Your second inquiry refers to the refunder of a portion of the assessment paid by a dealer, upon his discontinuing the business, and the particular fund from which such refunder shall be made.

No express provision is made by the statutes of Ohio as to the particular fund upon which such refunding order shall be drawn. Section 5895, G. C., provides:

> "The assessments provided in the next preceding section shall be paid by such person, firm, company, corporation or co-partnership on or before the 20th day of June of each year. When such business is commenced after the fourth Monday of May, such assessments shall be proportionate in amount to the remainder of the assessment year, except that it shall not be less than one-fifth of the whole amount to be assessed in any one year."

Section 5896, G. C., provides:

"When the person, firm, company, corporation or co-partnership described in section fifty-eight hundred and ninety-four, which has been so assessed, and which has paid or is charged upon the tax duplicate with the full amount of such assessment, discontinues such business, the county auditor shall issue to such person, firm, company, corporation or co-partnership, a refunding order for a proportionate amount of the assessment. Such order shall not be less than one-fifth of the whole amount to be assessed in one year."

Section 5900, G. C., provides:

"The revenues and fines collected under the provisions of this chapter and the penal laws relating to cigarettes, shall be distributed as follows, to wit: In each county, one-half of the money paid into the county treasury on account of such business in a city, village or township therein, shall be placed to the credit of the general revenue fund of the state, and paid into the state treasury by the county treasury as provided in other cases."

Section 5901, G. C., provides:

"One-fourth of the money paid into the county treasury on account of such business in a municipal corporation shall be paid, upon the warrant of the county auditor, into the treasury of such corporation to the credit of the police fund, or in a corporation having no police fund to the credit of the general revenue fund. The remaining one-fourth thereof shall be credited to the poor fund of such county; but in counties having no county infirmary, it shall be credited to the infirmary fund or poor fund of the township, village or city in which it was collected. In counties where such money is paid on account of such business conducted in a township outside of a municipal corporation, the last named two-fourths shall be credited to the infirmary fund or the poor fund of such township."

While there has been no judicial decision in Ohio upon the exact question presented by you, under the cigarette tax law, yet the provisions of the Dow law, imposing a tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, are very similar to those of the legislation here under consideration, in respect to the collection and distribution of the tax provided for; and both acts are similar in the further respect that neither provides the particular fund from which the refunder shall be made.

In the cases of State v. Rouch, 47 O. S., 478, and Village of Van Wert v. Brown, 47 O. S., 477, arising under the Dow law, the court said:

"We think there need be no embarrassment or difficulty about the character of the order to be drawn by the auditor. The statute provides that the auditor, upon being satisfied that the dealer has discontinued business, shall issue to such dealer a refunding order. It does not direct what particular fund or funds the order shall be drawn upon. In such case it would be lawful to draw on the general fund. Such was the holding in Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 O. S., 469. An order so drawn would at least be a valid order. Whether it has been the custom of auditors to draw these orders without designating any fund, or on the general fund, or on the poor fund, or proportionately upon several funds, or, where drawn without designating any, for the treasurer to pay partly from the several funds, we are not concerned to inquire."

In the case of Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 O. S., 463, which arose under an act authorizing county commissioners to establish ditches through private property, the following is quoted from the opinion, page 469:

"It is to be supposed that when the commissioners enter upon the location and construction of a ditch, which must involve the 'taking' of lands, they do so in contemplation of the fact that compensation for lands so taken must, if applied for, be first paid or deposited, and it seems clear that if no other fund is provided, nor payment or deposit otherwise made by those to be benefited by the ditch, the general county fund is to be resorted to."

I am of the opinion that the dealer who becomes entitled to a refunder under the provisions of section 5896, G. C., thereby becomes a creditor of the county and the refunder to which he becomes so entitled constitutes a claim properly payable from the general fund of the county treasury, and, pursuant to the holding of the supreme court, supra, I advise that the auditor draw such refunding orders against the general fund of the county.

Coming now to the question of reimbursement of such fund, considerations of equality and equity demand that the amount of refunder so paid be deducted from the next distribution of taxes to the state, county, and municipal corporation or township, which under the statute were beneficiaries of the proceeds of the assessment on account of which the refunder is made, and in the same proportions, respectively, as the assessment was distributed to such beneficiaries, and that the amount so deducted be applied to reimburse the said general fund of the county from which the refunder was made.

The amount necessary to reimburse such fund should be deducted from the undivided proceeds of cigarette tax assessments when there are sufficient of such collections available, to the credit of the state, county, municipal corporation or township respectively, from which such reimbursement may be made, but where there are not sufficient of the proceeds of such collections in the treasury to cover the amount of the refunder chargeable against any village or township, etc., as in the case suggested by you, the proportion of such refunder chargeable against it should be deducted from the undivided tax distribution due it at the next settlement.

Answering your questions specifically, therefore, I advise that Mr. Armstrong, the representative of the Liggett & Myers Company, is not liable for the wholesale license tax of $30.00, under the facts as stated in your communication; and that the auditor should issue his refunding order, provided for in section 5896, against the general fund of the county treasury, and that such fund should be reimbursed by charging the amount of such refunder against the undivided proceeds of collections of cigarette assessments in the treasury to the credit of the state and county and the city, village or township to which the original assessment, on account of which the refunder was made, was distributed, and in the same proportions as such original distribution was made under the statute; and in the event that there are not sufficient of such proceeds of assessments to the credit of any of such beneficiaries, the amount chargeable against it should be deducted from the undivided tax distribution due it at the next settlement.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

AUTOMOBILE—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—REASONABLE AMOUNT MAY BE ALLOWED SHERIFF FOR USE OF AUTOMOBILE OWNED BY HIM AND USED FOR OFFICIAL DUTIES—JANITOR OR DEPUTY SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES MAY FURNISH AUTOMOBILE FOR HIRE TO SHERIFF OR COUNTY SURVEYOR.

County commissioners may allow a sheriff a reasonable amount to cover the expense of maintaining and operating an automobile owned by him and used in the discharge of his official duties, having due regard to the extent of the use of the machine in public and private business.

A sheriff or county surveyor when it becomes necessary in the discharge of their duties to incur expense for livery hire may employ a janitor employed by the county, or the deputy sealer of weights and measures of the county, who owns an automobile, to perform such service, provided the rendition of such service does not interfere with the regular duties of such persons.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Pickaway county, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 14, 1915, submitting for my opinion two questions, duly received. The first question is as follows:

> "Can the sheriff of a county be allowed the expense of maintaining his own automobile while using it in the proper administration of the duties of his office?
> "If so, what expense would be allowed? Would the expense be limited to the amount of gasoline and oil consumed on the trip or could an allowance at so much per mile be made the sheriff to cover gasoline, oil and wear and tear of tires and machine in general?"

Section 2997, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowance quarterly to each sheriff for * * * and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office."

In the case of State ex rel. Sartin, as sheriff of Franklin county, Ohio, v. Sayre, as auditor, etc., et al., Judge Rathmell of the court of common pleas of said county, held that the word "vehicles" as used in the above statute includes automobiles. While section 2997 contains the word "maintaining" and does not contain the word "operating" it would undoubtedly follow that said section authorizes the allowance of all expenses incident to the use of the automobile in public business, and would include oil and gasoline, as well as necessary repairs to tires and parts.

The county commissioners may, therefore, make an allowance to the sheriff for the expenses of maintaining and operating his automobile when used in the proper administration of the duties of his office. This allowance, however, should be made under the provisions of section 2997 above quoted, and not under other provisions of the same section which provide for livery hire.

Just what proportion of the expense may be charged against public funds will depend upon the facts in each particular case and is more a matter of policy than of law. If the automobile were used exclusively in his work as sheriff, the reasonable and necessary expense of maintaining and operating the same might be allowed by the commissioners. Where, however, the automobile is not so exclusively used, but is used as well for private purposes, there should be some definite arrangement entered into between the sheriff and the county commissioners, I would suggest that this arrangement be made upon a mileage basis. For instance, if the automobile were run 300 miles in a month, 200 in official business and 100 for private purposes, it would be fair and equitable for the commissioners to allow two-thirds of the expenses of the upkeep for the month. If such an arrangement be not practical, the commissioners might agree to allow the sheriff a reasonable rate per mile covered by the automobile in public business as traveling expenses of the sheriff. These, however, are mere suggestions.

As to your second question, to wit:

> "Can a person regularly employed as janitor at the court house by the board of county commissioners, be paid from the county treasury for auto livery conveying the county sheriff or county engineer in the discharge of their respective official duties?
> "Can a person regularly employed as deputy sealer of weights and measures for any county be paid from the county treasury for auto livery conveying the county sheriff or county surveyor in the discharge of their respective official duties?"

There is no statutory prohibition against the employment of the janitor and deputy sealer of weights and measures in question and the only reason which could be assigned for the refusal of the commissioners to allow payment to be made for such services would be on the grounds of public policy.

The general assembly of the state has recognized the danger involved in transactions of this same general character by the enactment of sections 12910 to 12914, inclusive, of the General Code, but has not seen fit to include this particular kind of a transaction. This danger was also recognized in an opinion by this department under date of June 13, 1914, being opinion No. 978, in which it was held solely on the grounds of public policy that the sheriff could not pay his deputy livery hire for the use of an automobile owned by the deputy. However, the close relationship which exists between a sheriff and his deputy does not exist between a sheriff or county surveyor and a janitor or a deputy sealer of weights and measures.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that, while such an arrangement as you describe should not be encouraged, it is not illegal or prohibited either by statute or on the grounds of public policy, provided of course that the rendition of such service by the janitor or deputy sealer of weights and measures does not interfere with the regular duties of such persons.

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

"REGULAR HOSPITAL OTHER THAN A LYING IN HOSPITAL" NEED NOT BE LICENSED—CASES OF WOMEN CARED FOR DURING PARTURITION.

A regular hospital in which the number of cases of women cared for during parturition is small as compared with the number of cases cared for in the hospital in a given period of time, and in which such women are cared for by nurses under the direction of physicians, need not be licensed as a maternity boarding house or lying-in hospital under sections 6257, et seq., G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

HON. H.-H. SHIRER, Secretary, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 12th, you requested my opinion upon the following question:

> "A hospital incorporated for purposes commonly understood to be common to such institutions, i. e., care of the sick, performance of surgical operations, etc. In the pursuits of the work of such a hospital more than two women are received during a given period of six months for the purpose of parturition. This hospital was not incorporated for the exclusive care of children. Does such hospital, in which the maternity cases compose a very small percentage of the number of patients received, come under the requirements of section 6257, and is it subject to license by the state board of health and also subject to inspection, visitation and certification of the board of state charities after the manner described in sections 1352 and 1352-1 of the General Code?"

I have examined the previous opinions referred to by you in your letter, and while there are indications therein of what my predecessor's ruling would have been on the question which you now submit, it is true that no direct conclusion is expressed in any of them with respect thereto.

Section 6257 of the General Code, to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 6257. Whoever receives for care or treatment within a period of six months, more than one woman during pregnancy, or during or after delivery, except women related by blood or marriage; or has in his custody or control, at any one time, two or more infants under the age of two years, unattended by parents or guardians, for the purpose of providing them with care, food and lodging, except infants related to him by blood or marriage, shall be deemed to maintain a maternity boarding house or lying-in hospital. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any county or district children's home, charitable organization, society or institution having the care of children under its control duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio or under the care of a juvenile court."

However, the last sentence of this section does not embody the only exception to the general rule of the first sentence thereof. Another exception is found in section 6258, G. C., which is as follows:

> "Sec. 6258. Nothing in this chapter shall prevent a nurse from practicing her profession under the direction of a physician in the home of a patient, or in a regular hospital other than a lying-in hospital."

In my opinion, section 6258 furnishes the answer to your question. While the terms of its exception apply to the nurse, yet, in effect, it embraces the care and treatment by nurses under the direction of physicians in "a regular hospital other than a lying-in hospital."

Assuming that the women cared for and treated during the period described by you therein receive the care of a nurse under the direction of a physician, it is my opinion that the transactions are not such as to constitute the hospital, as such, "a maternity boarding house or lying-in hospital," subject to license under the remaining provisions of the chapter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—BIDS FOR DEPOSIT OF PUBLIC FUNDS—ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS SHOULD BE PREPARED AND FOLLOWED IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTIONS 2715 AND 744-12, G. C.—ACTIVE AND INACTIVE DEPOSITS REQUIRE SEPARATE SURETIES.

A board of county commissioners in its advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds, should invite proposals under both sections 2715 and 744-12, G. C., If such advertisement is not so worded as to invite bids from the classes of banking concerns mentioned in both sections, either by appropriate language or by express reference to said sections, said advertisement is not sufficient in law. Where the same banking institution is awarded both active and inactive deposits, separate undertakings should be required and the same surety cannot be accepted on both undertakings.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of July 15, 1915, you request my opinion on the following questions:

> "(1) Should a board of county commissioners, in its advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds, invite proposals under both section 2715, General Code, and section 744-12, General Code, as amended, 103 O. L., 384, and further amended by house bill No. 557 as passed by the last general assembly and which will become effective September 3, 1915?
> "(2) Would an advertisement for bids, inviting proposals under the former section only, be legal?
> "(3) Where the same banking institution is awarded both active and inactive deposits, can the same sureties be accepted as to both? See clause in section 2726, General Code, which reads: 'The same surety shall not be accepted on more than one undertaking as to any one depositary at the same time.'"

Section 2715, G. C., provides:

> "The commissioners in each county shall designate in the manner hereinafter provided a bank or banks or trust companies, situated in the county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as inactive depositaries, and one or more of such banks or trust companies located in the county seat as active depositaries of the money of the county. In a county where such bank or trust company does not exist or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, the commissioners shall designate a private bank or banks located in the county as such inactive depositaries, and if in such county no such private bank exists or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, then the commissioners shall designate any other bank or banks incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as such inactive depositaries. If there be no such bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of the state, or organized under the laws of the United States, located at the county seat, then the commissioners shall designate a private bank, if there be one located therein, as such active depositary. No bank or trust company shall receive a larger deposit than one million dollars."

Under the provisions of this section the authority of the commissioners of a county, in designating inactive depositaries for the public funds of such county, is limited to banks and trust companies situated in said county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state or organized under the laws of the United States, if such there be. In designating active depositaries, said commissioners are limited to banks and trust companies of the above class, if such there be, located in the county seat of said county. If there is in fact no institution of this class located in such county, and eligible to bid as an inactive depositary and if there is no institution of said class located in the county seat and eligible to bids as an active depositary, said commissioners may call for proposals from private banks located in the county or the county seat, for inactive and active depositaries, respectively.

It is evident that under the provisions of section 2715, G. C., corporations, persons, partnerships or associations, coming within the purview of the act of the general assembly, as found in 103 O. L., 379-385, would not be eligible to bid for the public funds of a county, except in the case where no bank or trust company, organized under the laws of the state or the United States, is located in the county as to inactive depositaries and in the county seat as to active depositaries.

Section 744-12, G. C., 103 O. L., 384, being section 13 of the act above referred to, provides as follows:

"That whenever any of the funds of the state, or any of the political subdivisions of the state, shall be deposited under any of the depository laws of the state, every corporation, person, partnership, and association coming within the purview of this act shall be permitted to bid upon and be designated as depositories of such funds, upon furnishing such surety or securities therefor as is prescribed by the laws of the state of Ohio; provided, however, that there shall not be deposited with any such corporation, person, partnership or association by any such political subdivision an amount in excess of $500,000, nor in any event an amount in excess of fifty (50) per cent. of the amount of the funds of such political subdivision so at any time to be deposited."

The effect of the provisions of this section is to place banking concerns, coming within the purview of this act, on a par with banks and trust companies organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, insofar as their eligiblity to bid for public funds of the state, or any political subdivision, is concerned. It follows, therefore, that those provisions of section 2715, G. C., limiting county commissioners in designating depositaries of public funds to banks and trust companies, organized under the laws of the state or of the United States, are repealed by implication by the provision of section 744-12, G. C.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that a board of county commissioners in its advertisement for bids for the deposit of public funds, should invite proposals under both section 2715, G. C., and section 744-12, G. C.

Section 744-12, G. C., has been amended by the act of the general assembly, passed May 27, 1915, and known as house bill No. 557, which will become effective September 3, 1915. This section, as amended, provides as follows:

> "Section 744-12. That whenever any of the funds of the state, or any of the political subdivisions of the state, shall be deposited under any of the depositary laws of the state, every corporation, person, partnership and association coming within the purview of this act, shall be permitted to bid upon and be designated as depositaries of the state funds upon furnishing such surety or securities therefor as is prescribed by the laws of the state of Ohio; provided, however, that there shall not be deposited with any such corporation, person, partnership or association, by any such political subdivision, an amount in excess of $500,000."

It will be observed that the only change made by the legislature in amending said section 744-12, G. C., was to strike out of said section the following language:

> "Nor in any event an amount in excess of fifty (50) per cent. of the amount of the funds of such political subdivision so at any time to be deposited."

The effect of the amendment, therefore, is to remove the restriction contained in the provision of the section above amended, and the change made in said section, as amended, is not therefore material to your inquiry.

In answering your second question, I am of the opinion that, if the advertisement for bids for the public funds of the county is not so worded as to invite bids from the classes of banking concerns mentioned in both section 2715, G. C., and section 744-12, G. C., either by appropriate language or by express reference to said sections, said advertisement is not sufficient in law: An express reference to either of said sections, without referring to the other, would be misleading and would tend to defeat the plain provision of the law governing the deposit of public funds, viz., to secure full publicity and the greatest possible competition in bidding.

You next inquire as to whether, when the same banking institution is awarded both active and inactive deposits, the same surety can be accepted as to both deposits, in view of the provision of section 2726, G. C., to the effect that the same surety shall not be accepted on more than one undertaking as to any one depositary at the same time. It would seem that if the provision of section 2726, G. C., referred to above, is to be given any effect, that it must be held to apply to the situation presented by you. In fact, the only cases where a bank might be called upon to furnish more than one bond, except where additional security is required, would be where said bank is awarded both active and inactive deposits and where such bank is awarded two or more sums at different rates of interest. It is manifest that a bank bidding for both active and inactive deposits, would have to separately state its bids for the two classes of deposits. I am, therefore, of the opinion, that where the same bank bids for and is awarded both active and inactive deposits, the bids and awards for the two classes of deposits are to be regarded as separate contracts, and separate undertakings should be required.

I am, therefore, of the opinion, in answer to your third question, that the provision of section 2726, G. C., referred to above, would apply to the situation presented by you, and that the same surety could not be accepted on both undertakings.

It is proper to observe, in connection with the matters covered by this opinion, that in the present state of the law the provision of section 2715, G. C., to the effect that no bank or trust company shall receive a larger deposit than one million dollars, applies to banking institutions incorporated under the laws of this state or organized under the laws of the United States. The provision of section 744-12, G. C., providing a limitation of five hundred thousand dollars on the amount to be deposited with any one banking institution, applies to the corporations, persons, partnerships and associations coming within the purview of the act found in 103 O. L., 384. The amendment of section 744-12, G. C., effected by house bill No. 557, and referred to above, which amendment removes the restriction that not more than fifty per cent. of the funds of a political subdivision may, at any time be deposited in any of the banking institutions coming within the purview of the act found in 103 O. L., 384, will not go into effect until September 3, 1915, and in the meantime this restrictive provision must be observed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INTERURBAN RAILROAD COMPANY—ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION —SECTIONS 8747 AND 8748, G. C., MUST BE COMPLIED WITH IN CHANGING ITS ROUTE OR ONE OF ITS TERMINI.

An interurban railroad company, in amending its articles of incorporation so as to authorize a change of route or one of its termini, must comply with sections 8747 and 8748, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 12th, transmitting a copy of a proposed certificate of amendment of the articles of incorporation of The Cleveland, Barberton, Coshocton & Zanesville Railway Company, and requesting my opinion as to whether or not the same should be received and filed by you.

The certificate is an entirety and must be accepted or rejected as such. It evidences the adoption by vote of the holders of more than three-fifths of the capital stock of the company, at a meeting called by a majority of its directors, after notice duly published, of two resolutions, one changing the name of the company and the other changing the route of the improvement to be constructed by the company and the termini thereof so as virtually to abandon the route originally provided for and one terminus thereof, and to authorize the construction of an entirely different and distinct improvement.

The procedure which has been followed is that provided by sections 8719 to 8723, inclusive, of the General Code. There is no question that this procedure is appropriate as to the proposed change of name, but there is a question as to the application thereof to the change of route and termini, in view of the provisions of sections 8747 and 8748 of the General Code, which are as follows:

> "Section 8747. By resolution adopted by a majority of its board of directors, at a meeting thereof duly called for the purpose, with the written consent of three-fourths in interest of its stockholders, a company may change the line, or any part thereof, and either of the proposed termini, of its road. No change shall be made which will involve the abandonment of any part of the road, either partly or completely constructed. Any subscription of stock made upon the faith of the location of the road, or a part thereof, upon a line abandoned by the change, shall be cancelled at the written request of a subscriber who has not consented thereto, filed with the secretary or other chief officer of the company, within six months after such change.
> "Sec. 8748. When such change is made it shall be described in such resolution, a duly authenticated copy of which, under the seal of the company, shall be filed with the secretary of state, and by him recorded, with proper reference, on the record of the articles of incorporation of the company. When so filed, such change shall be considered as made, and be as valid and binding as if the changed line had been the line originally described in the articles."

These sections, which have never been amended or verbally changed save in process of codification since their original enactment, are now found in the chapter relating to the special powers of railroad companies, as such, and are appropriately placed therein because, in their original form, they applied to "railroad" companies. (See 73 O. L., 115). However, at that time there was no statutory law relative to street and interurban railroad companies, as such. Since that time numerous statutes have been enacted applying especially to the last named classes of railroad companies, and the question is as to whether or not the fact that there are such statutes is sufficient to enforce the conclusion that the acts originally passed for the organization and government of railroad companies, as such, do not apply to street and interurban railroad companies, as such; and particularly as to whether or not the above quoted sections, relative to the conditions and manner of procuring authority to change the line and either of the proposed termini of the proposed improvement, do not apply to street and interurban railroad companies.

The precise and limited question last stated has never been before the courts. Numerous questions have been before the courts as to the application of different provisions of the railroad statutes, as such, to street and interurban railroad companies. Some of these cases will be found cited in the briefs in Commissioners v. Traction Company, 75 O. S., 548, and the case itself is instructive on the question.

The general rule may be stated as follows:

Inasmuch as since the introduction of electric interurban railroads special statutes have been passed for the regulation of such railroad companies, the general legislative policy of the state must be deemed to be such as to provide especially for this class of railroad companies. So that unless a contrary intention clearly appears, a statute for the regulation of railroad companies generally will be deemed inapplicable to interurban railroad companies.

Most of these decisions, however, relate to regulatory provisions, as such, and none of them bears directly upon matters relating to the internal corporate organization of the different classes of companies and the interpretation of statutes providing therefor.

It will be observed in this connection that, with the exception of sections 9121, 9127 and 9129 of the chapter on street and interurban railroads, all of which apply to consolidation, the chapter contains no special provisions for the organization and corporate or internal management of street and interurban railroad companies, as such. There is, therefore, no such clearly discerned legislative policy to treat separately of street and interurban railroad companies for such purposes of organization and internal management as there is with respect to such street and interurban railroad companies as subjects of the exercise of the police power.

Accordingly, I do not think that there is any presumption against the application of a statute for the organization and internal management of a railroad company to the organization and internal management of a street and interurban railroad company as prevails with respect to the other class of statutes. On the other hand, I would not hold that there is a presumption to the contrary. In other words, there is no general legislative policy at all with respect to the question, and the meaning of each statute is to be determined by the evidences thereof apparent upon its face, without regard to any supposed general policy or presumption.

Now with respect to the particular matter under consideration, I call attention to the provisions of section 8625, of the General Code, which applies to all corporations of whatsoever kind or character. It is as follows:

> "Section 8625. Any number of persons, not less than five, a majority of whom are citizens of this state, desiring to become incorporated, shall subscribe and acknowledge articles of incorporation, which must contain:
> "1. The name of the corporation, which, unless it is not for profit, shall begin with the word 'the' and end with the word 'company,' except as otherwise provided by law.
> "2. The place where it is to be located, or its principal business transacted.
> "3. The purpose for which it is formed.
> "4. The amount of its capital stock, if it is to have capital stock, and the number of shares into which it is divided.
> "5. But, if the corporation is for a purpose which includes the construction of an improvement not to be located at a single place, the articles of incorporation must also set forth:
> "a. The kind of improvement intended to be constructed.
> "b. Its termini, and the counties in or through which it or its branches will pass."

It will be observed that the fifth paragraph of this section applies both to railroad companies and to interurban railroad companies. It does not apply to street railroad companies, it may be assumed, because ordinarily the improvement to be constructed by such company would be located in a single place. In other words, railroad companies and interurban railroad companies are in the same class for the purpose of section 8625, G. C., being corporations for a purpose which includes the construction of an improvement not to be located in a single place.

In my opinion, sections 8747 and 8748, G. C., are to be interpreted in the light of section 8625. This must necessarily be so because were it not for section 8625 there would be no requirement that the termini and the route of the proposed improvement be set forth in the articles of incorporation at all. These things being true, I think that the application of section 8747 is as broad as that of section 8625 in this particular. While section 8747 applied originally, and still applies, to "railroad companies" and not to other companies proposing to construct improvements located in more than one place, such as canal companies and turnpike companies, yet it applies, in my judgment, to all companies proposing to construct a railroad located at more than one place in any sense in which the word "railroad" might be used.

It is my opinion, therefore, that an amendment to the articles of incorporation of an interurban railroad company proposing to change the route and one of the termini of the contemplated improvement must be adopted with the written consent of three-fourths of the interests of the stockholders by the board of directors of the company; must recite that the change does not involve the abandonment of any part of the road, either partly or completely constructed, and must be filed with the secretary of state as provided in section 8748 of the General Code.

The amendment certificate in question, so far as it relates to change of route and terminus, does not comply with these requirements, and being an entirety cannot be separated by you for purpose of filing and record, and therefore must be wholly rejected.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SESTIONS 4534 AND 4387, G. C., ARE INOPERATIVE BECAUSE OF UNCERTAINTY IN SO FAR AS THEY PROVIDE THAT OFFICERS SHALL RECEIVE SAME FEES AS "SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES IN SIMILAR CASES"—WHEN A CONSTABLE CAN AND CANNOT ALLOW FEE FOR AN ASSISTANT.

Following the decision of State ex rel. Ribble v. Kleinhoffer, 92 O. S.,----, sections 4534 and 4387, G. C., in so far as said sections provide that the officers shall receive the same fees as "sheriffs and constables in similar cases" are inoperative because of uncertainty.

A constable cannot be allowed a fee for an assistant, under section 5347, G. C., when such assistant is a member of a village or city police force, if such policeman is on duty at the time; otherwise, he can.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—Under date of July 3rd you requested my opinion on two matters. Your first inquiry is as follows:

> (1) "Is a regular member of a village or city police force an assistant within the meaning of section 3347, General Code, when assisting a marshal or chief of police within the corporate limits of the city or village in which he is employed, to be allowed fees under sections 3016 and 3019, General Code, for such services, or to have said fee taxed in the cost bill to be paid by the defendant?"

In regard to a mayor's court in cities not having a police court, it is provided by section 4534, G. C., that the chief of police shall execute and return all writs and process to him directed by the mayor, and that "the fees of the chief of police, or his deputies, in all cases, except those arising out of violations of ordinances, shall be the same as those allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases."

In regard to a mayor's court in villages, it is provided by section 4542, G. C., that the marshal shall execute and return all writs and process directed to him by the mayor, and, under section 4387, G. C., it is provided that in the discharge of his proper duties the marshal "shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases for services actually performed by himself or his deputies, and such additional compensation as the council prescribes."

The fees of a constable are fixed by section 3347, G. C. Said section provides that

> "For services rendered, duly elected and qualified constables shall be entitled to receive the following fees: * * * assistants, in criminal causes, one dollar and fifty cents per day each."

Section 2845, G. C., fixes the fees of the sheriff, but nowhere in said section is there any provision made for "assistants in criminal causes."

In section 2485, G. C., it is provided that

> "The county commissioners shall audit and allow a reasonable compensation to any person who is summoned to aid a sheriff or constable, or other officer, in the execution of any writ or process in favor of the state, but such compensation shall not exceed one dollar per day, and shall be allowed only upon certificates of such officer."

If a sheriff should summon a person to aid him in the execution of a writ in favor of the state, his account would have to be audited by the county commissioners and the compensation could not exceed one dollar per day. It is true that said section likewise provides for constables, but section 3347, G. C., permits a constable to charge as a fee one dollar and fifty cents per day for assistants in criminal causes. However, it is clearly to be seen that should a constable employ an assistant in a criminal cause the said constable would be entitled to one dollar and fifty cents per day for such assistant, whereas if the sheriff provided himself with an assistant to aid him in the execution of a writ the greatest allowance that could be made him would be one dollar per day.

The supreme court, in the case of State ex rel. Ribble v. Kleinhoffer, Cause No. 14697, decided April, 1915, 92 O. S., ____, in considering what fees should be allowed to a humane officer under the provisions of section 10076, said provision being as follows:

> "For this service and for all services rendered in carrying out the provisions of this chapter, such officers, and the officers and agents of the association, shall be allowed and paid such fees as they are allowed for like services in other cases, which must be charged as costs, and reimbursed to the society by the person convicted."

used this language:

> "The latter section (section 10076) is the only one which mentions the subject of fees to be allowed and paid officers and agents of humane societies. The language used is, 'and the officers and agents of the association' referring to the humane society, 'shall be allowed and paid such fees as they are allowed for like services in other cases.' That is, humane officers are allowed such fees as they are allowed for like services in other cases not those which are allowed the other officers mentioned in the statute.

It is necessary to ascertain what fees, if any, are allowed humane officers in like cases. An examination of the statutes will disclose that no provision is made for fees to be paid to the humane officer in any other case. And again, if the pronoun 'they,' as used in section 10076, could be held to refer to officers other than humane officers, for example, to a sheriff or constable, it would be impossible to determine to which it does refer. And it is important and necessary that this be known, for the fees of a sheriff and those of a constable as fixed by sections 2845 and 3347 respectively, are different."

It seems, therefore, that the supreme court is of the opinion that a statute which undertakes to compensate a certain officer by the payment of the same fees as are allowed "sheriffs and constables in similar cases" would not be operative because of uncertainty.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that the statutes which undertake to allow a chief of police or a marshal fees for assistants in criminal causes is inoperative because of uncertainty.

Your second inquiry is as follows:

(2) "Can a member of a village or city police force be allowed an assistant's fee of $1.50 when assisting a constable in making an arrest to be paid under sections 3016 and 3019, General Code, or by the defendant if the defendant pays the costs?"

There is no duty devolving upon a member of a village or city police force as such to accompany a constable to assist him in making an arrest. The duties which devolve upon a policeman are to maintain order, to arrest one found violating the ordinances or statutory law, as to misdemeanors, and in felony cases a policeman may arrest a person whom he has reason to believe is guilty of a felony. There are also other duties which devolve upon policemen, as incidental to the performance of their regular duties. If a policeman while on duty undertakes to accompany a constable to help him in making an arrest, the policeman would not be entitled to any fee, for the reason that his time is being fully paid for by his compensation as policeman. If however a policeman while not on duty should accompany a constable for the purpose of aiding him in making an arrest, the policeman would be an "assistant" under section 3347, G. C., and the constable would therefore under such circumstances be entitled to charge as fees in such case the sum of one dollar and fifty cents.

Section 3016, G. C., provides that in felonies when the defendant is convicted, the costs of the constable shall be paid from the county treasury. This provision as to the costs of the constable would include the amount that is to be paid for an assistant to the constable.

Section 3019, G. C., provides as follows:

"In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowances to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

The words "any such officers" as used in section 3019 must undoubtedly refer back to the officers mentioned in section 3016, for the reason that section 3017 refers to the same officers, and section 3018 simply refers to the fees of witnesses.

It is therefore my opinion that if the member of a village or city police force was on duty at the time services were rendered by him as assistant to a constable, no fee can be allowed and paid under sections 3016 to 3019, G. C., by reason of such services on the part of the policeman and no fee can be included in the costs and collected from the defendant by reason of such services. If the policeman was not on duty at the time the services were rendered, then the opposite rule would prevail and the policeman would be entitled to an assistant's fee of one dollar and fifty cents to be collected from the defendant or allowed and paid under sections 3016 to 3019, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—AN APPROPRIATION FOR "PAY ROLL OF LABORERS" MAY NOT BE EXPENDED FOR RENTAL OF STREET ROLLER—DUTY OF CITY AUDITOR IN SUCH CASES.

In the absence of special facts an appropriation for "pay roll of laborers" of a municipal corporation may not be expended for the rental of a street roller, and the city auditor may not lawfully certify, under section 3806, G. C., against a balance in such an appropriation for such purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—With your letter of July 14, 1915, you enclosed a letter from the city auditor of Urbana, Ohio, who inquires whether he is authorized to certify that the necessary funds for a certain contract for the rental of a street roller at twenty ($20.00) dollars per day for not to exceed twenty-five days is in the proper fund and not appropriated to any other purpose when the appropriation, which has been made for the semi-annual period for "tools, implements, etc.," has been exhausted, and the only appropriation account in which there is any money is "pay roll of laborers."

There may be some specific facts which would alter the conclusion at which I have arrived, such as, for example, the possible fact that the street roller is to be rented with its operator, so to speak, or putting it more accurately, the operator is to be paid as a laborer for his services and the use of the roller, but like teamsters are sometimes paid by the day for their services as drivers and the use of their teams. In the absence of such a state of facts, however, I am clearly of the opinion that the certificate which the auditor is asked to issue may not be issued. Section 3806 provides

> "No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, first certifies to council or to the proper board, as the case may be, that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay such appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose, which certificate shall be filed and immediately recorded. The sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the corporation is discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the ordinance, resolution or order is in force."

In the light of the requirements of sections 3796-3804, General Code, providing for appropriations, and the similar and subsequently enacted provisions of the Smith one per cent. law, so called, sections 5649-3b, et seq., it has been clearly assumed by the officials of the city of Urbana that although section 3806 speaks of a certificate that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the fund and not appropriated for any other purpose, the auditor is not authorized to issue such a certificate unless the money has been actually appropriated for the purpose of the proposed contract, agreement or other obligation. At any rate, this is the case if the detailed appropriations exhaust the amount in the fund, and the only money to the credit of the fund, not otherwise appropriated, is that for "pay roll of laborers," as I assume is the case from facts stated by the city auditor.

In short, I am of the opinion that if there is no unappropriated money in the service fund, and if the only appropriation account in which there is a balance is a balance is that for "pay roll of laborers," the certificate which the auditor was asked to issue may not lawfully be issued unless the facts are of a character such as I have alluded to in the first part of this opinion.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—TOWNSHIP PROPERTY NOT NEEDED FOR ANY TOWNSHIP PURPOSE MAY BE SOLD OR LEASED—AT PUBLIC AUCTION—BOARD OF EDUCATION MAY LEASE SITE FOR HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.

Township trustees may not sell or lease township property by private arrangement, but must dispose of such property, if at all, at public auction.

A board of education may lease a site for a high school building.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1915.

HON. A. C. MCDOUGAL, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 10, 1915, requests my opinion as follows:

"Wayne township, Monroe county, has authorized the building of a township high school and desire to build it on real estate belonging to the township, being the one-half acre tract on which the town-house stands, which tract was conveyed about forty years ago to the trustees of Wayne township, their successors and assigns forever, by a deed of general warranty without any exceptions, reservations or limitations, being a straight warranty deed in the usual form. The township trustees do not want to call an election for the purpose of authorizing the trustees to make a deed for a portion of said tract of land to the board of education of said township, but desire to execute a lease to the board of education for a portion of said tract. Can such a lease be given for the purpose above noted and would the board of education have authority to build a township high school on such leased property?"

I do not find that township trustees are required to call an election for the purpose of securing authority to make a deed for a portion of such a tract of land. On the contrary section 3281 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"The trustees may receive on behalf of the township, any donation by bequest, devise, or deed of gift, or otherwise, of any property, real or personal, for any township use. When the township has real estate or buildings which it does not need for township purposes, the trustees may sell and convey any such real estate or buildings. Such sale must be by public auction and upon thirty days' notice thereof in a newspaper published, or of general circulation, in such township."

It thus appears that the township trustees, after due public notice as required in the above quoted section, may sell any real estate or buildings which the township does not need for township purposes. Such sale, however, must be at public auction and not at private sale. There is no authority of law whatever for the sale of township real estate at private sale. Therefore it appears that the trustees mentioned by you would not have authority to sell the tract in question at private sale to the board of education.

Nor do I find any authority for the township trustees to lease township real estate in the manner referred to by you. It might be argued that the authority to sell includes the lesser authority to lease, but if this be true it would nevertheless follow that the conditions attached to the making of a sale by section 3281, which would be the only source of authority to lease, would also attach to the making of the lease, and the lease would have to be offered at public auction after thirty days' notice, etc. In short, the township trustees are not authorized to make any bargain, sale, lease or other disposition of any lands belonging to the township otherwise than at public auction.

Of course these statements make unnecessary an answer to your question relative to the power of the board of education to build a school building on leased property. I might observe, however, that section 7620, General Code, which I need not quote, confers upon boards of education ample authority to lease sites for school houses.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—DELINQUENT STREET PAVING AND SEWER ASSESSMENTS—BONDS, NOTES AND CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS ISSUED IN ANTICIPATION OF COLLECTION OF SUCH ASSESSMENTS—NO PENALTY ADDED FOR DEFAULT IN PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENT—IF BONDS, NOTES OR CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS HAVE NOT BEEN ISSUED IN ANTICIPATION OF COLLECTION OF ASSESSMENTS, MUNICIPAL OFFICERS HAVE OPTION TO ADD PENALTY.

Where bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have been issued in anticipation of the collection of such assessments no penalty may be added or collected for default in payment of such assessments.

Where bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have not been issued in anticipation of the collection of such assessments, the municipal officers have the option, in the event such assessments are unpaid and delinquent, of collecting the same by suit together with interest and a penalty of 5 per cent. added, as provided in section 3898, G. C., or of certifying the same to the county auditor for collection as taxes, with a penalty of 10 per cent. added to cover interest and the expenses of collection.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 21, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of June 29th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:
> "What, if any, penalty shall be added to delinquent installments of special assessments levied by council of a municipality for street paving and sewer improvements?
> "In what instance, is the penalty of five per cent. provided in section 3898, General Code, to be assessed; also, when shall the penalty of ten per cent., provided in section 3905, General Code, be imposed?"

I assume that both of your questions have reference to special assessments, levies for street paving and sewer improvements.

For convenience in considering the questions asked, such assessments may be divided in two classes or subdivisions: (a) special assessments for street paving and sewer improvements in anticipation of the collection of which bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness are issued. (b) Special assessments for street construction and sewer improvements where no bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness are issued in anticipation of the collection to be made. The two classes will be considered in the order named. The several sections of the General Code relative to the collection of special assessments, which are pertinent to your inquires, are as follows:

> "Section 3892. When any special assessment is made, has been confirmed by council, and bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness of the corporation are issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, the clerk of the council, on or before the second Monday in September, each year, shall certify such assessment to the county auditor, stating the amounts and the time of payment. The county auditor shall place the assessment upon the tax list in accordance therewith and the county treasurer shall collect it in the same manner as other taxes are collected, and when collected pay such assessment to the treasurer of the corporation, to be by him applied to the payment of such bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness and interest thereon, and for no other purpose. For the purpose of enforcing such collection, the county treasurer shall have the same power and authority as allowed by law for the collection of state and county taxes.

"Section 3893. In all other cases, such assessment shall be paid to and collected by the treasurer of the municipality, and in any event the clerk of the council, when the receipt is presented to him by the owner, showing the payment of an assessment on his property, shall enter such receipt on the margin of the record of the assessment.

"Section 3898. If payment is not made by the time stipulated, the amount assessed together with interest, and a penalty of five per cent. thereon, may be recovered by suit before a justice of the peace, or other court of competent jurisdiction, in the name of the corporation, against the owner or owners, but the owner shall not be liable, under any circumstances, beyond his interest in the property assessed, at the time of the passage of the ordinance or resolution to improve.

"Section 3905. The council may order the clerk or other proper officer of the corporation to certify any unpaid assessment or tax to the auditor of the county in which the corporation is situated, and the amount of such assessment or tax so certified, shall be placed upon the tax list by the county auditor, and shall, with ten per cent. penalty to cover interest and cost of collection, be collected with and in the same manner as state and county taxes, and credited to the corporation. Such ten per cent. penalty shall in no case be added unless at least thirty days intervene between the date of the publication of the ordinance making the levy and the time of certifying it to the county auditor for collection."

Section 3892 of the General Code, quoted above, applies exclusively to the first class of assessments under consideration, and apparently no other method has been provided for enforcing the payments of assessments in anticipation of the collection of which bonds, notes or other certificates of indebtedness have been issued. No discretion is given council or its clerk in the matter. The statute is mandatory, and the clerk of council, "on or before the second Monday in September, each year, shall certify such assessment to the county auditor, stating the amount and the time of payment." When this action is taken by the clerk, the authority of the municipal officers is apparently exhausted and the further burden of collecting such assessments is shifted to the county officials. Full power and authority to that end is given to the county treasurer in the last paragraph of section 3892 of the General Code, supra. It will be observed, however, that no authority is conferred upon either municipal or county officers to impose a penalty in case of non-payment of this class of assessments.

It has been asserted that the county auditor, under the provisions of section 3852 of the General Code, must add to each assessment certified to him, to be collected by the county treasurer, such per cent. as he deems sufficient to defray the expenses of collecting it. Said section 3852, of the General Code, is as follows:

"In placing such assessment on the tax list, the county auditor is required to add to each assessment such per cent. as he deems necessary to defray the expenses of collecting it."

Upon tracing the history of this last section, however, I find that it was originally section 438 of the Municipal Code of 1869 (66 O. L., 222), and applies only to street sprinkling assessments. There has been no material change in this section since its passage, and it will be observed that it does not govern the auditor in placing any assessment on the tax list, but only in placing "such" assessment thereon. The application of the section, therefore, depends upon the antecedent of the word "such." In the Municipal Code of 1869, the antecedent of "such" was the street sprinkling assessment. The section was one of four sections contained in chapter 33 of the Municipal Code of 1869 pertaining to street sprinkling. Nothing in the Municipal Code of 1869 preceding this chapter related in any way to the subject of assessments, excepting chapter 32 which provided for lighting bridges and railways. The general provisions respecting improvements and the levy and collection of assessments therefor were found in chapters 48, 49 and 50, which were subsequent provisions.

Section 3851 of the General Code provides:

> "Every such assessment shall be a lien on the lands charged from the time the council determines the amount assessed against each parcel of land."

This, too, was a part of the street sprinkling provisions of the Municipal Code of 1869, being section 437 thereof.

The other two sections of the chapter on street sprinkling of the Municipal Code of 1869 were amended a few years later so as to be extended in certain grades and classes of cities to street improvements generally. Accordingly, when in 1902 the present Municipal Code was drafted these sections were re-written, and sections 65, 66 and 67 of the Municipal Code were substituted therefor. (See 96 O. L., 43.) At that time, however, the two sections above referred to and now constituting sections 3851 and 3852 of the General Code were left unrepealed, although sections of the Revised Statutes on both sides of them, so to speak, were repealed.

When the publishers of Bates' Revised Statutes got out their next edition after the passage of the Municipal Code 1902, they put the provisions respecting the method of assessing according to benefits (now sections 3847 and 3850 of the General Code) in between what was section 67 of the Municipal Code and these two old sections which should have followed section 67 in order to make the text clear. This order was adhered to by the codifiers of 1910, except that they also inserted section 3849 pertaining to equalizing assessments.

Accordingly, if any change has been effected in the meaning of the phrase "such assessment" since the section was originally adopted, that change has been brought about merely by inserting sections pertaining to another subject-matter out of their proper order in revisions and codes. This, in my judgment, does not change the substantial meaning of the section, which in my opinion, still is limited to assessments for street sprinkling, and such assessments only.

I therefore conclude that said section 3852 of the General Code does not apply to assessments of the character under consideration and that no duty is imposed upon or authority granted to the county auditor to add a per cent. for the expenses of collection in such cases.

In this connection also, attention is called to section 3817 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "When bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of the assessment, the interest thereon shall be treated as part of the cost of the improvement for which assessment may be made. If such assessment or any installment thereof is not paid when due, it shall bear interest until the payment thereof at the same rate as the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, and the county auditor shall annually place upon the tax duplicate the penalty and interest as therein provided."

The word "therein" in the last line above quoted must be taken to refer to the resolution of necessity provided for in section 3814 and section 3815 of the General Code, otherwise it is meaningless. Section 3815 of the General Code provides what shall be contained in such resolution of necessity, as follows:

"Such resolution shall determine the general nature of the improvement, what shall be the grade of the street, alley, or other public place to be improved, the grade or elevation of the curbs, and shall approve the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles for the proposed improvement. In such resolution council shall also determine the method of the assessment, the mode of payment, and whether or not bonds shall be issued in anticipation of the collection thereof. Assessments for any improvement may be payable in one to ten installments at such time as council prescribes."

No authority is conferred upon a municipality by the above quoted language to impose a penalty for the non-payment of assessments if not paid when due. Such power certainly cannot be implied unless necessity demands its exercise in order to properly accomplish the results aimed at by legislation. Section 3817 of the General Code was originally a part of section 51 of the Municipal Code of 1902 (96 O. L., 39) and the language there used was as follows:

"* * * if such assessments, or any installments thereof, shall not be paid when due, they shall bear interest until the payment thereof, at the same rate of the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of the same, and the county auditor shall annually place upon the tax duplicate the penalty and interest herein provided for. * * *"

This section was amended in the following year (97 O. L., 21) and the word "herein" changed to "therein."

Since in no other section of the General Code is there a provision made for imposing a penalty for non-payment of such assessments or authority conferred upon a municipal corporation to make such charge, it is immaterial whether the word "herein" or "therein" is used. In either case the word refers to a penalty which is unauthorized and which, therefore, cannot be imposed.

Section 3893 of the General Code, above quoted, directs that in all other cases such assessments shall be paid to and collected by the treasurer of the municipality. It is clear that the term "all other cases" refers to assessments for improvements where no bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have been issued in anticipation of the collection of such assessments by virtue of sections 3889 and 3905 of the General Code. The municipality is given the option of two remedies in case this second class of assessments is not paid when due: They may be collected either by suit at law with interest and a five per cent. penalty added; or they may be certified to the county auditor and by him placed upon the tax duplicate and collected with a penalty of ten per cent. added to cover interest and cost of collection.

Specifically answering your inquiries, therefore, first, as to assessments for street paving and sewer improvements where bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have been issued in anticipation of their collection, no penalty can be charged or collected for default in payment. Second, as to assessments for street paving and sewer improvements where no bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have been issued in anticipation of their collection, the municipal officers have the option of collecting by suit, with interest and a 5 per cent. penalty added, as provided in section 3898, or of certifying the same to the county auditor for collection as taxes, with a penalty of ten per cent. added to cover interest and the expenses of collection.

As I have been orally informed by Mr. Tracy that your request for my opinion was not intended to raise any question as to the right or duty of the county treasurer to collect a penalty on delinquent assessments under authority of any law relative to the collection of delinquent taxes, I have given that matter no consideration.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—IMPROVEMENT OF INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY TO WIDTH GREATER THAN TWENTY FEET—HOW PAID AND REASON FOR SAME—COMMISSION MAY IMPROVE TO WIDTH GREATER THAN TWENTY FEET BY AGREEMENT WITH COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, ABUTTING PROPERTY OWNERS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES.

Under section 1192, G. C., 103 O. L., 453, the state highway commissioner may improve an inter-county highway to a width greater than twenty feet and pay from the inter-county highway funds apportioned to the county in which such highway is located not more than one-half the cost of improving such highway to the width determined upon by the highway commissioner, provided special reasons exist which in the judgment of the highway commissioner require that the roadway be improved to a width greater than twenty feet. The highway commissioner may also improve an inter-county highway to a width greater than twenty feet provided a proper agreement is first made to pay the added cost due to the increased width, such agreement to be made either by (1) the county commissioners, or (2) the abutting property owners, or (3) the county commissioners, township trustees and abutting property owners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 15, 1915, in which you state that the county commissioners of Franklin county desire to improve a section of North High street to a width of 50 feet. I understand that the section of roadway referred to lies immediately north of the north corporation line of the city of Columbus and is not within the limits of any municipal corporation and is a part of an inter-county highway. The county commissioners of Franklin county desire that inter-county highway funds apportioned to Franklin county be applied by you toward the payment of a part of the cost and expense of the improvement referred to above and you ask my opinion as to whether or not the state highway department may comply with the request of the county commissioners and participate in the making of this improvement, using inter-county highway funds apportioned to Franklin county in the payment of the state's proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement. You further state that the attitude of your department is to co-operate in this matter and to pay not more than half of the cost of a 20-foot road. Your inquiry is answered by the provisions of section 1192, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 453, which section reads as follows:

> "The improved permanent roadway of such highway shall not be less than ten nor more than twenty feet in width unless for special reasons the state highway commissioner requires a greater width. The highway may be improved to a greater width than twenty feet if there is a stipulation in the application that abutting property owners will pay the added cost and expense of such improvement. The state highway commissioner may also improve a highway to a greater width than herein specified if the county commissioners therefore agree to pay such added cost, or such county commissioners, township trustees and abutting property owners may join in an application for an increase of width of an improvement by jointly agreeing to pay the added cost and expense thereof. All highways improved under the provisions of this chapter, shall conform to the standard prescribed by the state highway department."

Under the provisions of the above quoted section, the improved permanent roadway of an inter-county highway cannot exceed twenty feet in width unless for special reasons the state highway commissioner requires a greater width. In the improvement of an inter-county highway, the state highway commissioner cannot, therefore, expend from the inter-county highway fund an amount in excess of one-half of the cost of improving the highway to a width of twenty feet, unless special reasons exist which, in the judgment of the state highway commissioner, warrant a greater width. If such reasons do exist, then the state highway commissioner may pay from inter-county highway funds not more than one-half of the cost of improving the highway to such width as he determines to be proper. If in the judgment of the state highway commissioner there are no special reasons warranting or demanding the improvement of the highway to a width greater than 20 feet, the state highway department may, nevertheless, participate in the improvement and improve the highway to a width greater than twenty feet, if there is a stipulation in the application that the abutting property owners will pay the added cost and expense of such improvement due to the increased width of the improvement. The state highway commissioner may also improve a highway to a greater width than 20 feet if the county commissioners agree to pay such added cost or if the county commissioners, township trustees and abutting property owners join in the application for an increase of width of the improvement and jointly agree to pay the added cost and expense thereof.

Under the above provisions of section 1192, G. C., it will be within the power and authority of the state highway commissioner to improve the highway in question to a width of fifty feet and to pay from any inter-county highway funds apportioned to Franklin county, and not appropriated to any other improvement, not more than one-half of the cost of improving the highway to a width of twenty feet, provided a proper agreement is first made to pay the added cost due to improving the road to a width of fifty feet instead of twenty feet, such agreement to be made either by (1) the county commissioners, or (2) the abutting property owners, or (3) the county commissioners, township trustees and abutting property owners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO July 21, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 22, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

"Under date of April 13, 1914, this commission submitted to Hon. T. S. Hogan, then attorney general, the question as to whether or not the amendment of section 2, article 12, of the constitution, by changing the words 'Institution of Public Charity' to 'Institution used exclusively for charitable purposes' had the effect of making the provision of sections 5364, 5365 and 5365-1 constitutional. In his reply he held that any of the provisions of the above named sections which were in contravention of section 2, article 12, prior to its amendment were still in contravention of that section. In other words, that the amendment to the constitution did not have the effect of making constitutional the provisions of these sections which have heretofore been held to be unconstitutional.

"The commission desires to be advised whether or not you concur in the former attorney general's opinion in this regard, and in connection therewith requests your opinion upon the following:

"Is the real estate, personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, annuities, or otherwise belonging to a grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, a grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a grand lodge of Knights of Pythias, a religious or secret benevolent organization maintaining a lodge system, or an incorporated association of traveling men, subject to taxation?

"Are the funds of a fraternal benefit society organized or licensed under the act passed May 31, 1911, 102 O. L., 533, exempt from taxation as seems to be provided in section 5365-1 of the General Code?"

Sections 5364, 5365 and 5365-1, G. C., as stated by you, were enacted prior to the adoption of the amendment of section 2 of article 12, of the constitution, September 3, 1912, and provided as follows:

> "Section 5364. Real or personal property belonging to an incorporated post of the Grand Army of the Republic, union veterans' union, grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias, association for the exclusive benefit, use and care of aged, infirm and dependent women, a religious or secret benevolent organization maintaining a lodge system, an incorporated association of ministers of any church, or incorporated association of commercial traveling men, an association which is intended to create a fund or is used or intended to be used for the care and maintenance of indigent soldiers of the late war, indigent members of said organizations, and the widows, orphans and beneficiaries of the deceased members of such organizations, and not operated with a view to profit or having as their principal object the issuance of insurance certificates of membership, and the interest or income derived therefrom, shall not be taxable, and the trustees of any such organizations shall not be required to return or list such property for taxation.
> "Section 5365. Moneys, funds or credits belonging to the representative body of Indiana meeting of friends or the religious society known as the German Baptist or Dunkers, in this state, which moneys, funds or credits or the income therefrom are exclusively used for the support of the poor of such denomination, society or congregation, shall be exempt from taxation. The person or persons having the care and supervision of such moneys, funds or credits, shall not be required to return or list them for taxation.
> "Section 5365-1. Every fraternal benefit society organized or licensed under this act is hereby declared to be a charitable and benevolent institution, and all of its funds shall be exempt from all and every state, county, district, municipal and school tax, other than taxes on real estate and office equipment."

Section 2 of article 12 of the constitution, prior to the amendment in 1912, provided that:

> "Institutions of purely public charity---------- may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation."

This particular provision as amended in 1912, is as follows:

> "Institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes, ---------- may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation."

Your first inquiry is whether or not I concur in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to the effect that any provision of the above quoted statutes which was in contravention of the above constitutional provision prior to its amendment, is unconstitutional and void, notwithstanding that such statutory provision is not in contravention of that constitutional provision as amended. Stated in its simplest form, the question is: May a previously enacted unconstitutional statute be rendered valid by constitutional amendment?

In the case of Fenetenet v. Young, 128 La., 20, it was held that where a statute which is attacked as unconstitutional has been ratified and confirmed by an amendment to the constitution, whereby it has been made in effect a part of that instrument itself, there is no longer ground upon which claim of unconstitutionality may be based.

In Hutchinson v. Patching, 126 S. W., 1107, Texas case, it was held that the unconstitutionality of a statute creating a school district and authorizing the collection of taxes, was cured by subsequent constitutional amendment, declaring lawful all school districts theretofore created, and validating the bonds issued and authorizing an annual tax levy for their redemption.

