitive bidding, which requires the exclusive use of a patented article or process protected by a trade mark, or any article or process wholly controlled by any person, firm or corporation or combination thereof. This section is, however, by its terms, limited to municipal corporations, and the fact that the legislature deemed it necessary to legislate on the subject, would seem to add strength to the conclusion that in the absence of an express prohibition, a public official vested with the power of letting contracts for public improvements would have the right under certain conditions to specify a patented article. Previous to the enactment of the section above referred to, the supreme court held in the case of Hastings v. Columbus, 42 O. S., 585, that the fact that a street improvement is to be made with a specific patented pavement is no valid objection to an assessment for such improvement, if, before the contract was let, the city had acquired the right to permit any bidder who might be successful, to use on reasonable terms, such patented material in making the improvement.

It is therefore my opinion that upon the filing with you of a properly executed agreement on the part of the company owning the patents and producing Warrenite or other similar patented article used in road construction, which agreement should be along the general lines of that referred to above, and upon your being satisfied that the price fixed for the patented material is a reasonable one, you may specify and use such patented article, even in those cases where you are required to let contracts at competitive bidding. The agreement referred to herein should be filed before advertisement is made, in order that all bidders may be advised of their ability to obtain the patented article at a certain fixed price.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AUTOMATIC FIRE SPRINKLER INSTALLED IN STATE BUILDING AS A FIXTURE—WAIVER OF COMPETITIVE BIDS—HOW OBTAINED —OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.

An automatic fire sprinkler system which is to be installed in a state building already erected, is not to be regarded as an alteration or improvement of, or an addition to said building within the meaning of section 2314, G. C. Where such system is to be paid for from funds appropriated by house bill No. 701, the expenditure is to be governed by the terms of said bill, and the question of the waiving of securing competitive bids is one to be presented to and determined by the board created by section 4 of said bill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 24, 1915, which reads as follows:

"The board of trustees of the Ohio State University desires to install, during the vacation period, an automatic sprinkler system as a means of fire protection in old university hall.

"The cost will probably be about $13,000.00, and the funds for the improvement will become available July 1, 1915.

"The opinion of the attorney general is requested on the following point:.

"Is this particular kind of an improvement contemplated under sections 2314-2317 of the General Code?

"The above question is raised for the following reasons:

"1. The sprinkler system of fire protection is a patented article of manufacture. The manufacturers prepare and submit their own lay-outs as to plans and specifications on their own particular systems. There are but few systems on the market, and each could be requested to submit lay-out and bid. It is not practicable for our architect to prepare plans, etc., in advance, as contemplated in section 2314.

"2. University hall is used to its full capacity for recitation purposes, and if it is necessary to publicly advertise for bids, the delay will prove quite serious, as it will require at least ninety days to install the system after the contract is let

"The board of trustees will hold its next meeting June 28, 1915, and if a reply from the attorney general could be had by that time, it will be greatly appreciated."

Section 2314, G. C., to which you refer, reads as follows:

"Before entering into contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars, each officer, board, or other authority by law charged with the supervision thereof, shall make or cause to be made the following: Full and accurate plans, showing all necessary details of the work, with working plans suitable for the use of mechanics and other builders in such construction, so drawn and represented as to be plain and easily understood; accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction to accompany such plans; full and complete specifications of the work to be performed, showing the manner and style required with such directions as will enable a competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out and afford bidders all needful information; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof."

Section 2315, G. C., requires that the plans, etc., required by section 2314 be submitted to the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state for approval. Sections 2316 and 2317 relate to the giving of notice by publication of the time when and place where, bids will be received, and section 2318, G. C., requires the awarding of the contract to the lowest bidder.

Your inquiry raises a question as to whether the automatic sprinkler system to be installed in university hall is an alteration or improvement of, or an addition to, a state institution or building, within the meaning of section 2314, G. C. Having reference to the terms of section 2314, G. C., it may be observed that the installation of an automatic sprinkler system in university hall will not serve to substantially alter the building or change its arrangement, so that it could hardly be said that the installation of such a system would constitute an alteration. The installation of a sprinkler system will not improve the building in the sense that it will be made more convenient for use, the only purpose in installing an automatic sprinkler system being to secure fire protection. In considering the question of whether or not such a system is to be regarded as an addition to a building, I have had in mind certain elementary rules relating to fixtures which are defined as tangible property whose status as realty or personalty is indeterminate. The status of fixtures becomes determinate according as certain facts appear, and they then fall into one or the other category. The test of annexation to the realty is not always conclusive as to whether or not a fixture is to be regarded as realty or personalty, and many instances might be cited in which physical annexation has been held insufficient to constitute a fixture a part of the realty. Trade fixtures might be cited as an illustration, as they have always been regarded as personal property, and the right to remove such fixtures, although attached to the realty, has always been recognized on grounds of public policy.

Questions involving the principles now under discussion have most frequently arisen between landlord and tenant, mortgagor and mortgagee, or grantor and grantee. I see no reason, however, why the general principles laid down by the courts in defining the rights of landlord and tenant, mortgagor and mortgagee, and grantor and grantee, are not applicable to the matter now under consideration. In the case of Star Distillery Co. v. Mihalovitch-Fletcher Co., 9 N. P. (n. s.), 218, the facts were that a lease for a term of years contained a covenant that the lessee should equip the leased buildings with an automatic fire sprinkler system at the expense of the lessee. The action was one by the lessor to enjoin the receivers of the lessee from removing the fire sprinkler system from the premises, and the court held that the system was a trade fixture, properly removable by the receivers, on surrender of the premises. Limitations of time imposed by your inquiry prevent an extended discussion of the matter, and my conclusion is that the automatic sprinkler system to be installed in university hall is not to be regarded as an alteration or improvement of, or an addition to, said building within the meaning of section 2314, G. C.

Inasmuch as the sprinkler system is to be paid for from funds appropriated by house bill No. 701, it follows that the expenditure for such a system is to be governed by the terms of that bill. It is provided by section 6, of house bill 701, that the moneys appropriated by the bill shall be drawn upon requisitions or vouchers, which requisitions or vouchers must show that competitive bids were secured, unless otherwise provided by law, or unless in the judgment of the board, provided in section 4 of the act, it is impracticable, because of the peculiar nature or location of the work to be done, in which case such board may, in writing, authorize the department affected to proceed to do the work. The board provided by section 4 of the act, consists of the governor or any competent disinterested person to be appointed by him for such purpose, the chairman of the finance committees of the house of representatives and senate respectively, the attorney general and the auditor of state. The question of the propriety of relieving the board of trustees of Ohio State University from the necessity of securing competitive bids for the installation of an automatic sprinkler system in university hall is, therefore, one to be presented to and determined by the above named board, and the question may be presented to and determined by said board at any time after July 1st.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TEACHERS' PENSION FUND—APPLICATION TO A PARTICULAR CASE—RETIRED TEACHER—DECEDENT.

The provisions of section 7892, G. C., are not applicable to the case of a person who has been retired as a teacher by the board of education of a school district under authority of section 7880, G. C., and who has been granted a pension by said board of education under authority of section 7883, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. John C. Hover, secretary of the board of trustees of the teachers' pension fund for the city school district of Bellefontaine, Ohio, under date of June 7th, requesting my opinion on certain questions therein stated, and I deem it advisable to address my opinion on these questions to you.

Judge Hover's letter is as follows:

> "I am secretary of the board of trustees of the teachers' pension fund for the city school district of Bellefontaine, Ohio. The board of trustees, as provided for by statute, was created about two years ago. Section 7875, etc.
> "In December, 1914, Prof. John W. McKinnon was granted a pension at the rate of forty-five dollars per month. He had contributed to the fund but one year, $18.00, when he was retired by the board of education. He applied for pension under the statute and the board granted the pension at the maximum rate of forty-five dollars per month, upon condition that he would draw no money from the treasury until the full amount, six hundred dollars, had been contributed. He drew a hundred and eighty dollars, which was turned back to his credit on the six hundred dollars, that would be required before he would be entitled to the full amount of the pension and in compliance with the condition that was imposed upon the granting of the pension in the first instance.
> "On the eleventh day of April the pensioner died. He had contributed one hundred and ninety-eight dollars to the fund, and had in fact drawn nothing.

"The administratrix of his estate has made application for rebate under section 7892. I would like an opinion from your office on this question before the board acts.

"The question is: Is the estate of Prof. John W. McKinnon, deceased, entitled to fifty per cent. of the whole amount contributed to the fund, or to any rebate? Is the estate entitled to one-half of the amount that had been contributed before the contribution of the amount of forty-five dollars per month pension? The amount contributed before was eighteen dollars. I would be pleased to have your opinion on this question at an early date."

Sections 7875 et seq., of the General Code, as found in the chapter relating to teachers' pensions, authorize the establishment of a school teachers' pension fund by the board of education of a school district, and provide that said fund shall be under the management and control of a board to be known as "The Board of Trustees of the School Teachers' Pension Fund" for such district.

Section 7877, G. C., provides:

"When the board of education of any school district has declared the advisability of creating a school teachers' pension fund, its clerk shall notify each teacher in the public schools and high schools, if any, of the school district, by notice in writing of the passage of such resolution, and require the teachers to notify the board in writing, within thirty days from the date of such notice, whether they consent or decline to accept the provisions of law for creating such a fund; but teachers who, prior to the first day of July, 1911, were in the employ of a board of education which has created such a fund under this law shall not be denied the right of accepting the provisions hereof before the first day of January, 1912. After the election of the board of trustees herein provided for, two dollars ($2.00) shall be deducted by the proper officers from the monthly salary of each teacher who accepted such provisions and from the salary of all new teachers, such sum to be paid into and applied to the credit of such pension fund; and such sum shall continue so to be deducted during the term of service of such teacher.

"All persons employed for the first time as teachers by the board of education which has created such a pension fund shall be deemed new teachers for the purpose of this act, but the term new teachers shall not be construed to include teachers serving under reappointments. New teachers shall, by accepting employment as such, accept the provisions of this act, and thereupon become contributors to said pension fund in accordance with the terms hereof. And the provisions of this act shall become a part of and enter into such contract of employment."

I understand that John W. McKinnon, in compliance with the requirements of section 7877, G. C., as above quoted, contributed to the teachers' pension fund established by the board of education of the Bellefontaine city school district for the period of one year, and that the sum of eighteen dollars was deducted from his salary for said year. It further appears that in December, 1914, the said John W. McKinnon was retired by said board of education under authority of section 7880, G. C., which provides:

"Such board of education of such school district, and a union, or other separate board, if any, having the control and management of the high schools of such district, may each by a majority vote of all the members composing the board, on account of physical or mental disability, retire any teacher under such board who has taught for a period aggregating twenty years.

One-half of such period of service must have been rendered by such beneficiary in the public schools or high schools of such school district, or in the public schools or high schools of the county in which they are located, and the remaining one half in the public schools of this state or elsewhere."

Section 7881, G. C.. provides:

"The term 'teacher,' in this chapter, shall include all teachers regularly employed by either of such boards in the day schools, including the superintendent of schools, all superintendents of instruction, principals, and special teachers, but in estimating years of service, only service in public day schools or day high schools, supported in whole or in part by public taxation, shall be considered. (R. S., section 3897d.)"

Section 7882, G. C., prescribes the conditions under which a teacher may voluntarily retire from service and become a beneficiary of the teachers' pension fund.

After the said John W. McKinnon was retired from service by said board of education, upon application duly made by him, he was granted a pension of forty-five dollars per month for ten months of each year during the remainder of his natural life, under authority of section 7883, which provides:

"Each teacher so retired or retiring shall be entitled during the remainder of his or her natural life to receive as pension, annually, twelve dollars and fifty cents for each year of service as teacher, except that in no event shall the pension paid to a teacher exceed four hundred and fifty dollars in any one year. Such pensions shall be paid monthly during the school year."

I assume that the board of education, in granting Mr. McKinnon the maximum allowance of four hundred and fifty dollars per year, found that he was qualified under the provisions of section 7880, G. C., and that he had served as teacher for at least thirty-six years.

Section 7884, G. C., provides:

"No such pension shall be paid until the teacher contributes, or has contributed, to such fund a sum equal to twenty dollars a year for each year of service rendered as teacher, but which sum shall not exceed six hundred dollars. Should any teacher retiring be unable to pay the full amount of this sum before receiving a pension, in paying the annual pension to such retiring teacher, the board of trustees must withhold on each month's payment twenty per cent. thereof, until the amount above provided has been thus contributed to the fund. (R. S., section 3897d.)"

Under authority of this section the board of education of Bellefontaine city school district, in granting said pension, imposed the condition that before the said John W. McKinnon should be entitled to the full amount of said pension he must contribute to said pension fund the maximum sum of six hundred dollars. Of this sum he had already contributed eighteen dollars before said pension was granted. He was not compelled to contribute more than twenty per cent. of the monthly allowance of forty-five dollars, to wit: nine dollars per month, in order to be entitled to the balance of thirty-six dollars per month for ten months of each year.

Had he lived and continued to exercise his right to draw thirty-six dollars per month for ten months during each school year, the board of trustees would have withheld said sum of nine dollars per month for ten months of each year. Under such plan six years and seven months would have elapsed before Mr. McKinnon would have been entitled to his full allowance of forty-five dollars per month.

He chose, however, to contribute the entire sum of forty-five dollars per month to said pension fund, and in this way to shorten the period of time that would have to elapse before he would be entitled to said full monthly allowance. Having contributed one hundred and ninety-eight dollars to said fund, this pensioner died on April 11, 1915, and you inquire what amount, if any, the administratrix of his estate is entitled to recover under authority of section 7892, G. C., which provides:

> "In case of the death of a teacher, the heirs, legatees or assigns of the deceased, shall be entitled to receive half of the total amount paid by such teacher into such fund upon application therefor, with proof of claim to the satisfaction of the board of trustees. (R. S., section 3897h.)"

If the said John W. McKinnon had contributed the sum of one hundred and ninety-eight dollars to said pension fund, while serving as a teacher in said district, and had died before having a pension granted to him by said board of education, it is clear that his estate would be entitled to fifty per cent. of said sum under the above provision of section 7892, G. C.

I think, however, that having been retired by said board under authority of section 7880, G. C., and having been granted a pension by said board under authority of section 7883, G. C., his status in relation to said pension fund was changed. He was no longer a teacher, within the meaning of section 7892, G. C., contributing to said fund in compliance with the requirements of section 7877, G. C. On and after the date when said pension was granted he was a beneficiary of said fund, and as such, entitled to a monthly allowance of thirty-six dollars per month for ten months each year.

The fact that he chose to turn said monthly allowance of thirty-six dollars back into said fund, which, if he had lived, would have had the effect of shortening the period of time which would have had to have elapsed before he would have been entitled to the full monthly allowance, is not material as affecting his relation as beneficiary to said fund.

I find no decisions of the courts in which the question submitted by you has been construed. However, in the case of Venable v. Shaffer, et al., 7 O. C. C. (N. S.), 337, the first branch of the syllabus provides:

> "School teachers' pension fund does not provide a bounty, but the basis of a mutual contract, in the nature of insurance; hence all terms should be given a fair interpretation without favor, and where one does not come within the express terms there is no reason to strain them to include such person."

I think a distinction must be made between the class of teachers, in the service, contributing to said fund, and who have received no benefits from said fund, and that class of persons, formerly in the service, who have retired or been retired by the boards of education of their respective districts, and have been granted pensions, and are beneficiaries of said pension fund.

The purpose of the legislature in providing that:

> "No such person shall be paid until the teacher contributes, or has contributed, to such fund a sum equal to twenty dollars a year for each year of service rendered as teacher, but which sum shall not exceed six hundred dollars. (7884, G. C.)" was to equalize the burden between teachers who have paid for the full term of service and those who have not.

There could be no good reason for the withholding of a definite sum from the monthly salary of teachers in the service, for the creation of said pension fund, and for the requirement of section 7884, G. C., above quoted, if the legislature intended that the provisions of section 7892, G. C., should be applicable to both of the above defined classes. It seems clear, therefore, that the granting of the pension eliminates the beneficiary thereof from the class of persons to which the provisions of section 7892, G. C., are applicable.

Replying to your question I am of the opinion that the administratrix of the estate of the said John W. McKinnon, deceased, is not entitled to recover any part of the aforesaid sum of one hundred and ninety-eight dollars.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER MONEY FROM FEE FUND OR OTHER FUNDS OF COUNTY TO PAY MOTHERS' PENSION—ALLOWANCES SHOULD BE MODIFIED TO KEEP WITHIN LEVY—JUVENILE COURT.

County commissioners are not authorized to transfer money from fee funds or other funds of the county to pay mothers' pensions when the levy provided for by section 1683-9, G. C., 103 O. L., 879, does not produce enough revenue to pay all allowances made for mothers' pensions by the juvenile court.

When the allowances for mothers' pensions exceed the funds made available by the above levy the court should modify or discontinue sufficient of the allowances to bring the aggregate of the allowances within the amount of money produced by the levy, having due regard for the most needy cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of June 18, 1915, requesting my opinion, received, and is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Section 1683-9 of the mothers' pension law, 103 O. L., page 879, reads:
> " 'It is hereby made the duty of the county commissioners to provide out of the money in the county treasury, such sum each year thereafter, as will meet the requirements of the court in these proceedings. To provide the same, they shall levy a tax not to exceed one-tenth of a mill on the dollar valuation of the taxable property of the county.'
> "We have an instance in mind where the taxable value of the duplicate of a county is $118,000,000.00. If the maximum amount of levy were made as provided in section 1683-9, as above quoted, this would produce a fund of $11,800.00, but in the county in question the juvenile judge has awarded mothers' pensions to pay which requires $16,800.00 per year.

"QUESTION: May the county commissioners transfer from the surplus of the county officers' fee funds, an amount sufficient to meet the differences; if not, are the pensions to be pro-rated to keep within the limitations of the levy?"

As to the first part of your question, to wit: whether the commissioners may transfer from the surplus of the county officer's fee funds, an amount sufficient to make up the difference between the amount produced by the levy made for the purpose of providing a fund from which to pay mothers' pensions and the amount which has been allowed by the court; section 1683-9 of the General Code (103 O. L., page 877) provides as follows:

"It is hereby made the duty of the county commissioners to provide out of the money in the county treasury, such sum each year thereafter, as will meet the requirements of the court in these proceedings. To provide the same they shall levy a tax not to exceed one-tenth of a mill on the dollar valuation of the taxable property of the county. Such levy shall be subject to all the limitations provided by law upon the aggregate amount, rate, maximum rate and combined maximum rate of taxation. The county auditor shall issue a warrant upon the county treasurer for the payment of such allowance as may be ordered by the juvenile judge."

While this section by its terms makes it the duty of the commissioners to provide a fund sufficient to meet the allowances made by the court, it also contains the express limitation, that the levy for that purpose shall not exceed one-tenth of a mill on the dollar valuation of the taxable property of the county, thus defining clearly the point beyond which the commissioners cannot go. The fact that applications for mothers' pensions might, and probably would exceed the amount of funds thus made available was taken into consideration by the general assembly, and to meet such a situation, they enacted section 1683-5 of the General Code (103 O. L., page 877), as follows:

"Should the fund at the disposal of the court for this purpose be sufficient to permit an allowance to only part of the persons coming within the provisions of this act, the juvenile judge shall select those cases in most urgent need of such allowance."

It is therefore clear, that the court in making allowances, is limited by the amount of money available, and it follows that no liability on the county is created by allowances made by the court in excess thereof.

It is true, that the legislature at its extraordinay session (104 O. L., page 199), provided for the transfer of funds from any other fund of the county in which a surplus might exist for the purpose of providing a fund to pay mothers' pensions, in the following language:

"For the purpose of providing a sum which will meet the requirements of the juvenile court until the proceeds of the tax required to be levied under the provisions of section 1683-9 of the General Code shall become available, any board of county commissioners may transfer from any surplus moneys in the county treasury to the credit of any fund therein, to a fund for the use of the juvenile court under the provisions of section 1683-2 to 1683-9, inclusive, of the General Code, the creation of which for such purpose is hereby authorized. * * *"

It is plain, however, that this was only a temporary provision, designed to make possible the payment of mothers' pensions prior to the time that a levy could be made as provided in section 1683-9, supra, and that its force ended when the levy so provided for was made, and that after such a levy has been made there is no further power to transfer funds under the provisions of this section.

Sections 2296, et seq., of the General Code, make provision for the transfer, under certain conditions and by proper procedure, of moneys of the county from one fund to another, and section 2985 of the General Code provides for transfers from county officers' fee funds, but it is clear that the legislature intended to limit the amount of money that could be expended in any county for mothers' pensions, and the commissioners would not be permitted to do indirectly what they cannot do directly, and therefore, would have no power to make such a transfer under these general provisions.

I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that the commissioners have no power to transfer from the surplus of the county officers' funds an amount sufficient to make up the difference between the amount of money produced by the levy provided for by section 1683-9 of the General Code, and the amount of allowances made by the court for mothers' pensions.

As to your second question, to wit: whether the allowances are to be pro-rated to keep within the limitations of the levy, your attention is directed to the fact that the amount of allowance on any application is in the discretion of the juvenile judge limited only as to the maximum which can be allowed, and that said judge has the power to modify such allowances at any time. See section 1683-4, General Code, as follows:

> "Whenever any child shall reach the age for legal employment, any allowance made to the mother of such child for the benefit of such child shall cease. The juvenile court may, in its discretion, at any time before such child reaches such age, discontinue or modify the allowance to any mother and for any child."

Neither the commissioners, the auditor, nor anyone else has any authority to reduce or modify any allowance made by the court, and such would be the effect of any such pro-rating as that about which you inquire. The court, however, under the section last above quoted, would have the power to order that sufficient of the allowances be reduced or discontinued to bring the aggregate of the claims within the amount of available funds to pay the same. In so doing the court should select the most needy cases, as provided in section 1683-5, supra, and after providing for such cases, make proper orders reducing or discontinuing the allowances in other cases. In the absence of such orders from the court, and in the absence of a certification by the court to the auditor of allowances as they are made, the auditor can only apply the funds to the payment of claims in the order of priority of their presentment to him, until the money is exhausted.

Specifically answering your second question, therefore, I am of the opinion that the claims are not to be pro-rated to keep within the limitations of the levy.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE OR LEASE LAND FOR ESTABLISHING MERIDIAN LINES—PUBLIC HIGHWAYS MAY BE USED TO ESTABLISH LINES.

County commissioners are without authority to purchase or lease land for the purpose of establishing thereon meridian lines. If the county owns an infirmary farm near the county seat, it would be proper to establish the lines on such farm, or the same might be established on a public highway near the county seat if the owners of the abutting property consent thereto.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28. 1915.

HON. JOS. T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 7, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "The commissioners of this county are desirous of establishing a true meridan line under section 2480 of the Code.
> "Have they power under this or any other section of the Code to appropriate land or lease land for this purpose?"

Section 2480, General Code, to which you refer, reads as follows:

> "When it has not been done, the county commissioners shall employ a suitable person of competent skill to establish at or near the county seat of the county, lines not exceeding forty rods or perches in length, corresponding with the true meridian of the place, and furthermore, simultaneously determine to within one-half of one second of an arc the geographical latitude, and to within one and one-half second of an arc the geographical longitude of the station occupied by the instrument in such operation."

It will be noted that the above quoted section does not authorize the purchase or lease of land where the same is desired for the purpose of establishing thereon meridian lines, and I am of the opinion that the county commissioners are without authority to purchase or lease lands for such purpose. If the county owns an infirmary farm near the county seat, it would be proper to establish the lines on such farm, or the same might be established on a public highway near the county seat if the owners of the abutting property consent thereto.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL MAY IMPROVE ITS STREETS BY FORCE ACCOUNT—IF COST OF MATERIAL IS LESS THAN FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, COMPETITIVE BIDDING NOT NECESSARY—IF OVER FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, COMPETITIVE BIDDING NECESSARY.

1. Council may improve its roads and streets by force account.
2. If it determines upon a specific improvement and money is duly appropriated therefor, said improvement to be made with gravel, and the amount of gravel necessary therefor amounts to less than five hundred ($500) dollars, competitive bidding is not necessary. If over five hundred ($500) dollars, competitive bidding is necessary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 11, 1915, you submitted for my opinion the following:

> "The council of a village has levied a tax amounting to several thousand dollars, the proceeds of which are to be used in the improvement of the roads and streets of the municipality. May such funds, raised by taxation, be expended in the purchase of material and the employment of the necessary labor, or do the provisions of section 4221 and 4222, General Code, govern and require that such expenditures be made upon contract (including both labor and material) let at competitive bid, the amount involved being more than $500.00?
> "If you hold that the council may construct said improvement by force account, if the amount to be expended for gravel used in said improvement amounts to over $500.00, must the same be purchased at competitive bid?"

I note from your letter that the money to be used for the improvement of the roads and streets in question was raised solely by a tax levy, and that, therefore, there is no question in this matter regarding either bond issues or improvement of streets under the assessment plan. I assume that an appropriation of such moneys in the treasury of the village has been duly made, and that the same has been made generally for improvements of streets and roads, without any special designation as to what streets and roads are to be improved thereunder.

Section 4219 of the General Code provides that the council of a village shall fix the compensation and bonds of all officers, clerks and employes in the village government, except as otherwise provided by law.

Under the provisions of section 4364, G. C., the street commissioner to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council under the provisions of section 4363, is under the direction of council, to "supervise the improvement and repair of streets" and to "perform such other duties consistent with the nature of his office as council may require."

Section 4365, G. C., provides that:

> "Such street commissioner * * * shall have such assistants as council may provide, who shall be employed by the street commissioner, and shall serve for such time and for such compensation as is fixed by council."

Since the authority of the street commissioner is solely to supervise the improvement and repair of streets, I am inclined to view that the word "assistants," as used in section 4365, G. C., must refer solely to "assistant street commissioners" as it were, and that the term "assistants" as so used in said section cannot be interpreted to mean the employes on the work under the supervision of the street commissioner; especially so since the council is to fix the time of service as well as the compensation.

However, under the provisions of section 4219, G. C., hereinbefore referred to, it is the duty of council to fix the compensation of the employes of the village. If council decides to improve the roads and streets by what is familiarly known as "force account," that is to say, where the laborers on the work are employed directly by the council, I am of the opinion that such laborers so employed are to be considered as employes of the village for the time that they are so employed.

Section 4221 of the General Code, to which you refer in your inquiry, after providing how the contracts made by the village council shall be signed, provides as follows:

> "Section 4221. * * * When any expenditure other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such contracts shall be in writing, and made with the lowest and best bidder, after advertising for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the village. The bids shall be opened at twelve o'clock noon on the last day for filing them, by the clerk of the village, and publicly read by him."

The laborers doing work under "force account" being "persons employed" in the village, the expenditure of moneys to compensate them for their work on a given improvement is not to be taken into contemplation in determining whether or not the said improvement will exceed five hundred ($500.00) dollars.

Your first question asks whether funds raised by taxation in the manner described can be expended in the purchase of material and the employment of the necessary labor, or whether the provisions of sections 4221 and 4222 of the General Code govern and require that such expenditures be made upon contract (including both labor and material) let at competitive bid, the amount involved being more than five hundred ($500.00) dollars.

If I understand your question correctly it is as to whether or not a village may provide by force account the improvement of its streets and roads, and my answer thereto is that the village can so provide, and that in determining the expenditure of money for an improvement, under the provisions of section 4221, G. C., the pay of the laborers employed under force account is not to be taken into contemplation in determining whether or not said improvement will exceed five hundred ($500.00) dollars.

Having determined that council may construct such an improvement by force account, you ask if the amount expended for gravel used amounts to over five hundred ($500.00) dollars, whether or not the same must be purchased at competitive bid. My answer thereto is yes, for the reason that from your statement it appears that the expenditure for the material, to wit, gravel, necessary for the improvement, is in excess of five hundred ($500.00) dollars.

Council would, of course, not have authority to evade the law by splitting up the contract for gravel necessary for the contemplated improvement so as to make more than one expenditure for the same improvement, each of less than five hundred ($500.00) dollars.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—HUTSON COAL COMPANY NOT ENTITLED TO PROTECTION UNDER SAID ACT BECAUSE OF FAILURE TO PAY PREMIUM PRIOR TO DEATH BY INJURY OF ITS EMPLOYE—COMPANY STILL LIABLE—SEE SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION No. 657.

The Hutson Coal Company, having failed to pay its premium under the Workmen's Compensation Act, prior to death by injury in the course of employment of one of its employes, is not entitled to protection of the act to release it from liability under section 27 of the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter concerning the payment of the premium of The Hutson Coal Company, which is as follows:

"The Hutson Coal Company is a corporation duly organized under the laws of the state of Ohio, and is engaged in the operation of certain coal mines in Portage and Harrison counties, this state, and in the operation of such mines employs five or more employes.

"On May 24, 1914, said The Hutson Coal Company paid to the treasurer of state the sum of $570.00, the same being its estimated premium due to the state insurance fund for the six months' period beginning May 25, 1914, and ending November 24, 1914, for conducting said mining operations, the amount of said premium of $570.00 having been first ascertained by the industrial commission of Ohio and a pay-in order having been issued by said commission authorizing the payment of the same in the manner aforesaid according to the rules of the commission.

"On December 18, 1914, said The Hutson Coal Company filed with the industrial commission of Ohio its payroll report showing the amount of money paid in wages to its said employes from May 25, 1914, to November 30, 1914, to have been $80,697.10, the estimated payroll having been $38,000.00. There was therefore due and payable from said The Hutson Coal Company to the state insurance fund an additional premium on $42,697.10 of wage expenditure, the same being the difference between the estimated payroll and the actual payroll for said period, which at the rate of $1.80 per $100.00 of wage expenditure amounted to $753.80.

"On February 23, 1915, said The Hutson Coal Company paid to the treasurer of state the sum of $453.80, the same being then and there received by the treasurer as a credit on said additional premium for said period, leaving a balance due and unpaid on that date of $300.00.

"Upon making its payroll report for its first six months' insurance period, the coal company included in its payroll its total wage expenditure for the whole of the month of November in order that its second insurance period might begin with the first day of December, which was agreeable to the industrial commission and the second insurance period of said company then extended from December 1, 1914, to May 31, 1915.

"For the second six months' insurance period of said The Hutson Coal Company, beginning December 1, 1914, and ending May 31, 1915, said company made no payment whatever to the treasurer of state for credit to the state insurance fund. For said second period its advance estimated payroll was $35,000.00, which at the rate designated and fixed by the commission produced an estimated premium of $655.00, which, as above stated, was not paid. Said company has made no report to the commission of its actual wage expenditure for said second period beginning December 1, 1914, and ending May 31, 1915.

"On May 31, 1915, one of the regular employes of said The Hutson Coal Company while in the due course of his employment sustained an injury which resulted in his death.

"On June 7, 1915, the commission certified to you for collection the unpaid balance due from said company to the state insurance fund for said first period above mentioned, and also at the same time certified to you for collection said advance estimated premium of $655.00 for said second period above mentioned. Neither of said sums had been collected and paid into the state insurance fund at the time of the injury and death of said employe, which occured on May 31, 1915.

"The Hutson Coal Company now desires to pay into the state treasury the balance due to the state insurance fund on said first period, the whole of the premium due to the fund for its second period and make the advance payment for the third period beginning June 1, 1915, and ending November 30, 1915.

"Before accepting payment from the said company it is the desire of this commission to obtain your opinion as to the status of said company and its employes with reference to liability growing out of the death of said employe, or liability on account of injury or death of any other employes of said company for said second period, or liability on account of the injury or death of its employes occuring in the interim between the end of the second period and the date of the payment of the premium for the third period should such payment be made.

"Thanking you in advance for your opinion on the questions of law involved. * * *"

From the statements contained in your letter it will be noted that The Hutson Coal Company was not only in default for the payment of the sum of $300.00 on the amount due for the first six months' period, but in addition, allowed the entire second six months' period, ending May 31, 1915, to pass without the payment of anything.

The purpose and scope of the act known as the compulsory workmen's compensation act is best stated by a reference to the provisions of the recent amendment to the constitution of the state, which became effective January 1, 1913, and is known as section 35 of article II of the constitution, as follows:

"For the purpose of providing compensation to workmen and their dependents, for death, injuries or occupational diseases, occasioned in the course of such workmen's employment, laws may be passed establishing a state fund to be created by compulsory contributions thereto by employers, and administered by the state, determining the terms and conditions upon which payment shall be made therefrom, and taking away any or all rights of action or defenses from employes and employers; but no right of action shall be taken away from any employe when the injury, disease or death arises from failure of the employer to comply with any lawful requirement for the protection of the lives, health and safety of employes. Laws may be passed establishing a board which may be empowered to classify all occupations, according to their degree of hazard, to fix rates of contribution to such fund according to such classification, and to collect, administer and distribute such fund, and to determine all rights of claimants thereto."

Section 1465-60 of the General Code (103 O. L., 77), which is section 13 of the act is as follows:

"The following shall constitute employers subject to the provisions of this act:

"1. The state and each county, city, township, incorporated village and school district therein.

"2. Every person, firm and private corporation including any public service corporation that has in service five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment under any contract of hire, express, or implied, oral or written."

Under the provisions of section 1465-69 of the General Code (103 O. L., 79), which is section 22 of the act, I am informed that employers have been granted a month's latitude in making payment of their respective premiums in view of the language used in reference to the time of payment of premiums, which language is as follows:

"Except as hereinafter provided, every employer mentioned in subdivision two of section thirteen hereof shall, in the month of January, 1914, and semi-annually thereafter, pay into the state insurance fund, * * *"

Section 1465-73 of the General Code (103 O. L., 82), which is section 26 of the act, is as follows:

"Employers mentioned in subdivision two of section thirteen hereof, who shall fail to comply with the provisions of section twenty-two hereof, shall not be entitled to the benefits of this act during the period of such non-compliance, but shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injuries sustained in the course of employment caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer, or any of the employer's officers, agents or employes, and also to the personal representatives of such employes where death results from such injuries, and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself or itself of the following common law defenses:

"The defense of the fellow-servant rule, the defense of the assumption of risk, or the defense of contributory negligence.

"And such employers shall also be subject to the provisions of the two sections next succeeding."

Section 1465-75 of the General Code (103 O. L., 83), which is section 28 of the act, is as follows:

"If any employer shall default in any payment required to be made by him to the state insurance fund, the amount due from him shall be collected by civil action against him in the name of the state as plaintiff; and it shall be the duty of the state liability board of awards on the first Monday in February, 1914, and on the first Monday of each month thereafter, to certify to the attorney general of the state the names and residences of all employers known to the board to be in default for such payments for a longer period than five days, and the amount due from each such employer, and it shall then be the duty of the attorney general forthwith to bring, or cause to be brought against each such employer a civil action in the proper court for the collection of such amount so due, and the same when collected, shall be paid into the state insurance fund, and such employer's compliance with the provisions of this act requiring payments to be made to the state insurance fund shall date from the time of the payment of said money so collected as aforesaid to the treasurer of state for credit to the state insurance fund."

From the statements made in your letter it is clear that The Hutson Coal Company, under the provisions of section 1465-73 of the General Code, supra, is not entitled to the benefits of the workmen's compensation act during the second six months' period, notwithstanding the fact that the claim of $955.00 against the company for $300.00 balance due on premium for the first six months' period, and $655.00 for estimated premium for the entire second six months' period has been referred to this department for collection, as the protection, if any, under the act which may be extended to The Hutson Coal Company will, under the provisions of section 1465-75 of the General Code, supra, be effective only from the time when the premium is collected.

It is my opinion, therefore, that The Hutson Coal Company, having failed to pay its premiums for the period in which the death of the employe referred to occurred is not entitled to receive the benefits of the workmen's compensation act insofar as such benefits may attach to release the company from liability for the death of its employe, which occurred on May 31, 1915, and transfer such liability to the workmen's compensation fund.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GOVERNOR—NO POWER TO DIRECT BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION TO TRANSFER PATIENTS FROM OTHER STATE INSTITUTIONS TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL—TRANSFER OF INSANE CONVICTS FROM LIMA WHEN SENTENCE HAS NOT EXPIRED, WHERE CONVICT'S REASON HAS BEEN RESTORED—OTHERWISE DISCHARGED—GOVERNOR MAY DIRECT BOARD TO ASSUME MANAGEMENT WHEN BUILDING IS SUBSTANTIALLY COMPLETED.

1. The governor has no power to direct board of administration to transfer patients from other state institutions to Lima State Hospital.

2. If insane convicts confined in Lima State Hospital, whose terms of sentence have not expired, have been restored to reason, they shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which they came.

3. Those persons, not convicts, so confined, cannot be returned to state institutions, but may be discharged under section 1998, G. C.

4. When Lima State Hospital is substantially completed, and work of contractors accepted, governor may, if he deems it to interests of hospital and state, direct board of administration to assume management.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Under date of June 28th, you submitted for my written opinion, three questions touching the management and control of the Lima State Hospital.

Your first question is as follows:

> "(1) Has the governor of Ohio the power to direct the state board of administration to transfer patients from other state institutions to the Lima State Hospital; the Lima State Hospital being so far completed now as to make it possible to care for patients in that institution?"

The Lima State Hospital, under the provisions of section 1985 of the General Code, shall be used for the care, custody and special treatment of insane persons of the following classes:

> "1. Persons who become insane while in the state reformatory or the penitentiary.
> "2. Dangerous insane persons in other state hospitals.
> "3. Persons accused of crime, but not indicted because of insanity.
> "4. Persons indicted, but found to be insane.
> "5. Persons acquitted because of insanity.
> "6. Persons adjudged to be insane, who were previously convicted of crime.
> "7. Such other insane persons as may be directed by law."

From your question I assume that there are only two classes concerning which you inquire, to wit, the first and second classes.

The admission of patients to the Lima State Hospital from "a state hospital" is provided for by sections 1993 (103 O. L., 448) and 1994 of the General Code, which sections read as follows:

> "Section 1993. The superintendent of a state hospital for insane may make application to the Ohio board of administration for an order of transfer to the Lima State Hospital of any or all inmates thereof that exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies, rendering their presence a source of danger to others. The board, upon satisfaction that such order is advisable, may order the transfer of such persons to the Lima State Hospital.
> "Section 1994. In case a patient of another state hospital at any time exhibits such dangerous or homicidal tendencies, the same proceedings may be instituted and had, and he may be transferred to the Lima Hospital in the manner herein provided. The expenses of transferring an inmate shall be paid by the hospital from which he is transferred."

It appears, therefore, that under the provisions of section 1993, supra, the right of removal from any of the state hospitals to the Lima State Hospital rests upon application to the Ohio board of administration, and an order from such Ohio board of administration for the transfer of such patients.

There is no authority that I can find which authorizes the governor to direct the board of administration to transfer patients from state hospitals to the Lima State Hospital. The application must be made by the superintendent of the state hospital, and "upon satisfaction that such order is advisable" the board of administration may order the transfer. The question of transfer seems to be optional with the superintendent to make the application and the board to order the transfer.

Relative to the first class, to wit, those who become insane while in the state reformatory or the penitentiary, sections 2216, 2217 and 2218 of the General Code apply. Said sections are as follows:

> "Section 2216. When the physician of the penitentiary or reformatory reports in writing, to the warden or officer in charge thereof, that in his opinion a convict confined therein is insane, such warden or officer shall apply to the probate court of the county in which the institution is located, for an examination to be made of such convict, by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory, and to be designated by the court. If satisfied, after a personal examination, that the convict is insane, they shall so certify in the form and manner prescribed for the commitment of insane persons to state hospitals.

"Section 2217. Such warden or officer shall apply to the court for an order transferring the convict to the Lima State Hospital, accompanying his application with the medical certificate of lunacy. If satisfied that the convict is insane, the court shall issue an order of transfer, and the warden or officer shall thereupon cause the convict to be transferred to the Lima State Hospital and delivered to the superintendent thereof, with the certificate of lunacy and order of transfer.

"Section 2218. Such insane convict shall be received into such hospital and detained there until lawfully discharged. The warden or officer before so transferring the convict, shall see that he is physically clean, and provided with a new suit of clothing, such as is furnished convicts upon their discharge from the penitentiary. At the time of transfer there shall be transmitted to the superintendent of the hospital, the original certificate of conviction.'

These sections require an action in the probate court for the transfer of convicts from the Ohio State Reformatory and the penitentiary to the Lima State Hospital.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the governor does not have the power to direct the state board of administration to transfer patients from other state institutions to the Lima State Hospital.

Your second question is as follows:

"(2) If patients are transferred to the Lima State Hospital, by the board of administration, from other institutions, and it should become desirable later to re-transfer these patients from Lima, say to the Ohio Penitentiary or to any other state institution, would the board of administration have power, once having transferred patients to the Lima State Hospital subsequently, to transfer them to some other state institution under its control?"

Section 2221 of the General Code provides, relative to the re-transfer of an insane convict whose reason has been restored, and is as follows:

"Section 2221. When an insane convict confined in the Lima State Hospital, whose term of sentence has not expired, has been restored to reason, and the superintendent of the hospital so certifies in writing, he shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which he came. The officer in charge shall receive such convict into the penitentiary or reformatory."

In regard to those patients who have been received from state hospitals, and whose reason has been restored, the only provision of law that I have been able to find is section 1998 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

"Section 1998. The superintendent may discharge any inmate, not under sentence for crime, who, in his judgment, is recovered, or who has not recovered, but whose condition has improved to such extent that his discharge will not be detrimental to the public welfare or injurious to him. Before ordering such discharge, the superintendent shall ascertain that some friend will properly care for him at his home."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that patients transferred to the Lima State Hospital, from the Ohio Penitentiary or Ohio State Reformatory, may be returned to the penitentiary or reformatory under the provisions of section 2221, supra, but that those patients who are transferred from state hospitals cannot be returned, but may be discharged under section 1998, supra.

Your third question is as follows:

"(3) Under what circumstances, if at all, is the governor of Ohio given authority to terminate the existence of the present board of building commissioners of the Lima State Hospital and require that institution to be turned over to the management and control of the Ohio board of administration?"

The erection of necessary buildings for the Lima State Hospital is entrusted to the "board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima State Hospital," and under the provisions of section 1989, G. C., the commission is authorized to appoint a superintendent to superintendend the work of construction "and open such building as are ready for occupancy during the progress of the work." The superintendent is given charge of the buildings when occupied, and of all patients kept therein, and, under the direction of the commissioners, is authorized to employ the necessary officers and employes.