Hammond v. Clark, 136 Ga., 213, holds that where an act of the legislature was declared to be unconstitutional and thereupon the legislature proposed an amendment to the constitution curing the defect and also ratifying the act as of the date of passage, and such amendment was adopted by the people, the same will not be held void for the reason that it did not sect out in terms the act sought to be validated. In each of these cases it is manifest upon the face of the constitutional amendment that it was intended to be retroactive in its operation and express reference is made to the statutes, the defects of which were intended to be cured, and by reason thereof it was held so long as such constitutional amendments were within the limitations of the Federal constitution, the validity is sustained.

In the case of Dewar v. People, 40 Mich., 401, it is said by Cooley, Judge:

> "The removal of the constitutional prohibition against licensing the sale of liquor, does not authorize a town council to license drinking saloons under a municipal charter granted before a constitutional amendment."

Similar rule was laid down in the case of Village v. Vansice, 43 Mich., 573.

In Mining Company v. Osmun, 82 Mich., 573, at page 576 of the opinion, the court says:

> "If the law-making power is prohibited from enacting a law and in disregard of such prohibition it goes through the forms of enacting a law, such enactment is of no more force than a blank piece of paper and is utterly void, and power subsequently conferred upon the legislature by amendment of the constitution does not have a retroactive effect and give validity to such void law."

The case of Dullman v. Willson, 53 Mich., 392, was an action in quo warranto against an officer who had been removed by the governor under the statute enacted prior to the adoption of a constitutional amendment in 1862. In the opinion the court says:

> "I am satisfied that the statute furnishes no valid basis for the power of removal because repugnant to the constitution of 1835, which vested no judicial power in the governor. The statute, being void, was not validated by the amendment of 1862, and the question (of the power of removal) depends solely upon the constitutional amendment of 1862."

Thus it was held that while authority for removal might be found within the constitutional amendment adopted prior to the action taken by the governor, that no authority for such action on the part of the governor could be sustained under a statute enacted prior to such constitutional amendment in contravention of the constitution in force at the time of the enactment of the statute.

The supreme court of the United States, in the case of Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S., 36, in the third branch of the syllabus, say:

"Constitutions operate prospectively only, unless on their face the contrary intention is manifest beyond reasonable question."

This principle is also laid down in Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, at page 77.

From an examination of the above cases, it will be observed that the constitutional amendments there under consideration were merely grants of legislative authority, without any reference whatever to any pre-existing legislation, and in that respect are clearly distinguishable from class of amendments considered in the cases previously referred to. That is, the constitutional amendments in the latter cases referred to were analogous to the amendment of section 2 of article 12, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, in that they were enabling only or a mere grant of power and authority. It therefore appears upon ample authority that the rule is stated in 8 Cyc., 768, as follows:

"An unconstitutional statute is absolutely null and void ab initio, having no binding force; and cannot be validated by a subsequent constitutional amendment removing the legislative restriction by which its enactment was prohibited. * * * Validating constitutional provisions do not operate retrospectively unless they are intended to so operate; and therefore unconstitutional legislation is not validated by the subsequent adoption of constitutional amendments or other provisions merely authorizing the enactment of such legislation and without expressing any intent to validate it."

And in the 6 Am. and Eng. Enc., 917 (2nd Ed.).

"Constitutions are construed to operate prospectively only unless on the face of the instrument a contrary intention is manifest beyond a reasonable question."

To determine then whether the amendment of section 2 of article 12, of the constitution, adopted September 3, 1912, is retroactive in its operation, it is necessary only to determine whether or not there is manifest upon its face, beyond reasonable question, an intent that it should be retroactive in its operation, and if such intent is so manifest, that it is not in contravention of the Federal constitution. The force and purpose of this amendment is solely to confer a power upon the legislature theretofore denied it, by a provision which is in no sense self-executing and without any reference to any previous attempt of the legislative authority to exercise such extended power, and nothing appears in connection with such amendment that would sustain a contention that it was the intent, beyond a reasonable question, of either the constitutional convention or the electorate in its adoption, that it would be retroactive in its operation, and is hence clearly distinguishable from that class of amendments under consideration in the cases herein first referred to. It is, as above stated, solely enabling in character and comes clearly within the rule prohibiting its retroactive operation. In arriving at this conclusion I am not unmindful of the schedule to the constitutional amendments adopted September 3, 1912, which provides:

"The several amendments passed and submitted by this convention when adopted at the election, shall take effect on the first day of January, 1913, except as otherwise specifically provided by the schedule attached to any of said amendments. All laws then in force not inconsistent therewith shall continue in force until amended or repealed. ----------."

It will be observed that this provision in so far as it is material to the present consideration is applicable only to "laws then in force" as distinguished from acts passed by the legislature.

It is sufficient here to say that an act of the legislature which is in contravention of constitutional authority never becomes a "law," and from this it follows of necessity that it cannot be said in a legal sense to be at any time in force.

Mining Co. v. Osman, 82 Mich., 573.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Vail et al., 84 O. S., 399, at page 405 of the opinion, it is said,

"No controversy exists respecting the proposition that an unconstitutional law is in legal contemplation inoperative as though it had not been passed."

While this statement has not the force of a decision, it is significant that no controversy arose upon that proposition in so important a case if it were not the settled law of the state, that an unconstitutional act of the legislature is as inoperative as though it had not been passed.

While an observation of a wholly unconstitutional act of the legislature may give rise to equitable rights between parties (Mt. Vernon v. State, 71 O. S., 428), such rights have their foundation in the fundamental principles of justice and are based upon the conduct and altered status of the parties rather than upon any authority or force found in the legislative enactment and in no case will it be found to be held that such unconstitutional act has any force or is in any sense operative.

In Railway Co. v. Commissioners, 1 O. S., 77, it is said:

"The general assembly, like the other departments of government, exercise only delegated authority; and any act passed by it, not falling fairly within the scope of 'legislative authority' is as clearly void as though expressly prohibited."

That which is void cannot be a law and neither can it have any force. Since such unauthorized act is a nullity and of no force or effect whatever, it cannot be given vitality by constitutional mandate which is applicable only to valid and subsisting laws. That is to say, such parts of legislative enactments as are in contravention of the constitution are not given validity by a provision of the schedule continuing in force and operation valid laws. I therefore concur in the opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, and hold that since sections 5364, 5365 and 5365-1, G. C., were enacted prior to the amendments of the constitution in 1912, any additional power thereby conferred has no application thereto and the validity of these statutes can be sustained only in so far as within the power conferred by the constitution at the time of their enactment, and such further restrictions thereof as may be found in constitutional provisions subsequently adopted.

Before entering upon a further consideration of your second inquiry, it is noted that mention is therein made of investments in bonds, and relative thereto attention is called to that provision of section 2 of article 12, as amended in September, 1912, which is as follows:

> "* * * all bonds at present outstanding of the state of Ohio or of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state, or which have been issued in behalf of the public schools in Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, which bonds so at present outstanding shall be exempt from taxation;"

This provision, although having been adopted since the enactment of the statutes above referred to, is restrictive in its operation and self-executing, hence all bonds within this classification are exempt from taxation, regardless of their ownership.

All the other classes of property enumerated in your second question come within the terms of that part of section 2 of article 12, of the constitution, which is as follows:

> "Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money. * *"

Such property must then be liable to taxation unless it be found to come within one or more of those classes of property which the constitution at the time of the enactment of the statute conferred authority upon the legislature to exempt by general law, viz., "burying grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose," and further that the legislature in the exercise of such power has, by statutory enactment, exempted the same.

It will be observed that ownership is not made the basis of exemption of any of those classes of property last above referred to, as enumerated in section 2 of article 12, of the constitution, prior to the amendment in 1912, but that the authority for exemption is, in each case, referable to the use to which the property is appropriated or applied, and that in so far as any exemption attempted is based upon ownership alone, it must be wholly void. So that the ownersip of property is immaterial to the present consideration, except in so far as it may be indicative of the use to which the property in question is put. In short, the constitutional authority for a statutory exemption of any of those classes of property referred to by you, except certain bonds already alluded to, must be founded solely upon the use to which that property is put, regardless of any statutory reference or declaration as to ownership. (Watterson v. Halliday, 77 O. S., 180.)

In Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 242, it is said:

> "The exemption of 'burying grounds,' 'houses used exclusively for public worship' 'and institutions of purely public charity,' does not depend upon the ownership of the property. The uses that such property subserved, constitute the grounds for its exemption."

It is assumed that it would be conceded that none of these classes of property enumerated by you fall within either "burying grounds," "houses used exclusively for public worship" or "public property used exclusively for any public purpose," so that any claim for authority in the legislature to exempt the same, must be based upon the power to exempt "institutions of purely public charity." That is to say, before there was any authority for statutory exemption of any or all of those classes of property enumerated in your inquiry, at the time of the enactment of the statutes under consideration, it must be found as a matter of fact, to come within the meaning of the phrase of the constitution—"institutions of purely public charity."

In the case of Humphreys v. Little Sisters, 29 O. S., 201, at page 206 of the opinion, it is said:

> "By the term institution is to be understood as an organization which is permanent in its nature, as contra distinguished from an undertaking which is transient and temporary."

The Century dictionary defines the term "institution" as "an establishment for the promotion of some object; an organized society or body of persons, usually with a fixed place of assemblage and operation, devoted to a special pursuit or purpose."

In the case of Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229, at page 244 of the opinion, it is said:

> "The term 'institution' is sometimes used as descriptive of the establishment or place where the business or operation of a society or association is carried on; at other times it is used to designate the organized body * * * as used in the constitutional provision, the term may be applied in either sense; but in whichever sense it may be used, its only operation, as respects taxation, will be its effect upon property."

On the same page of the opinion it is further said:

> "It is to be observed that the duty to tax as well as the authority to exempt from taxation, has reference to property. It is property alone that is required to be taxed, and property also is the object of authorized exemptions."

See also State ex rel. v. Edmondson, 89 O. S., 361; Little v. Seminary, 12 O. S., 427.

In the case of Benjamin Rose Institution v. Myers, Treas., et al., not yet published, No. 13882, recently decided by the supreme court of this state, the court uses the following language:

> "We gather from these two cases, as well as from the several Ohio cases, these two general and controlling rules of interpretation:
> "1. It is the use of the property which renders it exempt or non-exempt, not the use of the income derived from it.
> "2. The exemption is not a release in personam but a release in rem, and the res to which the release applies must be found and identified by the officer or no exemption can be recognized.

From this it follows that at least for the purpose of our present consideration, the term "institution" in the last analysis has reference to property only and, as above stated, the constitutional authority for the exemption of such property must be determined solely from the uses to which that property is appropriated or applied, and without regard to ownership thereof. That is to say, the constitutional authority for statutory exemption is limited by this particular phrase to establishments devoted to purely public charity, and to property of associations or organizations, the activities of which are confined to the administration of a purely public charity.

The term "institution" in this sense is held in County v. Church, 27 Minn., 460, and State v. Hospital, 95 Minn., 489, to comprehend "not only a building and ground covered by it, but adjacent ground which is reasonably necessary or proper to the purposes and objects in view, and which is used directly for the promotion and accomplishment of the same."

Whether or not a charity is public depends upon the particular facts in each case. The nature of the charity and the manner and extent of its administration and distribution will determine whether or not it is public in its character. In Gerke v. Purcell, supra, at page 244 of the opinion, the court said:

> "For the purpose of determining the public nature of the charity, it is not material through what particular forms the charity may be administered. If it is established and maintained for the use and benefit of the public, and so conducted that the public may make it available, that is all that is required."

The term "public" here has reference to the object of the charity rather than to its ownership, or is descriptive of the use to which the property is devoted.

In the case of Gerke v. Purcell, supra, it is said also that:

> "When the charity is public, the exclusion of all idea of private gain or profit is equivalent in effect to the force of 'purely' as applied to public charity in the constitution."

A purely public charity may then be said to be one conducted exclusively for public benefit and without any idea of private gain or profit.

In the case of Morning Star Lodge v. Hayslip, 23 O. S., 144, it was held:

> "A charitable or benevolent association which extends relief only to its own sick and needy members, and to the widows and orphans of its deceased members, is not 'an institution of purely public charity;' and its moneys held and invested for the aforesaid purposes are not exempt from taxation."

See also Newport v. Association, 49 L. R. A., 252, and cases there cited.

The Morning Star Lodge case, supra, leaves little to be said in answer to your second question, in so far as it relates to that class of property, and the purpose to which it was devoted involved in that case.

A charity is said to include not only gifts to the poor, but endowments for the advancement of learning and for any other useful and public purposes. Schools, colleges and hospitals are charities in the legal sense of the term as well as homes and asylums for indigent and afflicted persons. So an asylum for destitute men and women and the incurable sick and blind, irrespective of their nationality, is held to be an institution of purely public charity in the case of Humphreys v. Little Sisters of the Poor, 20 O. S., 201. In Library Association v. Pelton, 36 O. S., 253, it was held that, "a library association incorporated under the law of this state, whose objects and purposes are 'the diffusion of useful knowledge and the acquirement of arts and science, by the establishment of a library of scientific and miscellaneous books for general circulation, and a reading room, lectures and cabinets, open to all persons without distinction, upon equal terms, and the income and revenues of which are devoted exclusively to such objects and purposes,' is an institution of purely public charity."

It will be noted, however, that in this case it was further held that although this library association was an institution of purely public charity, it was only such property of such association as was devoted exclusively to the purposes of charity that might be exempted from taxation. That is to say, whatever may be the ostensible purpose of the organization or association, it is only that property of such institution as is devoted exclusively to the purpose of public charity that is authorized to be exempted from taxation. So in the case of Watterson v. Halliday, 77 O. S., 150, it was held that parish houses used as residences of bishops were not exempt from taxation, although used for the discharge of any duties of a charitable and religious nature.

See also Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229;
Cincinnati Club v. Edmondson, 13 C. C. (n. s.), 489;
Gilmour v. Pelton, 2 W. L. B., 159;
Davis v. Campmeeting Assn., 57 O. S., 257;
Little v. Seminary, 72 O. S., 427.

In the case of Gymnasium v. Edmondson, 13 C. C., (n. s.) 491, the court said:

> "What is meant in law, by the use of the word public? Public does not mean free; but rather that which is open to a class or kind on equal conditions, or rather where all may go who can comply with certain necessary and reasonable requirements—restrictions."

In Gilmour v. Pelton, 2 W. L. B., 159, it was held that Catholic schools which were open to the public without distinction were purely public, although it is assumed that only youth of school age might attend.

In the case of Burd Asylum v. School District, 90 Pa. St., 21, under the same constitutional provision as found in Ohio, prior to the amendment of 1912, it was held that an asylum whose object should be the maintenance and education of white female orphan children of not less than four years nor more than eight, making certain further restrictions as to preference, was an institution of purely public charity, within the constitutional limitations on the power to exempt from taxation.

To constitute a public charity, it is then not essential that the bounty be available to all the public, but it is sufficient that the benefit be available to a class, the membership of which is indefinite, continuing and involuntary. A public charity comprehends then not that which is available to each individual member of the public alone, but as well that class of charity from which a substantial public benefit is derived, as for instance a relief from public taxes, a moral and intellectual advancement of society, and improvement of public health or substantially conducive to the general public welfare.

I therefore conclude that under authority of the provision of the constitution, under which the sections under consideration were enacted, exemptions from taxation may be extended only to property of substantial permanence, devoted exclusively to charitable purposes of such nature as to be available to a class of indefinite number and involuntary membership, administered without any idea to private gain or profit and not limited to the membership of a secret organization and their widows and orphans, which results in a substantial public benefit.

In this particular, neither of the constitutional provisions under consideration are self-executing. They are, with respect to the particular provision under consideration, on the contrary, only a grant of power to the legislature, and we have yet to determine what exemptions have been effected by the legislature in the exercise of the authority so conferred and within its limits relative to those classes of property enumerated in your second inquiry. By the provisions of section 5353, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 548, property of institutions of public charity is exempt from taxation, in addition to the provision of section 5364, G. C., as above quoted.

Your inquiry has reference only to enumerated secret orders, religious or benevolent organizations maintaining a lodge system, and incorporated associations of traveling men. As I have heretofore determined that the sole basis of exemption under the constitutional authority therefor, is the use to which the property is devoted, it is immaterial, as above stated, that the legislature has chosen to refer to the ownership of property undertaken to be exempted from taxation. (Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229, seventh branch of syllabus; and Humphreys v. Little Sisters, 29 O. S., 226; Cincinnati Club v. Edmondson, 13 C. C. [n. s.] 489.) As heretofore repeatedly stated, unless the use of the property comes within the contemplation of the constitutional authority granted, a statutory exemption thereof will be null, void and of no effect whatever. The question of the use of the property is a matter of fact which cannot be controlled by a mere declaration of the legislature. That is to say, property may not become a purely public charity by simple legislative fiat.

Your inquiry makes particular reference to personal property as well as to moneys, credits and other classes of property. In the case of Myers, Treas., v. Rose Institute, No. 13883, which was decided by the supreme court of this state June 4, 1915, it was held:

> "Section 5353, General Code, when enacted and when this suit was brought, was within the authority granted to the general assembly by section 2, article 12, of the constitution, as then in force, and exempted from taxation the personal property of institutions of purely public charity, including endowment funds which belong exclusively to them and which with the income arising therefrom are devoted solely to their support."

And in the opinion the court says:

> "It is thus shown, by the history of the legislative treatment of the subject and by the adjudications of this court, that for a period of more than fifty years after the adoption of the constitution of 1851 it was the settled law of the state; first, that land and the buildings thereon actually occupied by institutions of purely public charity were exempt from taxation; second, that the real estate of such institutions, which was leased or otherwise used with a view to profit, was not exempt from taxation, and; third, that the monies and credits of such institutions, including their endowment funds which were devoted solely to deriving an income for their support, were exempt. This was the situation until the adoption of the General Code, which was in effect when this suit was brought.
> "The codifying commission, pursuing its usual course, divided section 2732, Revised Statutes, which had consisted of ten subdivisions, into twelve separate sections, to wit, numbers 5349 to 5360, of the General Code. The portions pertinent here are sections 5353 and 5354, General Code, which read:
> " 'Sec. 5353. Lands, houses and other buildings belonging to a county, township, city or village, used exclusively for the accommodation or support of the poor, and property belonging to institutions of public charity only, shall be exempt from taxation.'

"'Sec. 5354. Buildings belonging to and used exclusively for armory purposes * * * and the land owned and used as sites for the armory buildings of such military organizations, not leased or otherwise used with a view to profit and moneys and credits appropriated solely to sustain, and belonging exclusively to, such organizations, shall be exempt from taxation.'

"It will thus be seen that the only reference to institutions of purely public charity is included in section 5353, viz., 'and property belonging to institutions of public charity only shall be exempt from taxation.' It would seem to be clear that this language is sufficiently broad to include every exemption which had theretofore been provided in favor of the institutions referred to, and that the word 'property' which replaced the word 'buildings' was used in the act of 1908 with the intention of broadening rather than restricting the operation of the statute so far as personal property is concerned, and to include not only moneys and credits but all other personal property of such institution. This would of course be equally clear as to the provision in the General Code. Prior to the act of 1908, the only reference of personality was as to 'monies and credits.' Therefore, it might well have been doubted whether chattels, such as live stock, etc., or stock in foreign corporations which belonged to the institution by bequest, or otherwise, were exempt. By changing the word 'buildings' to the word 'property' that doubt was removed. The word 'building' and the phrase 'moneys and credits' are retained in section 5354, General Code, relating to armories, while the word 'property' is retained in section 5353, which is the only section that relates to institutions of public charity only."

While the subject-matter involved in this case was presumably confined to moneys and credits, it seems from the language of the court to be clearly determined that under the provisions of section 5353, G. C., all personal property of sufficient permanence to be properly termed an institution which is devoted solely to the purposes of purely public charity within the constitutional limitation, was, by the legislature, intended to be exempted. This was an action brought to enjoin the collection of taxes upon personal property held in trust, as alleged in the amended petition, for the charitable use set forth in the petition, and the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeals in overruling the demurrer to the amended petition. So that all these classes of personal property enumerated by you, except that class of bonds herein referred to, were by statutory provision exempted from taxation, when, but only when, appropriated and applied exclusively to purposes of purely public charity.

In the case of Rose Institute v. Myers, No. 13882, supra, it was held:

"The real estate belonging to an institution of purely public charity is exempt from taxation only when used exclusively for charitable purposes, and if such real estate is rented for commercial and residence purposes, it is not exempt although the income arising from such use is devoted wholly to the purpose of the charity."

So that while no facts are submitted in the inquiry from which it may be determined as to whether or not the classes of property, or any of them, are devoted exclusively to purposes of purely public charity, it may be again stated that only such class, classes or part of such property, as are in fact so exclusively and directly devoted and appropriated to sustaining a purely public charity or administering the same, could have been at the time of the enactment of sections 5353, 5354, 5365 and 5365-1, G. C., lawfully exempted from taxation, and all the other property of the organizations, orders and associations mentioned in your second inquiry is, therefore, subject to taxation. (Library Assn. v. Pelton, 36 O. S., 253; College v. State, 19 Ohio, 111; Kenyon College v. Schnebly, 12 C. C., [n. s. 1].)

Section 5365-1, G. C., was enacted as section 30 of the act of May 31, 1911, 102 O. L., 533, and hence no question can arise as to the legislative purpose to exempt from all taxes the funds of every fraternal benefit society, organized or licensed under the act referred to. The only question then involved in your third inquiry is whether or not the exemptions attempted to be made by section 5365-1, G. C., were within the constitutional authority of the legislature at the time of the enactment of this section.

The act referred to is of such length as to render it impracticable that it be set out in this opinion, but a cursory examination of the same will readily disclose its nature and primary purpose. In section 1 of the act it is provided that any corporation, society, order or voluntary association, without capital stock, organized and carried on solely for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, is declared to be a fraternal benefit society.

Elaborate provision is made for the organization, government and control of these societies, and in section 7 thereof the membership is limited to persons not less than sixteen and not more than sixty years of age, who have been examined by a legally qualified physician, and whose examination has been supervised and approved in accordance with the laws of the society. Benefits may be paid in case of death of a member only to certain enumerated relatives, or to persons dependent upon the deceased member. Benefits for physical disability, either as a result of disease, accident or old age, may be paid. Certificates of membership are declared to constitute a contract. Provision is made for the investment, disbursement and application of the funds of the organization. It is subject to examination by the superintendent of insurance and indeed has many, if not all, of the attributes of insurance, notwithstanding that it is provided by section 4 of the act (section 9565, G. C.), that such society shall be exempt from the insurance laws of the state except as otherwise provided in the act. The society may invest its funds only in securities permitted by the laws of this state for the investment of the assets of life insurance companies. Section 29 of the act (section 9491, G. C.) provides that nothing in the act shall be construed to apply to certain enumerated secret orders, exclusive of the insurance departments thereof or to societies which limit their membership to any one hazardous occupation, nor to similar societies which do not issue insurance certificates.

It will not be contended that authority for the exemption of the funds of such societies will be found in the constitution as it stood at the time of the enactment of the act in question except that the same come within the meaning of the phrase "institutions of purely public charity."

While it is provided in section 12 of the act (section 9473, G. C.) that any lawful social, intellectual, educational, charitable, benevolent, moral or religious advantage may be set forth among the purposes of the society, and in section 21 of the act (section 9482, G. C.) it is provided that no money or "charity" to be paid by the society shall be liable to attachment, it will be remembered that the provisions for the investment, disbursement and application of the funds include no purpose which may be said to be charitable.

I fail to find anything in the act upon which a claim that those organizations are in any sense charitable institutions may with any show of reason be based and much less are they public in their nature. The benefits which they are required to or may pay are limited to the members, and certain of their relatives, or to a person or persons dependent upon a member, and the membership is restricted to certain classes of persons. I am unable to conceive how any of the funds of an organization under this act may be lawfully appropriated to a purpose that may be said to be a purely public charity, and except that such funds are so appropriated and applied, no authority rested in the legislature at the time of the enactment of section 5365-1, G. C., to make such exemption; and in so far as any funds of such society which are not devoted to the purposes of a purely public charity are thereby attempted to be exempted from taxation, that section of the statute is unconstitutional, null and void.

I am therefore of opinion that the funds of a fraternal benefit society, organized or licensed under the act of May 31, 1911, 102 O. L., 533, are not exempt from taxation.

It may be further observed, however, that by the amendment of section 2 of article 12, of the constitution of the state in 1912, there is eliminated from the constitutional restriction upon the power of the legislature to exempt from taxation the word "public" and that provision is made to read "institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes * * * may be made by general laws to be exempt from taxation." So that, if the same provisions as are now upon the statute books of the state were re-enacted by the legislature under the present constitution, it is conceived that certain property of those orders, associations or organizations mentioned by you, which are not now exempt from taxation, would become so. For instance, homes for widows of members, orphans of members, aged and indigent members of these organizations maintained by them, are clearly charitable and the property dedicated to the uses and purposes of those homes may be exclusively charitable; or, in other words, used exclusively for charitable purposes, although not a public charity, and it is therefore deemed competent for the legislature, under the present form of the constitutional provision, to exempt property of such character which is now, or may hereafter be, used exclusively for charitable purposes; and perhaps to effectively do so by the same language as is at present in the statute, notwithstanding the force and effect of that same language attempted to be enacted into the law prior to the constitutional amendment, may not now effect an exemption of that class of property.

This opinion has been delayed awaiting the opinion of the supreme court in the Rose Institute cases above referred to, which was available only last week.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

UNDER THE SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW, SECTIONS 5649-1 TO 5649-5b, G. C., A COUNTY AS A "TAXING DISTRICT" IS NOT LIMITED IN AMOUNT OF LEVY BY AMOUNT LEVIED IN ANY PRECEDING YEAR—TAXES AND TAXATION—TEN MILL LIMITATION—FIFTEEN MILL LIMITATION.

A county, as a "taxing district," under sections 5649-1 to 5649-5b, G. C., the Smith one per cent. law, is not limited in the amount of its levy by the amount levied in any preceding year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 22, 1915.

HON. JOHN H. SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 17, 1915, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "Under sections 5649-1 to 5649-3c, General Code, does a 'county' constitute a taxing district?
> "Under the above named sections can a county which raises about $90,000.00 for general purposes for the year 1911, increase that amount to $120,000.00 in 1915, even though the rate is within the three mill limitation?"

I think both of your questions are founded upon a misapprehension as to the present force and effect of the Smith one per cent. law. What was known as the 1910 limitation or the amount that might be levied in any year in any taxing district, was eliminated from the original measure by what was known as the Kilpatrick law, 103 O. L., 552. As the law now stands no taxing district is explicitly limited to the amount levied by it in any preceding year, but the only limitations now in force are the limitations of ten mills plus the interest and sinking fund levies of a certain class provided by section 5649-2, as amended; three mills (as to counties) upon the rate which a taxing district may levy for its own purposes, subject to the other limitations as provided for by section 5649-3a, G. C., and fifteen mills for all except certain specific purposes provided by section 5649-5b, as amended, 103 O. L., 57.

Accordingly, answering your second question first I beg to advise that if none of the three limitations to which I referred is operative in any territory in the county requires the reduction of the county levy, that levy may be such as to represent an amount in excess of the amount raised for general purposes in the year 1911, and the budget commission would have no authority to reduce the county levy solely upon the ground that it was in excess in amount of that for the year 1911.

Answering your first question, which, I suppose, in view of the answer to your second question, may be regarded as academic for your purposes, I beg to advise that in my opinion the county is a taxing district for some of the purposes of the Smith one per cent. law, but that though apparently called a taxing district for the purposes of the ten mill limitation, yet it is obvious that in the nature of things it cannot be treated as such, for there is no one uniform aggregate rate throughout the county, and section 5649-2 (together with section 5649-5b relative to the fifteen mill limitation to which these remarks also apply), relates to the aggregate rate for all except certain designated purposes.

That a county did constitute a separate taxing district may be assumed for the purposes of the original Smith law in its application to the amount of limitation. But, as previously observed, that limitation is no longer found in the law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—HAS AUTHORITY TO LET CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT, IF ORIGINAL CONTRACTOR HAS NOT PERFORMED HIS PART OF CONTRACT—CONTRACT RELET—FORMER CONTRACTOR'S MATERIAL CANNOT BE USED UNLESS HE CONSENTS.

Where the state highway commissioner, acting under authority of section 1203-1, G. C., determines to relet the work of constructing an inter-county highway improvement, for the reason that the original contractor has not carried forward with reasonable progress, or is improperly performing, or has abandoned, or fails or refuses to complete his contract; material delivered on the site of the improvement but not yet used and upon which no estimate has been allowed, remains the property of the original contractor and may not be used in completing the contract unless the original contractor so agrees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 16, 1915, I have a communication from Mr. H. M. Sharp, deputy of construction in the state highway department, in which he states that it is your purpose to relet the work of constructing the Cincinnati-Batavia road in Clermont county. The contract for this improvement was originally awarded to Thurber & Company, August 4, 1914, and the date set for completion was August 1, 1915. Very unsatisfactory progress has been made by the contractor and only about one-third of the work required by the contract has been completed. The contractor has practically abandoned work and it is proposed to relet the work of construction on August 6, 1915.

It is stated that Thurber & Company now have stored in piles along this road coarse limestone quarried and ready to be crushed for use in the construction of the road and that the estimated quantity of stone thus stored along the road is about two thousand cubic yards. The inquiry now is as to whether this stone belongs to Thurber & Company or whether the state highway department can regard the stone as available material to be used by the successful contractor who might be awarded the contract at the letting on August 6th, it being the intention of the state highway commissioner to complete the road by contract rather than force account. It is also inquired as to whether Thurber & Company will be entitled to any compensation for this stone or any other materials delivered on the site of the proposed improvement and designed to be used in the work of construction but not actually placed in the road.

Section 1203-1, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 456, defines the authority of the state highway commissioner under the circumstances set forth in Mr. Sharp's communication, and this section reads as follows:

"If the contractor has not commenced or carried forward with reasonable progress or is improperly performing or has abandoned, or fails or refuses to complete a contract under the provisions of this chapter, the state highway commissioner shall have full power and authority to enter upon and construct, either by contract, force account or in such manner as he may deem for the best interests of the public, paying the full cost and expense thereof from any moneys that may be due or become due such contractor, and in case there is not sufficient moneys due the contractor to pay for said work, the highway commissioner shall require the contractor or his bondsman to pay for it. It is the duty of the attorney general or any prosecuting attorney of the county in which said highway is situated, to collect the same from the contractor and his bondsman."

It will be noted that this section contains no authorization for the state highway commissioner to use any materials delivered on the site of the improvement and not yet incorporated therein and that the section further provides for the payment of the full cost and expense of completing the improvement from any moneys that may be due or become due the contractor and any deficit is to be supplied by the contractor or his bondsman.

Section 1211, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 457, reads as follows:

"Payment of the cost of construction of such improvement shall be made as the work of construction progresses, upon estimates made by the engineer in charge of the work when approved by the state highway commissioner. No payment made by the state or county on a contract for such work before its completion shall be in excess of eighty-five per cent. of the value of the work performed. Fifteen per cent. of the value of the work performed shall be held until the completion of the contract in accordance with the plans and specifications."

It will be noted that the section above quoted contains no express authorization for the state highway commissioner to allow and pay estimates on account of materials delivered on the site of the proposed improvement and not yet used in the work of construction. I understand that the state highway department has assumed that it has implied authority to allow and pay estimates on account of material so delivered and the contract between the state and Thurber & Company contains a provision that the commissioner may at his discretion allow a partial estimate for material delivered on the improvement. The question of whether under section 1211, G. C., authority exists in the state highway commissioner to allow and pay estimates on account of material delivered and not yet used is however not directly involved in the present inquiry even in view of the provision above referred to and contained in the contract between the state and Thurber & Company, for the reason that I am informed that in this particular instance no estimate has been allowed and paid to Thurber & Company on account of the delivery upon the site of the improvement of the stone in question.

In view of the absence of any express statutory provision authorizing the use of material delivered on the site of the improvement and in view of the express provision of section 1203-1, G. C., to the effect that the state highway commissioner shall pay the full cost and expense of completing the improvement from any moneys that may be due or become due the contractor and that the contractor or his bondsman shall supply any deficit, I conclude in answer to the first inquiry that the stone delivered on the road and not yet incorporated in the improvement remains the property of Thurber & Company, and that such stone can not be regarded as available material to be used by the successful contractor who might be awarded the contract at the letting on August 6th, unless Thurber & Company so agree. The original contractor is of course interested in seeing the road completed as cheaply as possible, in order that a deficit may be avoided and something saved from the unexpended portion of the original contract price. An agreement between Thurber & Company and the state highway commissioner to the effect that the stone in question might be used by the successful bidder at the letting on August 6, 1915, in completing the road, might therefore be properly made. If such agreement is made then the remaining work should be estimated and bids invited accordingly. As previously indicated, the stone remains the property of Thurber & Company and in the absence of an agreement along the line above indicated cannot be used in completing the work.

This conclusion as to the first inquiry disposes in a measure of the second. The disposition to be made of the stone in question rests entirely with Thurber & Company, who may remove the same or dispose of it to the successful bidder at the new letting, or agree with the highway commissioner that it may be used in completing the improvement.

The state highway commissioner having elected to enter upon and complete the improvement under the provisions of section 1201-1, G. C., rather than to extend the time of completion and afford further opportunity to Thurber & Company to complete the work, it follows that by force of the further provisions of section 1203-1, G. C., it becomes the duty of the state highway commissioner to retain any sums now due to Thurber & Company as well as any sums that may hereafter become due such company, applying the same toward the completion of the work and that Thurber & Company will not be entitled to any further compensation on account of their contract unless the total amount now due and hereafter becoming due to such company is more than sufficient to complete the work, in which case the residue after fully completing the work would be due and payable to Thurber & Company, the original contractors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BONDS—SUCH AUTHORIZED BOND ISSUE INCLUDED IN BUDGET—DUTY OF BUDGET COMMISSIONERS TO ALLOW LEVY, ALTHOUGH BONDS HAD NOT BEEN ISSUED WHEN BUDGET SUBMITTED—SAME RULE, IF BONDS ARE NOT ISSUED AT TIME OF FINAL CONSIDERATION BY COUNTY BUDGET COMMISSION.

Where a board of education, prior to the first Monday in June, legally authorizes an issue of bonds and includes in its annual budget submitted to the county auditor on the first Monday of June a levy for interest and sinking fund purposes in connection with such authorized bond issue, it is the duty of the budget commissioners to allow such levy, although the bonds had not been issued when the budget was submitted, and the rule is the same even where such bonds have not yet been issued at the time final consideration is given to the budget by the county budget commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 22, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of July 9, 1915, which reads as follows:

"Where the board of education of a school district determines to issue bonds for the purpose authorized by law, and all the proceedings preliminary to said issue have been in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing same, but said bonds have not been actually issued at the time said board submits its annual budget to the county auditor, if in said budget, said board of education requests the allowance of an amount which it estimates will be necessary to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity, (question) has the board of education a right to correct said budget, prior to the date when the county budget commissioners meet to consider the budget of the various taxing districts of the county, or at the time when the particular budget is being considered by said budget commissioners, to show the date of the issue of said bonds, or have the budget commissioners a right to ignore the request for said levy because the budget, at the time it was submitted to the county auditor, did not show the date of said issue?

"If on the final consideration of the budget by the county budget commission it does not appear that the bonds have been issued, what is the duty of the budget commission with reference to the levy for interest and sinking fund?"

An answer to your inquiry involves a consideration, in the first instance, of section 11 of article XII of the constitution of Ohio, adopted September 3, 1912, and which reads as follows:

"No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

In the case of Link v. Karb, 89 O. S., 326, decided February 3, 1914, the court construed the above quoted constitutional provision and held that the same requires the taxing authority of any political subdivision of the state proposing to issue bonds, to provide at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds proposed to be issued, and to provide for their final redemption at maturity. This provision, made at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, was held to be mandatory on all subsequent taxing officials of that political subdivision during the term of the bonds. It was further held that this provision does not require that at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, there shall then be levied any specific amount or any specific rate, but it does require that provision shall then be made for an annual levy during the term of the bonds in a sufficient amount to pay the interest on the bonds proposed to be issued and to provide for their final redemption at maturity, which levy must be made annually in pursuance of the provisions of the original ordinance or resolution requiring the same, and the amount necessary to be levied for the purposes specified, is to be determined by the taxing officials at the time the levy is made.

It is provided by section 5649-3a that the annual budget required by said section shall be submitted to the county auditor on or before the first Monday of June each year. It appears from your letter quoted above, that prior to the first Monday in June a board of education of a school district determined to issue bonds for a lawful purpose and enacted all the legislation looking to said issue of bonds and required by law, but that said bonds had not been actually issued prior to the first Monday in June. In its budget submitted to the county auditor, the board of education requested the allowance of an amount which it estimated would be necessary to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity. You now inquire as to the right of the board of education to correct its budget prior to the date when the county budget commissioners meet to consider the budget of the various taxing districts of the county, or at the time when the particular budget is being considered by the budget commissioners, said correction to show the date of the issue of the bonds, and you further inquire as to the right of the budget commissioners to ignore the request for said levy because the budget, at the time it was submitted to the county auditor, did not show the date of said issue.

It is provided by section 5649-3a that the annual budgets required by said section, shall specifically set forth, among other things, the following:

> "The amount of bonded indebtedness setting out each issue and the purpose for which issued, the date of issue and the date of maturity, the original amount issued and the amount outstanding, the rate of interest, the sum necessary for interest and sinking fund purposes, and the amount required for all interest and sinking fund purposes for the incoming year."

Under the above quoted provision of section 5649-3a, passed by the legislature May 31, 1911, it would seem to be clear that it was the intention of the legislature that boards and officers authorized by law to levy taxes, were authorized to include in their budgets sinking fund and interest items for only those bonds that had been actually issued at the time the budgets were prepared and submitted, inasmuch as such boards and officers were required to set forth in their budgets not only the amount of the bonded indebtedness, but also the date of issue and the date of maturity. However, by the adoption of section 11 of article XII of the constitution, it is made mandatory upon the taxing authorities of any political subdivision of the state, proposing to issue bonds, to provide at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, for levying and collecting annually by taxation, an amount sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds proposed to be issued and to provide for their final redemption at maturity, and this provision made at the time the issue of bonds is authorized, is mandatory on all subsequent taxing officials.

I therefore conclude, in view of the provision of the constitution referred to above, that the provision of section 5649-3a, above quoted, is so far modified that it is now necessary for boards and officers authorized by law to levy taxes to furnish only so much of said required information as is available; that where bonds have been duly authorized prior to the first Monday in June of any year, but have not been actually issued at that time, it is nevertheless the duty of the taxing authority proposing to issue said bonds, to include in its budget an item sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, and that in cases where said bonds have been authorized but not actually issued, the taxing authority is excused from setting forth in its budget any information other than the amount of the authorized bonded indebtedness, the purpose for which said bonded indebtedness has been authorized, the rate of interest and the sum estimated to be necessary during the incoming year for interest and sinking fund purposes, in connection with said authorized bond issue. It is my opinion that when the budget required by section 5649-3a has been prepared along the line above suggested, said budget does not require any subsequent correction or addition, setting forth the date of the issue of said bonds, and that in view of the mandatory provisions of section 11 of article XII of the constitution, the budget commissioners have no right to ignore the request for said levy on the ground and for the reason that the budget, at the time it was submitted to the county auditor, did not show the date of said issue.

For the reasons above set forth, I am also of the opinion that if, on the final consideration of the budget by the budget commissioners, it does not appear that the bonds have been issued at that time, even this fact is insufficient to avoid the mandatory provision of the constitution referred to above, and under this state of facts it would still be the duty of the budget commissioners to allow a levy for interest and sinking fund purposes in connection with the bonds authorized previous to the first Monday in June of the year in question, but not yet issued. It would be entirely proper, however, for the budget commissioners, at the time when they are considering the particular budget in question, to obtain from the board of education information as to whether or not said bonds have been issued and if so as to the date of issue, said information to be used by the budget commissioners in determining the correctness of the estimate made by the board of education as to the amount required during the incoming year, to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF FORM OF RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS IN HIGHLAND, MONROE AND MUSKINGUM COUNTIES, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 20, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Milford-Hillsboro, Highland county, petition No. 1406, I. C. H. No. 9.
Woodsfield-Marietta, Monroe county, petition No. 1027, I. C. H. No. 389.
Zanesville-Caldwell, Muskingum county, petition 1379, I. C. H. No. 348.

As to the resolution relating to the proposed improvements in Highland and Monroe counties, it appears upon the face of the resolutions that the proposed improvements are less than one mile in length and it does not appear either upon the face of the resolutions or by an attached certificate, that the proposed improvements are extensions of or connected with permanently improved roads, streets or highways of approved construction. See section 1197, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 454. If it be a fact that the proposed improvements are extensions of or connected with permanently improved roads, streets or highways of approved construction, and you attached to the resolutions certificates to that effect, then the resolutions will be in regular form and entitled to the approval of this department.

As to the final resolution relating to the proposed improvement in Muskingum county, the resolution recites on its face that it was adopted on the 28th day of June, 1915, whereas the certificate of the clerk of the board of commissioners of Muskingum county recites that the resolution was adopted on the 29th day of December, 1913. The resolution should be returned to the clerk of the board of commissioners for the purpose of having him correct either the resolution or his certificate to correspond with the fact. When this correction is made, the final resolution will be in regular form and entitled to approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEED PROVIDED FOR BY HOUSE BILL NO. 324 TO BE EXECUTED BY THE STATE CARRIES A RESERVATION OF ALL MINERALS—SECTION 3210, G. C., APPLIES—PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY —GNADENHUTTEN SCHOOL TRACT.

The reservations provided for in section 3210, G. C., should be made in the deed provided for by house bill No. 324.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 14th you inquire as follows:

> "H. B. No. 324 providing for settlement with the Pennsylvania railroad company for the appropriation to that company of a right of way through the Gnadenhutten tract school lot No. 2, provides that the auditor of state shall prepare a deed 'conveying in fee simple' said right of way.
> "The amendment of section 3210, G. C., carried in the act of July 20, 1914, provides that all deeds thereafter executed by the state shall carry a reservation of all minerals.
> "Will you kindly advise us whether such reservation is required to be carried in the deed provided for in the above mentioned H. B. 324, which was enacted into law April 6th, 1915?"

Section 3210, G. C., as amended 105 O. L., 8, relating to the sale of school lands, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 3210. Section sixteen and all lands instead thereof, granted for school purposes, may be sold, and such sales shall be according to the regulations hereinafter prescribed. The proceedings for the sale of such lands for which a deed has been duly executed and delivered by the state to the purchaser thereof at such sale, or his assigns, shall be conclusively presumed to be regular and according to law, but this provision shall not apply to, or affect, pending litigation. Provided, that such sales shall exclude all oil, gas, coal, or other minerals on or under such lands, and all deeds executed and delivered by the state shall expressly reserve to the state all gas, oil, coal, or other minerals, on or under such lands, with the right of entry in and upon said premises for the purpose of selling or leasing the same, or prospecting, developing or operating the same, and this latter provision shall affect and apply to pending actions."

House bill No. 324, referred to in your communication, is one that was passed at the present session of the legislature and is entitled "A bill to authorize a settlement with the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company for a right of way heretofore appropriated through lot number two of the Gnadenhutten tract, Tuscarawas county, and for earth removed from said lot."

After various recitals showing the reasons for the legislation, there is enacted the following:

> "Section 1. That the auditor of state shall prepare a deed conveying in fee simple to the said the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company, its successors and assigns, the following described tract or parcel of land, to wit: (Description of land.)

"Section 4. That said railway company first paying the sum of fifteen hundred dollars to the auditor of state, in full satisfaction of the claim of the state for the earth so removed, and in full payment for the land so conveyed, the auditor of state shall deliver said deed to said railway company."

The amendment of section 3210, G. C., referred to by you in your letter transmitting the question, is found in senate bill No. 3, passed at the second extraordinary session of the 80th general assembly on July 20, 1914. It is to be observed that said section 3210 is an amendment of a prior section 3210 which fits in a scheme of legislation that has been on the statute books for years, and which provides the entire procedure for the sale of school lands by the trustees of the original surveyed townships to which such lands belong, and has no reference whatever to a case such as the one in question, where the legislature undertakes directly to authorize a deed to be made by the auditor of state for school lands.

I am therefore of the opinion that section 3210 cannot be considered as having any bearing whatsoever on the question submitted by you.

However, section 4 of the act referred to (senate bill No. 3) provides as follows:

"Section 4. All sales or leases of canal, public or other state land shall exclude all oil, gas, coal or other minerals on or under such lands, and all deeds executed and delivered by the state shall expressly reserve to the state all gas, oil, coal or other minerals on or under such lands with the right of entry in and upon said premises for the purpose of selling or leasing the same, or prosecuting, developing or operating the same and this provision shall affect and apply to pending actions."

Under early legislation by congress of the United States, the title to the school lands was vested in the legislature of Ohio for the use and benefit of the inhabitants of original surveyed townships, or of particular districts. For instance, a certain part of Gnadenhutten tract was set aside for the benefit of the schools of such Gnadenhutten tract, and the state was made trustee in order to carry out the purposes of such trust. The lands were so granted by the United States to the state for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Gnadenhutten tract, and would, therefore, as I view it, be considered as "public lands" within the meaning of section 4 of senate bill No. 3, hereinbefore referred to. The said section refers to canal, public or other state land. The only reasonable definition that I can conceive of as to what would be "public land" would be such land as is embraced within the grant of the United States to the legislature of the state of Ohio for the use of the public schools within a certain particular tract of land.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the tract in question is to be considered within the purview of section 4 of senate bill No. 3.

There is nothing in house bill No. 324 which undertakes in any way to restrict the quantity of the estate described in said act, but it does undertake to designate the quality of the estate, in that the auditor of state shall prepare a deed conveying in fee simple the tract or parcel of land.

A "fee" is defined by Blackstone (2 Blackstone, 105) as

"The right which the vassal or tenant hath in lands to use the same, and take the profits thereof to him and his heirs, rendering to the lord his due service; the mere allodial property of the soil always remaining in the lord."

Blackstone (2 Blackstone, 105) defines a "tenant in fee simple" as

"He that hath lands, tenements or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever, generally, absolutely and simply, without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure or to the disposition of the law."

It will therefore be seen that the only meaning that can be given to the words "conveying in fee simple" is the quality of the estate which is to be granted.

Coal and minerals in place are "land," as has been decided in the case of Caldwell v. Fulton, 31 Pa. St., 475, 483; and gas and oil are "minerals"—Gas Co. v. Ullery, 68 O. S., 259; Kelley v. Oil Co., 57 O. S., 317.

In the case referred to from Pennsylvania it is distinctly held that the surface of the land may be held by one party and the coal or other minerals under the land by another party, and that the mere ownership of the surface of the land would not entitle the party so holding the same to all that is beneath said land. In other words, that the quantity of the estate of the party may be divided, the surface belonging to one and the sub-strata of coal and minerals to another.

If the coal and minerals under the land may be considered as "land" and may be held separately from the surface of the land, and would pass in accordance with the laws governing real estate, coal and minerals may be held in fee simple separate and apart from the surface of the land.

Therefore, I do not believe that the mere recital that the auditor of state shall prepare a deed conveying a particular tract of land in fee simple would have any bearing upon the question of whether or not in the deed so prepared a reservation should be made of coal and other minerals.

We have therefore an expression of the legislature generally as contained in section 4 of senate bill No. 3, hereinbefore referred to, that all sales of public land shall contain a reservation of the oil, gas, coal or other minerals, and a subsequent bill of the legislature authorizing the conveying of a certain tract of land to the Pennsylvania Railroad, which land is embraced within the general terms of section 4 of senate bill No. 3.

To my mind, the two bills can be read together, as there is no apparent conflict between the provisions of the same. House bill No. 324 authorizes the sale and conveyance of a certain tract, and section 4 of senate bill No. 3, states what shall happen when the public lands of the state are sold.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that house bill No. 324 must be read in the light of section 4 of senate bill No. 3, and that the auditor in preparing the deed in fee simple conveying the tract should insert therein the reservation called for by said section 4 of senate bill No. 3.

It has been suggested that since, as is shown from the preamble in house bill No. 324, the predecessor of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had been in possession of the right of way across the property in question since about 1852, that, therefore, it had appropriated such right of way at that time and consequently the provisions of amended section 3210, G. C., or section 4 of senate bill No. 3, passed on July 20, 1914, would not be applicable. However, while section 8759 of the General Code, now in force, provides that a railroad company may enter upon any land and appropriate so much thereof as it deems necessary, yet under the provisions of section 8760 the appropriation of private property provided for in the next preceding section shall not be made until full compensation therefor is made in money, or secured to the owner by deposit of money for him.

In view of the fact that section 8760 refers to "private property" it may well be doubted whether under the provisions of section 8759 a railroad company would be authorized to appropriate public property for its use. But assuming that it is authorized so to do, nevertheless in order so to do it must before appropriating the same make full compensation therefor in money, or secure full compensation by a deposit of money. Neither of these things has been done in this case. Consequently, I do not believe that the suggestion made has any force or effect in the matter under consideration.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN AVERAGE DAILY ATTENDANCE FALLS BELOW TEN, BOARD HAS DISCRETION TO SUSPEND A SCHOOL—SECTION 7730, G. C., AS AMENDED BY SENATE BILL NO. 282.

Under the provisions of section 7730, G. C., as amended by senate bill No. 282, effective July 27, 1915, it is discretionary with the county board of education whether a school shall be suspended when the average daily attendance falls below ten.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. FRED W. MCCOY, Prosecuting Attorney, Carrollton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 19, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "Is it mandatory or not that the county board of education suspend a school when the average daily attendance for the preceding year has been below ten, and shall said county board transfer said pupils to another school or schools? Sec. 7730, of the Ohio Laws, enacted by the 81st general assembly."

Section 7730, G. C., as amended by senate bill No. 282, which was filed in the office of the secretary or state May 28th, and which will go into effect July 27, 1915, is as follows:

> "The board of education of any rural or village school district may suspend any or all schools in such village or rural school district. Upon such suspension the board in such village school district may provide, and in such rural school district shall provide, for the conveyance of pupils attending such schools, to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district. When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education. No school of any rural district shall be suspended until ten days' notice has been given by the board of education of such district. Such notice shall be posted in five conspicuous places within such village or rural school district; provided, however, that any suspended school as herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the voters of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age."

The portion of the section applicable to your question is the provision that, "When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education." The words "when directed to do so by the county board of education" undoubtedly confer upon the county board of education the exercise of certain discretion and the only question is the extent of such discretion; that is, whether it is within the discretion of the county board of education to determine whether or not the school shall be suspended or whether the discretion only goes to the matter of transferring pupils to another school or schools.

While the sentence is not so formed as to give it the utmost clearness, it would hardly be urged that the legislature intended to lodge any discretion in the county board as to whether or not the pupils attending the school which is suspended should be transferred to another school or schools, in view of the fact that the entire theory of public education is that schools shall be provided for all children of school age. Therefore, the discretion which the county board is to exercise must be limited to determining whether or not the school shall be suspended when the average attendance falls below ten.

In determining the intention of the legislature, as expressed in section 7730 above quoted, it is helpful to note the change made by the provisions contained in senate bill No. 282. The particular part of section 7730 under consideration as it appeared in 104, O. L., page 139, was as follows:

"When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below twelve, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to such other school or schools as the local board may direct."

A comparison of this provision with the similar provision of section 7730 as amended by senate bill No. 282, indicates very clearly that the legislature intended to remove the mandatory provision that the school should be suspended when the average attendance fell below twelve, and place the discretion in the county board of education to suspend such a school when the average attendance fell below ten.

I am therefore of the opinion that under the provision of section 7730, G. C., as amended by senate bill No. 282, it is not mandatory that a school be suspended by the county board of education when the average daily attendance for the preceding year has been below ten, but that it is within the discretion of the county board of education to determine whether or not in such case such school shall be suspended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 1442, G. C.—RIGHT OF FISH COMPANIES TO SELL CERTAIN FISH—MINIMUM SIZE OF CERTAIN VARIETIES PRESCRIBED.

Section 1442, G. C., prohibits the catching and retaining of white fish, cat fish, sturgeon, carp, buffalo fish, white bass, perch and bull head, of a less size or weight than the respective minimums therein prescribed, in excess of three per cent. in weight of each variety of such fish, respectively, and of pike of a less size than the minimum prescribed in excess of ten per cent of the pike, in each boat load or catch brought into port, except the catching of such fish with hook and line and not for profit. The catching and retaining of such fish, not in excess of the three per cent. and ten per cent. respectively, as provided in the section, is not prohibited except that the catching of all buffalo fish in the Lake Erie district, before March 15, 1916, is prohibited.

By section 1443, G. C., the buying, selling, etc., of all such fish unlawfully caught, as above determined, is prohibited and subjects all offenders to the penalty of section 1445, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. C. F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have yours of June 29, 1915, requesting my written opinion as follows:

> "I desire your interpretation of section 1442, General Code, with respect to the right of fish companies to sell the three and ten per cent. of fish excepted by this section.
> "I would be very pleased to receive your answer at your earliest convenience in view of the fact that some of our wardens are of the opinion that the fish companies are continuously violating this section all along the north shore."

Section 1442, G. C., to which you refer, as amended in 103 O. L., page 523, provides as follows:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person to take or catch a buffalo fish in the Lake Erie fishing district before March 15, 1916, nor after that date such fish less than sixteen inches in length. No person shall have in his possession a white fish less than one and three-quarters pounds in the round, a cat fish less than fifteen inches in length, a sturgeon less than four feet in length, a carp less than sixteen inches, white bass less than ten inches, or a perch, bull head or pike less than nine inches in length. All such fish caught of a less length or weight than herein described shall be immediately released alive while the nets are being lifted in such a manner as not to injure them. No cat fish or sturgeon shall be brought ashore with its head or tail removed or in such condition that its length cannot be measured. Nothing herein shall prohibit the catching of such fish with hook and line and not for profit; and the having in possession or failing to return to the water alive in the manner provided of a quantity of such undersized white fish, cat fish, sturgeon, carp, buffalo fish, white bass, perch or bull head not exceeding in weight three per cent. and all such pike not exceeding in weight ten per cent. of each boat load or part thereof, lot, catch or haul, brought into port of each variety of fish shall not be deemed a violation of this section."

By section 1442, G. C., supra, the having in possession fish of the kind specified in such section, of a less length or weight than the minimum therein prescribed, is made unlawful and is in violation of the section, rendering the person so offending liable to the penalty prescribed by section 1445, G. C., subject, however, to the limitation of the proviso contained in the last clause of said section, to wit: "Nothing herein shall prohibit the catching of such fish with hook and line and not for profit; and the having in possession or failing to return to the water alive in the manner provided of a quantity of such undersized white fish, cat fish, sturgeon, carp, buffalo fish, white bass, perch or bull head not exceeding in weight three per cent., and all such pike not exceeding in weight ten per cent. of each boat load or part thereof, lot, catch or haul, brought into port of each variety of fish shall not be deemed a violation of this section." That is to say, the prohibition against having in possession fish of the kinds stipulated, of a less size or weight than the minimum prescribed in section 1442, G. C., is operative only to the excess of such undersized fish over the said three per cent. and ten per cent. in weight of such varieties of fish, respectively, of each boat load or part thereof, catch or haul, brought into port, and caught otherwise than with hook and line, and not for profit; and the section does not purport to impose a restriction against the taking or having in possession any such undersized fish when the quantity of such undersized fish of each variety, to wit: white fish, cat fish, sturgeon, carp, buffalo fish, white bass, perch or bull head, does not exceed in weight three per cent. of the whole quantity of each such variety, respectively; or where the quantity of undersized pike does not exceed, in weight, ten per cent. of the whole quantity of such pike of each boat load, etc., brought into port; nor, of course, does the section restrict the taking of such fish with hook and line and not for profit.