Section 1991 of the General Code (103 O. L., 448), reads as follows:

"Section 1991. The commissioners may furnish and occupy such buildings as become ready for occupancy during the work of construction and until such time as the governor deems it to the interests of the hospital and the state to direct the Ohio board of administration to assume the management thereof. Upon the issuance of such order the terms of the commissioners shall terminate."

The commissioners are, therefore, authorized not only to have charge of the buildings under construction, but also to operate the buildings that become ready for occupancy during the work of construction, and until such time as the governor deems it to the interests of the hospital and the state, to turn the management over to the board of administration.

From a reading of the entire act, as originally enacted and as now found in the various sections of the General Code, I am of the opinion that it was the intent of the legislature that the commissioners should take charge of the entire construction of the buildings at the Lima State Hospital, and not only that, but that such buildings, as during the construction of the entire plant, were so far completed as to be fit for the reception of patients, they are authorized to operate; and further, that they have the right to operate the plant even after the entire work of construction is completed, until such time as the governor directs the board of administration to take charge of the same.

Whenever the institution is substantially completed, and the work of the contractors has been accepted, then and in that event, the governor may, if he deems it to be to the interests of the hospital and the state so to do, direct the Ohio board of administration to assume the management thereof. Upon the issuance of such order by you, the terms of the commissioners shall terminate.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF BARLOW RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, WASHINGTON COUNTY, FOR BOND ISSUE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"In Re: Bonds to the amount of $12,000.00, purchased by the industrial commission of Ohio, under resolution dated May 18, 1915, from the board of education of the Barlow rural school district, Washington county, Ohio."

On June 28, 1915, I received from Hon. Allen T. Williamson, prosecuting attorney of Washington county, the completed transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of the Barlow rural school district of Washington county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above bonds. I have examined the transcript, and I am of the opinion that said board of education is authorized by law to issue said bonds for the purpose and in the amount named; that the proceedings of the various officers of said district, relative thereto, have been regular and in conformity with the statutes; that the amount of said bonds does not exceed any limitations imposed by law; and that a sufficient tax levy can be made to pay interest upon and create a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds as they become due.

I am therefore of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in conformity with the bond and coupon form attached to said transcript, and executed by the proper officers, will constitute valid legal obligations of said rural school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONSTRUCTION OF WORDS "AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SCHOOL" USED IN SECTION 7973, G. C.—ONLY ONE SUCH SCHOOL IN A COUNTY IN A GIVEN YEAR—OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.

An "agricultural extension school" within the meaning of section 7973, G. C., applicable to the Ohio State University, means a school conducted as an activity of the college of agriculture and domestic science of said university in the manner therein specified.

When one such school, fulfilling all the requirements of said section, has been held in a given county in a given year, no other such school may be so held therein in that year; but the board of trustees of the Ohio State University has authority to provide free public lectures, and the giving of such free public lectures in any county in any year would not preclude the holding of an agricultural school in such county in that year.

The ultimate distinctions between public lectures and agricultural extension work are academic rather than legal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

Board of Trustees of Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 15th, Professor Clark S. Wheeler, supervisor of extension schools, college of agriculture, of your university, wrote a letter to this department requesting an opinion, and deeming it advisable to render an opinion in the matter I am doing so, addressing the same to you and sending a copy thereof to Professor Wheeler.

The letter of Professor Wheeler is in full as follows:

"Section 7973, Revised Statutes of Ohio, provides that the Ohio State University shall extend its teachings in agriculture and domestic science throughout the state. About three years ago the attorney general ruled that funds appropriated for this purpose might be used in holding a one week meeting at the Ohio State University in Columbus for the benefit of farmers and their wives, regularly resident and points distant from Columbus. These farmers and their wives not being in attendance at the Ohio State University, lectures and meetings during one week for their benefit were held to be an extension enterprise. I now have at hand a petition from farmers in the vicinity of Canal Winchester, Ohio, requesting that an agricultural extension school be held at that place during the coming winter. I write to inquire whether the holding of an extension school at Canal Winchester, Franklin County, in addition to farmers' week at Columbus, Franklin county, for the benefit of farmers throughout the state, would be construed as a violation of that part of section 7973 which reads, 'No such school shall exceed one week in length and not more than one be held in any one county during the year.' In support of the contention that the farmers' week meeting at the Ohio State University is not in fact an extension school in Franklin county and would therefore not constitute a second school in this county, I submit the information that farmers' week as held last year was attended by farmers from eighty-seven of the eighty-eight counties of this state. Should you desire further information before determining the point at issue, I should be pleased to submit any facts that I can."

The opinion referred to by Professor Wheeler was rendered by Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, the then attorney general, to the president of Ohio State University, on April 11, 1912, and is found in the annual report of the attorney general for that year, page 994.

The question then submitted was as follows:

"May the Ohio State University hold an agricultural extension school on the campus of the university for the convenience of the farmers and other interested persons of Franklin county and other parts of the state?"

This question was answered in the affirmative, with the qualification that no other such school should be held in Franklin county.

I concur in Mr. Hogan's opinion.

You observe that the president of the university in asking this question described the proposed school as an "agricultural extension school."

Professor Wheeler's letter seems to raise the question as to whether "farmers' week" at Ohio State University is an "agricultural extension school."

I call attention to the following provisions of the statutes relative to the Ohio State University.

Section 7954, General Code:

"* * * The board (of trustees of Ohio State University) may provide for courses of lectures, either at the seat of the university or elsewhere in the state, which shall be free to all."

There is no limitation upon the exercise of this authority. Free lectures may be given at the seat of the university or anywhere in the state, without regard to the number which may be given in any county in the state in any one year.

Agricultural extension by county schools is provided for in section 7973 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "The college of agriculture and domestic science of the university shall arrange for the extension of its teachings throughout the state, and hold schools in which instructions shall be given in soil fertility, stock raising, crop production, dairying, horticulture, domestic science and kindred subjects. No such school shall exceed one week in length, and not more than one be held in any county during a year."

It is obvious that insofar as agricultural extension consists of "courses of lectures, * * * free to all," the particular provisions of the subsequently enacted section 7973 of the General Code control to the exclusion of the general and unrestricted provisions of the older section 7954 of the General Code. That is to say, if agricultural extension teachings consist of public lectures free to all, then as to such lectures there may be but one course not exceeding one week in length in any county in the state in any one year.

If, then, "farmers' week" at Ohio State University is agricultural extension, it is obvious that the former opinion, with which I agree, must apply; but if the work is not agricultural extension, then there is sufficient authority under section 7954, supra, to provide for it, if it consists of a course of lectures at the seat of the university, free to all.

I am not prepared to state that section 7973 of the General Code requires that extension teachings shall be something other than a course of lectures free to all.

The question as to what constitutes extension work is more properly academic than legal. If, however, in the practical discharge of the authority granted in section 7973, G. C., the college of agriculture has exacted a small registration fee of attendants at the extension schools, or has limited the attendance thereat to any class of persons, such as farmers and their wives, and if this is the character of "farmers' week" to which you refer, then I would be of the opinion that section 7954 of the General Code would not apply, and that the only authority of the college to conduct "farmers' week" would be referable to section 7973.

Conversely, if the proposed "school" at Canal Winchester is to consist of a course of lectures free to all, and is of a different character from the extension work which is authorized to be given under section 7973, G. C., it may be conducted regardless of the character of "farmers' week."

One other distinction must be observed: The free lectures authorized by section 7954, G. C., are to be provided for by the board of trustees of the university, while the agricultural extension schools provided for by section 7973, G. C., are to be conducted by the college of agriculture. I am clearly of the opinion that the college of agriculture, as such, is not authorized to give free public lectures, and that the board of trustees, as such, is not directly authorized to provide for agricultural extension schools.

If "farmers' week" at the university is an activity of the college of agriculture then presumably it consists of extension work, and the fact that it has been held in a given year would preclude another school at another place in Franklin county in the same year. If, however, "farmers' week" is an activity of the board of trustees, as such, I am clearly of the opinion that it does not constitute extension work, and that a separate extension school may lawfully be held in Franklin county.

I note Professor Wheeler's offer to submit any additional facts. If the alternative answers which have been given in this opinion are not sufficient to apply the principles herein stated so as to arrive at a definite answer to the question which confronts Professor Wheeler, I shall be glad to have such additional facts as may be suggested by the preceding discussion.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MIAMI UNIVERSITY—CONTRACTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF BOILER ROOM EXTENSION TO POWER HOUSE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION OF BOILERS APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

The Board of Trustees of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of June 28, 1915, submitting for my approval two contracts, one entered into with Wespiser & Taylor of Oxford, Ohio, for the construction and completion of the boiler room extension to the power house building of Miami University, and the other entered into with Woollen & Callon of Indianapolis, Indiana, for the construction and completion of an H. R. T. boiler with setting and smoke connection; feed water heater and metering tube, boiler feed pumps and vacuum heating pumps for the power plant of Miami university.

In regard to the second contract I find that on certain items thereof the said Woollen & Callon were not the lowest bidders, but that under date of June 26, 1915, under authority granted by section 2319, G. C., the governor of Ohio, the auditor of state and the secretary of state have consented in writing to the acceptance of the bid of Woollen & Callon as to those items upon which they were not the low bidders.

I have carefully examined the two contracts mentioned and the contract bonds and find the same to be in compliance with law and have approved the same.

I have filed the two original contracts and bonds attached thereto with the auditor of state and herewith hand you duplicate copies thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONFESSION OF GUILT—OPEN COURT—CRIME—SECOND DEGREE MURDER—COURT—SENTENCE GENERALLY TO PENITENTIARY —NO DEFINITE TERM.

Upon confession of guilt in open court and fixing of the degree of the crime as murder in the second degree, the court should sentence generally to the Ohio Penitentiary and not for a definite term.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

HON. JOHN M. MARKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your telegraphic request for opinion, reading as follows:

> "Defendant pleads guilty to murder in the second degree, killing occurred June twelfth this year, shall sentence be for life or indeterminate; please answer immediately."

which was received last evening, I wired you as follows:

> "After provisions of section thirteen thousand six hundred and ninety-two have been observed, court should sentence generally, that is, indeterminately; but sentence for definite term not void; see one hundred and three. Ohio Laws, page twenty-nine."

Confirming the above telegraphic opinion, I call your attention to section 13692 of the General Code, which provides in part as follows:

> "* * * If the offense charged is murder, and the accused is convicted by confession in open court, the court shall examine the witnesses, determine the degree of the crime, and pronounce sentence accordingly."

You will find that this feature of this section has been passed upon in the case of Craig v. State, 49 O. S., 415.

Section 2166 of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., page 29, provides as follows:

> "Courts imposing sentences to the Ohio penitentiary for felonies, except treason, and murder in the first degree, shall make them general and not fixed or limited in their duration. All terms of imprisonment of persons in the Ohio penitentiary may be terminated by the Ohio board of administration as authorized by this chapter, but no such terms shall exceed the maximum term provided by law for the felony of which the prisoner was convicted. If a prisoner is sentenced for two or more separate felonies, his term of imprisonment may equal, but shall not exceed, the aggregate of the maximum terms of all the felonies for which he was sentenced and, for the purposes of this chapter, he shall be held to be serving one continuous term of imprisonment. If through oversight or otherwise, a sentence to the Ohio penitentiary should be for a definite term, it shall not thereby become void, but the person so sentenced shall be subject to the liabilities of this chapter, and receive the benefits thereof, as if he had been sentenced in the manner required by this section."

Therefore, after the plea of guilty has been made by the defendant and the court, after examination of sufficient witnesses to convince him that the degree of the crime is properly murder in the second degree, the court should proceed to sentence the defendant generally and not for a definite term to the Ohio penitentiary. However, if through oversight or otherwise the defendant has been sentenced for life, such sentence would not be void but the person so sentenced would be held as if sentenced for an indefinite term.

I call your further attention to the fact that after the passage and approval of the indeterminate sentence law the legislature amended section 2169 of the General Code (103 O. L., 474), so as to read as follows:

> "The Ohio board of administration shall establish rules and regulations by which a prisoner under sentence other than for treason, or murder in the first or second degree, having served the minimum term provided by law for the crime of which he was convicted and who had not previously been convicted of felony or served a term in a penal institution, or prisoner under sentence for murder in the second degree having served under such sentence ten full years, may be allowed to go upon parole outside of the building and enclosure of the penitentiary. Full power to enforce such rules and regulations is hereby conferred upon the board, but the concurrence of every member shall be necessary for the parole of a prisoner. The board may designate geographical limits, within and without the state, to which a paroled prisoner may be confined, or may at any time enlarge or reduce such limits, by unanimous vote."

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—BIDDERS NOT REQUIRED TO SEPARATELY STATE THEIR BIDS FOR LABOR AND MATERIAL—SECTION 7047, G. C., CONSTRUED.

While in the exercise of a sound discretion the township trustees may require bidders to separately state their bids for labor and materials when proceeding under section 7047, G. C., provided such requirement be inserted in the advertisement and brought to the attention of all prospective bidders, yet in the absence of such a requirement by the trustees properly brought to the attention of prospective bidders, bidders are not required by section 7047, G. C., to separately state their bids for the labor to be performed and the material to be furnished.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of June 16, 1915, in which you inquire as to whether, in bidding on a contract for a road improvement let by the trustees of a township under the provisions of section 7047, G. C., the bidder must separately state his bid for the labor to be performed and the material to be furnished.

Section 7047, G. C., to which you refer, reads as follows:

> "The contracts for furnishing the materials and performing the labor in and about such improvement, shall be made by such sections and in like manner as provided by law for other township improvements."

This section is a part of the scheme of road improvement provided by sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, of the General Code, which sections provide for the creation of road districts, a district to consist of a township, or that part of a township outside of a municipal corporation situated therein, or an election precinct or part thereof. These sections contain no provision as to the form of bids, and in view of the provision of section 7047, G. C., that the contracts shall be made in like manner as provided by law for other township improvements, it becomes necessary to examine the statutes relating to other schemes of township improvement, for the purpose of ascertaining their provisions as to the separate stating of bids for labor and material. A scheme of road improvement by township trustees other than that now under consideration is provided by sections 6976 to 7018, inclusive, of the General Code. As to this scheme of improvement, it is specifically provided by section 6990, G. C., that bidders shall separately state their bids for each class of work, in such manner as the trustees demand, and bid separately for the material to be furnished. Another scheme of road improvement by township trustees is provided by sections 7019 to 7032, inclusive of the General Code. As to this scheme of improvement it is provided in section 7025, G. C., that the work of the construction and the furnishing of the material therefor, shall be publicly let, excepting such work as may be done by the road superintendent of the road district, as otherwise provided, and that the contract for the material to be used in the construction of the road improvement, and the contracts for hauling material upon the roads, shall be let separately. There is no requirement, however, under this scheme of improvement, that separate contracts shall be let for the material and for the labor of construction, and no requirement that bidders shall bid separately for the material and for the labor of construction.

The scheme of improvement by road districts, as established by sections 7095 to 7136, inclusive, of the General Code, may properly be considered in this connection, for while the improvement under these sections is not technically a township improvement, yet the district consists of not less than two nor more than four townships, and the road commissioners are nominated by the township trustees. As to this scheme of improvement, section 7116, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "When the road commissioners by resolution have determined to improve a designated road or part thereof, the work of its construction, including all labor and the hauling and spreading of materials, shall be by them publicly let to the lowest responsible bidder. The furnishing of the material shall also be by them publicly let at the same time, if possible, to the lowest responsible bidder."

While the above language seems to require a separate letting as to labor and material, yet it could not be construed as authorizing a single contract and requiring the bidders to separately state their bids as to labor and material. Section 7117, G. C., requires bidders to separately state their bids for each class of work in such manner and upon such blank forms as the road commissioners require. There is no requirement in this section that bidders shall separately state their bids for labor and materials, and this fact lends force to the argument that as to this particular scheme of road improvement the legislature intended that there should be separate contracts for labor and materials.

Section 3274, G. C., provides that when money is received into the township treasury for road purposes, the trustees shall cause such money to be appropriated to building bridges or repairing public roads within the township. After public notice they shall let by contract to the lowest bidder, such part or parts of any road as they deem expedient, equal to the amount of money to be appropriated, if in their opinion such bidder is competent to perform the work. When such labor is performed in accordance with the contract or conditions of the letting, the trustees shall draw an order in favor of the person who has performed such labor for the amount due therefor. This section seems to relate only to labor and could not be taken as authority for the proposition that where a contract for both labor and materials is authorized, the bidders must bid separately as to the two items.

The above references to the various provisions of the General Code as to township improvements are sufficient to show that the statutes are far from being in harmony upon the proposition of whether bidders must state separately their bids for labor and materials when bidding for the construction of a township improvement, and that it is impossible to construct any general rule applicable in all cases. Section 7047, G. C., about which you inquire, does not attempt to establish any rule as to the separation of bids for labor and materials, and the use of the word "contracts," instead of "contract" was rendered necessary by the fact that the work is to be let in sections. It is my opinion that the provision that the contracts shall be made in like manner as provided by law for other township improvements was mainly intended to require advertisement and the letting of the contracts on competitive bids, and that while in the exercise of a sound discretion the township trustees might require bidders to separately state their bids, provided such requirement be inserted in the advertisement and thus brought to the attention of all prospective bidders, yet in the absence of such a requirement by the trustees properly brought to the attention of prospective bidders, the bidders are not required by section 7047, G. C., to separately state their bids for the labor to be performed and the material to be furnished.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—INMATES OF PENAL AND CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTIONS MAY BE USED IN CONSTRUCTION WORK AT ANY STATE INSTITUTION—BUILDING MATERIALS MANUFACTURED AT ANY STATE INSTITUTION MAY ALSO BE USED—COST OF SUCH LABOR AND MATERIALS NOT COUNTED AS PART OF TOTAL COST.

The labor of inmates of penal and correctional institutions under the management of the Ohio board of administration may be used in construction work at any state institution under the management of said board. Similarly, building materials manufactured at any state institution may be used in such construction work. The cost of state labor and materials so used is not to be counted as part of the total cost of an improvement within the meaning of section 2314, G. C., and succeeding sections, constituting the building regulations, applicable generally, and when advertising for bids thereunder the board of administration should exclude from the work to be let the performance of such labor as is to be performed by such inmates and the furnishing of such materials as are produced at any such institution. If the total cost of the improvement, less these items, exceeds the sum named in section 2314, G. C., however, the remaining branches of the work should be dealt with as provided in that and succeeding sections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 22d, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The appropriation act (104 O. L., 64, 69) for 1914, in its appropriation for the uses of the state board of administration for the repair, improvement and construction of buildings, contained a provision as follows:
> " 'Insofar as the labor of inmates of state institutions is employed, expenditures for repairs and improvements to be exempt from section 2314 of the General Code of Ohio.'
> "In response to a request from this department, the attorney general rendered an opinion respecting the operation of this language, on July 21, 1914.
> "We note that in the current appropriation acts this language is omitted.
> "The opinion just referred to, however, seems to be based partly upon the language of the appropriation act and partly upon the provisions of section 2230, G. C. So that, although this specific language is omitted from the current appropriation acts, we are in doubt as to the extent to which sections 2314, 2315 and following sections apply to expenditures of the state board of administration.
> "Will you kindly advise us in this respect?"

I have before me the opinion of Mr. Hogan to the board of administration, referred to by you. The following is an abstract of his reasoning:

The language of the 1914 appropriation act (104 O. L., 64, 69), "insofar as the labor of inmates of state institutions is employed, expenditures for repairs and improvements to be exempt from section 2314 of the General Code of Ohio," can mean but one of two things, viz.:

> "(1.) The labor of inmates of state institutions may be employed by the board of administration in constructing improvements, and the provisions of section 2314 of the General Code shall not require that the labor which may be performed by such inmates shall be contracted for.

"(2.) In cases in which the labor of inmates of state institutions is employed section 2314 of the General Code shall not apply at all, and the board of administration may construct such improvements without preparing plans, specifications, estimates and bills of material."

It will be necessary, then, to choose between these two interpretations. The choice falls upon the second of them, for the reason that sections 2228 and 2230 of the General Code authorize and require the board of administration, as the successor of the board of managers of the penitentiary and the Ohio State Reformatory, to employ convicts and inmates in construction and repair work in and about any state institution, and expressly forbid the state authorities from making any contract by which the labor or time of such prisoners or inmates shall be "let, farmed out, given or sold to any person, firm, association or corporation."

So, as to the labor of convicts in the penitentiary and the Ohio State Reformatory the subsequently enacted provisions of sections 2228 and 2230, General Code, constitute an exception to section 2314 and succeeding sections, known as the "Building Regulations." That is to say, any construction or repair work in and about any state institution, on which convicts of the reformatory or the penitentiary may be employed, must be carried on by their labor, and this of itself constitutes, so to speak, an exemption or withdrawal from the operation of section 2314 requiring labor on state institution improvement work to be let by contract.

It being presumed that the legislature in passing the appropriation act of 1914 did not intend a vain thing, the interpretation which will give the language some substantial effect is to be preferred to one which will produce an effect little, if any, different from the state of the law in the absence of the enactment of such language.

It is not necessary at this time to review Mr. Hogan's opinion and to consider its correctness in its entirety. One statement made therein is possibly too broad. It is to the effect that without the language found in 104 O. L., 69, expenditures in the repair and improvement of state institutions "are necessarily exempt from the operation of section 2314, to the extent of labor performed thereon by inmates of state institutions," so that "if the language in question is to be so construed, it becomes wholly meaningless, in view of prior provisions of section 2230, authorizing such labor."

It would have been more accurate, I think, to say that to the extent of labor performed in the repair and improvement of state institutions by prisoners serving sentences in the penitentiary and reformatory, expenditures in the repair and improvement of state institutions are necessarily exempt from the operation of section 2314, because it might be possible and lawful to employ the labor of inmates of such institutions as that for the feeble minded, those for the insane, etc., on such work of construction and improvement, and as to such labor section 2230 does not apply.

It is at least clear that section 2230 of the General Code does constitute a partial exception to the general provisions of section 2314, et seq., of the General Code. In the absence of any other exemption as a condition of the expenditure of a main appropriation, the former section then must be consulted in order to determine the application of the latter section.

I quote sections 2228 to 2230, inclusive, of the General Code:

"Section 2228. The board of managers of the Ohio Penitentiary, the board of managers of the Ohio State Reformatory, or other authority, shall make no contract by which the labor or time of a prisoner in the penitentiary or reformatory, or the product or profit of his work, shall be let, farmed out, given or sold to any person, firm, association or corporation. Convicts in such institution may work for, and the products of their labor may be disposed of, to the state or a political division thereof, or for or to a public institution owned or managed and under the control of the state or a political division thereof, for the purposes and according to the provisions of this chapter.

"Section 2229. The board of managers of the penitentiary and the board of managers of the reformatory, so far as practicable, shall cause all prisoners serving sentences in such institutions, physically capable, to be employed at hard labor for not to exceed nine hours of each day other than Sundays and public holidays.

"Section 2230. Such labor shall be for the purpose of the manufacture and production of supplies for such institutions, the state or political divisions thereof; for a public institution owned, managed and controlled by the state or a political division thereof; for the preparation and manufacture of building material for the construction or repair of a state institution, or in the work of such construction or repair; for the purpose of industrial training and instruction, or partly for one and partly for the other of such purposes; in the manufacture and production of crushed stone, brick, tile, and culvert pipe, suitable for draining wagon roads of the state, or in the preparation of road building and ballasting material."

It will be observed that these sections relate solely to the labor of prisoners in the penitentiary or reformatory.

With respect to labor of inmates of other institutions, the following provisions of the chapter relative to the powers and duties of the board of administration are quoted:

"Section 1845. The board may assign among the correctional and penal institutions the industries to be carried on therein, having due regard to the location and convenience thereof with respect to other institutions to be supplied, to the machinery therein and the number and character of inmates.

"Section 1846. The board shall fix the prices at which all labor performed and all articles manufactured in said institutions shall be furnished to the state or the political divisions and public institutions thereof, as is or may be provided by law, which shall be uniform to all and not higher than the usual market prices for like labor and articles.

"Section 1848. * * * It may direct the purchase of any materials, supplies or other articles for any institution subject to its management from any other such institution at the reasonable market value thereof, to be fixed by the board, and payments therefor shall be made as between institutions in the manner provided by law for payment for supplies. * * *

"Section 1858. The board may detail temporarily from a correctional or penal institution, with the consent of the managing officer thereof, any inmates under its control, to perform specified labor."

Summarizing the effect of the sections above quoted, it may be observed that the board of administration is expressly authorized to employ the labor of prisoners in the penitentiary and the reformatory upon construction work at any state institution. It is also authorized to determine what industries shall be carried on at the several correctional and penal institutions by the inmates thereof, and to fix prices therefor. It is also authorized to direct the purchase of materials, supplies or other articles, for any institution subject to its management from any correctional or penal institution and provide for payment as between institutions. It is also authorized to detail temporarily from any correctional or penal institution, with the consent of the managing officer thereof, any inmates under its control.

Section 1857 of the General Code (not above qouted), authorizes it to employ an architect for the preparation of the plans, specifications, estimates and details for buildings; also the employment of engineers, superintendents and supervisors.

Section 1869 of the General Code (not above quoted), authorizes each managing officer to develop such occupations as shall best promote the welfare of the inmates of his institution.

There is, then, certainly specific authority to employ prisoners in the penitentiary and the reformatory in the performance of labor on construction work. There is also specific authority for the employment of the inmates of any correctional or penal institution, subject to the control and management of the board of administration, in the production of any material, including building material.

I think there is sufficient authority for the detail of inmates from any penal or correctional institution (which would add to the penitentiary and reformatory the Boys' Industrial School and the Girls' Industrial Home) to perform any kind of labor. There is certainly no authority for employing the labor of any inmates at any state institution on contracts, by farming the same out to contractors, nor is there any authority to sell building materials to contractors.

All these statutes are of later enactment than section 2314 of the General Code, and insofar as they are in conflict with the latter, must be held to govern.

In my opinion, the joint effect of all the sections, including section 2314 of the General Code, in the absence of any express provision in an appropriation bill like that found in the 1914 bill, is as follows:

> "Any building material which may be produced at any state institution under the control and management of the Ohio board of administration may be excepted from the contract required to be entered into under section 2314, G. C., and furnished directly by one institution to the other.
> "Any labor of convicts, or otherwise, which the state board of administration may lawfully employ upon construction work is likewise to be eliminated from the contract which is required to be entered into by section 2314, G. C.
>
> "In case the labor to be so furnished by the board of administration embraces that on all branches of the work, then the only contract to be let should be for the materials, and not for the doing of the work, unless some of the materials are to be likewise purchased from another institution.
> "In case the labor is to be furnished on certain branches of the work only, the general contract to be let should exclude these branches of the work, and the branches upon which the labor of inmates is to be employed should be provided for by separate contracts for the purchase of materials.
> "In cases in which materials are to be furnished by one institution to another for construction work, the contract should be for the performance of the labor only, except to the extent, as already pointed out, to which the labor of inmates may be employed.
> "No improvements at the penitentiary are to be governed at all by section 2314, G. C., such improvements being expressly excepted by that section itself from its remaining terms.
> "The aggregate cost of an improvement within the meaning of section 2314, G. C., in the event of the use of materials or labor furnished by a state institution, is the estimated cost of the labor and materials not so furnished.

From the foregoing it will be observed that the result arrived at under the provisions of the permanent statutes, without an express exemption like that embraced in 104 O. L., 64, 69, is not the same as that produced by such an express exemption.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CORPORATION MAY NOT INCREASE ITS AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK UNTIL ORIGINAL CAPITAL STOCK IS FULLY SUBSCRIBED AND AN INSTALLMENT OF TEN PER CENT. PAID ON EACH SUBSCRIPTION—COMMON STOCK.

A corporation for profit may not increase its authorized capital stock under section 8698, G. C., so as to authorize the issuance of additional common stock until the original capital stock of the corporation is fully subscribed, and an installment of ten per cent. has been paid on each subscription.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me a letter addressed to you by Messrs. Harter & Harter, attorneys at law, Canton, Ohio, accompanied by proposed certificate of increase of capital stock, both common and preferred, of The Gordon Rubber Company, together with a check of that company in the sum of $300.00, and an uncancelled ten cent revenue stamp, and have verbally requested my opinion upon the questions presented thereby.

The certificate recites that at the time a certain meeting of the stockholders of the company was held, the preferred capital stock of the company had all been subscribed and paid for, and more than fifty per cent. of the common stock thereof had been subscribed and paid for; that at said meeting, by a vote of the holders of a majority of the stock of the company, and the written assent of three-fourths in number of the stockholders, representing more than three-fourths of the capital stock of the company, it was resolved, that the capital stock "be increased from $300,000.00, its present capital stock, $200,000.00 of which is common stock, and $100,000.00 of which is preferred stock, to $600,000.00 of capital stock, $300,000.00 of which shall be common stock, and $300,000.00 of which shall be preferred stock, divided into 6,000 shares of $100.00 each, so that the capital stock of the company shall then be $600,000.00, $300,000.00 of which shall be preferred stock, and $300,000.00 of which shall be common stock."

The resolution further provides for certain specific designations of preferences in voting powers with respect to the preferred stock.

The question presented, and which is discussed in the letter of counsel, is as to whether or not a corporation may increase its authorized common or preferred capital stock, or either, before the original capital stock of either class is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share has been paid thereon.

The question invites consideration of the following provisions of the General Code:

> "Section 8698. After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation for profit, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which it is divided, prior to organization, by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers. After organization the increase may be made by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock, at a meeting called by a majority of its directors, at least thirty days' notice of the time, place and object of which has been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, and by letter addressed to each stockholder whose place of residence is known. Or, the stock may be increased at a meeting of the stockholders at which all are present in person, or by proxy, and waive in writing such notice by publication and letter, and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount thereof to which they agree. A certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state.

"Section 8699. Upon the assent in writing, of three-fourths in number of the stockholders of a corporation, representing at least three-fourths of its capital stock, to increase the capital stock, it may issue and dispose of preferred stock in the manner by law provided therefor. Upon such increase of stock, a certificate shall be filed with the secretary of state, as provided in the next preceding section."

It is admitted by counsel, that the supreme court in Peter v. Union Manufacturing Company, et al., 56 O. S., 181, held, that under the statute corresponding to section 8698 of the General Code, as it then existed, the original capital stock of a corporation for profit must be fully paid up before the authorized capital stock may be increased; but it is urged that the section has been amended since this decision was rendered, in such a way as to destroy the force of that decision as a precedent, and further justify the interpretation now contended for, such interpretation being that the second sentence of this section as it now stands is not qualified by the restrictions found in the first sentence thereof, which are to be interpreted as applying only to an increase of capital stock made prior to organization, so that as to an increase made after organization it is not necessary that the original stock be subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. paid on each share.

The transaction involved in Peter v. Union Manufacturing Company, supra, took place in 1889, and was governed by the provisions of section 3262 of the Revised Statutes, as it then stood, viz.: as amended in 83 O. L., 134. The section then read as follows:

"Section 3262. A corporation for profit, after its original capital stock is fully paid up, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which its capital stock is divided, by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock, at a meeting called by a majority of its directors, at least thirty days' notice of the time, place and object of which has been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, and by letter addressed to each stockholder whose place of residence is known; or such increase may be made at any meeting of the stockholders at which all the holders of such stock are present in person or by proxy, and waive in writing such notice by publication and by letter; and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount of increase to which they agree; and a certificate of such action of the corporation shall be filed with the secretary of state."

Subsequently the section was amended so as to read as follows: (90 O. L. .141.)

"Section 3262. A corporation for profit, after its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which its capital stock is divided, by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers, if done prior to organization, and after organization then by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock, at a meeting called by a majority of its directors, at least thirty days' notice of the time, place and object of which has been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, and by letter addressed to each stockholder whose place of residence is known; > or such increase may be made at any meeting of the stockholders at which all the holders of such stock are present in person, or by proxy, and waive in writing such notice by publication and by letter and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount of increase to which they agree; and a certificate of such action of the corporation shall be filed with the secretary of state."

It must be conceded that the section is liberalized by this amendment, but not to the extent claimed by counsel for The Gordon Rubber Company. There were two changes made by the amendment of 1893:

In the first place, a procedure was provided whereby an increase of stock might be effected prior to organization, which could not be done under the section in its previous form.

In the second place, the phrase "after its original capital stock is fully paid up" was stricken out and the phrase "after its original capital stock is fully subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon" was substituted therefor.

The phraseology of amended section 3262 of the Revised Statutes, so far as the question now under discussion is involved, is plain and unambiguous. Eliminating superfluous language which relates to the other matters to which the amendments applied, it reads as follows:

> "A corporation for profit, after its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, * * * may increase its capital stock * * * by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers, if done prior to organization, and after organization then by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock * * *; or such increase may be made at any meeting of the stockholders at which all the holders of such stock * * * agree in writing to such increase * * *."

There was but a single sentence in section 3262, R. S., and there is no doubt whatever that the phrase "after its capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent on each share of stock has been paid thereon" is a condition precedent to the exercise of any power therein granted to a corporation for profit, whether exercised prior to organization or after organization. In other words, the section makes it plain that the only difference between a proceeding prior to organization and that after organization is one of method.

The only respect, then, in which the section is liberalized in its application to the condition upon which an increase might be made, as compared with its provisions as they stood when the facts in Peter v. Union Manufacturing Company, supra, arose is that instead of the requirement after amendment being that the original stock must be fully paid for, it is merely that it must be fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. paid on each subscription.

The mere fact that the statute was then made less drastic than it had been theretofore does not justify the conclusion that it is any more liberal in its effect than its terms, as amended, would import.

The amendment in 90 O. L., 141, was the last change made by the legislature in the language of this section as such. In codifying this statute, it was divided into four sentences in place of one, but upon the most familiar principles of statutory interpretation this change in punctuation, with such changes in phraseology as might be necessary in order to divide the section into separate sentences, is presumed not to have effected any change in the substance of the law. Revision is not amendment, unless the terms of the revised statute clearly import a meaning different from that of the prior statute.

In this instance the terms of present section 8698, G. C., do not clearly show that a substantial change was intended. On the contrary, the most natural interpretation of section 8698 of the General Code, arrived at without recourse to the pre-existing law, is that which makes the conditions of the first sentence apply to the exercise of the power granted in the second and third sentences. The second sentence, for example, provides that "after organization the increase may be made" (in a certain manner). The phrase "the increase" obviously means the increase referred to in the preceding sentence. Such increase may be made only "after its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon," when made by a corporation for profit.

But even if the statute in its present form should be regarded as ambiguous, the legislative history thereof, as I have outlined it, makes the meaning very clear. For example, it is argued in the letter of counsel that public policy does not require any restriction upon the increase of capital stock after organization; yet this is exactly what was required in the very plainest of terms by section 3262, R. S., as amended in 83 O. L., 134, that section not even authorizing an increase prior to organization, and conditioning increases made after organization upon the payment in full of the original capital stock.

I have given very careful consideration to the arguments in the letter of Messrs. Harter & Harter, and find that it is substantially conceded therein that as section 3262, R. S., stood immediately prior to codification, i. e., as amended 90 O. L., 141, the requirement that the entire original capital stock be subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. paid thereon was a condition precedent to the increase of capital stock after organization. So that in the last analysis the argument is that a change in the statute has been effected by the verbal changes made in process of codification. This view, for the reasons stated, can not be sustained.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that no increase of capital stock may be made under section 8698 of the General Code, unless the original capital stock of the corporation is fully subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon.

With respect to increase of capital stock under section 8699 of the General Code, by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock, the question is somewhat different.

I find that my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, advised the then secretary of state, Hon. Charles H. Graves, on March 16, 1914, that an increase of capital stock by the issuance or sale of preferred stock is not governed by the conditions stipulated in section 8698 of the General Code. So that capital stock already authorized need not be fully subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. need not be paid thereon prior to an increase of preferred stock only under section 8699 of the General Code. Mr. Hogan, in his opinion, however, stated very clearly his view that the conditions in the first sentence of section 8698, G. C., governed all proceedings under that section.

The certificate tendered to you by The Gordon Rubber Company constitutes an attempt to exercise powers both under section 8698 and section 8699 of the General Code. Not being in compliance with section 8698, G. C., and the resolution not being severable into two parts the whole certificate must be rejected, and I accordingly advise that you do not file or record the same.

I return herewith the certificate of increase of capital stock, together with check of The Gordon Rubber Company, in the sum of $300.00, and uncancelled ten cent revenue stamp.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO UNIVERSITY—FEES COLLECTED FOR MATERIAL USED—UNEXPENDED BALANCE TO BE RETURNED PRO RATA TO STUDENTS PAYING SAME—UNIVERSITY CAN RETAIN WEEKLY PAYMENTS ENOUGH TO CARE FOR ANTICIPATED REFUNDS.

Of the fees collected by Ohio University for material used, the balance unexpended to be returned pro rata to the students paying same, the university is authorized to retain from weekly payments a sum sufficient to care for anticipated refunds, making itemized statement of disposition of the same as provided in section 24 as amended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. ALSTON ELLIS, President Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 19, 1915, you wrote me as follows:

"Sometime ago, Hon. E. M. Fullington gave me a copy of your decision as to the manner in which the fees taken from students occupying the college dormitories should be collected and handled. That decision is perfectly clear and I am in no doubt whatever as to the action necessary to be taken regarding it. However, I need information and advice on the matters herewith presented:

"1. In our department of home economics, laboratory supplies of raw material and things needed for practical illustration of the different phases of work for which the department was established are a necessity. The various supplies so needed are used up by the students in the different lessons and exercises scheduled in the department. Each student is charged a fee, not for the purpose of revenue, but to cover, in part, the actual cost of the materials used. If all collections above the actual cost, if such exist at the close of a definite period, term, or semester, are pro rated among the students, does that form of collection and use conflict with the provisions of the 'Mooney law,' so-called, requiring certain fees and collections to be turned into the state treasury weekly?

"2. Exactly the same conditions exist in our department of manual training, where no practical work can be done without material—not equipment—such as lumber, etc. Fees are charged for the same purpose as stated in number one. Their use, when collected, is as stated in reference to fees collected in the department of home economics. What shall be done with these fees?

"3. Similar conditions exist in the department of paidology and psychology, where the experimental work calls for a large amount of special material for the use of students. What shall be done with the fees collected to buy this illustrative material? No fees so collected are for institutional support, but solely for securing what is needed by the students in the prosecution of their work—the surplus, if any, to be pro rated among those paying the fees.

"4. Of a like kind with the foregoing, are the fees charged and collected from students receiving classroom and laboratory instruction in the classes connected with the department of public school drawing and handwork. Such students use up a quantity of rather expensive material. The fees charged meet the expenses incurred in fair measure but not with any considerable excess of receipts over expenditures. No revenue is sought here. The excess of receipts is to be prorated among the students receiving instruction.

"5. In general, are all fees collected in the manner, and for the purpose, herein indicated, to be turned into the state treasury under the terms of the 'Mooney bill' or may they be used in the purchase of supplies such as must be used by the students in their scheduled work with pro rata distribution among them of all excess of such fees beyond the actual cost of the material used up by them in their classroom and laboratory work?

"I regret to ask your time to a consideration of these questions, but I need to be guided in the handling of these fees by better and more authoritative legal advice than I can get elsewhere. I want to observe strictly all legal requirements in the matters referred to. The authorities of the Ohio University and the State Normal College are under no legal obligation to charge fees of any kind, but they have done so in the past and will continue to do so until the state, by legislation, fixes a schedule of charges to be followed in the state-supported institutions of learning. No part of the fees herein referred to will be remitted even though, if collected, they must be turned into the state treasury. I inclose a complete schedule of all fees charged at Ohio University save room rent fees charged students who find quarters in the two dormitories connected with the university. I have a clear understanding of the manner in which such dormitory fees must be handled, but I need, and solicit, your advice as to the manner in which the fees collected in the department of home economics, manual training, experimental psychology, drawing and hand-work, and possibly some others, shall be handled."

Accompanying your letter was a memorandum of the fees charged at the Ohio University, among which are the fees referred to in your letter.

Under date of June 22nd I requested you to give me further information in the matter, and under date of June 23rd you wrote me as follows:

"It is altogether likely that I did not make my statements as clear as I intended in the communication I recently sent to your office.

"What I meant in reference to the fees heretofore collected is that all of them without exception found their way directly into the state treasury. No fees were returned to the students, even though such fees might be in excess of the actual cost of the material used by such students. Heretofore all such fees have been held to the credit of the university; now, under recent legislation, all such fees sent into the state treasury form a part of the general revenue fund of the state.

"It seems to me that all the fees referred to in my communication are of a like nature with the fees charged students who occupy quarters in our dormitories. There may be a distinction, but it seems to me to be a distinction without much of a difference. What I wanted to know is whether it is permissible, under the law, for us to charge students fees for material actually used by them in laboratory work such as that described in my former letter. We want no revenue from this source, and my thought was, and is, to keep an exact account of the cost of material absolutely used by students, and at the close of a given period to pro rate any excess of collections over the actual cost of material used among the students in that particular branch of our work. You understand, I am sure, that we are under no legal obligation to charge any fee whatever; but it seems to me unreasonable for the state to supply students with material used up by them just the same as it would be unreasonable to supply them with books and food while they are in college.

"Again, my meaning was that we should continue to collect these fees just as we have been doing, although it was decided that, if collected, they could be sent to the state treasury and made a part of the general revenue of the state. What I am trying to do is to get information that will enable me to act strictly within the meaning and letter of the law. I am in doubt about the matter, and that is why I ask your office for authoritative help. Whatever your decision may be, it will be carried out to the letter. We shall continue to charge the fees and shall make just such disposition of them when collected as, through your courtesy in giving me a decision, may be pointed out."

The opinion to which you refer in your letter was one rendered to the budget commission under date of January 23, 1915, as to whether or not section 24 as amended in 104 O. L., 178, makes it obligatory upon colleges receiving state aid to turn in such extra funds as deposits by students for supplies used and breakage of apparatus with other funds. In said opinion I held:

"I am of the opinion that deposits by students for supplies used and breakage of apparatus, from which the student is entitled to a refund, if he does not consume the requisite amount of supplies or destroy a sufficient quantity of apparatus, are to be regarded as 'tuitions and fees,' to the conducting of which 'refunds' are 'incident,' within the meaning of the second half of the section. (Section 24 as amended.)