While the language of the section is "no person shall have in possession" the various kinds of fish under the minimum size therein prescribed, it is clear from the context that this legislation has for its primary object the regulation of the taking or catching of the several varieties of fish therein enumerated, and from the further fact that the taking or catching of such fish, and the failure to release them alive as required in said section, involves and constitutes a having of such fish in possession, the conclusion is unavoidable that the taking or catching, with a failure to release such undersized fish of the varieties mentioned, in excess of the three per cent. and the ten per cent. In weight of the said varieties, respectively, of each boat load, etc., constitutes a having of such fish in possession within the meaning of said section 1442, G. C., and is prohibited.

Having determined, therefore, that the undersized fish in excess of the three per cent. and ten per cent. of the several varieties, respectively, taken and not released, as required in said section, except fish caught with hook and line, and not for profit, were caught in a manner prohibited and in violation of section 1442, G. C., the application of the provisions of section 1443, G. C., becomes comparatively easy, and the buying, selling, offering for sale or having in possession any of such fish so unlawfully caught, would be a violation of said latter section, subjecting the offender to the penalty prescribed by section 1445, G. C.

Section 1443, G. C., reads as follows:

"No person shall buy, sell offer for sale or have in his possession a fish caught out of season or in any manner prohibited, or a fish caught unlawfully outside the state of Ohio."

It may be observed, however, that in the very nature of the case, prosecutions under the last named section would often be fraught with difficulty in respect to the tracing of the identity of the fish, constituting the basis of the prosecution, for the purpose of establishing the unlawful catching under the provision of section 1442.

To sum up, therefore, I interpret sections 1442, G. C., and 1443, G. C., as prohibiting the taking or catching of any buffalo fish in the Lake Erie fishing district before the 15th day of March, 1916—section 1442; and the buying, selling, offering for sale or having in possession any of such fish so taken,—section 1443, G. C.; the taking or catching of any white fish, cat fish, sturgeon, carp, white bass, perch, bull head or pike, or any buffalo fish not caught in Lake Erie, of a less size or weight than the minimum prescribed in section 1442, G. C., and the failure to release same alive so as to not injure them, as prescribed therein, in excess of the three per cent. and ten per cent. of each variety of such fish, respectively, in each boat load, haul or catch brought to port, except the catching of such fish with hook and line and not for profit, constitutes a having of such fish in possession within the meaning of section 1442, G. C., and is prohibited; the buying, selling, offering for sale or having in possession any of such fish so unlawfully caught, is prohibited by section 1443, G. C., rendering the offender liable to the penalty of section 1445, G. C.; the catching and retaining of such undersized fish of the several varieties enumerated in section 1442, G. C., not in excess of the three per cent. and ten per cent. in weight of each variety, respectively, including buffalo fish caught in Lake Erie after March 15, 1916, of each boat load or catch, etc., is not prohibited by the provision of section 1442, and there is no other section dealing with this subject-matter or prohibiting the catching of such fish; hence the buying, selling, offering for sale or having in possession of such undersized fish, not in excess of the three per cent. and ten per cent., respectively, of the several varieties, as provided in section 1442, is not unlawful.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

RIGHT OF ALIENS TO HOLD AND INHERIT REAL PROPERTY IN OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 23, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I am in receipt of your request of July 19, 1915, reading as follows:

> "The enclosed communication from Secretary of State Lansing is self-explanatory. I very respectfully request that you give me a statement of the law touching the matters inquired into by him. Also appropriate citations so that I may inform him fully as to what Ohio has done relative to the subject-matter of the treaty of 1853."

Also enclosing a letter under date of July 13, 1915, from Hon. Robert Lansing, secretary of state, reading as follows:

"I have the honor to advise you of the receipt by this department of a note from the French ambassador at Washington wherein he requests definite information concerning the laws of the several states of the Union with regard to the right of aliens to hold and inherit real property in such states.

"As you are doubtless aware, there was concluded between the United States and France on February 23, 1853, a convention by the provisions of article VII of which the French government extended to American citizens in France the same rights with respect to real and personal property and to inheritance as those enjoyed by French citizens; the government of the United States agreed that, in all those states whose then existing laws permitted, French citizens should stand on the same footing with respect to similar rights as citizens of the United States; and the president of the United States engaged to recommend to those states, by whose then existing laws aliens were not permitted to hold real estate, the passage of laws conferring this right. The French government, however, made reservation in this treaty 'of the ulterior right to establish reciprocity in the matter of possession and inheritance.'

"The French ambassador gives expression in the above-mentioned note to his belief that French citizens are permitted to possess and inherit real property in a lesser number of states at the present time than at the date of the conclusion of this treaty and intimates that the information requested by him is to be taken into consideration by the French government in connection with the question as to the advisability of the enactment of retaliatory legislation.

"I have the honor to solicit your co-operation in the matter of complying with this request of the French ambassador to the extent of furnishing the department with a copy of any provision of the constitution of the state of Ohio relating to the ownership of land by aliens, together with copies of all existing laws on the subject which have been enacted by the state legislature and also copies of such similar laws, constitutional and legislative, as were in force in your state on February 23, 1853.

"I shall appreciate it if you will accord to this matter your very early consideration."

I beg to advise you that aliens may acquire, hold, alienate, devise, bequeath and inherit or receive real and personal property in this state under exactly the same conditions as those applying to native born citizens.

Section 8589 of the General Code of Ohio provides:

"Section 8589. No person who is capable of inheriting shall be deprived of the inheritance by reason of any of his ancestors having been aliens. Aliens may hold, possess and enjoy lands, tenements, and hereditaments, within this state, either by descent, devise, gift, or purchase, as fully and completely as any citizen of the United States or this state can do."

Section 10537 of the General Code of Ohio provides as follows:

"Section 10537. A will executed, proved, and allowed in a country other than the United States and territories thereof, according to the laws of such foreign state or country, may be allowed and admitted to record in this state in the manner and for the purposes mentioned in the following sections."

Section 10538 of the General Code of Ohio provides as follows:

"Section 10538. A copy of the will and probate thereof, duly authenticated, must be produced by the executor, or by a person interested therein, to the probate judge of the county in which there is any estate upon which the will may operate, whereupon such judge shall continue the motion to admit it to probate for two months. Notice of the filing of such application must be given to all persons interested, in some public newspaper printed or in general circulation in the county where the motion is made, at least three weeks consecutively. The first publication shall be at least forty days before the time set for the final hearing of the motion."

Section 10539 of the General Code of Ohio provides as follows:

"Section 10539. If, on such hearing, it appears to the court that the instrument ought to be allowed in this state, it shall order the copy to be filed and recorded. The will, and the probate and record thereof, then shall have the same force and effect as if the will originally had been proved and allowed in that court, in the usual manner. Nothing herein contained shall give any operation or effect to the will of an alien, different from what it would have had if originally proved and allowed in this state."

Section 10540 of the General Code of Ohio provides as follows:

"Section 10540. After allowing and admitting to record a will, pursuant to either of the next four preceding sections, the court may grant letters testamentary thereon, or letters of administration with the will annexed, and must proceed in the settlement of the estate found in this state. The executor taking out letters, or the administrator with the will annexed, shall have the same power to sell and convey the real or personal estate, by virtue of the will or the law, as other executors or administrators with the will annexed."

The substance of section 8589 of the General Code, above referred to, was originally enacted on February 3, 1804, to be found in the codification in 29 O. L., 463. The section at that time provided:

"That it shall be lawful for any and all aliens that now may have, or that hereafter shall be entitled to have, within this state, any lands, tenements or hereditaments, either by purchase, gift, device or descent, to hold possess and enjoy the same, as fully and completely as any citizen of the United States or this state can do, subject to the same laws and regulations, and not otherwise."

In 1860, this section was carried verbatim in Swan & Critchfield's revision of the statutes and appears in vol. 1, page 69. Later this was carried into the Revised Statutes as section 4173.

On February 24, 1831, there was enacted a law, section 12 of which provided:

"That in making title by descent it shall be no bar to a party that an ancestor through whom he or she derives his or her estate from the intestate is or hath been an alien. 29 O. L., 254."

This was amended by the act of March 14, 1853, to read:

"No person who shall be capable of inheriting shall be deprived of the inheritance by reason of any of his or her ancestors having been aliens."

This section was carried verbatim into Swan & Critchfield's revision of the statutes of 1860, as found in section 14, page 504, volume I, and later merged into section 4173 of the Revised Statutes.

Sections 10537 to 10540 of the General Code, above quoted, were enacted on March 23, 1840, in almost the identical language as now appears in the General Code. See sections 29, 30 and 31 of the act of March 23, 1840, 38 O. L., 124.

On May 3, 1852, for the purpose of changing the jurisdiction from the common pleas to the probate court, these sections were re-enacted as sections 27, 28, 29 and 30 of the act of May 3, 1852, 50 O. L., 301-302.

I am returning herewith Secretary of State Lansing's letter of July 13, 1915, together with the government franks.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—VOUCHER NO. 33—SAME IS FOR A DEFICIENCY—CANNOT BE PAID UNTIL LEGISLATURE AUTHORIZES EXPENDITURE.

Voucher No. 33 of the state board of embalming examiners cannot be paid without authority of the legislature, the same being for a deficiency and having been already presented to the legislature and not allowed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1915.

HON. GEORGE BILLOW, Secretary, The Ohio State Board of Embalming Examiners, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of July 8, 1915, wherein you request:

"In what manner and upon whose authority is the herewith enclosed department voucher No. 33 to be paid? For explanation of same see State Auditor Donahey's letter, enclosed."

From your letter it appears that the Ohio state board of embalming examiners, prior to the amendment of section 24, 104 O. L., page 178, was in full control of the funds paid to it as fees, and from such fund paid all its expenses and placed its surplus, well secured, out to bear four per cent. interest. Said board, through its secretary, paid the amount of money which it had on hand into the state treasury, in pursuance of said section 24 as amended in 104 O. L., 178, but that the legislature had failed to make any appropriation to meet the expenses of the board, notwithstanding the passage of the act amending said section 24; that such being the fact an emergency appropriation was made by the emergency board which proved insufficient, whereupon another allowance was made by said board, which was intended to last until February 15, 1915; that said allowances made by the emergency board were not sufficient to pay all the expenses of said board, leaving a number of bills unpaid; that said bills were, each and every one of them, submitted to the house finance committee of the general assembly, but said committee failed to include all of said bills in the sundry appropriation bill which was passed at the last session of the legislature, leaving voucher No. 33 unpaid.

The said voucher No. 33 is a voucher presented by the board, on behalf of its secretary, for salary, railroad fares and expenses, amounting to $132.25.

The letter of the state auditor referred to is as follows:

"June 16, 1915.

"Hon. George Billow, Secretary, State Embalming Board, Akron, Ohio.

"My Dear Mr. Billow:—I have your favor of June 13th, with relation to the appropriation to pay hotel and other bills which were left in our charge.

"We certified to the general assembly the claims that were left with us by you, but the general assembly only appropriated $112.60. I do not know for what reason they cut these bills, but that is what they did. Therefore we can only pay from the state treasury the amount that was appropriated. We have paid all the bills except one made payable to you in the sum of $132.25, which we are enclosing with this letter.

"I would suggest that you write me a statement of fact concerning this bill, together with the amount of funds that you have placed in the treasury to the credit of the embalming board, and that the last emergency board had promised to take care of you if you paid your money into the treasury, and I will bring it to the attention of the emergency board and try to have the amount appropriated to you.

"I am not responsible for the law or for the action of the general assembly, but you can rest assured that I will do what I can to carry out my agreement to you sometime ago, to have the expenses of the board taken care of when your money was turned into the treasury.

"Very truly yours,
"A. V. DONAHEY,
"Auditor of State."

It is to be noted that the expenses incurred and salary earned were incurred and earned prior to February 15, 1915. In house bill No. 314 an appropriation was duly made to the state board of embalming examiners for salary of secretary and maintenance of office, but such appropriation was not available for liabilities incurred prior to February 16, 1915, nor incurred subsequent to June 30, 1915. Appropriations were also made to said board in house bill No. 701, one under section 2 thereof and one under section 3 thereof, but the appropriation made under section 2 thereof cannot be expended to pay liabilities existing prior to July 1, 1915, nor under section 3 thereof existing prior to July 1, 1916.

Sections 2312, et seq., G. C., 103 O. L., 444, provides for an emergency board, and section 2313 provides as follows:

"In case of any deficiency in any of the appropriations for the expenses of an institution, department or commission of the state for any biennial period, which may lawfully and by any unforeseen emergency happen when the general assembly is not in session, the trustees, managers, directors or superintendent of such institution, or the officers of such department or commission, may make application to the board for authority to create obligations within the scope of the purpose for which such appropriations were made."

In the case in question there is no claim that there is any deficiency in the appropriation made by house bill No. 314, nor by house bill No. 701. Therefore, the emergency board is without authority to appropriate for the unpaid voucher in question.

Section 2312, et seq., G. C., was amended at the recent session of the legislature, 106 O. L., page 182, and said act will become effective on July 30, 1915.

Section 2313, as amended therein, states:

"In case of any deficiency in any of the appropriations for the expenses of an institution, department or commission of the state for any biennial period, or in case of an emergency, requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law, the trustees, managers, directors or superintendent of such institution, or the officers of such department or commission, may make application to the emergency board for authority to create obligations within the scope of the purpose for which such appropriations were made or to expend money not specifically provided for by law."

This act, when it becomes effective, will not cover the situation for the reason, first: that there is no deficiency in the appropriations for the period covered by such appropriations, nor could it be considered as a case of emergency requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law. These are the only provisions of law which would relieve, without appeal to the legislature, and the said provisions, not covering the payment of money such as is shown by the voucher in question, I am of the opinion that the only way in which said voucher can be paid is by an appeal to the legislature.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE ARMORY BOARD—LANCASTER ARMORY—ARRANGEMENT MADE WITH CREDITORS OF GENERAL CONTRACTOR FOR AN ARMORY COMPROMISING SAID CLAIMS WITH CONSENT OF SAID CONTRACTOR, APPROVED.

Arrangement made by state armory board with creditors of general contractor for an armory, compromising said claims with consent of said contractor, approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1915.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary, Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 12, 1915, you wrote me as follows:

"After completion of the Lancaster armory, it was found that several of the creditors of the contractor had presented orders on the state; that the contractor's indebtedness arising from construction of armory amounted to more than the amount due by the state to the contractor; that the creditors have not been paid by uniform ratio, the largest one having never been paid anything.

"In order to take care of the contractor's creditors it became necessary to secure the co-operation of contractor's banker, to whom he claimed he owed over $3,600.00, borrowed by contractor on work at Lancaster armory.

"Under these circumstances, the armory board has taken the action indicated by the enclosed extract from its minutes. The board's idea was to take care of the creditors and not to burden your office with unnecessary details. Of course our proposed action is subject to your approval and we, therefore, request same. If the proposed action is not the right method of adjustment, please indicate what we should do in the premises."

Enclosed with said letter was an extract from the minutes of a meeting of your board relative to the matter, and is as follows:

"EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF THE MEETING OF SUNDAY, JULY 11, 1915, RELATIVE TO LANCASTER ARMORY.

"LANCASTER ARMORY. The committee on settlement of the Lancaster armory creditors' claims to wit: Colonel Bryant and Colonel Bargar submitted the following report:

"'After several conferences with contractor and his creditors; the principal creditor, The Bank of Leipsic, agreed that the board might accept orders if the contractor accomplish payments and compromise with all other creditors relating to construction of Lancaster armory, and that thereupon, said Bank of Leipsic would accept an order from contractors, Meyers Bros. for the balance remaining due by the state to said contractors, and thereafter rely upon Meyers Bros, solely for payment of remainder of bank's claim. Thereafter all of the creditors signed statements specifying the exact amount which they would accept in full satisfaction of their claims as subcontractors, material men or for labor, and these signed statements were found to be as follows:

The J. E. Payne Co., Columbus	$48 23
C. R. Carling, Lancaster	85 10
W. T. Shrieve & Son, Lancaster	75 00
Alten's Foundry & Mch. Works, Lancaster	15 00
The National Roofing Tile Co., Lima	200 00
Lancaster Builders Supply Co., Lancaster	31 12
The Waller Bros. Stone Co., McDermott	403 52
F. O. Schoedinger, Columbus	512 80
The S. H. Thomson Mfg. Co., Dayton	97 00
The Martens Hardware Co., Lancaster	36 31
J. D. Van Gundy, Lancaster	34 00
Bockway Plumbing & Supply Co., Huntington	2,795 73
Louis J. Snyder, Lancaster	112 91
H. Newhouse & Co., Columbus	126 62
Jos. H. Goldcamp & Co., Lancaster	378 67
Central Marble & Tile Co., Columbus	639 65
Herbert D. Pearce, Lancaster	145 50
J. B. Orman & Bros., Lancaster	218 94

"'The amount found due to contractors by the state is $7,070.07. Therefore the allowance to said bank under foregoing agreement is found to be as follows:

Amount due contractors by state	$7,070 07
Amount claimed by other creditors	5,956 10
Balance claimed by bank	$1,113 97

"'The committee further reports that all of the uncompleted details of the construction work of said armory as reported in the minutes of June 26, 1915, have been completed except as to the tablet to be furnished by creditor, The S. H. Thomson Mfg. Co., of Dayton, Ohio.'

"After consideration of the report, it was unanimously

"RESOLVED, That the total amount due on construction contract on Lancaster armory and remaining unpaid is $7,070.07. That the contractor has complied with the excepted details mentioned in minutes of June 26, 1915, except as to the tablet to be furnished by one subcontractor, that said general contractors, Meyers Bros., through their authorized attorney, J. M. Sheets, have presented orders directing a distribution among their armory creditors of the balance due by the state to Meyers Bros. That the sums so directed to be paid are due to general contractors and are hereby allowed to their assignees pursuant to the schedule shown in the foregoing report of two members of this board. That the action taken today is subject to the approval of the attorney general before payments are made."

At my request you subsequently certified that the tablet referred to in the foregoing minutes had been furnished and the work of construction of the armory completed. Said certificate is as follows:

"SUPPLEMENT TO THE ARMORY BOARD PROCEEDINGS OF JULY 11, 1915, RELATIVE TO SETTLEMENT FOR THE LANCASTER ARMORY.

"We hereby certify that the tablet referred to in said minutes has been furnished by The S. H. Thomson Mfg. Co., of Dayton, Ohio, thereby completing the last detail of the construction work of said armory to be performed by general contractors, Meyers Brothers.

"We further certify that said Lancaster armory has been inspected and accepted by the board for and on behalf of the state of Ohio from general contractors, Meyers Brothers.

"At the same time you submitted a form of the assignment which has been taken from each of the creditors of the contractors for said building which is in the form following:

"'_____1915.

"'To Meyers Brothers as General Contractors on Lancaster Armory:

"'The following compromise is proposed solely on condition that payment thereof be made directly by the state of Ohio from the existing balance of construction fund for said armory; on said condition _____ hereby agree to accept the sum of $_____ in full satisfaction and payment of the attached itemized claim which includes all claims of every kind due _____ from Meyers Bros., contractors, because of the construction of the Sherman Memorial Armory at Lancaster, Ohio. This proposition for compromise will be rescinded as soon as it is ascertained that payment will not be made by state from said balance.

"'(Signed by creditor)----------

"'I hereby assign to ---------- such part of the compensation coming to me for the construction of the Sherman Memorial Armory at Lancaster, pursuant to contract with the Ohio state armory board as amounts to $----------, and authorize and direct the said board to pay said sum to ----------, and charge the same to my account as a payment to me.

"'(Signed by contractor)----------'"

"The auditor of state shall examine each claim presented for payment from the state treasury, and, if he finds it legally due and that there is money in the treasury duly appropriated to pay it, he shall issue to the person entitled to receive the money thereon a warrant on the treasurer of state for the amount found due, take a receipt on the face of the claim for the warrant so issued, and file and preserve the claim in his office. He shall draw no warrant on the treasurer of state for any claim unless he finds it legal, and that there is money in the treasury which has been duly appropriated to pay it."

I can see no reason why the aforesaid agreement of the creditors with the contractor should not be carried out and warrants issued directly to each creditor. Section 243 provides that the auditor of state shall issue his warrant "to the person entitled to receive the money thereon." The assignment, a copy of which was hereinbefore set out, was that the contractor has duly assigned to each of his creditors a proportionate part of the claim due to him from the state of Ohio, and if the auditor of state is satisfied that the money is legally due to the original contractor and that the assignment has been properly made to the contractor's creditors, he would be authorized to draw his warrant upon the treasurer of state for the proportionate share of the amount still due the contractor to which each of the several creditors would be entitled, provided, of course, that there is money in the treasury which has been duly appropriated to pay the same.

I am herewith returning to you the copy of the assignment which was signed by the various creditors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—MEMBER OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY—JUSTICE OF PEACE.

A member of the general assembly may legally serve as justice of the peace.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of July 21, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "May a member of the general assembly, viz.: a member of the senate of said body, legally serve as justice of the peace, or does his act of qualification and entering upon service as member of the general assembly work a forfeiture of his office as justice of the peace?"

Section 4 of article II of the constitution of Ohio reads as follows:

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States, or any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in the general assembly; but this provision shall not extend to township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public, or officers of the militia."

From the language of the above quoted section it appears that the constitution does not prohibit a person from being a member of the general assembly and holding the office of justice of the peace at the same time. While the language of the section does not in terms declare that a person may be a member of the general assembly and at the same time hold the office of justice of the peace, yet that is a fair inference from the language used. In the absence of constitutional or statutory inhibition, the same person may hold two or more offices at the same time unless they are in law incompatible. There is no statutory inhibition against a member of the general assembly holding the office of justice of the peace, and I am unable to say that the two offices are in law incompatible. The constitutional provision referred to does not prohibit, and in fact impliedly sanctions the holding of the office of justice of the peace by a member of the general assembly, and I therefore conclude that a member of the general assembly may legally serve as justice of the peace, and that the act of a member of the general assembly in qualifying and entering upon his service as such member does not work a forfeiture of the office of justice of the peace held by him.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DESIGNATION OF THOSE REQUIRED TO REPORT CONVICTIONS OF VIOLATION OF LIQUOR LAWS TO STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—ALL CONVICTIONS OF LICENSEES FOR OFFENSES UNDER LAWS RELATING TO SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS, REGARDLESS OF WHERE LAWS ARE FOUND IN GENERAL CODE—REPORT ALL CONVICTIONS OF LICENSEES OF FELONIES.

Clerks of courts, mayors, justices of the peace and judges of courts having no clerks are required by the provisions of section 57 of the liquor licensing law of 1913, section 1261-72, G. C., to report to the state board all convictions of licensees for offenses under laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors regardless of where such laws may be found in the General Code and to so report all convictions of licensees of felonies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of July 22, 1915, I received a request for an opinion, which is deemed to be of general public interest, from Hon. August Kirbert, municipal court clerk, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and am therefore directing an opinion on the same to you.

The request referred to is as follows:

"Section 57 of the act to provide for license to traffic in intoxicating liquors (103 O. L., 216) found on page 241, provides 'that it shall be the duty of the clerk of every court in the state to notify the state board (state liquor board) of any conviction of any licensee before said court of an offense under the laws "relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors," or of a felony and the state board shall forthwith notify every county board to that effect.'

"In the General Code, part 4, title I, chapter 17, sets out offenses relating to intoxicating liquors and are sections 13194 to 13249 of the General Code.

"Part 4, title I, chapter 13, sets out offenses of 'Sabbath desecration' and are sections 13044 and 13053. Under this chapter section 13050 provides for closing of saloons on Sunday.

"Now it occurs to me that where a defendant is prosecuted under section 13050, it is not the duty of the clerk to notify the state board as provided in section 57 of the liquor license act, and that the clerk is only required to notify of convictions under sections in part 4, title I, chapter 17 and of any conviction of the penal sections of the act itself.

"It appears to me that prosecutions and convictions under section 13050 are against Sabbath desecration as shown by the caption to the chapter and are not against the laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors which it seems to me are enumerated in chapter 17 of the same part and title of the Code."

Section 57 of the liquor licensing law, being section 1261-72 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the clerk of every court in this state, and every mayor, justice of the peace and judge of a court having no clerk to notify the state board of any conviction of any licensee before said court of an offense under the laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors, or of a felony, and the state board shall forthwith notify every county board of that fact."

This section, it seems, should be read in connection with section 34 of the liquor license law, being section 1261-49, G. C., which is as follows:

"If any licensee within the jurisdiction of a county licensing board has been once convicted during the license year of an offense under laws or ordinances concerning the sale of intoxicating liquors, and if said board with due notice to the licensee and after a full hearing granted to him finds that the said licensee has, during said license year and after said conviction, violated the said laws or ordinances, the said board may suspend the license of the said licensee once for a period not to exceed ten days.

"If, after such conviction and suspension offenses are, during the said license year, again repeated, the said board may, with due personal notice to the licensee, served not less than five days before the hearing, and after a full hearing granted to said licensee, revoke the said license of said licensee; and notice of such revocation shall forthwith be served upon the person whose license is so revoked.

"Upon a conviction under said laws and ordinances as for a second offense as provided for in section 54 hereinafter the county board may, if error proceedings are taken to the judgment of the court in which conviction is had, suspend the license of the licensee so convicted for the remainder of the license year. Should, however, the judgment of conviction be reversed prior to the termination of said license year then such suspension shall immediately terminate. During such suspension no new license shall be granted to take the place of the license so suspended."

Reading these two sections together, bearing in mind that the members of the state liquor licensing board are sworn to enforce the spirit of the license law as well as its letter, it would seem quite clear that the purpose of section 57 is to better enable the state liquor licensing board to see that section 34 is properly administered and should, therefore, be given such construction as would as fully accomplish the purpose sought as its terms will fairly admit.

I am, therefore, of opinion that it is the duty of the clerk of every court in this state, every mayor, justice of the peace and judge of a court having no clerk, to make report to the state liquor licensing board of every conviction of a licensee for any offense under any statute of this state relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors regardless of where such statute may be found in the General Code, and to report all convictions of licensees for felonies.

It will be further noted that section 13050, G. C., to which reference is made, was originally enacted as a part of section 11 of the act of May 14, 1886, 83 O. L., 160, which is entitled "An act providing against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors" and was subsequently amended in 85 O. L., 260 and 95 O. L., 87. From this it conclusively appears that this section of the General Code is a law relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors within the meaning of section 1261-72, G. C., supra, notwithstanding the action of the codifying commission in placing it under the heading of "Sabbath desecration."

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPOINTING BOARD FOR DISTRICT LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—WHERE AND WHEN SUCH BOARD SHOULD MEET.

The appointing board provided for in section 1261-22b, G. C., 106 O. L., 562 will be required to meet at the court house of the most populous county of the district at twelve o'clock noon on Thursday, September 9, 1915, and will then consist of those persons lawfully holding the offices of county clerk, recorder and president of the board of county commissioners of the several counties of the district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a number of inquiries relative to amended senate bill No. 307, and am taking the liberty of directing an opinion thereon to you.

The above act provides that the state shall be divided into thirty-four licensing districts therein designated, in each of which districts there is created an appointing board.

Section 3 of the act, section 1261-22b, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, is as follows:

> "For the purposes of this act the county clerks, recorders, and presidents of boards of county commissioners shall constitute the appointing board."

Section 4 of the act, section 1261-22c, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, provides in part as follows:

> "Five days after this act becomes effective the said appointing boards shall meet at the court house in the most populous county of their respective district at twelve o'clock, noon, at which time and place such boards shall organize by selecting a president and secretary, to wit:"

The first inquiry to be considered is, who will constitute the appointing boards of the several districts?

Amended senate bill No. 307 was filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, and if no referendum petition thereon is filed will go into effect September 4, 1915.

By the provisions of section 1261-22b, G. C., supra, county clerks, recorders and presidents of the boards of county commissioners are made ex officio members of the district appointing boards. It may be now observed that it is the particularly designated officers who are so made members of the appointing boards during their continuance as such, rather than the person holding such offices, at the time amended senate bill No. 307 goes into effect. That is to say, no person may be a member of the appointing board unless he is at the same time lawfully holding one of the enumerated offices and on the contrary when any particular individual for any reason ceases to hold one of the offices enumerated, he likewise ceases to be a member of the appointing board. So that by force of law, on September 4, 1915, all those persons holding the offices of county clerk, recorder and president of the board of county commissioners will automatically become members of the district appointing boards and upon the expiration of their terms of office as county clerk, recorder or president of the board of county commissioners, they will also automaticaly cease to be members of the district appointing board.

Under the provisions of sections 2395 and 2400, G. C., the current terms of members of the board of county commissioners will expire at 12 o'clock midnight on the day preceding the third Monday of September, 1915, when their successors are required to organize. Under section 2750, G. C., the current term of the county recorders will expire at 12 o'clock midnight on September 5, 1915, and by the provisions of section 2867, G. C., the current term of the clerk of courts will expire at 12 o'clock midnight on the day preceding the first Monday of August, 1915.

From this it conclusively appears that those persons who succeed to the office of county clerk on the first Monday of August, 1915, and those persons at present holding the offices of county recorder and president of the board of commissioners in the absence of death, resignation or removal from office will, on September 4, 1915, automatically become members of the district appointing board, and that on September 6, 1915, the county recorder will be succeeded as a member of the appointing board by his successor as county recorder.

Further inquiry has been made as to when, under amended senate bill No. 307, liquor traffic supervisors may be appointed.

Assuming that there will be no referendum petition filed upon this law, this question involves a consideration of section 29 of amended senate bill No. 307, in connection with that part of section 4 thereof above quoted. The provisions of section 29 (106 O. L., 570) are as follows:

> "If the taking effect of this act is delayed by referendum, or other cause, beyond the first day of September, 1915, then, upon the taking effect of this act the state liquor traffic inspector shall be appointed by the governor, and within five days after the official result is announced, the appointing boards shall meet and appoint liquor traffic supervisors in the manner provided herein. Their term of office shall expire on the tenth day of September, 1917, or when their successors are appointed. As far as applicable all dates shall be modified to conform to the time of this act taking effect, provided, however, that any license granted under this act shall expire in May, 1917, as provided herein."

Since this law does not go into effect until after September 1, 1915, section 29 is apparently in conflict with section 4, in that section 4 provides that "five days after this act becomes effective," and section 29 provides that "within five days after the official result is announced" the appointing board shall meet, etc.

It seems quite clear, however, from an examination of the whole of section 29, that it was intended to apply only to the condition of the law taking effect after a referendum thereon, or upon some contingency other than the expiration of the constitutional ninety-day period.

It will be noted that in section 4 the day, the place and the hour of the meeting is definitely fixed, thus avoiding all necessity of further notice thereof to any member of the appointing board, and that nowhere is there found any provision for notice of the time of holding this first meeting of the appointing board except as fixed in that section, and that no authority is conferred in the bill upon any member, members or other person to fix any other time or to call a meeting of such board. I am therefore inclined to the view that these two sections in this particular have substantially the same meaning, and that the plain intent of the legislature was that the appointing board should meet at 12 o'clock noon five days after the law becomes effective. Any other construction of section 29 might give rise to much confusion for no substantial purpose, if it did not render it so indefinite and uncertain as to make it inoperative.

I am therefore of opinion that if no petition for a referendum of this law is filed, the district appointing boards will be thereby required to meet at twelve o'clock noon on Thursday, September 9, 1915, at the court house in the most populous county of the district, that no notice or further arrangement for such meeting is in any way required, that the appointing boards will then consist of those persons who are on that day lawfully holding the offices of county clerk, recorder and president of the board of county commissioners, of the several counties of the district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

UNDER SECTION 4738, G. C., 106 O. L., 396, COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION WITHOUT AUTHORITYY TO CREATE A SUPERVISION DISTRICT IN WHICH LESS THAN THIRTY TEACHERS ARE EMPLOYED.

Under section 4738, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 396, the county board of education will be without authority to create a supervision district in which less than thirty teachers are employed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 21, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "Oregon and Jerusalem townships in Lucas county are separated from the main body of the county by the Maumee river and the city of Toledo. This territory, containing twenty-four schools, is not contiguous to any other part of the county school district. The district superintendent would have to travel ten miles from this territory to reach the outer limit of the nearest school in Washington, the nearest township, and to take six schools from Washington township would destroy a natural unit of thirty-one schools, which would cause confusion and great inconvenience.
> "Query: Because of a lack of compact and contiguous territory sufficient for thirty schools, could these two townships with twenty-four schools be recognized by the state as a supervision district, and would such district be entitled to state funds for supervision purposes. This opinion is desired at your earliest convenience, since action must be taken July 27, 1915."

Your inquiry involves an interpretation of the language of section 4738, G. C., as amended by amended senate bill No. 282, passed by the general assembly May 27, 1915, approved by the governor on the same date and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 28, 1915, and which will become effective August 27, 1915. This act is found in 106 O. L., 396, and section 4738 as amended reads as follows:

> "Section 4738: The county board of education shall divide the county school district, any year, to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty. The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts. The county board of education may at their discretion, require the county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village or rural schools of the county. This shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools."

As the above quoted section, in its amended form, will not go into effect until August 27, 1915, no action can be taken under the same until on or after that date. It will then become mandatory upon the county board of education to divide the county school districts into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts, and it is provided that the action of the county board shall take effect on the first day of the following September. In the year 1915, this action will have to be taken between August 27th and 31st, inclusive, and will be effective on September 1st, of this year.

The statute prescribes a number of restrictions under which the county board must act in making this division. It is provided that the territory of a supervision district shall be contiguous, but the word "contiguous" is not always used in the sense of "adjoining." In the Standard dictionary the word "contiguous" is defined as follows:

> "Touching or joining at the edge or boundary; close together; adjacent; adjoining."

The word "adjacent" is given as a synonym for the word "contiguous," and the word "adjacent" is defined as follows:

> "Lying near or close at hand; adjoining; bordering;"

and in a note under the word "adjacent," it is observed that adjacent farms may not be connected; if adjoining they meet at the boundary line; and that "contiguous" may be used for either "adjacent" or "adjoining." It is also observed that "near" is a relative word. I conclude that the word "contiguous" as found in the section now under consideration, must have been used by the legislature in the sense of "near" or "close together" and that under the provisions of this section it is not necessary that all parts of a supervision district should adjoin each other if it is impossible to arrange a supervision district which will meet all the other conditions of the section and which will, at the same time, be made up of adjoining parts. The provisions that a district shall be compact and that consideration shall be given to the amount of consolidation and centralization and the condition of the roads and general topography, are evidently intended to mean that a district shall be made as compact as possible without violating any of the other specific provisions of the section, and that while the amount of consolidation and centralization and the condition of the roads and general topography are to be taken into consideration, such conditions are not to have such weight as to excuse compliance with any other plain provision of the section. The above observation is also applicable to the provision of the section that the territory of the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable, but the provision that the number of teachers in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty, is one which is definite and certain in its character and capable of being met in all instances.

I therefore conclude that the county board of education, under this section, will be without authority to create a supervision district in which less than thirty teachers are employed, and that the rule will be the same, even where compliance with this provision will necessitate creating a district, all parts of which are not adjoining, and even if the result is to create a situation involving some inconvenience to the district superintendent, and that if a board of education should attempt to create a supervision district in which less than thirty teachers are employed, such district could not be recognized by the state as a supervision district and would not be entitled to state funds for supervision purposes.

While this may work some inconvenience in the particular case presented by you, I am unable to reach any other conclusion in view of the language of the section, and can only suggest one remedy for the situation in question.

It is provided by the section now under consideration that the county board of education may, at their discretion, require the county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village or rural schools of the county, and that such action shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools. It might be possible under this authorization, if the other work of the county superintendent is such as to warrant such action, to require the county superintendent to personally supervise the schools of Oregon and Jeruselum townships in Lucas county, and if such action should be taken, it would supersede the necessity of district supervision for the schools of the two townships in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—MAY REFUSE USE OF CITY HALL IN CITY BUILDING FOR RELIGIOUS SERVICES WHEN MANAGEMENT UNDER HIS CONTROL—NO DISCRIMINATION.

A director of public service, given by ordinance the management of a public hall in a city building, may, unless otherwise provided in the ordinance, by rule refuse the use of such hall to religious denominations for the purpose of holding religious services, provided the rule does not discriminate against particular denominations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Hon. R. Clint Cole, city solicitor of Findlay, Ohio, has submitted to me a question as to whether a director of service, who is given by law, and in this instance by ordinance, the control and management of a public hall in a city building, may refuse to permit the use of said hall by religious denominations for the purpose of holding religious services. I have determined to direct an opinion in this matter to the bureau.

Section 3638, G. C., gives every municipal corporation power to "establish, erect, maintain, protect, and regulate public halls * * *." Section 4326 of the General Code, provides as to the director of public service, that:

> "* * * He shall supervise the construction and have charge of the maintenance of public buildings and other property of the corporation not otherwise provided for in this title. He shall have the management of all other matters provided by the council in connection with the public service of the city."

Under these statutes and under ordinances of the character described by the solicitor, the director of public service has full authority to manage the public hall in question and may make such rules with respect to its use as may be reasonable and proper, and consistent with the ordinance.

Assuming that the ordinance merely grants him the management of the hall and does not itself provide a different rule in the matter, a director would, in my judgment, be authorized to make and enforce a rule refusing the use of a public hall for the purpose of holding religious services, provided such rule were enforced impartially and without discrimination against particular religious sects or denominations.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CHARTER—CITY OF TOLEDO—WHETHER OR NOT PRIMARY ELECTION IS REQUIRED UNDER STATUTES OR UNDER PROVISION OF CHARTER FOR NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR ANY OFFICE —ASSESSOR, CONSTABLE AND CLERK OF POLICE COURT, DISCUSSED.

In charter municipalities wherein a provision is made for the nomination of all municipal officers in the charter, candidates for assessor may be nominated in the same manner and at the same time as city, ward, district or village officers. If there is no charter provision for the nomination of city, ward, district or village officers, candidates must be nominated under the statutes of the state at the primary election on August 10, 1915, in municipalities with a population of two thousand or more, and may be nominated by petition under the provisions of section 4999, G. C. If the charter city is not divided into wards, a candidate for assessor in the municipality may be nominated under the charter provision, if such there be, for the nomination of municipal officers. If the city is not divided into wards and no provision is made in the charter for the nomination and election of municipal officers, then an assessor shall be nominated at the primary August 10, 1915, under the statutes. If the city is divided into wards and the charter provides for the nomination of ward officers, assessors shall be nominated as other ward officers under the charter. A nomination of a candidate for assessor of a city made either under the charter or at the primary held in August, 1915, in a city which is not divided into wards, will be of no effect if the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections shall thereafter divide the city into assessment districts.

Candidates for constable may be nominated at a primary election in municipalities, the limits of which coincide with the limits of the township only when a primary election for the nomination of township officers is petitioned for by a majority of the electors of the township and municipality.

A primary election is required to be held in the city of Toledo on August 10, 1915, for the nomination of candidates for clerk of the police court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of June 18, 1915, making inquiry as to whether or not under the statutes of the state and the provisions of the municipal charter of the city of Toledo, a primary election is required to be held for the nomination of candidates for any office in that city on August 10, 1915.

By section 7 of article 5 of the constitution of the state, as adopted September 3, 1912, it is provided, in so far as the same may be applicable to your inquiry, that:

> "All nominations for elective state, district, county and municipal offices shall be made at direct primary elections or by petition as provided by law. * * *"

In accordance with this constitutional requirement, it is provided in section 4963, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 481, as a part of the general statutory plan for nomination of candidates for the offices above named, that:

> "Primaries under this chapter to nominate candidates for township and municipal offices, justices of the peace and members of the board of education, shall be held in each county at the usual polling places on the second Tuesday in August of the odd numbered years."

Hence, except as it may be found to be otherwise provided, it is required that a primary election be held on the second Tuesday of August, 1915, for the nomination of candidates for all municipal offices in all municipalities with a population of two thousand or more, municipalities of less than two thousand population being excepted from the provisions of section 7 of article 5 of the constitution unless a primary election is petitioned for by a majority of the electors thereof.

It is provided however by section 3, article 18 of the constitution, that:

"Municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self government and to adopt and enforce within their limits such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations, as are not in conflict with general laws.

"Article 18, section 7. Any municipality may frame and adopt or amend a charter for its government and may, subject to the provisions of section 3 of this article, exercise thereunder all powers of local self-government."

It is stated in your communication and the accompanying correspondence that the city of Toledo has heretofore adopted a charter for its government pursuant to the constitutional provisions above set forth, which charter, in so far as it relates to the election of officers and the enactment of preliminary legislation, became effective January 1, 1915.

In the case of the State ex rel. v. Lynch, 88 O. S., 71, it was held:

"The provisions of the eighteenth article of the constitution as amended in September, 1912, continue in force the general laws for the government of cities and villages until the 15th day of November following, and thereafter until changed in one of the three modes following: (1) By the enactment of general laws for their amendment, (2) by additional laws to be ratified by the electors of the municipality to be affected thereby, (3) by the adoption of a charter by the electors of a municipality in the mode pointed out in the article."

From this it follows that except in so far as the same may have been changed by the adoption of the charter of the city of Toledo, the general laws of the state relative to the nomination of candidates for municipal offices continues to govern in that city, and unless provision therefor is found in the charter to the contrary, nomination of candidates for municipal offices in the city of Toledo are required to be made on the second Tuesday of August, 1915, in accordance with the general statutes of the state governing primary elections for the nomination of municipal officers.

It may be further observed that in the case of Fitzgerald v. Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections, 88 O. S., 338, it was held:

"Under sections 3 and 7, article 18, as so amended, municipalities are authorized to determine what officers shall administer their government, which shall be appointed and which elected, that the nomination of elective officers shall be made by petition by a method prescribed, and elections shall be conducted by the election authorities prescribed by general laws."

It then having been determined that it is within the power of a municipality, through the adoption of a charter, to assume full and absolute control of the number, character, functions and authority of all local officers as well as the time and method of their selection to the exclusion of all control or regulation thereof by the general statutes of the state, your inquiry may be answered generally, to the effect that in so far as the nomination and election of municipal officers of the city of Toledo is provided for in the charter, those provisions will govern to the exclusion of the statutory provision relative to the nomination of such officers and if the charter makes provision for such nominations to be made at a different time or in a different manner from that provided by the statutes of the state, the charter provisions will control. If on the other hand the charter fails to make provision for the time and manner of making nomination of candidates for any or all of the municipal offices of the city of Toledo, then under the rule laid down in the case of State ex rel. v. Lynch, supra, the nomination of candidates for all such municipal offices of that city, as are not provided for in the charter, are required to be made at a primary election to be held on the second Tuesday of August, 1915, in accordance with the general statutes of the state governing the conduct of primary elections for the nomination of candidates for municipal offices.

You make further inquiry whether assessors are required by law to be nominated at a primary to be held on the second Tuesday of August in charter cities wherein provision is made in the charter for the nomination of candidates for municipal offices at another date and in a manner differing from that provided by the statutes of the state.

Section 17 of house bill No. 29, passed May 7, 1915, and which will become effective on August 9, 1915, in so far as applicable to the question under consideration, provides:

"Section 17. At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers. * * *"

It is true that the term "elected" alone is here used, and that there is not found any express reference to the nomination of assessors if the term "elected" is to be construed strictly or in a technical sense. It will be noted, however, that it is here required that assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers.

In the case of Fitzgerald v. Cleveland, supra, the supreme court in construing the phrase "as provided by law" as found in section 7, article 5 of the constitution, supra, said:

"The provision of a charter which is passed within the limits of the constitutional grant of authority to the city is as much the law as a statute passed by the general assembly."

This case was decided prior to the enactment of house bill No. 29, and the above provision of that act must be presumed to have been so framed in contemplation of the rule there established.

It then follows that it was in contemplation and must be presumed to have been the intent of the legislature that assessors in charter cities, should be elected in the manner provided by the charters of such cities as distinguished from the manner provided by statute.

It would hardly be argued, in view of the fact that assessors in charter cities are to be elected under the charter provisions, that the legislature intended that nominations of candidates for such offices should be made otherwise than in the manner provided for the nomination of other ward and municipal officers in such cities. In other words, it seems clear that the term "elected" as used in the provision of section 17 of house bill No. 29, supra, comprehends the whole scheme of selecting municipal officers that is to say, includes their nomination as well as their election, as used in a more restricted and technical sense.

I am therefore of opinion that in charter cities where provision is made in the charter for the nomination of all municipal officers to be elected at the election to be held in November, 1915, candidates for assessors, under house bill No. 29, supra, should be nominated in the same manner and at the same time as candidates for other ward, district, village and city officers.

Attention is directed to the further provisions of section 17 of house bill No. 29, (section 3349, G. C., 106 O. L., 250) for the election of assessors in municipalities, as follows:

> "In municipal corporations divided into wards, one assessor shall be elected in each ward; in villages one assessor shall be elected; in cities not divided into wards, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, shall, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, within ten days after this act shall become effective, divide such cities, or such part or parts thereof as may be located in their county, into such number of assessment districts as in the judgment of the county auditor may be necessary in order to provide for the assessment of all the property therein; a division so fixed shall remain in effect for a period of four years, at the expiration of which, and quadrennially thereafter, a like division shall be made in the same manner and by the same authority. One assessor shall, at the time specified in this section, be elected in each assessment district so created; provided, however, that nothing therein shall be so construed as to require a division of any municipal corporation or part thereof into assessment districts when, in the judgment of the county auditor, such division is not necessary, in which event no assessor shall be elected in the entire municipal corporation or in that part thereof which may be located in one county as the case may be."

From this it will be observed that in municipalities not divided into wards, except in such municipalities where, in the judgment of the county auditor it is not deemed necessary so to do, the board of elections, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, is required to divide such city or such part thereof as may be located within their county, into such number of assessment districts as the county auditor may deem necessary, within ten days after house bill No. 29 shall become effective. This bill, however, as stated above, will not become effective until such time as to render it practically impossible that such action of the deputy state supervisors of elections, as above referred to, be taken before the primary to be held on August 10, 1915. It then being utterly impracticable that the assessment districts in such municipalities as are not now divided into wards, but which the county auditor of the county shall determine after house bill No. 29 becomes effective to be necessary to be divided into districts, be established as authorized and required by law, it results that in those cities no assessors for such districts may be nominated on August 10, 1915, at the primary, although such primary is held in such city on that date for the nomination of other municipal officers. In cities which are not divided into wards, and in which the charter does not provide for the nomination of municipal officers, a candidate for assessor should be nominated at the August primary. This nomination, however, would prove of no effect if the city should, thereafter, be divided into assessment districts according to law. Candidates for assessor in assessment districts, in cities which are not divided into wards and which shall, after house bill No. 29 becomes effective, be deemed necessary to be divided into districts by the county auditor, may then be nominated only by petition signed and filed in accordance with the provisions of section 4999, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 844, except in those municipalities wherein the charter provides for holding a primary or the nomination of candidates by petition for district officers, after such municipality shall have been divided into assessment districts.

Reference is also made in your inquiry to the nominations of constables in the city of Toledo, the corporate limits of the city being identical with those of the township. Section 3512, G. C., to which you refer, provides:

> "When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, all township offices shall be abolished, and the duties thereof shall thereafter be performed by the corresponding officers of the city or village, except that justices of the peace and constables shall continue the exercise of their functions under municipal ordinances providing offices, regulating the disposition of their fees, their compensation, clerks and other officers, and employes. Such justices and constables shall be elected at municipal elections. All property, moneys, credits, books, records and documents of such township shall be delivered to the council of such city or village. All rights, interests or claims in favor of or against the township may be enforced by or against the corporation."

Notwithstanding it is provided that constables shall be elected at municipal elections, they do not solely for that reason cease to be township officers.

In an opinion of this department under date of April 30, 1915, No. 303, it was held that under section 7, article 5 of the constitution, and section 4951, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 426, primary elections may not be held for the nomination of township officers unless petitioned for by a majority of the electors of the township. It therefore follows that unless a constable, under the facts stated, ceases to be a township officer, a primary election may not be held for the nomination of candidates for such office, except upon petition therefor by a majority of the electors of the township.

I am therefore of the opinion that a candidate for constable may not be nominated at the primary election to be held August 10, 1915, unless a primary election for the nomination of township officers is petitioned for by a majority of the electors of the township.

It is further stated in your communication that the city of Toledo is a city in which a clerk of police court is provided by law and inquiry is made as to whether candidates for the office of the clerk of the police court of that city are required to be nominated at a primary election to be held August 10, 1915.

The police court of Toledo is established under state law and is given jurisdiction of subject-matter which may not be said to be that of purely local government. This court among other matters which are not purely local in their nature, is by the provisions of section 4577, G. C., given final jurisdiction of all misdemeanors committed in violation of the criminal statutes of the state, and while it may be within the power of a municipality to create a court and confer upon it jurisdiction of offenses against local ordinances, it is not conceived to be within the power of a municipality by any action to abolish a state court or to deprive a court established under general law of jurisdiction over offenses in violation of the criminal statutes of the state or of such civil jurisdiction as it may exercise under authority of the state. The municipal court of Toledo, together with the clerk thereof, which is an essential incident thereto, is a branch of the state government which may not be abolished or deprived of jurisdiction of matters of state concern by charter authority. The clerk of the police court may not then be said to be a municipal officer in the full sense of the term, but on the contrary the clerk and other officers of such court are, in the exercise of that jurisdiction which may be derived solely from state authority under the constitution and statutes thereof, exercising functions of the state government as distinguished from local government and are hence not within the purview of the constitutional provision conferring upon municipalities authority to exercise the powers of local self government and by reason thereof not subject to control or in any way affected by charter provisions or municipal action taken thereunder. That is to say, that in so far as the police court of Toledo is in the exercise of jurisdiction over matters of purely state concern, it may not be in any way effected by the charter provisions and that the nomination and election of the clerk of that court must, therefore, be made at a primary election which is required to be held on August 10, 1915, or by petition under the general law of the state.

Summing up the foregoing, it may then be said that in charter municipalities wherein provision is made for the nomination of all municipal officers in the charter, candidates for assessor may be nominated in the same manner and at the same time as city, ward, district or village officers. If there is no charter provision for the nomination of city, ward, district or village officers, candidates must be nominated under the statutes of the state at the primary election on August 10, 1915, in municipalities with a population of two thousand or more, and may be nominated by petition under the provisions of section 4999, G. C., supra.

If the charter city is not divided into wards, a candidate for assessor in the municipality may be nominated under the charter provision, if such there be, for the nomination of municipal officers. If the city is not divided into wards and no provision is made in the charter for the nomination of municipal officers, then an assessor shall be nominated at the primary, August 10, 1915, under the statutes. If the city is divided into wards and the charter provides for the nomination of ward officers, assessors shall be nominated as other ward officers, under the charter. It may be observed that a nomination of a candidate for assessor of a city, may either under the charter or at the primary held in August, 1915, in a city which is not divided into wards, would be of no effect if the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections shall thereafter divide the city into assessment districts according to law; that candidates for constable may be nominated at a primary election in municipalities, the limits of which coincide with the limits of the township only when a primary election for the nomination of township officers is petitioned for by a majority of the electors of the township and municipality, and that a primary election is required to be held in the city of Toledo on August 10, 1915, for the nomination of candidates for clerk of the police court.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BONDS OF SUBORDINATES OF COMMISSIONER OF LABOR STATISTICS AND CHIEF INSPECTOR OF STEAM ENGINEERS ARE OF NO EFFECT — POSITIONS ABOLISHED BY INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ACT.

The amendment in 103 O. L., 531-532 of sections 881 and 1058-15, G. C., relating to the bonds of subordinates of the commissioner of labor statistics and the chief inspector of steam engineers, respectively, is of no effect for the reason that these positions were abolished by the industrial commission act, 103 O. L., 109, and the duties formerly performed by such officers and employes are now to be performed by the industrial commission, its deputies and employes, whose bonds are provided for by section 4 of said industrial commission act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 22, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon the following:

> "The act of March 12, 1913, section 46 volume 103 Ohio Laws, page 109, repealed sections 881 and 1058-15 of the General Code, and attempted to cover the matter thus repealed by the latter part of section 4 of said act.
> "The act of April 14, 1913, amended said sections 881 and 1058-15 of the General Code, which have been repealed by the former act to which we have called attention. See vol. 103 Ohio Laws, pages 531 and 532.
> "The question now arises—What law controls the bonds enumerated in sections 881 and 1058-15 of the act of April 14, 1913—the sections just cited or section 871-4 of the act of April 12, 1913, as found at page 96 volume 103 Ohio Laws? If the last enactment controls the bonds, kindly state who is the proper approving authority in section 1058-15, General Code."

The first act referred to by you is the act creating the industrial commission of Ohio, and as evidenced by the title "abolishing the departments of commissioner of labor statistics, * * * chief examiner of steam engineers, and certain other designated departments, and "merging certain powers and duties of said departments in and transferring certain powers and duties of said departments to said industrial commission of Ohio."

Section 4 thereof, to which you refer, contemplates general provisions for the salaries, official oaths and bonds of the members of the industrial commission and contains the following provision, which is pertinent to your inquiry:

> "All employes or deputies of the commission receiving or disbursing funds of the state shall give bond to the state in amounts and with surety to be approved by the commission."

As you point out this act, conformably to the declared purpose of the abolition of the departments named, repeals many of the sections of the General Code relative to the departments of labor statistics and the chief examiner of steam engineers and the board of boiler rules, among them sections 881 and 1058-15, General Code. Moreover, section 11 of the industrial commission act designated as section 871-11, provides as follows:

"On and after the first day of September, 1913, the following departments of the state of Ohio, to wit: commissioner of labor statistics, chief inspector of mines, chief inspector of workshops and factories, chief examiner of steam engineers, board of boiler rules, and the state board of arbitration and conciliation, shall have no further legal existence, except that the heads of the said departments, and said boards, shall within ten days after the said date submit to the governor their reports of their respective departments for the portion of the year 1913, during which they were in existence, and on and after the first day of September, 1913, the industrial commission of Ohio shall have all the powers and enter upon the performance of all the duties conferred by law upon the said departments."

Subsequently to the passage of the act hereinbefore referred to, the general assembly passed the act found in 103 O. L., 528, amending numerous unrelated sections relative to the official bonds of different state officers so as to require the deposit of all bonds, with certain limited exceptions, in the office of the secretary of state. In enacting this law the legislature, by clear inadvertence, assumed to "amend" section 881 and section 1058-15 so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 881. Each special agent and district superintendent may be required by the commissioner of labor statistics to give a bond to the state in such an amount not exceeding two thousand dollars with such sureties as the commissioner approves. Said bond shall be deposited with the secretary of state and kept in his office.

"Sec. 1058-15. The chief inspector of steam boilers shall give a bond payable to the state in the sum of five thousand dollars, with surety to be approved by the governor, conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duty. Like bonds shall be given in the sum of two thousand dollars to be approved in the same manner by the assistant chief inspector and by each general inspector. Such bonds, with the approval of each general inspector of steam boilers and of the assistant chief inspector of steam boilers, shall be deposited with the secretary of state and kept in his office."

The discussion of the technical effect of expressly "amending" a section which has been previously repealed is unnecessary in this instance. It may be assumed that sections 881 and 1058-15, G. C., as "amended" in 103 O. L., 531, are in a technical sense "law." Even if this be true, however, they are of no effect because there no longer is any such officer as "the commission of labor statistics," as referred to in section 881, or as the "chief inspector of steam boilers," as referred to in section 1058-15. The industrial commission may, in fact, have retained these names for certain of their deputies or employes, as referred to in section 4, but the reference in the other sections is obviously to officers or positions which have been abolished.

I advise you, therefore, that section 881 and section 1058-15 are of no effect whatsoever, and may be entirely disregarded by the industrial commission and its deputies and employes. So that section 4 of the industrial commission act is the only provision in any way relating to the bonds of such deputies and employes.

I think this statement answers all the questions submitted by you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—DOG TAX FUND—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY TRANSFER SURPLUS TO SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO CHILDREN AND ANIMALS—REMAINDER NOT SO TRANSFERRED GOES TO BOARD OF EDUCATION FUND.

Section 5653, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 145, is mandatory and exclusive with respect to the transfer of the surplus found at the June session in the dog tax fund. Such surplus or part thereof may be transferred by the commissioners and paid to a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, if deemed necessary for the uses and purposes of such society; any part of such surplus not so transferred must be transferred to the board of education fund as therein provided.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of July 19, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Are the provisions of section 5653, General Code, as amended, 104 O. L., 145, mandatory in requiring the county commissioners to direct a transfer of the surplus in the dog fund to either a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, or to the county board of education fund?
> "Since this amendment became effective, could the county commissioners in their discretion transfer any of this surplus to any other funds than those mentioned? Are we correct in our view that the county commissioners must either transfer this surplus to the society mentioned therein, or to the county board of education fund, or to both in such proportion as they may determine?"

In reply I beg to call attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered September 12, 1914, to Hon. F. L. Johnson, prosecuting attorney of Greene county, intimating parenthetically that the county commissioners could not be compelled to transfer the surplus in the dog tax fund to the county board of education fund. This conclusion is correct, but Mr. Hogan did not have before him a question as specific as those which you now ask, and in the light of your questions, I am convinced that such conclusion requires some qualification.

The section referred to is as follows:

> "Section 5653. After paying all such sheep claims, at the June session of the county commissioners, if there remain more than one thousand dollars of such fund, the excess at such June session, shall be transferred and disposed as follows: In a county in which there is a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, incorporated and organized as provided by law, which has one or more agents appointed in pursuance of law, all such excess as the county commissioners deem necessary for the uses and purposes of such society by order of the commissioners and upon the warrant of the county auditor shall be paid to the treasurer of such society, and any surplus not so transferred shall be transferred to the county board of education fund at the direction of the county commissioners."

County commissioners are, under the above quoted section, obliged to make a transfer from the dog tax fund to the county board of education fund unless, in the exercise of the discretion in them vested thereby, the commissioners deem the whole surplus in the fund necessary for the uses and purposes of a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals; and if there is no such society in the county or if the surplus found to exist at the June session is not wholly paid to such society, then all the remainder must be transferred to the county board of education fund.

It is true that the statute still contains the language "at the direction of the county commissioners," from which it might be argued that the commissioners still have discretion as to whether or not they will transfer the surplus not transferred to the society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, to the county board of education fund. I am of the opinion that the word "direction" refers merely to the machinery by which transfer is to be effected and has the effect of requiring the commissioners to act in the premises instead of authorizing the auditor to make the transfer on his books without the authority of the commissioners. The duty of the commissioners in the premises, however, is mandatory.

I might add that the presence in the section of the phrase "at the direction of the county commissioners" is explained by consulting original section 5653, G. C., which provides in part that the surplus not so transferred to the society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, "may be transferred to the school fund, the poor fund or the road or bridge fund, at the direction of the county commissioners." Comparison shows that the language was changed to "shall be transferred to the county board of education fund at the direction of the county commissioners. Such comparison makes the legislative intention very clear and furnishes, moreover, an answer to the more specific questions in the second paragraph in your letter, as I have quoted it.

While there are other provisions of law authorizing county commissioners to make transfers of funds under their supervision, such provisions, in my opinion, do not apply to or authorize the transfer of moneys from the dog tax fund. The specific provision of section 5653, as amended, is to be regarded as an exception to the general rules of the other sections referred to, and the dog tax fund cannot be transferred in any way other than as provided in section 5653, as amended.

Specifically answering your questions then, I advise that section 5653 is mandatory and requires the county commissioners to direct a transfer of the surplus in the dog tax fund to the county board of education fund, unless all or a part thereof is paid to a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals; that the commissioners have no power to transfer any of the surplus to any funds other than those mentioned; and that you are correct in your view that the commissioners must either transfer the surplus to the society mentioned therein or to the county board of education fund, or to both in such proportion as they may determine; in fact, for the sake of accuracy, I must add that the commissioners must transfer the fund in one of the two manners provided in section 5653, and have no authority to leave the surplus in the dog tax fund without transferring it to either of the other funds therein mentioned.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNCIPAL COURT OF CINCINNATI—HOW FEES OF WITNESSES SUBPOENAED BY SUCH COURT IN FELONY CASES ARE TO BE PAID WHEN STATE FAILS IN PROSECUTION.

Fees of witnesses subpoenaed by the municipal court of the city of Cincinnati in felony cases to be paid under the provisions of section 3018, G. C., when the state fails in the prosecution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge recepit of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "May the fees of witnesses, subpoenaed by the municipal court of the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, in felony cases wherein the defendant, or defendants, are dismissed, be paid from the city treasury? We find no specific authorization of such payments in the law creating said court, as found in 103 Ohio Laws, page 279."

Section 1558-6 of the General Code is section 6 of the act "providing for enlarging and extending the jurisdiction of the police court in the city of Cincinnati, and changing the name of such court to the municipal court of Cincinnati," (page 280 of 103 O. L.) is as follows:

> "The municipal court shall have the same jurisdiction in criminal matters and prosecutions for misdemeanors or violations of ordinances as heretofore had by the police court of Cincinnati and in addition thereto shall have ordinary civil jurisdiction within the limits of said city of Cincinnati in the following cases. * * *"

Sections 1558-8, 1558-9 and 1558-13 of the General Code, which are sections 8, 9 and 13 respectively of the aforesaid act (pp. 281- 283, of 103 O. L.) are as follows:

> "Section 8. The municipal court shall have jurisdiction of all misdemeanors and of all violations of city ordinances of which police courts in municipalities now have or may hereafter be given jurisdiction. In felonies the municipal court shall have the powers which police courts in municipalities now have or may hereafter be given.
> "Section 9. In the actions and proceedings of which the municipal court has jurisdiction, all laws conferring jurisdictions upon a court of common pleas, a police judge or a justice of the peace, given such court or officer power to hear and determine such causes, prescribing the force and effect of their judgments, orders or decrees, and authorizing or directing the execution or enforcement thereof, shall be held to extend to the municipal court, unless inconsistent with this act or plainly inapplicable.
> "Section 13. In all criminal cases and proceedings the practice and procedure and mode of bringing and conducting prosecutions for offenses, and the powers of the court in relation thereto, shall be the same as those which are now, or may hereafter be, possessed by police courts in municipalities unless otherwise provided herein."

In section 1558-4 of the General Code, which is section 4 of the act, (103 O. L., 280) fixing the salaries of the presiding judge and the judges of the municipal court of Cincinnati, it is provided that in the case of the presiding judge $2,000 of his salary shall be paid out of the treasury of Hamilton county in quarterly installments, and in the case of the judges $1,000 of the salary of each shall be paid out of the treasury of Hamilton county.

Section 3018 of the General Code is as follows:

"In felonies, fees of witnesses before justices of the peace, mayors and police justices, shall be paid upon the allowance of the commissioners from the county treasury, on the certificate of such officer, notwithstanding the state has failed."

Nowhere in the act is there to be found any provision for the payment of witness fees in felony cases wherein the state has failed, and in view of the provisions of sections 6, 8, 9 and 13 of the act quoted above paralleling the jurisdiction and proceedings of the municipal court in criminal matters with the common pleas, police, and justice of the peace courts, it is my opinion that the fees of witnesses subpoenaed by the municipal court of Cincinnati, Ohio, in felony cases wherein the state has failed, should be paid under the provisions of section 3018 of the General Code, above quoted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION — DEPOSITORY HAVING BEEN PROVIDED FOR ITS SCHOOL MONEYS, IT IS DIRECTORY, ONLY, FOR BOARD TO DISPENSE WITH TREASURER OF SUCH MONEYS — WHERE THERE IS NO TREASURER IN A DISTRICT, THERE CAN BE NO DEPOSITORY.

Section 4782, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 159, requiring the board of education of a school district, when a depository has been provided for its school moneys, to dispense with a treasurer of such moneys, is directory only. There can be no such treasurer, however, in a district in which there is no depository nor after the first organization of a board of education, under the amendments to the school code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of July 16, 1915, requesting my written opinion, received and is as follows:

"Does the language of section 4782, General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 159, automatically in itself dispense with the treasurer of school moneys when a depository has been provided for as authorized by law, even though a majority of the board of education does not pass a resolution dispensing with said official; and if so, at what time?"

Section 4782 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., 159, provides:

"When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, shall dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

By comparing this section in its present form with the form thereof as it existed prior to the amendment referred to, it is discovered that the only change made therein by the general assembly in 1914, was to substitute the word "shall" before the word "dispense" for the word "may." This change, together with some of the other provisions of the act in which the amendment is found, 104 O. L., 158, makes it seem as if the intention of the legislature was to make section 4782 mandatory instead of permissive merely, as it had formerly been. But whatever may have been the latent intention of the legislature, it is clear that in order that its enactment might have the effect of imposing a mandatory duty, such intention must have been effectively expressed. The test of whether or not a statute is mandatory is furnished by considering whether or not compliance with it may be effectively enforced by mandamus. The character of the writ of mandamus is such as that it will not issue except where the right thereto is clear, nor in a case where the issuance would not accomplish any practical result.

It is manifest that mandamus would not lie to compel individual members of a board of education to act under section 4782 of the General Code, because the action therein referred to is to be "by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members," from which it clearly follows that the right of the individual members to vote as they see fit, is preserved.

It might be argued that because a board of education is a quasi corporation, capable of suing and being sued as a board, mandamus would lie against the board as such, but the sanction for the enforcement of the mandate of the court in such a case would have to be by proceedings in contempt against the individual members thereof; and because the statute preserves the right of each individual member to vote either affirmatively or negatively, as he may see fit, I do not see how contempt could be predicated upon the refusal of a majority of the members to vote affirmatively even after a mandate had been issued to the board as such.

I, therefore, reach, somewhat relunctantly, the conclusion that section 4782 is not mandatory and am compelled, therefore, to disagree with my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, who held that it is mandatory.

It occurs to me that a statute like section 4782 may logically have any one of four different effects, viz.:

(1) It may be self-executing.
(2) It may be mandatory.
(3) It may be directory.
(4) It may be permissive.

Section 4782 was once permissive and has been amended as to make it clear that it is no longer so. The above discussion demonstrates, I think, that it cannot be regarded as mandatory. Its effect, therefore, is either self-executing or directory.

I do not think that section 4782 can be regarded as self-executing. The way in which you have framed your question suggests one reason for so holding; for if the statute is self-executing, then there must be a time certain at which, under given circumstances, it will go into execution. If the statute is to be regarded as self-executing, then the statute will go into execution, in a given case, "when a depository has been provided for the school moneys of the district." But if this be true, then the provision of the statute to the effect "that the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, shall dispense with the treasurer," etc., is of no effect whatever. It cannot be deemed the intention of the legislature to strike this language out of the statute, because the only amendment which the legislature made was inserted in this very phrase. It is manifest, therefore, that the legislature intended that the board of education should act, and did not intend that the treasurer should be dispensed with and the clerk should commence to perform the services formerly devolving upon the treasurer, when and as soon as a depository had been provided. In other words, the statute is not self-executing, but must be carried into execution by the board of education, acting by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members.

These considerations all tend to dictate the choice of that interpretation of section 4782 which regards it as directory. It is true that section 4782 does not fall within any of the well recognized classes of directory provisions. In this case, however, the conclusion that the statute is directory is enforced by the necessary consequences of attempting to hold it mandatory or self-executing. It being the intention of the legislature that the thing contemplated by section 4782 shall be done, but the legislature not having made it possible to compel that thing to be done, it necessarily follows that it could only be regarded as directory; and while it is the duty of the board of education, when it provides for a depository for the moneys of the district, to dispense with the office of treasurer, such duty is one that can be enforced by political action only and not by the courts.

In order, however, that my opinion may not be misinterpreted, beg leave to call attention to the fact that section 4747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, which provides for the organization of all boards of education and for the officers which they shall have, does not authorize the election of a treasurer. This section becomes operative upon the occasion of the first organization of a city, village or rural school district after its amendment, and except as to new districts, this will be on the first Monday of January, 1916. Until that time present officers will continue to serve unless their positions are otherwise abolished under favor of section 4735 of the General Code, as amended in 104 O. L., 138. Therefore, it follows that between the enactment of the amendments of 1914 and the first organization of a city, village or rural school district board of education thereafter, it is possible for a district treasurer to be lawfully in office unless his position had been "dispensed with" as provided in section 4782 of the General Code, 104 O. L., 159, or unless no depository had been provided for the moneys of the district, in which event, under the provisions of section 4763, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 159, the county treasurer would, ipso facto, become the treasurer of the moneys of the district, thus dispensing with the office of treasurer without any action of the board. To be specific, then, in districts in which depositories have been provided, and in those districts only, and during the period of time intervening between the going into effect of the amendments of 1914 and the first organization of a board of education, under such amendments, and during that period of time only, the conclusions of the above opinion apply.

Your question does not require me to consider whose duty it will be, after the first organization of the board of education under the new amendments, to perform the services and discharge the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of a school district, in the event a depository has been provided for the moneys thereof. In view of the fact, however, that there is no authority to elect a treasurer at such first organization, and in view of the obvious policy of section 4782, as amended, I am of the opinion that after such first organization it will be the duty of the clerk of the board of education to perform such services, when a depository has been provided for the school moneys of the district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HUTSON COAL COMPANY—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT— SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION TO NO. 555—ADDITIONAL FACTS FURNISHED PLACE COMPANY IN GOOD STANDING WITH COMMISSION.

The Hutson Coal Company having been placed in good standing under the workmen's compensation act by the acceptance of part of the premium due for the six months' period ending May 31, 1915, entitled to protection and the benefits under the workmen's compensation act during said period.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 29, 1915, in opinion No. 555 addressed to your commission and based upon the facts given by you in your letter of June 16, 1915, I held that The Hutson Coal Company was not protected under the workmen's compensation act during the period from December 1, 1914, to June 1, 1915, it appearing that said company had not paid its premium into the state insurance fund. Subsequently, upon investigation by this department of the records of your department, it developed that there were two payments made by The Hutson Coal Company which had not been credited to said company by your department, to wit, one made on November 19, 1914, in the sum of ---------- $198.75 and the other under date of December 19, 1914, in the sum of ---------- $601.00, and that with such payments added to the other payments made by The Hutson Coal Company there was paid during the period from December 1, 1914, to June 1, 1915, the sum of ---------- $499.75 on account of the premium for said period, leaving a balance due of ---------- $222.80.

In view of the fact that The Hutson Coal Company had paid, on account of its premium charged against it, from December 1, 1914, to June 1, 1915, the sum of ---------- $499.75, which amount has been accepted by your commission and placed in the state insurance fund, instead of being delinquent for the entire amount of the premium for the second six months' period which ended on May 31, 1915, and upon which statement my former opinion was based, I am of the opinion that The Hutson Coal Company should be given the protection of the workmen's compensation act for the period ending at midnight on May 31, 1915.

I might further state that The Hutson Coal Company, through its representative, has tendered to this department the sum of ---------- $967.80 covering the payment of all premiums due up to and including November 30, 1915.

A strict adherence to the rules recently adopted by your commission covering the time of payments of premiums, which became operative on July 1, 1915, as stated by Mr. Yaple of your commission, will obviate situations of this kind in the future.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

HOSPITAL FOR INSANE—NOT REQUIRED TO ACCEPT PERSONS DEFINED BY STATUTE AS IDIOTS.

Superintendents of general hospitals for the insane in the state of Ohio cannot be compelled to accept persons who come within the statutory definition of an idiot, to wit: "A person foolish from birth, or supposed to be naturally without a mind."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 28, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 17, 1915, requesting my written opinion received, and is as follows:

> "Can an idiot, that is to say a person without a mind from birth, be confined in any of the institutions for insane in the state of Ohio?
> "We have asked the Athens Insane Hospital authorities to accept a man from this county, 23 years of age, who comes within the meaning of the statutory definition of an idiot. Gallia county has not her full quota at Athens Institution and under the law, I see no reason why this man should not be accepted."

An examination of sections 1947 to 1983, inclusive, of the General Code, which contain the provisions for the admission of patients to hospitals for the insane, the Athens hospital being among those covered thereby, will show that only those patients which can be properly classed as "insane" may be admitted thereto, and section 1983 of the General Code defines "insane" as used therein and differentiates between an insane person and an idiot in the following language:

> "The terms 'insane' and 'lunatic,' as used in this chapter, include every species of insanity or mental derangement; the term 'idiot' is restricted to a person foolish from birth, or supposed to be naturally without a mind."

While it is true that the word "idiot" does not appear at any other place in the laws governing admission to hospitals for the insane, and while it is true that specific reason for the enactment of the definition of the words "insane" and "idiot" was removed by the omission in the amendment found in 75 O. L., page 64, of the provision theretofore in the law and which was in the law at the time of the enactment of the definition above mentioned, that no idiot should be confined in any hospital for the insane, yet the legislature has seen fit to retain in the law the definition and distinction above quoted. This definition and distinction must be given effect unless there is clear evidence of an intention on the part of the legislature that it should be inoperative. No such intention appears from the chapter in which the definition is found and good reason may be found in other sections of the General Code for the conclusion that it retains its force. I refer to the provisions of sections 1895, et seq., of the General Code, applicable to the institution for the feeble-minded. Section 1895 is as follows:

> "Section 1895. The custodial department shall be entirely and especially devoted to the reception, detention, care and training of idiotic and feeble-minded children and adults, regardless of sex or color, and shall be so planned as to provide separate classifications of the numerous groups embraced under the terms idiotic and imbecile or feeble-minded. Cases afflicted with paralysis shall have a due proportion of space and care in the custodial department."

The legislature, therefore, has provided that only insane persons can be committed to the hospitals for the insane and has defined what is meant by the word "insane" as distinguished from "idiot" and has provided a place for the reception, detention, care and training of idiotic children and adults.

Your letter states that the man about whom you inquire comes within the definition of the term "idiot," and the institution for the feeble-minded is the only state institution in which provision is made for the reception of persons of the general class under consideration.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that none of the superintendents of the general hospitals for the insane in the state of Ohio can be compelled to accept an idiot, that is to say, "a person foolish from birth or supposed to be naturally without a mind."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MINES—USE OF GASOLINE MOTOR FOR HAULAGE PURPOSES THROUGH TUNNEL TO MINE SWITCH NOT PROHIBITED BY LAW.

The use of a gasoline motor for haulage purposes through a tunnel to a mine switch, is not prohibited by law, notwithstanding the tunnel formerly constituted mine entry through a mine now worked out and abandoned.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 28, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Department of Mine Inspection, Columbus, O.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of July 13, 1915, which is as follows:

> "The question has come up whether or not it is permissible to use a gasoline motor for haulage purposes in a mine that has been abandoned or worked out with the exception of the main entry which is converted into a tunnel, the motor starting on the outside at the tipple and running through the hill to a switch which is built between the hills.

"The motor does not enter the main workings of the mine where men are employed—only passes back and forth through the tunnel.

"Will you kindly advise if in your opinion section 946 of the Ohio Mining Laws prohibits the use of this motor?"

The enactment is a police regulation having for its purpose the safe-guarding of the lives and the safety and protection of the health of the employes working in mines.

In my opinion these regulatory provisions are only applicable to mines in which men are employed. Interpret your inquiry as relating to the main entry of a worked out and abandoned mine, which entry or tunnel is now used solely as a passageway through the hill, for the purpose of transporting coal from a mine in an adjoining hill to the tipple; that the hill through which the gasoline engine is operated is separated from the hill in which the mine is being worked by a depression or stretch of lowland and that the engine is only to be operated to a switch in such a depression between the hills; and that the motor does not enter workings where men are employed.

Under such state of facts, I am of the opinion that such use of the gasoline engine is not within the prohibition of section 946, since the tunnel of the abandoned mine in which no persons are employed, may not now be properly regarded as a mine within the purview of the regulatory provisions of said sections relating to mines.

Section 911, G. C., provides:

"Each inspector shall exercise discretion in the enforcement of the provisions of this act. If he finds that any matter, thing or practice, connected with any mine, and not prohibited by law, is dangerous or defective, (or that from a rigid enforcement of any of the express provisions of this act such matter, thing or practice would become dangerous or defective), so as in his opinion to tend to the bodily injury of any person, such inspector shall give notice in writing to the owner, lessee, or agent of the mine, of the particulars in which such mine or any any matter, thing, or practice connected therewith is dangerous or defective, and require it to be remedied by making such changes as the conditions may require. Provided, however, that in the exercise of the foregoing provisions relating to the application of electricity or electric wires, the judgment of the chief inspector of mines and the district inspector of mines, jointly, shall be required."

Under the provisions of the foregoing section, discretion is vested in the inspectors to regulate such matters, things or practices connected with any mine, even though not expressly prohibited by the statute, when such matter or practice is dangerous or jeopardizes the life, health or safety of those employed in such mine. In view of the statements made in the letter of the chief deputy and safety commissioner of mines, quoted above, and his verbal statement to me that the tunnel in question is not a mine and that there would be no danger arising from the use of the gasoline motor in the tunnel which might be regarded as being connected with the mine, I am of the opinion that the use of the gasoline motor in the manner indicated is not prohibited by the provisions of section 946 of the General Code. Cases of this kind require the exercise of sound discretion on the part of the inspectors in the discharge of their duties.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ORDINANCES AND RESOLUTIONS—PUBLICATION IN NEWSPAPER IN VILLAGE MANDATORY—CIRCULATION MUST BE GENERAL AND ONE SIDE OF NEWSPAPER PRINTED IN SUCH VILLAGE—POSTING NOT SUFFICIENT.

It is mandatory to publish ordinances and resolutions in a newspaper that is published in a village, there being in the village but the one newspaper, having a small circulation, if such circulation is general and if one side of the newspaper is printed in such village. In such event posting of the ordinances and resolutions in five public places designated by council would not be sufficient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Mr. J. H. C. Lyon, attorney for the village of Struthers, Mahoning county, has requested my opinion upon the following question:

> "Is it mandatory to publish ordinances and resolutions in a newspaper that is published in a village, there being but one newspaper in the village and with a small circulation, or would the posting in five public places, designated by council, be sufficient?"

The question being a doubtful one with respect to which previous opinions of this department had been given to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, should, in my judgment, be answered again in view of the recent decision of the supreme court in the case of Village of Elmwood Place v. Schanzle, a tax payer, No. 14836, recently rendered but not yet officially reported, Accordingly, I am directing this opinion to the bureau and am sending a copy thereof to the village attorney.

In the case cited an injunction against the issuance of certain bonds was sought on the ground that the ordinance authorizing their issuance had been published in but one newspaper, which was the only newspaper printed and published in the village issuing the bonds. The court therefore did not have to answer the question which the village attorney now raises, but only the question as to whether publication in one newspaper, under the circumstances named, was sufficient. On this point the syllabus is as follows:

> "In a municipality in which there is only one newspaper published and of general circulation, the publication in that paper of ordinances of a general nature, in the manner and for the period required by sections 4227 et seq., General Code, is a compliance with the requirements of those sections."

However, in the opinion of the court, an interpretation of sections 4227, 4228, 4229, 4232 and 6255, G. C., was expressed, and such interpretation was necessary in order to answer the question actually before the court. In the course of the opinion Johnson J. uses the following language:

> "It is contended by the defendant in error that under the present law there is but one way in which to publish ordinances in a municipality where there is but one newspaper published and of general circulation, and that is that the ordinance should be posted as required by section 4232, General Code. We cannot assent to this contention. The language in that section is:

" 'In municipal corporations in which no newspaper is published, it shall be sufficient to post up copies.'

"From the face of the petition in this case it appears that there is a newspaper published in the village. Therefore, the condition which the statute provides must exist before 'it shall be sufficient to post up copies' does not exist in this case. The natural inference from that plain provision would be that in a village in which a newspaper is published the publication would be required to be made in that paper if it was the only one."

From a reading of the whole opinion it is very clear that the court, in order to harmonize all the sections as they stand at present, found it necessary to restore in what is now section 4227, G. C., language which had been dropped therefrom in process of codification which, if it were present, would have answered the question of the village attorney.

This was the view of this department as expressed in previous opinions to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, and the purposes of this opinion is mainly to call the attention of the bureau to the fact that the court has adopted the same view.

This being the case I advise that in the light of the decision above cited it is mandatory to publish ordinances and resolutions in a newspaper that is published in the village, there being but one newspaper with a small circulation in the village provided that such circulation is general, and provided that at least one side of such newspaper is printed in the municipality and the whole newspaper is first put into circulation therein, these being the requirements of section 6255 and 4227, as interpreted by the court, respectively. I further advise that the posting of such ordinances and resolutions in five public places designated by council would not be sufficient for the reason that such posting is sufficient only when no newspaper is published in the municipality.

For the full information of the bureau I may add that while the decision of the court is consistent with the reasoning of previous opinions of this department, there is one statement, in the opinion given to the bureau by my predecessor on September 2, 1914, being opinion No. 1132 of that year, which in the light of the decision must be modified. I refer to the following paragraphs of said opinion:

"If there are not two such newspapers as fulfill the requirements stated in the preceding paragraph, then publication must be made in any newspaper of general circulation in the municipality one side of which newspaper at least is printed in said municipality; section 6255 requiring printing, and section 4676 permitting publication in the one newspaper, unless posting is resorted to; section 4232. A reading of sections 4676 and 4232 will show that publication may be made under either section.

"If there are no newspapers one side of which is printed in the municipality, then publication must be made in any newspaper of general circulation in the municipality; section 4676, unless posting is resorted to; section 4232. It is to be understood that where a publisher refuses to publish, the same situation arises as if no such newspaper were published. Section 4676.

"If there are newspapers which meet the requirements of the two preceding paragraphs, it is optional then to publish in such newspapers or to post; section 4232."

The reasoning of Judge Johnson makes it clear that if there is a newspaper which meets the requirements of the first of the above quoted paragraphs, it is not optional to publish in such newspaer or to post, as held by my predecessor; for that is precisely the case with which this opinion treats.

Mr. Hogan's opinion must, therefore be modified in this one particular.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF LEASES OF CERTAIN LANDS AT LORAMIE RESERVOIR AND ST. MARYS RESERVOIR.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of July 24 and July 26, 1915, transmitting to me for examination a lease to Frank Lehmkuhl of certain lands at Loramie reservoir, valued at $1,000, and a lease to Ambrose B. Kohler of certain land at the St. Mary's reservoir for cottage and landing purposes, the land being valued at $150.00. Both leases refer on their face to a plat which is described as attached to and made a part of the lease, but as a matter of fact no plat is attached to either lease.

As to the Lehmkuhl lease, the property referred to in the lease is valued at $1,000, and the rent is fixed at $22.00 per year, whereas under the statutes it should be fixed at $60.00 per year. The clause in this lease reserving to the state oil, gas, coal and other minerals, is not drawn in accordance with the statute, and should be re-drafted so as to reserve to the state the right of entry not only for operating but also for prosecuting and developing.

As to the Kohler lease, the signature of the superintendent of public works should be attested by two witnesses.

For the reasons above indicated, I am returning these leases without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—LEVY FOR COUNTY PURPOSES MUST BE SAME IN EACH TAXING DISTRICT THROUGHOUT COUNTY.

The levy for county purposes must be the same in each taxing district throughout the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1915.

HON. JOHN H. SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 26, 1915, submitting for my opinion, supplementary to my opinion to you under date of July 22nd, a further inquiry which may be stated as follows:

'Must the levy for the county be the same in each taxing district throughout the county or can it be made lower in one taxing district than in another?"

You are advised that in my opinion the levy for county purposes must be the same in each taxing district throughout the county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF TOWNSHIP SCHOOL DISTRICT—FAILURE TO PREPARE AND FILE MAP AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 4724, G. C., WHEN TERRITORY IS ATTACHED—BOARD CANNOT RECOVER FROM BOARD RECEIVING SCHOOL TAX—CANNOT RECOVER ACTUAL EXPENSES OF FURNISHING SCHOOL FACILITIES TO YOUTH OF ATTACHED TERRITORY.

Where the board of education of a township school district to which territory in another township and belonging to a joint subdistrict was attached, by virtue of section 4723, G. C., now repealed, failed to file a map of such attached territory as required by section 4724, G. C., now repealed, such board of education cannot recover from the board of education actually receiving the school tax from such attached territory, either such tax or the tax the first named board might have received had it filed the proper map, or the actual expense of furnishing school facilities to the youth of the attached territory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1915.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 16, 1915, in which you call my attention to the provisions of sections 4723 and 4724 of the General Code. These sections were a part of section 3923, R. S., as amended by an act passed by the legislature April 14, 1908, and found in 99 O. L., 105. Both sections were repealed by an act passed by the legislature February 5, 1914, and found in 104 O. L., 133, 145. The language of the sections in question was as follows:

"Section 4723. Joint subdistricts are abolished and the territory of such districts situated in the township in which the school house of the joint district is not located shall be attached for school purposes to the township school district in which such school house is located. Such territory shall constitute a part of such township school district and the title of all school property located therein is vested in the board of education of the township to which the territory is attached.

"Section 4724. A map of such attached territory shall be prepared under the direction of the board of education of the township district to which the territory is attached and made a part of the records of the board. A copy of such map shall be filed with the auditor of the county in which such territory is situated, or, if the territory is in two or more counties, it shall be filed with the auditor of each county."

You further call attention to the provision of section 4735, G. C., 104 O. L., 138, to the effect that present existing township school districts shall constitute rural school districts until changed by the county board of education.

You then state that a board of education of a township district to which territory of a joint subdistrict was attached by virtue of section 4723, G. C., now repealed, failed and neglected, and ever since the passage of said section has failed and neglected to prepare a map of the attached territory and file the same with the county auditor; and that by reason of such failure while the board of education in question has been paying the expense of educating the youth residing in the attached territory, yet the school taxes levied on the property located in such attached territory and collected by the county treasurer has not been apportioned and paid to said board of education, but on the other hand such taxes have been paid to the board of education of the school district from which such territory was detached.

(1) Can the board of education which failed to prepare and file the map in question recover from the other board of education referred to, the taxes received by the latter and which the former would have received had it prepared and filed the proper map, and if such recovery may be had, then for how many years and in what way?

(2) If such recovery cannot be had, then can the first named board of education recover from the other board of education its actual expenses paid for educating the youth of the attached territory, and if such recovery may be had, then for how many years?

It may be observed in the first instance that the manifest purpose of the provision of section 4724, G. C., requiring the board of education of the township district to which territory was attached to prepare a map of such attached territory, and file a copy of the same with the auditor of the county in which such territory was situated was to furnish a guide in the preparation of the tax duplicates and advise the county auditor or other official upon whom his duties in this particular might be cast of the exact location of the boundary lines of the various school districts of the county. The situation now under consideration results from the failure of a board of education to comply with the plain provisions of the statutes and the township school district represented by the board of education which has negligently failed to comply with the statute is the district which has suffered a loss of revenue. The officials charged with the preparation of the tax duplicate have not committed any error, and until a proper map was filed with the county auditor would have had no authority to apply in the territory in one township and attached to another township for school purposes, the rate of taxation for school purposes applicable to the latter township, or to pay to the latter township taxes collected from territory included in the former. In other words, the situation is due to a failure to act on the part of the township board of education, and not to any mistake of the county auditor or other official charged with any duty in the making up of the tax duplicates or in the collection or distribution of taxes, so that it is impossible to invoke any of the rules of law relating to the recovery of money paid under a mistake of fact. There was no mistake of facts, but only a failure on the part of the township board of education to comply with the mandate of the statute, and perform the act necessary to be performed before it could levy upon and collect taxes from the attached territory. It could not even be assumed that the tax actually collected from the attached territory was the same as would have been collected had the map been filed, for to so assume that would be to also assume that the rate of taxation for school purposes in both school districts was identical.

It will be noted that while the filing of the map is by virtue of other statutes necessary before the board of education of the township district to which the territory is attached can levy upon and collect a tax from such attached territory, yet the filing of such map is not a prerequisite to the attaching of the territory. The territory is attached by virtue of the statute, and no action on the part of the board of education of the township district to which such territory is attached is necessary to absolutely charge such board of education with the duty of providing school facilities for the youth of school age residing in such attached territory.

In view of the above mentioned considerations, I am of the opinion that both of your questions must be answered in the negative, that the law will leave the boards of education referred to by you in the situation in which it finds them, and that the board of education to which the territory was attached cannot recover from the board of education receiving the tax levied on such attached territory, either the tax actually received or the tax the first named board might have levied and received had it filed the proper map, or the actual expense of furnishing school facilities to the youth of the attached territory.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF NATIONAL ROAD IN LICKING COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 27, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution as to the National road in Licking county, petition 807, I. C. H. No. 1.

It appears from this resolution that the contemplated improvement is less than one mile in length and it does not appear that such improvement is an extension of or connected with a permanently improved street, road or highway of approved construction. For this reason I am returning the resolution without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—FACILITIES FOR TESTING ROAD AND BRIDGE MATERIALS AVAILABLE ONLY FOR STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—NO AUTHORITY TO TEST ROAD MATERIALS FOR PRIVATE CONCERNS OR MUNICIPALITIES.

The facilities of the state highway department designed for the investigation of road and bridge materials and for the testing of the same, are available only for the examination and testing of materials intended or designed to be used in the construction of roads by the state highway department, and the state highway commissioner is without authority to test road materials for and at the request of private concerns or municipalities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 30, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 24, 1915, which reads as follows:

"This department has recently received various communications from private concerns and municipalities requesting that our testing laboratory test materials to be used by them in the paving of streets and roads over which the state highway department has no jurisdiction.

"I respectfully ask your opinion as to whether or not it is proper for the state highway department to test such materials and receive compensation therefor, and if it is proper so to do, what disposition should be made of such compensation?"

Section 1180, G. C., provides that the office of the state highway commissioner shall be furnished, among other things, with apparatus for testing materials. Section 1183, G. C., provides that the state highway commissioner shall, among other things, conduct investigations and experiments, either in person, by deputy or engineer, in regard to the best kinds of road and bridge materials, and examine the chemical and physical character of such materials. This section further provides that all expenses incurred by reason of the provisions of the chapter relating to the state highway department shall be paid out of any fund or funds available for the use of the department. None of the sections relating to the state highway department either fix or provide for the fixing of any fees to be charged private concerns or municipalities for testing materials to be used by them, and there is no statutory provision as to the disposition of any such fees, should the same be collected by the state highway commissioner. I find no provision in the laws relating to your department which would warrant the inference that your testing laboratory was intended by the legislature to be available to municipal corporations or private individuals. It cannot be assumed that a public official has jurisdiction or authority in a matter merely because it may seem wise or expedient that he should have such authority or jurisdiction.

It is, therefore, my opinion, that the facilities of your department designed for the investigation of road and bridge materials and for testing of the same, are available only for the examination and testing of materials intended or designed to be used in connection with the construction of roads by your department, and that you are without authority to test road materials for, and at the request of, private concerns or municipalities.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF LEASES FOR LAND ADJACENT TO ST. MARY'S RESERVOIR TO AMBROSE B. KOHLER; ALSO LEASE OF ELEVEN ACRES OF LAND IN SHELBY COUNTY TO FRANK LEHMKUHL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 30, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 29, 1915, transmitting to me for examination a lease to Ambrose B. Kohler, of St. Marys, Ohio, of certain land adjacent to St. Marys reservoir, and also a lease to Frank Lehmkuhl, of Minster, Ohio, of eleven acres of land in Shelby county.

I find that these leases are in regular form and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF PEACE—ONLY ENTITLED TO FOUR PER CENT. ON COLLECTIONS ACTUALLY MADE BY HIM UPON JUDGMENT—SECTION 1746, G. C., CONSTRUED.

Under the provisions of section 1746, G. C., a justice of the peace is only entitled to four per cent. on collections actually made by him upon judgment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 31, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of July 15, 1915, you submitted for my written opinion the following question:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "Section 1746, General Code, giving the fees that may be taxed by a justice of the peace, among other things provides as follows:
> "'* * * Collections made upon judgments, if not paid within ten days after rendition thereof, or within ten days after stay of execution, if such stay is taken, the same fees are allowed to constables for money paid on execution; * * *' > which is four per cent. (4%). For instance, a judgment was rendered in justice's court on behalf of D against A for the sum of $125.00, and about twenty days after judgment was rendered A paid to D the full amount of the judgment and then desired to pay the justice the costs in the case and the justice insisted upon receiving four per cent. upon the amount of the judgment in addition to the other costs, under the provisions of the section just quoted, for making collections of the judgment, although as stated, the payments were made outside of the court and the justice did not handle the money. Is the justice of the peace entitled to the four per cent.?"

Section 10400 G. C., provides as follows:

> "If the case be not appealed, taken up on error, docketed in the common pleas, or bail has not been given for the stay of execution at the expiration of ten days from the entry of the judgment, the justice shall issue execution without a demand, and proceed to collect the judgment, unless otherwise directed by the judgment creditor."

It has been held (Galor v. Hunt, 23 O. S., 255) that for neglect of a justice to issue execution when required by law, he and his sureties are liable on his official bond. So that, under the provisions of section 10400 it seems clear that it is the duty of the justice, at the expiration of ten days, provided the case be not appealed or stay of execution had, to issue execution without demand.

However, section 1746 cited by you in your request grants fees to the justice on "collections made on judgments" if not paid within ten days after rendition thereof or within ten days after stay of execution. If such stay is taken, the fees being the same as those allowed constables for money paid on execution, which is four per cent. (See section 3347, G. C.)

In the case submitted by you, however, wherein the judgment debtor pays the judgment creditor direct, there could be no collection made upon the said judgment, and consequently the justice of the peace would not be entitled to four per cent. of the judgment as if collected by him.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEED OF LOVINA H. SILVUS AND EBER G. SILVUS TO STATE OF OHIO—SUPPLEMENT TO OPINION NO. 517—CLERICAL ERROR IN APPROPRIATION BILL IN SPELLING NAME.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 31, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 3, 1915, you sent to this department for my approval a certain deed which had been sent to you by the board of administration, which deed grants certain property located in Athens county, Athens township, Ohio, said deed being dated May 27, 1915, to the state of Ohio, the grantors being Lovina H. Silvus, a widow, and Eber G. Silvus and wife, Rosetta Silvus, and under date of July 16th there was likewise transmitted by the board of administration to us a deed between the same parties covering two tracts of land that were excepted in the former deed, the deed hereinbefore referred to.

Under date of June 21, 1915, in opinion No. 517, to the Ohio board of administration, I passed upon the abstract of title to said real estate and found, from the examination made, that on the 13th day of April, 1915, Lovina H. Silvus and Eber G. Silvus were seized of an estate in fee simple to said premises, subject only to the following:

1. The taxes for the last half of the year 1914, due June, 1915, amounting to $43.95;
2. The taxes for the year 1915, the amount of which are as yet undetermined.
3. The right of William P. Wyatt to cut and remove timber from said premises until February 1, 1916, under and by virtue of a contract entered into by and between Eber G. Silvus and said William P. Wyatt, dated January 10, 1914.

Immediately upon receipt of the first deed sent to me for approval, I took up the matter with the board of administration as to whether or not the matters hereinbefore referred to had been straightened out and under date of July 12, 1915, I received a letter from the Ohio board of administration to the following effect.

"In compliance with instructions contained in your letter of July 9th, I beg to hand you, herewith, deed by Lovina H. Silvus et al., to the state of Ohio; also contract or right of Wm. P. Wyatt to cut timber, etc., with cancellation endorsement properly signed thereon; also tax receipt for the last half 1914, and contract signed by Eber G. Silvus and Dr. O. O. Fordyce, guaranteeing the payment of the taxes for the year 1915.

"Mr. E. G. Silvus has deposited with Dr. O. O. Fordyce his check for $90.00 which is held in the safe of the Athens State Hospital for the payment of the 1915 taxes that are yet undetermined.

"I also enclose voucher No. 847 for $11,025.00, drawn in favor of E. G. Silvus for 245 acres of land purchased by the state.

"Upon the approval of the deed by your department, will you please to hand same, together with the voucher enclosed, to the auditor of state?"

The deed submitted carries an exception in the warranty clause to the effect that the grantors will warrant and defend the title against all claim or claims, of all persons whomsoever, except as to the right of William P. Wyatt to cut and remove timber from said premises till February 1, 1916.

It appears, therefore, that:

1. The taxes due June 20, 1915, were paid on June 28, 1915, in the sum of $43.95;

2. That a contract was entered into on June 29, 1915, between Eber G. Silvus and O. O. Fordyce, superintendent of the Athens State Hospital, whereby said Eber G. Silvus agrees to pay the taxes due for the year 1915;

3. That the original contract entered into in duplicate between Eber G. Silvus and William P. Wyatt bears the following endorsement:

"Athens, Ohio, June 28, 1915.

"In consideration of payment this day received I hereby cancel and release above contract.

"(Signed) Wm. P. Wyatt."

It therefore appears that all of the objections to the title, heretofore made in the opinion hereinbefore referred to, have been cleared up.

In regard to the deed that was transmitted to us by you the board of administration, on July 16th, asked the following question:

"Please refer to the communication from this department under date of July 12th, with which was enclosed deed by Lovina H. Silvus et al., to the state of Ohio, together with other matters in connection therewith.

"The state auditor's department has raised the question as to their authority to issue a warrant in settlement for this land, inasmuch as there seems to be a typographical error in the name 'Silvus.' In the short budget appropriation it reads as follows: 'To purchase the E. G. Silvers' farm, 245 acres, $11,025,' while it should have read, 'To purchase the E. G. Silvus farm.'

"Will you please advise whether, because of this typographical error, the auditor of state is justified in refusing to issue his warrant?"

And in regard to the deed transmitted by the board of administration to this department covering real estate excepted in the former deed, the board of administration stated as follows:

"Enclosed, herewith, please find deed by Lovina H. Silvus et al., to the state of Ohio, covering two tracts of land transferred to the state of Ohio in consideration of $1,464.30.

"Voucher covering same, together with this deed, was forwarded to the state auditor's department but returned with the information that warrant could not be issued until you had approved of this deed and also calling our attention to the fact that the deed has not been recorded.

"Is it possible to have the deed recorded until warrant has been delivered to the grantors?

"Your attention is also called to the typographical error in the appropriation, which reads, 'To purchase remainder E. G. Silvers' farm, Athens, $1,464.34.' This should have read 'E. G. Silvus' instead of 'E. G. Silvers.'

"Will you please advise whether, because of this typographical error, the auditor of state is justified in refusing to issue his warrant?"

The questions raised by the two letters may be stated as follows:

1. Is it possible to have the deed recorded until warrant has been delivered to the grantors?

2. The appropriation for the payment of the property described in the deed submitted by your department is as follows:

"To purchase the 'E. G. Silvers farm,' 245 acres, $11,025.00."

The appropriation to cover the purchase of the piece of property, the deed for which was submitted to this department by the board of administration, reads as follows:

"To purchase remainder E. G. Silvers farm, Athens, $1,464.00."

Because of the discrepancy between the spelling of the name in the appropriation and the correct spelling of the name of the owner of the real estate, is the auditor of state justified in refusing to issue his warrants in payment of the real estate upon tender of proper deeds of the owners of the lands and the approval of the titles thereof by this department?

As to your first question as to whether or not it is possible to have a deed recorded until a warrant has been delivered to the grantors, I am of the opinion that it is possible so to do provided, of course, that the grantors are willing to take the risk of the delivery of the deed and the recording of the same before receiving the warrant in payment of the land so conveyed. Under the provisions of section 267, G. C., the deeds in question must be recorded in Athens county before they can be filed permanently by the auditor of state and recorded by him in his office.

In respect to your second question I beg to advise that the situation presents an instance of a manifest clerical error in the appropriation bills. There is no difficulty about identifying the land for the purchase of which the appropriations are made, in view of the identity of the sound of the two names and the fact, which is I assume undoubtedly true, that there is no property known as "The E. G. Silvers farm" in the vicinity of the institution for which the purchases are to be made.

For the above reasons I advise that the auditor of state would not be justified in refusing his warrants to the present owners of the E. G. Silvus farm, under the appropriations above referred to.

In view of the foregoing I am of the opinion that the two deeds tendered by Lovina H. Silvus, a widow, and Eber G. Silvus and wife, Rosetta Silvus, to the state of Ohio for the premises, a description of which is contained in opinion No. 572, herein referred to, will convey to the state of Ohio a good and sufficient title to the premises described, and that the auditor of state is authorized to pay, from the appropriations hereinbefore referred to, to the grantors the purchase price thereof.

I am herewith handing you the deed of Lovina H. Silvus, a widow, and E. G. Silvus and wife, Rosetta, to the state of Ohio dated May 27, 1915, and the deed from the same parties to the state of Ohio under date of July 2, 1915; the tax bill paid June 28, 1915; a copy of the contract between Eber G. Silvus and O. O. Fordyce, superintendent of Athens State Hospital; a contract between E. G. Silvus and Wm. P. Wyatt, containing endorsement of Wyatt as to the cancellation, and the abstract of title to the land in question examined by me and reported on in opinion No. 517 hereinbefore referred to; also a copy of opinion No. 517.

The voucher which accompanied the letter of July 12th, from the board of administration, has been returned to said board for correction. The said voucher was made out in the name of E. G. Silvus and should be made out in the names of Lovina H. Silvus and Eber G. Silvus.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE FOR PART OF ABANDONED HOCKING CANAL TO THOMAS J. LEYSHON.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 1, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 30, 1915, transmitting to me for examination a lease to Thos. J. Leyshon, for a part of the abandoned Hocking canal valued at $1,000.

I find this lease to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY EXPERIMENT FARMS—LAW RELATING TO SUCH FARMS FOUND IN HOUSE BILL NO. 163, 106 O. L., 122.

The law relating to county experiment farms is now to be found in house bill No. 163, 106 O. L., 122.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 2, 1915.

HON. W. H. KRAMER, Bursar, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, O.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 22, 1915, in which you refer to an opinion of this department rendered to the agricultural commission of Ohio, regarding the disbursement of funds for the purchase and equipment of county experiment farms, as provided for under sections 1165-6, 1165-7 and 1165-8, G. C. You now inquire as to whether the ruling set forth in the opinion referred to above will also apply to the disbursing of the funds appropriated by the county commissioners for the payment of wages and purchase of supplies and materials for county experiment farms, as provided for under section 1177-4, G. C., as found in house bill No. 163, 106 O. L., 122.

In answering your inquiry I deem it proper to first refer to an opinion of this department rendered on February 20, 1915, to the agricultural commission of Ohio, in which opinion it was held that the law applicable to county experiment farms was to be found in sections 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 105, 106, 108, and 109 of the agricultural commission act, being sections 1174, 1175, 1176, 1177, 1177-1, 1177-5, 1177-6, 1177-8, and 1177-9, of the General Code, and in sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11, of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 436, with the proviso that the four amended sections last referred to must be read in the light of the provision of the agricultural commission act found in section 11 of said act, being section 1089 of the General Code, to the effect that the agricultural commission should succeed to and be possessed of the rights, authority and powers previously exercised by the board of control of the said agricultural experiment station, and that in reading said sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11, as amended in 103 O. L., 436, the expression "board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station," where it occurred in said sections, must, therefore, be read "agricultural commission."

The opinion of this department to which you evidently refer, was rendered on April 6, 1915, to the agricultural commission of Ohio, and in that opinion it was held that in the purchase of a county experiment farm and equipment therefor, the purchase price of the farm and of the equipment was to be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor upon the proper certificate of the agricultural commission. Upon the same date on which the opinion last referred to was issued by this department, to wit, April 6, 1915, the legislature passed house bill No. 163, being an act to create a board of control for the Ohio experiment station, to stipulate its duties and powers and to amend sections 1174 to 1177 inclusive, and 1177-1 to 1177-11 inclusive, of the General Code. This act was approved by the governor and filed in the office of the secretary of state on the 8th day of April, 1915, and is therefore now in effect.

The act expressly amends sections 1174, 1175, 1176, 1177, 1177-1, 1177-5, 1177-6, 1177-8 and 1177-9 of the General Code, and in the act there are also to be found four sections designated as sections 1177-2, 1177-3, 1177-4 and 1177-7 of the General Code. These four sections cover the identical subject-matter covered by sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11 of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 436, and it must be held that said sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11 are impliedly repealed by the enactment of said sections 1177-2, 1177-3, 1177-4 and 1177-7. The law, and all the law, relating to county experiment farms is, therefore, now to be found in sections 1174 to 1177 inclusive, of the General Code, and sections 1177-1 to 1177-11, inclusive, of the General Code, is found in house bill No. 163, 106 O. L., 122, and any opinion of this department which placed a construction upon the law relating to county experiment farms, which construction is inconsistent with the aforesaid provisions of house bill No. 163, is therefore to be disregarded in the administration of the county experiment farm law from and after the 8th day of July, 1915, upon which date house bill No. 163 became effective.

It will be observed upon an examination of sections 1177-2, 1177-3, 1177-4 and 1177-7, as found in 106 O. L., 122, that said sections in their present form are practically identical with sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11, G. C., as originally enacted in 101 O. L., 124.

Specifically answering your inquiry, the opinion of this department issued to the agricultural commission of Ohio on the 6th day of April, 1915, which opinion construed sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11 of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 436, now has no application whatever either to the purchase of a county experiment farm and the original equipment therefor, or to the purchase of supplies and materials for county experiment farms for the reason that said sections 1165-6, 1165-7, 1165-8 and 1165-11 of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 436, have been impliedly repealed by house bill No. 163, as found in 106 O. L., 122. As previously indicated, all the activities of county experiment farms are now to be governed by the appropriate sections of said house bill No. 163, and if upon an examination of that act you have any question as to the meaning of any of its provisions, I will be very glad to answer your inquiries in regard to the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SURETY COMPANY BOND—SUIT MAY BE BROUGHT AT ANY TIME WITHIN TEN YEARS AFTER CAUSE OF ACTION THEREON ACCRUES—SUCH BOND COVERING ALL OFFICIAL ACTS OF OFFICER DURING HIS TERM OF OFFICE SHOULD NOT BE CANCELLED AT EXPIRATION OF SUCH TERM.

Bond given by surety company on behalf of officer covering all official acts of officer during his term should not be cancelled at expiration of such term. Suit on bond may be brought at any time within ten years after cause of action thereon accrues.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 2, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 9, 1915, you submitted an inquiry to me for official opinion as follows:

"We have received and have on file for reply the following letter:

"'Columbus, Ohio, July 8, 1915.

"'Re:—0159853 Matthew Brown Hammond, Member of Industrial Commission of Ohio.

"'Mr. A. V. Donahey, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

'"Dear Sir:—Under date of June 30, 1913, we executed the above bond covering the term of office ending on June 30, 1915. Would you be good enough to advise us if the bond still continues in force, or if it should be cancelled? If the bond has served its purpose please give us the date upon which the liability of the American Surety Company terminated.

"'Thanking you for this favor, we remain,

"'Very truly yours,

"'AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

"'By (signed) J. S. Mossgrove, Manager for Middle Ohio.'

"Your opinion on the following questions relative thereto is respectfully requested:

"How long does the bond of an official continue in force and when should it be cancelled?

"When has a bond of an official served its purpose and when does the liability terminate?"

From the fact that you incorporate in your letter a letter received by you from the American Surety Company of New York, it appears that the bond to which you refer is a surety company bond. I assume, for the purposes of answering your inquiry, that the premiums due to the surety company for the bond have been duly paid and therefore that the rule of law laid down in the case of Bryant v. American Bonding Company, 77 O. S., 90, is not to be taken into consideration.

Your first question is as to how long does the bond of an official continue in force and when should it be cancelled.

Since the question is asked relative to a member of the Industrial Commission of Ohio, the term of such commissioner is not only for the term for which he was appointed but likewise until his successor is appointed and qualified. In the case of State ex rel. v. Howe, 25 O. S., 588, the first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

"Where an officer appointed by the governor by and with the advice and consent of the senate, is authorized by law to hold his office for a term of three years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified, and no appointment of a successor is made by the regular appointing power at the expiration of his term of three years, the office does not become vacant; but the incumbent holds over as a de jure officer until his successor is duly appointed and qualified."

The bond given by a surety company covers the official acts of an officer during his term of office, and for any default made during the term of such officer a cause of action will accrue in favor of the state.

Section 11226, G. C., being the statute of limitations relative to official bonds, provides as follows:

"An action on the official bond, or undertaking of an officer, assignee, trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian, or on a bond or undertaking given in pursuance of statute, shall be brought within ten years after the cause thereof accrued."

I shall not undertake to state, in this opinion, the question being general, when a cause of action on the bond would accrue. Since the bond covers the acts of the official, as such, during his term, and the statute of limitation allows ten years upon which to bring an action thereon, I am of the opinion that the bond itself should not be cancelled at all. It should be held, in case it should subsequently develop, after the officer has ceased to act as such, that there is liability on such bond. The bond, of course, will only cover the official acts of the officer during his term of office.

You next inquire when has a bond of an official served its purpose, and when does the liability terminate?

I have practically answered your second question by answering your first question. I am of the opinion that the bond of an official is liable for the actions of such official during his incumbency of the office, and that the liability will not terminate thereon until the statute of limitations has run.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROBATE JUDGE—MUST SUPPLY EACH PATIENT SENT TO HOSPITAL FOR INSANE WITH PROPER CLOTHING, IF SAME IS NOT OTHERWISE FURNISHED—KIND AND QUALITY OF CLOTHING—NO EXAMINATION BY PHYSICIANS REQUIRED IN CASE OF TRANSFER OF PATIENTS IN INSANE HOSPITALS TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL.

The probate judge should supply each patient committed to the hospital for the insane with proper clothing, as provided in section 1963, G. C., if same is not otherwise furnished to the superintendent of the hospital. Clothing to be furnished should be substantial rather than stylish or expensive.

No examination by physicians is required in case of application of transfer of patients in insane hospitals to the Lima State Hospital, section 1993, G. C., 103 O. L., 448.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 2, 1915.