"As to moneys of this character, there should be deducted from the weekly payments a sufficient amount to enable the officers to care for the anticipated refunds, and at the end of the term an itemized statement of the disposition of all such funds is to be filed with the auditor of state."

This ruling clearly covers the matters contained in your letter.

I therefore hold that your university is authorized to retain, out of the fees in question, from the weekly payments a sum sufficient to enable the officers to care for the anticipated refunds, of course making the itemized statement of the disposition of all such funds at the end of each term as provided by said section 24 as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GOVERNOR'S VETO—AUDITOR OF STATE IS ADVISED TO FOLLOW THE VETO MESSAGE OF THE GOVERNOR IN THE MATTER OF THE APPROPRIATION TO THE OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION UNDER STRUCTURES AND PARTS, COLUMBUS STATE HOSPITAL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 12, 1915, received in this department on June 16, 1915, requests my opinion as follows:

> "Among the items of exception included in the veto of the governor to the general appropriation act appears an item of veto as follows:
> "'Ohio Board of Administration.
> "'Structures and parts—Columbus state hospital, 2 cottages to cost $140,000.00 complete, $70,000 to be reduced to one cottage to cost $70,000 —$35,000.00'
> "The appropriation was for an entire sum to be used for two cottages, no separation of the entire sum being made by the general assembly, and, apparently the proportion of the whole that was to go into each of the two cottages being left to the board's discretion. In other words the item of appropriation was 'two cottages, $70,000.00' and not 'two cottages at $35,000.00 each, total, $70,000.00.'
> "We are in doubt whether this particular item of veto is a proper exercise of the power, or whether some construction may be made which will give it some kind of operation. Will you kindly advise us in the matter?"

This matter is by no means free from doubt and so far as Ohio is concerned there have been no cases before the courts involving a similar situation.

Section 16 of article 2 of the constitution of Ohio provides, in part:

> "* * * The governor may disapprove any item in any bill making an appropriation of money and the item or items so disapproved shall be void unless repassed in the manner herein prescribed for the repassage of a bill."

Among the items disapproved was the one under consideration. That the governor did not intend to disapprove this item in toto is quite apparent. That the governor did not approve the bill as containing the original item or file the bill with the secretary of state without his disapproval is just as apparent.

Decisions in other states upon some of the points involved are not in harmony. In the case of Commonwealth v. Barnett, 199 Pa. St., 161, the majority of the supreme court held that the governor had the power to veto part of an item by reducing the amount, but the supreme court of Wyoming (State v. Forsythe, 133 Pac. R., 521) after saying:

> "It will thus be observed that there is not a concurrence of judicial opinion respecting the power of the governor to disapprove part of an item or items or part or parts of an act appropriating money."

refused to follow the supreme court of Pennsylvania.

And even more difficult and more doubtful question is presented by the action of the governor in changing the number of cottages from two to one. The weight of judicial opinion outside of Ohio seems to make a distinction between the purpose of an appropriation and the amount of the appropriation. The above observations, however, as to what the governor did and did not do apply equally to this phase of the question. He had the power to veto the whole item had he so chosen and it should hardly be said, in the absence of judicial decision in this state to the contrary, that he did not have the power to veto part of the item.

Two diametrically opposed arguments may be advanced as to the action of the governor: (1) That the governor disapproved the whole item and it was not within his power to restore any part of it, therefore there is no money available for even one cottage; (2) That the governor had no power to make a limited or qualified disapproval, hence such attempted action was void and therefore the entire amount is available.

A third argument upon still another ground might be offered; that while the executive had the power to reduce the amount of the appropriation, he had no power to change the purpose by reducing the number of cottages from two to one.

To accept either of the foregoing suggested arguments is to disregard the plain intention of the executive whose acts in this respect are entitled to the same presumption of validity as is accorded the acts of the general assembly and unless clearly unconstitutional it would be the duty of the courts to uphold same. To say that the governor would have vetoed the whole item or, on the other hand, that he would have approved the whole item if he had not believed himself clothed with the power he attempted to exercise, would be mere speculation or guess work. No private rights whatever are involved in the matter, the question is purely a public one involving a public policy only.

I therefore advise you to set the appropriation up as "one cottage to cost $70,000.00_____$35,000.00," and to issue your warrants accordingly.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROBATE COURT—QUESTION OF JURISDICTION OF ESTATE UNDER LAWS OF DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION TO SINGLE HEIR—PART OF REAL PROPERTY IN ANOTHER COUNTY—PROBATE COURT OF FIRST COUNTY HAS EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION—WHERE TAXES SHOULD BE PAID AND HOW APPORTIONED—INHERITANCE TAX.

Where an estate, of which the probate court of one county has principal jurisdiction, passes under the laws of descent and distribution to a single heir, and part of the estate consists of real property located in another county, the probate court of the first county has exclusive jurisdiction to appoint appraisers of the real estate upon application under section 5343, G. C., and the entire tax should be paid into the treasury of that county.

The share of the tax belonging to the municipality or township in the other county in which the real estate is located should be ascertained and should be paid by the treasurer of the first county to the treasurer of the second county as undivided tax moneys and distributed by the latter treasurer to such municipality or township at the succeeding semi-annual settlement.

In order to discharge the lien of the tax as a matter of record in the county in which the real estate is situated, duplicate receipts should be taken from the treasurer of the first county upon the payment of the tax and filed with the probate court of the second county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 24th, requesting my opinion upon the question presented in a letter of one of the state examiners as follows:

> "An intestate decedent died in Hamilton county and was at the time of his death a resident of Cincinnati township. He had a personal estate in Hamilton county and was the owner of real estate in Vinton county. There is but one heir, a brother.
> "What is the proper procedure for the appraisement of the real estate and the collection and distribution of the tax?"

The following sections of the General Code are involved in this question: Section 5331, as amended 103 O. L., 463:

> "* * * Fifty per cent. of such tax shall be for the use of the state; and fifty per cent. of such tax shall go to the city, village or township in which said tax originates. * * * Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid.
> "Sec. 5335. Taxes imposed by this subdivision of this chapter shall be paid into the treasury of the county in which the court having jurisdiction of the estate or accounts is situated, by the executors, administrators, trustees, or other persons charged with the payment thereof. * * *
> "Sec. 5343. The value of such property, subject to said tax, shall be its actual market value as found by the probate court. If the state, through the prosecuting attorney of the proper county, or any person interested in the succession to the property, applies to the court, it shall appoint three disinterested persons, who, being first sworn, shall view and appraise such property at its actual market value for the purposes of this tax, and make return thereof to the court. The return may be accepted by the court in a like manner as the original inventory of the estate is accepted, and if so accepted, it shall be binding upon the person by whom this tax is to be paid, and upon the estate. The fees of the appraisers shall be fixed by the probate judge and paid out of the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor. * * *

"Sec. 5344. The probate court, having either principal or auxiliary jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the decedent, shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions in relation to such tax that arises, affecting any devise, legacy or inheritance under this subdivision of this chapter, subject to appeal as in other cases, and the prosecuting attorney shall represent the interests of the state in such proceedings.

"Sec. 5345. Each probate judge, at least once in six months, shall render to the county auditor a statement of the property within the jurisdiction of his court that has become subject to such tax during such period, the number and amount of such taxes as will accrue during the next six months, so far as they can be determined from the probate records, and the number and amount thereof due and unpaid. Each probate judge shall keep a separate record, in a book to be provided for that purpose, of all cases arising under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter.

"Sec. 5347. A final settlement of the account of an executor, administrator or trustee shall not be accepted or allowed by the probate court unless it shows, and the judge of that court finds, that all taxes imposed by the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter, upon any property or interest therein, belonging to the estate to be settled by such account, have been paid. The receipt of the county treasurer shall be the proper voucher for such payment."

I assume from the letter of the examiner that the probate court of Hamilton county has principal jurisdiction of the settlement of the estate of the decedent in question, and that such jurisdiction has been acquired.

That being the case, I am of the opinion that the probate court of Hamilton county has the jurisdiction described in section 5344 of the General Code, with respect to all questions, regardless of the location of any of the property embraced in the estate. I am also of the opinion that the jurisdiction of the Hamilton county court fixes the place of the payment of the tax under section 5335 of the General Code, and that the same should be paid into the treasury of Hamilton county.

Similarly, I am of the opinion that the "proper county" within the meaning of section 5343 of the General Code, is Hamilton county, and "the court" within the meaning of that section is the probate court of Hamilton county.

See In re Kennan, 5 N. Y. Supp., 200.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that application for the appointment of appraisers of the land in Vinton county should be made by persons interested in the succession of the property or by the prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county to the probate court of Hamilton county. The court may appoint for this purpose any "three disinterested persons." They may be residents of Hamilton county or of Vinton county, there being no requirement that the appraisers shall be residents of the county where the property is situated, other than the practical one that it would tbe best and fairest to have appraisers resident of the vicinity wherein the real estate is located.

I think there is no question that real property is subject to the appraisement provided for in section 5343 of the General Code (see section 5348, G. C., where the word "property" is defined so as to include real and personal estate), although the machinery for the ascertainment of the value of the estate in the absence of an appraisement under section 5343 does not afford any preliminary appraisement of real estate other than that of the auditor's duplicate; so that in the absence of an appraisement under section 5343 I am of the opinion that the duplicate value of the real estate in Vinton county could and should be accepted as the value thereof for the purpose of the collateral interitance tax.

There is no direct provision for the payment of any traveling or other necessary expenses of appraisers, but the authority of the court to fix their fees, as found in section 5343, General Code, affords ample provision, in effect, for their reimbursement.

The lien of the tax, of course, attaches to the property in Vinton county, and some method should be devised for discharging same. Such a method is, in my judgment, afforded by the provisions of section 5345 and 5347 of the General Code. It is the duty of the probate judge of Vinton county to make up each six months a statement of the property within his jurisdiction that has become subject to the collateral inheritance tax within the semi-annual period. It is likewise the duty of the treasurer of Hamilton county to issue a receipt upon the payment of the whole tax to him. A duplicate receipt should be taken by the administrator from the treasurer of Hamilton county and filed with the probate judge of Vinton county, who should show in his next semi-annual statement that the taxes have been paid. This will discharge the lien of the tax as a matter of record in Vinton county.

The most troublesome question which is involved in the general query of the examiner is that respecting the distribution of the tax. This department has held that the phrase "in which such tax originates," as used in the amended constitution and in section 5331 of the General Code as amended 103 O. L., 463, denotes the municipality or township in which any property belonging to a taxable estate would have been located for property taxation purposes. That being the case, the municipality or township in Vinton county wherein the real estate in question is located is entitled to such portion of one-half of the entire tax as is represented by the relative value of the real estate as compared with the total value of the taxable inheritance, the exemptions being likewise pro-rated. That is to say, this is the rule which must be followed where, as in this case, there is but a single inheritor, so that but a single tax payment is to be made on account of the whole taxable inheritance. While the statute contains no express provision in this respect, its implications are so obvious that the result is reached without any practical difficulty.

In order, however, to protect the treasurer of Hamilton county and avoid all questions, it would be best to have the probate court of Hamilton county, acting under section 5344 of the General Code, and exercising the jurisdiction therein provided for, determine specifically and enter upon its records a finding as to the proportions of the tax due to the city of Cincinnati and the district or districts in Vinton county wherein the real estate in question is located, due allowance being made for the exemptions. Upon such determination being made, the money in the treasury of Hamilton county arising from the collection of the tax should be treated as undivided tax money. At the semi-annual settlement fifty per cent. thereof, less seventy-five per cent. of the cost of collection and other necessary, legitimate expenses incurred by the county in the collection of the taxes, should be credited to the state treasury. The share of the city of Cincinnati in the remainder (and this without any deduction on account of fees, etc., which are paid out of the county treasury and for the reimbursement of which the local taxing districts are not liable under the present statutes) should be paid by warrant under sections 2602 and 2689 of the General Code, to the city treasurer. The balance, which belongs to a certain taxing district or districts in Vinton county, should, in my judgment, be paid by auditor's warrant prior to the next semi-annual settlement to the treasurer of Vinton county and by him distributed under the sections above cited.

I reach this conclusion because sections 2602 and 2689 of the General Code, do not authorize direct payment out of the undivided taxes to the treasurer of a taxing district wholly within another county, because section 2602 expressly provides that accounts shall be opened with each district "in the county." Of course, the treasurer of Vinton county will not be entitled to any fees for handling this money, as he did not make the collection, and the treasurer's fees are computed on collections. (Section 2685, General Code.)

The above outlined procedure for the distribution of the proportion of the tax belonging to the districts in Vinton county is extra-statutory. The legislature should, of course, have enacted appropriate legislation when the constitution was so amended as to require distribution of a specific portion of the tax to the "city, village or township in which the tax originates.". It has failed to do this. But inasmuch as by force of the constitution and the statute the money belongs, under facts like those involved in the present question, to taxing districts in a county other than that in which the collection is made, some means must be devised for its payment to such district. In the absence of express statutory provision, I prefer the method which I have outlined to direct payment from the Hamilton county treasury to the taxing districts in Vinton county.

I may add that the inheritance tax laws frequently lack machinery which is practically essential. The courts have not hesitated in proper cases to supply such machinery, and, in my judgment, the present case is a proper one for the application of this principle.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISSOLUTION OF VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT AND UNION OF SAID DISTRICT WITH CONTIGUOUS TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—SECTION 4682-1, G. C., MUST BE COMPLIED WITH—VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT THEN HAS NO AUTHORITY TO WITHDRAW AND RE-ESTABLISH VILLAGE DISTRICT.

Where a township contains sixteen or more square miles and a village is created out of said township, under provision of section 4687, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 134, said village becomes a village school district separate and distinct from the township rural school district and the dissolution of said village school district and the union of said district with the contiguous township rural district, under the provision of section 4682-1, G. C., can be realized only upon the proper action of the board of education of said village school district in compliance with the requirements of said section.

No action on the part of the board of education of said rural school district in connection with said dissolution and union is either authorized or required, and said board of education of said rural school district has no power to prevent such dissolution and union.

After said village school district has been dissolved and joined to the contiguous township rural school district, said village, or the electors thereof, have no authority in law to withdraw the territory within the corporate limits of said village from said township rural school district and re-establish said village school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. GEO. C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 8, 1915, which is as follows:

"Prior to the taking effect of the School Code (so called), 104 O. L., 133 to 145, the township of Perry, Lake county, Ohio, was a township school district. After said law went into effect the village of Perry was organized out of a part of said Perry township.

"Section 4687 is as follows:

"'Upon the creation of a village, it shall thereby become a village school district, as herein provided, and, if the territory of such village previous to its creation was included within the boundaries of a rural school district and such rural school district included more territory than is included within the village, such territory shall thereby be attached to such village school district for school purposes, provided such territory has an area of less than sixteen square miles.'

"There is no disposition on the part of the village to organize its board of education. It is the desire of the village to remain a part of Perry Rural School District. On the other hand there are some electors and tax payers of Perry Rural School District, residing without the newly incorporated village, who desire to have the village withdraw from the rural district. What is the status of affairs when the village refuses to organize? The board of education of Perry Rural School District now consists of five persons, four of whom now reside in the territory now lying without the village and one of whom now resides in the territory now lying within the village.

"Section 4735 is as follows:

"'The present existing township and special school district shall constitute rural school districts until changed by the county board of education, and all officers and members of boards of education of such existing districts shall continue to hold and exercise their respective offices and powers until their terms expire and until their successors are elected and qualified.'

"It is my opinion that the then existing township school district of Perry township continues as Perry Rural School District including the territory of the village of Perry, until such time as the village will organize and that all officers and members of the board of education of the then existing district continue to hold and exercise their respective offices and powers until such time as their successors are elected and qualified and until such time as Perry village organizes its own board.

"May matters continue as they are, or shall Perry village organize its own board of education and then dissolve in accordance with the provisions of section 4682-1? Again, in the event a contiguous rural school district does not want a village school district to dissolve and join with it, can the contiguous rural school district be made to receive the territory of an incorporated village, and if so, what would be the method to compel the rural district so to receive the territory and the schools within the village for school purposes?

"This additional question also may arise. Once a village has regularly dissolved and has joined a contiguous rural school district, can this village thereafter withdraw again from said contiguous rural school district?"

It will be observed that under section 4687, G. C., as amended, in 104 O. L., 134, the provisions of which have been quoted by you, upon the creation of the village of Perry out of Perry township in Lake county, said village became a village school district separate and distinct from Perry Township Rural School District.

You state that the territory within said village, prior to its incorporation, was included within the boundaries of Perry Township Rural School District. Inasmuch as said rural school district included more territory than is included within said village, if such territory has an area of less than sixteen square miles, it is automatically attached to said village school district under the above provisions of section 4687, G. C.

I assume, however, from your statement of facts, that said territory has an area of more than sixteen square miles and that your questions are based on this assumption.

I deem it proper to call your attention to the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, which was passed by the general assembly May 27, 1915, and which will become effective August 26, 1915. On and after said date of August 26, 1915, under the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as amended by said amended senate bill No. 282, the county board of education will have power to "transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to the adjoining district or districts of the county school district. This section as amended further provides:

"Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer."

However, under the statutes now in force, the only way said village school district can dissolve and become a part of said township rural school district, providing said village school district has a population of less than 1500, is in the manner provided by section 4682-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 133, and in compliance with the requirements of said section and with the provisions of law relating to the power to settle claims, dispose of property or levy and collect taxes to pay existing obligations of a village which has surrendered its corporate powers (section 4689, G. C., 104 O. L., 134).

Under section 4735, G. C., 104 O. L., 138, the provisions of which you have quoted, the four members of the board of education of Perry Township Rural School District, now residing within the territory constituting said rural school district as it now exists, will continue to hold and exercise their respective offices and powers until their terms expire and until their successors are elected and qualified.

By the creation of said village, which automatically established said village school district, the office of the 5th member of said Perry Township Rural School District, as it existed prior to said creation, who now resides within the corporate limits of said village, was vacated for the reason that by the establishment of said village school district said member became a non-resident of said Perry Township Rural School District, as it now exists.

Section 4784, G. C., provides:

"A vacancy in any board of education may be caused by death, non-residence, resignation, removal from office, failure of a person elected or appointed to qualify within ten days after the organization of the board or of his appointment, removal from the district or absence from meeting of the board for a period of ninety days, if such absence is caused by reasons declared insufficient by a two-thirds vote of the remaining members of the board, which vote must be taken and entered upon the records of the board not less than thirty days after such absence. Any such vacancy shall be filled by the board at its next regular or special meeting, or as soon therafter as possible, by election for the unexpired term. A majority vote of all the remaining members of the board may fill any such vacancy."

This vacancy in said township rural school district may be filled as above provided.

Section 4708, G. C., provides:

"In village school districts, the board of education shall consist of five members elected at large at the same time as municipal officers are elected and in the manner provided by law."

Section 4709, G. C., provides:

"At the first election in such district, a board of education shall be elected, two members to serve for two years and three to serve for four years. At the proper municipal election held thereafter, their successors shall be elected for a term of four years"

If the village of Perry fails or has failed to elect a board of education, as provided in section 4709, G. C., the commissioners of Lake county are authorized and required to appoint such board under the provisions of section 4710, G. C., 103 O. L., 166, and the members so appointed shall serve until their successors are elected and qualified. Section 4710, G. C., as amended, provides as follows:

> "In villages hereafter created, a board of education shall be elected as provided in the preceding section. When villages thereafter created, or which have been heretofore created, fail or have failed to elect a board of education as provided in the preceding section, the commissioners of the county to which said district belongs, shall appoint such board, and the members so appointed shall serve until their successors are elected and qualified. The successors of the members so appointed, shall be elected at the first election for members of the board of education held in such district after such appointment; two members to serve for two years and three members for four years and thereafter their successors shall be elected in the manner and for the term as provided by section 4709 of the General Code. The board so appointed by the county commissioners shall organize on the second Monday after their appointment. If the members of such board are elected at a special election held in such district the members so elected shall serve for the term indicated in the preceding section, from the first Monday in January after the preceding election for members of the board of education and the board shall organize on the second Monday after such election."

As before stated, Perry village school district was established by the incorporation of said village. Replying to your first and second questions, I am of the opinion that before said village district can be dissolved in the manner provided by the statutes hereinbefore cited, and in compliance with the requirements of said statutes, a board of education must be elected as provided by section 4709, G. C., or appointed by the commissioners of Lake county under authority of section 4710, G. C., as amended, for the reason that the dissolution of said village school district and the union of said district with Perry Township Rural School District, under the provisions of section 4682-1, G. C., can be realized only upon the proper action of the board of education of said village school district in compliance with the requirements of said section, which provide:

> "A village school district containing a population of less than fifteen hundred may vote at any general or special election to dissolve and join any contiguous rural district. After approval by the county board such proposition shall be submitted to the electors by the village board of education on the petition of one-fourth of the electors of such village school district or the village board may submit the proposition on its own motion and the result shall be determined by a majority of such electors."

Upon the dissolution of a village school district, under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., and in compliance with the requirements of said statutes, the territory comprising said village school district becomes a part of the contiguous rural school district to which it is joined, by a majority vote of its electors, and all school property held by the board of education of such village school district passes to and becomes vested in the board of education of such rural school district (section 4683, G. C., 104 O. L., 133). The management and control of the schools of said village vests in the board of education of said rural school district.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that no action on the part of said board of education of said rural school district, in connection with said dissolution and union, is either authorized or required, and that said board of education of said rural school district has no power to prevent such dissolution and union.

You further inquire whether, after said village school district has been dissolved and has been united with Perry Township Rural School District, said village can withdraw the territory within its corporate limits and re-establish said village school district.

Under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, and as now in force, the power to change district lines and to transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another is vested exclusively in the county board of education. Under the above provisions of section 4692, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, said county board of education will have authority within the limitations therein provided to change district lines and transfer a part or all of a school district to an adjoining district or districts, and under the provisions of section 4736, as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, said county board of education will have power within the limits provided in said section, to transfer territory and "to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof."

Should the Perry Village School District be dissolved and joined to the Perry Township Rural School District, I am of the opinion that, under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, the county board of education of Lake county would have authority, after said amended senate bill becomes effective, to separate the territory within the corporate limits of said village from said rural school district and re-establish said village school district in the manner provided by said amended section.

I find no provision of the statute, however, under authority of which said village of Perry, or the electors thereof, may, after said village school district has been dissolved and joined to Perry Township Rural School District, withdraw the territory within the corporate limits of said village from said township rural school district and re-establish said village school district.

Your third question must, therefore, be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS FOR YEARS 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917—WHERE DISTRICT CONTAINS SIXTEEN OR MORE SQUARE MILES, MEMBERS ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION FOR NOT MORE THAN FIVE MEETINGS IN ANY ONE YEAR IN ANY OF SAID YEARS, EXCEPTING 1913 AND 1914.

Each member of the board of education of a rural school district elected in November, 1913, was entitled to $2.00 compensation for each meeting attended during the year 1914, but for not more than ten meetings in said year. For the years 1915, 1916 and 1917, said member is entitled to $2.00 compensation for each meeting attended, but for not more than five meetings in any of said years provided such rural school district contains sixteen or more square miles.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 20, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "In re compensation of members of board of education elected in 1913, for four years.
> "Section 4715, General Code, provided prior to the amendment in vol. 104 page 135 for the compensation of members of the board of education at $2.00 for each meeting actually attended by each member, but for not more than ten meetings in any one year.
>
> "The amendment cuts this number to five.
> "Since the date of the passage of this amendment, may members of a board elected in 1913, draw compensation for only five meetings in any year, or may they continue to draw for ten meetings, if that many are held, under the law as it was at the time they were elected?"

Section 4715 of the General Code, prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., 135, provided as follows:

> "Each member of the township board of education shall receive as compensation two dollars for each meeting actually attended by such member, but for not more than ten meetings in any year. The compensation allowed members of the board shall be paid from the contingent fund."

This section, as amended, provides:

> "Each member of the board of education of rural school districts, except such districts as contain less than sixteen square miles, shall receive as compensation two dollars for each regular meeting actually attended by such member, but for not more than five meetings in any year. The compensation allowed members of the board shall be paid from the contingent fund."

Said amended section, by its terms, clearly limits the compensation of a member of the board of education of a rural school district, containing 16 or more square miles, to $2.00 for each meeting actually attended and for not more than five meetings in any one year. I call your attention, however, to the provisions of section 4735, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, which are as follows:

> "The present existing township and special school districts shall constitute rural school districts until changed by the county board of education, and all officers and members of boards of education of such existing districts shall continue to hold and exercise their respective offices and powers until their terms expire and until their successors are elected and qualified."

Under this statute, as amended, the former township school districts now constitute rural school district unless changed by the county board of education, but the members of the boards of education of said township school districts, elected in November, 1913, continue in office and their powers and duties are preserved by the provisions of said amended statutes until the expiration of their terms of office and until their successors are elected and qualified.

The question arises whether the compensation of said members is limited by the above provisions of section 4715, G. C., as amended, or whether they are entitled by the provisions of section 4735, G. C., as amended, to compensation for ten meetings attended in any year during the term for which they were elected.

I call your attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. Olin M. Farber, prosecuting attorney of Richland county, under date of December 8, 1914. The question asked by Mr. Farber was as follows:

> "A member of a township board of education during the year 1914, attended a regular meeting of the board on the first Monday of January, February, March, April, May, June, July and August. Presuming that he will attend four more regular meetings of the board during the year 1914, what compensation will he be entitled to for such services performed during the year 1914?"

This question was answered by reference to the provisions of the above sections of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., I quote the following from Mr. Hogan's opinion:

> "Your question presents an entanglement of legal difficulties. Whatever theory of solution is adopted in answer to the difficulty presented meets with an obstruction of serious legal consequences, and I am unable to arrive at any conclusion which presents a clearly smooth and satisfactory legal answer. I, therefore, feel urged to present that solution which has the best appearance of fairness and logical practicability. To my mind, the best construction that the conflicting provisions can be given would be the holding that the officers in question be permitted to draw the salaries prescribed by a statute prior to the amendment above referred to, for the entire year 1914. I, therefore, advise that the officers be permitted to draw their salaries for the year 1914, under section 4715, General Code, under the assumption that said statute remains in force and effect until the first Monday of January, 1915. The officers, therefore, will receive $2.00 per meeting for each meeting actually attended during the year 1914, but for not more than ten meetings in the year. After that time, the compensation prescribed by the amended statute above quoted may, in equity and fairness, be permitted to control."

I concur in this opinion, as I think it offers a practical solution to the problem presented by the conflicting provisions of the statutes.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that each member of the board of education of a rural school district, elected in November, 1913, was entitled to $2.00 compensation for each meeting attended during the year 1914, but for not more than ten meetings in said year, and that, for the years 1915, 1916 and 1917, said member is entitled to $2.00 compensation for each meeting attended, but for not more than five meetings in any of said years, provided such rural school district contains 16 or more square miles.

A copy of Mr. Hogan's opinion above referred to is enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BANKS PURCHASING BONDS ISSUED BY MUNICIPALITIES OUTSIDE OF OHIO AND RESELLING THEM TO OWN CUSTOMERS WHEN SALES AMOUNT TO MORE THAN FIFTY PER YEAR COME UNDER PROVISION OF "BLUE SKY" LAW—SUCH BANK SHOULD BE LICENSED AS "DEALER."

The Bremen Bank Company, Bremen, Ohio, which purchases quantities of bonds issued by municipalities outside of Ohio primarily for its own account, but many of which are sold to its own customers desiring investments, such sales numbering more than fifty per year, should be licensed as a "dealer" under the provisions of the "blue sky" law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 23, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The Bremen Bank Company, of Bremen, Ohio, is organized under the laws of the state of Ohio and subject to examination and regulation by the banking department, under the provisions of the banking laws of Ohio.
> "The company does a general banking business at Bremen, Ohio. It carries on its books a bond account averaging about twenty-five thousand dollars. The cashier of the bank, Mr. George W. Baldwin, informs this department that the bank buys municipal bonds issued by municipalities outside the state of Ohio, and that very few of the bonds of Ohio municipalities are bought by the bank. The primary object of these purchases, Mr. Baldwin says, is to carry that amount of money invested in assets readily convertible into cash, in the event that the reserve of cash falls below the limit. The cashier also informs the department that the bank sells the bonds to those of its customers who insist upon making an investment, but not in any instance does it insist or offer, or initiate an offer to sell the bonds. The profit which the bank realizes from the sale of the bonds to customers varies from one-eighth to one-half of one per cent. never exceeding, so the cashier states, one-half per cent. The sales would not be made, according to the statement of the cashier, except to accommodate customers of the bank and prevent them from going elsewhere to make investments. The officers of the bank admit that the number of sales of bonds by them will exceed fifty each year.

"Under the above statement of facts, is the Bremen Bank Company a 'dealer' within the meaning of the Ohio blue sky law, and is it necessary for the bank to be licensed as such dealer?"

The term "dealer" as used in the Ohio blue sky law is defined in section 6373-2 of the General Code. This section is quite lengthy, and I quote such part only as is applicable to the situation presented in your letter:

"* * * The term 'dealer,' as used in this act, shall be deemed to include any person or company, except national banks, disposing or offering to dispose, of any such security, through agents or otherwise, and any company engaged in the marketing of flotation of its own securities either directly or through agents or undewriters or any stock promotion scheme whatsoever, except:

"(a) An owner, not the issuer of the security, who disposes of his own property, for his own account; when such disposal is not made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a similar character by such owner; or a natural person, other than the underwriter of the security, who is the bona fide owner of the security and disposes of his own property for his own account. * * *."

The primary purpose of the blue sky law is to prevent fraud in the sale of securities and certain other kinds of property, and thereby to protect and assist the investing public. Since the disposition of worthless or doubtful securities is usually accomplished through unscrupulous agents, commission brokers and promotors who do not own the securities sold by them, it was natural that the supervisory and regulatory features of the law are chiefly directed towards these classes of sellers, and that the owners of such securities are, within certain limitations, excepted from the requirements of the act and are permitted to sell such property outside of the requirements of the law.

Therefore, under the statutory definition above quoted, an owner of securities, such as are referred to in your letter, may dispose of the same without the necessity of being first licensed as a "dealer" "when such disposal is not made in the course of repeated and successive transactions."

If the Bremen Bank Company confines its disposal of securities to such a limited number of sales as would properly enable it to carry out what you have designated in your letter as "the primary object of these purchases," i. e., to readily secure cash in event the bank's cash reserve falls below the limit, I would be inclined to the opinion that such sales were not "made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a similar character."

It appears from the statements of your letter, however, that the bank also sells these bonds "to those of its customers, who insist upon making an investment, but not in any instance does it insist or offer or initiate an offer to sell bonds." It further appears that a considerable number of such sales are made each year. The bank, therefore, has a double purpose to serve in purchasing these securities; a considerable portion of the same are purchased, not simply to secure ownership for investment purposes, but to be resold to its customers "in repeated and successive transactions." It is immaterial in such transactions whether or not the bank solicits its customers to purchase or the customer solicits its bank to sell. The point of importance is, that such sales constitute repeated and successive transactions.

I am of the opinion that the facts stated in your letter bring The Bremen Bank Company of Bremen, Ohio, within the definition of the term "dealer," and that it should be required to secure a license as such dealer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—SUBJECT TO A TAX FOR ANY INDEBTEDNESS INCURRED BEFORE DISSOLUTION—OLD BOARD CONTINUES TO PROVIDE LEVY UNTIL OBLIGATION IS PAID—NO PROVISION TO RE-ESTABLISH A VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT ONCE IT UNITES WITH A CONTIGUOUS RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Upon the dissolution of a village school district under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 133, only the property within the limits of said village school district will be subject to a tax levy for the payment of any indebtedness incurred by the board of education of said village school district and the board of education of said rural school district has no authority in law to assume such indebtedness or to levy a tax to provide a fund for the payment thereof. If the levy for the payment of said indebtedness shall not have been made by the board of education of said village school district at the time of dissolution, said village school district as a separate taxing district, and its board of education as its taxing authority, must continue for the purpose only of levying a tax for the payment of such indebtedness until such time as said indebtedness will have been paid.

After a village school district has been dissolved under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 133, and united with the contiguous rural school district, there is no provision of the statutes now in force under authority of which the territory within the corporate limits of the village may be separated from said contiguous rural school district and under which said village school district may be re-established.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. G. A. STARN, Prosecuting Attorney, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 25th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "On July 12th, the Doylestown Village School District will hold a special election to dissolve and join the contiguous rural district. The village district has a bonded indebtedness, which bonds were issued for the purpose of constructing their building, and the last of these bonds do not mature until 1923.
> "This election is being held by reason of the provisions of sections 4682-1 and 4683 of the General Code as found in volume 104, page 133, of Ohio laws.
> "Should the election result in a dissolution of the village district who then will pay the balance of this bonded indebtedness, the village district or the newly formed rural district?
> "Section 4735-2 as found in the same year book, page 138, provides that a dissolution shall not be complete until the board of education of the district has provided for the payment of any indebtedness that may exist. However, this section does not have application to the one which provides for the dissolution of a village district. I do not know of any section of law that provides for the payment of indebtedness upon the dissolution of a village district and for that reason I could not properly advise the citizens of the Doylestown Village School District.

"I would be very much obliged if you will advise me on this matter at once as the citizens desire to know before they hold their election, and I should know at least several days before the election so as to fully inform all of the people.

"In the event that the village district is obliged to pay this indebtedness then I take it that the dissolution could not be complete until this indebtedness is paid, for the reason there could be no taxing district in which to make a levy to raise the money for the purpose of paying this indebtedness.

"Should this dissolution take place at this time and after a period of several years the citizens of Doylestown should again desire to form a village district for their village, what method should be pursued to bring this about?"

Your first question has been answered in opinion No. 287 of this department rendered to Hon. F. C. Goodrich, prosecuting attorney of Miami county, under date of April 26, 1915. This opinion held that, upon the dissolution of a village school district under authority of section 4682-1, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 133, the title to the school property of said school district passes to and vests in the board of education of the contiguous rural school district to which said village school district is joined, but only property within the limits of said village school district would be subject to a tax levy for the payment of any indebtedness incurred by the board of education of said village school district, and the board of education of said rural school district has no authority in law to assume said indebtedness or to levy a tax to provide a fund for the payment thereof, either upon the property within the limits of said village school district or upon the general duplicate of the rural school district.

The opinion further holds that, if the levy for the payment of said indebtedness shall not have been made by the board of education of said village school district at the time of dissolution, said village school district as a separate taxing district, and its board of education as its taxing authority, must continue for the purpose only of levying a tax for the payment of such indebtedness until such time as said indebtedness will have been paid.

I enclose herewith copy of this opinion.

I find no provision of the statute under authority of which said village of Doylestown or the electors thereof may, after said Doylestown Village School District has been dissolved and united with the contiguous rural school district, withdraw the territory within the corporate limits of said village and re-establish said village school district.

I call your attention, however, to the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, passed by the general assembly May 27, 1915, and which will become effective August 26, 1915. This section as amended provides:

"The county board of education shall arrange the school districts according to topography and population in order that the schools may be most easily accessible to the public, and shall file with the board or boards of education in the territory affected, a written notice of such proposed arrangement; which said arrangement shall be carried into effect as proposed unless, within thirty days after the filing of such notice with the board or boards of education a majority of the qualified electors of the territory affected by such order of the county board, file a written remonstrance with the county board against the arrangement of school districts so proposed. The county board of education is hereby authorized to create a school district from one or more school districts or parts thereof. The county board of education is authorized to appoint a board of education for such newly created school district and direct an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness belonging to the newly created district. Members of the boards of education of the newly created district shall thereafter be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the boards of education of the village and rural districts."

Should the Doylestown Village School District be dissolved at this time and joined to the contiguous rural school district I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question that, prior to August 26, 1915, the date when said amended senate bill No. 282 becomes effective, there is no provision of the statute under authority of which the territory within the corporate limits of said village of Doylestown may be separated from said contiguous rural school district and under which the said Doylestown Village School District may be re-established. I am of the opinion, however, that on and after said date of August 26, 1915, the board of education of Wayne county will have authority, under the provisions of section 4736, G. C., as amended by said amended senate bill No. 282, to separate the territory within the corporate limits of said village from said contiguous rural school district and re-establish said village school district in the manner provided in said amended section.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FIX BOND OF COUNTY TREASURER—HOW AMOUNT SHOULD BE DETERMINED—SURETIES MAY BE PERSONAL OR BONDING COMPANIES.

The commissioners of the county are authorized to fix the amount of the bond to be required of the county treasurer before entering upon the discharge of his office, but the bond should not be fixed in an amount less than the probable maximum of the public moneys that may come into the custody of the treasurer at any one time during his term.

The treasurer is authorized to furnish a bond with two or more surety or bonding companies as sureties thereon, and the expense thereof is to be paid by the commissioners out of the general fund of the county. The treasurer may at his option furnish bond with four or more freehold sureties, but the commisisoners have no option to require such freehold sureties against the option of the treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. CLARK GOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 21, 1915, you requested my written opinion as follows:

"As I understand the new law with reference to the bond for county treasurer provides that they shall give a surety bond (and the cost), therefor shall be paid by the county.

"In our county it is the desire of our county commissioners to reduce the treasurer's bond from $170,000 to $50,000, in order to save the extra premium.

"Please let me know if you think this would be advisable, and whether or not, in your opinion, there is any way to avoid this law and follow the old procedure."

Section 2633, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 540, provides:

"Before entering upon the duties of his office, the county treasurer shall give bond to the state in such sum as the commissioners direct with two or more bonding or surety companies as surety, or at his option, with four or more freehold sureties approved by the commissioners and conditioned for the payment, according to law, of all moneys which come into his hands, for the state, county, township or other purposes. If bond with bonding or surety companies as surety, be given, the expense or premium for such bond shall be paid by the commissioners and charged to the general fund of the county. Such bond, with the oath of office and the approval of the commissioners endorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the auditor of the county and by him carefully preserved in his office. Such bond shall be entered in full on the record of the proceedings of the commissioners, on the day when accepted and approved by them."

The foregoing section requires that the treasurer, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall give bond to the state in such sum as the commissioners direct, and while it is the duty of the commissioners in determining the amount for which bond should be required, to have due regard for the amount of the public moneys that will probably come into the custody of the treasury, to the end that the bond shall provide adequate security against misappropriation of such public moneys, yet the authority to determine the amount of the bond so to be required of the treasurer is vested in the county commissioners.

Section 2635, G. C., provides:

"When, in the opinion of a majority of the county commissioners, the sureties have become insufficient, they may require the county treasurer to give additional sureties on his previously accepted bond. When in their opinion more money has passed or is about to pass into the hands of the treasurer than is or would be covered by his bond, they may demand and receive from such treasurer an additional bond, payable and conditioned as required for the original bond with such sureties and in such sum as they direct. If a county treasurer fails or refuses to give such additional sureties or bond for ten days from the day on which the commissioners so require, his office shall be vacant and another treasurer appointed, as in other cases of vacancy."

The foregoing section clearly evidences the legislative intent that the amount of the treasurer's bond shall at all times be equal to the maximum amount of public money that has passed or may pass into his hands at any time during his term.

In the instance of which you inquire, if the commissioners find that a bond in the sum of fifty thousand dollars will cover the maximum amount of the public moneys that may pass into the custody of the treasurer at any time during his term they are authorized to fix his bond in that amount, but the bond should not be fixed in an amount below the probable maximum of the money that may come into the treasurer's custody during his term.

The bond required of the county treasurer may be either a bond with two or more surety or bonding companies, as sureties thereon, or with four or more freehold sureties, at the option of the treasurer.

This bond, of course, is to be a joint and several bond and it was held in an opinion rendered by this office to Hon. S. W. Ennis, prosecuting attorney, Paulding, Ohio, under date of January 30, 1915, that two separate bonds, each with one surety or bonding company as surety thereon, is not a compliance with the statute and that unless the bond is joint and several and contains the names of at least two bonding or surety companies as surety, it should be rejected.

If, however, a bond in proper form and in the amount directed by the commissioners, with two or more sufficient surety or bonding companies as sureties thereon, is offered by the treasurer before entering upon the discharge of his office, it is the duty of the commissioners to accept and approve such bond and pay the premium or expense thereof out of the general fund of the county.

The option to provide a bond with four freehold sureties may only be exercised by the treasurer and is not available to the commissioners, and the acceptance of a bond with two or more sufficient surety or bonding companies as sureties, which is in all other respects in conformity with the requirements of the statutes and in the amount directed by the commissioners, is a duty which would be enforced by mandamus. See State ex rel. Eppler v. Lewis, 10 O. S., 128; State ex rel. Bellows v. City Council of Cincinnati, 11 O. S., 544; State ex rel. Barnes v. Commissioners of Belmont county, 31 O. S., 451.

I, therefore, advise that the authority to fix the amount of the bond of the county treasurer is vested in the commissioners of the county, and in the instance of which you inquire, the commissioners are authorized to fix the incoming treasurer's bond at $50,000.00 provided they find this amount will cover the maximum amount of the public moneys that will probably come into the custody of the treasurer at any one time during his term, but the bond should not be fixed at an amount below the probable maximum of the money so coming into his hands; that the treasurer is authorized to furnish bond with two or more surety or bonding companies as sureties, the expense or premium therefor to be paid by the commissioners and charged to the general fund of the county, and that the treasurer cannot be required to furnish a bond with freehold sureties against his option.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CHILLICOTHE-McARTHUR ROAD IN ROSS COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of June 30, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution as to the Chillicothe-McArthur road in Ross county, petition No. 1671, I. C. H. No. 365.

Permit me to call your attention to the fact that while the estimated cost of this improvement is $14,400.00, the amount appropriated and certified by the county commissioners is $9,800.00 and the amount certified by the chief clerk of the state highway department is $4,400.00, making a total of only $14,200.00, or $200.00 less than the estimated cost and expense of the improvement. It is, therefore, apparent that the total amount to be expended by the state and county is $200.00 less than the total estimated cost and expense, and for this reason I am returning the resolution in question without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION—DEAN OF COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY DISQUALIFIED FROM ACTING AS MEMBER OF AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION AFTER EXPIRATION OF TERM AS DEAN.