HON. SAMUEL L. BLACK, Probate Judge, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR JUDGE:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 26th, in which you request an opinion as follows:

> "I would appreciate it greatly if you will give me an opinion as to my duty under section 1962 of the General Code of Ohio. I have been buying clothing for indigent insane patients, distributing the orders around among the best clothing firms in the city. I have been criticised for doing so by the bureau of accounting, when I believed I was following the plain, simple and express provisions of the section above quoted. The bureau of accounting give as a justification for their criticism of this office the fact that other judges of this district do not comply with section 1962 of the General Code. I want to be right. The superintendent of the state hospital refuses to receive patients unless they are accompanied with the clothing as provided for by section 1962. My judgment is that I am required to furnish this clothing, and that all I can be required to do is to buy it in the open market, that I am not required to go personally to the clothing store in each case and be the judge of the quality of the goods. I tried to deal with the most reliable firms of the city, beyond that I do not see how I can do anything more. I cannot allow these patients, many of whom are sick and desperately in need of immediate treatment, to lie in jail while the question of clothing is being settled, and I am therefore begging your department for an opinion.
> "Again, under section 2216 of the Revised Statutes, an enquiry must be held on all patients confined in the state hospital and who are to be transferred to the Lima hospital.
> "QUAERE. Shall I, under section 2216, allow the physicians at the state hospital to make the examination and certificate for those who are to be transferred, or shall I appoint physicians to make the examination and certificate under the general provisions of the Code?

"My reason for making this inquiry is this:

"Several years ago patients were transferred from the county infirmary to the state hospital under the law, and I appointed physicians to make the examination, and I was severely criticised for doing so on account of the expense.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *"

Sections 1962 and 1963 of the General Code are as follows:

"1962. If not otherwise furnished, the probate judge shall supply each patient sent to a hospital for the insane with proper clothing, which shall be paid for on his certificate and the order of the county auditor from the county treasury. Such clothing shall be new or as good as new, the woolens of dark color, and with such patient be delivered in good order to the superintendent. The superintendent will not be bound to receive the patient without such clothing.

"1963. The clothing required by the preceding section is as follows:

"For a male patient, a coat, vest, and two pairs of pantaloons, all of woolen cloth, two pairs of woolen socks, two pocket handkerchiefs, two cravats, one hat or cap, a pair of shoes or boots, a pair of slippers, three cotton shirts, two pairs of drawers, two undershirts and an over coat or other outside garment sufficient to protect him in severe weather.

"For a female patient, two substantial gowns or dresses, two flannel petticoats, two pairs of woolen stockings, one pair of shoes, one pair of slippers, two handkerchiefs, a good bonnet, two cotton chemises, and a large shawl or cloak."

Under section 1962 of the General Code quoted above it is made the duty of the probate judge to supply each patient sent to the hospital for the insane with proper clothing, if not otherwise furnished. For the purpose of arriving at the kind and quantity of clothing to be furnished it is necessary to look to the provisions of section 1963 of the General Code, supra. In determining as to the necessity for furnishing clothing under the provisions of section 1962, discretion must be exercised by the probate judge who sits in a lunacy inquest, the condition laid down in that section being that the clothing shall be new, or as good as new, the woolens to be dark in color, and to be delivered to the superintendent of the hospital in good order. The necessity for the furnishing of clothing enumerated in section 1963 of the General Code, supra, would only arise when the clothing was not otherwise furnished, and it would appear that the judge having the patient before him would be able to determine readily whether the clothing worn by the patient at the time of his appearance in court, or any that might be furnished otherwise, would be such as is comprehended under the provisions of section 1963 of the General Code. From the very nature of things it is quite apparent that it is contemplated that the clothing to be furnished will be of a substantial rather than of a stylish or expensive character.

It is my opinion therefore that under the provisions of section 1962 of the General Code, supra, it is the duty of the probate judge to supply each patient committed by him to the hospital for the insane with clothing as enumerated in section 1963 when, in the opinion of the probate judge, the clothing worn by the patient or otherwise furnished to the superintendent of the hospital for the insane is not of the character set out in section 1963 of the General Code.

In the exercise of the discretion residing in the judge, regard should be had for the comfort and convenience of the patient, which should not be overlooked at any hazard, and it should naturally follow that the probate judge, in the discharge of his duties, would regard the interests of his county to the end that the service rendered should be as economical as possible without sacrificing its efficiency.

Coming to the second question propounded by you relative to the transfer of patients from the state hospital for the insane to the Lima State Hospital, which is as follows:

> "Shall I, under section 2216, allow the physicians at the state hospital to make the examination and certificate for those who are to be transferred, or shall I appoint physicians to make the examination and certificate under the general provisions of the Code?"

Section 2216 of the General Code has no application whatever to the transfer of patients confined in the state hospital for the insane to the Lima State Hospital, that section relating to the transfer of insane prisoners from the penitentiary or the reformatory to the Lima State Hospital, and under its provisions it is necessary that there be an examination of the prisoner made by two physicians, etc. Section 1993 of the General Code (103 O. L., 448), which provides for the transfer of certain patients from the state hospital for the insane, is as follows:

> "The superintendent of a state hospital for insane may make application to the Ohio board of administration for an order of transfer to the Lima State Hospital of any or all inmates thereof that exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies, rendering their presence a source of danger to others. The board, upon satisfaction that such order is advisable, may order the transfer of such persons to the Lima State Hospital."

In case of the transfer of patients of the state hospitals referred to in section 1993, supra, it is not necessary that further examination may be had, nor is there a provision for the payment of any fees for such examination. The superintendent of the state hospital who is in charge of the patients from day to day and who is familiar with their condition would in all probability be better able to determine as to the need and advisability of transferring to the Lima State Hospital than anyone else.

It is my opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that there is no provision of law for the appointment of physicians to examine patients who are recommended for transfer from the state hospitals for the insane to the Lima State Hospital.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHERE NO HIGH SCHOOL IS MAINTAINED —NO AGREEMENT MADE WITH ANY OTHER BOARD TO FURNISH HIGH SCHOOL FACILITIES FOR PUPILS OF SAID DISTRICT—SUCH BOARD NOT REQUIRED TO PAY TUITION OF SUCH PUPILS UNLESS NOTICE IN WRITING FILED WITH BOARD.

The board of education of a school district, which does not maintain a high school and which has not entered into an agreement with any other board or boards of education for the furnishing of high school facilities to the pupils residing in said district, and entitled to high school facilities, cannot be charged with the payment of the tuition of such pupils unless the notice in writing required by the provision of section 7750, G. C., be filed with the clerk of said board of education not less than five days previous to the beginning of the high school attendance of such pupils, setting forth the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 2, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of July 27, 1915, in which you inquire as to whether a board of education of a rural district in which no high school is maintained is liable under section 7747, G. C., 104 O. L., 125, for the tuition of pupils having a legal school residence in such district, attending high school without the certificate of the county superintendent, when such pupils are the holders of a Boxwell diploma, and such rural board has no agreement for the schooling of its high school pupils, and such pupils so attending high school did not give the clerk the five-day notice required by section 7750, G. C., previous to the beginning of the attendance.

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month. No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repair, by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district. The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

Section 7750, G. C., to which you refer, reads as follows:

> "A board of education not having a high school may enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining such school for the schooling of all its high school pupils. When such agreement is made the board making it shall be exempt from the payment of tuition at other high school of pupils living within three miles of the school designated in the agreement, if the school or schools selected by the board are located in the same civil township, as that of the board making it, or some adjoining township. In case no such agreement is entered into, the school to be attended can be selected by the pupil holding a diploma, if due notice in writing is given to the clerk of the board of education of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of attendance."

You state that the board of education in question does not maintain any high school and that such board of education has not entered into any agreement with any other board or boards of education maintaining high schools for the schooling of its high school pupils as authorized by section 7750, G. C. No high school being maintained by the board of education in question and said board not having entered into any agreement with any other board or boards of education for the furnishing of high school facilities to its pupils, it is clear that under the language of section 7750, G. C., the school to be attended can be selected by the pupils entitled to high school facilities, but it seems equally clear that in order to charge the board of education of the district of the pupils' residence, with the payment of the tuition, notice in writing must be given to the clerk of the board of education of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of the attendance.

Such was the conclusion of the court as to the legal effect of the language used in this section in the case of New Madison Special School District (Bd. of Ed.) v. Harrison Township (Bd. of Ed.) 14 O. D., N. P., 62. The above cited case was decided by Judge Allread of the court of common pleas of Darke county in 1903, and was affirmed by the circuit court without report on November 25th of the same year. The language of the statute at that time was practically the same as at the present. The court expressed its conclusion in the following language:

"Where no high school is maintained by the township board of education and no agreement has been made by such township board with one or more boards of education of the same adjoining townships for the schooling of high school pupils of such township, the high school pupils resident in such township may attend any high school in the state and tuition in such case shall be chargeable to such township board of education, providing written notice thereof is given to the clerk of the board of education before the attendance begins."

An examination of the above cited case will show that the court intended to be taken as holding that under the conditions set forth in the portion of the opinion above quoted, written notice to the clerk in accordance with the terms of the statute was necessary to charge the school district of the pupils' residence with the payment of the tuition.

It is, therefore, my opinion that under the facts stated by you, the board of education referred to by you is not liable for the payment of tuition for the pupils in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY FUNDS—BANKS AND BANKING—A BANK WHICH HAS BEEN AWARDED FUNDS OF COUNTY AS ACTIVE AND INACTIVE DEPOSITORY MAY NOT DIVIDE FUNDS WITH OTHER BANKS OF COUNTY, SUCH OTHER BANKS TO BE RECOGNIZED AS DEPOSITORIES.

Neither the county commissioners nor the county treasurer may lawfully enter into an arrangement whereby a bank which has been regularly awarded the funds of the county on its bid as active and inactive depositary may divide the funds so awarded to it with other banks of the county not bidding; such other banks to be recognized as depositaries and to pay the rate of interest offered by the regularly designated depositary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 3, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 28, 1915, wherein you request my advice upon the following state of facts:

> "The First National Bank, The Ohio Valley Bank Company, The Commercial & Savings Bank Company, all of Gallipolis, and The Vinton Banking Company of Vinton, have been designated as depositaries for the active and inactive funds of this county. The First National Bank was the only bank that bid for the county funds. This bank bid one per cent. for the active funds and two per cent. for the inactive funds. Whereupon their bid was accepted, and on July 17, 1915, The First National Bank gave bond and became the depositary of the county funds.
> "It seems now that The First National Bank does not want all the county money, and they are before the county commissioners with this proposition: that the inactive funds be divided between the four banks in the county, and the active funds be divided among the three local banks. There is no practical objection to this proposition as all the banks are sound, and all will give bond as required by law. It is my belief that the commissioners desire to make this arrangement, and they have put it up to me. I have examined the law as to county depositaries and can find no authority for it. Of course, if the funds were divided, the rate of interest paid would remain the same, to wit, the minimum, but the county would have the advantage of the resources of four banks as security, instead of one, as the matter now stands."

I interpret the first sentence of your letter as meaning that the banks therein named were formerly designated as depositaries, for the remaining statements in your letter make it clear that the only bank now designated as a depository is the First National Bank.

It is obvious that in depositing the funds of the county the commissioners must proceed strictly in accordance with the statutes applicable to the subject. If authority to take a given course is not therein conferred, such authority does not exist and it is not sufficient to authorize such course that the same is merely not prohibited by the statutes.

Section 2716, G. C., provides in effect that when the commissioners provide a depositary they shall advertise for bids.

Section 2717, G. C., provides for opening the bids and stipulates that when the bids are opened the commissioners "shall award the use of such money to the bank or banks * * * that offer the highest rate of interest therefor on the average daily balance, provided proper sureties, securities or both, are tendered in the proposal."

Section 2718 provides that:

> "If, on account of the large amount of money to be deposited, the highest bidder is not entitled to all the funds of the county, the commissioners, after according to the highest bidder all to which it is entitled, shall award the balance to the next highest bidder or bidders respectively."

Section 2721, G. C., provides as follows:

> "If no proposals are received offering the rate of interest hereinafter prescribed, the commissioners shall at once again advertise in the same manner until acceptable proposals are received. Each subsequent advertisement shall also state whether any proposal was received under the preceding advertisement, and, if any, the bank or banks or trust companies and the rate of interest offered."

It is clear from the provisions of the foregoing sections that in the first instance at least the only legal method of awarding the funds of the county to depositaries when any bids are received, offering the prescribed rates of interest, is to award the same to bidding banks.

Section 2728, G. C., provides as follows:

> "If a bank or trust company to which an award is so made fails to execute an undertaking or to hypothecate bonds, as herein provided, within thirty days of the time the award is made, the commissioners may award the use of the money to any other bank or banks or trust companies whose written proposal offers the same rate of interest, as in the proposal of such defaulting bank or trust company. If no other bank or trust company offers such rate of interest in its proposal, the commissioners may award the use of such money to a bank or banks or trust companies whose written proposal offers therefor the next highest rate of interest. In either case, the undertaking and hypothecation shall be required to be executed. In case of such default, the commissioners shall advertise for others in the manner provided."

This section might be so interpreted as to authorize the commissioners, in the event therein described, to award the use of the money to banks other than the successful bidder without a readvertisement, though I do not so hold. However it is apparent from your letter that the contingency upon which section 2728 operates does not exist in the case stated by you.

I am unable to find any other provisions of the county depositary law which shed any light upon the question which you submit. Those which I have quoted and to which I have referred do not authorize the commissioners to enter into any such arrangements as those which you describe.

Under the circumstances stated by you, The First National Bank is the only bank which may be treated as a depositary by the commissioners and treasurer. If that bank desires to enter into an arrangement with the other banks named, whereby such other banks may receive certain portions of the money of the county deposited with the depositary bank, such money however being, so far as the county is concerned, on deposit with The First National Bank and for which said bank and the securities or surety furnished by it is liable, that would be a matter of private arrangement among the several banks with which the commissioners and treasurer would have nothing to do.

You mention the fact that the county, under the proposed arrangement, would have the advantage of the resources of four banks as security instead of one. This fact, however, is not material because presumably the deposits which are to be made with The First National Bank are fully protected by the surety or securities furnished by that bank. At any rate it is the duty of the commissioners, under sections 2732 and 2733, General Code, to see that this is the case.

It is my opinion, accordingly, that the arrangement proposed by The First National Bank may not lawfully be entered into.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—WARD OF CHILDREN'S HOME—WHEN SUCH WARD IS BROUGHT INTO JUVENILE COURT, SAID COURT HAS CONTROL UNTIL THE AGE OF TWENTY-ONE YEARS IS REACHED.

A ward of a children's home who is brought into juvenile court under the juvenile law becomes a ward of the court under the provisions of section 1643, G. C., and remains under the control of the court until reaching the age of twenty-one years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 4, 1915.

MR. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary of Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your request for an opinion as follows:

> "A ward of a certain county children's home of this state was placed about five years ago in another county. The authorities of the home did not exercise supervision. The girl, who is now about sixteen years of age, was taken into the juvenile court of the county where she resided and the judge of that court committed her to the Crittendon Home, at Columbus, where she has given birth to a child.
> "The question arises as to whether the trustees of the children's home are still responsible for this girl's welfare, or has she become the exclusive ward of the juvenile court?"

Section 1643 of the General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, 869, is as follows:

> "When a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attain the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attains such age."

Under the provisions of section 1643, General Code, supra, it is my opinion that the girl under 18 years of age is and will remain a ward of the juvenile court for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection until she attains the age of 21 years, and will be subject to the orders of that court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

NOTARY PUBLIC—NECESSARY QUALIFICATIONS OF APPLICANTS FOR COMMISSION—POSTOFFICE ADDRESS MUST BE A CITY OR AN INCORPORATED VILLAGE FOR AN APPLICANT IN TWO OR MORE COUNTIES—CERTIFICATE OF JUDGE SUFFICIENT AS TO QUALIFICATIONS.

Under section 119, G. C., a person may only be commissioned as notary public in more than one county when his postoffice address is a city or an incorporated village situated in two or more counties in the state.

The certificate of a judge under section 120, General Code, 103 O. L., 405, as to qualifications of an applicant for a commission as notary public is sufficient to justify the issuance of such commission by the governor without further investigation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 23, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "Can a notary public be authorized to act officially as such, under the provisions of section 119 of the General Code of Ohio, in more than one county, whose postoffice address is an unincorporated city or village situated in more than one county?
> "Can a notary public be authorized to act officially as such in more than one county, whose postoffice address is a postoffice actually located in a building, entirely isolated from any other building, residence, city or village, on a county line; said postoffice being designated by the postoffice department as a legally established office under a proper title or name?
> "In the issuing of a commission to a notary public, is the certificate of the judge as to the qualifications of the applicant all that is required; or should the governor make investigations respecting such applicant's qualifications?"

Section 119 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The governor may appoint and commission as notaries public as many persons as he may deem necessary who are citizens of this state, of the age of twenty-one years or over, and residents of the counties for which they are appointed; but citizens of this state of the age of twenty-one years or over, whose postoffice address is a city or village, situated in two or more counties of the state, may be appointed and commissioned for all of the counties within which such city or village is situated. The governor may revoke a commission issued to a notary public upon presentation of satisfactory evidence of official misconduct or incapacity."

"Before the appointment is made, the applicant shall produce to the governor a certificate from a judge of the common pleas court, court of appeals, or supreme court, that he is of good moral character, a citizen of the county in which he resides, and possessed of sufficient qualifications and ability to discharge the duties of the office of notary public. No judge shall issue such certificate until he is satisfied from his personal knowledge that the applicant possesses the qualifications necessary to a proper discharge of the duties of the office, or until the applicant has passed an examination under such rules and regulations as the judge may prescribe."

The legislature recognizing the inconvenience, needless expense and confusion that would be brought about by the necessity of the appointment of a notary public to act only in one county where the city or village in which he resided was partly in one county and partly in another county or counties, has seen fit to provide that in such cases the same man might be commissioned as a notary public in more than one county and in so doing has used the words : "Whose postoffice address is a city or village situated in two or more counties of the state."

The legislature might have provided that a man who resided on a county line or within a certain distance of a county line might be appointed as notary public in more than one county, or they might have arrived at the same result in various ways, but they have seen fit to achieve the desired result by the use of the above quoted language, and your question must therefore depend upon the proper interpretation of the language used.

There are many provisions in the statutory laws of this state referring to cities and villages and the legislature acting in pursuance of authority conferred upon them by the constitution has enacted laws applying to cities as such and to villages as such. An examination of these provisions will show that the meaning of the word "village" as used in the statute of the state is well defined, and that the use of the word "village" in the statutory laws of the state can only include municipal corporations, and at no place will it be found that an unincorporated community is recognized in any sense as a village. There is a very practical reason for this conclusion, in that there are no prescribed limits of communities unless they are incorporated, and it would always be a question of fact, difficult to ascertain, whether a given community was in more than one county.

I am of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that the word "village" as used in section 119, above quoted, means an incorporated village only and that a person whose postoffice address is not in a municipal corporation situated in more than one county, may not legally be appointed as notary public in more than one county.

The answer to your first question disposes of your second question.

As to your third question, to wit, whether the certificate of the judge as to the qualifications of the applicant is all that is required, or whether the governor should make investigations respecting such qualifications; I am of the opinion that the governor would be justified in relying upon the certificate of the judge. However, the appointment of notaries public being permissive only, the governor might exercise his own discretion in the matter if he so chooses, and make any independent investigation that he desires. Statements made under oath by the applicant in his application would also be competent to be considered by the governor in determining whether the commission should be issued.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS—MEMBERSHIP—COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT AND ONE TEACHER.

Under the provisions of section 7811, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 102, the membership of the county board of school examiners is limited to the superintendent of the schoods of the county district, one district superintendent and one teacher, other than a district superintendent having the qualifications prescribed by said section 7811, G. C., as amended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 4, 1915.

HON. ADDISON P. MINSHALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 29th you request my opinion on the following question:

> "Under section 7811 of the General Code of Ohio, can more than one district superintendent be appointed as members of the county board of school examiners? Or, in other words, can the teacher provided for in said section be one of the district superintendents?"

Section 7811, G. C., prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., 102, provided:

> "There shall be a county board of school examiners for each county, consisting of three competent persons to be appointed by the probate judge. Two of such persons must have had at least two years' experience as teachers or superintendents, and have been within five years, actual teachers in the public schools. Each person so appointed shall be a legal resident of the county for which appointed. Should he remove from the county during his term, his office thereby shall be vacated and his successor be appointed."

This section as amended provides:

> "There shall be a county board of school examiners for each county, consisting of the county superintendent, one district superintendent and one other competent teacher, the latter two to be appointed by the county board of education. The teacher so appointed must have had at least two years' experience as teacher or superintendent, and be a teacher or supervisor in the public schools of the county school district or of an exempted village school district. Should he remove from the county during his term, his office thereby shall be vacated and his successor appointed."

It will be observed that under the provision of section 7811, G. C., prior to its amendment only two of the three members of the county board of school examiners had to have experience as a teacher or superintendent with the further qualification that within five years of the date of their appointment as school examiners they have been actual teachers in the public schools.

It was evidently the intention of the legislature in amending said section to confine the membership of the board of county school examiners to persons actually engaged in public school work. Under the above provision of the statutes as amended, the superintendent of the schools of the county district is, ex-officio, a member of the board of county school examiners. The authority to select the other two members of said board is vested in the county board of education and is limited by the terms of the statute, as amended, to one district superintendent and one other competent teacher. The district superintendent, appointed by the county board of education, as a member of said board of county school examiners, at the time of said appointment must have been elected in the manner provided by section 4739, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, and must have the qualifications required by the provisions of section 4744-5, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 143.

While section 7811, G. C., as amended, provides that the teacher so appointed by the county board of education as a member of the county board of school examiners must have had at least two years' experience as a teacher or superintendent, and at the time of such appointment be a teacher or supervisor in the public schools of the county school district or of an exempted village school district, I do not think that the term "supervisor" as above used includes the district superintendents of the county school district, and in view of the plain provision of the statute limiting the appointive power of the county board of education to one district superintendent and one other competent teacher having the qualifications therein prescribed, I am of the opinion in answer to your question that, under the provisions of said section 7811, G. C., as amended, the membership of the county board of school examiners is limited to the superintendent of the schools of the county district, one district superintendent elected in the manner provided by section 4739, G. C., as amended, and having the qualifications prescribed by section 4744-5, G. C., as amended, and one teacher, other than a district superintendent, having the qualifications prescribed by said section 7811, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT—CONTRACT OF EMPLOYMENT ENTERED INTO, ON OR AFTER MAY 27, 1915, IS MADE IN CONTEMPLATION OF PROBABLE GOING INTO EFFECT OF NEW LAW.

A contract of employment of a district superintendent under authority of section 4739, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, entered into on or after May 27, 1915, the date of the passage by the general assembly of amended senate bill No. 282, amending section 4738, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, is made in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amended senate bill and the carrying out of its requirement that the county board of education shall re-district the county school district for district supervision purposes into districts containing not less than thirty teachers and the obligation of such contract would not be impaired by the action of the county board of education as required by the provision of said amended statute, even though such action might result in materially changing the duties of the district superintendent or in abolishing his district and position.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 4, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 29, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "On May 29, 1915, a meeting was held for the purpose of electing a district supervisor in the districts composed of Madison, Newark and Hanover townships and Hanover special district, and at that meeting Mr. J. S. Mason was employed as district supervisor for two years at a salary of $1,500.00 per year. Mr. Mason has 31 teachers under him.
> "The question has come to me whether or not the board at that date could legally hire Mr. Mason for this position. It is my opinion that the proceedings are illegal, and I am asking you for your opinion.
> "I am herewith submitting a copy of the minutes of their meeting."

From your statement of facts I understand that the rural school districts of Madison, Newark and Hanover townships and Hanover special district (now a rural school district under provision of section 4735, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138), comprise a district for supervision purposes, said supervision district having been formed by the board of education of Licking county school district under authority of section 4738, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 140, which provides:

> "The county board of education shall within thirty days after organizing divide the county school district into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than twenty nor more than sixty.
> "The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts."

The resolution of the presidents of the boards of education of said rural school districts, at their meeting on May 29, 1915, employing a district superintendent for said supervision district, was passed under authority of section 4739, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 140, which provides:

> "Each supervision district shall be under the direction of a district superintendent. Such district superintendent shall be elected by the presidents of the village and rural boards of education within such district, except that where such supervision district contains three or less rural or village school districts the boards of education of such school districts in joint session shall elect such superintendent. The district superintendent shall be employed upon the nomination of the county superintendent but the board electing such district superintendent may, by a majority vote, elect a district superintendent not so nominated."

Section 4738, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., has been further amended by amended senate bill No. 282, passed by the general assembly and approved by the governor May 27, 1915. Said amended senate bill will become effective August 26, 1915, unless a petition for the referendum be filed prior to said date.

Section 4738, G. C., as amended by said amended senate bill, provides as follows:

> "The county board of education shall divide the county school district, any year, to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural school districts. The territory of such supervision districts shall be contiguous and compact. In the formation of the supervision districts consideration shall be given to the number of teachers employed, the amount of consolidation and centralization, the condition of the roads and general topography. The territory in the different districts shall be as nearly equal as practicable and the number of teachers employed in any one supervision district shall not be less than thirty. The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, re-district the county into supervision districts. The county board of education may at their discretion, require the county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village or rural schools of the county. This shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools."

In view of this amendment you inquire whether, on said date of May 29, 1915, the presidents of said boards of education could legally employ a district superintendent for a term of two years.

I call your attention to opinion No. 463 of this department, rendered to Hon. Frank W. Miller, superintendent of public instruction, under date of June 8, 1915.

The opinion holds that the provisions of section 4738, G. C., as amended by said amended senate bill No. 282, are mandatory and that when said amendment takes effect it will be the duty of the county board of education to divide the county school districts into proper supervision districts in accordance with the terms of said amended statute.

The opinion further holds that where district superintendents were employed on or after May 27, 1915, such contracts of employment were made in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amended senate bill No. 282, and the carrying out of its requirements that the county board of education shall redistrict the county school district for district supervision purposes into districts containing not less than thirty teachers, and that the obligation of such a contract would not be impaired by the action of the county board of education as required by the provisions of said amended statute, even though such action might result in materially changing the duties of the district superintendent or in abolishing his district and position.

Replying to your question I am of the opinion that, while the presidents of the boards of education of the districts referred to in your inquiry, had authority, under the provisions of section 4739, G. C., as amended, to employ a district superintendent on said date of May 29, 1915, said contract of employment was made in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amended senate bill No. 282, and the carrying out of the requirements of the amended statute.

Inasmuch as said rural school districts have thirty-one teachers, the county board of education, in re-districting said county school district for district supervision purposes could, in its discretion, continue said rural school district as a supervision district and, in the event they determine to do this, the contract of employment of said district superintendent would not be affected and would continue in force.

On the other hand if said county board of education should determine that, for the best interests of the schools of said county school district, it will be necessary to materially change the duties of said district superintendent or abolish his district and position, the action of said county board of education cannot be enjoined on the ground that the obligation of the contract, made on said date of May 28, 1915, would be impaired.

I enclose herewith copy of the opinion above referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMPETITIVE BIDS REQUIRED UNDER SECTION 6 OF GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILL—UNLESS IMPRACTICABLE TO SECURE BIDS—PAINTING AT STATE FAIR GROUNDS—WHEN BUILDING CODE REGULATIONS APPLY.

Competitive bids are required under the general language of section 6 of the general appropriation bill, unless otherwise provided by law or unless the board referred to in said section is satisfied that it is impracticable to secure such bids or that an emergency exists. Therefore, such bids must be secured even in cases to which the building regulations provided in sections 2314 et seq., G. C., do not apply. It is sufficient, however, if the competition is substantial and no particular formalities in securing such competition are required.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. R. W. DUNLAP, Secretary Ohio State Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 3rd, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Please advise me as to whether or not it is necessary to submit bids for painting or any other work on the state fair grounds, if the amount of the contract is less than three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars."

There are no special provisions in the act providing for the organization, powers and duties of the board of agriculture relative to the procedure to be followed by that board in letting contracts for work of the kind mentioned by you.

The provisions of what is sometimes called the "State Building Code," sections 2314 et seq., of the General Code, do not apply to the case stated by you if the entire work or improvement contemplated involves the expenditure of three thousand dollars or less, but if the improvement is a constructive one and involves in the aggregate a cost exceeding three thousand dollars, then, though such improvement might necessitate the letting of several different contracts, the state building code must be complied with and competitive bids secured in accordance therewith; for it is the "aggregate cost" of the improvement which determines the application of the building code regulations and not the amount of each particular contract necessary to effect the entire improvement.

Assuming, however, that you have in mind miscellaneous and disconnected improvements at the state fair grounds, no one of which involves an expenditure of more than three thousand dollars, I may say that the general provisions above referred to do not apply. But if the work is to be paid for out of the current general appropriation bill, competitive bids must be secured, unless it is impracticable, in the judgment of the board created by the appropriation bill for the making of transfers and divisions of appropriation accounts and the discharge of other administrative functions in connection therewith, to invite competitive bids; or unless, in the judgment of such board, the situation presents an instance of emergency requiring purchase without competitive bids; or unless the general provisions of the law directly require or authorize entering into a contract without competitive bids (which is not the case in this instance). In other words, as a condition to the expenditure of the appropriations made in house bill No. 701, it is required that all work involving the letting of contracts shall be done after competitive bids are secured.

In the securing of such competitive bids, however, no particular formalities are required and no particular advertisement is necessary. It is enough if substantial competition is secured in any proper way.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR SALE OF PORTIONS OF ABANDONED OHIO CANAL AT WAVERLY, PIKE COUNTY AND MAUMEE, LUCAS COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of July 22, 1915, and July 27, 1916, transmitting to me triplicate copies of resolutions providing for the sale of certain portions of the abandoned Ohio canal in Waverly, Pike county, Ohio, to Albert Foster and Philip Lorbach, and triplicate copies of a resolution providing for the sale of certain canal lands in the village of Maumee, Lucas county, Ohio, to Hubert Pierre, all of which resolutions have been signed by you.

I find that these resolutions have been drawn in accordance with the suggestions made to you in an opinion of this department rendered to you under date of July 14, 1915. I therefore join with you in the adoption of the resolutions above referred to, and have signed the triplicate copies of the same, which copies are returned to you herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF MUTUAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATIONS—DEATH BENEFITS MUST BE STIPULATED—ASSESSMENTS.

The articles of incorporation of mutual benefit associations organized under section 9427, G. C., may not authorize such association to pay as death benefits such sums of money as may be derived from making assessments under the by-laws of the association; the death benefits must be stipulated, though contingent upon the ability of the association to pay the stipulated sum from the assessments made on members.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am unable to approve the proposed articles of incorporation of the Schweizer-Verein of Cleveland, Ohio, returned herewith, for the reason that the articles show by explicit statement that the association is formed under section 9427, G. C. This section defines the particular purpose for which the association is formed as follows:

> "For the purpose of mutual protection and relief of its members and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the families, heirs, executors, administrators or assigns of the deceased members of such company or association, as the member may direct, in the manner provided in the by-laws."

The articles of incorporation omit the word "stipulated" and substitute for the phraseology of the statute the following:

> "Such sum of money as is derived from assessing its members in a manner provided in the by-laws of said society."

It is true that section 9427 provides further that:

> "No company or association shall issue a certificate for a greater amount than it is able to pay from the proceeds of one assessment."

And it is clear that the business of a mutual protective association is to be conducted on the assessment plan. However, as I interpret the statute an association organized under it is required to issue certificates calling for the payment of stipulated sums, conditioned however upon the realization of such fixed amount from the assessments made to meet the same in the event the accumulations of the company are not sufficient for such purpose.

Section 9432, G. C., provides in this connection as follows:

> "No such corporation, company, or association issuing endowments, certificates or policies, or undertakings, or promising to pay to members during life any sum of money, or thing of value, or certificate, or policy guaranteeing any fixed amount to be paid at death, except such fixed amounts or endowments be conditioned upon their being realized from the assessments made on members to meet them, shall be permitted to do business in this state, until they comply with the laws regulating regular mutual life insurance companies."

The exact phraseology of the articles of incorporation would permit the association to provide in its by-laws for paying to the families, heirs, executors, administrators or assigns of deceased members an indefinite amount dependent upon, for example, the assessment of the then members of the association in a certain amount per member. This would make the death benefits purely speculative, which is I think intended to be guarded against by the language of the statute.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WITNESSES AND JURORS IN MAYOR'S COURT—SAME FEES AS WITNESSES BEFORE JUSTICE OF PEACE—FEES PAYABLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY IN STATE CASES.

Witnesses and jurors in the mayor's court are entitled to the same fees as witnesses before justices of the peace, which fees are fixed by section 3011, G. C.

In all state cases, whether prosecuted to conviction or not, such fees are payable from the county treasury on the certificate of the mayor and the warrant of the county auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of July 18, 1915, you submitted an inquiry to me for official opinion, as follows:

> "We are enclosing letter form M. R. Talbot, mayor of Urbana, Ohio, which presents some new questions.
> "In this particular instances the mayor summoned a jury in a misdemeanor case and the defendant was acquitted. The charge in this case was filed by a chief of police, and under section 13499, General Code, a chief of police is not required to give security for costs. We are of the opinion, as there was no conviction in this case, that neither the mayor nor chief of police is entitled to any fees allowed to them by the commissioners under section 3019, General Code, but we are in doubt as to how the jurors and witnesses may be paid. See opinion of Attorney General T. S. Hogan, No. 986, rendered this department June 17, 1914."

The letter of the mayor of Urbana, enclosesd with your letter, is as follows:

"Will you kindly inform me how to proceed in the following case?

"An affidavit was filed in the mayor's court under section 12423 of the General Code. The mayor elected to try the case under section 4532 of the General Code.

"An ordinance has been duly and regularly passed under section 4552 of the General Code providing for a list of jurors and the same were properly filed at the time designated.

"Section 4534 provides as follows:

"'* * * Except as herein otherwise provided, witnesses and jurors shall receive the same compensation as witnesses before justices of the peace.'

"Section 4555 reads as follows:

"'In cases for the violation of ordinances, the fees of witnesses and jurors shall be paid, on the certificate of the officer presiding at the trial, from the corporation treasury, and in state cases on like certificate from the county treasury.'

"Section 4556 provides for city cases only.

"The above sections are the only authority found covering this class of cases.

"The officers come within the section governing state failure cases and we must look to the county commissioners for our fees.

"The above case was tried to a jury and the defendant was acquitted. The charge was filed by the chief of police and the arrest was made upon a legally issued warrant.

"I can find no authority under which I can certify the witness and jury fees to the county commissioners.

"The law seems to contemplate the same proceedings before a mayor as those followed in the court of common pleas.

"To what amount are witnesses and jurors each entitled as per diem?"

So far as I am able to find there is no specific provision of the statute relative to the fees to be paid in criminal cases before a justice of the peace, but section 3011, G. C., provides as follows:

"In all cases not specified in this chapter, each person summoned as a witness shall be allowed fifty cents for each day's attendance, and the mileage herein specified. When not summoned, each person called upon to testify in a cause shall receive twenty-five cents."

I believe the above section to be ample authority for the fixing of the fees in a criminal case for a witness at fifty cents and mileage.

Section 13499, G. C., cited by you provides as follows:

"When the offense charged is a misdemeanor the magistrate, before issuing the warrant, may require the complainant, or, if he considers the complainant irresponsible, may require that he procure a person to become liable for the costs if the complaint be dismissed, and the complainant or other person shall acknowledge himself so liable and such magistrate shall enter such acknowledgment on his docket. Such bond shall not be required of a sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, marshal, deputy marshal, watchman or police officer, when in the discharge of his official duty."

Therefore, the mayor was unauthorized to require security for costs in the particular prosecution under consideration.

The opinion to which you refer as having been rendered by my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, contains two questions. The second question is the one which is pertinent to your inquiry. The said second question is as follows:

> "2. In view of the provisions of sections 3016, 3017 and 3018, G. C., it appears that fees of witnesses in misdemeanor cases are not payable from the county treasury when testifying before justices of the peace, mayors and police justices, yet section 4555, G. C., seems to authorize a mayor to certify such fees out of the county treasury. Because of these apparent conflictions this department requests your ruling or opinion upon the questions herein set forth."

The answer thereto is as follows:

> "Answering your second question. Sections 3016 and 3018 of the General Code are as follows:
> "'Section 3016. In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from county treasury.'
> "'Section 3018. In felonies, fees of witnesses before justices of the peace, mayors, and police justices, shall be paid upon the allowance of the commissioners from the county treasury, on the certificate of such officer, notwithstanding the state has failed.'
> "Under these sections payment of witness fees from the county treasury in criminal cases is authorized in all cases of felony, and in misdemeanors only when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected upon failure of conviction.
> "Section 4555, General Code, to which you refer, is as follows:
> "'In cases for the violation of ordinances, the fees of witnesses and jurors shall be paid, on the certificate of the officer presiding at the trial, from the corporation treasury, and in state cases on like certificate from the county treasury.'
> "This statute requires fees of witnesses in state cases to be paid from the county treasury upon the certificate of the presiding officer at the trial.
> "I am of the opinion that the effect of this statute is not to authorize the payment of fees, but rather to specify the mode of procedure requisite for the payment of such fees as are authorized by sections 3016 and 3018 above quoted. The effect of section 4555, General Code, therefore, is to require a certificate of the mayor as a condition precedent to the payment of such fees as are authorized by the above sections, to wit: Those that accrue in the prosecution of felonies before a mayor, and in those misdemeanors only where recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction had."

I am unable to agree with the opinion of Mr. Hogan for the reason that as

I view it sections 3016 and 3018, G. C., are only applicable to felony cases. Section 3016 of the General Code is a codification of section 1306, R. S. In 78 O. L., page 201 section 1306 was amended to read as follows:

> "In all felonies, when the defendant is convicted, the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, constable and witnesses, shall be paid out of the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that, except in capital cases, the same may be paid to the county out of the state treasury; provided, in all such cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected, and in which there is no conviction, said costs shall be paid out of the county treasury."

It is to be noted that in the act found in 75 O. L., the language is "in all such cases." The words "in all cases," as used in the General Code, were originally "in all such cases," referring of course to the language "in all felonies" used at the beginning of the act. In 96 O. L., this act was amended so as to include "chief of police," and at that time the word "such," as used in the proviso, was left out. However, I do not believe that the mere omission of the word "such" would broaden the section so as to make it apply to other than felonies.

Furthermore, in the opinion of Mr. Hogan, he states that the effect of section 4555, G. C., is not to authorize the payment of fees, but rather to specify the mode of procedure of the payment of all such fees as are authorized by sections 3016 and 3018. Said sections only apply to felony cases, and since there would be no jurors in a felony case before a magistrate, the said section must undoubtedly refer to misdemeanors.

Section 4554, G. C., referred to by the mayor of Urbana in his letter, provides in part as follows:

> "* * * Except as herein otherwise provided, witnesses and jurors shall receive the same compensation as witnesses before justices of the peace."

Section 4555, G. C., provides as follows:

> "In cases for the violation of ordinances, the fees of witnesses and jurors shall be paid, on the certificate of the officer presiding at the trial, from the corporation treasury, and in state cases on like certificate from the county treasury."

It appears, therefore, that witnesses and jurors in a mayor's court are to receive the same compensation as witnesses before a justice of the peace which, under the provisions of section 3011 is fixed at 50 cents for each day's attendance and the mileage specified.

Section 4555 states that the fees of witnesses and jurors shall be paid, upon the certificate of the officer presiding at the trial in state cases, from the county treasury. There is no doubt, therefore, in my mind that the fees of both witnesses and jurors are to be paid, upon a certificate of the mayor, in state cases from the county treasury. Nor do I believe that it is necessary that the said fees should be allowed by the county commissioners before being paid.

Section 2460, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. * * *"

Since section 4555, G. C., directs that payments shall be made from the county treasury upon the certificate of the mayor in state cases, and since the amount thereof is fixed by law, I am of the opinion that the amount so certified shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor without the intervention of the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PRISONERS BECOMING INSANE IN PENITENTIARY OR REFORMATORY AND SENT TO COLUMBUS STATE HOSPITAL REMAIN CONSTRUCTIVELY IN FIRST NAMED INSTITUTION—SUBJECT TO TRANSFER TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL—EXAMINATION OF SUCH CONVICTS MAY BE MADE AT PENITENTIARY OR REFORMATORY —PROBATE JUDGE MAY HOLD INQUEST AT INSTITUTION SHELTERING INSANE PERSON.

Prisoners becoming insane in the penitentiary or reformatory and sent to the Columbus state hospital for treatment, under the provisions of sections 2222, et seq., G. C., remain constructively in the penitentiary or reformatory and are subject to transfer to the Lima state hospital under the provisions of sections 2216, et seq., G. C.

Examination prescribed under section 2216, G. C., may be made at the Columbus state hospital or Ohio hospital for epileptics, thereby obviating the necessity of returning the convicts to the penitentiary or reformatory for such examination. Probate judge may hold the inquest at the institution sheltering the insane prisoner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

DR. C. F. GILLIAM, Superintendent of Columbus State Hospital, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR DOCTOR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion under date of July 28, relative to the transfer of patients in your hospital to the Lima state hospital, which request is as follows:

"The Lima state hospital being now open for the reception of patients I am trying to make arrangements for the transfer of a number of patients from the Columbus state hospital to the Lima state hospital.

"Under section 1985 of the General Code is defined the classes of patients to be received at that institution. All of these classes can without question be transferred on the application of the superintendent of any state hospital in Ohio upon approval of the Ohio board of administration to the Lima institution with the exception of insane convicts who have been received at the Columbus State Hospital from the Ohio penitentiary and the Mansfield reformatory.

"Under section 2216 it is provided that before a convict can be sent to the Lima state hospital he shall be probated from the court in the county in which the institution is located by two physicians not connected with the institution in which the convict is an inmate. It is this question which is giving us bother in reference to the transfer. Under section 1993, page 448, volume 103 of the year book 1913, the board of administration is empowered, upon the request of the superintendent, to transfer to Lima all dangerous and homicidal cases. Some authorities have put the construction upon this section that it gives the power of transfer of all classes of patients, while others feel that this does not repeal that section or apply to that section which requires an inquest of convicts to be held by a regular probate court.

"It is this latter phase of the question that I would like to have an opinion from you in regard to. Whether these convicts who are now in my custody, and who were sent to me from the Ohio penitentiary and the Mansfield reformatory, and who have never had a regular inquest of lunacy by a regular court will have to be subjected to such an inquest or not. As this matter has been held in abeyance for some time past, awaiting a decision of this question, early action from your office will be very greatly appreciated, and greatly facilitate the transfer of the patients.

"Hoping for an early reply, and that I have put this matter in such a way that you will understand the question at issue, I am * * *."

Sections 1985, 2216, 2221, 2222 and 2223 of the General Code, are as follows:

"Section 1985. The Lima state hospital shall be used for the custody, care and special treatment of insane persons of the following classes:

"1. Persons who become insane while in the state reformatory or the penitentiary.

"2. Dangerous insane persons in other state hospitals.

"3. Persons accused of crime, but not indicted because of insanity.

"4. Persons indicted, but found to be insane.

"5. Persons acquitted because of insanity.

"6. Persons adjudged to be insane who were previously convicted of crime.

"7. Such other insane persons as may be directed by law.

"Section 2216. When the physician of the penitentiary or reformatory reports in writing to the warden or officer in charge thereof, that in his opinion a convict confined therein is insane, such warden or officer shall apply to the probate court of the county in which the institution is located, for an examination to be made of such convict by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory, and to be designated by the court. If satisfied after a personal examination that the convict is insane, they shall so certify in the form and manner prescribed for the commitment of insane persons to state hospitals.

"Section 2221. When an insane convict confined in the Lima state hospital, whose term of sentence has not expired, has been restored to reason, and the superintendent of the hospital so certifies in writing, he shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which he came. The officer in charge shall receive such convict into the penitentiary or reformatory.

"Section 2222. When a convict in the penitentiary or the reformatory becomes insane, the warden of the penitentiary or the superintendent of the reformatory shall give notice to the physician thereof, who shall forthwith examine the convict. If upon examination he is of the opinion that the convict is insane, the physician shall so certify to the warden, or superintendent. If the Lima state hospital is not then open to receive such convict, the warden shall forthwith confine the convict in the insane department of the penitentiary. The superintendent shall present to the board of managers of the reformatory the certificate of such physician. In such case the board of managers may order the superintendent to remove the convict to the Columbus state hospital, and the superintendent of such hospital shall set apart a portion of the hospital wherein such convict shall be confined.

"Section 2223. Should it be necessary after a convict is so confined in the insane department of the penitentiary, evidenced by the certificate of the superintendent of the Columbus state hospital and the physician of the penitentiary, the board of managers of the penitentiary may order the warden to remove such insane convict to the Columbus state hospital and the superintendent shall set apart a portion of the hospital wherein such insane convict shall be confined."

In the second paragraph of your letter you state that under section 1985 all of the classes of patients therein defined can, without any question, be transferred to the Lima state hospital on the application of the superintendent of any state hospital in Ohio, and upon the approval of the board of administration, with the exception of insane convicts who have been received at the Columbus state hospital from the Ohio penitentiary and the Mansfield reformatory, and in support of your contention you refer to the provisions of section 1993 of the General Code as amended, page 448, Vol. 103 Ohio Laws, and which is as follows:

"The superintendent of a state hospital for insane may make application to the Ohio board of administration for an order of transfer to the Lima state hospital of any or all inmates thereof that exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies, rendering their presence a source of danger to others. The board, upon satisfaction that such order is advisable, may order the transfer of such persons to the Lima state hospital."

Under the provisions of the section just quoted there are only two classes of patients which may be transferred from a state hospital for the insane to the Lima state hospital, namely: dangerous insane persons, or insane persons exhibiting dangerous or homicidal tendencies, rendering their presence a source of danger to others.

With reference to the transfer of the insane of the Columbus state hospital who have become inmates thereof through the operation of section 2222 of the General Code, by reason of their becoming insane while imprisoned in the state reformatory or penitentiary, the question arises as to the status of such inmates, that is as to whether or not they are in reality inmates of the Columbus state hospital for the insane, or are they simply being cared for there temporarily on account of their physical or mental condition, owing to the lack of provision for such care or treatment at the reformatory or penitentiary and to be regarded as being constructively in the penitentiary or reformatory and, if so, under what conditions and circumstances may they be transferred to the Lima state hospital, if at all?

Unless such patients are constructively inmates of either the penitentiary or reformatory, there is no provision for transferring them to the Lima state hospital, unless they exhibit "dangerous or homicidal tendencies rendering their presence a source of danger to others," as provided for in section 1993 of the General Code, as amended, supra.

Without setting out all of the related statutes, I am of the opinion that insane prisoners transferred from either the penitentiary or the state reformatory remain inmates of the respective penal institutions and are still constructively in those penal institutions.

That the Lima state hospital was primarily intended as a place for the care, custody and control of the criminal insane and insane criminals is made apparent from the fact that under the provisions of the original act, which is to be found on pages 236 to 241, inclusive, of the 98 Ohio Laws, it is the clear intention of the legislature to relieve the penitentiary and the reformatory from the care of such of its inmates as might become insane while in the penitentiary and the state reformatory, and to afford necessary medical attention to such inmates at the earliest possible date, in view of the provisions of section 25 of the act, to be found on page 241 of Vol. 98 of the Ohio Laws, which section is as follows:

> "This act shall go into effect on and after its passage, except that the provisions of sections twelve (12) to fifteen (15) inclusive shall not have the force of law until the Lima state hospital is ready for the reception of inmates, which fact shall then be certified to the courts by the governor and secretary of state."

Under the provisions of the section quoted the two classes of patients to be received at the Lima state hospital before its final completion were designated in section 2 of the act in the language as follows:

> "1. Persons who become insane while in the penitentiary and state reformatory.
> "2. Dangerous insane persons now in other state hospitals."

The reception of the other classifications of patients to be received at the Lima state hospital was, under the provisions of section 25, deferred or postponed until the fact that the Lima state hospital was ready for the reception of inmates was certified to the courts by the governor and the secretary of state.

Section 8 of the act, page 237 of 98 Ohio Laws, is as follows:

> "Admission of inmates during the period of construction. Inmates may be admitted to the Lima state hospital after the work of construction has progressed to such an extent that they may be safely and properly kept. Said inmates are to be admitted as hereinafter provided, but preference shall first be given to insane criminals."

From a reading of section 8 it is seen that it is clearly expressed that preference shall first be given to insane criminals. Assuming, then, that inmates of the Columbus state hospital who have been sent there under the provisions of sections 2222 and 2223 of the General Code, quoted above, are constructively in the penitentiary or reformatory by reason of the fact that they have the status of prisoners serving sentences for crime and have been temporarily placed in the Columbus state hospital for the insane for treatment, resort must be had to the provisions of section 2216 of the General Code, to provide the manner of procedure under which they may be transferred to the Lima state hospital.

Section 2216, quoted above, provides for an examination to be made of the convicts who become insane while in the penitentiary or reformatory by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory and to be designated by the probate court of the county in which the institution is located, which, in the case under consideration, the convict or convicts being constructively in the penitentiary, located at Columbus, in the county of Franklin, or in the reformatory, located at Mansfield, in the county of Richland, would be in the counties of Franklin and Richland. No particular trouble should be experienced here, as the respective probate courts of Franklin and Richland counties have the power and authority to designate physicians located in the same county as the state hospital, if desirable.

Further, the insane persons need not be returned actually to the respective penal institutions for examination, as the necessary examinations may be made at the Columbus state hospital for the insane, or, in the case of insane prisoners who have been sent to the Ohio hospital for epileptics under the provisions of sections 2222 and 2223 of the General Code, the examinations may be made at that institution by the designated physician and their report made to the respective probate courts by which they were appointed.

Section 1955 of the General Code, which relates to an examination by the probate court of an insane person out of court, is as follows:

> "If, by reason of the character of the affliction or insanity, it is deemed unsuitable to bring such person into such probate court, the probate judge shall personally visit such person and certify that he has so ascertained the condition of the person by actual inspection, and all proceedings as herein required may then be had in the absence of such person."

Under the section quoted above the probate judge of either Franklin or Richland county, if necessary or desirable, might personally visit the Columbus state hospital or the Ohio hospital for epileptics for the consideration of the cases under their jurisdiction and then make appropriate findings in their respective counties.

In so far as section 1993 of the General Code, as amended, page 448 of 103 Ohio Laws, is concerned, it would not have the effect of repealing or modifying the provisions of sections 2216, et seq., of the General Code, as it relates specifically to hospital patients as distinguished from penitentiary or reformatory inmates, and the transfer of such hospital patients is not attended with the formalities prescribed for the transfer of the inmates of the penitentiary or reformatory coming under the provisions of section 2216 and succeeding sections, of the General Code.

Taking the view, therefore, that the inmates of the Columbus state hospital who have been placed there under the operation of sections 2222 and 2223 of the General Code, are constructive in the penitentiary or in the reformatory, it is my opinion that before such persons may be transferred to the Lima state hospital the formalities provided in sections 2216, et seq., must be complied with, and the transfer may only be made on the order of the probate court of the county in which the institution in which the convict is an inmate is located.

The status of the inmates of the Lima state hospital who may be sent there under the provisions of sections 2216, et seq., of the General Code, is that of prisoners receiving treatment on account of insanity as distinguished from the other inmates of the Lima state hospital who may be committed other than under the provisions of section 2216, et seq., of the General Code, and this view is supported by the provisions of sections 1995 and 1996 of the General Code, which provide for an examination by the probate court of Allen county to determine the question of sanity or insanity of an inmate of the Lima state hospital serving sentence if an application is made by the superintendent of the Lima state hospital for the further detention of the prisoner on the ground that the prisoner is still insane at the expiration of his sentence.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PAY FEES OF MAYOR OR MAGISTRATE UNDER SECTION 12384, G. C.—SECTION 4132, G. C., NOT ENTIRELY INCONSISTENT WITH SECTION 12384, G. C.—FEES IN EVENT OF SENTENCE TO WORKHOUSE OF PRISONERS FOR MISDEMEANORS—AMOUNT OF MILEAGE ALLOWED FOR TRANSPORTATION OF PRISONERS TO WORKHOUSE—SECTION 12385, G. C., APPLIES ONLY WHEN WORKHOUSE IS SITUATED IN COUNTY OTHER THAN THAT IN WHICH SENTENCE IS IMPOSED—HOW OTHER FEES ARE PAID—MARSHAL AND CHIEF OF POLICE NOT ENTITLED TO FEES UNDER SECTION 4132, G. C.

Section 12384, G. C., affords no authority to county commissioners to pay any fees of officers concerned in the prosecution of a person sentenced to a workhouse under the terms therein contemplated.

Section 4132, G. C., relating to the payment of certain fees in the event of sentence to a workhouse, is not wholly inconsistent with section 12385, G. C., relating to transportation fees in cases wherein the workhouse is located in a county other than one in which the sentence is imposed. Therefore the latter, which was of later enactment, did not repeal the former by implication and affects the former only in so far as the mileage which might be allowed and paid thereunder for the transportation of prisoners to the workhouse is concerned. The special fees provided for by section 12385, G. C., are a substitute for such mileage but not for other fees which might lawfully be charged by the officers charged with the execution of the sentence of imprisonment in the workhouse; moreover section 12385, G. C., applies only when the workhouse is situated in a county other than that in which the sentence is imposed.

Section 4132, G. C., is not to be so interpreted as to provide a special method of payment of all fees of all officers concerned in the prosecution of a case in which a sentence to a workhouse is imposed, but its provisions relate only to the fees of the officer charged with the execution of the sentence, for services in connection with the conveyance of the convict to the workhouse.

Other fees of the officers concerned in a prosecution for a misdemeanor which terminates in a workhouse sentence may be allowed and paid from a public treasury only by virtue of section 3019, G. C., and under the conditions and restrictions therein imposed.

No fees may be lawfully taxed or paid to a marshal or chief of police under section 4132, G. C., for services in conveying a prisoner sentenced in a mayor's court for a misdemeanor to a workhouse in the execution of a sentence of such mayor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 15, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Where a prisoner is sentenced to the workhouse by a mayor or magistrate for a misdemeanor not in violation of a village ordinance, can the county commissioners, under section 12384, pay the mayor's or magistrate's fees, or does this section relate only to the maintenance of the prisoner while in the workhouse?

"In the opinion of Attorney General Hogan, number 21, of the date of January 6, 1913, he holds that section 4132 is repealed by implication.

"Section 12385 provides means for the payment of the transportation of a prisoner to the workhouse, but makes no provisions for the payment of the other fees of a constable or marshal.

"Is section 4132 repealed by implication so far as it relates to the fees of the justice, mayor, marshal or constable, or so much thereof as only relates to the transportation of the prisoner?

"Can the county commissioners allow the fees of a mayor, magistrate, constable and marshal in cases where a party has been convicted before their courts and sentenced to the workhouse under provisions of section 3019 of the General Code of Ohio, or will they have to be allowed in the manner provided by section 4132 of the General Code of Ohio? How shall their fees be paid in such cases?"

The sections of the General Code necessary to be considered in answering your several questions are as follows:

"Sec. 3019. In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowances to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars.

"Sec. 4132. The officer having the execution of the final sentence of a court, magistrate or mayor, shall cause the convict to be conveyed to the workhouse as soon as practicable after the sentence is pronounced, and all officers shall be paid the fees therefor allowed by law for similar services in other cases. Such fees shall be paid, when the sentence is by the court, from the county treasury, and when by the magistrate, from the township treasury.