The member of the agricultural commission of Ohio who holds his office by virtue of being dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University does not continue as a member of the agricultural commission after the expiration of his term of appointment or employment as dean of said college until his successor is appointed and qualified; nor is he entitled to continue in the position of dean until his successor is appointed and qualified, such position not constituting an office of public trust.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

Agricultural Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 29th, in which you submit for my opinion a question which, for the sake of brevity, may be stated as follows:

"Does the member of the agricultural commission of Ohio, who holds his office by virtue of being dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University, as provided by section 1079 of the General Code, (as amended 104 O. L., 201) continue as a member of the agricultural commission after the expiration of his term of appointment or employment as dean of said college until his successor is appointed and qualified?"

In the specific case, the term of the member in question as dean has expired, but no successor has been chosen.

I find upon further investigation at the office of the secretary of the board of trustees of the Ohio State University that the capacity in which the gentleman in question was acting as member of the agricultural commission prior to June 30, 1915, was by virtue of his incumbency of the position of dean of the college of agriculture of the university, as stated by you, and not by virtue of what I take it was his original appointment as member of the commission under original section 1079, G. C., as enacted 103 O. L., 304.

This original law provided in effect that the fourth member of the commission should be appointed by the trustees of the Ohio State University in the same manner as is provided by law for the appointment and removal of professors of the university, and that the persons so appointed should have general charge, subject to the board of trustees of the university, of the college of agriculture thereof.

The manner in which the trustees of the university have been electing their professors under section 7949 of the General Code, is for specified terms of one year, and this, in my opinion, is legal.

I ascertained the fact to be that the tenure of the person in question under his original appointment expired on June 30, 1914; so that nothing in section 3 of the act found in 104 O. L., 201, amending section 1079 of the General Code, as enacted in 1913, had the effect of preserving his tenure under such original appointment. That being the case, the sole question to be considered is the interpretation of section 1079 of the General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 201, in the light of the amendments then made and the provisions relative to the appointment of college officers by the trustees of the Ohio State University, with a view to determining whether or not the fourth member of the agricultural commission is governed by the provisions of section 8 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Sec. 8. A person holding an office of public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

Section 1079, G. C., as last amended, provides as follows:

"Sec. 1079. There shall be an agricultural commission of Ohio and by that name the commission may sue and be sued. The agricultural commission shall consist of four members, three of whom shall be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate. The three members appointed by the governor shall be directly identified with agriculture or agricultural education, and not more than two of the members so appointed shall be of the same political party. Within thirty days from the time that this act shall take effect, the governor shall with the advice and consent of the senate appoint a member who shall serve two years, another who shall serve four years, and another who shall serve six years; and thereafter each member appointed by the governor shall be appointed and confirmed for a term of six years. Vacancies shall be filled in the same manner for unexpired terms. They shall be subject to removal as may be provided by law. The dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University shall be the fourth member of such commission and the governor of the state shall be ex-officio member thereof."

The meaning of this section is very plain to me. There is specific provision therein for the terms of office of the three members of the commission to be appointed by the governor and for the filling of vacancies therein. But as to the fourth member it is simply provided that the dean of the college of agriculture shall be such fourth member. There is no requirement that the trustees of the university shall appoint a dean, nor that there shall at all times be an incumbent of the position of dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University. Nevertheless, if there is at any time a vacancy in the deanship, or a failure to elect a dean, a vacancy is thereby created in the position of the fourth member of the agricultural commission, and there is no means of filling such vacancy otherwise than by the appointment of such a dean.

It is obvious, then, that the moment a person who has been dean of the college of agriculture ceases to be such dean, he likewise ceases to be a member of the agricultural commission, as his membership on such commission is not personal, but ex-officio.

It follows, therefore, that unless the position of dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University is subject to section 8 of the General Code, the the said section does not apply to the position of fourth member of the agricultural commission, because that position is filled not by "a person" within the meaning of section 8, as such, but by the incumbent of the other position, as such.

In my opinion, the position of dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University is not "an office of public trust" within the meaning of section 8, G. C. In order to create an office legislation is necessary, and no such position is referred to in the statutes of the state other than section 1079 of the General Code, which has not the effect of creating the office of dean. Moreover, permanency is one of the chief and distinguishing characteristics of an office, whereas even if the position of dean be regarded as a college office, it cannot be regarded as permanent, for the trustees of the university may create and abandon it at will.

It is my opinion, therefore, that upon the expiration of the term of service or employment of the gentleman in question as dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University, and the failure of the trustees of the university to elect a successor to him in such capacity, he was not entitled by virtue of section 8 of the General Code, to continue as dean of the college of agriculture, and not being entitled to continue in such capacity he thereby ceased to be a member of the agricultural commission, and the position of fourth member of such commission thereby became vacant, and will not be filled again until the trustees of the university elect some one as dean of the college of agriculture of the university.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOND ISSUE IN VILLAGES—ELECTION—RETURNS—HOW COUNTED —DISPUTED BALLOTS COUNTED BY VILLAGE CLERK, UNLESS IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO DETERMINE CHOICE OF VOTER.

The returns of elections upon the question of bond issue held in villages, is required by the provisions of section 5114, G. C., to be made to the clerk of the village. In the event the judges of election at such village election cannot agree as to how a ballot or any part of the same should be counted, all such ballots should be placed in an envelope and returned with the returns of the election to the clerk of the village and should be opened and counted by the clerk in the presence of the mayor as provided by sections 5114 and 5090, G. C. Disputed ballots in such case should be counted by the clerk if, as a matter of fact, it is not impossible to determine therefrom the choice of the voter.

If it is impossible to determine the choice of the voter from such disputed ballot the same should not then be counted in determining the total number of voters voting upon the question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 2, 1915.

HON. IRVING CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 16, 1915, as follows:

"At a special election held yesterday in the village of Greenwich, this county, there was submitted the question of issuing the bonds of said village, for the improvement and extension of the village water works plant. At this election 97 votes were cast in favor of the issue and 47 against it, with two ballots which, instead of having the cross marks in the space at the left, before the words 'For the issue of bonds,—no,' had the word 'no' written. Two of the judges of the election insisted that these ballots should not be counted at all, the other two were equally insistent that they be counted as negatives, which would have defeated the election.

"Being unable to agree these ballots were sealed up and return of the entire election made to the secretary of the deputy state supervisors of elections. The deputy state supervisors are now asking my advice in the matter and I, in turn, wish to ask you the following questions:

"(1) To whom should return of such election be made?

"(2) By whom should the question as to how these ballots should be counted, be determined, the judges of election being deadlocked on the question?

"(3) Should these ballots be counted?

"My own opinion is, this being a municipal election, return should be made to the village clerk and not the deputy state supervisors of election; that by him the vote should be canvassed, but whether he would have power to determine the manner of counting disputed ballots like these, is a serious question to me and I am unable to determine it. It is my opinion that it is possible to determine the intention of the elector in this case and that that intention was a negative vote.

"A prompt decision of this question will be very much appreciated, both by the people of Greenwich and myself."

The above is supplemented under date of June 22, 1915, as follows:

"Supplementing my communication to you of the 16th and your inquiry about the same under date of the 18th, regarding the special election held in the village of Greenwich, beg to advise you that I have secured a copy of the resolution authorizing the election and find therein the recital that the proceeding is 'under and by authority of sections 3941, 3949 and 3952, and other sections of the General Code, relating to this subject as to the limitation of bond issue.'

"I have also secured a form of the ballot used in that election and find it to be in the following form, rather than the form suggested in my former letter:

	For the issue of Bonds
	Against the issue of Bonds

"Trusting that this information may prepare you to give me an early response, I am."

Section 3945, G. C., with reference to elections held under the provisions of section 3942, 3943 and 3944 of the General Code, provides:

"The election shall be held at the regular place or places of voting in the municipality, and be conducted, canvassed and certified in like manner, except as otherwise provided by law, as regular elections in the municipal corporation for the election of officers thereof."

Section 5114, G. C., relative to municipal elections, provides:

"The returns of municipal elections shall be made by the judges and clerks in each precinct to the clerk or auditor of the municipality. Such clerk or auditor, or, in his absence or disability, a person selected by the council, shall call to his assistance the mayor, and, in his presence, make an abstract and ascertain the candidates elected, as herein required with respect to county officers. Such clerk or auditor shall make a certificate as to each candidate so elected, and cause it to be delivered to him. If there is no mayor, or he is absent, disabled or a candidate at such election, the clerk or auditor shall call to his assistance a justice of the peace of the county."

In registration cities the returns of the election of municipal officers, members of the board of education and justices of the peace are required, under the provisions of section 5115, G. C., to be made to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections. From the provision of section 5114, G. C., supra, it seems quite clear that the returns of the election to which you refer are required to be made to the clerk or auditor of the municipality in which the same was held, and the clerk or auditor, or such persons as may be selected by council in his absence or disability, is charged with the duty of making an abstract of the vote cast in the presence of the mayor, or a justice of the peace in the absence, disability or disqualification of the mayor.

Section 5083, G. C., provides for the manner in which the ballots shall be counted and that "in the event the judges do not agree as to how any part of the ballot shall be counted, such ballot shall not be counted but shall be placed in an envelope provided for the purpose."

Section 5090, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 266, provides as follows:

> "If there are any ballots placed in the envelopes for uncounted ballots, such envelopes shall be sealed and returned to the deputy state supervisors with the returns of the election, to be by him counted. At least one day before the beginning of the official count, the board of deputy state supervisors, in the presence of one person duly authorized by the chairman of each county controlling committee and the chairman of the committee of each set of candidates nominated by petition, shall open the envelopes containing the uncounted ballots and determine what part and for whom each such ballot shall be counted, and proceed to count and tally the same. Said ballots shall be further preserved for such judicial or other investigation as may be necessary."

Here it will be noted that the disputed ballots are required to be returned to to the deputy state supervisor of elections with the returns of the election. The returns of municipal elections, except in registration cities, as seen above, are required to be made to the clerk or auditor of the municipality. Thus the question arises whether or not the disputed ballots referred to shall be returned with the returns of the election to the clerk or auditor of the municipality, as provided in section 5114, G. C., or to the deputy state supervisor of elections with the returns, as provided in section 5090, G. C.

If it be held that a strict and literal construction of section 5090, General Code, should be maintained, it would result that the auditor or clerk of the municipality would be unable to determine the result of the election, as there is no statutory requirement that the result of the counting of disputed ballots by the deputy state supervisor of elections be certified or communicated to such clerk or auditor. It is more natural to conclude that it was the legislative purpose in the enactment of section 5114, G. C., supra, to substitute the clerk or auditor and the mayor of the municipality for the deputy state supervisor of elections, in case of municipal elections, and that all the powers and duties of the deputy state supervisor of elections relative to canvassing the vote and counting the disputed ballots in county, state and municipal elections in registration cities, should in municipalities devolve upon the clerk or auditor of the municipality, to be exercised and performed in the presence of the mayor or such other person, as provided by section 5114, G. C.

Since it has been determined that the returns of the election in the municipality referred to should be made to the clerk and it is provided that the disputed ballots should be returned with the returns, I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that the disputed ballots should be transmitted with the returns to the village clerk and be by him opened, and upon examination thereof he should then determine whether or not the same, or what part of them, should be counted. The determination of this latter question, which is third submitted by you, involves a consideration and application of sub-division 9 of section 5070, G. C., which provides:

> "No ballot shall be rejected for any technical error which does not make it impossible to determine the voter's choice."

From this it follows that every case must be determined from its own facts. That is to say, this is in every case purely a question of fact for the determination of which no rule can be laid down. The answer to your third question then must be—if it is not impossible for the clerk of the village to determine from the ballot the choice and intention of the voter, it is his duty to count the same in accordance with the voter's choice so expressed.

The question of determining the result of the election, although not submitted, is suggested by your inquiry. Section 3947, G. C., provides as follows:

> "If two-thirds of the voters voting at such election upon the question of issuing the bonds vote in favor thereof, the bonds shall be issued. Those who vote in favor of the proposition shall have written or printed on their ballots, 'For the issue of bonds'; and those who vote against it shall have written or printed on their ballots, 'Against the issue of bonds'."

It will be observed that it is here required that two-thirds of the voters voting upon the question vote in favor thereof. "Vote" is defined to be the expression of wish or choice or preference, to the exclusion of the means by which or the method through which that result was accomplished.

> 29 Am. and Eng. Ency., 1074;
> 40 Cyc., 224.

To vote then is to express the choice or preference of the voter upon the question to be determined, and the "voters voting" comprehends only those electors who have given effective expression to their choice, preference or will relative to such question. In other words, to vote is to communicate the will or choice of the elector by whatever appropriate means or method adopted or established. The means of expressing the choice of electors in public elections is established by law in this state to be the ballot, but the mere casting of a ballot under the present system of elections, is not assumed to give effective expression to the choice of the voters and cannot therefore be held to be voting in the proper sense of the term.

An attempt to give expression to the will of the voter upon a ballot, if wholly unintelligible, cannot be said to constitute a vote. The vote is the expressed or communicated choice of the voter, while the ballot constitutes only the established facility for such expression—a means to the end sought.

In the case of Dexter v. Raine, Auditor, 18 L. B., 62, it is said:

> "A vote is but the expression of the will of the voter." State v. Greene, 37 O. S., 230. "Where no will is expressed no vote is cast. The man who casts a ballot expressing no will, does not cast a vote any more than he who absents himself from the polls."

If then it is impossible to determine the will of the voters from the ballots in question, they do not constitute votes upon the question within the meaning of the terms of the statute and should not be counted in a computation of the total number of those voting upon the question. The total number of those voting, as per your letter, would be 144, and 97 being cast in favor of the question—more than two-thirds of the total—the issuance of the bonds is approved.

If it be determined that it is not impossible to ascertain the will of the voters from the ballots referred to and that such will or choice of the voter is in the affirmative, upon the question submitted, the total number of votes will then be 146, 99 of which votes being in the affirmative, the bond issue would therefore be approved. If the will of the voters of these two ballots be determined to be in the negative, the total number of votes will be 146, with but 97 votes in the affirmative or less than two-thirds of the total, and the issue of bonds will have failed of approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BUILDING REGULATIONS—WHETHER APPLICABLE TO A BUILDING ERECTED AT COST LESS THAN $3,000, AND PAID FOR FROM APPROPRIATIONS UNDER HOUSE BILL NO. 701.

A building of a state institution to be erected at a cost of less than three thousand dollars, to be paid for from appropriations made under house bill No. 701, is not subject to state building regulations (sections 2314, et seq., G. C.), but is subject to section 6 of house bill No. 701.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1915.

HON. R. M. HUGHES, President, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 28th, you wrote to me as follows:

> "Some time since, we advertised for bids on eight different items included in the necessary alterations to enlarge our heating plant. Among these was an extension to the engine room. The estimate on this item was lower than the bid, and so we were obliged to reject the bid on this part of the work. The low bid was a little over $1,700.00 and there were several other bids very little higher. It occurs to me that as the total cost of this addition is less than $3,000.00, it might be possible for us to construct this on a time and material basis without further advertising. Will you kindly advise me if this is permissible under the law?"

The sections of the General Code relative to building regulations are sections 2314, et seq.

Section 2314 provides as follows:

> "Before entering into contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars, each officer, board, or other authority by law charged with the supervision thereof, shall make or cause to be made the following; full and accurate plans, showing all necessary details of the work, with working plans suitable for the use of mechanics and other builders in such construction, so drawn and represented as to be plain and easily understood; accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction to accompany such plans; full and complete specifications of the work to be performed, showing the manner and style required with such directions as will enable a competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out and afford bidders all needful information; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof."

Since the aggregate cost of the improvement under contemplation will not exceed three thousand dollars, the above sections will not apply.

The improvement in question is to be made from the appropriation made to your university under house bill No. 701, and is to be made, as I am informed, from the appropriation known as

"G Additions and Betterments.
"G 2. Structures and Parts.
"Completing improvements to heating and lighting plant_____$6,100.00."

Under section 6 of said bill, after providing that the moneys appropriated by the bill shall be drawn upon a requisition or voucher, it is provided as follows:

"Such requisitions or vouchers shall set forth in itemized form and specify the classification of the service rendered, material furnished, or expenses incurred, and the date of purchase or time of service, and show that competitive bids were secured, unless otherwise provided by law; or unless in the judgment of the board as provided in section 4 herein, it is impracticable because of the peculiar nature or location of the work to be done, in which case the above mentioned board may in writing authorize the department affected to proceed to do the work, or that it was an emergency requiring purchase."

Although, as before stated, the improvement in question does not come under the building regulations as found in the General Code, nevertheless, the expenditure of such money must show that competitive bids were secured, unless otherwise provided by law. I do not find any statute that provides that competitive bidding shall not be secured.

The board mentioned in section 4 consists of the governor or any competent, disinterested person appointed by him for such purpose, the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives and senate, respectively, the attorney general and the auditor of state.

In order, therefore, that the university may construct the extension to the engine room referred to on a time and material basis without further advertising, it must obtain the authorization in writing of the above mentioned board.

It would seem to me, therefore, that at least the better way to do is to advertise for bids in order that competitive bidding may be secured. The length of advertising or the manner of advertising is not specified in the appropriation bill, but rests in the sound discretion of the board of trustees.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BUREAU—UNAUTHORIZED TO MAKE FINDING FOR RECOVERY OF FEES AND COSTS COLLECTED BY SPECIAL CONSTABLE APPOINTED BY JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—SECTION 3331, G. C., DISCUSSED.

The bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices is unauthorized to make a finding for recovery of fees and costs collected and received by a special constable appointed by a justice of the peace, although none of the grounds therefor as set forth in section 3331, G. C., in fact exist.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your favor under date of June 8, 1915, which is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "In an instance where it is known that a justice of the peace appoints a special constable in order to favor some friend and to ignore the regularly elected constables of his township without observing the particular reasons for such appointment as stipulated in section 3331, General Code, could our examiners make a finding against the person so appointed as special constable for the recovery of fees so paid him?"

The general authority for the appointment of special constables is found in section 3331, G. C., to which you refer and which reads as follows:

> "Section 3331. A justice of the peace may appoint a constable or constables for a special purpose, either in civil or criminal cases, when such appointment becomes necessary in the following cases:
> "1. When there is no constable in the township;
> "2. In case of disability of one of the regular constables in the township;
> "3. When the constable therein is a party to the suit;
> "4. When, from the pressure of official business, the constables therein are not able to perform the duties required by the office.
> "The justice making the appointment, shall make a memorandum thereof on his docket, and require the person appointed to take an oath, as in other cases."

From the above it will be noted that special constables may be appointed only for particular cases and when there exists one or more of the enumerated causes therefor and that the justice of the peace making such appointment is required to make a memorandum thereof on his docket. The authority to determine the existence of the statutory causes, therefore, rests exclusively with the justice of the peace making such appointment, and the fact of making the appointment and the entry of the memorandum on his docket in the manner provided, sufficiently evidences such determination.

The statute provides that the justice of the peace may appoint. The authority thus conferred involves the exercise of discretion on the part of the appointing officer and is not the performance of a purely ministerial function, which might be controlled by the courts in mandamus. The justice exercises discretion, both in determination of the ground upon which such appointment is authorized and in his selection of a proper person so to be appointed. Appointments so made are valid, except for fraud or gross abuse of discretion, and persons so appointed would be entitled to the legal fees for services rendered pursuant thereto.

Authority to appoint special constables is conferred upon justices of the peace and such appointments though made for a fraudulent purpose or in the absence of any statutory ground therefor, cannot be said to be void. A person so appointed becomes a de facto officer and so long as his authority to exercise the functions of the office is unrestrained by legal proceedings and he continues to perform the duties thereof, he is entitled to receive the fees, compensation or emoluments thereof provided by law.

It may also be observed that the fees of constables received for services in either civil or criminal cases are not public moneys or moneys in which the public is in any way interested. While "public money" as defined in section 286, G. C., 103 O. L., 509, "includes all money received or collected under color of public office," etc., this definition must be read in the light of the further provisions of the same section at least and particularly that provision which limits the right of recovery of such public money by public authorities to an action "in the name of the political subdivision or taxing district to which such public money is due." It is thus clearly indicated that public money comprehends only such money received or collected under color of office, etc., as is due to some political subdivision or taxing district of the state.

As above stated, it cannot be maintained that constables' fees in any case constitute money due to any political subdivision or taxing district. Such fees are money due only to the officer for services performed and that the obligation to pay the same is imposed by law does not of itself alter their character.

While the practice of appointing special constables may be subject to great abuse, I am of opinion that the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices is unauthorized to make a finding for recovery of fees collected by a special constable appointed in the manner stated by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE BOND ISSUE UNDER SECTION 3939, G. C.—WHEN WITHIN ONE PER CENT. LIMITATION SUBJECT TO REFERENDUM—APPROVAL OF ORDINANCE BY MAJORITY VOTE OF ELECTORS, SUFFICIENT.

An ordinance duly passed by a village under section 3939, G. C., to issue and sell bonds, which bonds together with others will not exceed one per cent. as specified in section 3940, G. C., is subject to referendum, and the approval of such ordinance "by a majority of those voting upon the same" under section 4227, G. C., will be sufficient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

HON. A. A. SLAYBAUGH, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letters of June 21st and June 26th respectively, submitted for my opinion on the following questions:

Council of the village of Leipsic acting under section 3939 of the General Code, undertook by ordinance to issue and sell bonds for the purpose of purchasing fire apparatus in an amount not sufficient in connection with the tax duplicate of the village and the amount of the bonds then outstanding to require submission of the question of issuing such bonds to the board of electors under sections 3942 to 3947 inclusive, of the General Code. Within thirty days after the passage of this ordinance a referendum petition was filed, as you state, with the council, signed as I assume by the requisite percentage of the electors of the municipality, and ordering the submission of the ordinance to a vote of the people.

Is a measure such as this subject to the referendum?

Preliminary to a discussion of the question, I take the opportunity to point out that in villages referendum petitions must be filed with the village clerk (section 4227, G. C., 104 O. L., 239).

Assuming that your statement to the effect that the petition was filed "with the council" is to be interpreted as meaning that it was filed with the clerk, I am of the opinion that such filing was proper and that the ordinance in question was subject to the referendum.

Section 4227-2 provides in part:

"Any ordinance or other measure passed by the council of any municipal corporation shall be subject to the referendum except as hereinafter provided."

The exceptions are found in section 4227-3 as amended 103 O. L., 212, which provides as follows:

"Whenever the council of any municipal corporation is by law required to pass more than one ordinance or other measure to complete the legislation necessary to make and pay for any public improvement, the provisions of this act shall apply only to the first ordinance or other measure required to be passed and not to any subsequent ordinances and other measures relating thereto. Ordinances or other measures providing for appropriations for the current expenses of any municipal corporation, or for street improvements petitioned for by the owners of a majority of the feet front of the property benefited and to be especially assessed for the cost thereof as provided by statute, and emergency ordinances or measures necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety in such municipal corporation, shall go into immediate effect. Such emergency ordinances or measures must, upon a yea and nay vote, receive the vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to the council or other body corresponding to the council of such municipal corporation, and the reasons for such necessity shall be set forth in one section of the ordinance or other measure. The provisions of this act shall apply to pending legislation providing for any public improvement."

Whatever difficulty there may be in reconciling the referendum provisions with what is popularly known as the Longworth act, sections 3939, et seq., G. C., it is clear that the comprehensive language of the former, which was the latest enactment in point of time, is sufficient to embrace the latter. Indeed, the specific reference in section 4227-3 to measures "* * * to pay for any public improvement" clearly shows that such measures were intended as a general rule to be subject to the referendum. Inasmuch as the great majority of public improvements of any considerable cost are paid for by the issuance of bonds, under section 3939, G. C., it is inconceivable that the legislature intended that any restricted meaning should be given to its otherwise sufficiently inclusive language so as to exclude the measures provided for by the Longworth law from the operation of the later statute, which does not in express terms have such effect.

In this view of the case, the fact that the amount of bonds which the council attempted to issue does not exceed the limitation to which council might go, in the absence of a referendum for a vote of the people initiated by its own legislation, is immaterial. The right of the people to have a referendum on the issuance of bonds extends to all cases, although in cases in which the limitations are operative this right need not be asserted by the filing of referendum petitions, but is secured to them by the provisions of sections 3942, et seq., G. C.

Although you do not inquire concerning it, the most difficult question which arises on the state of facts which you present is as to the vote which will be necessary to carry the proposed bond issue at the referendum election. Had the submission to popular vote been under section 3942, G. C., as it might have been had council wished even though the limitations do not so require (which is the conclusion expressed in the opinion to the city solicitor of Akron, copy of which has been sent to you) a two-thirds vote of the electors voting on the proposition would have been necessary in order to authorize the issuance of the bonds. I find that my predecessor has held that an initiated ordinance for the issuance of bonds beyond the limit to which council might go without a vote of the people requires a two-thirds vote in order to authorize such issuance, but in this instance, in which the action of the council, if not interrupted by the filing of a referendum petition, would of itself have been sufficient to authorize the issuance and sale of bonds, a contrary result I think follows. The electors will in substance vote on the question of sustaining what council has done and although in any view of the case something must be supplied, as the express provisions of the referendum statutes do not fit with perfect harmony into the scheme of the Longworth act, I am of the opinion that in such a case as that which you have, the approval of the ordinance "by a majority of those voting upon the same" (section 4227-2, G. C.) would be sufficient, with the legislation already adopted by the council itself, which I assume has received the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members elected or appointed to council, will be effective to authorize the issuance of bonds.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF SINKING FUND TRUSTEES OF A CITY HAVING DESIGNATED A BANK AS DEPOSITORY CANNOT LATER COMPENSATE BANK FOR HANDLING BOND AND COUPON ACCOUNT WHEN BONDS ARE PAYABLE AT CITY TREASURER'S OFFICE.

A board of sinking fund trustees of a city, having accepted a bid of a bank to act as depository, cannot subsequently thereto undertake to compensate the bank for alleged services rendered by said bank in handling the bond and coupon account, when the bonds are payable at the office of the city treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 21, 1915, you wrote requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We enclose herewith pages 71 and 72 of the report of H. D. Waddell, state examiner, upon the city of Springfield, Ohio, also copy of opinion of E. P. McKee, solicitor of said city, relative to finding returned of $235.00 rendered by him against The American Trust and Savings Bank of Springfield, Ohio, in payment of services rendered by said bank in handling the bond and coupon account of said city.
> In view of the fact that the solicitor of said city had passed upon the question we did not desire to make finding for recovery without the approval of your department."

The pages of the report of the examiner, to which you refer, contain the following statement:

> "The sinking fund trustees, as the laws require, advertised for bids for the deposit of their funds in bank. The bids were received as of the date of May 8, 1914, and on this date the bid of The American Trust and Savings Bank was accepted and a contract was entered into for a period of two years ending March 8, 1916. The said bank agreed to pay two per cent. per annum computed on daily balances, payable quarterly or monthly and to furnish a personal bond to the satisfaction of the sinking fund trustees. .
> "BOND OF DEPOSITORY.
> "In accordance with the terms of the above contract the depository, The American Trust and Savings Bank executed a bond in favor of the sinking fund trustees in the sum of $150,000.00 with the following sureties: N. H. Fairbanks, H. S. Kissell, H. V. Bretney, P. E. O'Brien, George C. Lynch, H. E. Freeman, Lew Levy, Chas. G. Heckert. The above bond was approved by the city solicitor as to its proper legal form and by the sinking fund trustees as to security.
> "FINDING OF PREVIOUS EXAMINER.
> "In a previous report of Will E. Heck, state examiner, bearing date of April 4, 1914, a finding of $239.83 was made against The American

Trust and Savings Bank for depository interest. The said bank recognizing the justness of this claim paid the above amount into the treasury of the sinking fund.

"ILLEGAL PAYMENT

"The sinking fund records show that on June 9, 1914, a bill of $235.00 was presented to the board of trustees of the sinking fund by L. H. Cooke, secretary-treasurer of The American Trust and Savings Bank, of Springfield, Ohio, for services in handling the bond and coupon account of said city. This bill was approved and ordered paid by the trustees.

"The American Trust and Savings Bank is the active depository of the city and sinking funds of the city, the same having been selected April 26, 1912, under authority of council and through competitive bidding.

"It is the duty of the city treasurer to redeem all matured bonds and interest payable at the city of Springfield, and the above named bank is under contract to act as the depository of the sinking funds. I am of the opinion that the trustees of the sinking fund had no authority to allow the said depository additional compensation for any services provided for in the contract with the said bank, or for services which the law provides the city treasurer shall perform. I therefore make a finding for recovery against the bank in favor of the sinking fund in the amount of $235.00 with interest from the date of payment.

I incorporate the letter of Solicitor McKee in explanation of said item of expenditure, but cannot agree with the conclusions of law set forth therein."

The opinion which was given by the city solicitor of Springfield to the state examiner is as follows:

"April 16, 1915.

"MR. H. D. WADDEL, State Examiner, City.

"DEAR SIR:—Replying to your inquiry concerning item of $235.00 in voucher No. 656, to L. H. Cook for services rendered for retiring bonded indebtedness of the city of Springfield, Ohio, from August 1, 1912, to January 1, 1914, I beg to submit the following:

"The express powers of the board of sinking fund trustees are found in sections 4506 and 4522, inclusive, G. C. O., and contain among other provisions the following:

"Section 4507 provides they 'shall have the management and control of such sinking fund.'

"Section 4508 authorizes the payment by the trustees out of the funds under their control the cost of premiums on surety bonds of the members, together with all other incidental and necessary expenses of such trustees.

"Section 4510. They shall make their own rules, etc., not inconsistent, of course, with the specific provisions of law.

"Section 4515, relating to depositories, provides that same shall be to the bank or banks * * * which offer, at competitive bidding, the highest rate of interest and best security and accommodation, etc.

"Section 4519 gives them such other powers not inconsistent with the nature of the duties prescribed for them by law as may be conferred upon or required by council.

"No specific provision is apparently made by law laying down definite rules to govern the sinking fund trustees as to what arrangements shall be made by them to handle the payment of maturing interest and bonds, but it is apparent that as such payment is a legal obligation on the part of such board, they must make some provision therefor, and it would appear to be a matter within their discretion as to the method employed.

"It also appears that under section 4515 they would have the right to make such arrangements with their legal depository, as this section states that the accommodations offered may be considered in determining which is the best bid. I have looked in the records of the board but find no copy of the advertisement asking for the bids for deposit of such funds during the three year period ending March 1, 1914, and I presume it will depend somewhat upon the wording of the advertisement as to just what the intention of the trustees and the bidders were. It appears, however, that such provision was not made at the time the bid of 2.75 per cent. for deposits was accepted, and that the matter was afterwards considered between the board and the depository with the result that the board passed a resolution which in effect reduced the rate to two per cent. in consideration of the banks handling and paying the city's bonds and coupons when presented for payment.

"The right to do this was questioned by Mr. Will E. Heck, state examiner, and on February 19, 1914, he received instructions from the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices that such an agreement was void, and upon notification thereof, additional interest of 75/100 per cent. was paid over to the sinking fund by the depository.

"I have not had access to the opinion upon which the above mentioned ruling was based, but presume it was upon the theory that the contract having been made as the result of competitive bidding, and no definite agreement therein having been made concerning the payment of the city's bonds and coupons, it would be unfair to other banks who had submitted bids to allow such contract to be so changed.

"It would seem, however, that the trustees have the implied power to make provision for the payment of their bonds and coupons, and such, I understand, has been the general practice, many cities negotiating with eastern banks as a place for such payments, and while the objection to any change in bids submitted by a depository based upon such a consideration, is readily apparent, yet if the sinking fund desires to make a separate contract with some bank or banks for such purpose, even though such bank may happen to be the depository of their funds, such objection would not obtain, in my opinion.

"It appears that such an arrangement was entered into by the trustees and Mr. Freeman, representing The American Trust and Savings Bank, which agreement would therefore be proper in substance but was made objectionable by the manner in which they endeavored to carry it out, and these facts seemed to be borne out by the data contained in the former report of Mr. Will E. Heck, state examiner.

"In order to overcome this objection, it seems the bill was presented from the bank to the trustees of the sinking fund for the amount in question. This bill was made in favor of L. H. Cook, Mr. Cook being, however, the cashier of the above mentioned bank, and stating upon its face that it was for services rendered in connection with the payment of bonds and coupons for the sinking fund during the period therein covered, and on June 9, 1914, at a meeting of the board of sinking fund trustees the bill was ordered paid by unanimous vote of the members of the board, and a voucher was thereafter issued therefor and the money paid.

"It would seem that a decision of the exact question as to the legality or illegality of this payment arising out of the above circumstances will not be necessary at this time for the reason that it would appear that inasmuch as the services have been performed by the one party and payment made therefor by the other, the transaction in the event it should be found to be tainted with any illegality arising out of the form or manner in which the same was done, would fall within the rule of law set forth in the case of State ex rel. v. Fronizer, 77 O. S., 7, holding that the section of the law authorizing a prosecuting attorney to bring action to recover back money of the county which had been misapplied or illegally drawn from the county treasury, does not authorize the recovery back of money paid on a bridge contract by the county commissioners executed but rendered void because of lack of certificate of money in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund, etc., there being no claim of unfairness or fraud in the making, or fraud or extortion in the execution of such contract for such work, nor any claim of effort to put the contractor in statu quo by a return of the bridge or otherwise, the same having been accepted by the board of commissioners and incorporated as a part of the public highway.

"If the bill had been presented, and payment refused, then it would have been necessary to pass upon the legality of the bill in order to determine whether or not same should have been paid, or whether it would have fallen within the rule of Buchanan Bridge Company v. Campbell, 60 O. S., 406, which holds that a contract made in violation or disregard of a statute on the subject is void, and no recovery can be had for its value as the court will leave the parties as it finds them and refuse relief.

"I note that a recurrence of this claim has been obviated by the action of the trustees, who, in their advertisement for bids for depositories for the three year period beginning in March of 1914, specifically state that the successful bidder shall act as agent of the board in the payment of bonds and coupons and the accepted bid was based upon that proposition."

I am unable to agree with the opinion as rendered by the city solicitor for the following reasons:

The provisions of the statutes pertaining to trustees of the sinking fund for cities and villages are found in sections 4506 et seq., of the General Code.

Section 4509, G. C., provides for the election of a secretary if council by ordinance provides therefor.

Section 4515 provides in part as follows:

"At least once every three years the trustees of the sinking fund shall advertise for proposals for the deposit of all sums held in reserve and shall deposit such reserve in the bank or banks, incorporated under the laws of this state or of the United States, situated within the county, which offer, at competitive bidding, the highest rate of interest and best security and accommodation and give a good and sufficient bond issued by a surety company authorized to do business in this state, or furnish good and sufficient surety in a sum not less than twenty per cent. in excess of the maximum amount at any time to be deposited. * * *"

Section 4518 provides how money shall be drawn from the sinking fund as follows:

"Money shall be drawn by check only, signed by the president and at least two members of the board, and attested by the secretary or clerk."

The sinking fund trustees, at the time of receiving bids, under the provisions of section 4519, G. C., must take into consideration the rate and security offered, and the accommodation to be afforded, and when they award the bid it is upon the basis that they have obtained not only the highest rate of interest but also the best security and accommodation. They are presumed to have taken into consideration the question of the accommodation, and cannot, as I view it, subsequently endeavor to compensate the depository bank for the accommodation which it affords.

Under date of June 30th you further inform me as follows:

> "We have been informed that the bonded indebtedness of the city of Springfield, Ohio, is made payable at the office of the city treasurer and in no instance is such indebtedness made payable at the depository bank of the sinking funds of said city."

It appears, therefore, that the bonds in question were made payable at the office of the city treasurer. Consequently, there was no duty to be performed by the depository bank nor accommodation to be afforded by it other than the payment of the check drawn under favor of section 4518, supra. If the bank undertook to take in the bonds for the accommodation of the city treasurer, that is a matter which rests between the bank and the city treasurer, but in no way can it be considered as an obligation on the part of the sinking fund trustees to recompense the bank for doing the work of the city treasurer.

The city solicitor seems to be of the opinion that although the payment of the money to the depository bank might be considered illegal, nevertheless under the case of State ex rel. v. Fronizer, 77 O. S., 7, a recovery could not be made against said bank for the amount paid for alleged services by the bank to the sinking fund trustees. The case of State v. Fronizer was a suit brought by the state on the relation of the prosecuting attorney against a certain bridge company for the recovery of money alleged to have been illegally drawn from the treasury of the county by the defendants. The bridge company, in contracting with the county for the erection of a bridge, failed to procure a certificate of the county auditor that the money required for the payment of the obligation created by the contract, was in the treasury of said county to the credit of the bridge fund of said county, or had been levied and placed on the duplicate of said county and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. The court held (page 16):

> "This court is of opinion that such recovery is not authorized. The principle applicable to the situation is the equitable one that where one has acquired possession of the property of another through an unauthorized and void contract, and has paid for the same, there can be no recovery back of the money paid without putting, or showing readiness to put, the other party in statu quo, and that rule controls this case unless such recovery is plainly authorized by the statute. The rule rests upon that principle of common honesty that imposes an obligation to do justice upon all persons, natural as well as artificial, and is recognized in many cases."

The court says later in its opinion (page 18):

> "The county should not be permitted to retain both the consideration and the bridges."

On page 17 the court in its opinion refers to the case of Vindicator Printing Company v. State, 68 Ohio State, 362, and states:

"That case is authority for the proposition that there may be a recovery back by the prosecuting attorney where the money has been paid for the publishing of certain notices the publication of which was not authorized by law. The publications were not only without authority of law but they were of no value to either the county or the public. Therefore no property of the company had been obtained by the county. Clearly the case is not analogous to the case at bar."

So in the matter which I have under consideration, as I view the law, any subsequent contract made with the depository bank was without authority of law, and being absolutely without authority of law, and furthermore the services for which it was attempted to compensate said bank being services which the city treasurer was required to perform, any attempt to reward said bank for such services was without authority of law, and the recovery of the moneys so paid may be had by civil action in the name of the taxing district, in pursuance of section 286, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LIMITATION OF FEES THAT MAY BE TAXED IN GARNISHEE CASES FOR SERVICES OF JUSTICE OF PEACE AND CONSTABLE DOES NOT APPLY TO SINGLE MAN WITH NO FAMILY LEGALLY DEPENDENT UPON HIM.

The provisions of section 10271, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 567, limiting the fees that may be taxed in garnishee cases for services of a justice of the peace and constable, does not apply to a single man with no family legally dependent upon him.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 23rd, you submitted for my written opinion the following question:

"Does the provisions found in section 10271, General Code, as amended 103 O. L., 567, limiting the fees that may be taxed in garnishee cases for services of a justice of the peace and constable to $2.00, apply to a person not the head of a family?"

Sections 10253, et seq., of the General Code provide relative to attachment. In section 10253, it is provided:

"If attachment of the personal earnings of the defendant be sought, the affidavit also must state that he is not the head or support of a family nor in good faith the support of a widowed mother wholly dependent upon him for support."

Section 11725, G. C., states what property may be held exempt from execution by "every person, who has a family, and every widow," and the sixth paragraph thereof states in part as follows:

> "If the claim, debt or demand for the payment of which it is sought to subject personal earnings is one for necessaries furnished to the debtor, his wife or family, only ninety per cent. of such earnings shall be so exempt as against such claim, debt or demand."

Section 10271, G. C., (103 O. L., 567) provides:

> "The personal earnings now exempted by law, in addition to the ten per cent. for necessaries, shall be further liable to the plaintiff for the actual costs of any proceedings brought to recover a judgment for such necessaries, in any sum not to exceed two dollars and the necessary garnishee fee. * * *"

A man who is not the head or support of a family, nor in good faith the support of a widowed mother wholly dependent upon him for support, is not entitled as a person "who has a family" to any exemptions whatever.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that the limitations found in section 10271, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 567, do not apply in the case of an attachment against a single man, not the head of a family or having the support of a widowed mother wholly dependent upon him.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FEES FOR SPECIAL INSTRUCTION AT A UNIVERSITY MUST BE PAID INTO STATE TREASURY—INSTRUCTOR NOT PERMITTED TO COLLECT SUCH FEES AND APPLY SAME ON HIS SALARY.

Fees charged students by a university for special instruction, and upon which no refund is to be given, must under the provisions of section 24, G. C., as amended, be paid into the state treasury.

A university is not authorized to permit the instructor to collect the fees himself and apply the same upon his salary as fixed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

HON. ALSTON ELLIS, President Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 19th, you requested my opinion in two matters. Your first inquiry is as follows:

> "(1) Connected with the College of Liberal Arts at Ohio University is a department of painting, a school of oratory, and a college of music.
> "In each of these, most of the students receive individual instruction, from the very nature of the case. All such students pay, as do other students, the regular registration fee which finds its way into the state treasury under the provisions of the 'Mooney bill.' But in addition to this registration fee, all students receiving individual instruction in painting, music and public speaking pay a special fee varying in amount according to the kind of instruction received, length and number of recitation periods, etc. Can the whole, or any part, of the salaries of employes, giving this special individual instruction, be paid from such special fees—fees over and above the registration fees paid by all students? (See schedule of fees recently sent to you under another cover.)"

From an examination of the schedule of fees which you sent to this department it appears that for special instruction an additional fee is required of the student taking such special instruction.

Your question is whether the whole or any part of the salaries of employes giving such special instruction can be paid from such fees. I understand that you mean thereby whether or not such fees may be paid directly to the instructor in charge, or whether or not the fees should be collected by the university and, under the provisions of section 24, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 178, the same should be turned into the state treasury, section 24 as amended providing for a weekly pay in of all moneys, etc., received for the use of a state institution, college, normal school or university receiving state aid from, among other things, fees, "or otherwise."

There is a further provision in said act that where tuitions and fees are paid to the officer or officers of any college, normal school or university receiving state aid, the officer or officers shall retain a sufficient amount of said tuition fund and fees to enable them to make refunds of tuition and fees incident to conducting of the tuition fund and fees. That, however, only applies when there is an intention upon the part of the university or college to make refunds; otherwise, all tuition and fees under the "Mooney bill" are required to be paid weekly into the state treasury.

If such fees, whether regular registration fees or special fees from which no refunds are to be made, are not turned in to the state treasury weekly, the failure so to do would be a violation of section 24, G. C., as amended.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that all such fees must be paid into the state treasury in pursuance of said section. Whether or not the whole, or any part, of the salaries of employes giving special, individual instruction may be paid from special fees depends upon the appropriation made to the university. I find, however, that the appropriation made in house bill No. 701, under the head of "personal service," appropriates a certain sum of money for the positions therein, and does not undertake to appropriate receipts and balances of special fees. Consequently, I am of the opinion that not only should the fees be turned in, but also that the payments must be made from within the appropriation.

Your second inquiry is as follows:

"(2) Two years ago, Ohio University instituted a system of extension teaching. At first this outside instruction was given by teachers regularly in service. These teachers received the fees paid by extension students—which fees were almost nominal and used the same in paying all expenses and in compensating themselves for the extra teaching service rendered. So popular was this extension teaching and so necessary was it under new academic and professional qualifications required of teachers and prospective teachers under legislative enactments, that the authorities at Ohio University asked for, and received, appropriations to enable them to extend this department of the institution's educational work. Three instructors gave their whole time to this work throughout the college year just closed. The recent appropriation bills provide for continued extension service by three instructors for the biennial period ahead. This instruction, supplemented by instruction given by the regular class teachers immediately connected with the university would meet, in fair measure, but not fully even then, the growing demand for this outside instruction. My desire is to confine the teaching service of our regular instructors to classes organized at the university. To do this will be to decline doing some outside work for which there is a strong and, it seems to me, a reasonable demand. Should an additional instructor be employed to give extension teaching, could his salary be legally paid from the extension fees collected? Be it understood that all extension class fees now collected are turned into the general revenue fund of the state. No law requires the collection of these fees; but if collected, they form a part of institutional receipts that should find their way into the state treasury under the terms of the 'Mooney bill.' But if a part of these fees is collected by an instructor himself and used by him as a part of the whole of his salary, what then?"

This question likewise is to be answered in the negative. To permit the fees charged by the university for special services to be turned over directly to the professor, instead of being paid to the proper officer of the university, would be an evasion of the law as laid down in section 24, G. C., as amended. While it may be true that there is no law requiring the collection of the fees, nevertheless, if the university charges fees for such services, the charge is one made by the university and not by the professor in charge. To permit the professor attached to the university to make an individual charge himself, on a stipulated schedule fixed by the university, would, as before stated, be purely an evasion of the law.

I, therefore, hold that all such fees are to be collected by the university as fees and paid into the state treasury in pursuance of section 24, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CHILLICOTHE-McARTHUR ROAD IN ROSS COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 2, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution as to the Chillicothe-McArthur road in Ross county, petition No. 1671, I. C. H. No. 365.

I have examined this resolution and find it to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,

A CORPORATION IS NOT AUTHORIZED TO EXERCISE ANY OF ITS CORPORATE FRANCHISES UNTIL CERTIFICATE IS FILED THAT TEN PER CENT. OF ITS CAPITAL STOCK IS SUBSCRIBED—AN INCOMPLETE CORPORATION IS NOT REQUIRED TO SURRENDER ITS ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—DATE OF INCORPORATION —WHEN CERTIFICATES OF DISSOLUTION SHALL BE GRANTED—FOREIGN CORPORATION.

A corporation which has not filed a certificate that ten per cent. of its capital stock has been subscribed is not authorized to exercise any of its corporate franchises; is not in fact a corporation, but has only secured authority to become a corporation, and may by suit in quo warranto be ousted from any attempt to exercise corporate franchises.

Until such certificate has been filed and the directors elected, no corporate action can legally be taken.

Such incomplete corporation is not required to file report under section 5495; and in order to surrender its articles of incorporation it does not need to secure the certificate mentioned in section 5521, G. C.

Within the meaning of section 5519, G. C., the date of incorporation is the date upon which a certificate is filed in the office of the secretary of state showing that ten per cent. of its capital stock has been subscribed.

The annual franchise fee of a domestic corporation is not due until August 15, within the meaning of section 5521, G. C.; and the tax commission may until that date furnish the certificate mentioned in said section even though the taxes for the current year have not been paid. For foreign corporations said annual tax is not due until October 15*th of each year, within the meaning of section* 5521, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of May 11, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The commission's attention has just been called to an opinion rendered by you to the secretary of state under date of February 11, 1915, in which you hold that,
> " 'Until a certificate showing that ten per cent. of the capital stock of a corporation has been subscribed, has been filed with the secretary of state, and the stockholders have elected a board of directors, that there is no corporation in existence, and that a certificate of dissolution may be filed in such cases by the secretary of state without certificate of the tax commission as provided for in section 5521 of the General Code.'
> "It would seem that this opinion, if adhered to, will make a very considerable change in the procedure of this commission in subjecting domestic corporations for profit to the payment of the franchise taxes, as provided in sections 5595, et seq., of the General Code.
>
> "In an opinion rendered to this commission under date of April 5, 1912, your predecessor held that:
> " 'When articles of incorporation have been procured from the secretary of state there is in existence a corporation "organized under the laws of this state" within the meaning of sections 5495, et seq., General Code;

such corporation is not entitled to the certificate provided for in section 5521 of the General Code, when it has filed no report and paid no annual fee as required by said sections; in case of default in making report or paying fee, on the part of such a corporation, the tax commission must certify the corporation to the secretary of state who must then cancel its articles of incorporation as provided in section 5509 of the General Code.'

"Since the date of this opinion the commission has been proceeding in accordance therewith. It now desires to know whether your opinion reverses that of your predecessor in any or all respects.

"You are also requested to advise as to the effect of your opinion upon the provisions of section 5519 which has been heretofore construed to mean that a corporation shall not be required to file its first annual report until the proper month for the filing of such report next following the expiration of six months from the date of filing its articles of incorporation. Is this to be changed to the date upon which a certificate showing that ten per cent. of the capital stock of a corporation has been subscribed, has been filed with the secretary of state, and the stockholders have elected a board of directors?

"You are also requested to furnish the commission with your opinion upon the following:

"Is the commission authorized to issue the certificate provided for in section 5521 of the General Code, to a domestic corporation which has made its report during the month of May and desires to dissolve at any time between the first day of June and the time when the franchise fee is computed and charged, without being required to pay the franchise fee for that year?

"The same question arises with reference to foreign corporations desiring to retire from business in this state."

The opinion of my predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, under date of April 5, 1912, found in the annual report of the attorney general for that year, in volume 1, page 530, was fully and carefully considered by me in arriving at my opinion to the secretary of state referred to in your letter.

I have the highest regard for the legal ability and sound judgment of Attorney General Hogan, and would not have issued my former opinion had I not been fully convinced that the conclusion therein expressed was in full accord with the proper interpretation of the statutes and court decisions relative thereto.

It is to be observed also that General Hogan was apparently not firmly convinced of the correctness of his conclusion as it is stated in the opinion that the question was in doubt.

I am firmly convinced, as expressed in my former opinion, that "until a certificate showing that ten per cent. of the capital stock of a corporation has been subscribed, has been filed with the secretary of state, and the stockholders have elected a board of directors, there is no corporation in existence" or "organized under the laws of Ohio" within the meaning of section 5495 of the General Code, which is required to make the report therein provided.

Section 5495, 5496 and 5497 of the General Code are as follows:

"Section 5495. Between the first day of May and the first day of July, 1911, and annually thereafter during the month of May, each corporation, organized under the laws of this state, for profit, shall make a report, in writing, to the commission in such form as the commission may prescribe.

"Section 5496. Such report shall be signed and sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, by the president, vice-president, secretary or general manager of the corporation, and forwarded to the commission.

"Section 5497. Such report shall contain:

"1. The name of the corporation.

"2. The location of its principal office.

"3. The names of the president, secretary, treasurer and members of the board of directors, with the postoffice address of each.

"4. The date of the annual election of officers.

"5. The amount of authorized capital stock and the par value of each share.

"6. The amount of capital stock subscribed, the amount of capital stock issued and outstanding, and the amount of capital stock paid up.

"7. The nature and kind of business in which the corporation is engaged and its place or places of business.

"8. The change or changes, if any, in the above particulars, made since the last annual report."

The obvious impossibility of compliance with the provisions of the above sections by the incomplete corporate organization, to my mind, clearly indicates the legislative intent to require reports only from corporations which have completed their corporate organization.

Section 5521 of the General Code, referred to in your letter, is as follows:

"In case of dissolution or revocation of its charter, on the part of domestic corporations, or of the retirement from business in this state, on the part of a foreign corporation, the secretary of state shall not permit a certificate of such action to be filed with him unless the commission shall certify that all reports, required to be made to it, have been filed in pursuance of law, and that all taxes or fees and penalties thereon due from such corporation have been paid."

I agree, but for entirely different reasons, with the opinion of Attorney General Hogan, that such a corporation (one which has not completed its organization by filing a certificate showing subscription of the ten per cent. of its capital stock and by the election of the directors) is not entitled to a certificate of dissolution under the above section; not, however, because it has failed to file a report and pay its annual fees, but because it is not a completed corporate organization, has not, in fact, a corporate existence, and therefore needs no certificate of dissolution.

I am, also, for the same reasons, of the opinion that the provisions of section 5509 of the General Code have no application to such incomplete corporate organization.

Replying to the second question contained in your letter, relative to the interpretation to be placed upon the provisions of section 5519 of the General Code, which section is as follows:

"A corporation shall not be required to file its first annual report under sections one hundred and six to one hundred and fifteen (G. C., sections 5495 to 5504) inclusive, of this act, until the proper month, hereinbefore provided, for the filing of such report, next following the expiration of six months from the date of its incorporation or admission to do business in this state."

This section applies to corporations whose corporate organization has been completed, at least to the extent of filing with the secretary of state the certificate showing that ten per cent. of its capital stock has been subscribed. As there is no ready means of ascertaining when directors of a corporation have been elected, I suggest that the date of the filing of the certificate showing that the requisite stock has been subscribed and paid in be considered as the date of the incorporation for the purpose of determining when the first annual report of such corporation should be filed.

In support of the conclusion above expressed I call attention to the case of the American Ball Bearing Company v. Adams, decided April 12, 1915, by the United States district court of the northern district of Ohio, 13 Ohio law reporter, June 28, 1915, 137. At page 142 in the opinion, Judge Clarke uses this language:

> "The Ohio law differs from the law of many states in that the mere filing of articles of incorporation in due form does not create or bring into existence a corporation, notwithstanding the provision of G. C., 8629, that a certified copy of the articles of incorporation shall be prima facia evidence of the existence of the corporation therein named. This is distinctly decided in State ex rel. v. Insurance Co., 49 O. S., 440, the fifth paragraph of the syllabus of that case reading as follows:
> " 'The making and filing, for purposes of profit, of articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state, do not make an incorporated company; such articles are simply authority to do so. No company exists within the meaning of the statute, until the requisite stock has been subscribed and paid in and directors chosen.'
> "Before the plaintiff can maintain this action as a de jure corporation, this rule of law requires an affirmative answer to the question, 'Had the K Company a lawfully constituted and elected board of directors so that it was an "existing" corporation when it became a party to this suit?'
> "Again the law of Ohio requires that ten per cent. of the capital stock of the proposed corporation shall be subscribed and this fact certified by the incorporation to the secretary of state before an election of directors may be held (G. C., 8633 and 8635); that at the time of making a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation, ten per cent. of each share subscribed for, shall be payable (G. C., 8632); * * *."

Again, at page 143, this language is used:

> "That these are not merely directory provisions of law, but are mandatory and must be complied with before a corporation can come into existence under Ohio law, is sufficiently established by Telephone Co. v. Cincinnati, 73 O. S., 64, which decided that:
> " 'Section 3243 (G. C., 8632), 3244 (G.C., 8633) and 3245 (G. C., 8636), Revised Statutes, taken together, require that an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock shall be payable at the time of making the subscription; that as soon as ten per cent. of the capital stock is subscribed notice for the election of directors may be given; that no person shall vote for director for any share on which any installment is due and unpaid, and the votes of a majority of the number of shares shall be necessary for a choice. Tested by these requirements the record shows that there had been no legal election of directors, and that the corporation had not been organized in such a manner as to entitle it to a decree under section 3641.'
> "Trust Co. v. Floyd et al., 47 O. S., 525, Syl. par. 3:
> " 'The corporate powers, business and property of corporations formed for profit, must be exercised, conducted and controlled by a board of directors, who cannot be chosen until ten per cent. of the capital stock specified in the articles of incorporation has been subcribed.' (See also City of Cincinnati v. Queen City Tel, Co., 2 N. P. n. s., 349.)"

It seems to me that the principles laid down in the above decision and in the cases therein cited fully sustains the conclusion above expressed.

Answering your third question relative to the authority of your commission under section 5521 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Section 5521. In case of dissolution or revocation of its charter, on the part of a domestic corporation, or of the retirement from business in this state, on the part of a foreign corporation, the secretary of state shall not permit a certificate of such action to be filed with him unless the commission shall certify that all reports, required to be made to it, have been filed in pursuance of law, and that all taxes or fees and penalties thereon due from such corporation have been paid."

The machinery for the assessment and collection of the tax on domestic corporations is as follows: A report must be filed "during the month of May." Section 5495 of the General Code. On the filing of this report, the commission shall determine the amount of the subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock of the corporation "on the first Monday of July" (section 5498 of the General Code), and certify the amount so determined "on the first Monday in August" to the auditor of state (section 5498 of the General Code), who shall charge the fees of three-twentieths of one per cent. upon the amount so certified "on or before August fifteenth" for collection (section 5498 of the General Code). The corporation then has until the "first day of the following October" to pay the fee without delinquency. (Section 5498 of the General Code.)

It might be observed that the period between the first Monday of July and the first Monday of August is available to a corporation as the time within which it may be heard upon its application for a correction of the primary determination of the commission (section 5504 of the General Code).

It is obvious that the tax cannot be "due" until it is finally determined, and I am of the opinion that it is not "due" until the charge for collection is actually made.

This is, I think, the interpretation of the word "due" as used in section 5521 of the General Code, although for some other purposes one might say that the tax is "due" on the date as of which the amount thereof is to be ascertained, viz.: the thirty-first day of May, or the date of the making of the report, if filed prior to that date and in the month of May.

Any other interpretation of the word "due" in section 5521 would read the word out of the statute entirely, for if the commission were required to certify merely that all the taxes and fees which would become collectible on account of the report filed had been paid, the language of the section might well read as follows:

"The commission shall certify that all reports * * * have been filed in pursuance of law, and that all taxes or fees and penalties thereon * * * have been paid."

But when the words "due from such corporation" are put into the statute, I think that for the purpose of the certificate the intent is manifested that the taxes and fees shall not be regarded as "due" until they are actually due in a technical sense.

The purpose of section 5521 is to prevent a corporation which is delinquent in any way from being dissolved during its delinquency. This purpose is fully served by permitting the dissolution of a corporation which has filed the report, but has not yet paid the fee, because the same is not due. No substantive rights of the state can be in any way jeopardized by such a holding, for the liability of the corporation is fixed by the fact that it existed during the month of May, and upon dissolution prior to the time when the fee becomes due the assets of the corporation in the hands of the winding-up trustees would be liable for the amount.

Any other holding would produce the effect that a domestic corporation may not dissolve, or be dissolved, between the thirty-first of May and the fifteenth of August. Such cannot be the result. There is no machinery for collection of the tax or fee between these dates; if there were, a contrary answer might be given.

In your letter you refer also to foreign corporations. The answer is the same as to these, excepting that the dates are July 31st, and October 15th, respectfully, as provided in sections 5499 and 5503, General Code.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

In connection with the answer to the first two questions asked by your commission it should be noted that until a certificate has been filed by the incorporators showing that ten per cent. of the stock of the proposed corporation has been subscribed no authority is conferred upon such incorporators by virtue of the articles of incorporation secured by them to exercise any corporate franchise or to file any report required of the corporation. Any attempted exercise of such corporate right may and should be prevented by proceedings in quo warranto.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR ISSUANCE OF BONDS BY CARROLL COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 8, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"In re: Bonds of Carroll county, Ohio, in the sum of $7,000.00 purchased by the industrial commission of Ohio under resolution dated June 21, 1915."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings relative to the issuance of the above bonds, which was submitted to me under date of June 28, 1915, and I am of the opinion that the issuance of said bonds is for a purpose authorized by law; that the proceedings of the county commissioners and other officers of said county have been regular and in conformity with statutory requirements; that no limitation, either constitutional or statutory, of indebtedness or taxation has been exceeded in the issuance of said bonds; that provision has been made in the legislation under which said bonds are issued for levying and collecting annually a sufficient tax to pay the interest and provide a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds as they become due; that said bonds when properly prepared and executed will be valid and binding obligations of Carroll county, and I hereby certify my approval of the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR BOND ISSUE, CITY OF CANTON, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE: Bonds of the city of Canton, Ohio, in the aggregate amount of $85,100.00 purchased by the industrial commission of Ohio, under resolution dated May 24, 1915, said bonds, as indicated by the transcripts furnished me, including the following issues:

1. $1,500.00 of bonds for the purchase of lot No. 3357 as site for engine house. Due five years from date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

2. $9,000.00 of bonds for the purchase of triple combination fire wagon. Due ten years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

3. $1,500.00 of bonds for the re-laying of floor in safety building with creosoted wood block. Due five years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

4. $47,000.00 of bonds for laying permanent water mains. Due ten years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

5. $9,000.00 of bonds for the purpose of meeting deficiency in city's portion of sundry street improvements. Due ten years from date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

6. $5,000.00 of bonds to pay property portion of improving 19th street NW. from Cleveland avenue to Frazer avenue NW. Due five years from date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum.

7. $5,000.00 of bonds to pay city's portion of improving 19th street NW. Due in five years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

8. $1,600.00 of bonds for sanitary sewer in Lawn avenue NW. from Tuscarawas street west to Seventh street NW. Due five years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

9. $5,500.00 of bonds for the purpose of purchasing an auto service and ladder truck for the Central Fire Department of the city of Canton. Due ten years after date, March 1, 1915, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

I here call the commission's attention to the fact that the copy of the resolution adopted by the commission on May 24, 1915, recites that bonds to the amount of $85,100.00 were purchased from the finance committee of the city of Canton, Ohio. The itemized list of bonds purchased by the commission, as set forth in the resolution, amounts in the aggregate to $79,600.00,—the last mentioned series, above described, to wit $5,500.00 of bonds for the purpose of purchasing an auto service and ladder truck, being omitted. I assume that this was a clerical mistake in your office, and that the commission agreed to purchase bonds aggregating $85,100.00, as above listed.

I also call attention to the fact that the $5,000.00 issue mentioned above to pay the city's portion of improving 19th street NW. is in reality a part of an issue of $8,400.00 of bonds to pay the city's portion of the cost and expense of improving 19th street N. W. from Cleveland avenue NW. to Frazer avenue NW., and of Schroyer avenue SW. from Tuscarawas street west to Sixth street SW. and Third street SW. from the B. & O. Railroad to Schroyer avenue SW.

I have examined the several transcripts of the proceedings of council and other officers of the city of Canton relative to the bond issues above enumerated, which completed transcripts were submitted to me under date of July 7, 1915, and I am of the opinion that the proceedings of the council and other officers of the said village have been regular and in conformity with statutory requirements; that no limitation, either constitutional or statutory, of indebtedness or taxation has been exceeded in the issuance of said bonds; that proper provision has been made in the legislation of the city council for the levying and collecting annually a sufficient tax to pay interest and provide a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds as they become due; and that said bonds, when properly prepared and executed, will be valid and binding obligations of the said city.

As I have had no opportunity of examining the bonds and coupon form, I suggest that when the same are delivered that you submit them to me for my approval as to form and execution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 7—REGULATES LOANING OF MONEY ON PERSONAL PROPERTY—NO EXPENDITURE OF FUNDS CAN BE MADE UNTIL ACT BECOMES OPERATIVE ALTHOUGH APPROPRIATION BILL CARRIES AN AMOUNT FOR PURPOSE OF MAKING IT EFFECTIVE.

Sections 6346-1 to 6346-7, G. C., as amended and supplemented by the addition of sections 6346-8 to 6346-10, G. C., by amended senate bill No. 7, passed May 7, 1915, do not become operative until August 11, 1915, and no expenditure of the funds or incurring of obligations for the purpose of putting the provisions of said sections into effect can be made until August 11, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 8, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "On August 11, 1915, section 6346 of the General Code, providing for the regulation for the loaning of money on personal property, etc., becomes operative. The general assembly appropriated certain funds for the use of this department and the appropriation is available as of July 1, 1915. Would you please advise us as to whether or not we can legally proceed to organize this department and use the funds made available for the use of the department before the law actually becomes operative?
> "If this cannot be done, would we be permitted to employ the man now and pay him after the law becomes effective for services rendered prior to that date?"

As stated in your letter, the act regulating and licensing the loaning of money on personal property, salaries, etc., will, unless a referendum petition be filed, become operative August 11, 1915. Until that date the law remains dormant, and in the meantime no duty is imposed upon any person or company engaged in the business toward which the act is directed, and no authority to act under its provisions is conferred upon your department.

The fact that funds appropriated by the general assembly for a specific purpose in the act are, under the terms of the appropriation bill, available cannot hasten into operation the provisions of a law which requires the expenditure of such funds for its proper administration. It will be presumed that the legislature intended that such appropriation should be available and ready for use when the law under which the expenditure of such fund is to be made becomes operative. Money appropriated by the legislature can only be disbursed for lawfully authorized purposes, and the purpose of the expenditures concerning which you enquire will not be authorized until August 11, 1915, and thereafter.

I am therefore of the opinion that your department has no authority to spend any of the funds appropriated by the general assembly for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of law mentioned in your letter before August 11, 1915. Neither have you authority to employ a man for that purpose now and then after the law becomes effective pay him for services rendered prior to August 11, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION IS AUTHORIZED TO MAKE REGULATIONS TO PREVENT SPREAD OF INSECT PESTS AND PLANT DISEASES—GYPSY MOTH.

Under the provisions of the agricultural commission act, particularly sections 1122, 1123 and 1134, G. C., the agricultural commission is authorized to make regulations and cause suitable measures to be taken for the prevention and eradication of insect pests and plant diseases within the state. This authority extends to the taking of such measures as are reasonable and necessary to prevent the development and spread of the gypsy moth from any premises which there is good cause to believe are infested with the eggs or larvae of such insect.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

The Agricultural Commission of Ohio, Division of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 29, 1915, you request my written opinion upon the following statement of facts and inquiry:

> "In attempting to control an outbreak of gypsy moth in Bratenahl village, Cuyahoga county, we have met with opposition on the part of one property owner in the infected area.
> "In hauling some boulders, received from New England, from the railway siding at Bratenahl along the boulevards, to one of the estates, eggs of the gypsy moth with which the boulders were infested were scattered along the way. The principal measure to pursue in preventing the establishment of this pest was to thoroughly spray all trees along these boulevards and those on the estate adjoining. This work has been done in co-operation with the village council and with the federal authorities connected with this work. Willing co-operation was given by all property owners with the exception of the instance given above, where strenuous objection has been made by the owner, Mr. C. H. Gale, a Cleveland attorney.
> "The agricultural commission desires your written opinion as to the proper course for it to pursue. Has our commission the authority within the law as stated either in sections 1123 or 1134, to spray these premises or to force the owner to do so?
> "It is true that no evidence of the insect has been found to be present on these premises. The nature and habits of the gypsy moth are such that spraying must be done before the larvae appear. It is impossible to destroy them by spraying after they have developed to any extent.

"The agricultural commission considers this insect the most dangerous and destructive known and its establishment within the state would be a calamity.

"A prompt opinion as to the proper course for this commission to pursue in the matter will be appreciated."

Sections 1122 to 1140, G. C., inclusive, of the agricultural commission act, so called, 103 O. L., page 304, et seq., provide, among other things, that the agricultural commission of Ohio shall be authorized to make regulations and cause suitable measures to be taken for the prevention and eradication of insect pests and plant diseases within the state.

While the provisions of the aforesaid legislation relate for the most part to the inspection of orchards and nurseries and the fumigation and treatment of nursery stock found to be infested or infected with insect pests or plant diseases, yet I am of the opinion that the scope of the authority conferred is not restricted to such inspection and treatment of nursery stock, but from certain of the provisions of the aforesaid sections, it is clear to my mind that a general authority to investigate outbreaks of insect pests and plant diseases within the state and to take suitable measures for their eradication and control is intended to be conferred.

Section 1122, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 313, provides:

"The agricultural commission may make such regulations as it deems necessary for the prevention and control of insect pests or plant diseases. The term 'nursery stock' as used in the section herein relating to nursery and orchard inspection, includes trees, shrubs, plants, vines, buds, scions and cuttings commonly grown in nurseries and orchards except greenhouse plants and cuttings thereof, bulbs, flowers and vegetable plants. The terms 'insect pests' and 'plant diseases' as used in such section include San Jose scale, peach yellows, black knot and other dangerously injurious insect pests and plant diseases."

Section 1123, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 313, provides:

"The agricultural commission shall appoint a competent entomologist as chief inspector and such assistant inspectors as it deems proper. The agricultural commission shall have charge of the inspection of nurseries, orchards and all other premises whereon trees, shrubs, plants and vines are grown, except greenhouse plants and cuttings thereof, bulbs, flowers and vegetable plants. It may investigate, or cause to be investigated, outbreaks of insect pests or plant diseases, cause suitable measures to be taken for their eradication or control, devise, test and demonstrate practical remedies for their suppression, and publish the results of such investigations, together with such other information as it deems necessary."

Section 1134, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., page 316, provides in part:

"Upon the application of a nurseryman or other person for inspection as provided in section 47, (1125, G. C.) or upon the written request of a free-holder or lessee resident of this state, the agricultural commission shall cause nursery stock and premises of the applicant or petitioner and all premises in dangerous proximity thereto, to be examined. In the prosecu> tion of official duties the agricultural commission may enter within reasonable hours upon any premises or into any building containing nursery stock. If an examination discloses the presence of insect pests or plant diseases, the agricultural commission shall notify the owner or lessee of the premises of such fact by mailing a notice to his usual postoffice address. The notice shall specify the nursery stock to which treatment shall be applied and the time within which the order of the agricultural commission must be complied with. * * *"

It will be observed that certain of the language above quoted is appropriate to evidence and express a legislative intent to vest in the agricultural commission a general authority to take necessary measures for combating invasions or outbreaks of destructive insect pests within the state, and must be so interpreted unless restricted by other provisions of the act. As above noted, the act makes provision somewhat in detail in relation to the inspection and treatment of "nursery stock," but I am unable to find that any of such provisions have the force of limiting the more general language of the act to the scope comprehended by that term, while some of the language above quoted seems clearly to relate to subject matter outside or in addition to that comprehended by the term "nursery stock" as defined in these statutes.

You state in your letter that the gypsy moth is a most destructive and dangerous insect and the only effective and practical means for its destruction or for preventing its spread from the infected district along the boulevard where the eggs have been scattered is to spray the trees along and adjacent to such boulevard and it is therefore assumed that this insect is one that attacks and injures trees, including as well, no doubt, those of the character commonly grown in orchards and nurseries, as other kinds of trees and vegetation.

Hence it may fairly be determined that the gypsy moth is properly regarded as an "insect pest" within the classification comprehended by that term, as defined in the statutes.

The agricultural commission is charged with the exercise of a public function primarily for the protection and conservation of the trees and vegetation of the state against the injury and destruction that would result or that may be reasonably anticipated from the establishment or spread of insect pests or plant diseases within its borders.

It is now well settled that the legislature in the exercise of the police power, is authorized to enact such reasonable measures as are necessary and appropriate to preserve and protect the public health, safety and welfare including the authority to delegate the administration and enforcement of the policy of the state so enacted to an appropriate agency of the government, with discretion as to the means and measures to be adopted for the accomplishment of the desired result. While there has been no judicial determination of the question presented by you, yet the decision of the supreme court in the case of The State Board of Health et al., v. The City of Greenville et al., 86 O. S., page 1, is upon a very similar question. In the course of the opinion the court said:

> "This particular legislation now under consideration is designed to preserve and protect the public health and comfort, and therefore, falls directly within the police power of the state. This power includes anything which is reasonable and necessary to secure the peace, safety, health and best interests of the public.
> "This legislation * * * creates this state board of health as an agency to assist the legislature in that important function of government looking to the preservation of public health and comfort and authorizes it to determine what will best conduce to such ends."

The court sustained the constitutionality of the law and the powers therein conferred upon the state board of health.

It is observed from your statement that no evidence of the presence of the insect on the premises in question has been found, but that the said premises are adjacent to the boulevard over which the infected boulders were conveyed and along which the eggs of the moth were scattered; and further that the nature and habits of the gypsy moth are such that spraying must be done before the larvae appear to effect their destruction as it is practically impossible to destroy them after they have developed to any extent.

Whether or not the probability of the presence of these moths on the premises in question, under the facts and circumstances as you may find them to exist, is sufficiently strong to constitute a menace to the adjacent estates and community and the state at large is a question of fact that must be first determined; and only in the event of its determination in the affirmative, of course, could the measure contemplated by the inquiry be considered a necessary or reasonable one.

But in such event it is entirely possible, in view of the nature and habits of the insect, that the proper or even the only effective and practicable way to combat the establishment and spread of the moth within the state, would be to take such precautionary measures against its development as that suggested by you.

Having determined that there is such a probability of the presence of the eggs or larvae of the moth upon the premises of Attorney Gale, as to menace the adjoining estates and threaten a spread of the moth through the state at large, the measures to be adopted for combating and preventing its spread are within the discretion of the agricultural commission, subject only to the limitation that the action and measures taken by the commission must be necessary and reasonable, having regard to the nature and habits of the insect and the means appropriate and effective for its destruction.

There being no judicial decision in this state amounting to a direct precedent for the interpretation to be given the provisions of the legislation under consideration, and the said legislation not being entirely clear and specific, the determination of the scope of the authority conferred upon the agricultural commission is not at all free from difficulty, but in view of the apparent purpose of the legislation to confer authority to combat and prevent the establishment and spread of dangerous and destructive insect pests and plant diseases within the state, I am of the opinion that the agricultural commission should proceed to exercise the authority as above interpreted until there has been a judicial determination to the contrary.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

PLATS—DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—APPROVAL OF PLATS LOCATED WITHIN THREE MILES OF A CITY—COUNTY RECORDER.

Where it is desired to plat lands located within three miles of the corporate limits of a city, and within the same county, a plat of such lands is not entitled to record in the recorder's office of such county until the approval of the director of public service of said city is endorsed thereon, and the above rule is not changed by the fact that such lands adjoin a village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of June 30 and July 3, 1915, in which you state that it is planned to plat certain lands in Scioto county and that the lands in question are without the corporate limits of the village of New Boston, but adjacent to said village and within three miles of the city of Portsmouth. The east corporation line of the city of Portsmouth and the west corporation line of the village of New Boston are identical. The lands which it is now desired to plat are also adjacent to another allotment which is adjacent to the east corporation line of the village of New Boston. You inquire whether the approval of the director of public service of the city of Portsmouth or the approval of the village council of New Boston must be endorsed on the plat before it can be recorded, and cite sections 4346 and 3586 of the General Code, as bearing on the question, and also call my attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, rendered to Hon. F. J. Rockwell, prosecuting attorney of Summit county, November 25, 1910.

Section 4346, G. C., to which you refer, provides, among other things, that the director of public service shall be the platting commissioner of the city and that when any person plats any lands within three miles of the corporate limits of a city, the platting commissioner shall, if they are in accordance with the rules as prescribed by him, endorse his written approval thereon, and that no plat of such land shall be entitled to record in the recorder's office in the county in which such city is located, without such written approval so endorsed thereon; provided that the approval of the platting commission of a city shall not be required unless such city is the nearest to the lands sought to be allotted.

An examination of section 3586, to which you refer, discloses the fact that while the section applies to both cities and villages, it can have no application to the facts now under consideration for the reason that it extends only to lands located within a municipal corporation and has no application, where the lands which it is desired to plat are located outside of a municipal corporation.

Your inquiry is therefore to be answered solely with reference to the provisions of section 4346, G. C.

I assume that the lands to which you refer are located in Scioto county. The lands being within three miles of the corporate limits of the city of Portsmouth and not being located within any other municipal corporation, and the city of Portsmouth being the nearest city to such lands, it follows that no plat of such lands is entitled to record in the recorder's office of Scioto county until the approval of the director of public service of the city of Portsmouth is endorsed thereon. In other words, New Boston being a village instead of a city, the provision that the approval of the platting commission of a city shall not be required unless such city is nearest to the lands sought to be allotted, has no application, it evidently being the intention of the legislature to limit extra territorial jurisdiction in this matter to cities and to deny the same to villages.

The opinion of my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, to which you refer, was based upon the fact that in that instance the platted lands were located within a village and also within three miles of a city, and it was very properly held under such facts, that section 3586, G. C., was to be taken as the controlling section and that section 4346, G. C., had no application. The opinion herein expressed is in full accord with that expressed by former Attorney General Denman, the opposite conclusion being reached by reason of the fact that in the case considered by him the lands in question were within the village while in the case now under consideration the lands are located without the corporate limits of the village.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY MEMORIAL BUILDING—WHAT CONSTITUTES "COMPLETION" OF SUCH BUILDING.

A memorial building, constructed under authority of sections 3059 et seq., G. C., is completed within the meaning of section 3068, G. C., when all the labor has been performed and material furnished according to the plans and specifications prepared by the trustees in charge of the construction of said building and adopted by them as required by section 3066, G. C., upon which the contract for said construction is based.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 15th you request my opinion as follows:

> "A memorial building to commemorate the services of the soldiers, sailors, marines and pioneers, is being erected in Clark county, at a cost not to exceed $250,000.00, as authorized by sections 3059 et. seq., G. C.
> "The building will be turned over to the county commissioners as authorized by section 3068, G. C.
>
> "Said section provides in substance, that the commissioners shall provide for the maintenance, equipment, decorations and furnishing thereof, the cost of which shall not exceed $25,000.00.
> "Said last named section also authorizes the trustees of the memorial building to turn over to the county commissioners such building upon completion.
>
> "The building when completed will contain pipes for lighting by gas, and wiring for lighting by electricity. It will contain pipes for heat, which can be heated by a furnace in said building or by the heat furnished by connection with the City Light, Heat and Power Company.
> "The question is, what is a completion of the memorial building? Are the trustees of the memorial building to install the chandeliers for lighting? Are the trustees of the memorial building to install a furnace and smoke stack for heating?"

Section 3068, G. C., provides:

"Upon completion of the memorial building the trustees shall turn it over to the county commissioners, who shall provide for the maintenance, equipment, decoration and furnishing thereof, not to exceed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars in the same manner as they are authorized to care for and maintain other property of the county. The board of commissioners of the county, in addition to all other levies authorized by law, shall levy an annual tax in the year 1910, and annually thereafter to care for such building, and to make such improvements thereof as are necessary to carry out the purposes for which it was constructed. They may permit the occupancy and use of the memorial building, or any part thereof, upon such terms as they deem proper."

Upon the completion of the Clark county memorial building, constructed under authority of sections 3059 et. seq., of the General Code, the trustees are required to turn said building over to the commissioners of said county and it is the duty of said commissioners under the above provision of section 3068, G. C., to provide for the maintenance, equipment, decoration and furnishing thereof, and to expend for this purpose an amount not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars.

As I view it said buildings will be completed, in so far as the trustees are concerned, when all the labor has been performed and material furnished according to the plans and specifications prepared by said trustees and adopted by them as required by section 3066, G. C., upon which the contract for the construction of said building was based. From your statement of facts it appears that when the construction of said building has been completed according to said plans and specifications, it can be lighted by either gas or electricity, or both, and said building will contain pipes for heating which may be furnished from the furnace set in the room provided therefor, or by connecting said pipes with the heating plant of the City Light, Heat & Power Company.

I assume that the specifications adopted by the trustees of said building, and which were a part of the contract for the construction thereof, do not require the contractor to equip said building with lighting fixtures and a heating plant. The placing of said lighting fixtures and a heating plant in said building properly come under the head of the equipment of said building within the meaning of the above provision of the statute.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your question, that after said building is turned over to the county commissioners it will be the duty of said commissioners under the above provision of section 3068, G. C., to equip said building with lighting fixtures and to provide for the heating of said building either by establishing a heating plant therein or by connecting the pipes in said building with the heating plant of the municipal light, heat and power company.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—HOUSE BILL NO. 493 IN 103 O. L., 549, CONSTITUTIONAL—ACT DOES NOT PROVIDE FOR NOTICE TO ABUTTING PROPERTY WHERE ROAD SUPERINTENDENTS DESTROY BRUSH IN THE ROADS.

House bill No. 493 found in 103 O. L., 549, and being sections 7148 to 7148-2, G. C., is a constitutional and valid enactment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. GEORGE C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 6, 1915, in which you ask my opinion as to whether or not house bill No. 493, found in 103 O. L., 549, and being sections 7148 to 7148-2 inclusive, of the General Code, can be enforced to the extent of certifying to the county auditor the amount of the cost of work done under section 7148, G. C.

Your inquiry is evidently designed to raise the question of the constitutionality of house bill No. 493 passed by the general assembly May 18, 1913, upon the ground and for the reason that no provision is made in such act for notice to the owner of abutting property. Section 7146, G. C., which was in force prior to the passage of the act above referred to, provides that pike superintendents, turnpike directors, road superintendents and street commissioners shall destroy all brush, etc., within the limits of roads, streets or alleys within their jurisdiction, the work to be done between the 1st and 20th days of June, and between the 1st and 20th days of August, and if necessary between the 1st and 20th days of September of each year.

Sections 7148 and 7148-1, G. C., as enacted in house bill No. 493, read as follows:

> "Sec. 7148. The superintendent of such road shall allow a land owner or tenant to destroy such brush, briars, burrs, vines, thistles or other noxious weeds, growing or being on such roads along the lands abutting thereon, owned or occupied by such land owner or tenant. Such land owner or tenant shall do the work or cause it to be done before the first day of the month in which it is required to be done as specified in section 7146. In case such owner or tenant fails to comply with section 7146 and the foregoing provisions of this section, the superintendent of roads or turnpikes shall do the work or cause it to be done.
> "Sec. 7148-1. When such work is done by the superintendent the township trustees shall certify to the auditor of the county the amount of the cost of the work with the expense thereto attached, and a correct description of the land upon which the work was performed, and the auditor shall place the amount upon the tax duplicate to be collected as other taxes. The county treasurer shall pay the amount when collected to the township treasurer as other funds."

An examination of the files of this office discloses the fact that a similar question was passed upon by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion rendered to Hon. G. G. O. Pence, member of the house of representatives. The opinion in question being rendered on February 18, 1913, and being found at page 24 of the annual report of the attorney general for that year.

This opinion was rendered in response to a request for an opinion as to the constitutionality of house bill No. 198, which bill was very similar to house bill No. 493, and in holding that the proposed measure was constitutional the then attorney general used the following language:

> "It is a well established principle of law that acts of the legislature are presumed to be constitutional and valid, and the courts will not declare them unconstitutional unless it is clearly made to appear that they are so. I see no reason for holding house bill No. 198 unconstitutional. In my judgment it comes within the police power of the state, being a measure for the preservation of the public health, convenience and welfare."

I concur in the opinion expressed by my predecessor, and therefore hold that house bill No. 493, as found in 103 O. L., 549, is a constitutional and valid enactment and that all the provisions of the same may be lawfully enforced.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF A RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT HAVING SUBMITTED TO A VOTE THE PROPOSITION OF DISSOLVING SAID DISTRICT AND JOINING WITH A CONTIGUOUS RURAL OR VILLAGE DISTRICT WHICH VOTE IS UNFAVORABLE MAY AGAIN SUBMIT QUESTION UPON PETITION OF ELECTORS.

Where the board of education of a rural school district under authority of section 4735-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 138, submits to a vote of the qualified electors of said district the proposition of dissolving said district and joining it to a contiguous rural or village school district, and the vote is unfavorable thereto, upon the petition signed by not less than one-fourth of the electors residing in said district, said board of education may again submit said proposition to a vote of the electors of said district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 1st requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The Gratis township rural school district, Preble county, Ohio, in May or June of this year, voted on the question to dissolve and join or annex to West Elkton village school district. This vote was taken because a petition signed by twenty-five per cent. of the electors of said rural school was presented to the board of education, as provided in section 4735-1, of the General Code, of Ohio. The proposition to dissolve was defeated by one vote. Afterwards another petition signed by twenty-five per cent. of the qualified electors of said Gratis rural school district was presented to said board of education and another vote was taken on said petition. On the second vote the proposition to dissolve was carried by something like fifteen votes. At a meeting last night the question was raised by some of the members of Gratis rural school district whether the election was legal because the petition for the vote on dissolution (the second petition) was not signed by more than twenty-five per cent. of the electors. I told the board that I did not think that the second petition under section 4735-1 had to be signed by more than twenty-five per cent. of the voters. Some of the members said that they had been told that the second petition would have to be signed by forty per cent. of the electors of the rural district. I cannot find any law for this proposition on the question of dissolution but can find where you have to have forty per cent. on a second vote on the question of centralization, but this is not a question of centralization but one of dissolution and we cannot see that section 4726 has anything to do with the question of dissolution. Will you please take this matter up and let us have your opinion at the earliest possible date as the village board will have to provide conveyances if the election is legal and this will have to be looked after soon or the school will suffer by the delay."

Section 4735-1, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 138, provides:

"When a petition signed by not less than one-fourth of the electors residing within the territory constituting a rural school district, praying that the rural district be dissolved and joined to a contiguous rural or village district, is presented to the board of education of such district; or when such board, by a majority vote of the full membership thereof, shall decide to submit the question to dissolve and join a contiguous rural or village district, the board shall fix the time of holding such election at a special or general election. The clerk of the board of such district shall notify the deputy state supervisors of elections, of the date of such election and the purposes thereof, and such deputy state supervisors shall provide therefor. The clerk of the board of education shall post notices thereof in five public places within the district. The result shall be determined by a majority vote of such electors."

It appears that in compliance with the provisions of this statute one-fourth of the electors of Gratis township rural school district in Preble county signed a petition which was presented to the board of education of such district, praying that said rural school district be dissolved and joined to West Elkton village school district, and the question being submitted to a vote of the electors of said district, the proposition to dissolve was defeated by one vote. It further appears that a second petition signed by twenty-five per cent. of the qualified electors of said township rural school district was presented to said board of education and that upon submitting the proposition to dissolve and to annex said rural district to said village school district, to the vote of the electors the majority vote was in favor of said proposition. You inquire whether the second petition, above referred to, as signed by twenty-five per cent. of the electors of said rural school district, was a compliance with the statute or whether said petition had to be signed by forty per cent. of the electors of said rural school district.