"Sec. 12384. The commissioners of a county, or the council of a municipality, wherein there is no workhouse, may agree with the city council, or other authority having control of the workhouse of a city in any other county, or with the board of district workhouses having a workhouse, upon what terms and conditions persons convicted of misdemeanors, or of the violation of an ordinance of such municipality having no workhouse, may be received into such workhouse under sentence thereto. The county commissioners, or the council of a municipality, are authorized to pay the expenses incurred under such agreement out of the general fund of the county or municipality, upon the certificate of the proper officer of such workhouse.

"Sec. 12385. The sheriff, or other officer, transporting a person to such workhouse shall have the following fees therefor: six cents per mile for himself, going and returning, and five cents per mile for transporting each convict, and five cents per mile going and coming for the services of each guard, to be allowed as in penitentiary cases, the number of miles to be computed by the usual routes of travel, to be paid in state cases out of the general revenue fund of the county on the allowance of the county commissioners, and, in cases for the violation of the ordinances of a municipality, by such municipality on the order of the council thereof."

The answer to your first question seems clear to me. I am of the opinion that section 12384, which relates to arrangements between counties and municipalities not having workhouses and counties and municipalities having workhouses, for the keeping of prisoners convicted in the former of misdemeanors, does not apply to the subject-matter of fees of officers at all. Whatever the word "expenses" as used in section 12384 contemplates, it includes only disbursements by the management of the workhouses which are to be reimbursed by the municipality or county whose prisoners are being cared for therein.

In stating your second question you refer to the opinion of my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, which is found in the report of this department for the year 1913 at page 189, volume 1 thereof. I am compelled to disagree with Mr. Hogan who holds therein that what is now section 4132, G. C., is, in subject-matter, entirely covered by section 12385, G. C., a statute of later enactment, so that the former is repealed by implication. That this is incorrect is fully established by the case of Ketter v. Commissioners, 8 C. C., (n. s.) 73, wherein the relation between these two sections, then R. S. sections 2101 and 6801-a, respectively, was considered. The court, per Cherrington, J., points out in the opinion that section 6801a, now sections 12384 and 12385, G. C., has special application to the imprisonment of persons convicted under arrangements such as those contemplated in section 12384, G. C. Under such circumstances the general assembly deemed it expedient to make special provision for the fees of the transporting officers, which would not be necessary in cases wherein the workhouse was located in the same municipality or county in which the conviction was had. In the language of the court "it will be observed that that section (section 6801a R. S., now section 12385, G. C.) provides for the transportation of such persons where it is done under an agreement between the commissioners of the county where the conviction took place, and where it has no workhouse, and the proper authority in another county where a workhouse is located. And it seems to provide simply for the transportation and nothing further."

On the other hand what was then section 2101, R. S., and is now section 4132, G. C., was regarded by the court as a general statute applicable to the execution of all sentences of imprisonment to workhouses. It is manifest, therefore, that section 12385 does not cover the whole ground covered by section 4132, but that it relates only to the transportation service, as such, and affords a substitute for the mileage which might be charged under the other section in cases in which the workhouse is in the same county, and therefore does not work a partial repeal or amendment of the former by implication.

Accordingly I advise, in answer to your second question, that section 4132, G. C., is not repealed by implication. The effect of section 12385 may be best described as follows:

> "The special fees for transportation, provided in section 12385, are in lieu of the mileage which a sheriff, constable or other officer charged with the execution of a sentence of a court or magistrate, might otherwise lawfully charge upon the service in return of a writ of mittimus. The section applies only when the workhouse to which the convict is transported is in a county other than the one in which the sentence is imposed; so that section 4132 operates without reservation when the sentence contemplates the transportation of the convict to a workhouse in the county in which it is imposed. But as to the separate fee for service in return of writs exclusive of mileage, the sheriff, constable or other officer is entitled to the allowance in payment thereof under section 4132, G. C., for services in connection with the transportation of a convict other than travel itself, such as the service and return of a writ of mittimus in all cases, as well when he is entitled to the fee provided by section 12385 as when he is not entitled to such fee."

In so answering I must reserve the statement, to be more fully developed in answering your third question, that it does not follow that section 4132 provides for fees of the justice and mayor or for all fees of the marshal or constable.

This statement brings me to your third question which involves primarily an interpretation of section 4132. It is true that this section provides that "all officers shall be paid the fees therefor allowed by law for similar services in other cases," and provides how "such fees" shall be paid. It is quite natural to suppose that the intention of the legislature was to make special provision for the fees of "all officers" performing services in connection with the prosecution. The context, however, indicates a narrower meaning. The word "therefor" is significant. The antecedent of this word, in my opinion, is indicated by the first part of the sentence, namely, the service of conveying the convict to the workhouse and the service of all process in connection therewith for which fees are allowed in other cases for like services (other than the specific fee for transportation provided for by section 12385). Any other interpretation of this section would make the county or township, as the case may be, liable for all fees of officers earned in the prosecution of misdemeanor cases where a workhouse sentence is imposed, and would make the section inconsistent with section 3014, G. C., in part at least, and inconsistent with the general policy of the state relative to the recovery of costs in criminal cases. I think a clearer view of section 4132 may be had by examining its phraseology as originally enacted in 66 O. L., 196, (the section never having been amended since its original enactment save in process of codification). In such original form it read as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of all officers having the execution of the final sentence of any court, magistrate or mayor, sentencing convicted persons to such workhouse, to cause such convicts to be conveyed to the same as soon as practicable after the sentence is pronounced; and all officers shall be paid the fees therefor allowed by law for similar services in other cases, such fees to be paid, when the sentence is by the court, out of the county treasury, and when by the magistrate, out of the township treasury."

It will be observed that in codification the phrase "all officers," as it first occurs, has been changed to "the officers," but that the same phrase, as it occurs the second time in the sentence, has been left unchanged. In my opinion the phrase "all officers," in its second use in the original statute, meant "all officers having the execution of the final sentence of any court, magistrate or mayor sentencing such convicted person to such workhouse," and this meaning is preserved in present section 4132, G. C. The section, therefore, applies only to the sheriff, constable or marshal in the execution of a sentence of imprisonment in the workhouse and other fees for services in causing "the convict to be conveyed to the workhouse." In Ketter v. Commissioners, supra, this section was held to authorize the sheriff to charge the statutory fee (other than mileage) for making service and return of writ in conveying prisoners from Scioto county to the Cincinnati workhouse.

But for payment of fees for services other than those in connection with conveying prisoners to the workhouse out of the public treasury, recourse must be had, in my opinion, to section 3019, G. C., which permits the allowance to justices of the peace, police judges or justices, mayors, marshals, chiefs of police and constables, of the fees earned and lost by them in misdemeanor cases by reason of the insolvency of the defendant, not exceeding in the aggregate one hundred dollars ($100.00) in any one year for any one officer. The antecedent of "such officers," in section 3019, is evidently the officers mentioned in section 3016, G. C.

There is no provision for the allowance of fees to the officers referred to in section 3019 in misdemeanor cases wherein the prosecution fails. However, your question relates only to cases in which convictions have been had, and as to such cases I advise, in accordance with the foregoing discussion, that all fees of officers, excepting those of the officer executing the sentence of imprisonment to the workhouse, for services in connection with conveying the prisoner to such workhouse, can be paid from the public treasury only under section 3019, G. C.

Your question is general, but you mention mayors and marshals in stating the same. In order to cover your question fully, therefore, it is necessary to deal further with one peculiarity of section 4132 which has not thus far been mentioned. This section is placed in the Municipal Code and properly so because though originally one of the Revised Statutes of general application, it has always been found in a group of sections relating to the powers and duties of municipal officers. Section 4132 itself begins by referring to "the officer having the execution of the final sentence of a court, magistrate or mayor." There is an evident discrimination here among the court, the magistrate and the mayor, so that a mayor is, in this connection at least, not regarded as either a court or a magistrate. Yet when the section comes to provide for the payment of fees, there is provision for the method of payment when the sentence is by the court and provision when the sentence is by the magistrate, but if the mayor be, for the purposes of the section, neither a "court" nor a "magistrate" then there is no provision for the payment of fees when the sentence is by the mayor. I am informed that the practice has been to regard the mayor as a "court" and in misdemeanor cases, at least, to allow fees to be paid out of the county treasury. The above cited case of Ketter v. Commissioners, does not afford any assistance in this connection because that was a case involving the fees of the sheriff, and evidently the convictions had been had in the common pleas court.

The exact question thus raised is as to the fees of the marshal and chief of police for execution of a sentence of the mayor's court in misdemeanor cases. These fees are fixed, if at all, by section 4387 with respect to the marshal and by section 4534 with respect to the chief of police, respectively. Both provide that in the one case the marshal and in the other case the chief of police shall receive "the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases." The fee of the sheriff for serving writs is seventy-five cents for the first name on the writ and twenty-five cents for each additional name and in addition thereto eight cents per mile going and returning. (Section 2845, G. C.) The fees of the constable for similar services are different. (See section 3347, G. C.) Therefore, the sections which attempt to prescribe the fees of the marshal and chief of police as the same as those allowed to sheriffs and constables for similar services are meaningless. In the case of State ex rel. Ribble v. Kleinhoffer, recently decided by the supreme court, analagous language in the statutes relative to the fees of agents of a humane society was held void for uncertainty, and in view of this decision I am of the opinion that no fees are legally taxable to a chief of police or to a marshal in a misdemeanor case, for the services referred to in section 4132, G. C. It seems therefore unnecessary to consider the significance of the omission of the word "mayor" from the last clause of the section in the face of its inclusion in the first clause thereof. Were it necessary to do so, however, I would be of the opinion that such omission would make it impossible to pay any fees thereunder out of the county or township treasury when the conviction has been had in a mayor's court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BONDS ISSUED BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES UNDER SECTION 7004, G. C., ARE WITHIN ALL LIMITATIONS OF SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—EXCEPTION—BONDS ISSUED PRIOR TO JUNE 2, 1911.

Bonds issued by township trustees under section 7004, G. C., do not constitute an indebtedness incurred by a vote of the people within the meaning of the Smith one per cent. law, section 5649-2, G. Accordingly, such levies are within all the limitations of the Smith law, except as to levies on account of bonds issued prior to June 2, 1911.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 27, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Under section 6977 two townships of this county by a majority vote carried the proposition for, 'road improvement by general taxation;' one township on July 23, 1910, and one township on February 19, 1912.
> "Both townships have issued bonds for the purpose of providing the money necessary to meet the expenses of improving such roads under section 7004.
> "The amount of bonds issued by each township is well within the limitations of sections 7005 and 3954 of the General Code, and sections 5649-1 and 5649-1a passed February 16, 1914, volume 104, page 12, seems to take care of any levy for the interest and principal of said bonds within the 15 mill limitation.
> "First. May the trustees of these townships issue bonds herafter under authority of section 6977 and section 7004 and levy for sinking fund and interest over the one per cent. limitation under section 5649-2 volume 103, page 552?
> "Second. May the trustees of these townships issue bonds hereafter under section 7004 and levy a tax in excess of the two mill limitation under section 5649-3a, volume 102, page 271?"

My predecessor, Mr. Hogan, held in an opinion rendered under date of May 13, 1912, to Hon. Don J. Young, prosecuting attorney, Norwalk, Ohio, found in vol. II of the annual report of the attorney general for that year, at page 1335, that bonds issued under section 7004, G. C., do not constitute "indebtedness incurred by a vote of the people," although their issuance is dependent upon the favorable vote of the electors of the township upon the question of "road improvement by general taxation"for the reason that the electors do not vote upon any particular indebtedness, nor does the issuance of bonds necessarily follow a favorable vote under the related statutes. On the contrary the vote merely fixes the policy of the township with respect to the improvement of its public roads by authorizing such improvement to be made by general taxation rather than by special proceedings involving the assessment of benefited property. Such a vote determines the policy of the township for an indefinite period of time, and such policy remains effective until an election for the reversal thereof is successfully held under sections 7001, et seq., G. C.

These considerations induced my predecessor to adopt the conclusion that levies for sinking fund and interest purposes on account of the bonds issued under section 7004, G. C., are not exempted from the ten mill limitation of the Smith one per cent. law by the last clause of section 5649-2, G. C.

In like manner, Mr. Hogan reached the conclusion that the decision in State ex rel. v. Sanzenbacher, 84 O. S. unreported, did not apply to such levies so as to make them exempt from the limitation of two mills on levies for township purposes.

Mr. Hogan further held that inasmuch as all the proceedings under sections 6976-7008, G. C., are taken by the township as such and administered by the trustees of the township in their official capacity, the levies in question could not be regarded as levies in special districts created for road improvements, within the meaning of section 5649-3a, G. C.

I agree with Mr. Hogan's opinion, and in addition thereto may state that none of the amendments of the Smith one per cent. law, enacted subsequently to the rendition of his opinion, would affect the application of his conclusions to the facts stated by you.

My answer to both of your questions is, therefore, generally in the negative.

An exception must, however, be made with respect to so much of the levy for interest and sinking fund purposes as represents the retirement of bonds issued prior to June 2, 1911, if such there be. You state that one township voted on the proposition on July 23, 1910, and it is possible that in that township bonds may have been issued prior to the date above named. If that is the case, levies on account of these bonds are outside of the ten mill limitation of section 5649-2 and the two mill limitation of section 5649-3a of the General Code, but are within the fifteen mill limitation of the law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LONGVIEW HOSPITAL—NOT A STATE HOSPITAL—PATIENTS CANNOT BE TRANSFERRED TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL.

Longview hospital is not a state hospital, and patients cannot be transferred to Lima state hospital.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

Board of Directors of Longview Hospital, Cincinnati, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter under date of July 16, 1915, from Mr. Herman P. Goebel, Cincinnati, Ohio, requesting my opinion. This letter is in part as follows:

> "I am a member of the board of directors of Longview hospital and write at the instance and request of that board. You are aware that the Ohio state board of administration is about to arrange for the transfer of the insane criminals and criminal insane from the various state insane institutions to the Lima institution. Some question has arisen as to whether such patients now confined at Longview hospital can be transferred by the Ohio state board of administration to the Lima institution."

Section 1985 of the General Code provides who may be admitted to the Lima state hospital and is as follows:

> "The Lima state hospital shall be used for the custody, care and special treatment of insane persons of the following classes:
> "1. Persons who become insane while in the state reformatory or the penitentiary.
> "2. Dangerous insane persons in other state hospitals.
> "3. Persons accused of crime, but not indicted because of insanity.
> "4. Persons indicted, but found to be insane.
> "5. Persons acquitted because of insanity.
> "6. Persons adjudged to be insane who were previously convicted of crime.
> "7. Such other insane persons as may be directed by law."

It will be noted that paragraphs one and two of section 1985, above quoted, are the only provisions for the transfer of patients from other institutions to the Lima state hospital, and inasmuch as paragraph one applies solely to the state reformatory and the pentitentiary, any transfers made from Longview hospital to the Lima state hospital would have to be by virtue of paragraph two. Attention is called to the wording of paragraph two, to wit: "Dangerous insane persons in other state hospitals." The answer to your question, therefore, depends upon whether or not the Longview hospital is a "state" hospital.

It is true that appropriations are made by the state of Ohio for the partial maintenance of the Longview hospital and the validity of such appropriations was upheld in the case of State ex rel. v. Oglevee, 36 O. S., 211, on the ground that Longview hospital was a public institution and could therefore be supported by state funds. It is equally true, however, that the directors of the Longview hospital are not appointed by the governor and this was upheld in the case of Chalfant v. The State, 37 O. S., 60, the court holding that Longview hospital, while it was a public institution thus recognizing the distinction made in 36 O. S., supra, was not a "state" institution. The following is quoted from the opinion of White, J., page 62:

> "There is no constitutional inhibition against authorizing a county, or the municipalities of the state establishing such institutions. All institutions for these purposes are not required to be state institutions; but when state institutions are created for the purpose, the constitution requires the trustees to be appointed in the mode therein provided.
> "The provision has no application to institutions for these purposes founded by individuals, or particular localities, under authority granted for the purpose. Nor do such institutions become state institutions from the fact that they are subject to legislative government and control. All institutions and corporations created for public purposes are subject to be thus governed.
> "Nor is the character of the institution affected by the fact that the legislature has contributed to its support. The institution was created to administer in a particular county a public charity, which the state is enjoined to foster, and there is no inhibition against the general assembly giving it such aid as it may deem just."

Under date of December 12, 1911, my predecessor, Hon Timothy S. Hogan, rendered an opinion addressed to the Ohio board of administration, which opinion is found in vol. II of the annual report of the attorney general for 1911-1912, at page 944, in which he held: "The Longview hospital is not a state institution." The following is also quoted from the foregoing opinion:

> "It is evident that the legislature in passing the act creating your board (102 O. L., 211) recognized the fact that said asylum is not a state institution under the then existing laws and said decision, for in section 4 which provided for your board's assuming the management and control of the institutions of the state it did not include the Longview hospital, and I am of the legal opinion that your board has nothing to do with the management or control of said institution either as to officers, employes or rules and regulations governing the same."

I concur in the conclusion reached in the foregoing opinion and hold that the Longview hospital is not a "state institution" and therefore does not come within the provisions of paragraph two of section 1985 supra, providing for the transfer of "dangerous insane persons now in other state hospitals" to the Lima state hospital.

This conclusion is further supported by the provisions of house bill No. 532 passed by the general assembly April 28, 1913, and approved by the governor May 6, 1913, found in 103 O. L., page 754, which provides that the Ohio board of administration and the county commissioners of Hamilton county are authorized and empowered to contract for the rental and use and provide for the ultimate purchase by the state for a hospital for the insane of the property occupied and used as the Longview hospital for the insane, and providing that during negotiations for the purchase of the property the same might be leased by the state. Section 6 of the act in question provides as follows:

> "Said property when rented or acquired by the state of Ohio shall be used and maintained as a hospital for the insane to be known as "The Longview State Hospital" and the Ohio board of administration shall have all the powers with respect thereto conferred as to the institutions named in section 1835 of the General Code and by title 5, division 1, chapter 2 of the General Code."

It is therefore clear that the legislature at the time of the enactment of house bill No. 532 did not consider the Longview hospital to be a state hospital and I am advised by the Ohio board of administration that neither the leasing nor purchase of the Longview hospital by the state has been consummated.

Specifically answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that there is no authority for the transfer of patients from the Longview hospital to the Lima state hospital.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY DETECTIVES TO POLICE THEIR TOWNSHIP—IT IS SHERIFF'S DUTY—EXPENSES OF SPECIAL ELECTION SMALLER THAN COUNTY ARE PAYABLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY AND ARE NOT A CHARGE AGAINST THE SUBDIVISION IN WHICH ELECTION IS HELD—SEE SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION NO. 705, AUGUST 7, 1915.

Township trustees may not lawfully employ detectives or police officers to police their townships with a view to apprehending and discovering criminals and enforcing police laws and regulations. Such functions are to be discharged by the sheriff and his deputies, and societies may be organized for this purpose under sections 10199 and 10200 et seq., G. C.

The expenses of special elections held in townships, municipal corporations and other subdivisions smaller than the county are payable from the county treasury, and are not a charge against the subdivision in which the election is held.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. C. H. CURTISS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 27th, requesting my opinion on the following questions:

> "First. Can township trustees lawfully employ a detective, and pay him from the township funds, and if so, from what fund, to police their township with a view to apprehend and discover burglars or other crimes committed in such territory?
> "Second. Can this be done by township trustees to enforce the speed laws applicable to motor vehicles, and if so, from what fund should it be paid?"

These questions may be considered and answered together.

The general powers of township trustees are prescribed by statute—sections 3268 to 3298, inclusive, of the General Code. In addition to the powers therein conferred, the trustees have certain other powers under other statutes, such as the road laws.

While section 3244, of the General Code, constitutes each civil township "a body politic and corporate, for the purpose of enjoying and exercising the rights and privileges conferred upon it by law," yet it is clear that the township, as such, is not a municipal corporation in the complete sense and that the officers of townships have only such powers as are expressly conferred upon them by law or result by necessary implication from powers expressly conferred.

I can find no authority of law for the employment of detectives in the policing of townships excepting sections 14688 et seq., of the Appendix to the General Code. I quote these sections in toto:

> "Sec. 14688. That in any county in this state having a population of not less than 130,000, nor more than 130,500, the board of trustees of any township in addition to the powers and duties now conferred upon them by the general statutes, shall constitute a board of officers to be known and designated as the police board of their respective townships.
> "Sec. 14689. The duties of said board shall be to keep the peace in such township, to protect persons, churches, Sunday schools and religious and literary societies from violence, interference or disturbance, and to enforce all laws now enacted or hereafter enacted regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors and to suppress all road houses or houses of ill-fame in said townships.

"Sec. 14690. To enable said board to perform the duties specified in section 2 of this act they are hereby empowered to appoint at any time as occasion may warrant and for such time as they may deem necessary, any person resident of such township or as many as they may deem necessary to act as special police for said board. Said special police shall have the power to make arrests upon view without warrant in all causes mentioned in section two of this act.

"Sec. 14691. Said board shall pay such police for such services as they may perform from the general funds of the township, such amount as they may deem fair and reasonable and also for expenses actually incurred in the performance of such duties upon the filing of an itemized statement of the number of days employed and the amount of expenses incurred.

"Sec. 14692. The jurisdiction of such police board shall extend only to such parts territorially of each township not included within the limits of any corporated town or village in such township."

I believe the foregoing sections were intended to be applicable to Montgomery county. However that may be, they are clearly unconstitutional. The fact that the legisature found it necessary to pass such laws for Montgomery county in order to authorize the employment of special policemen by township trustees supports the conclusion already suggested that in the absence of such statutes, valid and of general operation, township trustees have no such power.

Both of your first two questions must, therefore, be answered in the negative.

It does not follow, however, that rural communities are without police protection. Section 2833 of the General Code, as amended, 103 O. L., 419, makes the sheriff the conservator of the public peace throughout the county, and section 2830 authorizes him to appoint deputies who shall have and exercise the same functions as the sheriff in this particular. In addition to such protection as is thus accorded to rural communities there are special means whereby citizens may organize themselves for the purpose of detecting and preventing crime. I refer you to section 10199 of the General Code, which provides for township societies for the detection and arrest of criminals, and to sections 10200 et seq., a separate and distinct scheme, authorizing the incorporation of associations for the purpose of apprehending and convicting persons accused of crime.

You also inquire as to how the expense of conducting special elections held in townships, school districts or municipalities is to be paid.

There is no provision of law other than those of sections 5052 to 5054 of the General Code, which in any way effects the question as to the payment of expenses of holding elections. These sections provide that all expenses of elections shall, in the first instance, be paid from the county treasury as other county expenses, and as to November elections held in odd numbered years that such expenses shall be charged against the township, city, village or political subdivision in which the election is held; but they fail to make similar provision for the expense of holding special elections.

The conclusion is, therefore, irresistible that the expense of such special elections must be borne by the county.

My predecessor gave an opinion to this effect to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices on February 27, 1912, to be found in the report of the department for that year at pages 200-208 thereof. I agree with this conclusion. In this connection, however, I am informed that the constitutionality of these sections has been questioned. Until, however, they are declared unconstitutional they should, in my opinion, be followed, especially since the effect of a declaration of unconstitutionality would be merely to destroy all means of paying the expenses of conducting elections; no such judgment could have the effect of authorizing the local subdivision to pay the expenses of such election.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE LAW—AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 3—DISCREPANCY BETWEEN PRINTED JOURNALS AND ENROLLED BILL —ENROLLED BILL IS THE LAW.

The report of the joint conference committee, to which was referred amended senate bill No. 3, the civil service act of 1915, as spread upon the official journals of the house and senate, adopted by reference a previous report of the same committee, as printed in the daily printed journals of the house and senate. By consulting such printed journals it is possible to show a discrepancy in a few words between one of the sections of the bill as so printed in the daily printed journals and the same section as embodied in the enrolled bill, which was signed by the respective presiding officers of the two houses and by the governor, and was filed in the office of the secretary of state. Upon the facts thus appearing, It is HELD:

That the information capable of disclosure through the original and printed journals, in the manner described, is not evidence which is admissible to show the contents of the measure, but that under the circumstances the enrolled bill is the best and conclusive evidence of such contents.

The enrolled bill is for all purposes the law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to advise you as to the effect of a discrepancy which has been discovered between certain phraseology in enrolled amended senate bill No. 3, as the same was signed by the presiding officers of the two houses of the general assembly and approved by yourself and by you filed in the office of the secretary of state, on the one hand, and the phraseology of the same context as it appears in the report of the joint conference committee to which said bill was referred, which said report was concurred in by a yea and nay vote by both houses of the general assembly.

The record of amended senate bill No. 3, as it progressed through the two houses of the general assembly, is as follows:

The bill was passed in one form by the senate, in which it originated; in the house it was referred to a committee which reported a substitute bill; the house adopted the report of its committee and passed the bill as so amended. The bill was thereupon returned to the senate, which refused to concur in the house amendments. This action being reported to the house, that body insisted upon its amendments and asked for a conference committee. This was agreed to by the senate, and such committee was appointed. The joint conference committee thus appointed reported to both houses what might be termed a substitute for both the senate and the house measure, the bill, however, still bearing the same number and title as the bill originally introduced in the senate. Such conference substitute was reported in its entirety as an amendment to the bill which had been referred to the committee, and being so reported, was in its entirety (except, of course, the heading and title of the bill) recorded in the respective journals and printed and published in the printed copies thereof. Through a manifest clerical error occurring at this time, the official senate journal failed to conform in the phraseology of one of the sections to the official house journal and the daily printed journals of both houses. It so happened that the report of the committee was printed in the senate journal of the particular date at page 30 thereof, and in the house journal of said date, at page 21 thereof. These printed journals, as has been stated, were in accord.

No action was taken by the house of representatives on this report of the joint conference committee, but the senate subsequently re-committed the bill to said committee. On such re-commitment the conference committee reported the bill to the respective houses, with certain amendments of the amendments recommended by its former report, and with recommendation that the bill with the amendments and the amendments thereof reported by it in its second report be passed. In stating or defining the amendments to the conference substitute bill, the conference committee, in this its second report, referred to its former report as "recorded in the journal of the house on pages 21 to 37, inclusive and in the journal of the senate on pages 30 to 46, inclusive, of that date."

Comparison of the references thus made with the original house and senate journals and the printed copies thereof, respectively shows that the amendments or changes intended to be made and recommended by the conference committee in its second report cannot be fitted into the first report of the committee as recorded on the respective original journals of the two houses; but that the pages mentioned in said second report are evidently the pages of the daily printed house and senate journals of a given date, respectively. In fact, it may be said to be fairly apparent on the face of the second report of the conference committee, which is itself recorded in the journal, that the references therein are to pages of the daily printed journal, and not to pages of the original journal, although the word "recorded" instead of the word "printed" is used.

This final report of the conference committee was adopted and the yeas and nays thereon were recorded in both houses. The bill was then enrolled, and, in accordance with the established practice, the original senate journal was used to compile the enrolled bill, which, as will be observed, had to be made up, so to speak, from the amendments which were spread upon the journal after committee reports and adopted as such. In this way the clerical error which had occurred in making up the original senate journal of the day on which the first conference report was made was carried into the enrolled bill, which corresponds, so far as the discrepancy now under consideration is concerned, with said original senate journal.

The bill, as so enrolled, was signed by the presiding officers of the senate and house, respectively, in the presence of the houses over which they presided, while said houses were in session and capable of transacting business. After being so signed, it was presented to the governor, approved by him and filed in the office of the secretary of state.

These facts, as I interpret them, present the following question of law:

> "Where the report of a joint conference committee, as spread upon the official journals of the house and senate, adopts by reference another conference committee report, as printed in the daily printed journals of the house and senate, by consulting which printed journals it is possible to show that the phraseology of the amendment, incorporated in the bill through the approval of the committee's second report, was in a given form of words and phrases, and there is a variance between the phraseology of the enrolled bill and the phraseology thus susceptible of proof through the journals and the other sources of information referred to therein, is it competent to show, by the journals and other documents, that the bill, as concurred in by the house and senate, differs in several words in one section thereof from the enrolled bill which was signed by the respective presiding officers of the respective houses and by the governor, or is the enrolled bill thus duly authenticated and approved the best and, therefore, the conclusive evidence of the contents of the measure? And if it is possible to show the contents of the measure by the use of the journals under the circumstances named, is it to be concluded that the bill as enrolled, signed and approved is not the bill which passed the house and senate, and that the bill which passed the house and senate was not signed and approved, so that the whole legislative act is a nullity?"

This question involves an interpretation of the constitution and of certain statutes.

The constitutional provisions involved are these:

Article II, section 9:

"Each house shall keep a correct journal of its proceedings, which shall be published. At the desire of any two members, the yeas and nays shall be entered upon the journal; and, on the passage of every bill, in either house, the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays, and entered upon the journal; and no law shall be passed in either house, without the concurrence of a majority of all the members elected thereto."

Article II, section 15:

"Bills may originate in either house; but may be altered, amended or rejected in the other."

Article II, section 16, provides in part that every bill passed by both houses of the general assembly shall be presented to the governor, etc.

Article II, section 17:

"The presiding officer of each house shall sign, publicly in the presence of the house over which he presides, while the same is in session, and capable of transacting business, all bills and joint resolutions passed by the general assembly."

The following statutes may be involved:

Section 66 of the general Code:

"Sec. 66. After passage and before enrollment, five copies of each bill shall be printed on heavy linen ledger paper and from the same type five thousand copies shall be printed on number one white book paper. Of the five copies, one shall be used for enrolling purposes, and of the five thousand copies, thirty-three hundred shall be delivered promptly to the secretary of state, ten shall be delivered to each senator and representative and one to each state department. Such printing shall be done under the supervision of the clerk of the house in which the bills originated.

"Sec. 68. The clerk of each house of the general assembly shall keep a daily journal of the proceedings of such house, which shall be read and corrected in its presence. After the reading and approval of the journal, it shall be attested by the proper clerk, and recorded in books furnished by the secretary of state. The recorded journals shall be deposited with the secretary of state, and be the true and authentic journals. The original daily journal, as kept, corrected, approved, and attested, shall be delivered by the respective clerks to the printer of the journals for his use in printing them. Each clerk shall read and correct the proof sheets of the journal kept by himself, carefully compare them with the record herein provided for, and correct errors therein.

"Sec. 69. No executive message, address, communication of a state officer or board, report of the superintendent or other officers of a state institution or building, petition or memorial, argumentative or voluminous report of a standing or select committee or a joint committee of both houses, special report of an officer or board in reply to a resolution of either house or to a joint resolution, or other voluminous document, except amendments to the constitution or to bills and resolutions, and protests of members of either house against an act or resolution thereof, shall be entered upon the journals or recorded in the books provided for in the preceding sections."

While section 66, General Code, speaks of the use of one of the printed copies of the bill for "enrolling purposes," the constitution does not contain the word "enrollment" or the words "enrolled bill." An examination into numerous decisions shows, however, that it may safely be accepted as the settled law in all jurisdictions that the constitutional provisions respecting the method of passing and authenticating bills are to be interpreted in the light of the common law and parliamentary usage which obtained when the constitution was adopted. "Enrollment" is an established and well understood process, and was so at the time the constitution was adopted.

For present purposes it is sufficient to define the "enrolled bill" as the "bill," or perhaps, the "copy of the bill" which receives the signature of the presiding officers, is submitted to the governor and filed in the office of the secretary of state. It is of itself a record—in fact the only single and attested record of what the bill is.

The journal is also a record, but, primarily at least, it is a record of proceedings and not a record of contents.

In other words, when the constitution requires the signing "of all bills and joint resolutions" by the respective presiding officers and the presentation of "every bill" to the governor, it necessarily requires that some tangible paper writing, capable of signature and delivery, shall be the "bill," and this tangible thing is what is known as the "enrolled bill."

Looking a little further into the constitution and its necessary implications, it appears that the enrolled bill, having the characteristics above defined, is evidence of the result of legislative action, but not necessarily of the fact that there has been legislation.

Section 17 of article II provided that the presiding officer of each house shall sign, etc., all bills passed by the general assembly. The purpose of such signature is well understood to be authentication or attestation, and it is for the benefit not only of the members of the house and senate, respectively, but also of the governor and the public, so that the governor and the public may know by this evidence that what is signed is the bill. But the presiding officers have authority merely to sign such bills as have been "passed by the general assembly," and by their signature they authenticate, not the passage, but the identity and contents of the bill. This is because of the language of section 17 itself, and also because another record is required to be kept which the public may consult to ascertain whether a given bill has been passed, namely, the journal of proceedings which is required to be kept and published by section 9 of the same article. So that any person desirous of ascertaining what the legislature has done would naturally look to the journals to ascertain whether or not a given measure had been passed, and to the enrolled bill filed in the office of the secretary of state for the purpose of ascertaining what the law passed was.

The present instance affords a very apt example of one of the practical reasons for this distinction. If the journal were intended to constitute, and did constitute, evidence of the contents of the law, then those contents could only be ascertained by laborious search through the records of the house and senate and by piecing together different distinct acts or proceedings. Indeed, had the bill not been amended, and had it been passed as originally introduced, there would have been no record on the journal of either house tending to show its contents.

Summing up, then, I think that on the face of the constitution it appears that two records are provided for: one the bill as attested by the signatures of the respective presiding officers; the other the journals of the house and senate; and the one is a record of what the bill is, and the other is a record of the proceedings of the two houses with respect to the passage of the bill and the votes of the members thereon.

This being true, these two records constitute, respectively, the best evidence of the things which they are intended to establish. The enrolled bill, when properly signed, is the best and only evidence of what the law is; the journals are the best and only admissible evidence of the proceedings of the legislature and the votes of the members of each house with respect thereto.

I have made this distinction because it serves to simplify what would otherwise, in view of a great mass of decisions from this and other states relative to the general question of the finality of the enrolled bill as evidence, appear to be a complicated and doubtful question.

Both the text writers and the courts have had occasion to determine what the general rule is in this particular, and, as exemplified by the exhaustive discussion in sections 27 to 53, inclusive of Lewis & Sutherland's Statutory Construction, 2nd Ed., and the cases therein cited, no very satisfactory general rule has been laid down. That is to say, in many of the cases the question has been treated as if it were, in the language of Lewis & Sutherland, section 44, > whether or not "the enrolled act may be impeached by a resort to the journals."

As I see it, the question here is not so broad as that, but is narrowed to this:

> Whether or not the contents of the enrolled act may be impeached by a resort to the journals; or, stating it in another way: when the journals show that an act having a given title has been passed, and when there is an enrolled bill of that title, duly attested by the signatures of the presiding officers and approved by the governor and filed in the office of the secretary of state, is it competent to show that because of verbal discrepancies the act so enrolled, attested, approved and filed was not the act which was passed by the general assembly?

In some of the states, having constitutional provisions not greatly different from those of Ohio, it has been held that the enrolled act is not subject to impeachment at all, and that if such an act be found duly attested and filed in the proper archives it is not competent to show by the journals or otherwise even that such act did not receive the votes of a majority of the members elected to both houses, or otherwise receive the proper legislative assent.

Ohio, however, does not follow this rule, but in this respect our supreme court is in line with the courts which hold that the enrolled bill is not conclusive evidence of the existence of a given law, but that insofar as it is evidence that such a law has been passed it may be impeached by the journals.

This was the decision in Fordyce v. Godman, 20 O. S., 1, although the decision in that case was complicated by the application of another constitutional provision which has no bearing upon the present question. The question in the case was as to whether or not certain claims against the state not authorized by pre-existing law had been allowed by the general assembly. Article II, section 29, of the constitution then, as now, provided that no money should be paid on any claim the subject-matter of which should not have been provided for by pre-existing law, "unless such compensation or claim be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly."

It appeared that the general assembly had apparently passed an act allowing the claims in question; that is, such an act was found properly attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses. The journals of the respective houses, however, showed that the bill did not receive the votes of two-thirds of the members elected to each house.

In the opinion, per Scott, J., appears the following language:

> "Were we to hold otherwise, we would in effect hold that a bill may become a law without receiving the number of votes required by the constitution; that a single presiding officer may by his signature give the force of law to a bill which the journal of the body over which he presides, and which is kept under the supervision of the whole body, shows not to have been voted for by the constitutional number of members. The plain provisions of the constitution are not to be thus nullified, and the evidence which it requires to be kept under the supervision of the collective body, must control, when a question arises as to the due passage of a bill."

This decision was based upon the dictum in Miller & Gibbon v. The State, 3 O. S., 475, in which it was said:

> "No bill can become a law without receiving the number of votes required by the constitution. And if it were found, by an inspection of the legislative journals, that what purports to be a law upon the statute book was not passed by the requisite number of votes, it might possibly be the duty of the courts to treat it as a nullity."

Subsequently, in State ex rel. v. Smith, 44 O. S., 348, the question was raised as to whether or not a bill duly attested as such by the signatures of the presiding officers, and shown by the journals of the two houses to have been passed by the requisite vote in each, could be held ineffective upon tender of proof that four of the members of the senate, whose votes were necesarry to give to the measure the constitutional majority, were not properly elected thereto, but had been fraudulently seated by a minority of the members of the senate in the absence of a quorum of that body.

The court held, in effect, that it would go so far as to examine the journals in order to impeach the enrolled bill, insofar as the latter might import due passage, but that it would not hear parol testimony to impeach the journal itself. In this case, of course, there was no conflict between the journals and the enrolled bill. It was in this connection, then, that Minshall, J., used the language found on page 363 of the opinion:

> "But in many of the states, and without doubt in our own, the journals are to be regarded. They are required by the constitution to be kept. The language is: 'Each house shall keep a correct journal of its proceedings, which shall be published, * * * and on the passage of any bill the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays and entered upon the journal; and no law shall be passed in either house without the concurrence of a majority of all the members elected thereto.' Section 9, article 2. Now in the time of Hobart the journals were not regarded as records; they were 'remembrances for forms of proceedings to the record,' that is to say, the enrolled bill.
> "In this state what appears on the journals affecting the passage of a law has been noticed by this court, but in no instance has attention been given to anything not appearing upon the journals, though it be the omission of a requirement of the constitution."

The reference in the early part of this opinion is to the line of decisions which hold that the enrolled bill cannot be impeached in any respect by reference to the journals.

But while these cases evidence the rule in Ohio to be that recourse will be had to the journals to determine the facts in issue therein, they are not authority for the conclusion that the journal may be consulted for the purpose of impeaching the contents of the enrolled bill, and if, as I believe, the distinction which I have drawn in the earlier part of this opinion is valid, no inference from these decisions can be drawn in support of such a rule.

On the contrary, although there are no cases in Ohio upon the exact point, there are dicta in some of the decided cases which indicate clearly to my mind the trend of judicial opinion. For example, the case of Miller & Gibson v. The State, previously referred to, presented the following facts:

The bill there in question was referred to a committee and the committee reported amendments thereto which consisted of striking out all after the enacting clause, and recommending the passage of a new or substitute bill—exactly, it will be seen, what occurred in connection with amended senate bill No. 3. Because of the apparently radical nature of the amendment it was argued that the substitute bill should have been read three times after the technical amendment was incorporated in the bill, and that it did not affirmatively appear on the face of the journal that more than one reading had been given to the amended bill.

Chief Justice Thurman first arrived at the conclusion that unless the bill had been substantially changed by the amendments offered, the constitution did not require that it be read three times—even assuming that the constitutional requirement for three separate readings is mandatory and cannot be done away with. But having arrived at this point the chief justice dismissed the question as to whether or not the amendment was of a character requiring three separate readings in any view of the constitution, with the following language:

> "Now in the case before us, we have no means of knowing what was the change effected by the amendment in question. Neither bill nor amendment is spread upon the journal, and unless we were to run into the absurdity of receiving parol proof and trying the validity of a statute upon the testimony of witnesses, we could not say that any substantial change was made. For aught that we have before us, or can properly look at, the 'new bill' may have been, with the exception of a single word, and that not material, identical with the matter stricken out.
> "Nor is it to be forgotten that every reasonable intendment is to be made in favor of the proceedings of the legislature. It is not to be presumed that the assembly, or either house of it, has violated the constitution; when, therefore, it appears by the journals that a bill was amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting a 'new bill,' so called, and but one reading after the amendment is recorded, it cannot be presumed that the matter inserted was upon a different subject from that stricken out, especially when the matter inserted is consistent with the title borne by the bill before the amendment. This is the more obvious and reasonable since the constitution provides that, 'No bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title.'
> "On the whole, we find nothing in the journal that would warrant us in holding that the amendment in question was of a character requiring it to be read three times."

From this it is quite apparent that at that time it was not the parliamentary practice to spread the phraseology of committee amendments on the journal, and it may be remarked that this is the most natural interpretation of the constitution itself, standing alone; so that unless section 68 of the General Code requires a different rule the contents of amendments are not a part of the journal. At any rate, it is fair to assume that within the intendment of the constitution itself the journal is not to be a record of the phraseology of amendments, but only of the action or votes thereon.

Again, in State v. Kiesewetter, 45 O. S., 254, the court considered for the first and only time the effect of section 17 of article II, requiring the signatures of the presiding officers. In holding that a bill not so signed did not become a law, notwithstanding the fact that the journals showed the passage of such a bill and the copies of the bills filed in the state library showed the contents thereof, the court, per Spear, J., says (at page 258):

> "It is entirely clear that section 17 cannot be treated as a mere guide to the action of the general assembly in order to the more full enlightenment of the members in the performance of their duties, or as a check upon them, as the signing of a bill by the presiding officer in no substantial way affects the action of the members, or relates to the passage of the bill through either body. The members, as such, have performed every duty regarding a bill prior to the time when the duty of signing by the presiding officers may be performed. This signing in open session may, incidentally, serve to fix the attention of members to the bill signed, but it has a much more important purpose. It authenticates a bill, and affords a sure means of identification. No official copy is required of a bill introduced, nor is it required to be copied on the journal, and a legal standard of comparison is wanting. The signatures of the presiding officers, therefore, furnish the evidence that that which the journals show, by title and number, passed the general assembly, is this identical measure. The act thus authenticated is to be given the force of law, is to be treated as such, and to prove itself upon inspection; and this verification by the officers designated by the constitution is the conclusive evidence to the secretary of state that the act so signed is a law, and entitled to be filed as such in the office of that officer, and, under his direction to be published, duly certified by him, for the information and guidance of all the people of the state. The signing is, therefore, for the benefit of the people in their examination to ascertain what is, and what is not law. It is apparent that the reasoning which led this court to declare section 16 to be directory, does not apply to section 17, and that the cases referred to are not authority in the case at bar.

"Were there a provision requiring that all bills introduced should be spread at length upon the journal, and were this bill to be found copied on the journal of either house, it is probable, that, following former holdings of this court, resort might be had to that mode of identification. But no such record exists, and reliance upon title, number, and designation, for identification of contests, would, we think, be inadmissible."

It will be observed that Judge Spear says that the journals can be consulted to show contents only where "there is a provision requiring that all bills shall be spread at length upon the journals" and where a given bill can be found so copied on the journal.

The inference at least is that the mere fact that part or all of the provisions of a given bill might appear on the journal would not be sufficient to make the journal evidence of the contents of the bill unless such record was required to be kept. In other words, the mere fact that the journal may afford information as to what the contents of a bill are does not make the journal the best evidence of such contents, unless the journal is required to contain such information.

As I have stated, the contents of bills are not required to be spread upon the journals. In fact, there is very striking evidence to the contrary, in that in section 1 of article XVI, as originally adopted in 1851 (which it is, of course, fair to read in connection with the sections under examination, even though the same has been since amended) it is distinctly provided as to proposed amendments to the constitution that > "If the same shall be agreed to by three-fifths of the members elected to each house, such proposed amendments shall be entered on the journals, with the yeas and nays, and shall be published, etc."

I am of the opinion in view of the apt comparison which I have suggested that the contents of bills or even those of amendments to bills, are not required in a constitutional sense at least to appear upon the journals. Therefore, if in a given case what purports to be the contents of a given bill, or amendment, do appear upon the journal, such entries in the journal would not be the best evidence of such contents by which the enrolled bill, duly authenticated, approved and filed in the office of the secretary of state, which is itself intended to be evidence of the contents, may be impeached.

Nor is the above conclusion, in my opinion, in any way altered by the somewhat equivocal provision of section 69 of the General Code. Although this section in terms states that no voluminous report shall be entered upon the journals, "except amendments to the constitution or to bills and resolutions," this provision cannot be regarded as having more than permissive effect. In fact, insofar as it is a regulation for the keeping of the journal in addition to those specifically provided for in the constitution itself, it is a mere rule by which neither house of any session of the general assembly is bound, if it chooses to adopt a different rule; for section 8 of article II of the constitution, provides that

> "Each house, except as otherwise provided in this constitution, shall choose its own officers, may determine its own rules of procedure, punish its members for disorderly conduct and * * * expel a member."

But however this may be, I do not think that it is competent for the legislature by law to change the character and function of the two records required to be kept by the constitution itself. If in the absence of section 69 of the General Code, the journal cannot be used to impeach the enrolled bill in the respect under consideration, then I do not think that section 69 of the General Code, by merely providing that the journal may contain matter which the constitution does not require it to contain, can reverse the rule and make the journal evidence of a higher character than the enrolled bill.

I have examined many cases from other states, in addition to the Ohio cases above cited and discussed. Numerous authorities, directly in point, will be found to sustain the position which I have taken. At the same time it must be admitted that other authorities, equally as directly in point, may be found opposed to this contention. But the weight of authority, in my judgment, is in accord with the view which I have expressed, and, as stated in Lewis & Sutherland's Statutory Construction, section 44, the current of judicial decision in recent years is strongly in this direction.

The supreme court of the United States is committed to this view under the federal constitution, which requires, in section 5 of article I, that "each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may, in their judgment, require secrecy * * *"; but does not require the authentication of laws by the signatures of the presiding officers of the respective houses of congress.

In Field v. Clark, 143 U. S., 649, and in the opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan (at page 671) is found the following significant language:

> "In regard to certain matters, the constitution expressly requires that they shall be entered on the journal. To what extent the validity of legislative action may be affected by the failure to have those matters entered on the journal, we need not inquire. No such question is presented for determination. But it is clear that, in respect to the particular mode in which, or with what fullness, shall be kept the proceedings of either house relating to matters not expressly required to be entered on the journals; whether bills, orders, resolutions, reports, and amendments shall be entered at large on the journal, or only referred to and designated by their titles or by numbers; these and like matters were left to the discretion of the respective houses of congress. Nor does any clause of that instrument, either expressly or by necessary implication, prescribe the mode in which the fact of the original passage of a bill by the house of representatives and the senate shall be authenticated, or preclude congress from adopting any mode to that end which its wisdom suggests. Although the constitution does not expressly require bills that have passed congress to be attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses, usage, the orderly conduct of legislative proceedings, and the rules under which the two bodies have acted since the organization of the government, require that mode of authentication.

"The signing by the speaker of the house of representatives, and, by the president of the senate, in open session, of an enrolled bill, is an official attestation by the two houses of such bill as one that has passed congress. It is a declaration by the two houses, through their presiding officers, to the president, that a bill, thus attested, has received, in due form, the sanction of the legislative branch of the government, and that it is delivered to him in obedience to the constitutional requirement that all bills which pass congress shall be presented to him. And when a bill thus attested, receives his approval, and is deposited in the public archives, its authentication as a bill that has passed congress should be deemed complete and unimpeachable. As the president has no authority to approve a bill not passed by congress, an enrolled act in the custody of the secretary of state, and having the official attestations of the speaker of the house of representatives, of the president of the senate, and of the president of the United States, carries, on its face a solemn assurance by the legislative and executive departments of the government, charged, respectively, with the duty of enacting and executing the laws, that it was passed by congress. The respect due to coequal and independent departments requires the judicial department to act upon that assurance, and to accept, as having passed congress, all bills authenticated in the manner stated: leaving the courts to determine, when the question properly arises, whether the act, so authenticated, is in conformity with the constitution.

"It is admitted that an enrolled act, thus authenticated, is sufficient evidence of itself—nothing to the contrary appearing upon its face—that it passed congress. But the contention is, that it cannot be regarded as a law of the United States if the journal of either house fails to show that it passed in the precise form in which it was signed by the presiding officers of the two houses, and approved by the president. It is said that, under any other view, it becomes possible for the speaker of the house of representatives and the president of the senate to impose upon the people as a law a bill that was never passed by congress. But this possibility is too remote to be seriously considered in the present inquiry. It suggests a deliberate conspiracy to which the presiding officers, the committees on enrolled bills and the clerks of the two houses must necessarily be parties, all acting with a common purpose to defeat an expression of the popular will in the mode prescribed by the constitution. Judicial action based upon such a suggestion is forbidden by the respect due to a co-ordinate branch of the government. The evils that may result from the recognition of the principle that an enrolled act, in the custody of the secretary of state, attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses of congress, and the approval of the president, is conclusive evidence that it was passed by congress, according to the forms of the constitution, would be far less than those that would certainly result from a rule making the validity of congressional enactments depend upon the manner in which the journals of the respective houses are kept by the subordinate officers charged with the duty of keeping them."

The court in this case held that although the authenticated and enrolled bill, as signed by the president, omitted a section, which was shown by the reports of the conference committee to have been incorporated in the original bill as passed by both houses of congress, and although such conference committee reports were shown on the journal, such facts could not be considered to nullify the law itself nor to impeach the authenticity of its contents as enrolled.

This case was followed in Lyons v. Woods, 153 U. S., 649; and Harwood v. Wentworth, 162 U. S., 547.

Of course, if an enrolled bill, attested by a mode not required by the constitution, imports verity as against conflicting information which may be obtained from the journals, then a fortiori, when the constitution requires, as does our constitution in article II, section 17 thereof, that all bills be signed in the presence of the respective houses by the presiding officer thereof, etc., the same result follows.

In the particular case under consideration the official journals themselves are in disagreement. It is only by resorting to indirect evidence depending upon the identity of certain pages of the daily printed journal with the pages referred to in the second conference committee report that we are able to arrive at the conclusion that the bill as passed by the two houses was not verbally identical with the bill as enrolled, signed and approved. Being of opinion, however, that even the most direct evidence appearing on the face of the journal would not be competent to impeach the contents of the enrolled bill, I have disregarded this feature of the present situation.

It is also to be remarked that the verbal change in the bill is apparantly a slight one, affecting but two or three words in one of the sections and producing no very material change in the substantial meaning thereof. If the case were an aggravated one, and if the discrepancy vitally affected the application of the whole law, perhaps a different result would follow; but as it is, I feel that should the actual facts be submitted to an Ohio court the decision would sustain the enrolled law, both as to validity and as to contents.

Thus far in the opinion I have treated of the question which is presented from the standpoint of the public exclusively. There is, however, another point of view: While the authentication required by section 17 of article II of the constitution is perhaps primarily for the benefit of the public, yet, in a sense, it is also for the benefit of the members of the respective houses of the general assembly. That is to say, the presiding officers are not merely required to sign the laws, but also to sign them in the presence of the houses over which they respectively preside, while the latter are in session and capable of doing business. I think that in a very real sense these requirements make the attestations of the officers the acts of the respective houses as a whole. The requirement that the signatures be attached in the presence of the houses, while the latter are in session and capable of doing business, can be for no other purpose than to offer an opportunity to any member to examine the enrolled bill which is presented to the presiding officer for signature and to enter timely objection thereto, even after the committee on enrollment has reported.

When, therefore, an enrolled bill is signed after a favorable report of the committee on enrollment, and with the acquiescence of the members of the house or senate, while in session and capable of doing business, the signature is binding upon the entire house and becomes its act. The presiding officers sign as agents of the houses over which they preside, and their action in compliance with article II, section 17, is the final and conclusive certification as to the identity and contents of the bill.

The necessity and wisdom of such a rule is well illustrated by the present case. The original journals of the two houses differ on a matter that is not required by the constitution to be recorded in the journals. One agrees with the wording of the bill, which under the constitution must be and had been duly signed by the presiding officers of each house, while the other differs from it. It certainly cannot be said that the one journal which differs from the signed bill is better evidence of the contents of the bill than the other journal which agrees with it.

Even if it were true that the journals show that each house, at a time prior to the signing of the bill by the respective presiding officers, voted on a different wording, it would not alter the case. When the journals show that a bill of a certain number or designation received the constitutional majority, the bill itself, as signed by the presiding officers of each house while the respective houses were in session capable of transacting business, is the only evidence that may be looked to to determine the final contents of the bill.

For the reasons above stated, I am of the opinion that amended senate bill No. 3, as enrolled, signed by the presiding officers of the house and senate, approved by yourself as governor, and by you filed in the office of the secretary of state, is the law of the state, and that such enrolled bill is conclusive evidence of the phraseology of the legislative act which it represents.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JOINT CITY AND COUNTY WORKHOUSE—MUSKINGUM COUNTY MUST CONTRIBUTE TO MAINTENANCE OF SAME—NO PROVISION OF LAW TO RELIEVE A COUNTY FROM SUCH MAINTENANCE.

There is no provision of law to relieve Muskingum county from its obligation to contribute to the maintenance of the joint city and county workhouse instituted under the provisions of sections 14548, et seq., the appendix to the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge your request for an opinion, dated July 28th, which is as follows:

> "In preparing the budget for the workhouse of Zanesville, Ohio, we have investigated that last year the county of Muskingum appropriated $3,500.00. From January 4th up until July 1st of this year they collected $1,240.00 in fines that should have been paid to the clerk of the court and used. They figure that it will cost about $5,000.00 in round numbers to run the workhouse.
> "Personally I feel as though if there is any way by which we could turn this workhouse over to the city of Zanesville and relieve the commissioners from any responsibility or levy, we could better pay for all inmates that the county sends to the institution.
> "Under section 14548 of the General Code up to and including 14570 which gives the history of this workhouse, I wish you would give me the law in which we could refuse to make a levy for the workhouse and turn the same over to the city of Zanesville. If there is any way by which we can refuse to make a levy, we surely will do it."

The joint workhouse conducted by the city of Zanesville and the county of Muskingum, which is authorized under the provisions of sections 14548, et seq., of the appendix to the General Code, is an established institution and in connection with the maintenance of the same permit me to invite your attention to the provisions of section 14562 of the appendix to the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Section 14562. The costs of maintaining such joint city and county workhouse over and above the proceeds arising from the sale of the products thereof, shall be borne by such city and county jointly, and such expenses shall be paid quarterly by such city and county out of the respective treasuries thereof, upon the certificate of the secretary of such joint city and county workhouse on the approval of the council of such city, and the commissioners of such county. And the board of county commissioners of any county having such joint city and county workhouse, are hereby authorized and required to levy upon the general tax duplicate of the county outside of the corporate limits of such city, such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding five-tenths of one mill on the dollar valuation; and the city council of such city are hereby authorized and required to levy upon the general tax duplicate of such city, such sum as may be necessary, but not exceeding one mill on the dollar valuation for the aforesaid maintenance; and the board of such joint city and county workhouse directors, the city council of such city and the county commissioners of such county, in ascertaining and determining, at the end of each quarter the amount to be paid to such board to meet any deficiency in the products of such joint workhouse to maintain the same, shall take into account and be governed by the number of convicts furnished by such city and such county, the number of days' labor performed by the convicts from each, the value of such labor, and the relative costs and expenses of taking care of, managing, and disciplining the convicts of each, and giving to such city and county each full credit for the value of the products of such workhouse produced by the labor, skill and diligence of the convicts from each, and charge to the account of each (city and county) the costs to such institution of working, managing, maintaining, taking care of, and disciplining its convicts, and make assessments upon such city and county for the maintenance of such institution accordingly."