The provision of section 4726, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 139, governing the percentage of electors who must sign a petition for the resubmission of the question of centralization in a rural school district after the proposition to centralize has been submitted to the electors of such district and has been defeated, has nothing to do with the procedure to dissolve a rural school district and join it to another contiguous thereto. The only provisions of the statute applicable to such procedure are found in section 4735-1, G. C., as above quoted.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your question, that the petition for the resubmission to the electors of Gratis township rural school district of the proposition to dissolve said district and join it to West Elkton village school district, as signed by twenty-five per cent. of the electors of said rural school district, complied with the requirements of said section 4735-1, G. C., and that the action of the board of education of said rural school district was authorized by said statute. The election was therefore legal providing said board of education complied with the other requirements of the statute governing the submission of said question to a vote of the electors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GOVERNOR—NOT REQUIRED TO ISSUE PROCLAMATION TO HAVE LIMA STATE HOSPITAL OPENED—GOVERNOR AND SECRETARY OF STATE REQUIRED TO ISSUE CERTIFICATE TO EACH OF COURTS OF STATE THAT HOSPITAL IS OPEN TO RECEIVE PATIENTS.

The law does not require the governor of Ohio to issue a proclamation stating that the Lima State Hospital is open and ready for the reception of inmates, but does require a certificate of the governor and secretary of state to the courts to that effect. Form of certificate suggested.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Under date of July 2nd you requested my opinion on the following matters:

> (1) "Does the law require the governor of Ohio to issue a proclamation stating that the Lima State Hospital is open and ready for the care of patients before the courts are authorized to commit criminal insane to that institution?
> (2) "If so, in order that there may be no mistake about the matter, I very respectfully request that you indicate the proper form of such proclamation."

The statute under which the Lima State Hospital was erected is found in the 98th volume of Ohio Laws, page 236, and is entitled "An act to provide for the erection, organization and management of the Lima State Hospital for Insane."

Section 1 of said act provides that the hospital shall be known as "The Lima State Hospital."

Section 25 thereof provided as follows:

> "This act shall go into effect on and after its passage, except that the provisions of sections twelve (12) to fifteen (15), inclusive, shall not have the force of law until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of insane, which fact shall then be certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

Section 12 of said act provided for "persons not indicted because of insanity."

Section 13 provided for "disposition of insane under indictment."

Section 14 provided for "persons acquitted because of insanity."

Section 15 provided for "commitment of insane persons previously convicted for certain crimes."

Sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 of the original act, are now found in the General Code of Ohio, under sectional numbers 2003, 13577, 13614, 13615 and 13679. Original section 25 of the act was repealed at the time of codification, but the provisions thereof were incorporated in the various sections of the General Code hereinbefore referred to.

Section 2003, G. C., reads as follows:

> "When in an inquest of lunacy a judge of the probate court finds to be insane a person theretofore convicted of arson, assault, rape, robbery, burglary, homicide, or attempt to commit such acts, he shall commit such person to the Lima State Hospital if ready for the reception of inmates, which fact shall be certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

Section 13577, G. C., reads as follows:

> "If a grand jury upon investigation of a person accused of crime finds such person to be insane, it shall report such finding to the court of common pleas. Such court shall order a jury to be impaneled to try whether or not the accused is sane at the time of such impaneling, and such court and jury shall proceed in a like manner as provided by law when the question of the sanity of a person indicted for an offense is raised at any time before sentence. If such person is then found to be insane, he shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital until restored to reason. This section shall not be in force and effect until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates as certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

Section 13614, G. C., reads as follows:

> "If a person under indictment appearing to be insane, proceedings shall be had as provided for persons not indicted because of insanity. If such person is found to be insane he shall be admitted to the Lima State Hospital and restored to reason when the president thereof shall notify the prosecuting attorney of the proper county who shall proceed, as provided by law, with the trial of such person under indictment."

Section 13615, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The next preceding section shall not be in force and effect until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates as certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

Section 13679, G. C., reads as follows:

> "When a person tried upon an indictment for an offense is acquitted on the sole ground that he was insane and proceedings are had thereafter as provided by law, he shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital. This section shall not be in force and effect until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates as certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state.

Under section 2003, supra, the probate court is to commit the person thereunder to the Lima State Hospital, if ready for the reception of inmates, the fact of the hospital being so ready to be certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state.

Section 13577 provides that a person found insane thereunder shall be committed to the Lima State Hospital, but that such section shall not be in force until the Lima State Hospital is ready for the reception of inmates, as certified to by the governor and secretary of state.

Section 13615 provides that section 13614 shall not be in effect until such certificate is given.

Section 13679 provides that such section shall not be in force until a certificate is given.

Nowhere, however, is there any provision for a proclamation to be issued by the governor.

"Proclamation" is defined in 32 Cyc., 571, as follows:

> "The act of proclaiming; a declaration or notice by public outcry; a public notice in writing given by a state or city official of some act done by the government, or to be done by the people; the act of causing some state matters to be published or made generally known; a written or printed document in which are contained such matters issued by proper authority; a notice publicly given of anything whereof the executive thinks fit to inform and notify the public; a publication by authority; an official notice given to the public."

New Standard Dictionary:

> "Proclamation: (Law) An official public notification by some executive authority of the occurrence of an event important to the public, or of command, caution, or warning in relation to a matter impending."

The statutes only provide for a certificate by the governor and secretary of state to the courts. Nowhere is there found any intent on the part of the legislature that the public generally shall be informed of the fact of the opening of the Lima State Hospital. And such certificate is only for the purposes mentioned in the sections of the General Code hereinbefore set out and for the information of the courts of this state, which would have jurisdiction in the matter.

Therefore, in answering your first question, I would state that the governor of Ohio is not required by law to issue a proclamation in regard to the matter, but that he and the secretary of state are required to issue a certificate to each of the courts of the state that the Lima State Hospital is now ready for the reception of inmates.

(2) You request me to indicate the proper form of a proclamation.

Herewith I indicate what to my mind would be a proper form of the certificate to be issued to the courts:

> "We, Frank B. Willis, as governor of the state of Ohio, and Charles

Q. Hildebrant, as secretary of state of the state of Ohio, in pursuance of the authority in us vested by law, do hereby certify that the Lima State Hospital is now ready for the reception of inmates.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I, Frank B. Willis, as governor of the state of Ohio, have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the great seal of the state of Ohio, and I, Charles Q. Hildebrant, as secretary of state of the state of Ohio, have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal, at Columbus, Ohio, this ----------day of ----------A. D., 1915.

"----------

"(Great Seal of the State of Ohio) Governor of Ohio.

"----------

"(Seal of Secretary of State) Secretary of State."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUSPENSION OF SENTENCE—POWER OF COURTS TO SUSPEND SENTENCE OF A PERSON WHO HAD THERETOFORE BEEN IMPRISONED FOR CRIME—DECISION IN 83 O. S., 447, FOLLOWED.

Following the decision in State v. Whiting, 83 O. S., 447 (decided without opinion). Courts have power to suspend the sentence of a person who had theretofore been imprisoned for crime, and place the defendant on probation notwithstanding the provisions of section 13706, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. A. M. HENDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 1, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

"Section 13706 of the General Code reads as follows:

"'In prosecutions for crime, except as hereinafter provided, where the defendant has pleaded or been found guilty, and the court or magistrate has power to sentence such defendant to be confined in or committed to the penitentiary, the reformatory, a jail, workhouse, or correctional institution, and the defendant has never before been imprisoned for crime, either in this state or elsewhere, and it appears to the satisfaction of the court or magistrate that the character of the defendant and circumstances of the case are such that he is not likely again to engage in an offensive course of conduct, and that the public good does not demand or require that he shall suffer the penalty imposed by law, such court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and place the defendant on probation in the manner provided by law.'

"One A. F. Clause was indicted by our grand jury for grand larceny and upon arraignment entered a plea of guilty to this charge. This man has a wife and seven children totally dependent upon him for support. He has heretofore been in prison for crime. The trial judge believes that the character of the defendant and the circumstances of the case are such that he is not likely again to engage in an offensive course of conduct and that the public good demands that he shall not suffer the penalty imposed by law, but the court has considerable doubt as to his right and power to invoke the terms of this statute in this case, although, owing to the dependent condition of his family upon the defendant, he is desirous of taking advantage of this law, if it can be done legally. Judge Anderson has suggested that I communicate with you for the purpose of securing an expression of opinion from you covering this question."

The question presented by you is clearly covered by section 13706 of the General Code, quoted by you, and under the provisions of that section, if recognized and enforced by the courts, the defendant, having been heretofore imprisoned for crime, is not eligible to be placed on probation.

However, in answering your question, it is necessary to take into consideration the case of State of Ohio v. Jeanette Whiting, decided at the 1910 term of the supreme court of this state and reported without opinion in 83 O. S., 447.

That case originated in the common pleas court of the fourth judicial district of the state of Ohio and was tried before Hon. R. M. Wanamaker, then judge of the common pleas court in that district. Jeanette Whiting was indicted by the grand jury of Summit county on a charge of cutting with intent to wound. She was tried and convicted and Judge Wanamaker sentenced her to be imprisoned in the penitentiary of this state for the period of two years and to pay the costs of prosecution, which sentence was suspended by the court in the following language:

"It is further ordered and adjudged by the court notwithstanding the fact that said defendant has heretofore at about the 30th day of July, 1907, been imprisoned in the workhouse at Cleveland this state, as punishment for the offense of unlawfully cutting another person, that the sentence herein imposed imprisoning the defendant in the penitentiary of this state be suspended upon the following conditions, to wit:

"1st. That said defendant pay or cause to be paid to the satisfaction of the clerk of this court the costs in this case.

"2nd. That said defendant report to this court every six months hereafter and bring with her affidavits of her parents and employers showing that she has been guilty of no violation of law and has lived an upright, sober, industrious and moral life, which reports are to continue for the period of two years at which time the court will make further order as to the conditions of the suspension of the sentence herein. The court in making the above suspension does not make the same under authority of an act entitled, "An act to provide for probation of persons convicted of felonies and misdemeanors," but does so under claimed inherent authority on the part of the court to suspend such sentence. To all of which order of suspension the prosecuting attorney on behalf of the state of Ohio here and now excepts."

The prosecuting attorney, on leave, filed a bill of exceptions in the supreme court on the sole question of the power of the court to suspend said sentence in the face of undisputed evidence that the defendant had been theretofore imprisoned for crime.

The briefs filed in the case show that this was the only question under consideration, the prosecuting attorney contending that the court was bound to observe the provisions of section 13706 of the General Code, quoted above, and the attorney for the defendant claiming that the suspension was justified by reason of the inherent power of the court to suspend the sentence.

As stated above, the case was decided by the supreme court October 11, 1910, without opinion, overruling the exceptions of the prosecuting attorney, Crew, Davis, Shauck and Price, judges, concurring.

In the absence of an opinion by the court it is, of course, impossible to say absolutely what the grounds of the decision were, but, as there was only one question raised in the case, it is safe to assume that the decision was based on the claimed inherent right of the court to suspend the sentence.

Therefore, in the light of this decision and until it is overruled by the supreme court, I am compelled to advise you that, notwithstanding the plain provisions of sections 13706, et seq., of the General Code, the court has the inherent power to suspend the sentence of the defendant in question. The entry should show that the suspension is made under the inherent power of the court and not under the statute.

This opinion is based solely upon the Whiting decision, above referred to, and my duty to follow the decisions of the supreme court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS—BONDS OF MUNICIPALITIES OF OTHER STATES CAN BE DEPOSITED AS SECURITY FOR MUNICIPAL FUNDS WITH A BANK ACTING AS DEPOSITORY OF SUCH MUNICIPAL FUND.

Legally issued bonds of cities and villages of any state or territory of the United States may be accepted by the proper municipal officers as security for municipal funds deposited with a bank which has been legally designated as a depository of such municipal funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 8, 1915, as follows:

> "Would you please advise us as to whether or not bonds of municipalities of states, other than Ohio, can be used as security for municipal funds in this state?
> "Section 4295 of the General Code seems to make it perfectly clear that they can be used as security for all moneys other than state funds. However, we are asking for your opinion for our future guidance."

I take it from the language of your letter that you desire my opinion as to whether or not the proper municipal officers of an Ohio municipality are authorized to accept as security for municipal funds deposited in a bank which has been properly designated as a municipal depository, legally issued bonds of any city or village of any other state or territory of the United States.

Section 4295 of the General Code, referred to in your letter, (103 O. L., 113) is as follows:

> "The council may provide by ordinance for the deposit of all public moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer, in such bank or banks, situated within the municipality or county, as offer, at competitive bidding, the highest rate of interest and give a good and sufficient bond issued by a surety company authorized to do business in the state, or furnish good and sufficient surety, or secure said moneys by a deposit of bonds or other interest bearing obligations of the United States or those for the payments of principal and interest of which the faith of the United States is pledged, including bonds of the District of Columbia; bonds of the state of Ohio or of any other state of the United States; legally issued bonds of any city, village, county, township or other political subdivision of this or any other state or territory of the United States and as to which there has been no default of principal, interest or coupons, and which in the opinion of the treasurer are good and collectible providing the issuing body politic has not defaulted at any time since the year 1900, in the payment of the principal and interest of any of its bonds, said security to be subject to the approval of the proper municipal officers, in a sum not less than ten per cent. in excess of the maximum amount at any time to be deposited. And whenever any of the funds of any of the political subdivisions of the state shall be deposited under any of the depository laws of the state, the securities herein mentioned, in addition to such other securities as are prescribed by law, may be accepted to secure such deposits."

The language of the section above quoted, relative to the question submitted, is clear and susceptible of but one interpretation.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that legally issued bonds of any city or village of any other state or territory of the United States, as to which bonds "there has been no default of principal, interest or coupons, and which in the opinion of the treasurer are good and collectible providing the issuing body politic has not defaulted at any time since the year 1900 in the payment of the principal and (or) interest of any of its bonds, said security to be subject to the approval of the proper municipal officers," may be accepted by the proper officers of an Ohio municipality as security for municipal funds deposited in a bank which has been lawfully designated as a depository for such municipal funds. The bank having such bonds as security should furnish information by certificate or otherwise to the satisfaction of the municipal officers showing that such securities meet the requirements of the language above quoted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—ASSISTANT FOR TAX COMMISSION—IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE IF PRACTICABLE TO DETERMINE MERIT AND FITNESS BY COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION—PRACTICABILITY TO BE DETERMINED BY STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The position of assistant for the tax commission, for which an appropriation of $900.00 is made by house bill No. 701, is in the classified service of the state civil service if it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations. The question of whether or not it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations is one to be determined by the state civil service commission, its determination to be based upon the nature of the duties to be performed by the assistant in question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication under date of July 6, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "House bill No. 701, line 2440 on page 100, provides for the appointment of an assistant. This has no reference whatever to line 2439, and should be construed by itself.
>
> "The duties to be performed by this assistant are those of a general nature, ranging from messenger to typist, and are impossible to classify. The civil service commission have informed this commission that they have no position under that name.
> "This commission would ask your opinion as to whether or not said assistant is in the classified service."

The item contained in house bill No. 701, and which is referred to in the above quoted communication as line 2440, is as follows:

"Assistant ----------$900.00".

The item contained in said bill and which is referred to in the above quoted communication, as line 2439, which item immediately precedes the one above referred to, is as follows:

"Corporation Accountant ----------$2,400.00."

Waiving for the purpose of this opinion any question as to whether the assistant for which an appropriation of $900.00 is made is an assistant to the corporation accountant or an assistant who is to perform such general duties as may be assigned to him by the tax commission, and adopting the view of the tax commission as to this feature of the matter, which is that the item referred to as line 2440 has no reference whatever to the item referred to as line 2439 and should be construed by itself, the inquiry of the tax commission then is as to whether the position of assistant, for which the appropriation now under consideration was made, is in the classified or unclassified service.

Section 4861-8 of the General Code, being section 8 of the civil service law now in force, provides as follows:

"The civil service of the state of Ohio and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof shall be divided into the unclassified service and the classified service.

"(a) The unclassified service shall comprise the following positions which shall not be included in the classified service, except as otherwise provided in section 19 hereof:

"1. All officers elected by popular vote.

"2. All heads of principal departments, boards and commissions appointed by the governor or by and with his consent or by the mayor, or if there be no mayor such other similar chief appointing authority of any city or city school district.

"3. All officers elected by either or both branches of the general assembly.

"4. All election officers.

"5. All commissioned, non-commissioned officers and enlisted men in the military service of the state.

"6. All presidents, superintendents, directors, teachers and instructors in the public schools, colleges and universities; the library staff of any library in the state supported wholly or in part at public expense.

"7. Two secretaries or assistants or clerks for each of the elective and principal executive officers, boards or commissions, except civil service commissions, authorized by law to appoint such a secretary, assistant or chief clerk.

"8. The deputies of elective or principal executive officers authorized by law to act generally for and in place of their principals and holding a fiduciary relation to such principals.

"9. Bailiffs of courts of record.

"10. Employes and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections.

"(b) The classified service shall comprise all persons in the employ of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, not specifically included in the unclassified service, to be designated as the competitive class.

"1. The competitive class shall include all positions and employments now existing or hereafter created in the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations. Appointments shall be made to, or employment shall be given in, all positions in the competitive class that are not filed by promotion, reinstatement, transfer or reduction, as provided in sections 15, 16 and 17 of this act and the rules of the commission, by appointment from those certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of section 13 of this act."

It is evident from an examination of the ten subdivisions of the unclassified service that the position now under consideration does not fall within any of such subdivisions unless it be the 7th, and I learn by inquiry that the tax commission has already selected two other secretaries, assistants or clerks and designated the same as in the unclassified service. It therefore follows that the position of assistant now under consideration is within the classified service or competitive class, under the provisions of the section above quoted, if it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants for such position by competitive examinations. The fact that the state civil service commission has not as yet held any examinations for a position under this name and therefore has at present no eligible list, and the further fact that the duties to be performed by such assistant are of a general nature ranging from messenger to typist, and that the position does not therefore fall under any of the classifications so far adopted by the state civil service commission, are all immaterial in the present inquiry, and in the absence of further and more explicit information, I am unable to say, as a matter of law, that the position in question is or is not within the classified service. The question to be determined is as to whether or not it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations and that fact is one to be determined by the state civil service commission, its determination to be based upon the nature of the duties to be performed by the assistant in question. In the absence of an abuse of discretion, the finding of the civil service commission will be final.

Until the civil service commission finds that it is not practicable to determine the merit and fitness of an applicant by competitive examination, the position must be considered to be within the classified service.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—LEVIES—THREE MILL LIMITATION—LEVY BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO BE PAID ON TAXABLE PROPERTY OF TOWNSHIP IS NOT LEVY MADE BY TAXING OFFICIALS OF TOWNSHIP FOR TOWNSHIP PURPOSES—TWO MILL LIMITATION—TEN MILL LIMITATION—FIFTEEN MILL LIMITATION.

The levy made by the commissioners of a county, under authority of section 6956-14, G. C., to pay the county's proportion of the cost of improvements made under authority of sections 6956-1, et seq., G. C., is not one of the levies enumerated in section 5649-3a, G. C., and excluded by the provision of said statute from the three mill limitation for county purposes therein provided, and said levy must therefore come within said limitation.

The levy made by said county commissioners on the taxable property of a township in which an improvement is located, in whole or in part, to pay the proportion of the cost of said improvement apportioned to said township by said county commissioners, under authority of section 6956-10, G. C., is not a levy made by the taxing officials of the township for township purposes, within the meaning of section 5649-3a, G. C., and said levy does not have to come within the two mill limitation for township purposes provided by said section.

Each of the levies above referred to must come within the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 552 and the 15 mill limitation provided by section 5649-3b as amended in 103 O. L., 57.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of July 1, 1915, in which you request my opinion on the following questions:

"1. May the county's share of the cost of the construction of a road, improved under the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-16, inclusive, be levied over and above the three mill limitation for county purposes, as provided by section 5649-3a?

"2. May the township's portion of such cost be levied in excess of the two mill limitation provided by said section 5649-3a?

"3. May either of such levies be in excess of either the ten mill or the fifteen mill limitation of the so-called one per cent. law?"

Section 6956-10, G. C., relates to the apportionment of the cost of improving a county road by the commissioners of such county under authority of sections 6956-1 to 6956-16, inclusive, of the General Code, and provides as follows:

"When the improvement is wholly within one county, the cost and expense of said improvement including all damages and compensation awarded shall be apportioned by the commissioners as follows: Not less than thirty-five per cent. (35%) nor more than fifty per cent. (50%) thereof shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property of the county, or out of any funds available therefor, as provided in section 6956-14 of this act; not less than twenty-five per cent. (25%) nor more than forty per cent. (40%) thereof shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of the county levied upon the taxable property of any township or townships in which said improvement may be situated in whole or in part, as provided in section 6956-14 of this act; and the balance, which shall not be less than twenty per cent. (20%) nor more than thirty-five per cent. (35%) thereof shall be assessed upon and collected from the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement and assessed according to benefits derived from the improvement as determined by the commissioners. Such assessment shall be in addition to all other assessments authorized by law notwithstanding any limitations upon the aggregate amount of assessments on such property."

Section 6956-11, G. C., provides:

"When any part of the improvement is in more than one county or along the line between two or more counties, the cost and expense of the entire improvement including all damages and compensation awarded shall be divided between the counties in which such improvement may be in the proportion the distance in such county bears to the whole distance improved, and the amount of expense so falling upon the several counties shall be assessed by the commissioners of said counties separately in the same manner and form as though the improvement was wholly in one and the same county, and in the proportion provided in the preceding section."

Section 6956-14, G. C., provides:

"The said proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement to be paid by the county shall be paid out of the state and county road improvement fund or out of any road, road improvement or road repair fund of the county available therefor. If there are not sufficient funds available therefor, then for the purpose of providing by taxation funds for the payment of the county's proportion of the cost and expense of all the improvements made under the provisions of this act, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy upon all the taxable property of the county a tax or taxes not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year the sum of one mill upon each dollar of the valuation of the taxable property in the county. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force. For the purpose of providing by taxation funds for the payment of said proportion of the cost and expense of all improvements made under the provisions of this act to be paid by the township or townships in which such road improvement may be situated in whole or in part, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy upon all the taxable property of any township or townships in which such road improvement is situated, in whole or in part, a tax not exceeding ten mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of the taxable property in such township or townships. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force."

You inquire whether a levy made by the commissioners of a county, under authority of section 6956-14, G. C., to pay its proportion of the cost and expense of improving a county road under sections 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, as apportioned by the said county commissioners, under authority of section 6956-10, G. C., must come within the three mill limitation for county purposes, as provided in section 5649-3a, G. C.

Section 5649-3a provides in part as follows:

"* * * The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a county, for county purposes, on the taxable property in the county on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year three mills. The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a municipal corporation on the taxable property in the corporation, for corporation purposes, on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year five mills. The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a township, for township purposes, on the taxable property in the township on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year two mills. The local tax levy for all school purposes shall not exceed in any one year five mills on the dollar of valuation of taxable property in any school district. Such limits for county, township, municipal and school levies shall be exclusive of any special levy, provided for by a vote of the electors, special assessments, levies for road taxes that may be worked out by the taxpayers, and levies and assessments in special districts created for road or ditch improvements, over which the budget commissioners shall have no control. * * *"

Section 5649-3a, G. C., is a part of the act of the general assembly known as the Smith one per cent. law, which became effective June 2, 1911. Being of subsequent enactment to the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-15, inclusive, of the General Code, known as the Braun law, passed by the general assembly May 10, 1910, and which became effective May 17, 1910, the provisions of said law, limiting tax levies in the various taxing districts of a county, must control. It follows, therefore, that, insofar as section 6956-14, G. C., is in conflict with said limitations, said section must be held to be repealed by implication by the provisions of section 5649-2 to section 5649-5b, inclusive, of the General Code.

In the case of Rabe et al v. Board of Education, 88 O. S., 403, the syllabus provides in part:

"1. Sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, General Code, inclusive, limit the rate of taxes that can be levied in any taxing district for any and all purposes. Any statutes existing at the time of the passage of these sections, in direct conflict therewith and not specifically repealed thereby, are repealed by implication.

"2. These sections of the General Code furnish the basis of calculation for the issue of bonds in anticipation of income from taxes levied or to be levied."

The provision of section 6956-14, G. C., limiting the levy which the commissioners of a county may make to pay the county's proportion of the cost of improvements, made under authority of sections 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, to one mill in any one year, is not in conflict with the limitations provided by sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, inclusive, of the General Code, and is therefore in full force and effect at the present time, but the provision of section 6956-14, limiting the levy which said county commissioners are authorized to make on the taxable property of a township in which said road improvement is located, in whole or in part, for the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement, made under the provisions of sections 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, to be paid by said township, to ten mills in any one year, is clearly in conflict with the provisions of said sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, inclusive, of the General Code, and is therefore repealed by implication.

Inasmuch as the levy made by the county commissioners, under authority of said section 6956-14, G. C., to pay the county's proportion of the cost of improvements made under authority of sections 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, is not one of the levies enumerated in the latter part of the provision of section 5649-3a, G. C., above quoted, and which are excluded by said provision of said statute from the three mill limitation for county purposes therein provided, I am of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that said levy must come within said limitation.

The levy made by the commissioners of a county under authority of section 6956-14, G. C., on the taxable property of a township in which an improvement is located, in whole or in part, to pay the proportion of the cost of said improvement apportioned to said township by said county commissioners, under authority of section 6956-10, G. C., is not a levy made by the taxing officials of a township for township purposes, within the meaning of section 5649-3a, G. C. The trustees of said township have nothing whatever to do with the proceedings of the county commissioners in making said improvement and have no control over the levy made by the county commissioners on the taxable property of said township.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that said levy does not have to come within the two mill limitation for township purposes, provided by said section 5649-3a, G. C.

Replying to your third question, I am of the opinion that, inasmuch as neither one of the levies referred to in your inquiry is made by the county commissioners for sinking fund purposes to pay the principal and interest of indebtedness incurred prior to June 2, 1911, or thereafter incurred by a bond of the people, each of said levies must come within the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 552. Inasmuch as neither of said levies comes within the exceptions to the fifteen mill limitation which is provided by section 5649-5b, as amended in 103 O. L., 57, I am of the opinion that each of said levies must come within said limitation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ADJUTANT GENERAL—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO FURNISH RATIONS OR OTHER SUPPLIES FOR RELIEF OF DESTITUTE MINERS—NO SPECIFIC APPROPRIATION.

There is no authority in law for the state of Ohio to furnish rations or other supplies for the relief of destitute miners as no specific appropriation has been made by the general assembly for such purpose.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—In reply to your letter of June 30th, I wish to state that after a very careful search of the statutes I am unable to find any lawful way in which rations or other supplies can be furnished by the state of Ohio, through the office of the adjutant general or otherwise, for the relief of destitute miners, no specific appropriation having been made by the general assembly for that purpose.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—LIBRARY STAFF—MESSENGER WITH CERTAIN DUTIES IS IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE.

The messenger in the state library, whose duties are as follows:

"Handles all mail and all shipments whether by freight or express, looks after the newspaper files, prepares magazines and other periodicals for the state bindery, has charge of supplies, plates, new books, and assists in keeping the property of the library clean and orderly,"

is a member of the library staff of the state library, and is, therefore, in the unclassified service under section 486-8 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1915.

Board of Library Commissioners, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of request for opinion from Hon. C. B. Galbreath, state librarian, under date of June 28, 1915, as follows:

"I am asking your opinion relative to the appointment of janitors and messengers under the board of library commissioners. I desire to know whether or not such employes are in the classified service.

"In an opinion rendered by your office December 8, 1914, a copy of which is on file in this office, I find that the question involved seems to be answered in the following language:

"'The term 'library staff' does not necessarily mean all the employes of the library and if the legislature had intended to exempt all the employes of a library, it could have easily so expressed it. It is my conclusion that the library staff does not include all the employes of the library. It includes those employes which have to do with the handling of the books. It means something more than a janitor or porter.'

"Are we to understand that the board of library commissioners must employ a janitor or messenger from eligible applicants certified by the civil service commission?"

In response to a request for further information relative to the employment of a janitor by the board of library commissioners we were advised by Mr. Galbreath, under date of July 6, 1915, that there was no appropriation made for a janitor either in the state library or the traveling library and, in view of that fact, of course the question of the employment of a janitor is eliminated from Mr. Galbreath's former request.

I am also advised by Mr. Galbreath, under date of July 10, 1915, in response to an inquiry from this office as to the duties of the messenger, as follows:

"The messenger handles all mail and all shipments whether by freight or express, looks after the newspaper files, prepares magazines and other periodicals for the state bindery, has charge of supplies, plates, new books and assists in keeping the property of the library clean and orderly."

In Mr. Galbreath's letter of June 28th he cites and quotes from an opinion of this department under date of December 8, 1914, being opinion No. 1282, copy of which he states is on file in his office. That opinion is in part as follows:

"Section 8 of the civil service act, section 486-8, General Code, places ten classes of positions in the unclassified service. In subdivision 6 (a) the following are placed in the unclassified service:

"All presidents, superintendents, directors, teachers and instructors in the public schools, colleges and universities; the library staff of any library in the state supported wholly or in part at public expense.

"The library in question is supported at public expense. This is shown by section 14995, General Code, hereinafter quoted. Therefore, by virtue of section 8, subdivision 6 (a) of the civil service act the 'library staff' of the public library in Cincinnati is in the unclassified service.

"The term 'library staff' is not defined by the civil service act. It must be given its ordinary meaning.

"In section 8 of the civil service act the legislature has used the words 'employes,' 'clerks' and 'officers,' and it is to be presumed that the legislature had in mind these terms when it adopted the provision as to a 'library staff.' If the legislature had used the word 'employes' or the words 'employes and officers,' there could be no doubt as to the intention.

"The term 'library staff' does not necessarily mean all the employes of the library, and if the legislature had intended to exempt all the employes of a library, it could have easily so expressed it.

"It is my conclusion that the term 'library staff' does not include all the employes of a library. It includes those employes who have to do with the handling of the books. It means something more than a janitor or a porter."

While the opinion above quoted was not directed to the specific question involved here, the question in that case being whether the state civil service commission or the municipal civil service commission had jurisdiction over employes of the Cincinnati library, that library being "supported wholly or in part at public expense," yet it became necessary in answering that question to determine whether any of the employes of such a library were in the classified civil service, and the distinction between members of the "library staff" and other employes of the library was made.

I agree with the reasoning of that opinion and with the definition therein contained as to what constitutes the "library staff." The duties of the messenger in the state library, as outlined above, bring him within the definition and make him a member of the library staff.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that such messenger is in the unclassified service and that it is not necessary that he be selected from eligible lists certified by the civil service commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL NO. 657 UNCONSTITUTIONAL—ACT AUTHORIZING BOARD OF EDUCATION OF PICKAWAY COUNTY TO PAY SAMUEL M. SARK CERTAIN AMOUNT, RETROACTIVE.

The provisions of house bill No. 657, as passed by the general assembly May 27th, and approved by the governor May 29, 1915, are in conflict with that part of section 28, article 2 of the constitution, which provides that: "The general assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws," and said special act is therefore unconstitutional.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1915.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of June 10, 1915, enclosing certain memoranda, including a copy of the opinion of Judge Goldsberry of the court of common pleas of Pickaway county in the case of Samuel M. Sark, plaintiff, v. John H. Cook, O. P. Clutts and J. S. Worrall, defendants, No. 13478 in said court, also a copy of the opinion of the court of appeals of the fourth appellate district of Ohio.

You request my opinion as to the constitutionality of house bill No. 657, as passed by the general assembly May 27th, and approved by the governor May 29, 1915, entitled "an act to authorize the board of education of Pickaway county to pay Samuel M. Sark for services as district superintendent of schools in said county."

This act provides as follows:

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of Ohio; section 1, that the board of education of Pickaway county, Ohio, be and is hereby authorized and directed to allow and pay to Samuel M. Sark, out of any funds under its control not otherwise appropriated the sum of four hundred and sixteen dollars and sixty-six cents, being the amount of his salary for the period from August 1, 1914, to January 1, 1915, as district superintendent for the supervision district composed of Muhlenberg and Monroe townships in said county of Pickaway. Upon the order of the said county board of education, the clerk of said board is hereby authorized and directed to issue his duplicate warrant in favor of Samuel M. Sark for the above amount."

The facts in connection with the above controversy are briefly and concisely stated by Judge Goldsberry in his opinion, as follows:

"It appears from the agreed statement of facts that at a joint meeting of the board of education of Muhlenberg and Monroe townships, held July 24, 1914, said townships agreed to join to form a supervision district and that plaintiff was by said joint supervision district employed as superintendent thereof at a salary of one thousand dollars for the school year 1914-1915; that a certificate of said joinder of said townships into a supervision district and the employment of plaintiff by the said boards of education of said townships, as aforesaid, was, on July 24, 1914, delivered to O. M. Dick, a member of the county board of education of Pickaway county, Ohio, and that the same was by him filed with the county auditor of said county on July 25, 1914, and which was before the county board took any action dividing the county into supervision districts; that for the school year 1913-1914, Muhlenberg township rural school district employed A. J. Dunkel as superintendent of its schools, and said A. J. Dunkel served and acted as such for said school year; that for the school year 1913-1914, Monroe township rural school district employed Earl D. Wolfe as superintendent of its schools and that said Earl D. Wolfe served and acted as such until November 14, 1913, on which date he resigned and that no person was employed thereafter by the board of education of said Monroe township rural school district to act as superintendent of its schools for the remainder of said school year and no person served as such superintendent for said school year from and after November 14, 1913; that prior to July 24, 1914, the board of education of Muhlenberg township rural school district had not employed a superintendent for its schools for the school year 1914-1915. And that prior to July 24, 1914, the board of education of Monroe township rural school district had not employed a superintendent for its schools for the school year 1914-1915; that said Muhlenberg and Monroe township rural school districts are contiguous districts and join each other.

* * * * * * * * *

"It is admitted that the school district formed by the union of Muhlenberg and Monroe townships has duly certified that it will employ a superintendent and that it duly applied to the county board of education to continue it as a separate supervision district.

* * * * * * * * *

"The county board of education of Pickaway county, Ohio, on September 9, 1914, annexed Muhlenberg rural school district for supervision purposes to Jackson township rural school district, of which last named school district O. P. Clutts, one of the defendants herein, is superintendent, and that said board of education on September 9, 1914, annexed Monroe township rural school district to Deer Creek township rural school district, of which last named school district J. S. Worrall, one of the defendants herein, is superintendent."

After a careful consideration of the statutes applicable to the facts Judge Goldsberry held that, after May 21, 1914, (the date when the new school law, so-called, became effective) the township rural school districts of Muhlenberg and Monroe could not unite to form a school district for supervision purposes; that the county board of education was authorized to annex Muhlenberg township rural school district to Jackson township rural school district for supervision purposes, and to annex Monroe township rural school district to Deer Creek township rural school district for supervision purposes; under authority of section 4740, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 141, which provides in part as follows:

"Any school district or districts, having less than twenty teachers isolated from the remainder of the county school district by supervision districts provided for in this section, shall be joined for supervision purposes to one or more of such supervision districts, but the superintendent or superintendents already employed in such supervision district or districts shall be in charge of the enlarged supervision district or districts until a vacancy occurs."

The agreed statement of facts submitted in said case showed that said township rural school districts were isolated from the remainder of the county school district within the meaning of the above provision of section 4740, G. C., and employed less than twenty teachers.

The court denied the injunction prayed for by the plaintiff and dismissed his petition. The case was then appealed to the court of appeals for the fourth appellate district, and that court affirmed the judgment of the court of common pleas.

Under the provision of the act above referred to it will be observed that the board of education of Pickaway county is authorized and directed to pay the claim of the said Samuel M. Sark "out of any funds under its control not otherwise appropriated."

The only fund under the control of the county board of education is the "county board of education fund" which is derived from the following sources:

(1) Under section 4744-3, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 143, which provides:

"The county auditor when making his semi-annual apportionment of the school funds to the various village and rural school districts shall retain the amounts necessary to pay such portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents as may be certified by the county board. Such amount shall be placed in a separate fund to be known as the "County board of education fund." The county board of education shall certify under oath to the state auditor the amount due from the state as its share of the salaries of the county and district superintendents of such county school district for the next six months. Upon receipt by the state auditor of such certificate, he shall draw his warrant upon the state treasurer in favor of the county treasurer for the required amount, which shall be placed by the county auditor in the county board of education fund."

(2) From fees collected from applicants for examination, by the board of county school examiners under authority of section 7820, G. C., 104 O. L., 104.

(3) From the surplus transferable from the dog tax fund under section 5653, G. C., 104 O. L., 145, by direction of the county commissioners.

The principal source of the county board of education fund is the one first above mentioned and under the provision of section 4744-3, G. C., as amended and as above quoted, it will be observed that the amount realized from this source is limited to the salaries of the county and district superintendents as certified to the county auditor by the county board of education. Inasmuch as the salaries of the county and district superintendents of Pickaway county, including the salaries of the said O. P. Clutts and the said J. S. Worrall, have been paid out of the county board of education fund of said county, it is evident that the only money in said fund at this time, if any, must have been derived from the second and third sources above mentioned.

In view of the fact that, under provisions of the statutes several other expenditures must be made out of said fund, such as the actual and necessary expenses of members of the county board and county superintendent incurred in attendance upon any meeting of said board (section 4734, G. C., 104 O. L., 137), the allowance to the county superintendent for traveling expenses and clerical help (section 4744-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 143), and the expenses of conducting the county teachers' institute (section 7860, G. C., 104 O. L., 156), I am unable to see how the county board of education would have sufficient money in the county treasury to the credit of the county board of education fund, at the time said special act would become effective, out of which the claim of Samuel M. Sark might be paid, assuming that said act is valid. In this connection the fact must be borne in mind that the county board of education has no authority in law to levy a tax for any purpose and no additional authority would be conferred by the provisions of said house bill No. 657.

However, under the decisions of the courts above referred to, the supervision district composed of Muhlenberg and Monroe township rural school districts, and the office of district superintendent of such supervision district never existed. Said rural school districts were properly annexed to adjoining supervision districts for supervision purposes, the schools of said rural school districts were supervised for said year 1914-1915, and said districts contributed their proper shares of the salaries of the district superintendents, who were lawfully employed to supervise said adjoining supervision districts and were regularly certified to the county auditor by the county board of education. The salaries of said superintendents were also certified to said county auditor who performed the duties required of him by the above provisions of section 4744-3, G. C., when making his semi-annual apportionment of the school funds to the various village and rural school districts, by retaining the amount necessary to pay such portion of the salaries of the county and district superintendents as was certified to him by said county board of education.

From the agreed statement of facts in the above case it appears that on September 10, 1914, Mr. Sark was duly notified by the county board of education of its action in annexing said township rural school districts to said adjoining supervision districts for supervision purposes.

It seems clear, therefore, that there is not now and never has been either a legal or moral obligation on the part of the county board of education to pay the claim of Mr. Sark.

If I am correct in this conclusion the question naturally arises has the legislature power by a special act to authorize and direct the county board of education of Pickaway county to pay said claim; in other words, does the special act above referred to violate any provision of the constitution of Ohio?

It is well settled that a statute should never be declared unconstitutional by the courts if the case can be disposed of on any other tenable grounds; that the presumption is always in favor of the validity of a law and it is only when there is a clear usurpation of power, or a manifest assumption of authority, or a clear incompatibility between the constitution and the law that judicial tribunals will refuse to execute it. Ireland v. Turnpike, 19 O. S., 369; State v. Garver, 13 O. C. D., 140; State ex rel. v. Baker, 55 O. S., 1.

> "Statutes are always presumed to be constitutional and this presumption will be indulged in by the courts until the contrary is clearly shown. This rule is one of universal application and the principle is equally well established that statutes will be construed, whenever, wherever, it is possible to do so, so that they shall harmonize with the constitution, to the end that they may be sustained." 8 Cyc. 801, Senior v. Ratterman, 44 O. S., 661.

The answer to your question, however, calls for an opinion as to the constitutionality of said house bill No. 657, and you call my attention to the provision of section 28 of article 2 of the constitution, which provides in part:

> "The general assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws or laws impairing the obligation of contracts."

In the case of Rairden & Burnet v. Holden, Admr., etc., 15 O. S., 207, the court, in commenting on the above provision of the constitution, said:

> "Since the introduction of this prohibition into the fundamental law of our state, this court has not had occasion to define it; and so far as we are aware no similar provision is to be found in the constitution of any of the states of the union, except in that of New Hampshire, which declared that 'retrospective laws are highly injurious, oppressive and unjust. No such laws should, therefore, be made either for the decision of civil cases, or the punishment of offenses.' The words 'retrospective' and 'retroactive' as applied to laws, seem to be synonymous; and as such they are used interchangeably by Mr. Sedgwick in his treatise on Constitutional Law. In The Society v. Wheeler, 2 Gallison's R., 139, a case arising under the constitution and laws of New Hampshire, Mr. Justice Story thus defines a retrospective law. 'Upon principle, every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights, acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disabilty, in respect to transactions or considerations already passed, must be deemed retrospective.' * * *
> "Judge Story's definition of 'retrospective laws' was quoted with approval by the superior court of judicature of New Hampshire in Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. R., 16, and in subsequent cases seems to have been steadily adhered to and to have been accepted as furnishing the proper rule of decision."

In the case of Miller et al. v. Hixson, Treasurer, 64 O. S., 39, the first branch of the syllabus provides:

> "A statute which imposes a new or additional burden, duty, obligation, or liability, as to past transactions, is retroactive, and in conflict with that part of section 28, article 2 of the constitution, which provides that, 'The general assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws.'"

In the case of State v. Board of Education, 22 O. C. C., 244, the court held that the act of the general assembly, as found in 94 O. L., 563, authorizing the board of education of a certain township to pay to the board of education of a special school district set off and created therein a sum of money equal to the equitable share due the latter from the township school funds, was a retroactive law in that it attempted to create and enforce a liability that did not before exist, in violation of section 28, article 2 of the constitution.

The special act of the legislature above referred to, as found in 94 O. L., 563, was as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:
> "Section 1. That the board of education of said Northfield township be hereby authorized to pay to the board of education of said Macedonia special school district said sum of eight hundred and eighty-five dollars and sixty-two cents as the equitable share of said surplus fund due said special school district, being based upon the relative value of the taxable property in said special school district and the taxable property of the entire township."

It will be observed that in the special act above quoted and considered by the court, in the case of State v. Board of Education, supra, the legislature attempted to authorize the board of education of the township to pay to the board of education of the special district set off and created therein the equitable share of the township school funds and the court, for the reason above given, held said act unconstitutional.

It seems clear that inasmuch as the special act in question, by its terms, not only authorizes but directs the board of education of Pickaway county to pay the claim of Samuel M. Sark out of any funds under its control not otherwise appropriated, said special act is in violation of the above provision of the constitution in that it attempts to create and enforce a liability that did not before exist.

While in the case of State ex rel. Ampt, et al. v. Gibson, Treas., etc., 4 O. C. C. (N. S.) 433, it was held that the general assembly may pass an act authorizing a county to pay a demand not legally enforcible, but which, in good conscience, it ought to pay, the constitutionality of the special act in question is not supported by the decision of the court in this case for the reason that there is no moral obligation on the part of the board of education of Pickaway county to pay said claim.

In the case of Board of Education v. State, 51 O. S., 531, the first branch of the syllabus provides:

> "Where no obligation, legal or moral, rests upon a board of education, to pay a claim asserted against it by a private individual, an act of the general assembly, procured by the claimant, commanding such board to levy a tax for its payment is unconstitutional and void."

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to your question that, inasmuch as there is neither a legal nor a moral obligation on the part of said board of education to pay said claim, the legislature was without power to authorize and direct the payment of said claim; that the provisions of house bill No. 657, violate the above provision of the constitution, and that said special act is therefore unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FORM OF RESOLUTION FOR USE UNDER SECTION 13971 OF THE APPENDIX TO THE GENERAL CODE OF OHIO—SALE OF CANAL LANDS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 9, 1915, in which you transmit to me resolutions providing for the sale of certain canal lands in the village of Waverly, Pike county, Ohio. There are two tracts of land involved, each valued at $500.00, and it is proposed to sell one tract to Albert Foster and the other tract to Philip Lorbach, Jr.

I have carefully examined the records of your proceedings in these matters and find that all the jurisdictional facts exist. The adoption of a formal resolution is manifestly an appropriate and proper method by which the governor, attorney general and superintendent of public works may exercise the powers conferred upon them by section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code. It is my opinion, however, that this resolution should recite all the jurisdictional facts and I therefore suggest the substitution of the following form of resolution for the one prepared by you.

Office of the Governor of Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, ----------, 1915.

The governor of Ohio and the attorney general of Ohio, having duly considered the request of John I. Miller, superintendent of public works of Ohio, relating to the sale of a certain described tract of land located in the village of Waverly, Pike county, Ohio, to one Albert Foster, hereby join with said superintendent of public works in the adoption of the following resolution:

WHEREAS, It has been found by John I. Miller, superintendent of public works of the state of Ohio, that the state of Ohio is the owner in fee simple of the following described land, to wit:

That portion of the abandoned Ohio canal property in the village of Waverly, Pike county, Ohio, that lies east of the center line of the state canal property as shown by the survey of said canal made by W. O. Sanzenbacher in the summer of 1912, and commencing at the southwesterly line of Market street in said village, and extending thence southeasterly 175 feet and containing 6,875 square feet, more or less, and,

WHEREAS, It has been found and determined by said superintendent of public works that said land above described is not necessary or required for the use, maintenance and operation of any of the canals of the state, and,

WHEREAS, Said land above described has been found by said superintendent of public works to be of the value of five hundred dollars, and has therefore been appraised by said superintendent of public works at five hundred dollars, and,

WHEREAS, It has been found and determined by said superintendent of public works that said land above described cannot be leased so as to yield six per cent. on said valuation of five hundred dollars, and,

WHEREAS, One, Albert Foster, of Waverly, Pike county, Ohio, is desirious of purchasing said land above described, NOW, THEREFORE,

BE IT RESOLVED: By Frank B. Willis, governor of the state of Ohio; Edward C. Turner, attorney general of the state of Ohio, and John I. Miller, superintendent of public works of the state of Ohio; that the said tract of land above described be and the same hereby is sold at private sale in accordance with the provisions of section 13971 of the Appendix to the General Code of Ohio, to the said Albert Foster, of Waverly, Pike County, Ohio, for the said sum of five hundred dollars ($500.00) in cash, and upon the payment of the purchase money therefor to the treasurer of state, the auditor of state is directed to prepare a deed for the same for execution by the governor, conveying said land to said Albert Foster, reserving, however, to the state of Ohio all oil, gas, coal or other minerals on or under the land herein sold, with the right of entry in and upon said premises for the purpose of selling or leasing the same, or prosecuting, developing or operating the same.

Governor of Ohio.

Attorney General of Ohio.

Superintendent of Public Works of Ohio.

It will be noted that the form of resolution suggested by me is so worded as to apply to the contemplated sale to Albert Foster, but it will serve as a sufficient guide to you in the preparation of a resolution relating to the other contemplated sale.

When the papers relating to these matters, which I herewith return to you, are returned to me with the modification above suggested, I will be glad to take such action as may appear to be proper in the premises.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF CONTROL OF OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—ALL CONTROL WAS TRANSFERRED TO SAID BOARD FROM AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION BY HOUSE BILL NO. 163—WHEN IN EFFECT.

House bill No. 163 which was filed in the office of the secretary of state April 8, 1915, and went into effect on July 8, 1915, transferred to the board of control therein authorized to be created, all control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station and on the taking effect of the same all authority of the agricultural commission over said experiment station ceased.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1915.

The Agricultural Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion, under date of July 9, 1915, as follows:

"Under house bill No. 163, passed April 6, 1915, approved April 8, 1915, filed in the office of secretary of state April 8, 1915, the control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station was transferred from the agricultural commission of Ohio to the board of control, appointed by the governor of the state.

. QUESTION. Will the control of said station remain with the agricultural commission until the new board qualifies, organizes and certifies to the agricultural commission that it is duly organized and ready to assume control?"

House bill No. 163, to which you refer, went into effect July 8, 1915. Sections 1 and 2 of the act provide:

"Section 1. There shall be a state agricultural experiment station for the benefit of practical and scientific agriculture and the development of the agricultural resources of the state. It shall be known as the 'Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.'

"Section 2. The state agricultural experiment station shall be under the supervision and direction of a board of control which shall consist of five members, who shall be practical farmers and who shall be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate, one member to serve for one year, one for two years, one for three years, one for four years and one for five years. Thereafter one member shall be appointed each year who shall hold his office for a term of five years. Not more than three members shall belong to the same political party."

Section 6 of the same act provides:

"Section 6. The board of control shall appoint a director, who shall be a person of acknowledged ability and training in the principles and practice of scientific agriculture. It shall fix the terms of office and salaries of all officers and employes of the station and upon written charge for good and sufficient cause may remove them. The director shall have control of the affairs of the station, and be responsible to the board of control for the management of all of its departments. With the approval of the board of control he shall appoint chiefs of departments, assistants and other employes necessary for the proper management of the station and shall assign them to their respective duties. He may suspend an officer or employe of the station for cause, which suspension with the reasons therefor he shall immediately report to the board of control for its final action."

These and the further sections of this act transfer all the authority over and the control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station from the agricultural commission to the board of control, as therein authorized to be created, and expressly repeal original sections 1174 to 1177, inclusive, and 1177-1 to 1177-11, inclusive, of the General Code (103 O. L., 304), and by necessary implication repeal sections 1170 to 1173, inclusive, of the General Code (103 O. L., 323-324).

In the very nature of things the repealing clause, and repeal by implication, became effective at the same time as the other provisions of the act, on July 8, 1915, so that on that date all authority of management and control of the agricultural experiment station by the agricultural commission ceased.

The fact that a law is not put into execution alone cannot operate to suspend the taking effect of the law and that part of the original law which is by it repealed is dead from the time the repealing clause becomes effective, or those parts of the new enactment which by necessary implication had the effect of repealing the original law may be put into execution.

This case rests on an entirely different basis than those in which an officer is authorized to hold an office and exercise its functions until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified. Here the tenure of no officer is affected. The effect of the act, in the first place, is to abolish the authority of the agricultural commission to exercise certain functions and it is immaterial in that regard that some delay may be occasioned in the exercise of that authority by those on whom it has been conferred.

The fact that in certain cases officers may be authorized to exercise the functions of their office beyond their term does not warrant the conclusion that they may exercise an authority which has itself been abolished.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the authority of the agricultural commission to control, supervise and manage the Ohio agricultural experiment station ceased on July 8, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION—UNION OF TWO RURAL OR RURAL AND VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICTS FOR HIGH SCHOOL PURPOSES—SECTIONS 7669, G. C., ET SEQ., GOVERN.

Where the boards of education of two or more adjoining rural school districts, or of a rural and village school district, unite such districts for high school purposes, under authority of section 7669, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 229, said boards should be governed by the provisions of sections 7669, et seq., of the General Code, and should complete the proceedings commenced by them under said sections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 1, 1915, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "Under section 7669 of the General Code as amended in vol. 104, page 229, two boards of education of this county have united for high school purposes.
> "They do not propose to submit the question of levying a tax on their respective districts for the purpose of erecting a building or purchasing a site therefor, and issue bonds. They have not sufficient money in the treasury to purchase a site and erect a building, neither has either board a suitable building that can be used for high school purposes.
> "They are proposing and have passed the resolution and posted notices for an election under section 7592 of the General Code for an additional tax levy, for the purpose of renting a building for high school purposes and for the maintenance of such school.
> "Sections 7671 and 7672 provide for the maintenance of high schools established under 7669.

"QUERY. May the two boards or joint committee proceed under 7592 as above or must they be governed by 7669-7670-7671-7672?"

In the case of Rabe et al. v. Board of Education of the Canton School District, et al., 88 O. S., 403, the court held:

"The provisions of sections 5649-2, et seq., in reference to the rate that may be levied in any taxing district, are so clearly in conflict with the provisions of sections 7591 and 7592, General Code, that these sections are necessarily repealed by implication."

Inasmuch as the supreme court has held that section 7592, G. C., is no longer in force, the boards of education referred to in your inquiry cannot proceed under said section to provide an additional tax levy for the purpose of renting a building and maintaining a high school for the joint district created under section 7669, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 229.

Under the provision of section 7669, G. C., as amended, each board of education may submit the question of a tax levy for the purpose of providing a site and erecting a building for the joint high school, or, if said boards have sufficient money in their treasury for such purpose, or if there is a suitable building in either district owned by the board of education of said district, that can be used for said high school, said boards are not required to submit said proposition to a vote of the electors.

From your statement of facts it appears that the boards in question do not desire to submit the question of an extra tax levy to a vote of the electors, under authority of section 7669, G. C., as amended, that they have not sufficient money in their treasury available for this purpose and that neither of said boards own a building that can be used for the joint high school.

Said boards cannot proceed under section 7592, G. C., and the question arises—may said boards of education rent a building for high school purposes and if so may they provide for the expenses incident thereto and for maintaining said high school? Under the provision of section 7670, G. C., the management and control of a high school established under authority of section 7669, G. C., as amended, is vested in a committee to be elected by the boards of education as therein provided.

Section 7671, G. C., provides:

"The funds for the maintenance and support of such high school shall be provided by appropriations from the tuition or contingent funds, or both, of each district, in proportion to the total valuation of property in the respective districts, which must be placed in a separate fund in the treasury of the board of education of the district in which the school house is located, and paid out by action of the high school committee for the maintenance of the school."

Section 7672, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 230, provides:

"Boards of education exercising control for the purpose of taxation over territory within a rural or joint rural high school district shall determine by estimate the amount necessary for the maintenance of any rural or joint rural high school to which such territory belongs and shall certify such amount to the county auditor in the annual budget as provided in section 5649-3a. All funds derived from levies so made shall be kept separate and be paid out for the maintenance of the school for which they were made."

I am of the opinion that the boards of education in question have no authority under sections 7669, et seq., of the General Code to rent a building to be used for the joint high school.

The action of said boards in voting to unite for high school purposes is the first step in the proceedings authorized by said section, and I do not think said proceedings will be complete until a building has been acquired in the manner therein provided for or found available for said purposes, and until the committee provided for by section 7670, G. C., has been elected and qualified. It would then be the duty of said board of education, under the provisions of section 7671 and section 7672, G. C., as amended, to provide for the maintenance and support of the high school established in the manner herein set forth. If said boards find that the maximum levy allowed by the county budget commissioners under authority of section 5649-3c, G. C., would not produce sufficient money in the tuition and contingent funds to provide for the additional expenditure of money incident to the maintenance and support of said high school, the question of an additional levy for said purpose might be submitted to the vote of the electors, under authority of section 5649-5 and 5649-5a, G. C., and subject to the limitations of section 5649-5b, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 57.

Even if we were to assume that there is implied authority for said boards of education to rent a building for the joint high school, in view of the fact that there will not be sufficient money in the treasuries of said districts available for this purpose, an additional tax levy would have to be submitted to a vote of the electors in compliance with the requirements of sections 5649-5 and 5649-5a of the General Code, and this could not be done until the regular election in November. No part of the funds derived from the proceeds of said additional tax levy would be available for use until after March 1, 1916.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that inasmuch as said boards of education cannot proceed under section 7592, G. C., they should be governed by the provisions of sections 7669, et seq., of the General Code and should complete the proceedings commenced by them under said sections.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS' DUTY TO SEE THAT NATIONAL BANKS EXERCISING TRUST FUNCTIONS COMPLY WITH OHIO LAWS IN MATTER OF ACCEPTANCE AND EXECUTION OF TRUSTS—AUTHORIZED TO MAKE EXAMINATIONS OF TRUST DEPARTMENTS OF NATIONAL BANKS.

It is the duty of the superintendent of banks to see that national banks, which have elected to exercise trust functions under the authority of section 11-k of the federal reserve act, to comply with the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by Ohio laws upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts.

The superintendent of banks is authorized to make examinations of the trust department of a national bank which has elected to exercise trust functions under section 11-k of the federal reserve act, and which has qualified under the Ohio law to act in such capacity.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 15, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of July 9, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Under the provisions of the federal reserve act, the federal reserve board is authorized: 'To grant by special permit to national banks applying therefor, when not in contravention of state or local law, the right to act as trustee, executor, administrator or registrar of stocks and bonds under such rules and regulations as the said board may prescribe.'
> "Section 9796-3 of the General Code provides: * * * 'and other state banks and national banks may have the same power in the acceptance and execution of trusts which are now conferred by law upon trust companies, upon such state banks and national banks complying with all the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts.'
> "Several national banks have applied for and have been granted permission to exercise this power and the question arises with us, whose duty is it to see that the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of acceptance and execution of trusts are complied with. Should not national banks engaged in this kind of business be required to do so the same as trust companies? Would this department have the right to make an examination of this department of a national bank?"

Section 11-k of the federal reserve act, a part of which is quoted in the first paragraph of your letter, enlarges the scope of possible activities under a national bank franchise. It does not in and of itself confer upon national banks the right to act in any instance as trustee, executor, administrator or registrar of stocks and bonds, but gives to such banks under certain conditions and limitations permissive authority to act in such enlarged capacity in any state, provided the laws of such state do not deny that right.

The purpose of this language of the act was to permit corporations created under federal authority for definite purposes to go beyond the purpose of the specific authority of the articles of incorporation and to perform certain functions in such of the several states as do not by law prohibit the same. The several states are therefore the final arbiters as to whether or not and upon what conditions and subject to what limitations a national bank may perform the functions named in the said act.

Section 9796-3 of the General Code (104 O. L., 186), a part of which is quoted in your letter, clearly sets forth when and under what conditions and terms national banks may act in a trust capacity, to wit:

> "Upon such * * * national banks * * * complying with all the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts * * *."

A national bank, therefore, in order to exercise in Ohio the permissive authority conferred in section 11-k of the federal reserve act must comply with all the requirements, regulations and conditions to which trust companies are subject under the laws of Ohio in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts, otherwise it would be "in contravention of state law" within the meaning of section 11-k of the federal reserve act.

The same duties and authority, therefore, devolve upon your department, relative to trust activities of a national bank when such bank has elected to exercise the charter authority conferred upon it by said section 11-k, as are now performed and exercised by you relative to like activities of trust companies.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is your duty, as superintendent of banks to see that national banks exercising trust functions under section 11-k of the federal reserve act comply with the requirements, regulations and conditions imposed by the laws of Ohio upon trust companies in the matter of the acceptance and execution of trusts; also that such national banks should be required to apply to the superintendent of banks for permission to exercise trust functions in the same manner as trust companies, and that the superintendent of banks has the right to make examinations of this department of a national bank in the same manner and to the same extent that similar examinations of trust companies are authorized or required by Ohio laws.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF MANSFIELD-WOOSTER ROAD, RICHLAND COUNTY, DISAPPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 15, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 12, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution as to the Mansfield-Wooster road in Richland county, petition No. 1136, I. C. H., No. 146.

Permit me to call your attention to the ambiguous wording of the appropriation clause in the resolution of the county commissioners, due to the use of a printed form and the failure to strike out the word "of" and insert the expression "less than." While this defect may not be serious, yet it is one that can be easily and speedily corrected, and I am returning this resolution, therefore, without my approval, with the suggestions that the matter be brought to the attention of the county commissioners of Richland county and that they be requested to adopt a new resolution in the proper form.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—MAY BORROW MONEY TO PAY COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION WHEN LATTER BOARD FURNISHES TRANSPORTATION TO PUPILS OF SAID RURAL DISTRICT.

The board of education of a rural school district may borrow money, under authority of section 5656, G. C., to pay a charge against said district made by the board of education of a county district, in which such rural district is located, in case said county board of education furnishes transportation to pupils of said rural district, as required by section 7731, G. C., as amended, when the local board fails or neglects to furnish such transportation, or to pay for services actually rendered under a contract of employment for this purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 15, 1915.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 7, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "We have in our county a rural school district in which there are a number of pupils living more than two miles from the nearest school and the board of education of that district has made no provision for the transportation of these children to the only school house in this district, which was organized about three years ago as a special school district. The parents of these children have appealed to the county board of education asking them for transportation and the county board is at a loss to know what to do, as the tax levy in this rural district for school purposes is now up to the limit.
> "Section 7731, page 140 of vol. 104 O. L., provides that, 'transportation of pupils living less than two miles from the school house, etc., shall be optional with the board of education.' That, 'In all rural and village districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation,' etc., and this section further provides that the county board of education shall, upon the failure of the local board, provide such transportation and the cost thereof shall be charged against the local school district.
> "The present tax levy, which is up to the limit, provides only enough money to pay the teachers and to provide fuel and other necessary incidental expenses.
> "The board of education of this local school district has already employed teachers not having the requisite qualifications to entitle it to state aid. The question now confronting the county board of education is, as to how it is going to reimburse itself and, under the circumstances and conditions above set out, whether it would be authorized in assuming the responsibility of hauling the children in this local district."

Section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, provides:

"In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school. The transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house, by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education. When transportation of pupils is provided, the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road. When local boards of education neglect or refuse to provide transportation for pupils, the county board of education shall provide such transportation and the cost thereof shall be charged against the local school district."

If the board of education of Highland county furnishes transportation for pupils residing in the rural district in question and living more than two miles from the nearest school, the cost of such transportation must be charged against said rural school district, under the above provision of the statute.

Inasmuch as the board of education of said district is unable, because of its limits of taxation, to provide the necessary fund to pay for the transportation of said pupils or to pay the amount charged against said district by the county board of education, in case said county board furnishes said transportation, the question arises—may the board of education of said rural district borrow money for this purpose under authority of sections 5656, et seq., of the General Code?

I call your attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to Hon. Cheevar W. Pettay, prosecuting attorney of Harrison county, under date of November 5, 1914. The question asked by Mr. Pettay was as follows:

"May a board of education borrow money under section 5656, General Code, to pay for the transportation of pupils?"

Mr. Hogan, after quoting the above provisions of section 7731, G. C., said:

"I would be of the opinion that if transportation were provided for by the hiring of a team and driver, the contract would be only for the employment of a school employe within the meaning of section 5661, General Code. It is at least clear that if the local board of education neglects or refuses to provide transportation and the same is provided by the county board of education and the cost thereof is charged against the local school district, the charge against the district will constitute a legal indebtedness of the district within the meaning of section 5656, General Code.

"It being at least clear, then, that the board of education may borrow to pay a charge against the district on account of transportation when the same is made by the county board of education, and it being reasonably clear (at) least that a contract for furnishing transportation would be a contract of employment, I am of the opinion that a local board of education has power, under section 5656, General Code, to borrow money for this purpose to the extent that transportation may be required by law.

However, as pointed out in my opinion respecting the exercise of the borrowing power for the purpose of paying teachers, it is not competent under his section to borrow money and thus create a fund in advance. The contract must be made with the person who is to provide the transportation and a liquidated liability, under the contract, must be incurred before section 5656 becomes available. This distinction should be carefully observed."

I concur in this opinion and therefore hold that the board of education of the rural school district in question may borrow money under authority of section 5656, G. C., to pay a charge against said district made by the county board of education in case said county board of education furnishes transportation to pupils of said district, as required by section 7731, G. C., as amended, when the local board fails or neglects to furnish such transportation, or to pay for services actually rendered under a contract of employment for this purpose.

A copy of the opinion referred to is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MONEYS FOUND ON BODY OF DECEASED PERSON—HOW PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES WHEN KNOWN, CAN OBTAIN SAME—APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR, STRICTLY LEGAL WAY.

The only strictly legal way in which moneys found on the body of a deceased person, the subject of a coroner's inquest, can be turned over to the personal representatives of the deceased, when known, is through the appointmnt of an administrator.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1915.

HON. FRANK DELAY, Probate Judge, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 23rd, supplementing your request for opinion answered by me on June 19th by the statement of additional facts, and requesting my opinion upon the whole question as thus modified.

In your former letter you stated that a person, the identity of whom was fully established, was found dead in the county and that the coroner, upon inquest, filed in your office an inventory of the property found on the body, accompanied by $17.31 in money. You stated further that the decedent left a wife and young child, and that the undertaker who buried him has a claim for his services.

Upon your request for opinion as to the disposition of the money, you were advised that the same should be paid over to the executor or administrator of the decedent.

You now advise that the deceased person left no property excepting that found on his body, so that the appointment of an administrator would consume in costs the entire estate. That being the case, you now request my opinion as to what shall be done with the money.

In my opinion, the only way in which the probate judge may lawfully dispose of money found on the body of a deceased person, the subject of a coroner's inquest, and returned by the coroner, otherwise than in the manner provided in section 2862 of the General Code, is to pay the same to the executor or administrator of the person.

Whatever may be the practice as to the appointment of an administrator in cases where the estate of the deceased is insignificant in value, the statutes clearly contemplate such appointment, and fail to provide any lawful way of distributing the money in question to the personal representatives of the deceased otherwise than through the executor or administrator.

Therefore, I am unable to add anything to my previous opinion, save the observation that if the court chooses to assume the risk of turning this small sum of money over to whom he believes entitled to it, he would be liable only to such person as would be able to show a better title.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ALLOW EXTRA COMPENSATION TO THE H. E. CULBERTSON COMPANY, UNDER CONTRACT TO IMPROVE CERTAIN SECTIONS OF NATIONAL ROAD.

Upon the facts as submitted by the state highway commissioner, that official has no authority to allow and pay any extra compensation to the H. E. Culbertson Company under its contracts for the improvement of two sections of the National road located in Licking and Muskingum counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

SIR:—I have your communication of May 13, 1915, relating to the contracts entered into by your department with the H. E. Culbertson Company for the improvement of two sections of the National road located in Licking and Muskingum counties. It appears that on the 15th day of April, 1914, the then state highway commissioner opened bids for the construction of a portion of the National road. This portion of the road was to be constructed in two sections; one known as Ohio Post road, National pike, highway G, in Licking county; and the other as Ohio Post road, National pike, highway I, in Muskingum county. The H. E. Culbertson company was awarded the contract for the construction of both sections. Its bid for the work in Licking county was $218,500.00 for the road work and $34,500.00 for drainage structures, and its bid for the work in Muskingum county was $160,400.00 for the road work, and $14,400.00 for the drainage structures. As to the work in both counties, the Culbertson Company agreed to repair all old stone culverts and arches for the cost of labor and materials, plus ten per cent. Written contracts were entered into between the state highway commissioner and the Culbertson Company, and that company began the work of construction and is still engaged on the work. Recently Mr. H. E. Culbertson of the Culbertson Company, presented to you certain claims for extra compensation over and above the contract prices above referred to, and you desire my opinion as to your rights and duties in the premises.

The claims presented on behalf of the Culbertson Company may be classified as follows:

(1) It is claimed on behalf of the company that at the time it submitted bids for building a sixteen foot roadway, certain conversations occurred between the president of the company on the one hand, and the state highway commissioner or his deputies on the other hand, which conversations were to the effect that the Culbertson Company would bid upon the work only in case it was understood that the company should have the full co-operation of the highway department, that the things that the state must do toward the work should be done promptly, and that the company should be given every opportunity to do the work economically. Complaint is made that this agreement on the part of the department to co-operate with the contractor was violated, in that the highway department did not exercise proper diligence in securing the removal of three lines of telegraph and telephone poles from the right of way of the road. The president of the company says that when he discovered that these lines of poles were so situated on the right of way as to prevent economical work in grading, he at once took the matter up with the highway department, but that the department did not exhaust its efforts to get the poles removed until at least three months had elapsed, although very frequently appealed to by the contractor during that time, and then it was some time before the obstructions were out of the way. It is claimed that the presence of these poles and failure of the highway department to secure their removal from the right of way resulted in a considerable added cost to the contractor in the work of grading.

(2) It is further complained that the highway department has been too rigid and has at times been inconsistent in the work of inspecting material to be used on the contract, and that material passed by the inspector at the quarry was rejected when it reached the site of the work. As I understand the facts in this connection, however, the inconsistency complained of was not between the work of different state inspectors, but was between the work of a state inspector and that of a Federal inspector, the presence of the latter being accounted for by the fact that the United States government contributed toward the cost of the improvement. It is claimed that the state inspector passed some material at the quarry, but that a Federal inspector who was on the work refused for a time to allow this material to be used, and the claim is that this inconsistency in the work of inspection resulted in delay and consequent loss to the contractor.

(3) As I understand the claims of the contractor, the principal contention of the company is that the detailed plans showing the work to be done, and upon which the bids of the Culbertson Company were based, lacked the accuracy and care requisite for a contract of this magnitude, that the original cross sections were not taken frequently enough and appear to have been done by men lacking experience, and that, as a result of inaccuracy in the original estimates upon which the bids were based, the contractor has as a matter of fact, according to its claims, had to do substantially more excavating than that shown by the original estimates, the contractor claiming that the excess excavation has amounted to twenty-five per cent. or more. The contractor further claims that another result of this inaccuracy has been that on certain sections of the road the cuts have been taken out as shown on the profile and extended beyond the proposed cross section; and still a great amount of material is lacking to make the bermes as shown, which bermes the material from the cuts was supposed to make. It is also alleged that on certain sections, it was necessary to borrow substantial quantities of earth where the profile showed a substantial waste, this condition also being charged to the alleged inaccuracies in the estimates of quantities. A number of other complaints are made, but as I understand the facts, the things complained of were, according to the contractor, due to the alleged inaccuracies in the original estimates.

(4) The company also claims that in bridge and culvert work the company has handled more foundation excavation and put in more yards of concrete and stone work than the quantities shown by the estimates.

(5) It is also complained of by the company that in placing concrete it was several times necessary to stop the concrete mixer, this stoppage being occasioned by the putting in of cast iron pipe and culverts by force account, or being due to a change of plans, which change would not be decided upon promptly enough to allow the contractor to get the work done without interfering with the actual placing of the concrete.

(6) It is also claimed that the department was not as prompt as it should have been in furnishing grade stakes when needed.

(7) The further claim is made, according to my understanding of the facts, that in at least two or three instances the contractor constructed the sub-grade according to grade stakes furnished by the highway department, and was then required to change the sub-grade to correspond with new grade stakes furnished by the department, which new grade stakes did not check with the ones formerly furnished.

Your communication to me under date of May 13th concludes as follows:

"It would require a considerable expenditure of effort and of public funds on the part of the state highway department to determine the accuracy of the claims advanced by the Culbertson Company. It therefore becomes important for the highway commissioner to know in advance of making an investigation into this matter, just what his rights and duties would be in case it would develop that all or some part of the claims of the Culbertson Company are well founded. If it be the law that the state highway commissioner is authorized to pay additional compensation to a contractor, under the circumstances of this case, then as I see it, it would be my duty to use such members of my staff as might be necessary to make a thorough examination into the facts, for the purpose of determining just how much additional compensation ought to be allowed. If, however, there is no lawful method of allowing additional compensation, assuming that the claims of the Culbertson Company are well founded and that the facts set forth in the communication of Mr. Culbertson to former State Highway Commissioner Marker referred to above, are true, then it would be a useless expenditure of money for the state highway department to employ the time of any of its men in going into the matter and making the required investigation.

"I therefore desire your opinion as to whether or not, assuming that the claims of the Culbertson Company are based upon actual facts, any right exists in the state highway commissioner to pay the company any compensation in addition to the amount of its bids."

In answering your inquiry it becomes necessary in the first instance to examine the law under which these improvements are being carried forward, the same being found in 103 O. L., 155, and being the law creating a system of main market roads, and providing for their construction, improvement, maintenance and repair.

Section 4 of the act in question, being section 6859-4, G. C., provides that the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads shall be executed in such manner and method, and with such materials and in accordance with such plans, details and specifications, as may be adopted by the state highway commissioner with the approval of the governor. It is further provided in this section that no procedure for construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads as is provided for in any other act or acts of the general assembly shall apply to such main market roads.

Subsequent sections of the act expressly authorize the highway commissioner to construct, improve, maintain and repair main market roads by force account and to use convict labor on said roads. At no place in the law is there any direct authorization for the state highway commissioner to invite bids and let contracts for the construction of main market roads, this power being left to an inference based on the extremely broad provisions of section 4 of the act.

In the case now under consideration, the highway commissioner elected to prepare plans, specifications and estimates, make public advertisement of the letting, award the contracts at competitive bidding, and enter into written agreements with the successful bidder, which written agreements, together with the plans and specifications and other similar documents to which reference is made, purport to contain the entire contract between the highway commissioner and the contractor. In other words, the highway commissioner in the making of these improvements elected to proceed in substantially the same way in which the law requires him to proceed in the construction of inter-county highways; and, without herein passing in any way upon the power or authority of the highway commissioner, under favor of the sweeping provisions of section 6859-4, G. C., to modify by subsequent agreement such a written contract as the ones entered into between him and the Culbertson Company and now under consideration, it may be observed that in the matter now under consideration, there is no claim that the original contracts with the Culbertson Company were in any way modified by any subsequent agreement between the highway commission and the company. It would therefore seem clear that since the highway commissioner elected to proceed with this improvement by letting contracts at competitive bidding, the rights of the parties must be determined under the terms of those contracts. It therefore becomes important to examine the terms of the contracts in question, especially in so far as they relate to the claims advanced by the contractor. The terms of the contracts for the improvements in the two counties are identical.

The contracts in question are silent so far as any reference to the removal of telegraph or telephone poles is concerned. It does appear from the specifications which are referred to in the contracts and made a part thereof, that the contractor is to move certain obstructions at his expense, it being provided that the contractor is to move all fences in the line of the work and that grading shall include the grubbing out and clearing away of all trees, stumps and boulders within the lines of the improvement.

As pointed out by me in an opinion rendered to your department on April 30, 1915, section 7524, G. C., places that part of the National road outside of municipalities in the care and control of boards of county commissioners, and by sections 2408 and 2424, G. C., suits growing out of injuries to or obstructions of state and county highways are to be brought by the county commissioners of the proper county. From the above provisions it will be seen that no authority exists in the state highway commissioner to bring any suits for the purpose of securing the removal of telegraph and telephone poles from the public highways of the state. Inasmuch as the contracts in question are absolutely silent with reference to the removal of telegraph and telephone poles, and the specifications which are referred to in said contracts and made a part thereof, provide that the contractor, as a part of its work, shall be required to move all fences in the line of work and to grub out and clear away all trees, stumps and boulders within the lines of the improvement, I am unable to see how, under the terms of said contracts, any authority exists in you to compensate the contractor for losses due to delays caused by the presence of telegraph and telephone poles in the line of the improvement.

As will be later pointed out more specifically, all bidders were requested to carefully examine the site of the proposed improvement and satisfy themselves as to the character of the work, and if the representatives of the contractor in question complied with this request and went over the route of the proposed improvement, they must have observed the lines of poles in question. These contracts must also be taken to have been made with reference to the existing law of the state, which law affords no means by which the highway commissioner could take any official action to secure the removal of telegraph and telephone poles from the line of the highway. It would seem that any delays incident to the presence of telegraph and telephone poles within the line of the improvement, must be regarded as one of the hazards assumed by the contractor, and that bidders should have taken this fact into consideration in making their bids. In any event, it may safely be asserted that if delay was caused to the contractor by reason of the presence of poles in the right of way, nothing can be found in the contract which would authorize the allowance of additional compensation, and such reference to the removal of other obstructions as are found in the contract, points to the conclusion that all such matters were to be cared for by the contractor at its own expense.

In reference to the claim that certain materials passed at the quarry by a state inspector were rejected by a Federal inspector who was on the work, it may be observed that the specifications provide for the appointment of inspectors who were authorized to reject defective materials. It is further provided in the specifications that the judgment and decision of the highway commissioner, as to whether or not the materials supplied complied with the requirements of the contract, shall be final. The complaint here is not that the state inspector rejected materials which should have been passed, but that materials which were passed by a state inspector were rejected, at least for a time, by a Federal inspector. The instructions to bidders, bound with and made a part of the contract, invited the attention of all bidders to the fact that the proposed improvement was to be participated in by the United States government, through the postmaster general and the secretary of agriculture, and bidders were referred to the postoffice appropriation bill passed by congress for the fiscal year of 1913, to a contract between the state of Ohio and the secretary of agriculture, and also to a certain opinion of the attorney general of the United States. It is unnecessary to determine whether or not, under such appropriation bill and under the contract referred to, the Federal inspector had a right to pass upon materials. If the Federal inspector had such a right and was acting within his power, and if the contractor was subject to a double inspection by reason of the participation of both state and Federal governments, then the rights of the contractor were not infringed by the action of the Federal inspector. If under the Federal appropriation bill and the contract referred to between the state and the secretary of agriculture, no right of inspection exists in the Federal government, then it was within the power of the contractor once the material had been passed by the state inspector, to disregard the action of the Federal inspector and to proceed to use the material in the work of construction. In effect, the contractor is now asking reimbursement from the state not by reason of any contract with the state, or by reason of any act of any state official, but he is basing his claim for compensation from the state on an alleged unauthorized or illegal act on the part of a Federal inspector. Nothing contained in the contract would warrant the allowance of a claim of this nature.

The major part of the Culbertson Company's claim is based upon the allegation that the detailed plans showing the work to be done and upon which the bids of the company were based, were inaccurate and that the contractor has had to do substantially more excavating than that shown by the original estimates, the excess amounting to twenty-five per cent. or more.

In connection with this claim attention is invited to the following language used in the instructions to bidders:

> "Bidders are requested to carefully examine the site of, and the plans, profiles and specifications for this proposed work, and they shall satisfy themselves as to the character, quantity and nature of the work to be done.

These contracts were let on what is known as lump sum bids. Most certainly the contractor would not claim that if the estimates had been larger than the actual quantities to be moved, the compensation to be paid the contractor would be thereby correspondingly decreased. The obligation in this respect must be mutual and it follows that the contractor, where the contract is let on lump bids, is not entitled to an extra compensation by reason of the fact that the actual excavation exceeded the estimates, when there is no provision in the contract for such extra compensation and no guarantee that the estimates are correct, especially when the instructions to bidders are to the effect that they shall satisfy themselves as to the quantity of the work to be done.

So far as these alleged inaccuracies have resulted in the necessity of borrowing earth in order to complete fills, it may be observed that the specifications contemplate that a certain amount of borrowing will be necessary and refer explicitly to the same, and provide that the grading shall include such borrowing. No place in the contract is there any language used which would warrant the inference that any extra compensation was to be allowed to the contractor under any circumstances or conditions, but the whole spirit of the contract and specifications is to the effect that the bid of the contractor is to cover all the work necessary for the completion of the road according to the original plans and specifications, and the following express provision found in the specifications points to the conclusion that no extra compensation is to be allowed, unless clearly provided for either in the original or in a supplementary contract:

> "Any minor details of work not specifically mentioned in the specifications or shown on the plans, but obviously necessary for the proper completion of the work, shall be considered as being a part of and included in the contract and shall be executed in the proper manner, and the contractor shall not be entitled to any extra or additional compensation for the same."

I am of the opinion that, under the terms of the contracts in question, the claim of the contractor for additional compensation by reason of excess excavation, is no better founded than would be a refusal of the state to pay him the full amount of his bid in case the estimate of excavation had been larger than the actual quantities moved, that no authority exists in the state highway commissioner, under the contracts in question, to allow such extra compensation. The same statement applies with equal force to the claims of the company that in bridge and culvert work the company has handled more foundation excavation and put in more yards of concrete and stone work than the quantities shown by the estimates.

As to delays occasioned by the putting in of culverts by force account, changes of plans and failure of the highway department to be as prompt as it should have been in furnishing grade stakes when needed, the specifications provide for variations from the original plans, profiles, cross sections and drawings, as may be required by exigencies of construction, such variations to be determined in all cases by the highway commissioner; but the contract does not refer either directly or indirectly to the allowing of any extra compensation for these variations. It is not every variation that could be required by the commissioner under the original contract, but it would be within his power to require a variation not substantially altering the character or quantity of the work. The specifications also provide that the highway commissioner may suspend work at any time for such period as is necessary, and the rights of the contractor are cared for by the further provision that in case of such suspension during the working session, the time within which the contractor is required to complete the work shall be extended by as many days as work is suspended, plus an additional ten days. The specifications also give the highway commissioner full discretion to determine the places at which work shall be prosecuted, the time when such work shall be done, and the forces which shall be used by the contractor. It would seem that any delay such as complained of, must be regarded as a suspension of the work and that the rights of the contractor under these contracts in question are fully protected when the proper extension in the time of completion of the work, has been allowed. I am advised that such an extension has been granted the contractor.

As to the last claim of the contractor to the effect that in at least two or three instances the company constructed a sub-grade according to grade stakes furnished by the highway department and was then required to change the sub-grade to correspond with new grade stakes furnished by the department, which new grade stakes did not check with the ones formerly furnished, it may be observed in the first instance, that the letter from the contractor addressed to your predecessor in office, shows that this claim is disputed by the engineers of the highway department who were employed upon this work, who denied setting the original stakes in any of the instances referred to, and stated that they were not responsible for their use in building the original sub-grade. Even if the claims of the contractor in this particular should prove to be correct, it would appear that the contractor having once constructed a sub-grade according to stakes furnished by the engineers of the highway department, should have stood upon its rights and refused to reconstruct the sub-grade to conform with a new and different line of stakes. There is no claim made that the sub-grade was reconstructed under any supplementary contract, under the terms of which contract additional compensation was to be allowed to the contractor.

Summarizing the above statements, and answering your question specifically, it is my opinion that at the present time the rights and duties of the state highway commissioner in relation to this matter are to be determined entirely by the written contracts existing between the highway commissioner and the company, no supplementary contracts having been entered into between the parties. Under those contracts, it is my opinion that you have no power or authority to allow any additional compensation to the Culbertson Company by reason of the facts set forth above, and that your authority in making payment to said company is limited to the payment of estimates made from time to time, less the deductions provided for in the contracts, and to the payment of final estimates when the contracts are completed, the total amounts to be paid the company being those set forth in its bids, upon which bids the contracts were awarded to it.

In reference to the alleged failure of the state highway commissioner to secure the removal of lines of poles from the rights of way, it is contended that there was a parol agreement between the highway commissioner and the Culbertson Company covering this matter, that this parol agreement was an inducement or consideration for the written contract, and that parol evidence would be admissible to establish such contract and that the same is enforceable. Without conceding the correctness of the legal principles upon which the above contention is based, it may be observed that even if such legal principles be assumed to be sound, then the Culbertson Company would have only a claim for damages for breach of contract and not a right to compensation under such contract. The only appropriation available to the state highway commissioner is one for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, and such an appropriation would not be available for the payment of damages for breach of contract. It, therefore appears that even if all the contentions both of fact and law made on behalf of the Culbertson Company in this particular be admitted to be correct, there is no appropriation available out of which any payments could be made to said company on account of the alleged failure of the state highway commissioner to secure the removal of the lines of poles in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

UNDER SECTION 7681, G. C., 103 O. L., 897, PARENT OF CHILD ATTENDING SCHOOLS OF A DISTRICT MUST RESIDE WITHIN SAID DISTRICT DURING TIME OF ATTENDANCE IN ORDER THAT CHILD MAY BE ENTITLED TO SUCH SCHOOLING FREE OF CHARGE.

Under the provision of section 7681, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 897, the parent of a child attending the schools of a district must in fact reside within said district during the time of such attendance in order that said child may be entitled to such attendance free of charge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1915.

HON. ORTHA O. BARR, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 11th you request my opinion as follows:

> "Section 7681 of the General Code provides in part as follows: 'The schools of each district shall be free to all youth between six and twenty-one years of age, who are children, wards or apprentices of actual residents of the district, etc.'
> "Two pupils have been attending school in the village of Spencerville, Allen county, Ohio, during the last school year. During the year 1912, the parents of these children lived in the village. The father owned a farm in Jennings township, Van Wert county, about seven (7) miles west of the village, and in 1912, he moved to the farm. However, he claimed his residence in the village of Spencerville, and continued to vote at the elections held in the village, and refrained from voting at the elections in Van Wert county. He continued to send his children to the Spencerville school during the school year of 1913 and 1914, and the school year 1914 and 1915. In February, 1915, he again moved from his farm in Jennings township, Van Wert county, to the village of Spencerville, in Allen county.
> "Query. Is the parent of these children who attended school in the village of Spencerville, liable for their tuition while attending said school while he was living on his farm in Van Wert county, and while he claimed the village as his residence and voting place, although he had no property situated in the village?"