Under the provisions of the section quoted above it is made the duty of the board of county commissioners and the city council to levy upon the general tax duplicate of the county outside of the corporate limits of such city and upon the general tax duplicate of such city such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding in the case of the county five-tenths of one mill on the dollar valuation, and in the case of the city not exceeding one mill on the dollar valuation for the maintenance of the joint city and county workhouse.

It is my opinion, therefore, that, having adopted the policy of operating a joint city and county workhouse under the provisions of the special act embraced in sections 14548 to 14570, inclusive, of the General Code, the county is without authority to abandon the project and must adhere to and carry out the policy adopted, at least until relieved by some subsequent legislation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ORDER OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH FOR INSTALLATION OF NEW WATER PURIFICATION PLANT FOR CAMBRIDGE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed herewith find amended order of the state board of health relative to the installation of a new water supply or a water purification plant for the city of Cambridge.

I have examined the order, which is issued under section 1254 of the General Code of Ohio, find the same regular and it is my opinion that it should be approved.

Having approved the same under the provisions of section 1254 of the General Code, I am transmitting the order to you for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ORDER OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH RELATIVE TO POLLUTION OF CUYAHOGA RIVER BY SEWAGE FROM CLEVELAND, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed herewith find amended order of the state board of health relative to the pollution of the Cuyahoga river by sewage and other wastes from the city of Celeveland.

I have examined the order, which is issued under section 1251 of the General Code of Ohio, find the same regular and it is my opinion that it should be approved.

Having approved the same under the provisions of section 1251 of the General Code, I am transmitting the order to you for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION — ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION FOR SERVICES IN CONDUCTING PRIMARY ELECTION —PART OF SERVICE PERFORMED BY NEW AND OLD MEMBERS —COMPENSATION SHOULD BE APPORTIONED—HOW DIVISION SHOULD BE MADE.

Section 4990, G. C., provides for additional compensation to deputy state supervisors of elections for services in conducting a primary election, and where a member who has performed a part of such services and for any reason ceases to be such officer before the services are completed, such compensation should be apportioned between such member and his successor, but since there is no authority in the county auditor, or the board of elections to make such apportionment, the warrant for the payment of such compensation should be withheld until the persons entitled thereto agree as to the division thereof or the same is otherwise determined according to law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON. C. A. WILMOT, Prosecuting Attorney, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of July 14, 1915, in which you inquire:

> "Is a deputy state supervisor of elections, whose term expired on August 3, 1914, entitled to compensation for conducting the primary election which was held August 11, 1914, and if so in what amount?"

Your communication states that the total compensation to which each of the several deputy state supervisors of elections of Geauga county, under the provisions of section 4990, G. C., is entitled, is $38.00; that the term of F. expired on August 3, 1914, and that the primary election to which you refer was held on August 11, 1914; that on August 3, 1914, F. was succeeded by W. who had theretofore been duly appointed and qualified, and you inquire whether F. is entitled to any portion of such $38.00 and if so how much.

Section 4990, G. C., to which you refer, a consideration of which is involved in answering your inquiry, provides as follows:

> "For their services in conducting primary elections, members of boards of deputy state supervisors shall each receive for his services the sum of two dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his county, and judges and clerks of election shall receive the same compensation as is provided by law for such officers at general elections."

It will be here noted that the compensation provided is for "services in conducting primary elections and that no compensation is provided for any other service. A fixed and determinate sum is in every instance provided for the whole service and no authority rests in any officer, agent or representative of the public to make any division of the same. No authority therefor will be found nor any machinery provided for making any division or apportionment of the sum total of compensation allowed for this service, nor is any basis upon which such apportionment may be made prescribed.

It will be further noted that under the provisions of 4991, G. C., all expenses of primary elections, including compensation of members and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors of elections shall be paid in the manner provided by law for the payment of similar expenses of general elections.

The payment of similar expense of general elections to that here under consideration is provided for by section 4822, G. C., as follows:

> "Each deputy state supervisor shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of four dollars for each election precinct in his respective county. The compensation so allowed such officers during any year shall be determined by the number of precincts in such county at the November election of the next preceding year. The compensation paid to each of such deputy state supervisors under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars each year and the compensation paid to the clerk shall in no case be less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars each year. Such compensation shall be paid quarterly from the general revenue fund of the county upon vouchers of the board, made and certified by the chief deputy and the clerk thereof. Upon presentation of any such voucher, the county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the county treasurer for the amount thereof, and the treasurer shall pay it."

From this it is conclusive that the compensation of the deputy state supervisors of elections for conducting a primary on August 11, 1914, was not payable until the end of the quarter next succeeding such election and after F. ceased to be a member of the board, yet it is required that the same be paid to "each such deputy state supervisor." Not some definite or indefinite portion of, but the whole compensation is required to be paid to the member of the board of deputy state supervisors.

It appears from your statement that of necessity a part of the service of conducting the primary election on August 11, 1914, was rendered by F. prior to August 3rd, and that the remainder of such service required to be performed after August 3rd was lawfully performed by W., the compensation for all of which service was payable only at the end of the quarter in which the primary was held, and it is solely upon these facts that this opinion is based since a different state of fact is conceivable to which a different rule might apply.

It will be borne in mind that in an opinion of this department under date of February 10, 1915, it was held that a person who attempts to hold over after the expiration of the term for which he was appointed as deputy state supervisor of elections and after the appointment and qualification of his successor, is entitled to no compensation for services rendered after the beginning of the term of such successor, in this particular instance August 3, 1914.

In an opinion of my predecessor Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, under date of November 2, 1911, found at page 1423 of the report of the attorney general for that year, it is held that where a deputy state supervisor of elections resigns after having performed a part of the services of holding a primary election and before such services are completed, that such member and his successor should, as a matter of law and justice, equitably divide the compensation.

In the absence of power or authority of the board of elections or the county auditor, under the facts set forth by you, to make apportionment of the compensation allowable for the services of members of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, I am of opinion and therefore advise that the county auditor should withhold his warrant in this particular case until F. and W. agree as to its division, or that matter is otherwise lawfully determined.

If the holder of the voucher should mandamus the auditor, the auditor should implead the other party and ask the court's direction as to the division of the funds, which division will depend upon the amount of work done by each as shown by the evidence.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BLIND RELIEF LAWS—RELIEF CAN ONLY BE GRANTED BY COUNTY CHARGED WITH SUPPORT OF APPLICANT UNDER POOR LAWS OF STATE—WHEN APPLICANT MOVES INTO ANOTHER COUNTY, THIS DOES NOT RELIEVE THE COUNTY WHERE RESIDENCE HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED OF SUCH "PUBLIC CHARGE."

Relief under the blind relief laws, sections 2962 to 2970, inclusive, of the General Code, can only be granted by the county charged with the support of the applicant under the poor laws of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

HON JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 3, 1915, requesting my opinion as well as your letter of July 12, 1915, containing additional facts asked for by me, both received. These letter are as follows:

"July 3, 1915.

"Henry J. Smith, a blind pensioner of Crawford county up until April 1, 1915, has made application in this county for blind relief. Upon investigation we find that he has been residing here with one of his children and while drawing relief, as hereinbefore stated, from Crawford county.

"Upon advice of this office, Smith's application has been refused on the ground that by reason of his age and physical condition, he being past eighty years of age and blind, and wholly unable to support himself, he has obtained, and can obtain, no residence in this county for the purpose of blind relief.

"Under section 3477 of the General Code, Smith unquestionably is unable to obtain a legal settlement in this county for the purpose of poor relief, and as the blind relief provided by law shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature, we hold that Smith cannot acquire a residence or legal settlement in this county for the purpose of obtaining blind relief. He is admittedly unable to support himself, and has been in such condition for several years, and it further appears that his children are also unable to make proper provision for him, and unless granted blind relief, he will become a charge upon the public, or upon those not required by law to support him.

"Will you not kindly give us your opinion as to the right of Smith to obtain blind relief in this county under the circumstances set forth, and oblige?"

"July 12, 1915.

"Supplementing my letter to you of July 3, 1915, on question of blind relief for one Henry J. Smith, I beg leave to advise that Mr. Smith was eighty years of age in November, last; that he became blind while a resident of Cranberry township, Crawford county, Ohio, during the winter of 1899, or the spring of 1900. He was born and has always lived in Ohio, and it appears that he had been living with a daughter at the time he became blind, and that he resided with her until January of 1914, when he came to Toledo to visit a son. He returned to Crawford county on or about the first of April, 1914, for the purpose of making his application for blind relief for the coming year. His daughter becoming ill and unable longer to take care of him, he returned to Toledo shortly after the first of April, 1914, and has since resided here with his son."

The sections of the General Code applicable to your question are as follows:

"Sec. 2965. Any person of either sex who, by reason of loss of eyesight, is unable to provide himself with the necessities of life, who has not sufficient means of his own to maintain himself, and who, unless relieved as authorized by these provisions would become a charge upon the public or upon those not required by law to support him, shall be deemed a needy blind person.

"Sec. 2966. In order to receive relief under those provisions a needy blind person must become blind while a resident of this state, and shall be a resident of the county for one year.

"Sec. 2967. (103 O. L., 60.) At least ten days prior to action on any claim for relief hereunder, the person claiming shall file with the board of county commissioners a duly verified statement of the facts bringing him within these provisions. The list of claims shall be filed in a book kept for that purpose in the order of filing, which record shall be open to the public. No certificate of qualification of drawing money hereunder shall be granted until the board of county commissioners shall be satisfied from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county, one of whom shall be a registered physician, that they know the applicant to be blind and that he has the residential qualifications to entitle him to the relief asked. Such evidence shall be in writing, subscribed to by such witnesses, and be subject to the right of cross examination by the board of county commissioners or other person. If the board of county commissioners be satisfied upon such testimony that the applicant is entitled to relief hereunder, said board shall issue an order therefor in such sum as said board finds needed, not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, to be paid quarterly from the funds herein provided on the warrant of the county auditor, and such relief shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature."

From these sections it will be seen that the requirements for the allowance of blind relief therefore may be stated as follows:

"1. Blindness.
"2. Residence in the state at the time the blindness occurred.
"3. Residence in the county for one year.
"4. Inability by reason of such blindness to support himself.
"5. Insufficient means of his own to support himself.

"6. Inability of those charged by law to support him to do so.
"7. That the applicant will become a charge upon the public unless granted such relief."

An analysis of the sections of the General Code above quoted will show that the facts pertaining to the blindness and to the residence are jurisdictional and must be shown before any discretion as to the granting of relief may be exercised by the commissioners; and in accordance with the provisions of section 2967, G. C., supra, must be shown

"from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county, one of whom shall be a registered physician."

From your letter it is apparent that your difficulty is to determine whether or not the residential qualifications of this applicant are such as to entitle him to the relief from Lucas county.

While the term "resident" is apparently used in these sections in an unlimited and unqualified manner and apparently without any of the limitations thrown around the obtaining of a "legal settlement" under the laws providing for support of the poor, yet from the provisions of the sections above quoted, the history of the legislation providing for relief of needy blind persons, together with the interpretation placed upon the legislation by the supreme court make it necessary to interpret this law in the light of other provisions of the General Code with reference to the support of the poor.

The particular provisions of the blind relief law, to which I refer are:

"And who, unless relieved as authorized by these provisions, would become a charge upon the public or upon those not required by law to support him;"

and

"such relief shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature."

The history and interpretation of the legislation above noted may be briefly stated as follows:

The legislature of the state on April 25, 1904, passed an act entitled "An act to provide relief for worthy blind" (see 97 O. L., 392), which provided that all male blind persons over the age of twenty-one years and all female blind persons over the age of eighteen years, who had been residents of the state for five years and of the county for one year, and had no property or means with which to support themselves, should be entitled to and receive not more than twenty-five dollars ($25.00) per capita, quarterly, from the county treasury. The supreme court, in the case of Auditor of Lucas County v. State, 75 O. S., 114, held this act to be unconstitutional for the reason that it required the expenditure for a private purpose of public funds raised by taxation. The legislature then enacted the provisions above quoted.

The supreme court in the case of State ex rel. Grant v. Sayre, Auditor, 89 O. S., 351, held this latter act to be constitutional upon the ground that it was for the relief of a certain class of the poor and therefore a valid legislative enactment. The following is quoted from the opinion:

"In the law, which is included in sections 2962 to 2969, General Code, whose validity is here in question, the creation of a blind relief commission is provided for, whose powers have, by amendment, passed February 18, 1913, been conferred upon the commissioners of the several counties. Under this law any person of either sex, who, by reason of loss of eyesight, is unable to provide himself with the necessities of life, who has not sufficient means of his own to maintain himself, and who, unless relieved as authorized by these provisions, would become a charge upon the public or upon those not required by law to support him, is entitled to its benefit, if he has become blind while a resident of the state and has been a resident of the county for one year. The law further provides for the surgical removal of blindness, where it is possible. Section 2967 provides that if the commission is satisfied upon testimony that the applicant is entitled to relief thereunder it shall issue an order therefor, in such sum as it finds needed, not to exeecd $150 per annum, and 'such relief shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature.'

"Section 2968 provides that the commissioners may at any time during the year inquire into the qualifications, examine as to the disability and needs of any person theretofore placed on such blind list, and increase or decrease the amount within the limits prescribed; and in case the board finds that any person is not qualified to draw further relief, or that such disability has been removed, in whole or in part, then the board may, at any time thereafter during such year, modify or change the amount theretofore found necessary for such relief, or remove such person from the list of those qualified to draw any money for relief. It will, therefore, be seen that this statute seems to have been drawn for the purpose of carefully avoiding the defects in the statute of 1904 pointed out by the court in Lucas County v. State, supra. The relief provided for in the later statute is limited to those who are, or will become, charges upon the public or upon those not required by law to support them, and is the only public relief that may be given to them. The provision for surgical removal of blindness, where possible, is one to prevent the person from becoming such charge. The entire matter is left to the continuing and imperative supervision of the board of county commissioners. Every safeguard has been adopted to secure the application of the money to the support of the individual and to prevent him from becoming a public charge. It is not an indeterminate annuity, unlimited in time or uncertain in its application.

"The express object, and the practical provision, of the enactment is to furnish relief to the blind who are poor and needy, and to avoid the public burden.

"It is not questioned that the relief of the poor is a proper public purpose."

It therefore becomes apparent that the intention of the legislature, in the enactment of the blind relief law, was to provide for the blind poor of the state in a different manner and under different qualifications from those who were poor but not blind. That this law is for the relief of the poor is apparent from the fact that under section 2965, supra, a person must have all of the qualifications necessary to entitle him to relief under the poor laws of the state, except those peculiar qualifications essential to acquiring a "legal settlement" in the county.

Much care is exhibited in the poor relief laws to place the burden of the support of the poor upon the proper county, and a pauper cannot transfer the liability for his support from one county to another by moving to the other county, because of the provisions of section 3482, G. C., which are as follows:

"When it has been so ascertained that a person requiring relief has a legal settlement in some other county of the state, such trustees or officers shall immediately notify the infirmary directors of the county in which the person is found, who, if his health permits, shall immediately remove the person to the infirmary of the county of his legal settlement. If such person refuses to be removed, on the complaint being made by one of the infirmary directors, the probate judge of the county in which the person is found shall issue a warrant for such removal, and the county wherein the legal settlement of the person is, shall pay all expenses of such removal and the necessary charges for relief and in case of death the expense of burial if a written notice is given the infirmary directors thereof within twenty days after such legal settlement has been ascertained."

It seems quite clear that the legislature in providing a different qualification as to residence for a needy blind person than that required for other needy persons, did not intend to change the existing laws as to the county which should bear the burden of the support. This conclusion follows from the provisions of the blind relief law iself, and the decision of the court in the case of State ex rel. Grant v. Sayre, Auditor, supra, showing as they do the close relation existing between blind relief and poor relief. It follows, therefore, if this applicant is not and could not become a public charge upon Lucas county, then Lucas county, under the provisions of section 2966, supra, would have no authority to grant him blind relief. On the other hand, to be entitled to blind relief he must be a pauper, and therefore a charge upon the county in which he has a legal settlement, which said county must discharge its duty to support him by granting him blind relief. His living in Lucas county does not relieve Crawford county of the duty to support him, and that county should continue to furnish him the relief even if he may now live in another county. If Crawford county fails to furnish the relief and he thereby becomes a public charge, Lucas county can only follow the provisions of section 3482, supra, and send him back to Crawford county.

I am therefore of the opinion that under the facts stated by you the applicant, Henry J. Smith, is not eligible to be given relief, under the blind relief law, by Lucas county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 5, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 22, 1915, you requested my written opinion on certain questions which I shall take up in the order submitted:

> "(1) The ordinances of the city of Steubenville, Ohio, provide that upon conviction the defendant shall be fined a certain amount therein stated and the costs of prosecution.
> "QUERY. Under these provisions, upon conviction or a plea of guilty, is it obligatory upon the mayor to assess a fine within the provisions of the ordinance which has been violated and the costs of prosecution, or may he use his discretion in the matter?
> "Note. In 852 cases the following entry appears on the docket: 'Plead guilty; nothing paid; released.'
> "There is nothing on the docket to indicate that any fine or costs were assessed in the above cases."

The jurisdiction of the mayor of a city in the trial of a violation of the ordinances and of the statutes of Ohio is found in sections 4527, et seq., of the General Code. He is given jurisdiction under section 4527 for the violation of the ordinances of the municipality; under section 4528 for the violation of the statutes relative to misdemeanors, and under section 4534 is made an examining court in felonies. Section 4531 provides that if the charge is the violation of an ordinance for which imprisonment is a part of the punishment, the case shall be tried in the same manner as misdemeanors are tried in the court of common pleas on indictment.

There is a distinction made in some cases between the violation of an ordinance and the violation of the statutes of Ohio, the former being considered more in the nature of a quasi criminal prosecution; but I do not think that it is necessary to consider this distinction, since the cases themselves do not carry out the distinction in full, but consider that both are criminal prosecutions.

Practically all of the ordinances of the city of Steubenville which I have examined provide that upon conviction the offender shall be fined and, in certain instances, shall be imprisoned.

In your question you state that in 852 cases the only entry that appears on the docket as to each such case is that the defendant pleaded guilty; that nothing was paid and that he was released. The ordinances of the city, as before stated, provided that upon conviction the defendant shall be fined or imprisoned. Therefore a mere entry on the docket that he was released does not carry out the provision of the ordinance so that therefore the "release" of the defendant could not be considered as a final judgment in the matter. The most that could be said of such an action on the part of the mayor was that he determined that the judgment against the defendant should be indefinitely postponed, and the question therefore arises as to whether or not in Ohio a court may suspend the pronouncement of a sentence, or, in other words, suspend rendering judgment; or whether it is necessary that the court proceed upon conviction or a plea of guilty to pronounce the sentence, although such court may, under the decisions in this state, (see Lee v. State, 32 O. S., 113; Weber v. State, 58 O. S., 616; Ex Parte Lee, 16 O. D. [n. p.] 259; Shaefer v. State, 7 O. C. C. [n. s.] 292), after pronouncing such sentence suspend the execution thereof.

> "After the verdict has been accepted and recorded, and a motion in arrest or for a new trial overruled, it becomes the duty of the court to render judgment and pronounce sentence. Clark's criminal procedure, page 494.
> "Upon a conviction or plea of guilty, it is the duty of the court to sentence the accused and pronounce judgment at that time, unless, upon motion for a new trial, in arrest of judgment or for other cause, the case is continued for further adjudication. The court cannot suspend sentence indefinitely. Hughes criminal law, section 2569."

The courts of states other than Ohio are in disagreement as to whether or not a court can indefinitely suspend the pronouncing of a judgment. There is no authority that I have been able to find in Ohio on the subject.

While it is true that the supreme court in this state has held in the case of Weber v. State "that the power to stay the execution of a sentence, in whole or in part, in a criminal case, is inherent in every court having final jurisdiction in such cases, unless otherwise provided by statute," nevertheless in view of the mandatory provisions of the statutes defining crimes and of the ordinances of the city of Steubenville that upon conviction the defendant shall be fined or imprisoned, I am of the opinion that it is the duty of the court to proceed to pronounce judgment immediately upon a plea of guilty or upon a conviction unless the case be continued for further adjudication upon motion for a new trial, in arrest of judgment or for other cause.

Specifically answering your question I am therefore of the opinion that upon conviction or a plea of guilty it is obligatory upon the mayor to pronounce sentence, within the provisions of the ordinance which has been violated, although had he sentenced the defendant he might have suspended the execution thereof. I do not believe, however, that in those cases which have already been heard by the court and the defendant released, as is shown by the docket, the court could now order the defendant in for pronouncement of sentence. Although the mayor has no statutory term of court, nevertheless a considerable length of time having elapsed since the conviction or plea of guilty a dismissal has resulted and the mayor has lost jurisdiction.

Your second inquiry is as follows:

> "'Sec. 197. Whenever a fine is imposed for the violation of any ordinance, section or part of any section or ordinance of the city, providing for the punishment of any person for any of the offenses enumerated in section 2108 (1536-318) of Revised Statutes of Ohio, and the same is not paid the mayor shall order the person convicted to be committed until such fine and costs of prosecution are paid, or until such person is discharged by due process of law; provided, that after commitment for twenty-four hours and failure to pay such fine and costs, the mayor may order such male person to be placed at work on the streets, or any public improvement of the city, under the direction and control of the chief of police or city commission, or other city officer, there to be kept at hard labor, until, at the rate of seventy-five cents a day, said person shall have earned an amount equal to such fine and costs.'
> "QUERY (a). Under the provisions of this ordinance and section 4563, G. C., is it obligatory upon the mayor to commit the defendant if he does not pay the fine and costs, or may he suspend or remit the same?"

Section 4563 of the General Code, to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "Section 4563. When a fine, imposed for the violation of an ordinance of the corporation, is not paid, the party convicted shall, by order of the mayor, or other proper authority, or on process issued for the purpose, be committed until such fine and the costs of prosecution are paid, or the party is discharged by due process of law."

The right of a mayor of a municipality to remit fines was considered in an opinion by this department rendered to the industrial commission of Ohio on May 8, 1915. In such opinion it was held that the mayor may suspend the execution of a sentence upon the payment of costs, "but in no case can he remit a fine due to the state of Ohio. Neither can the magistrate, or mayor, impose or collect a fine less in amount than the minimum fine fixed by the statutes. The magistrate or mayor has no authority to disregard the express provisions of the statutes as to the amount of the fines he shall impose."

I do not see any difference between the fines as fixed by the statutes and fines as fixed by ordinances of the municipality. Therefore, I would advise that the mayor is without authority to remit a fine. As to whether or not the mayor can suspend the execution of a sentence, either in whole or in part, the opinion referred to states as follows:

> "As to your second inquiry, I know of no provision of law that would prevent the magistrate or mayor from assessing a fine and costs and then proceeding to suspend both the fine and costs, or fine only."

Specifically answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that it is not obligatory upon the mayor to commit the defendant if he does not pay the fine and costs, but that he may, after pronouncing the sentence, suspend the execution thereof.

Referring again to section 197 of the codified ordinances of the city of Steubenville, hereinbefore set out in full, you inquire:

> "QUERY (b). If the fine and costs are not paid at the expiration of twenty-four hours after commitment, is it obligatory upon the mayor to place the defendant at work on city improvements, or, in this matter, may he use his discretion?"

The particular part of section 197 of the codified ordinances of the city of Steubenville to which you refer provides:

> "provided, that after commitment for twenty-four hours and failure to pay such fine and costs, the mayor may order such male person to be placed at work on the streets, or any public improvement of the city, etc."

I am clearly of the opinion that the word "may" as used in the above ordinance, makes it discretionary with the mayor to order a male person to be placed at work on a public improvement, and that it is not obligatory upon him so to do.

You next inquire:

> "(3) If a conviction is had under the provisions of section 13409, G. C., may the defendant be sentenced to the work house under the provisions of section 12387, G. C.?"

Section 13409 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Section 13409. Whoever, being a male person able to perform manual labor, has not made reasonable effort to procure employment or has refused to labor at reasonable prices, is a vagrant or common beggar and shall be fined not more than fifty dollars and sentenced to hard labor in jail until the fine and costs are paid. For such labor he shall receive credit upon such fine and costs at the rate of seventy-five cents per day."

Section 12387 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Section 12387. In cases where a fine may be imposed in whole or in part in punishment of an offense, or for a violation of an ordinance of a municipality, and such court or magistrate could order that such person stand committed to the jail of the county or municipality until the fine and the costs of prosecution are paid, the court or magistrate may order that such person stand committed to such workhouse until such fine and costs are paid, or until he is discharged therefrom by allowing a credit of sixty cents per day on the fine and costs for each day of confinement in the workhouse, or until he is otherwise legally discharged."

Before proceeding to the determination of the question which you ask, I would call your attention to the case of In re Smith, 13 O. N. P. (n. s.) 278, wherein the court of common pleas of Hamilton county decided that section 13409, G. C., was void for uncertainty. I shall not express any opinion herein as to the correctness of the decision of Judge Dickson, in the Smith case, but shall proceed on the assumption that section 13409 is constitutional and operative.

The original of section 12387 was passed subsequently to the original of section 13409. While section 13409 provides that if the defendant be committed to jail he shall work out his sentence therein at the rate of seventy-five cents a day, whereas under the provisions of section 12387 if he is sent to the workhouse he works out his sentence at the rate of only sixty cents a day; nevertheless, it seems to me that the two provisions can both stand, with this result; that if the defendant is sentenced to jail, his term of imprisonment therein is to be computed on the basis of seventy-five cents per day; whereas, if under the authority granted in section 12387 the defendant is committed to the workhouse, his sentence therein is computed at the rate of sixty cents a day.

Answering your question specifically, therefore, I am of the opinion that if conviction is had under the provisions of section 13409 of the General Code, the defendant may be sentenced to the workhouse under the provisions of section 12387 of the General Code.

You next inquire:

"Is there any statutory authority for the punishment of a mayor who exceeds the maximum penalty in imposing a fine or in committing to the workhouse for a specific number of days?"

There is no statutory authority of which I am aware for the punishment of a mayor who exceeds his authority as above set out, the only remedy being the right of defendant to prosecute error from the sentence so imposed, section 12916 of the General Code, being the statute on extortions, not reaching such a matter.

You next inquire:

"(5) During the period from August 7, 1913, up to and including February 28, 1915, the mayor of Steubenville finally disposed of twenty-four cases in which the defendants were charged with carrying concealed weapons.

"Six of these actions were brought under the state laws and 18 of them under a city ordinance. The date above cited is the time at which this offense became a felony.

"The mayor finally disposed of these cases by assessing and collecting fines or by suspending the operation of the same.

"QUERY. Is an ordinance providing for the punishment of this offense valid, and if not what is the status of the defendants thus disposed of?"

The exact question is as to whether or not a municipality has the power by ordinance to punish for the carrying of concealed weapons within the municipality.

On August 7, 1913, the date to which you refer, house bill No. 33, being "an act to amend section 12819 of the General Code relative to carrying concealed weapons," went into effect. This act amended section 12819 so as to make the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, whereas prior thereto the same has been a misdemeanor.

There is no doubt that a municipality under authority granted by the legislature may enact ordinances for the punishment of certain acts within such municipality, but the power so to enact the same only exists by virtue of the statute.

Section 3658 of the General Code grants to a municipality power to enact ordinances

> "To prevent riot, gambling, noise and disturbance, indecent and disorderly conduct or assemblages, and to preserve the peace and good order, and to protect the property of the corporation and its inhabitants."

And section 3664 of the General Code (103 O. L., 168) grants the municipality power

> "To provide for the punishment of persons disturbing the good order and quiet of the corporation by clamors and noise in the night season, by intoxication, drunkenness, fighting, committing assault, assault and battery, using obscene or profane language in the streets or other public places to the annoyance of the citizens, or otherwise violating the public peace by indecent and disorderly conduct, or by lewd and lascivious behavior. In like manner to provide for the punishment of any vagrant, common street beggar, common prostitute, habitual disturber of the peace, known pickpocket, gambler, burglar, thief, watch stuffer, ball game player, a person who practices any trick, game or device with intent to swindle, a person who abuses his family, and any suspicious person who cannot give a reasonable account of himself."

Section 3658, G. C., permits a municipality to pass ordinances to preserve the peace and good order, and section 3664, G. C., undertakes to define the manner in which the good order and quiet of a corporation may be disturbed.

The carrying of concealed weapons tends to disturb the peace and good order of a community and under the provisions of section 3658 a municipality is authorized to enact ordinances "to preserve the peace and good order." Therefore, I am of the opinion that an ordinance may be passed making the carrying of concealed weapons punishable. This, however, will not in any way restrict or infringe upon the state statutes which make the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, and a conviction under said ordinance will not in any way operate as a bar to prosecution under the statutory law of the state for the carrying of concealed weapons.

In your question you state that six of the prosecutions were brought under state laws and that the mayor finally disposed of those cases. This, of course, he was without authority to do and should have bound the parties so charged upon examination over to the grand jury. He had no jurisdiction to finally dispose of such cases in his court and therefore the parties who were fined under the state prosecution, as if the same were under a city prosecution, cannot now plead former jeopardy as a defense to being bound over to the grand jury.

You next inquire:

> "(6) Has a municipality the right to enact an ordinance for the punishment of a person found in a state of intoxication within the corporate limits when he is not creating any disturbance? See sec. 3664."

The ordinance of the city of Steubenville in regard to the punishment of a person found in a state of intoxication reads as follows:

> "Sec. 146. If any person shall be found in a state of intoxication upon any street, public alley or other public place, he or she shall, on conviction thereof, pay a fine of not more than five dollars, and pay the costs of prosecution; and the chief of police and police shall see that this section is enforced."

Section 3664, G. C., hereinbefore referred to, authorizes a municipality to enact ordinances to provide for the punishment of persons disturbing the good order and peace of the corporation "by intoxication." While I am of the opinion that intoxication in a public place per se is a disturbance of the good order and quiet of that particular locality, yet under the provisions of section 3664, G. C., aforesaid, it seems to have been the intention of the legislature to permit municipalities by ordinance to punish for a disturbance of the peace and good order of a municipality by intoxication, thus making the disturbance an essential element of the offense.

It has been repeatedly held by different courts of this state that intoxication can only be made an offense under municipal legislation when the ordinance covering it makes it a disturbance of the good order and quiet of the municipality.

In re Bridget Fitzsimmons, 13 O. N. P. (n. s.) 104;
Hughes v. Cincinnati, 23 O. D. (N. P.) 251;
Jefferies et al. v. Defiance, 25 W. L. B. 68.

In view of the foregoing authorities I am constrained to hold that the ordinance in question is invalid in that it does not include the necessary averments as required by section 3664, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—WARNES LAW—DEDUCTIONS FROM TAX VALUATIONS ON ACCOUNT OF INJURY OR DESTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS OR STRUCTURES AFTER TAX LISTING DAY MUST BE MADE UNDER SECTION 5590, G. C.—SUCH DEDUCTIONS AS MAY BE MADE ARE LIMITED TO LOSS NOT COVERED BY INSURANCE.

The act found in 103 O. L., 562, purporting to amend section 2591, G. C., is wholly inconsistent with the administrative scheme of the Warnes law, 103 O. L., 786, passed on the same day but by its own terms not effective until October, 1913. Said section 2591 as so amended is incapable of execution as an independent statute. It pertains to a subject-matter covered by the Warnes law, which makes different provisions with respect thereto and expressly repeals section 2591, G. C. Under these circumstances, it will be deemed to have been the intention of the general assembly in enacting the two laws that the amendment of section 2591 should not become the law unless the Warnes law should, by reason of the possibility of a successful referendum, fail to become the law.

Deductions from tax valuations on account of the injury or destruction of buildings or structures after tax listing day must be made under section 12 of the Warnes law, section 5590, G. C. Under said section the injury for which a deduction may be made must have occurred prior to the first day of October following the date as of which the property was listed, and the affidavit for a deduction must be filed prior to said first day of October. Where said affidavit is not so filed or where the injury or destruction does not occur within such time there is no authority to make any deduction.

Such deductions as may be made under the statute are limited to loss not covered by insurance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1915.

HON. CLARK GOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 19, 1915, requesting my opinion received and is as follows:

> "A farmer of this county carried an insurance on his barn of $400.00, and the same was assessed for taxation at $500.00, he carried an insurance of $250.00 on his horses and they were assessed for taxation at $500.00 making the assessment for taxation on horses and barn $1,000.00 and insurance $750.00. He had a total loss by fire.
> "Please let me have an opinion on the question involved at your earliest convenience as the gentlemen has not yet paid his taxes and wants to pay them before the auditor makes his annual settlement, in order that he may save any penalty on same."

The answer to your question involves the consideration of two acts of the general assembly, to wit: House bill No. 571, passed by the general assembly April 18, 1913, being the so-called Warnes law, found in 103 O. L., 786, and house bill No. 123 passed by the general assembly April 28, 1913, and found in 103 O. L., 562. In order to arrive at the intention of the legislature as evinced by these sections, it is necessary to examine the legislation which preceded the enactment of these two laws.

Section 2591 of the General Code provided as follows:

"When after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October in any year it is made to appear by the oath of the owner or one of the owners of a building or structure and by the affidavit of two disinterested persons, resident of the city or township in which the building or structure is or was situated, that such building or structure has been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, since the second Monday in April of the current year, the county auditor shall deduct from the tax list and duplicate the value of such building or structure or such part of the value thereof as shall correspond to the extent of the injury."

Section 5572 of the General Code provided as follows:

"A county auditor shall correct the valuation of any parcel of real property on which any new structure of over one hundred dollars in value has been erected, or on which any structure of like value has been destroyed, agreeably to the return thereof made in accordance with the provisions of this title by the assessor."

Section 5578 of the General Code provided as follows:

"In case of the destruction by fire, flood, cyclone, storm or otherwise, of a new structure, or of orchards, timber, ornamental trees or groves, over one hundred dollars in value, the value of which had been included in a former valuation of the tract on which they stood, such assessor shall determine, as near as practicable, how much less valuable such tract or lot is in consequence of such destruction and make return thereof. If the assessor fails or neglects so to do, the county or city board of equalization shall perform such duty and the auditor shall deduct the losses from the value of such property as it stands on the tax list."

The legislature in house bill No. 571 above mentioned repealed all of the foregoing sections and in section 12 of said house bill No. 571 combined all of them into one section and added thereto a provision for reduction in case of the loss or destruction of personal property. Said section 12 was designated as section 5590 of the General Code by the attorney general and is as follows:

"Whenever, after the first Monday of February and before the first day of October, in any year, it is made to appear to the district assessor, by the oath of the owner, or one of the owners of a building or structure, land, orchard, timber, ornamental trees or groves, or tangible personal property, or by the affidavit of two disinterested persons, residents of the township, city or village in which the same is or was situated, that such building, structure, land, orchard, timber, ornamental trees or groves, or tangible personal property is listed for taxation for the current year, and has been destroyed or injured by fire, flood, tornado, or otherwise, after the first Monday of February of the current year, he shall investigate the matter, and deduct from the valuation of the property of the owner of such destroyed property, on the tax list for the current year, an amount which, in his judgment, fairly represents the extent of the injury or destruction; provided, however that no such deduction shall be made in the case of an injury to, or destruction of, a building, structure, land, orchard, timber, ornamental trees or groves resulting in damage of less than one hundred dollars, nor shall any deduction be made for or on account of any damage or loss which is covered by insurance, nor on account of any sheep killed by dogs. The district assessor shall certify the deductions made by him under the provisions of this section to the county auditor, who shall correct his tax list and the treasurer's duplicate in accordance therewith."

This bill was passed April 18, 1913, approved by the governor May 6, 1913, and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 10, 1913.

Section 69 of that act provided as follows:

"The repeal of sections 5542-9a, 5542-9b, 5542-9c and 5618 to 5624, inclusive, of the General Code shall not take effect until the first day of March, 1914. This act shall in all other respects take effect and be in force from and after the second Monday of October, 1913."

Ten days after the passage of house bill No. 571, to wit: April 28, 1913, the legislature passed house bill No. 123 amending section 2591 to read as follows:

"Sec. 2591. When after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October in any year it is made to appear by the oath of the owner or one of the owners of a building or structure and by the affidavit of two disinterested persons, resident of the city, village or township in which the building or structure has been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, since the second Monday in April of the current year, the county auditor shall deduct from the tax list and duplicate the value of such building or structure or such part of the value thereof as shall correspond to the extent of the injury; and when it is made to appear in the manner herein provided that said building or structure has been so injured or destroyed since the first day of October of any year and prior to the first day of April of the succeeding year, the following deductions shall be made upon the taxes due in the following June, being the second one-half of the taxes due for the current year, to wit: when such injury or destruction occurs during the month of October of any year, the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be entirely remitted; if in the month of November of any year, five-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of December of any year, four-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of January, three-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of February, two-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of March, one-sixth of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted."

This bill was likewise approved by the governor May 6, 1913, and was filed in the office of the secretary of state May 9, 1913.

Section 16 of article II of the constitution of Ohio provides as follows:

"Every bill passed by the general assembly shall before it becomes a law be presented to the governor for his approval. If he approves he shall sign it and thereupon it shall become a law and be filed with the secretary of state."

Technically, therefore, both of the bills above referred to "became laws" on the same day. It being manifest that there is a partial conflict between them, the present state of the law which your inquiry requires me to define is, therefore, to be ascertained in the light of the familiar principle to the effect that contemporaneous legislative acts are, if possible, to be construed together and made to harmonize. That is to say, if it is at all possible to do so, a direct conflict between such contemporaneously enacted laws will be avoided, and the doctrine of "implied repeal" can certainly have no application in such a case.

But where an inconsistency can not be avoided and is irreconcilable, as may conceivably happen, the laws themselves, as well as the surrounding circumstances of which a court might take judicial notice, must be examined in an effort to determine which of them the legislature intended to be the law. And if some reason appears for the enacting of the two conflicting laws which indicates the probable legislative choice as between them, that choice will be presumed and the intention thus gathered will be given effect.

Of course, every intendment is against such an interpretation as will find two laws so passed to be irreconcilably inconsistent. Often one can be regarded as an exception to the other, as where the one is special and the other applies to a class, naturally inclusive of the former. The thought suggests itself in connection with your question that what is designated as section 2591 of the General Code as amended may be regarded as an exception to what is designated as section 5590 of the General Code; that is, section 5590 may be regarded as laying down the general rule for reduction in tax valuation on account of the contingencies therein mentioned, whereas section 2591 may be regarded as the special rule for buildings and structures to which alone it relates, and as an exception to the general rule of section 5590.

Upon careful study, however, it will appear that this hypothesis is untenable. What is called section 5590 is just as specific as what is called section 2591; that is, section 5590 does not use general and descriptive terms to designate what kinds of property are subject to it. On the contrary, the language in this particular is "a building or structure, land, orchard, timber, ornamental trees or groves, or tangible personal property." Section 2591 is limited in its application to "a building or structure;" but it is not any more specific than section 5590; it is merely more restricted in its application.

Both section 2591 and section 5590 prescribe rules governing reduction in the taxable valuation of buildings and structures on account of an injury thereto by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, and the rules thus prescribed by these two sections, respectively, are inconsistent.

I find difficulty, therefore, in applying the general rule above stated to the present case.

It is true that the rule as I have stated it may sometimes be applied even in cases much like the one now under consideration, i. e., where specific language in an act of broad application is inconsistent with equally specific language in an act of narrower application; and that in some such cases the act of narrower application is read as an exception to the act of broader application. This is the case, however, only where the intention of the legislature can not be arrived at in any other way; whereas in the case now under consideration I think there are certain clues to the intention of the legislature which point in another direction.

I invite attention for the moment to the provisions of section 2591 as amended.

In the first place, this section down to the semicolon is word for word the same as old section 2591 as it existed prior to 1913. To this language there has been added the clause providing for deductions from taxes in the event of injury or destruction of buildings or structures between the first day of October and the first day of April. In other words, the first significant thing about section 2591 is that the legislature has not only in form, but in substance also amended a statute that was a part of what may be termed the old order of things.

In this connection I call attention to the fact that the first date mentioned in section 2591 is the second Monday in April. This was the date as of which under the law as it existed prior to the enactment of the Warnes law all property was listed and valued for taxation; it was, in my opinion, the date as of which the lien of the state for taxes assessed upon real estate attached even after the enactment of the Warnes law; but it was not the date as of which the assessment was made under the Warnes law. That date under the original Warnes law was the day preceding the first Monday of February, changed by the amendments in 104 O. L., 253 to the day preceding the first Monday of April.

In the second place, it is to be observed that all corrections to be made under section 2591 are to be made by the county auditor, who is to make the deduction "from the tax list and duplicate." This is, of course, consistent with the old scheme of things, as naturally would be the case when the language of the old statute was merely re-enacted. Formerly the county auditor made up the tax list and one copy thereof known as the "duplicate," which on the first Monday in October he delivered to the treasurer for the collection of taxes thereon. Under the Warnes law, however, the county auditor has nothing to do with the making up of the duplicate. This duty devolves upon the district assessor, and that official makes not two but three copies, one, the original tax list, being kept in his own office, and the two called the "duplicate" and "triplicate," respectively, being transmitted in the month of September to the county auditor for the extension of the taxes and the delivery of the triplicate to the treasurer for collection in the month of October.

Section 2591, therefore, is perfectly consistent with the statutes as they existed prior to the adoption of the Warnes law, but is inconsistent in almost every respect with the scheme of the Warnes law.

Recapitulating, these inconsistencies are:

(1) The dates correspond with those of the old law, and differ from those of the Warnes law.

(2) The official who is to make the correction or deduction is the official charged with making up the tax list and duplicate by the provisions of the old law, but is not the official charged with such duty by the provisions of the Warnes law.

(3) Section 2591 is inconsistent with the corresponding provision of section 5590 as found in the Warnes law, which does not afford any relief when the destruction takes place after the first day of October and which denies a deduction for or on account of any damage or loss which is covered by insurance.

In view of all these circumstances, it seems to me to be impossible to hold that the legislature intended that section 2591 should operate as a part of the Warnes law. Now the Warnes law was a comprehensive scheme for the assessment of property for taxation. It was a revision, in substance at least, of all the law on that subject. For example, it made another change in the scheme of things as it existed when original section 2591, General Code, was adopted and the language found in the first paragraph thereof first came into the law. At that time real estate was assessed periodically for taxation—first, every ten years, and then every four years, and new buildings were valued and returned by the personal property assessor in the intermediate years, and when so returned were added to the value of the tract on which they stood. Under the Warnes law, however, real property was valued annually. This difference between the two systems is indicative of the fundamental change in the administration of the tax laws which was brought about by the enactment of the Warnes law. I think, therefore, that the problem is deeper than merely reconciling section 2591 as amended with section 5590 of the Warnes law; rather, if the former section is to be given operation and effect it must be fitted into or regarded as an exception to the whole scheme of the Warnes law, with which it is inconsistent in several particulars.

Did, then, the legislature intend that section 2591 should be the law, notwithstanding the enactment of the Warnes law; or did it inadvertently amend the wrong section, and are we to conclude that the new matter which is found in section 2591 is to be regarded as expressive of a legislative idea which is to be fitted into the Warnes law, giving to the latter law controlling effect as to dates and methods of administration, such as the identity of the officer who is to make the deductions, etc., and to section 2591 controlling effect with respect to additional deductions on account of injury or destruction occurring after the first day of October?

Before answering these questions, which are decisive of the general question submitted, I think I ought to point out that the new matter in section 2591, standing by itself, at least, is incapable of being carried into operation. It provides that when the injury or destruction occurs after the first day of October and prior to the first of April certain "deductions shall be made upon the taxes due in the following June." I observe that there is no requirement that any deduction shall be made from the value of the property as listed on the duplicate, nor is there any authority to make such a deduction, but there is to be a deduction in the amount of the taxes payable.

Coming now to the specific deductions which are to be made, and using one provision which is typical as an instance, we find the following:

> "When such injury or destruction occurs during the month of October of any year, the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury shall be entirely remitted."

Now there is no authority to deduct anything on account of an injury occurring after the first day of October, and yet the statute provides that there shall be a remission of the June half tax on the amount so deducted. It is to be further remarked that after the first day of October the treasurer's triplicate under the Warnes law is in the hands of the treasurer for collection, and that any deduction at that time would have to be made on the treasurer's triplicate, on the auditor's duplicate and on the assessor's tax list, each of which books is in the custody of a different officer. There is no adequate machinery for relieving the treasurer of the duty to collect the entire tax. There is no adequate machinery for making a correction of the original tax list which is in the hands of the district assessor, if the auditor be regarded as the proper authority to make the deduction. In short, unless much is read into the statute in order to give it effect, the latter or new portion of section 2591 would have to be regarded as inoperative for lack of essential machinery. Section 5590, on the other hand, does contain the necessary machinery, as the last sentence thereof as I have quoted it shows.

Were it not for the other circumstances which I have mentioned, I should incline strongly to the view that the defects in section 2591 might be supplied and the legislative idea therein embodied might be given effect; but in order to make this section operative it is necessary to confer by implication upon some officer the authority to exercise the power of assessment; for a reduction in an assessed valuation on account of the destruction of a building or structure necessarily involves the exercise of judgment and discretion of exactly the same kind and character as that committed to assessing officers. The necessary act is in every sense an assessment, or at least a reassessment. Authority to exercise such judgment and discretion will not be implied except where necessity absolutely requires it; and in view of the inconsistencies between the Warnes law and section 2591 as amended, I do not believe that it could be held that the deficiencies of section 2591 could be thus supplied with any certainty; for if we are required to determine that some officer has authority to make the deduction referred to in section 2591 when the injury or destruction occurs after the first day of October, what officer shall exercise the assessing power, the county auditor, who is otherwise referred to in the statute, or the district assessor, who under the general provisions of the Warnes law is to exercise all the powers formerly conferred upon the auditor with respect to the making up of the duplicate and the making of changes and corrections therein and is to be the assessor of real and personal property throughout the county constituting his taxing district?

I have said that the two measures technically became laws on the same day. However, they did not become effective laws at the same time. The Warnes law, with certain exceptions not necessary to be noted in this connection, was by its own terms to take effect on the second Monday of October, 1913, whereas section 2591 went into effect as soon as under the constitution it could become effective. When the Warnes law became effective on October 13, 1913, it repealed section 2591 of the General Code, together with a group of sections like section 2591, in that they were parts of and together constituted the scheme of administration of the tax laws which was intended to be done away with when the Warnes law was passed. Section 2591 as amended fits into the old scheme, and does not fit into the Warnes law. It seems to me that the legislative intention is made clear by the circumstances last above referred to.

All laws passed by the legislature with certain exceptions are now subject to a referendum and, accordingly, may never go into effect. That being the case, it is perfectly conceivable that the legislature might adopt an entirely new scheme of legislation on a given subject and at the same time amend the old statutes on that subject in minor particulars, entertaining the intention that if the new scheme of legislation should not be referred to the electors, or, being referred to them, should be approved by them it should prevail; but if the people should reject the revision the old law should stand as amended.

I think it is clear from all the circumstances that the legislature did not intend that section 2591 should be an amendment of the Warnes law. Rather it was an amendment of the law as it existed before the Warnes law was enacted. Therefore, it is clear to me that the general assembly intended that the Warnes law should be a substitute not only for the law technically in effect when it was adopted, but also for all the body of laws pertaining to the subject-matter, in force on October 13, 1913. The fact that the Warnes law did not go into effect until October, 1913, leaves reason for technical argument to the effect that the legislature intended that section 2591 as amended should be the law between the date of its going into effect and October 13, 1913, at which time the express repeal of section 2591 embodied in the repealing clause of the Warnes law would put an end to the former section. The force of this technical argument is, however, destroyed by consideration of the fact that the new matter in section 2591 would only be operative for thirteen days under such an interpretation, whereas the section provides for a system of progressive deductions on account of injuries taking place between the first of October and the first of April (although, of course, if the Warnes law had been submitted to a referendum and defeated, the force of section 2591 would have been permanent, as already pointed out).

Therefore, I have not given any weight to this argument, and I prefer to base my conclusion upon the broader ground, as above worked out, that section 2591 is wholly inconsistent with the administrative scheme embodied in the Warnes law and can not be fitted into it; that standing by itself as an exception to the Warnes law it lacks essential machinery necessary to give it operation; and that, therefore, not being capable of adjustment to the Warnes law and not being capable of enforcement as an independent statute it must be rejected altogether, and the conclusion must be that the legislature did not intend that section 2591 should be the law unless the Warnes law should fail to become the law.

It is my opinion, therefore, that section 2591, General Code, must be regarded as wholly inapplicable to the facts stated by you. This conclusion is strengthened, to some extent at least, by consideration of the fact that section 5590 of the General Code was amended in 104 O. L., 253, so as to change the date therein mentioned from the first Monday of February to the first Monday of April. The act last referred to is an amendment of three sections of the Warnes law, adopted with a view to changing the assessment date from the first Monday of February to the first Monday of April. If the legislature had regarded section 2591 as in force at the time it would have changed the date therein from the second Monday in April to the first Monday in April.

In another view of the case, if sections 5590 and 2591 are inconsistent, then by reason of the subsequent amendment and re-enactment of section 5590 that section can no longer be regarded as a law of contemporaneous enactment as compared with section 2591, but, being later in point of adoption and inconsistent in provisions, must be regarded as having repealed section 2591 by implication. This latter view, however, is a technical one, upon which I do not rely. Moreover, it can not be adopted for the purposes of this case, because it is apparent that your question involves the taxes for the year 1914, and the act found in 104 O. L., 253, would not affect such taxes.

Coming now to your specific question, beg to advise that the same must be answered in the light of section 5590 of the General Code as I have quoted it.

You do not state when the loss referred to occurred, nor whether or not the gentleman who has sustained the loss has filed the necessary affidavit under section 5590. Such affidavit must under the provisions of the section have been filed before the first day of October, 1914. If filed thereafter it is, in my opinion, too late to make the deduction provided for in section 5590, even though the loss had occurred between February and October, 1914. There is a strong inference from the facts stated in your letter that this was not done, and if that is the case then no relief whatever can be had by the gentleman of whom you speak. If, however, the proper affidavit was filed prior to the first Monday of October and the loss occurred prior thereto and subsequently to the first Monday of February, 1914, then the gentleman in question was entitled to have a deduction made on the duplicate in an amount representing the difference between the actual deduction in value of the real and personal property destroyed and the amount of such loss covered by insurance.

It is clear from your letter that the question involves the taxes for the year 1914, and the same has been answered on this assumption.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BLIND RELIEF—PENSION PAYABLE QUARTERLY IN ADVANCE TO COVER QUARTER NEXT SUCCEEDING PAYMENT—IF NOT SO PAID AND BENEFICIARY DIES, SAME SHOULD BE PAID TO HIS PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE.

Relief granted to needy blind persons is payable under section 2967, G. C., quarterly in advance, to cover the quarter next succeeding the payment.

If not so paid and a beneficiary dies while any part of the relief allowed him remains unpaid, same should be paid to his personal representatives.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of July 16, 1915, requesting my opinion, received, and is as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "(1) Is the relief, known as the relief of needy blind persons, payable quarterly in advance, or payable at the end of the quarter? See section 2967, General Code.
> "(2) If payable at the end of the quarter, if a blind person should die before that time, would the entire amount be payable to his family or legal representatives, or only such part as was due him up to the time of his death?"

In reply to your first question, section 2967, G. C., (103 O. L., 60) being a part of the blind relief law, provides as follows:

> "At least ten days prior to action on any claim for relief hereunder, the person claiming shall file with the board of county commissioners a duly verified statement of the facts bringing him within these provisions. The list of claims shall be filed in a book kept for that purpose in the order of filing, which record shall be open to the public. No certificate of qualification of drawing money hereunder shall be granted until the board of county commissioners shall be satisfied from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county, one of whom shall be a registered physician, that they know the applicant to be blind and that he has the residential qualifications to entitle him to the relief asked. Such evidence shall be in writing, subscribed to by such witnesses, and be subject to the right of cross examination by the board of county commissioners or other person. If the board of county commissioners be satisfied upon such testimony that the applicant is entitled to relief hereunder, said board shall issue an order therefor in such sum as said board finds needed, not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, to be paid quarterly from the funds therein provided on the warrant of the county auditor, and such relief shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature."

It will be noted that this section provides for the payment of the allowance made by the county commissioners quarterly from the fund provided for that purpose on the warrant of the county auditor. The section, however, does not undertake to provide the date of the quarterly payment, therefore the only effect of this provision is that the allowance shall be divided into four payments equally distributed through the year. These payments being for the relief of a needy blind person and to provide for his support, it is not necessary that any time elapse between the order of the commissioners and the payment of the first quarterly installment, but upon the presentation of the order to the county auditor he should issue a warrant for the first quarterly payment, and the effect of this would be that the installments would be for the succeeding quarter. These payments stand on a different basis from a payment for services rendered, which of course could not be paid in advance, but by reason of the use to which the money is to be put, to wit, the support of a blind person, it seems clear that the legislature intended that it should be paid in advance so that he would have the use of the money during the quarter rather than that it should be paid at the end of the quarter by way of reimbursement for expenditures made for his support.

In answer to your first question therefore I am of the opinion that, under section 2967, G. C., above quoted, the quarterly payments should be made at the beginning of the quarter and cover the succeeding quarterly periods.

If the foregoing method of payment has been adopted uniformly over the state there would be no necessity for answering your second question, for the reason that if a pensioner died any time during the quarter he would have received all the money due him and his personal representatives would have no claim against the county. It is conceivable, however, that there might be a period of time between the date of the issuance of the order by the commissioners and the payment of the first installment, and there might be cases where the county officials have assumed that payment should not be made until the end of the quarter. On this assumption I will proceed to a consideration of your second question.

The last sentence of section 2967, above quoted, is the one particularly applicable in answering this question. This sentence gives to the commissioners full discretion in the amount of the allowance which may be made to a needy blind person, the only limitation thereon being that such allowance shall not exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per annum. The words "paid quarterly from the fund herein provided on the warrant of the county auditor" merely directs the manner of the payment of the allowance and the fund from which it shall be paid, and cannot be construed to in any way increase or decrease the amount allowed by the commissioners.

The discretion lodged in the commissioners as to the amount of the allowance is broad enough probably to permit them, if they so desired, to specify a time when the allowance should begin, and section 2968 of the General Code, provides for the discontinuance of such allowance by the commissioners if they should thereafter decide that the pensioner is not entitled to the relief, but in the absence of any such specific language in the order of the commissioners, it can only be said that the relief is granted from the date of order allowing the same until the death of the beneficiary, unless theretofore terminated by the commissioners.

The allowance made by the commissioners constitutes a valid claim of the beneficiary against the county and one which could be enforced by him and, in case of his death, by his personal representatives. This is not at all out of harmony with the intention of the legislature in providing for such relief for the reason that the relief itself is based on the idea that the person had no other means out of which he could have been supported during the period of time for which he had not been paid and would naturally have incurred indebtedness for that purpose which would be a claim against his estate.