Section 7681, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 897, provides:

> "The schools of each district shall be free to all youth between six and twenty-one years of age, who are children, wards or apprentices of actual residents of the district, including children of proper age who are inmates of a county or district children's home or orphans' asylum located in such a school district but the time in the school year at which beginners may enter upon the first year's work of the elementary schools shall be subject to the rules and regulations of the local boards of education. But all youth of school age living apart from their parents or guardians and who work to support themselves by their own labor, shall be entitled to attend school free in the district in which they are employed."

The answer to your question depends on the meaning to be given to the words "actual residents" as used in the above provision of the statute.. "Residents" is used generally to express the connection between persons and places, its exact signification being left to construction to be determined from the context and the apparent object to be attained by the enactment. State ex rel. v. Kuhn, 8 O. N. P., 197.

A new residence is acquired by removal with intention to make the new location the permanent home. Hall v. Earnst, 51 W. L. B., 30.

Absence with intent to return not destroyed by some unequivocal act, though for years, does not defeat the right to claim uninterrupted residence. Egan v. Lumsden, 13 Dec. Rep., 103.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Kuhn, supra, the second branch of the syllabus provides:

> "Every person must have a domicile somewhere. No person can have more than one domicile at the same time. Every person who is sui juris and capable of controlling his personal movement may change his domicile at pleasure. A change of domicile is a question of fact and intention."

In the case of Grant v. Jones, 39 O. S., 506, the court in its opinion at page 515 states:

> "What constitutes a person a resident of Ohio for the purpose of voting, of admission to the public schools and benevolent institutions of the state, for the administration of estates and in other cases, has been a frequent matter for consideration in the courts. There is no substantial difference between the words residence and domicile in regard to these matters, although they are not always synonymous. For business purposes and perhaps for purposes of education, a man may have more than one residence, but he can have but one domicile."

If the statute provided that the schools of each district shall be free to the children of residents of the district, I am of the opinion that the children in question would be entitled to attend the schools of said village school district without charge for tuition, during the time the parents of said children were absent from said district and living on the farm in Van Wert county, for the reason that, from your statement of facts, it is evident that said parents did not intend, by said removal from said district, to thereby establish a new residence outside of said district. The fact that the father voted at the elections held in said village during said time and claimed his residence therein, taken in connection with the fact of their return to said village, is evidence of the intention of the parents of said children to maintain their residence in said village. However, the provision of the statute in this connection limits the attendance of children, free of charge, to children of "actual residents of the district."

The Standard Dictionary defines the word "actual" as follows:

> "Existing in fact, as opposed to merely possible, constructive, conceivable or ideal; real, as distinguished from conjectural or imputed by construction; as actual possession."

Actual residents within the meaning of the above provision of the statute must be distinguished from constructive residents and requires that the parent of a child attending the schools of a district must in fact reside within said district during the time of such attendance in order that said child may be entitled to such attendance free of charge.

If the children in question had lived in said village school district apart from their parents during the time the parents were absent from said district and had worked to support themselves by their own labor, they would have been entitled to attend the schools of said district free of charge, but as I understand it the children in question lived with their parents on the farm in Van Wert county from the time of their removal from said school district in 1912, until the time they moved back into said district in February, 1915, and during this interim said parents maintained a home on said farm, but continued to send the children to the school in said village school district.

It cannot be said they were "actual residents" of the village school district within the meaning of the above provision of the statute during said time.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the board of education of said village school district is entitled to the payment of tuition for such part of said time as said children were in actual attendance in the schools of said district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROADS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 15, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following inter-county highway improvements, located in Paulding county, to wit:

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS FOR ISSUE OF BONDS BY VILLAGE OF BETHESDA, OHIO—SAME DISAPPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE: Bonds of the village of Bethesda, Ohio, in the sum of $9,000.00 conditionally purchased by the industrial commission under resolution adopted May 24, 1915.

I have examined the several transcripts purporting to contain a record of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Bethesda relative to the issuance of the bonds above mentioned, and advise your commission as follows:

The transcript reveals that the publication of the several resolutions, notices and ordinances including the ordinance (No. 63) under authority of which the bonds in question are issued, was made in the Belmont Chronicle and the St. Clairsville Gazette, two newspapers of opposite politics and of general circulation in the village of Bethesda, but neither of which is in whole or in part printed in the village of Bethesda.

Although the transcript is silent as to whether or not the village of Bethesda contains a local newspaper, yet I am informed by Mr. Chappell, village solicitor, that there is now and was at the time such publications were made a local paper printed in and having general circulation in said village, and that none of the resolutions, notices and ordinances referred to in the transcript were published in such local paper. The ordinance authorizing the issuance of the bonds in question (ordinance No. 63) recites that the council is acting under the provisions of section 3939 of the General Code. It therefore necessarily follows that the several resolutions, declaring it necessary to improve certain streets, the service of notices by publication or otherwise upon property owners and the ordinances to proceed with the improvement of the several streets mentioned were not necessary steps in proceedings to issue the bonds in question, and the character of the publications of the said resolutions of necessity, notices to property owners and ordinances to proceed have no bearing on the question of the validity of said bonds and might very well have been omitted from the transcript.

Under authority of section 3939 of the General Code, the village council might have authorized the issuance of said bonds to pay the village's portion of the cost of improving certain streets, or of the village's streets generally, prior to the enactment of any legislation authorizing the improvement of any of such streets. (See Heffner v. Toledo, 75 O. S., 413.)

Therefore in arriving at a conclusion relative to the validity of the bond issue in question I have not considered and do not pass upon the validity of the proceedings of council authorizing the improvement of said streets; nor the sufficiency of any necessity publication in connection therewith.

Ordinance 63 under authority of which said bonds are issued was, however, also published in the Belmont Chronicle and in the St. Clairsville Gazette, and no publication was given it in the local paper. Since said ordinance No. 63 is an ordinance requiring publication, I am of the opinion that the rule laid down by the supreme court in the case of the village of Elmwood v. Schanzle, No. 14836 on the docket of said court, decided March 9, 1915, applies, and that said bond ordinance must, before it can go into effect, be published in the Bethesda local paper.

I am informed that this ordinance was published in the manner indicated in the transcript in an effort to comply with the decision of the court of appeals of Muskingum county in the case of Vermillion et al. v. The Village of New Concord et al., No. 17 on the docket of said court. The supreme court, however, in the case cited above has overruled the doctrine of the court of appeals in the New Concord case, and I am constrained to follow the holding of the supreme court and insist upon the necessity of complying with the rule therein laid down, especially in view of the fact that its decision was announced March 9, 1915, and the ordinance under which the bonds in question are issued was passed April 27, 1915.

I am therefore of the opinion that the bonds in question have not been issued in conformity with law, and advise your commission to decline to accept the same.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

AUTOMOBILE—COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION MAY ALLOW COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT AN AMOUNT TO COVER EXPENSE OF MAINTAINING AND OPERATING AN AUTOMOBILE OWNED BY HIMSELF AND USED IN DISCHARGE OF HIS DUTIES—LIMITATION BY STATUTE AS TO AMOUNT TO BE EXPENDED—BILLS OF EXPENSES MUST BE ITEMIZED—NO MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS ALLOWED.

The county board of education may allow a county superintendent an amount sufficient to cover the actual and necessary expense of maintaining and operating an automobile owned by him and used in the discharge of his duties, having due regard for the extent of such use in public and private business.

The provisions for the allowance to a county superintendent of "a sum not to exceed three hundred dollars per annum for traveling expenses and clerical help" is a limitation upon the amount of expenses of such superintendent which may be allowed by the county board, which expenses can only be allowed upon itemized bills of expenses actually incurred, and the county board has no authority to allow the superintendent three hundred dollars a year in monthly installments of twenty-five dollars each.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of July 10, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "A county superintendent of schools owns an automobile which he uses almost exclusively in traveling about the county in the performance of his official duties. Under the terms of section 4744-1, 104 O. L., 142, may he include the cost of gasoline, lubricating oil, repairs to tires and parts of his automobile as traveling expenses under the provisions of this section; also may the board of education allow the county superintendent $300.00 a year in monthly installments of $25.00, or is a superintendent required to render itemized bills of the expenses actually incurred?"

Section 4744-6, General Code (104 O. L., 143), provides as follows:

> "The county commissioners of each county shall provide and furnish offices in the county seat for the use of the county superintendent. Such offices shall be the permanent headquarters of the county superintendent and shall be used by the county board of education when in session."

Section 7706-3, General Code (104 O. L., 144), provides as follows:

> "The county superintendent shall hold monthly meetings with the district superintendents and advise with them on matters of school efficiency. He shall visit and inspect the schools under his supervision as often as possible and with the advice of the district superintendent shall outline a schedule of school visitation for the teachers of the county school district."

The headquarters of the county superintendent being fixed at the county seat of the county and his duties requiring his presence in various parts of the county at intervals, it is plain that it was within the contemplation of the general assembly that he would necessarily incur traveling expenses in going about the county and, in the very nature of things, such traveling could not be limited to travel by rail, but he would be compelled to make use of a vehicle or conveyance of some sort.

Section 4744-1, General Code (104 O. L., 142), provides for the payment of such traveling expenses in the following language:

> "The county board may also allow the county superintendent a sum not to exceed three hundred dollars per annum for traveling expenses and clerical help."

The money thus allowed may undoubtedly be used to pay the expenses incurred by the county superintendent in providing himself with the necessary means of conveyance for the performance of his duties. The ownership of the vehicle would not preclude the payment of expenses necessarily incurred in the operation thereof. Just what expenses or what proportion of the expenses may be charged against public funds will depend upon the facts in each particular case. It is really more a matter of policy than of law. If the automobile were used exclusively in his work as county superintendent, the reasonable and necessary expense of maintaining the same might be allowed by the county board (subject, of course, to the maximum limitation). Where, however, the automobile is not so exclusively used but is used as well for private purposes, there should be some definite arrangement entered into between the board and the superintendent. I would suggest that this arrangement be made upon a mileage basis. For instance, if the automobile were run 300 miles in a month, 200 in official business and 100 for private purposes, it would be fair and equitable for the board of education to allow two-thirds of the expenses of the upkeep for the month. If such an arrangement be not practical, the board might agree to allow the superintendent a reasonable rate per mile covered by the automobile in public business as traveling expenses of the superintendent. These, however, are mere suggestions.

As to the second part of your question, to wit: "May the board of education allow the county superintendent $300.00 a year in monthly installments of $25.00, or is the superintendent required to render itemized bills of the expenses actually incurred?" Section 4744-1, G. C., (104 O. L., 142), provides as follows:

> "The salary of the county superintendent shall be fixed by the county board of education, to be not less than twelve hundred dollars per year, and shall be paid out of the county board of education fund on vouchers signed by the president of the county board. Half of such salary shall be paid by the state and the balance by the county school district. In no case shall the amount paid by the state be more than one thousand dollars. The county board may also allow the county superintendent a sum not to exceed three hundred dollars per annum for traveling expenses and clerical help. The half paid by the county school district shall be pro-rated among the village and rural school districts in the county in proportion to the number of teachers employed in each district."

This section provides for the fixing of the salary of the county superintendent by the county board of education, and also provides for the allowance of expenses of such superintendent. The provision for the allowance of expenses cannot be construed to in any way increase the compensation of the county superintendent for services rendered and it therefore follows that only actual expenses incurred by him may be paid.

I am therefore of the opinion that the county board of education cannot allow the county superintendent $300.00 a year in monthly installments of $25.00, but the county superintendent must render itemized bills of the expenses actually incurred, which itemized bills so rendered may be allowed by the county board, so long as the aggregate of such bills does not exceed three hundred dollars per annum.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

EIGHT HOUR LABOR LAW—SECTIONS 17-1 AND 17-2, G. C., NOT APPLICABLE TO CONTRACTS ENTERED INTO PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1915 —ARTICLE II, SECTION 37 OF CONSTITUTION, SELF-EXECUTING —MIAMI UNIVERSITY.

Section 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., do not apply to contracts entered into prior to July 1, 1915.

Article II, section 37 of the constitution is self-executing and appropriate action may be taken thereunder on contracts entered into prior to July 1, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1915.

HON. R. M. HUGHES, President, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 9th, you submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "Under the date of March 11, 1914, Attorney General Timothy S. Hogan rendered an opinion to the effect that Miami University is not included under the eight-hour law, directing that all public work should be limited to an eight-hour day. My request to which his opinion referred related to our regular employes, engineers, janitors and laborers, in addition to those who have charge of the domestic work in the boarding department. The question has now arisen whether or not the law applies to work in connection with the erection of buildings by contract on our grounds, buildings paid for by state funds. The immediate question arises from Taylor and Wespiser, contractors for an addition to our heating plant. The ordinary day here in Oxford is a ten-hour day, and their original contract was made on the assumption that they could use ten-hour laborers. They are now raising the question whether they will be liable under the law should they proceed in this way. I should be greatly obliged for your advice relative to this matter."

From a reference to the files in my department I ascertain that the contract concerning which you inquire, made with Wespiser and Taylor, was entered into on June 28, 1915, approved by me and filed in the office of the auditor of state on June 30, 1915.

While the constitutional amendment adopted in September, 1912, provided that, except in cases of extraordinary emergency, not to exceed eight hours should constitute a day's work, and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, for workmen engaged on any public work carried on or aided by the state, yet there was no sanction or penalty attached for a violation of said constitutional provision.

The legislature passed an act on April 28, 1913, which was approved by the governor on May 9, 1913, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 13, 1913. Said act provided in section 2 thereof for a penalty for a violation of the provisions thereof; but in section 3 it is provided:

> "This act shall be in force and applicable to all contracts let on and after July 1, 1915."

In view of the fact that the contract with Wespiser and Taylor was let prior to July 1, 1915. I am of the opinion that they are not liable for the penalty under section 2 of said act should they employ "ten-hour laborers" on such contract, but in view of the fact that the constitutional provision is self-executing and has been in effect since January 1, 1913, appropriate action might be taken in the courts to enforce the provisions thereof.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BONDS—PURPOSE OF CONSTRUCTING NEW SCHOOL BUILDING—ORDER MADE BY STATE INSPECTOR OF WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW LIMITATIONS MAY BE EXCEEDED—LEVY MAY BE MADE UNDER SECTIONS 7630-1 AND 5649-4, G. C.

Where under authority of section 7603-1, G. C., bonds are issued by a board of education for the purpose of constructing a new school building, in compliance with the order of the state inspector of workshops and factories, and thereafter a sinking fund levy cannot be made for the purpose of paying the interest on said bonds and retiring the same at maturity without exceeding the fifteen mill limitation provided by law, said board of education may make said levy under authority of said section 7630-1, G. C., and section 5649-4, G. C., irrespective of the limits provided by sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, G. C., and referred to in said section 5649-4, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19, 1915.

HON. FRED W. MCCOY, Prosecuting Attorney, Carrollton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 3, 1915, enclosing copies of certain resolutions passed by the board of education of Carrollton village school district, also a copy of notice issued to the treasurer of Carroll county and setting forth the schedule of tax levies for the various taxing districts of said county for the year 1914.

You inquire whether the budget commissioners of said county may allow said board of education a levy for the payment of the interest and to provide a sinking fund for final retirement at maturity of certain bonds issued by said board of education, and described in said resolution, under authority of sections 7630-1 and 5649-4 of the General Code, as found in 103 O. L., 527, which provide as follows:

> "Section 7630-1. If a school house is wholly or partly destroyed by fire or other casualty, or if the use of any school house for its intended purpose is prohibited by any order of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, and the board of education of the school district is without sufficient funds applicable to the purpose, with which to rebuild or repair such school house or to construct a new school house for the proper accommodation of the schools of the district, and it is not practicable to secure such funds under any of the six preceding sections because of the limits of taxation applicable to such school district, such board of education may, subject to the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven, and upon the approval of the electors in the manner provided by sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-five and seventy-six hundred and twenty-six issue bonds for the amount required for such purpose. For the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds and on bonds heretofore issued for the purposes herein mentioned and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, such board of education shall annually levy a tax as provided by law.
> "Section 5649-4. For the emergencies mentioned in sections forty-four hundred and fifty, forty-four hundred and fifty-one, fifty-six hundred and twenty-nine, seventy-four hundred and nineteen and 7630-1 of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax sufficient to provide therefor irrespective of any of the limitations of this act."

From your letter and enclosed memoranda, it appears that on September 30, 1912, said board of education, by resolution, declared the necessity of levying a tax of two mills or less for a period of five years, in addition to the rate which could be allowed by the county budget commissioners, under authority of section 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code; that at the meeting of said board on October 5, 1912, the state inspector of workshops and factories, or his deputy, was present and notified said board that the school building then in use was condemned and that a new building would have to be erected and ready for use at the beginning of the next school year. Said board thereupon passed the following resolution:

> "Resolved by the board of education of the village school, Carrollton, Ohio, that it is necessary for the proper accommodation of schools of said district to erect and equip a new school house, that it will require $50,000 to make said improvement, and the funds at the disposal of said board or that can be raised under the provision of section 7629 of the General Code of Ohio, are not sufficient to accomplish said purpose, it is therefore resolved that the election be held in said school district on the question of the issuing bonds in the amount of $50,000 for the purpose herein specified, on the 5th day of November, 1912, and the clerk of the board be directed to forward a copy of these (this) resolution to the deputy state supervisor of election and request said supervisor to provide election supplies and conduct said election, and that the clerk be also directed to publish notice of said election as provided by law."

It further appears that at the election held in said district on November 5, 1912, the additional levy declared necessary by said board in its resolution of September 30, 1912, was submitted to a vote of the electors of said district under authority and in compliance with the requirements of sections 5649-5 and 5649-5a of the General Code, and at the same time the question of the $50,000 bond issue above referred to was submitted to a vote of such electors, under authority and in compliance with the requirements of sections 7625, et seq., of the General Code, and that the vote was favorable to both of said propositions.

On November 11, 1912, said board, by resolution duly passed, authorized the issuance of $50,000 of bonds for the purpose therein provided. It further appears that on March 24, 1914, said board acting under authority of sections 7625, et seq., of the General Code, determined to submit to a vote of the electors of said district an additional bond issue of $12,000, for the purpose of completing the construction of its school building, and that on April 14, 1914, said election was held and the vote of the electors was favorable to said issue.

On April 21, 1914, said board, by resolution, authorized said additional issue of bonds and in said resolution provided for an annual tax levy sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final retirement at maturity. I assume that these bonds were sold and that a levy for the above purpose was made for the year 1914.

The schedule of tax levies issued by the county treasurer, taken in connection with the statement of facts submitted in your letter, shows that the levy in said school district for the year 1914 for all purposes, including the additional levy authorized by a vote of the people, under sections 5649-5 and 5649-5a of the General Code, but excepting a sinking fund levy for said bond issues, was 14.60 mills.

Prior to the date when the act of the general assembly, supplementing section 7630, G. C., and amending section 5649-4, G. C., so as to include levies made under authority of section 7631, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 527, became effective, the above mentioned sinking fund levy was subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. It will be observed that under the provisions of section 7630-1, G. C., the authority conferred by said section on said board of education may not be invoked by said board unless it finds that it is unable to provide a levy sufficient for the aforesaid purpose, under authority of sections 7625 to 7630, inclusive, of the General Code, because of the limits on tax levies applicable to said district. In other words, if the aggregate levy for said district for the year 1915, and thereafter, including said sinking fund levy, will not exceed the 15 mill limitation above referred to, the authority conferred on said board of education by section 7630-1, G. C., and section 5649-4, G. C., as amended, may not be invoked.

Inasmuch, however, as the aforesaid bonds were issued by said board of education for the purpose of constructing a new school building, in compliance with the order of the state inspector of workshops and factories, I am of the opinion that, if the said board of education finds that said sinking fund levy cannot be made without exceeding said fifteen mill limitation, said board may make said levy under authority of said sections 7630-1, G. C., and 5649-4, G. C., as amended, irrespective of the limits provided by sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, inclusive, of the General Code, and referred to in said section 5649-4, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BUDGET COMMISSIONERS—STATUTE NOW PROVIDES THAT COUNTY AUDITOR, COUNTY TREASURER AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEY SHALL CONSTITUTE COMMISSION—WHEN ACT BECAME EFFECTIVE.

House bill No. 342, passed April 27, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state April 30, 1915, if no petition for referendum is filed thereon prior to July 30, 1915, will go into effect on that date. Said bill amends section 5649-3b, G. C. In other respects the laws governing budget commissioners remain the same. Under said bill the budget commissioners will consist of the county auditor, county treasurer and prosecuting attorney.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19, 1915.

HON. JOHN SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. Charles R. Lowe, county auditor of your county, submitting for my opinion a question as follows:

> "There seems to be difference of opinion in this county as to who will constitute the budget commission in a county, and under what law they will work."

In accordance with the usual custom I am addressing the opinion to you.

Section 5649-3b of the General Code was originally enacted in 102 O. L. page 266, was amended in 103 O. L., page 552, and again in 104 O. L., page 237.

The supreme court in the case of State ex rel. Pogue v. Groom, 90 O. S., 1, on September 4, 1914, held this section as amended unconstitutional, the first two branches of the syllabus being as follows:

> "The act of the general assembly passed February 16, 1914, (104 O. L., 237), amending section 5649-3b, General Code, as amended April 16, 1913, (103 O. L., 552), insofar as it purports to designate who shall constitute the county budget commission, is unconstitutional and void.
> "The act of the general assembly passed April 16, 1913 (103 O. L., 552) purporting to amend section 5649-3b, General Code, by designating who shall constitute the county budget commission, is to that extent unconstitutional and void, and the repealing clause of the act, insofar as it repeals that portion of section 5649-3b, is invalid."

A careful reading of the entire opinion, however, makes it clear that the supreme court intended merely to hold that the provision respecting the personnel of the budget commission was unconstitutional without holding the entire section to be void. This conclusion was reached in an opinion to the tax commission of Ohio by this department under date of April 27, 1915, being opinion No. 295, a copy of which I enclose herewith.

House bill No. 342 as passed April 27, 1915, approved April 29, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state April 30, 1915, amends section 5649-3b of the General Code. That bill is as follows:

"Sec. 5649-3b. There is hereby created in each county a board for the annual adjustment of the rates of taxation and fixing the amount of taxes to be levied therein, to be known as the budget commissioners. The county auditor, the county treasurer and the prosecuting attorney shall constitute such board. The budget commissioners shall meet at the auditor's office in each county on the first Monday in August annually, and shall complete their work on or before the third Monday in that month, unless for good cause the tax commission of Ohio shall extend the time for completing the work. Each member shall be sworn faithfully and impartially to perform the duties imposed upon him by law. Two members shall constitute a quorum. The auditor shall be the secretary of the board and shall keep a full and accurate record of all proceedings. The auditor shall appoint such messengers and clerks as the board deems necessary, who shall receive not to exceed three dollars per day for their services for the time actually employed, which shall be paid out of the county treasury. The budget commissioners shall be allowed their actual and necessary expenses. Such expenses shall be itemized and sworn to by the person who incurred them and paid out of the county treasury when approved by the board. For the purpose of adjusting the rates of taxation and fixing the amount of taxes to be levied each year the county auditor and the budget commissioners shall be governed by the amount of the taxable property as shown on the auditor's tax list for the current year; provided, that if the auditor's tax list has not been completed, the county auditor shall estimate as nearly as practicable the amount of the taxable property for such year and such officers shall be governed by such estimate.

"Section 2. That said original section 5649-3b of the General Code be and the same is hereby repealed."

This bill, if a petition for referendum thereon is not filed prior to that time, will go into effect on July 30, 1915, and I therefore advise you, in answer to the above question that, the county auditor, the county treasurer and the prosecuting attorney will constitute the budget commissioners and that the laws under which they will operate are the same as those in force in 1914 with the exception of the amendment to section 5649-3b above quoted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHERE IMPROVEMENTS SUCH AS WALKS, ROADS, SEWERS AND TUNNELS COSTING IN EXCESS OF THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS ARE MADE, THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2314, G. C., MUST BE FOLLOWED — STATE FUNDS — STATE BUILDINGS — OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.

Sections 2314, G. C., et seq., apply to the construction of walks, roads, sewers and tunnels on the campus of the Ohio State University, and the provisions of said sections must be observed as to all of such improvements costing in excess of three thousand dollars.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of June 26 and July 7, 1915, in which you state that the board of trustees of the Ohio State University contemplates making certain improvements on the campus this summer, consisting of walks, sewers, tunnels and roads, all of which will be on the unit price basis, and you then inquire as to whether or not such improvements fall under sections 2314 to 2317, inclusive, of the General Code.

By inquiry I learn that the tunnels referred to in your communication are designated to connect the central heating plant and power station with certain other buildings on the university campus.

Section 2314, to which you refer, requires certain action before a contract can be entered into "for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building, or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars." Your inquiry therefore raises the question as to whether walks, roads and sewers to be constructed on the campus of the Ohio State University and tunnels to be constructed thereon for the purpose of connecting the central heating plant and power station with other buildings, are to be regarded as improvements of or additions to a state institution or building within the meaning of section 2314, G. C. This section was section 782 of the Revised Statutes, and the language of that section, insofar as it is pertinent to the present inquiry, was as follows:

> "The directors, trustees, commissioners, or other officer or officers, to whom is confided by law the duty of devising and superintending the erection, alteration, addition to, or improvement of, any state institution, asylum, or other improvement (excepting the penitentiary), erected, or now being erected, or to be erected by the state, before entering into any contract for the erection, alteration, addition to, or improvement of such institution, asylum, or other improvement, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which erection, alteration, addition or improvement and materials therefor, exceed the sum of three thousand dollars, shall, etc."

Under the language of section 782 of the Revised Statutes, it is manifest that the section would have applied to the improvements referred to by you. The codifying commission made substantial changes in the language of the section and it remains to determine whether such changes have so modified the legal effect of the section that it does not in its present form apply to such improvements. An answer to this question involves a consideration of the word "institution" as found in the section in question. In the case of State ex rel. Walton v. Edmondson, 89 O. S., 351, in discussing the meaning of the word "institution" the court observed that the word is sometimes used as descriptive of the establishment where the operations of an association are carried on, and I am of the opinion that it is in such sense that the word is used in the section now under consideration. I, therefore, conclude that the buildings and campus of the Ohio State University, taken together, are to be regarded as an institution within the meaning of section 2314, G. C., and that said question and the succeeding sections apply to the construction of all of the improvements referred to by you, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars. It may be observed that any other construction would read out of the statute the word "institution" and give it a meaning no broader than it would have if the legislature had used only the word "building." It is a familiar rule of statutory construction that some effect must, if possible, be given to all the language used by the legislature, and in the present case this can be done only by arriving at the conclusion above announced, which conclusion is also in harmony with the history of the statute under consideration. I am not unmindful of the conclusion expressed by me in an opinion rendered to Hon. Carl E. Steeb, secretary of the board of trustees of Ohio State University, under date of June 28, 1915, to the effect that an automatic fire sprinkler system, which it was proposed to install in university hall, did not fall within the provisions of sections 2314, G. C., et seq., but that opinion was based on certain elementary principles of the law of fixtures; and the conclusion herein expressed is not out of harmony with that expressed in the opinion to Mr. Steeb.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE FIRE MARSHAL—SECTION 840, G. C., CONSTRUED AS TO WHEN YEAR BEGINS FOR SAID DEPARTMENT—SECTION 841, G. C., CONSTRUED AS TO WHEN YEAR ENDS—LEGISLATURE MAY MAKE APPROPRIATIONS IN EXCESS OF YEARLY RECEIPTS OF THE DEPARTMENT.

The year of the state fire marshal's department, referred to in section 840, G. C., begins on November 1*st; and the year referred to in the last sentence of section* 841, G. C., ends on October 31*st.*

It is competent for the general assembly to appropriate money from the general revenue fund in spite of the limitations of sections 840 and 841 requiring the department of the state fire marshal to be self-supporting; and the appropriations of the general assembly may be made according to a year which does not correspond with the year therein referred to.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of July 14, 1915, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"Kindly let us have your written opinion on the following propositions at your earliest convenience:

"1. When does the year begin to which reference is made in section 840 of the General Code?

"2. When does the year end to which reference is made in section 841 of the General Code?

"3. In view of the provisions of sections 840 and 841 of the General Code, may the legislature legally make appropriations for the state fire marshal in excess of the yearly receipts as indicated in section 841, or should the amount appropriated be kept within the amount of money collected from the insurance companies and paid into the state treasury, and should the appropriation year coincide with the year designated in section 840, G. C.?"

Sections 840 and 841 of the General Code, are as follows:

"Section 840. The state fire marshal shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars; the first deputy fire marshal, eighteen hundred dollars, and the second deputy fire marshal, fifteen hundred dollars. Such salaries, compensation of clerks and assistants and all other expenses of the department of the state fire marshal necessary in the performance of the duties imposed on him by law, shall not exceed in any year the amount paid in the state treasury for that year by fire insurance companies as provided in the next following section.

"Section 841. For the purpose of maintaining the department of state fire marshal and the payment of the expenses incident thereto, each fire insurance company doing business in this state, shall pay to the superintendent of insurance in the month of November each year, in addition to the taxes required by law to be paid by it, one-half of one per cent. on the gross premium receipts of such companies on all business transacted by it in Ohio during the year next preceding, as shown by its annual statement under oath to the insurance department. The superintendent of insurance shall pay the money so received into the state treasury to the credit of a special fund for the maintenance of the office of state fire marshal. In any portion of such special fund remains unexpended at the end of the year, for which it was required to be paid, and the state fire marshal so certifies, it shall be transferred to the general revenue fund of the state."

The answer to your first question may be approached by the observation that the words "year," as it occurs in the last sentence of sections 840 and 841, is obviously the year for which the tax is required to be paid as provided in section 841. Obviously also the legislature conceived of the tax payment as being prospective and not retrospective; that is to say, conceived that the tax is payable at the beginning of the year and not at the end of the year. This conclusion is not altered by the fact that the tax is based upon the gross premium receipts for the preceding year. Instances are numerous wherein excise taxes, based upon receipts or other measures of apportionment ascertained with reference to time past, are interpreted as based upon a privilege to be exercised in the future as the real subject of taxation. In section 841 this intention is reasonably clear for when this section first went into effect, if the "year for which it is required to be paid," within the meaning thereof meant the year then just passed, the whole sum would have had to be paid into the treasury immediately upon its receipt.

Moreover, in another sense, a tax considered from the viewpoint of the public, as a source of revenue, is always for a period of time following its collection; i. e., collected for the purpose of defraying the expenses of government during such period. This seems to be the exact sense in which the term is used in those parts of the sections to which I have referred.

It is my opinion therefore, in answer to your first question, that the year to which reference is made in section 840, G. C., begins on November 1st; and in answer to your second question that the year to which reference is made in the last sentence of section 841, G. C., ends on October 31st.

For the sake of accuracy, however, I may add that the word "year," as repeatedly used in section 841, does not mean the same thing in each case. Its first use occurs in the context "in the month of November each year." Obviously the word "year" denotes the calendar year.

The next use of the word is in the context "all business transacted by it in Ohio during the year next preceding, as shown by its annual statement under oath to the insurance department." The word "year" in this context means the calendar year preceding the November in which the report is made. (See section 5432, G. C., which requires a report of the gross premiums from foreign insurance companies and uses the explicit term "the preceding calendar year.")

The next use of the word is in the context "If any portion of such special fund remains unexpended at the end of the year, for which it was required to be paid." This obviously can, of course, not mean the preceding calendar year and it must mean a year "for the purpose of maintaining the department of state fire marshal and the payment of the expenses incident thereto." Accordingly I have arrived at the conclusions above expressed.

In answering your third question I beg to state that it is within the power of the legislature to make appropriations for the state fire marshal in excess of the yearly receipts, and moreover to make appropriations according to years which do not coincide with section 840, G. C.

The policy of sections 840 and 841, reduced to simplest terms, is that the department of the state fire marshal shall not be, even in part, a burden upon the general revenue fund. One general assembly, however, has no power to restrain its successors from appropriating money from the general revenue fund for any lawful object, and to this extent sections 840 and 841, while valid laws, are simply persuasive or advisory in respect to their effect upon succeeding sessions of the general assembly. There is a wide distinction between a case of this kind and one where the amount which an officer may legally receive is fixed by law and a larger appropriation is made for the purpose of paying him. In such event he would be limited to the amount fixed by law. In the event, however, that the requirement is, as it is in the present instance, that the aggregate expenses of a certain department shall not exceed the income of a certain fund and shall be paid therefrom, whatever restraint the statute exerts is, in reality, directed to the succeeding sessions of the general assembly and operative upon them in the making of appropriations. This being its character it is obvious that it can have only the limited effect above described.

The first part of your third question is therefore answered in the affirmative and the alternative questions therein are answered in the negative.

I may add that section 841, G. C., as above quoted and interpreted, is the section at present in force. However, the general assembly, at is session in 1915, twice amended this section, once by amended senate bill No. 50, approved May 7th, and once by amended senate bill No. 297, approved June 3rd, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 4th. Neither one of these amendments in anywise affects the question presented by you; and inasmuch as neither one of the measures will go into effect for some time I deem it necessary merely to call your attention to them in explanation.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FOREIGN CORPORATION—TRANSACTIONS BY SUCH COMPANIES IN SALE OF CIGARETTES IN OHIO—OHIO REPRESENTATIVES WHO MAKE COLLECTIONS NOT LIABLE FOR WHOLESALE CIGARETTE DEALER'S LICENSE—REFUNDERS—HOW APPORTIONED IN SUCH CASE.

A corporation located outside the state through its salesmen sells cigarettes to retail dealers in Ohio and ships the same direct. The retail dealers receive no invoices from the corporation, which sends the invoices to an Ohio representative who presents the invoices to the retailers, makes collection and settles with the corporation, deriving a profit from the transactions. Such transactions are in legal effect sales by the corporation direct to the retail dealers and the Ohio representative who makes the collections is not liable for the wholesale cigarette dealer's license under section 5894, G. C.

Refunding orders drawn under section 5896, G. C., should be drawn against the general county fund and such fund should be reimbursed by charging the amount of the refunder against the undivided proceeds of collections of cigarette assessments in the treasury to the credit of the state and county and the city, village or township to which the original assessment, on account of which the refunder was made, was distributed and in the same proportion as such original distribution was made under the statute, and if there are not sufficient of such proceeds of assessments, to the credit of any such beneficiaries, the amount chargeable against it should be deducted from the undivided tax distribution due it at the next settlement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication, enclosing two letters of Thomas A. Bowles and requesting my written opinion upon the facts and inquiries therein stated, received.

The inquires of Mr. Bowles are as follows:

> "Liggett & Myers are a corporation with headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. The town of Piqua, we will say to illustrate, has four cigarette retail dealers. These dealers receive shipments of cigarettes direct from St. Louis factory. In Piqua is another tobacco dealer who represents Liggett & Myers, and to whom are sent the invoices covering the cigarettes shipped to the four dealers mentioned. The four retailers get no invoices from

L. & M., but L. & M.'s representative takes their invoices sent to him, presents them to the retailers and collects the money therefor and settles with L. & M.

"QUESTION: Is Liggett & Myers' representative liable for the wholesale license of $30.00?'

"2. A dealer in cigarettes, the only one in a village, makes application for license. He pays the $15.00; say in June. The auditor distributes the amount at his August settlement. In September the dealer goes out of the business and demands his refunder, and of course gets it.

"QUESTION: From what source will the auditor issue the refunder? You will understand there is no other dealer in this village nor has any one engaged in the traffic since the merchant quit, and no immediate prospect of one starting. If the auditor should take it out of the general cigarette fund, what authority has he to apportion the refunder to other districts?"

Mr. Bowles further states in a supplemental letter as follows:

"The gentleman who acts as the distributing agent in Piqua for Liggett & Myers is a wholesale tobacco dealer. The salesman for the factory will take orders for cigarettes from different retail dealers, together with tobacco orders. The merchandise is shipped direct to the dealers and billed to the wholesale man, who in turn credits the factory on his books. Then he makes out the several bills to the retailers plus his profit. These bills to the retailers of course include the cigarettes and the wholesaler derives a profit on the cigarettes. This procedure, as you probably know, is called in trade, 'drop shipments.'

"Mr. Armstrong, the wholesale man, never sees the cigarettes, but derives a profit from the sale as made by the factory representative."

Section 5894, of the General Code, provides:

"A person, firm, company, corporation, or co-partnership, engaged in the wholesale business of trafficking in cigarettes, cigarette wrappers or a substitute for either, shall annually be assessed and pay into the county treasury the sum of thirty dollars, or, if so engaged in such traffic in the retail business, the sum of fifteen dollars for each place where such business is carried on by or for such person, firm, company, corporation or co-partnership."

Your first inquiry involves a determination of the question of whether or not the dealer, referred to in your inquiry as representing Liggett & Myers, is engaged in the wholesale business of trafficking in cigarettes, cigarette wrappers or a substitute for either within the state.

This legislation providing for a tax on the business of trafficking in cigarettes is an exercise of the police power of the state, which cannot operate extra territorially, and, therefore, only such sales as are made within the state of Ohio constitute a business subject to the tax imposed by such legislation.

In an opinion rendered by this office to the State Liquor Licensing Board, under date of April 3, 1915, it was held that where a person has an office in the state of Ohio and acts in the capacity of agent for a distilling company of another state, transmitting to such distilling company the orders taken, to be filled by the distilling company by shipment from the distillery direct to the purchaser in Ohio, the collections from the purchaser being made by the agent, the sale was made at the distillery and outside of the territorial operation of the Dow-Aiken law.

In the case of Bellefontaine v. Vassaux, 55 O. S., 323, it is held:

"When anything remains to be done to identify the goods or discriminate them from other like things the sale is not completed."

The following is quoted from the opinion in the case of Bonham v. Hamilton, 66 O. S., 82:

> "Where, by the agreement, the vendor is to do anything to the goods for the purpose of putting them into that state in which the purchaser is bound to accept them, or as is sometimes worded into a deliverable state, the performance of those things shall, in the absence of circumstances indicating a contrary intention, be taken to be a condition precedent to the vesting of the property.
> "The general rule is that the title to goods intended to be transported pass from the vendor to the purchaser upon delivery by the former to a common carrier consigned to the purchaser, whether paid for or not."

Substantially to the same effect are the cases of:

Jung v. Talbot, 59 O. S., 511;
Diehl Brewing Co. v. Beck, 10 O. C. C. N. S., 361;
A Brewing Co. v. Brister, 179 U. S., 444.

It is the general rule that sales made upon solicitation in one state of orders by mail or through traveling salesmen or local agents, requiring deliveries to be made from the foreign factories to the customers in another state, thus necessitating interstate transportation, constitute interstate commerce.

Toledo Mfg. Co. v. Glenn Mfg. Co., 55 O. S., 217;
Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing District, 120 U. S., 489; Bremen v. Titusville, 153 U. S., 289.

In the case of Voss v. Haggerty, 26 W. L. B., 268, in construing a provision of the Dow law, similar to the legislation under consideration, the court said:

> "The whiskey was all outside of the state of Ohio, and none of it was at any time during the ownership of the plaintiff or his vendor in the state of Ohio. * * * If the Dow law applied to such a sale, it would be in violation of the constitution of the United States, as being an interference with the freedom of interstate commerce, and the presumption therefore is that such a sale is not within the purview of the act."

The last branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "The sale of liquors not located in Ohio is not within the purview of such law."

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, to Hon. W D. Gilbert, auditor of state, under date of April 25, 1906, it is said:

> "The negotiation of sale of goods which are in another state for the purpose of introducing them into the state in which the negotiation is made is interstate commerce."
> Robbins v. Shelby County, 120 U. S., 479;
> Enert v. Missouri, 156 U. S., 313;
> Toledo Co. v. Glenn Co., 55 O. S., 221;
> Vance v. Vanderhook, 170 U. S., 444;
> Bowman v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 125 U. S., 489.

I am therefore of the opinion that the transactions made in the manner detailed by Mr. Bowles are in legal effect sales made outside of the state of Ohio, hence not within the purview of the provisions of section 5894, G. C. See section 8399.

It is further to be observed from your statement that the sales in question are negotiated by agents of the St. Louis firm, Liggett & Myers, and the orders filled from the stock of said company at St. Louis, shipment being made direct to the retailers, and that Mr. Armstrong, the representative of the company in Ohio, never has the control or possession of said goods and has no other connection with the transactions than that the invoices are made out to him, that he credits the same to the company on his books and makes collections from the retailers, and that he realizes certain compensation or profit from the transactions. Under this state of facts I am of the opinion that the representative of said company, Mr. Armstrong, never was the owner nor the seller of the merchandise involved in such transactions and therefore is not, on account of such transactions, a trafficker in cigarettes, cigarette wrappers or a substitute for either within the meaning of section 5894, G. C.

You state that Mr. Armstrong is a wholesale tobacco dealer, but it is assumed from your statement that he has no dealings in cigarettes, cigarette wrappers or substitutes for either, other than in the manner detailed by Mr. Bowles in his statement and this opinion is based on such state of facts.

It was held in Brooks v. VanNes, 38 Bulletin, 262, affirmed without report 57 O. S., 642:

> "A whiskey broker who negotiates sales of liquor between different parties but who neither owns nor procures the liquor so sold is not subject to the tax * * * under the Dow law."

In the case of Voss v. Haggerty, supra, the court said:

> "It also appears that frequently * * * the certificates are transferred by the vendor into the broker's name and by him in turn transferred to the vendee. Also, in many cases, before the transfer to him by the vendor the broker receives the money from the vendee; but that in other cases he pays the vendor with his own check and upon his transfer to the vendee is repaid by that party. But I am satisfied from the evidence before me that whatever form the transaction is made to assume, for the purpose of concealing the identity of the parties for facilitating the transfer, it remains substantially always a transaction in which the broker is a mere agent or trustee for one or both of the parties to the sale. It is never a sale but is always a sale between the parties affected through the broker as an agent."

I am accordingly of the opinion that the transactions, in legal effect, were sales by the Liggett & Myers Company direct to the retail dealers, and that the relation of Mr. Armstrong to such transactions was merely that of agent.