Applying these principles it then becomes a question of fact in each particular case upon the death of a beneficiary as to whether or not he has received the allowance at the rate fixed by the commissioners from the date of the order until the day of his death, and if he has not so received the same, his personal representatives would be entitled to receive the difference.

The fact that any unpaid balance could not be paid until the next quarterly payment time would not operate to defeat the right to collect the same, but as stated before merely directs the time when it can be paid.

I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that if at the time of the death of the person to whom an allowance has been made under the blind relief laws, any part of the allowance at the rate fixed by the commissioners, based upon the time which has elapsed from the date of the allowance until the date of his death, remains unpaid, it should be paid to his personal representatives.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHEN A FOREIGN CORPORATION INCREASES ITS CAPITAL STOCK SO TOTAL AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, REPRESENTED BY ITS PROPERTY AND BUSINESS IN OHIO IS INCREASED, IT MUST COMPLY WITH SECTION 185, G. C., NOTWITHSTANDING PAYMENT OF ANNUAL FEES UNDER WILLIS LAW AND SECTION 192, G. C., EVEN THOUGH PERCENTAGE OF ITS PROPERTY AND BUSINESS IN OHIO HAS NOT INCREASED SINCE ITS ORIGINAL COMPLIANCE.

Whenever a foreign corporation increases its authorized capital stock so that the amount of its total authorized capital stock, represented by its property and business in Ohio is increased, it must comply with section 185, G. C., notwithstanding the payment of annual fees under the Willis law and section 192, G. C., and notwithstanding the percentage of its property and business in Ohio, has not increased since its original compliance, or may even have decreased.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANDT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested my opinion regarding a question raised by counsel for a certain foreign corporation involving the interpretation of section 185 of the General Code. The question may be stated as follows:

When a foreign corporation which has complied in the first instance with the Ohio laws including the provisions of section 184 of the General Code, and is paying an annual franchise tax according to the rule permitted by section 192, G. C., increases its total authorized capital stock without changing or at least increasing the relative amount of business done and the relative amount of property owned by it in Ohio as compared with the total business and property of said company outside of Ohio, is it required to file the additional statement provided for in section 185 aforesaid?

Two points are made by counsel for said foreign corporation in connection with the question thus submitted as follows:

(1) The company should not be required, under the facts assumed, to file an additional statement with the secretary of state and otherwise to comply with section 185, G. C., because the word used in section 185 is "proportioned" and there has been no increase in "proportion."

(2) The company should not be required to comply with section 185 because it is annually filing reports and paying fees under what is known as the Willis law, which discloses from year to year such increases of capital stock, etc., as may have taken place within the year and because further, as in this case, the corporation in question has chosen to exercise the option which it has under section 192, G. C., and has paid franchise taxes upon its entire authorized capital stock regardless of the proportion thereof represented by property and business in Ohio.

The first contention of counsel requires not only an interpretation of section 185, but also a consideration of the two sections which precede it. I deem it proper, therefore, to quote the provisions of all these sections, or so much thereof as is applicable to the question under consideration.

> "Sec. 183. Before doing business in this state, a foreign corporation organized for profit and owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state shall make and file with the secretary of state, in such form as he may prescribe, a statement under oath of its president, secretary, treasurer, superintendent or managing agent in this state, containing the following facts: * * *
> "4. The proportion of the capital stock of the corporation represented by property owned and used and by business transacted in Ohio.
> "Sec. 184. From the facts thus reported and any other facts coming to his knowledge, the secretary of state shall determine the proportion of the capital stock of the corporation represented by its property and business in this state and shall charge and collect from such corporation for the privilege of exercising its franchise in this state, one-tenth of one per cent. upon the proportion of its authorized capital stock represented by property owned and used and business transacted in this state, but not less than ten dollars in any case. Upon the payment of such fee the secretary of state shall make and deliver to such foreign corporation a certificate that it has complied with the laws of Ohio and is authorized to do business therein, stating the amount of its authorized capital stock and the proportion of such authorized capital stock represented in this state.
> "Sec. 185. A corporation which has filed its statement and paid the fee prescribed by the preceding two sections and which thereafter shall increase the proportion of its capital stock, represented by property used and business done in this state, shall file within thirty days after such increase an additional statement with the secretary of state, and pay a fee of one-tenth of one per cent. upon the increase of its authorized capital stock represented by property owned and business transacted in this state."

Under the provisions of the first two sections quoted it is made the duty of the corporation to file with the secretary of state a statement of the proportion of its capital stock represented by property owned and used and by business transacted in Ohio. The secretary of state must then determine from the report so made, and from any other facts coming to his knowledge, what proportion of the capital stock of said corporation is represented by business and property in this state as compared with its business and property outside of the state. The proportion thus determined by the secretary of state forms the basis upon which the fee of one-tenth of one per cent. is paid. It certainly is clear from these provisions that the term "proportion" as therein used means simply the part, portion or share of the capital stock represented by property owned and used and by business transacted in this state. In other words, the secretary of state must determine what portion of the capital stock is represented by the property owned and business transacted by the corporation in this state and assess thereon the tax of one-tenth of one per cent.

It doubtless occurred to the legislature that in the natural course of events a foreign corporation might increase and grow and that it would become necessary for it to increase its capital stock, and it therefore provided in section 185 that when the proportion of its capital stock, represented by property used and business done in this state, was increased an additional statement thereof should be made to the secretary of state. That means that whenever that portion or part of the capital stock of a corporation which is represented by property used and business done in this state is increased, an additional statement must be filed.

In the particular case submitted the authorized capital stock has been increased. Assuming the percentage of property owned and business transacted in Ohio by the company as compared with its total property and business to have remained the same, the result of such increase in the authorized capital stock would be that the sum which constitutes the proportion of such authorized capital stock as increased, represented by property used and business transacted in Ohio, is increased. Under these circumstances, an additional statement must be filed.

To illustrate, let it be assumed that the authorized capital stock of the company was originally $1,000,000.00, and that half of its property used and business transacted was in Ohio; the "proportion" on which the initial fee would be based would be $500.000.00. Then let it be assumed that the company increased its authorized capital stock to $2,000,000.00, its property and business remaining the same both in Ohio and elsewhere; the sum which constitutes the "proportion" would then, after such increase, be $1,000,000.00 instead of $500,000.00 as in the first instance. But suppose that prior to the increase of the authorized capital stock the company's business outside of Ohio and the value of its property there located had gradually increased, without a corresponding increase in volume and value inside of Ohio, so that immediately prior to the increase of the authorized capital, stock, had the initial computation been made, it would have resulted in a "proportion" amounting to $300,000.00 instead of $500,000.00, as was the case in the first instance; yet in such event, where the capital stock was increased to $2,000,000.00 the resultant "proportion" would be $600,000.00, an increase of $100,-000.00 as compared with the "proportion" on which the initial fee was based. Under such circumstances, the company should, within thirty days after such increase, file the additional statement required by section 185, G. C., and pay a fee based on $100,000.00.

In other words, it is immaterial whether or not the increase in this state is in proportion to the increase made elsewhere, unless the result is such that the "proportion" ascertained at the time the increase of authorized capital stock is made is smaller or at least no greater, than the amount constituting the "proportion" at the time of the original compliance and the payment of the initial fee.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the first point suggested by counsel for the corporation is not well taken.

With respect to the second question I may say that I am impressed with the seeming injustice, at least, of requiring a foreign corporation to make annual reports and to pay annual fees thereon for the privilege of continuing in business in the state and exercising corporate franchises therein and at the same time requiring such corporation, whenever it increases the proportionate amount of its capital stock represented by property and business in this state, to file a report required by section 185; and while I would also lean strongly toward the conclusion that if the so-called Willis law were a subsequently enacted statute, its reports and fees would be effective substitutes for the reports and fees required under section 185, so that a repeal of the latter section, by implication, could be worked out; yet such considerations, after all, are founded upon the policy of the law rather than directed toward its meaning.

> "No person shall be required to list for taxation a share of the capital stock of an Ohio corporation; or a share of the capital stock of a foreign corporation, the property of which is taxed in Ohio in the name of such corporation; or a share of the capital stock of any other foreign corporation, if the holder thereof furnishes satisfactory proof to the taxing authorities that at least two-thirds of the property of such corporation is taxed in Ohio and the remainder is taxed in another state or states, provided such corporation, as a fee for the privilege of exercising its franchise in Ohio, pays annually the same percentage upon its entire authorized capital stock that is required by law to be paid by a domestic corporation on its subscribed or issued capital stock."

This provision was incorporated in section 148c R. S., at the time the Willis law was passed, and is a part of what is apparently a single scheme of legislation, although it was not in the act known as the Willis law, itself. I think it is obvious, however, that the proviso therein refers to the Willis law. In other words corporations do not pay fees for the purpose of exercising franchises in Ohio, under section 192, but rather under the other sections which require the payment of such fees, although section 192 permits the payment thereof according to a rule different from that provided by such other sections.

Now the sections thus referred to are at the present time sections 5499 et seq., General Code. I quote some of the material provisions thereof:

> "Section 5499. Annually, during the month of July, each foreign corporation for profit, doing business in this state, and owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state, and subject to compliance with all other provisions of law, and in addition to all other statements required by law, shall make a report in writing to the commission in such form as the commission may prescribe.
> "Section 5503. On or before October fifteenth, the auditor of state shall charge for collection, as herein provided, annually, from such company in addition to the intitial fees otherwise provided for by law, for the privilege of exercising its franchises in this state, a fee of three-twentieths of one per cent. upon the proportion of the authorized capital stock of the corporation represented by the property owned and used and business transacted in this state, which fee shall not be less than ten dollars in any case. Such fee shall be payable to the treasurer of state on or before the first day of the following December."

The italicized portions of the above quoted provisions were found in the original Willis law, 95 O. L., 137. I think it is clear that the fee required under section 185, G. C., is an initial fee as to what may be termed the increased extent to which the franchise is being exercised in the state. At any rate there is no escape from the very explicit provisions of the section last above cited to the effect that the annual report shall be made in addition to all other reports required by law.

When the statutes are examined, then, it is clear that section 185 was not regarded by the legislature as inconsistent with the Willis law. So far as the legislative intent is concerned, then, it was not repealed by implication. This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that section 148c, R. S., has been amended with the language now found in section 185, G. C., since the enactment of the Willis law. (See 97 O. L., 496.)

These considerations leave but one question; namely, as to whether or not it is competent for the general assembly to provide for the assessment and collection of two taxes on what may be regarded, in part at least, as the same subject of taxation. This is a constitutional question which I cannot adequately discuss within the limits of this opinion. It is sufficient to say that while we have always had in Ohio an initial fee and an annual franchise tax as well, and while in Southern Gum Company v. Laylin, 66 O. S., 578, it was strongly intimated, if not decided, by the supreme court that the subject of the initial tax is the same as that of the annual tax except that the one is on the privilege originally conferred and the other on the continued annual value thereof, yet the court, in that case, did distinguish between the original conferring of a privilege and the continued existence thereof as occasions for the exercise of the taxing power. So in the Willis law, and particularly in present section 5519, G. C., the imposition of the annual fee is permitted and required if the initial fee has been paid more than six months preceding the time when the annual report is due. This is a matter of grace only. As a matter of fact, when the initial fee is exacted there is no principle, contractual or otherwise, upon which it might be said that the corporation thereby acquires the right to exercise its corporate powers in the state for any particular length of time without further exaction; nor, on the contrary, could it be said that when the annual fee is paid the corporation thereby acquires the right to exercise its franchise to any possible extent in the state of Ohio until the next annual fee is paid, but only that it acquires the right perhaps to exercise its corporate franchise in the state, to the extent shown by its annual report, until such succeeding annual payment.

For all these reasons I conclude that the original conferring of the privilege of exercising the corporate franchise in Ohio is a separate and distinct occasion for the exercise of taxing powers as compared with the continuing existence of the franchise thus conferred. That being the case, it follows that there is no constitutional incompatibility between the payment of the annual tax or fee and the exaction of the initial tax or fee on account of an increase in the proportion of the authorized capital stock represented by property owned and business transacted in the state.

For these reasons, then, the second point urged by counsel is, I think, not well taken.

I am therefore of the opinion that under the circumstances named by counsel, a foreign corporation would be liable to compliance with section 185, G. C., if the amount produced by taking such percentage of its capital stock at a given time, as may be then represented by its property and business in Ohio as compared with its total property and business, is shown to have increased whether the percentage itself has increased or not.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—NOT AUTHORIZED TO ADVISE DIRECTORS OF A COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—CANNOT ACCEPT SUCH EMPLOYMENT—DIRECTORS OF SAID SOCIETY MAY NOT EXPEND MONEY RAISED FROM TAX LEVY TO EMPLOY AN ATTORNEY WHEN MONEY IS APPROPRIATED TO ASSIST SOCIETY AS AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

The prosecuting attorney of a county is neither authorized nor required to act as the legal adviser of the directors of the agricultural society of such county and cannot accept employment from said directors.

The directors of said society may not expend the money realized from the tax levy made by the county commissioners of such county and appropriated for the purpose of assisting said agricultural society as authorized by law, for the purpose of employing an attorney to advise them in matters pertaining to encumbering the real estate which said society owns in fee.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1915.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 30, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Where the commissioners of a county have paid money out of the county treasury, under section 9903, of the General Code of Ohio, for the purchase of real estate as a site for an agricultural society whereon to hold its fairs, and when it becomes necessary by the consent of the county commissioners to encumber said real estate, has the board of directors of said agricultural society any authority to employ an attorney to assist and advise them relative thereto and in getting the consent of the county commissioners to make said loan, other than the prosecuting attorney of the county?"

Section 9887, G. C., authorizes the commissioners of a county, under the conditions therein prescribed, to assist the agricultural society of such county in the purchase or lease and improvement of a site on which to hold county fairs, and to levy a tax for this purpose on all of the taxable property of said county.

This section has been supplemented by house bill No. 717, which was passed by the general assembly May 27, 1915, and will become effective September 3, 1915. Said house bill confers additional authority on the commissioners of the county to assist the county agricultural society in the improvement of grounds, the title to which is vested in fee in said society, and to levy a tax for this purpose.

Section 9900, G. C., provides for the sale, lease or purchase of lands by a county agricultural society, and section 9901, G. C., taken in connection with section 9900, G. C., prescribes the conditions under which the commissioners of the county may complete and carry into effect any contract or contracts made for the purchase or lease of a new site.

Section 9902, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "Payment for the purchase or lease of the land included in such site, and the improvements thereon, may be made by the county commissioners from any unappropriated funds in the county treasury at the time it is to be made. If no such funds are then in the treasury, the commissioners may issue the bonds of the county for such amounts as are necessary for the purchase or lease of the land and the improvements thereon."

Section 9903, G. C., provides for the levy of a tax by the county commissioners to pay the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity. The question of the issue of bonds must first be submitted to a vote of the electors of the county at the next general election for county officers held not less than thirty days after receiving from the agricultural society the notice provided for in section 9900, G. C., under authority and in compliance with the requirements of sections 9904 and 9905, G. C.

Section 9908, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 360, provides:

"When the commissioners of a county have paid, or pay, money out of the county treasury for the purchase of real estate as a site for an agricultural society whereon to hold its fairs, the society shall not encumber such real estate with any debt, by mortgage or otherwise, without the consent of the commissioners duly entered upon their journal.

"When such consent is obtained the society may encumber such real estate in order to pay the cost of necessary repairs and improvements to an amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of its value. In order to ascertain the value of such real estate the commissioners shall appoint three disinterested free-holder residents of the county to appraise such real estates. The appraisers so appointed shall, within ten days after their appointment, upon actual view of such premises, appraise such real estate and return such appraisement under oath to the board of county commissioners. And the appraisement so made shall be considered the value of such real estate for the purpose of mortgage or other encumbrance."

Where the commissioners of a county, acting under authority and in compliance with the provisions of the statutes above referred to, have assisted the county agricultural society in the purchase of real estate as a site on which to hold county fairs, and it becomes necessary to encumber said real estate, with the consent of said county commissioners, duly entered on their journal, to pay the cost and expense of making the necessary repairs and improvements to an amount not to exceed twenty per cent. of the value of said real estate, you inquire whether the board of directors of said agricultural society may employ an attorney, other than the prosecuting attorney, to assist and advise them in such proceedings.

Section 2917 provides in part:

"The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties."

Inasmuch as the directors of the county agricultural society are not county officers and said board of directors is not a county board, within the meaning of the above provision of section 2917, G. C., the prosecuting attorney is neither required nor authorized to act as the legal adviser of said directors. Furthermore, I am of the opinion that the prosecuting attorney of the county in the proper discharge of his official duties can not accept employment from the directors of said agricultural society.

Under provision of section 9885, G. C., said society is declared to be a body corporate and politic and as such capable of suing and being sued and of holding in fee simple real estate purchased by said society as a site whereon to hold its fairs.

Under provision of section 9908, G. C., as above quoted, the directors of said society, with the consent of the county commissioners, may encumber the real estate which said society owns in fee.

Inasmuch as the prosecuting attorney of the county cannot act as the legal adviser of said directors and in view of the above provision of the statute authorizing said directors, with the consent of the county commissioners, to encumber the real estate owned by said society, it might seem that this authority carries with it authority to employ an attorney to advise them in said proceedings .

I call your attention, however, to section 9893, G. C., which provides:

> "When money has been raised by taxation in a county for the purpose of leasing lands for county fairs, or of erecting buildings for county fair purposes, or for making improvements on county fair grounds, or any purpose connected with the use of county fair grounds or the management thereof by a county agricultural society, it shall be used for such purpose only, notwithstanding the law under which the money was so raised has expired by limitation. Such moneys shall be used for the purposes intended by the act under which they were levied and collected by taxation."

In view of the provisions of this statute and in the absence of an express provision of the statute authorizing such expenditure, I am of the opinion, in answer to your question, that said directors may not expend, for said employment, money realized from the tax levy made by the county commissioners and appropriated for the purposes authorized by the above provisions of the statutes. On the other hand, the expenditure for said employment of funds derived from sources other than taxation would be of no concern to the public and would be clearly within the powers of said society.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—FORM OF BOND FOR EMPLOYES AND DEPUTIES—SECTIONS 4 AND 871-4, G. C., CONSTRUED.

Uniform form of bond should be adopted by Industrial Commission of Ohio to comply with provisions of sections 871-4 and 4, G. C. Approved form prescribed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your favor of July 30th, which is as follows:

"This commission desires to adopt a form of bond to be used by such employes as are required to furnish bonds. By so doing we can easily comply with the provisions of section 4 of the General Code.

"Will you kindly submit a form which meets with your approval?"

Under the provisions of section 871-4 of the General Code. (103 O. L., 96) which is section 4 of the act creating the Industrial Commission of Ohio, it is provided, among other things, as follows:

"All employes or deputies of the commission receiving or disbursing funds of the state shall give bond to the state in amounts and with surety to be approved by the commission."

Section 4 of the General Code, is as follows:

"Every officer, on receiving an official bond which by law is required to be filed or deposited with him, shall, on receiving bond, record it in a book to be kept for that purpose. A certified transcript of the record of such bond shall be conclusive evidence of such record, and prima facie evidence of the execution and existence of such bond."

A form of bond which will meet the requirements of section 871-4 of the General Code, relating to the bonds of employes or deputies of the commission, may be prepared as follows:

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 7, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On account of pressure of business we have not sooner answered your letter of June 25th, written in answer to a letter from us of February 11th, relative to the refunding of amounts found due by state examiners.

Your letter is as follows:

"Complying with your request of February 11th, we have taken up with various justices of the peace in this county the matter of refunding to the township treasurer amounts allowed to them out of the township fund for office rent, as reported in the summary of findings for recovery by State Examiner Godfrey.

"The contention of these officers is that the amounts referred to were allowed by virtue of section 1750, of the General Code. While it is apparent that this section is unconstitutional, it is our opinion that until it has been so declared by a court, a justice of the peace would be protected by its provisions. The following cases which bear in a way upon this question are respectfully submitted for your consideration:

"State ex rel. v. Carlisle, 2 Ohio N. P., (n. s.) 637.

"State ex rel. v. Beacon, 66 Ohio St., 491.

"State v. Gardner, 54 Ohio St., p. 24, at page 48 (obiter).

"Heck v. Glass Company, 16 Ohio C. C., 111.

"State ex rel. v. Bingham, 14 Ohio C. C., 245.

"We would appreciate an opinion from you on this subject in order that we may take the necessary steps toward adjustment of these items."

The report of the state examiner on Colerain township, Hamilton county, in an examination made in 1914, contains the following:

"Payments of rent for justices of the peace have been as follows:

"1912, Dec. 30, Wm. Steinreide, J. P.----------$50.00

"1912, Dec. 30, Samuel Ruby, J. P.---------- 50.00

"1913, Dec. 22, Samuel Ruby, J. P.---------- 50.00

"The only authority for these payments was section 1750, G. C. This states that where there is, in any township in Hamilton county, no township hall or other public building belonging to the township, office rent not exceeding $50.00 a year may be paid from the township treasury for each justice of the peace. All laws of this special nature had been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. Therefore, the payments were illegal, and the amounts must be returned to the treasury by the officials named. It may be added, that for a number of years the township has been renting for township purposes a building that belongs to the township school district."

Section 1750, G. C., provides as follows:

"In any township in Hamilton county in which there is no township hall or other public building belonging to the township, each justice of the peace may provide himself with a suitable office at an annual rental not to exceed fifty dollars, which shall be paid from the general township fund by the township treasurer upon the certificate of the justice, countersigned by the township clerk."

From your letter it appears that there is no doubt in your mind, nor is there any doubt in our minds, that the above quoted section is unconstitutional. The question arises, however, as to whether or not moneys paid under such unconstitutional act may be recovered.

In your letter you cite various cases as bearing upon the subject.

The case of State v. Gardner, 54 O. S., 24, cited by you, has been carefully considered. This case, however, simply goes to the question, as we see it, of whether or not there can be a de facto officer without a de jure office, and does not cover the matter in controversy.

The case of State ex rel. v. Beacon, 66 O. S., 491, cited by you, while holding that the statute is unconstitutional, nevertheless declares on the ground of public policy that the officers should continue to discharge their duty thereunder until the judgment of ouster became effective, the execution of which judgment was suspended in order to give time to provide for a proper de jure organization. And we do not see that this case in any way bears upon our question.

The case of State ex rel. v. Bingham, 14 O. C. C., 245, cited by you, is to the effect that the official acts of officers acting in an office created by an unconstitutional law are acts of a de facto officer until the statute has been declared unconstitutional by competent judicial authority.

The case of Heck v. Glass Company, 16 O. C. C., 111, is to the effect that the official acts of one who performs the duties of an office created by an unconstitutional statute are, until the statute which creates the office and enjoins the duties is declared invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, the acts of a de facto officer.

All of these cases involve the question of the acts of a de facto officer, and on the ground of public policy it has always been held that the acts of a de facto officer are valid until such de facto officer is ousted from his position, and that the moneys paid to him as compensation relieves the state from paying the same amount to the de jure officer, whose office has been usurped by the de facto officer.

The case of State ex rel. v. Carlisle, 2 N. P., (n. s.) 637, is, however, a case that is very nearly in point in this matter. On page 638 the court states the case as follows:

> "The petition sets forth six separate causes of action. It seeks to have certain sections of the statutes, pertaining to the compensation and expense account of county commissioners, held unconstitutional, and also seeks to require defendant to cover back into the county treasury certain money which, it is claimed, he was paid as one of the county commissioners, and which payment, it is claimed, was unauthorized by law.
> "It is conceded that the laws in question, under which the defendant has been paid his salary and expenses, are objectional on constitutional grounds, and consequently invalid. But, notwithstanding that, one of the questions here made, is whether an officer, who discharges a duty enjoined upon him by an unconstitutional act before a court of competent jurisdiction declares the act to be unconstitutional, is protected in the discharge of that duty by the law under which he acted. In other words, can an action be maintained to recover back into the treasury the salary and expenses of such officer, paid to him under an unconstitutional law, but before it is so declared by a court of competent jurisdiction?
> "Counsel have cited no authorities directly in point on this question. The question has certainly not been decided directly in this state, and so far as I have investigated, I have been unable to discover elsewhere any case directly decisive of the question."

On page 640 the court says, relative to the acts of a de facto officer under an unconstitutional act:

> "If the acts of such an officer, under such a law, are valid and effective, then the fact that he demanded and was paid for his services the salary or compensation provided by the act would necessarily be valid. I cannot comprehend how that part of the act which concerns his official duties can be upheld, and the part thereof which provides for his salary denied."

The court in the above case was primarily considering the question of the compensation to be allowed to the county commissioners, and as he held that section 897, R. S., was void because of unconstitutionality, insofar as it related to the county in question, the county commissioners would therefore have been entitled to no remuneration for the services rendered. It is true that in the same section the expenses of the county commissioners were provided for and, therefore, in a sense the court passed upon the question of whether or not expenses could be allowed to a de jure officer, which expenses were provided for by a statute which was unconstitutional.

As was said in the opinion of the court, he was unable to discover any case directly decisive of the question. So far as I can ascertain the case was not taken further than the court of common pleas. I am unable to give my full assent to the conclusion reached by the court in the case foregoing mentioned. If the office is created and the salary fixed by an unconstitutional act, it may be that since the courts hold that the person occupying such unconstitutional office was an officer de facto and therefore that his acts were valid, he should receive the compensation provided for in said act. But in the matter under consideration there is no question of a de facto officer nor of the fees to be received by such de facto officer, but solely that section 1750 undertakes to allow, by way of expenses, a certain sum to the justices of the peace of Hamilton county that were not allowed to any of the other justices of the peace throughout the state. The money paid out under section 1750, the act being unconstitutional, but not having as yet been declared so by a court, would be money that was paid under a mistake of law.

"Money paid under an unconstitutional or invalid statute, without any circumstances of compulsion, is paid under a mistake of law and cannot be recovered back, except in so far as governed by the rule adopted in some states that illegal payments made by public officers to public officers by mistake of law are recoverable."

The rule is laid down in 30 Cyc., at page 1313, as follows:

"Except where it is otherwise provided by statute, the general rule is that a voluntary payment made under a mistake or in ignorance of the law, but with full knowledge of all the facts, and not induced by any fraud or improper conduct on the part of the payee, cannot be recovered back. And in so far as this rule is concerned, there is no difference between ignorance and mistake of law."

However, as a limitation to such rule, it is given on page 1314 of 30 Cyc.:

"The rule that money paid under a mistake of law cannot be recovered should be confined to cases falling strictly within it."

A further limitation to such rule is stated at page 1315 of 30 Cyc.:

"Although there are cases holding the contrary, the better rule seems to be that payments by a public officer by mistake of law, especially where made to another officer, may be recovered back."

This foregoing rule is recognized in the case of State ex rel. v. Weaver, 12 O. N. P., (n. s.) 41, the third branch of the syllabus in that case being as follows:

"The rule that money voluntarily paid cannot be recovered does not apply to the case of one public officer dealing with another public officer with reference to their compensation as such officers."

In the above case an action was brought by the prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county to recover for the county, under the authority vested in him by section 1277, Revised Statutes, a certain sum of money from the defendant, Weaver, for fees and mileage alleged to have been illegally drawn from the county treasury by said Weaver while acting as coroner. The second defense averred that the defendant drew from the county treasury, during said period, as salary and expenses a certain sum under a law which was declared unconstitutional about the close of his term, and upon being requested by the county auditor and county commissioners to repay said salary so drawn and his refusal so to do, the whole matter was compromised and settled by the commissioners and himself by agreement. A demurrer was pleaded to this answer.

The court, in its opinion, on page 42, says:

"The money drawn from the county treasury as salary by the defendant was under an unconstitutional law and the prosecutor might have brought suit to recover the entire amount thus paid because no act under that law was valid, or as was said by the supreme court in the case of Findlay v. Pendleton, 62 O. S. 80, on p. 88:

"'It (the unconstitutional law) was void, not only from the time it was declared unconstitutional, but it never had any validity and could not be invoked as a foundation of a right to be enforced in a court of justice.'

"Therefore, there could have been no defense interposed to an action by the prosecuting attorney against the defendant to recover the entire salary drawn by him under said unconstitutional law."

On page 44 the court says:

"The cases of voluntary payment cited by counsel for defendant in his brief mostly relate to individuals or private corporations dealing with one another or with public corporations, and not transactions of one public servant dealing with another public servant in reference to their compensation or salaries. Note what Judge Spear says in Jones, Auditor, v. Commissioners, supra, (57 O. S., 2189) on pages 211 and 212:

"'It is urged that as a condition of avoiding the conclusive effect of the commissioners' allowance there must be found either fraud or mistake, and neither is averred. This claim seems to rest on the idea that the board of commissioners is practically the county and that its official acts necessarily conclude the county. The assumption is fallacious.'"

The court concludes on page 45, as follows:

"The county has nothing of defendant's to pay back or tender back. The salary did not belong to defendant. He had no right to draw it. It was the county's money illegally drawn from the treasury by the defendant, and even if the defendant had actually repaid it and had not been allowed any fees he could by no legal claim ask the county to turn his salary over to him before calling upon him to return to the county illegal fees and mileage in his possession."

This opinion was affirmed in the 13th C. C., (n. s.) page 40. The conclusion of the opinion of the circuit court in this case is as follows:

"The basis of the case at bar is the payment to a county officer by the county commissioners of fees in conducting his office for which there is no statutory provision. The payment was contrary to law. The county commissioners, therefore, could not authorize such a payment, and if consummated and the money paid, the amount so paid can be recovered back. We think the case of Lewis v. State, 57 O. S., 189, is decisive of the case at bar."

The case was carried to the supreme court and affirmed without report.

The case of Printing Company v. State, 68 O. S., 362, was a case involving the publication of the sheriff's election proclamation, the number of times for which was fixed by statute, and the sheriff of Mahoning county caused the same to be published a greater number of times. An action was brought against the newspaper for the money received in excess of the amount which it should have received for publishing the said proclamation the number of times fixed by statute. In the said case, on page 372 of the opinion, the court says:

"If the rule of voluntary payment is to have application it disposes of all payments prior to those of the year 1898, for, as before stated, prior to the statute of April 25, 1898, there was no law which as to claims of this character enabled a prosecuting attorney to maintain an action. That act (present sections 1277 and 1278, Revised Statutes, now sections 2921 and 2922, General Code, provides, among other things, that:

"'The prosecuting attorneys of the several counties of the state, upon being satisfied that the funds of the county * * * have been misapplied, or that any such public moneys have been illegally drawn out of * * * the country treasury, * * * may apply by civil action in the name of the state to a court of competent jurisdiction to * * * recover back for the use of the county all such public moneys so misapplied or so illegally drawn out * * * from the county treasury.'

"Manifestly it is the purpose of this statute to reimburse the treasury for unauthorized payments from it not otherwise provided for. It is in one sense a remedial statute, and yet it gives a right of action which before its enactment did not exist, and could not, we think, apply to past transactions."

Section 286, G. C., in effect at the time that the payments were made in this case to the justice of the peace under section 1750, G. C., provides in part as follows:

"If the report discloses malfeasance, misfeasance, or neglect of duty on the part of an officer or an employe, upon the receipt of such copy of said report it shall be the duty of the proper legal officer and he is hereby authorized and required, to institute in the proper court within ninety days from the receipt thereof civil actions in behalf of the state or the political divisions thereof to which the right of action has accrued, and promptly prosecute the same to final determination to recover any fees or public funds misappropriated or to otherwise determine the rights of the parties in the premises. * * *"

This section, as we see it, stands in the same position as the sections under consideration in the case of Printing Company v. State, and gives a right of action to the prosecuting attorney to recover moneys misappropriated from township treasuries.

In view of the decisions I am of the opinion that, first: moneys paid under an unconstitutional act are in the same position as moneys paid under a mistake of law; that moneys paid from one public officer to another does not come within the rule that moneys paid under mistake of law cannot be recovered back; and, furthermore, that under the provisions of section 286, G. C., a right of action has been created in the prosecuting attorney to recover back this money in accordance with the finding of the bureau.

I am therefore of the opinion that suit should be instituted for the recovery of such money, and that the right to the recovery thereof is clear.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—SEPARATE ACCOUNT SHOWING PREMIUMS PAID INTO INSURANCE FUND BY STATE AND ITS POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS—RECORD OF DISBURSEMENTS TO PUBLIC EMPLOYES—AUDITOR OF STATE TO PRESCRIBE FORM.

The industrial commission is to keep separate account showing premiums paid into state insurance fund by the state and its political subdivisions, also record of disbursements made from fund on account of injuries to public employes. In making such record the county is to be regarded as the unit.

Auditor of state to prescribe form and manner of keeping the account.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 7, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion under date of July 26, 1915, relative to the keeping of accounts in the industrial commission, which request is as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"Referring to the last paragraph of section 1465-67, as amended vol. 103 O. L., page 79, kindly state what kind of ledger accounts must be kept by the industrial commission of the funds received from the state, counties, municipalities, school districts, and other taxing subdivisions.

"The practice is to keep a separate account of all moneys received from the state and separate accounts of the money received from each county, including various subdivisions thereof.

"What we desire to know is, whether this method of keeping the accounts is in compliance with the requirements of the law or whether a separate account should be kept with each taxing district enumerated in said section. * * *"

In your letter you refer to the provisions of the last paragraph of section 1465-67, as amended 103 O. L., 79, which provision is as follows:

"The state liability board of awards shall keep a separate account of the money paid into the state insurance fund by the state and its political subdivisions as hereinbefore provided and the disbursements made therefrom on account of injuries to public employes."

The particular question in which you are interested is as to the form of the accounts which should be kept by the industrial commission covering its transactions with the counties and the taxing districts therein.

Section 1465-65 of the General Code, as amended 105 O. L., 4, is as follows:

"In the month of December of each year, the auditor of state shall prepare a list for each county of the state, showing the amount of money expended by each township, city, village, school district or other taxing district therein for the service of persons described in subdivision one of section fourteen hereof, during the fiscal year last preceding the time of preparing such lists; and shall file a copy of each such list with the auditor of the county for which such list was made, and copies of all such lists with the treasurer of state. Such lists shall also show the amount of money due from the county itself, and from each city, township, village, school district and other taxing district thereof, as its proper contribution to the state insurance fund, and the aggregate sum due from the county and such taxing districts located therein.

"Provided, however, that should the industrial commission of Ohio on or before the first day of December in any year certify to the auditor of state that sufficient money is in the state insurance fund to the credit of any county or counties to provide for the payment of compensation to the injured and to the dependents of killed employes of such county or counties and the several taxing districts therein for the ensuing year, the auditor of state shall not prepare and file with the county auditors and the treasurer of state said list or lists for such county or counties specified in such certificate; and it shall be the duty of the industrial commission of Ohio to make and file such certificate with the auditor of state whenever in its judgment there is sufficient money in the state insurance fund to the credit of any county or counties to provide for the probable disbursements required to be made to the injured and to the dependents of killed employes of such county or counties and the several taxing districts therein for the ensuing year."

"In January of each year following the filing with him of the lists mentioned in the last preceding section hereof, beginning with January, 1914, the auditor of each county shall issue his warrant in favor of the treasurer of state of Ohio on the county treasurer of his county, for the aggregate amount due from such county and from the taxing districts > therein, to the state insurance fund, and the county treasurer shall pay the amount called for by such warrant from the county treasury, and the county auditor shall charge the amount so paid to the county itself and the several taxing districts therein as shown by such lists; and the treasurer of state shall immediately upon receiving such money, convert the same into the state insurance fund."

I find upon examination of the records of the industrial commission that with the remittances made by the auditors of the counties under the provisions of section 1465-66, supra, there is filed a list of the various taxing districts of the county, the amount of the payroll, the amount of premium due on account of said payroll for the various taxing districs, and that said list is posted by the industrial commission in its ledger account with the particular county.

Under the provisions of the last paragraph of section 1465-67, supra, it is made the duty of the industrial commission to keep a separate account of moneys paid into the state insurance fund by the state and its political subdivisions as therein provided, and the disbursements made therefrom on account of injuries to public employes.

As pointed out by the examiner who is now at work on the books of the industrial commission, there is no provision on the ledger for an entry showing the disbursements on account of injuries to public employes and it has been suggested that such a form should be adopted, in order that a complete, compact record showing the payments of premiums and disbursements would be readily accessible.

The supreme court of the state considered the provisions contained in the last paragraph of section 1465-67, supra, in the cases of:

> Porter et al., Trustees v. Hopkins, Treas. et al.
> Board of Education v. Hopkins, Treas. et al.
> State ex rel. Pogue, Pros. Atty. v. Hopkins, Treas, et al.
> City of Cincinnati v. Hopkins, Treas. et al.

which cases will be reported in volume 91 of the supreme court reports, not yet issued, and in referring to the question made this observation:

> "Section 20 of the law provides that the board shall keep a separate account of the money paid into the state insurance fund by the state and its subdivisions, and the disbursements therefrom on account of injuries to public employes. The board is further required by section 17 to communicate to the general assembly on the first day of each regular session an estimate of the amount necessary to be contributed to the fund during the next two years. These provisions are obviously for the purpose of enabling the legislature to provide such an insurance fund for the employes of the state and its subdivisions as would be sufficient to maintain the separate account above indicated."

From the statement in the opinion just quoted it will be noted that it is desired to keep the account of moneys received from the state and political subdivisions separate from the other accounts, with a view of creating a separate and distinct fund from which employes of the state and its subdivisions may be compensated for injuries sustained while in the employment of the public. A reading of the provisions of the last paragraph of section 1465-65, supra, shows further that in its transactions with the subdivisions of the state the industrial commission is to regard the county as the unit.

It is my opinion that the industrial commission should keep a separate account showing the payments made by the state and its political subdivisions and as to the form in which the account shall be kept I have to invite your attention to the provisions of section 274 of the General Code, as amended page 26 of volume 106 Ohio Laws, and to section 277 of the General Code, which are as follows:

"Sec. 274. There shall be a bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices in the department of auditor of state which shall have power as hereinafter provided in sections two hundred and seventy-five to two hundred and eighty-nine, inclusive, to inspect and supervise the accounts and reports of all state offices, including every state educational, benevolent, penal and reformatory institution, public institution and the offices of each taxing district or public institution in the state of Ohio. Said bureau shall have the power to examine the accounts of every private institution, association, board or corporation receiving public money for its use and purpose, and may require of them annual reports in such form as it may prescribe. The expenses of such examination shall be borne by the taxing district providing such public money. By virtue of his office the auditor of state shall be the chief inspector and supervisor of public offices, and as such appoint not exceeding two deputy inspectors and supervisors, and a clerk. No more than one deputy inspector and supervisor shall belong to the same political party.

"Sec. 277. The auditor of state, as chief inspector and supervisor, shall prescribe and require the installation of a system of accounting and reporting for the public offices, named in section two hundred and seventy-four. Such system shall be uniform in its application to offices of the same grade and accounts of the same class, and shall prescribe the form of receipt, vouchers and documents, required to separate and verify each transaction, and forms of reports and statements required for the administration of such offices or for the information of the public."

From a perusal of the sections quoted the powers and duties of your office will be at once apparent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—NO AUTHORITY TO HIRE DETECTIVE TO POLICE TOWNSHIP—DECIDED IN FORMER OPINION NO 689, AUGUST 5, 1915—TRUSTEES MAY PROVIDE FOR POLICING OF TOWNSHIP BY CONSTABLE—SEE SECTION 3348, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 7, 1915.

HON. C. H. CURTISS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Since mailing you my opinion of August 5, 1915, in which I held that township trustees may not lawfully hire a detective and pay him from township funds to police a township and discover burglars or the perpetrators of other crimes committed in a township and to enforce the speed laws applicable to motor vehicles, my attention has been called to the provisions of section 3348, G. C., which is as follows:

> "The trustees of a township may designate any duly elected and qualified constable as police constable. The trustees may pay such police constable from the general funds of the township not to exceed one dollar and fifty cents per day for the time actually spent in keeping the peace, protecting property and performing his duties as police constable as required by law. Such police constable shall not be paid under this section for services for which the statute elsewhere provides a fee, and he shall file an itemized bill of his expenses and services with the trustees before they may be allowed and paid."

This section, of course, does not alter the conclusion which I expressed in my former opinion with respect to the exact question then submitted by you. It furnishes, however, a means whereby the trustees may provide for the policing of the township, and in my opinion the services which may be exacted of a police constable under a designation made under section 3348 cover all those which you enumerate. The choice of the trustees is, however, limited to duly elected and qualified constables of the county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEPUTY STATE FIRE MARSHALS—CONFIDENTIAL POSITIONS—COMMISSION MUST DETERMINE WHETHER IT IS PRACTICABLE TO DETERMINE MERIT AND FITNESS OF APPLICANTS BY COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS—PERSONS IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE BY VIRTUE OF NON-COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION WILL HAVE TO BE APPOINTED AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 486-21, G. C.—CERTAIN EXCEPTIONS.

Assistant fire marshals are not "deputies" within the meaning of paragraph 8 of section 8 of the civil service law of 1913; nor are the so-called "deputy state fire marshals," except the "first deputy." Such positions are, however, confidential and the civil service commission must determine whether, being such, it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants therefor by competitive examination.

Persons holding positions in the classified service of the state and its subdivisions, as defined by the civil service act of 1915, 106 O. L., 400, by virtue of non-competitive examinations will, when that law goes into effect, have to be appointed as provided in section 486-21 thereof, in order to be entitled to continue in the service and be paid compensation, unless there is no eligible list, in which event they may be retained provisionally, or unless they have served the state or one of its subdivisions continuously and satisfactorily for seven years prior to January 1, 1915, in which event they are considered as appointees under the new law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 7, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 2nd, requesting my opinion upon two questions, the first of which was submitted to the commission by the state fire marshal. The questions are as follows:

"(1) Under the present civil service law (103 O. L., 702) are the assistant fire marshals in the classified or in the unclassified service?

"(2) What will be the status of employes who are holding positions in the classified service of the state by virtue of non-competitive examinations when what is known as the 'Barnes-Moore law' (106 O. L., 400) goes into effect, as determined by section 486-21 of the General Code as therein amended? Will their services terminate automatically when the new law becomes effective?"

The first question, as the fire marshal correctly states, involves consideration of section 486-8 of the General Code, as found in 103 O. L., 702, and in particular paragraph 8 thereof defining one of the groups of positions in the unclassified services. Said paragraph 8 is as follows:

"The deputies of elective or principal executive officers authorized by law to act generally for and in place of their principals and holding a fiduciary relation to such principals."

The contention is made by the state fire marshal that what are designated as "assistant fire marshals" satisfy the requirements of this paragraph and that their positions are therefore in the unclassefied service. If this contention is correct, then no other provision of the present civil service law need be consulted their positions are therefore in the unclassified service. If this contention is incorrect and assistant fire marshals do not satisfy the description of "deputies" as embodied in said paragraph 8, then another question will arise in view of the statutes relating to the powers and duties of such assistants as I shall hereafter quote them, namely, as to whether or not, in spite of the fact that such assistants are not embraced within any of the specifically enumerated kinds of positions in the unclassified service, they are, nevertheless, in the unclassified service by reason of not being in the competitive class or the classified service because it is impracticable to ascertain the merit and fitness of applicants for such positions by competitive examinations.

Both of these questions as to the application of the state civil service law require me to consider the provisions of the law relative to the office of the state fire marshal.

Section 821 of the chapter relating to this department provides as follows:

"The state fire marshal shall appoint a first deputy fire marshal, a second deputy fire marshal, and a chief assistant, each of whom he may remove for cause. He may employ such clerks and assistants, and incur such other expenses as are necessary in the performance of the duties of his office."

Section 823 provides as follows:

"The deputy fire marshal and the chief assistant shall assist the state fire marshal in the discharge of his duties. During the absence or disability of the state fire marshal, the first deputy fire marshal shall perform the duties of the office."

Other sections of the chapter make it the duty of the state fire marshal to investigate the cause, origin and circumstances of each fire occurring in the state by which property has been destroyed or damaged, to determine whether the fire was the result of carelessness or of design, and in the event that it is determined that there is evidence sufficient to charge a person with arson or similar crime to cause such person to be arrested and charged with such offense, and to furnish the prosecuting attorney the evidence gathered in the investigation, with the names of witnesses and a copy of material testimony taken in the case.

The specific duties of the marshal, his deputies and assistants in the premises are described as follows:

In the first place, section 824, which creates the duty to investigate, mentions "the state fire marshal, the chief of the fire department of each city or village in which a fire department is established, the mayor of each incorporated village in which no fire department exists, and the township clerk of each organized township without the limits of a village or city."

Attention is called to the fact that in this section, which is the operative section on which all others depend, no mention is made of the deputies or assistants of the fire marshal. The local officers charged with duties under this section are, by section 825 of the General Code, required to notify the state fire marshal of all fires and to furnish him a written statement of all facts relating to their cause and origin. Thereupon it is provided in section 827 that,

> "If in his opinion further investigation is necessary, the state fire marshal, a deputy state fire marshal or an assistant fire marshal, shall take or cause to be taken the testimony on oath of all persons supposed to be cognizant of any facts, or to have means of knowledge in relation to the matter concerning which an examination is required by law to be made, and cause such testimony to be reduced to writing."

Section 828 provides as follows:

> "If the state fire marshal, or a deputy or assistant fire marshal, is of the opinion that there is evidence sufficient to charge a person with arson or a similar crime, he shall arrest him or cause him to be arrested and charged with such offense. He shall furnish the prosecuting attorney such evidence, with the names of witnesses, and a copy of material testimony taken in the case."

Section 830 confers the power to compel the attendance of witnesses in the following language:

> "The state fire marshal, a deputy state fire marshal or an assistant fire marshal, may summon and compel the attendance of witnesses before him to testify in relation to any matter which by law is a subject of inquiry and investigation, and require the production of any book, paper or document he deems pertinent."

Section 831 confers authority to administer oaths in the following language:

> "The state fire marshal, a deputy state fire marshal or an assistant fire marshal shall have authority to administer an oath to any person appearing as a witness before him. * * *"

There are other related provisions of the statutes of the same tenor, but their quotation is not necessary in this connection.

Section 835 confers a different kind of power, namely, the power to condemn dilapidated and defectively constructed buildings especially liable to fire and so situated as to endanger other buildings. This power is conferred upon "the state fire marshal, a deputy state fire marshal, or assistant fire marshal, or any officer mentioned in the preceding section" (including the fire chiefs, the mayors and clerks referred to in section 834 of the General Code).

Section 836 is very important in this connection. It provides for an appeal by the owner of a building so condemned from the order of a subordinate officer or of the fire marshal himself to the state fire marshal, who may "affirm, modify, revoke or vacate said order." This power is manifestly one which may be exercised only by the state fire marshal.

Section 838 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal shall keep in his office a record of all fires occurring in the state, the origin of such fires and all facts, statistics and circumstances relating thereto which have been determined by investigations under the provisions of this chapter. Except the testimony given upon an investigation, such record shall be open at all times to public inspection and such portions thereof as the superintendent of insurance deems necessary shall be transcribed and forwarded to him within fifteen days from the first of January each year."

In my opinion, the assistant fire marshals do not satisfy the description of "deputies" in paragraph 8 of section 8 of the original civil service law, for the reason that although they are, of course, under the supervision of the state fire marshal and subject presumably to his orders, the powers and duties which the statutes devolve upon them are conferred upon them in an independent capacity. In such investigations as an assistant may make and in making such orders as an assistant may issue, such assistant acts in his own right and not "for and in place of his principal." It is different with respect to the first deputy fire marshal, as under section 823 of the General Code he may act, under certain circumstances, in place of his principal. He is in every sense of the word a "deputy" as the term is used in paragraph 8 of section 8 of the civil service law.

But, as already suggested, the conclusion that assistant fire marshals are not "deputies" does not suffice to keep them in the competitive class or the classified service, if it is impracticable to ascertain the merit and fitness of applicants therefor by competitive examinations.

That the petition of assistant fire marshal is a confidential one abundantly appears. They are to make investigations which are to be secret. They are to co-operate with prosecuting attorneys and assist them in the preparation of the trial of criminal cases. Like every investigation which precedes an indictment, their investigations partake of the character of secret service. As the state fire marshal points out in his letter, incendiarism is one of the most difficult crimes to detect. It is difficult not only to determine who has committed the crime, but even to determine whether or not a crime has been committed. It is necessary, therefore, that the proceedings of the assistant fire marshals, as well as the deputy fire marshals, be surrounded by absolute secrecy. The information which they acquire is absolutely confidential, to be imparted only to their superior officer, the state fire marshal, or to the prosecuting attorney. It would be difficult to imagine a plainer instance of a confidential position than the one now under consideration.

For the sake of clearness I may say that the fire marshal is correct in his contention that there is no practical distinction between the position of assistant fire marshal and deputy state fire marshal, except with respect to the first deputy. I should have to advise that "deputy fire marshals" are not within the description of paragraph 8 of section 8 of the present civil service law (except as to the first deputy) any more than are the assistant fire marshals, but such deputy fire marshals are the incumbents of confidential positions, just as are the assistant fire marshals, and the civil service commission may determine whether it is practicable to ascertain the merit and fitness of applicants therefor by competitive examinations.

Your second question involves consideration of section 486-31 of the General Code, as amended 106 O. L., 418. That section, which is entitled and in substance is a schedule, the office of which is to determine the effect of the new law upon the existing conditions, provides as follows:

> "All officers, employes and subordinates in the classified service of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, holding their positions under existing civil service laws, and who are holding such positions by virtue of having taken a regular competitive examination as provided by law, shall, when this act takes effect, be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act; but no person holding a position in the classified service by virtue of having taken a non-competitive examination shall be deemed to have been appointed or to be an appointee in conformity with the provisions of this act; provided, however, that all persons who have served the state or any political subdivision thereof continuously and satisfactorily for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915, shall be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act.
> "The name of each officer, employe and subordinate holding a position in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof at the time this act takes effect, who has not passed a regular competitive examination and who has not been in the service seven years as herein provided shall, within ten days after this act becomes effective, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission and shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. If any such person is reappointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act. If no eligible list exists such person may be retained as a provisional employe until such time, consistent with reasonable diligence, as the commission can prepare eligible lists when such position shall be filled as prescribed in this act; provided that nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to vacate the office of existing chiefs of police departments or chiefs of fire departments of municipalities. All existing eligible lists of persons who have taken regular competitive examinations shall continue in force for the term of eligibility to be fixed by the commission as provided herein. All property of the existing state commission shall become the property of the commission to be appointed hereunder."

Under the provisions of this section it is clear that unless no eligible list exists, a person holding a position in the classified service at the time the act goes into effect by virtue of a non-competitive examination ceases to have any right to continue to perform his duties and receive his compensation. It is not necessary that such person be removed by the appointing authority, but section 486-31 of itself has the effect of removing him (unless, of course, he has continuously and satisfactorily served the state or any political subdivision thereof for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915). Even if no eligible list exists, such person has, strictly speaking, no right to continue to serve the state or one of its political subdivisions until removed, but in such event his retention may be deemed to be in the capacity of a provisional employe only and may last until such time only as the commission may, consistent with reasonable diligence, prepare eligible lists.

The name of each person holding a position in the classified service by virtue of a non-competitive examination must, within the time specified in the section, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission, and it shall thereupon be certified on the eligible list for appointment to such position. At such time there is, technically at least, a vacancy in the position which it is the duty of the appointing officer to fill. This duty must be discharged in accordance with the provisions of the new law, and particularly in accordance with section 486-13 as therein amended. This section provides in part:

> "Each appointing officer shall report to the proper civil service commission the name of such appointee or employe, the title and character of his office, the duties of same, the date of the commencement of same, and the salary or compensation thereof, and such other information as the commission requires in order to keep the roster herein mentioned."

Under section 486-31, "if any such person is reappointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act."

So that, technically, the only proper way in which the services of a person now holding a position in the classified service of the state, as defined by the new law, under and by virtue of a non-competitive examination may be continued in such position after the new act goes into effect, when there is an eligible list, is for the appointing officer, acting in accordance with section 486-13, to report his appointment to the civil service commission. It is clear at least that some positive and unequivocal act on the part of the appointing authority is necessary in order to constitute an "appointment," and that such persons under the circumstances named may not continue to occupy their positions without such an appointment.

Your question does not require me to go so far as to determine what would constitute an "appointment." I incline to the view that section 486-13, above quoted, is directory merely, except as enforced by section 286-21 of the new law, which authorizes the proper civil service commission to refuse to certify to a pay roll containing the names of persons not employed in pursuance of the law and the rules adopted thereunder. By virtue of this provision a proper civil service commission has it in its power to prevent such a person from receiving compensation for services rendered after the act goes into effect when not appointed under the new act. But in my judgment the civil service commission may, in cases where substantial justice requires it, waive some of the technical requirements of section 486-13, if satisfied that the appointing authority by some unequivocal act has indicated an intention to reappoint the incumbent who has theretofore held under and by virtue of a non-competitive examination, and may certify to a pay roll containing the name of such person on account of services rendered after the new law goes into effect.

I should prefer, however, not to express any positive opinion with respect to this type of questions, for I apprehend that when the new law goes into effect there may be a large number of such questions and each one of them would have to be answered according to its own peculiar facts.

Unless, however, a reappointment is made, or unless the incumbent has continuously and satisfactorily served the state or one of its political subdivisions for the prescribed period prior to January 1, 1915, or unless the retention of the incumbent is provisional as authorized in section 486-13 as amended by the new act, the persons in the class concerning which you inquire will, when the new law goes into effect, no longer be entitled to act as officers or employes of the state or any of its political subdivisions unless they are brought into the unclassified service by the provisions of the new law. Under such circumstances, it will be the duty of the proper civil service commission to refuse to approve the pay roll on which the name of such a person appears, for and on account of services rendered after the new law goes into effect.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—APPROPRIATION FOR SALARIES "MINOR OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES"—AVAILABLE ONLY FOR COMPENSATION OF MINOR OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES IN STATE INSTITUTIONS—CANNOT PAY SALARY OF CLERK IN ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES OF BOARD.

The appropriation account for salaries of "minor officers and employes" in the list of appropriations for the board of administration is available only for the compensation of minor officers and employes in the state institutions under the management of said board, and may not be expended in the payment of the salary of a clerk in the administrative offices of the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 9, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 3rd, you request my opinion as follows:

> "In house bill No. 701, page 2, under the appropriations made to the Ohio board of administration, appears the following:
> "'Minor officers and employes, $1,305,100.00'
> "1. Define what constitutes 'minor officers.'
> "2. Could the board of administration employ a clerk in the administrative offices and pay him from this appropriation?"

The appropriation bill, insofar as it applies to the Ohio board of administration, follows the budgetary form used throughout the measure. In accordance with that form there are specific appropriations for "salaries, A 1," a lump sum appropriation for "wages, A 2," and a lump sum appropriation for "unclassified personal service, A 3;" but this last item is limited in this instance to "prisoners' compensation."

The appropriation of which you speak is the only exception to the rule of specific salaries. Thus there is an appropriation for the salaries of the four members of the board, one for that of the fiscal supervisor and secretary, one for that of the consulting engineer, etc. I find also appropriations for the salaries of "chief clerk fiscal department," "chief clerk purchasing department," "2 voucher clerks," "9 clerk-stenographers," "filing clerk," and two separate specific appropriations for the salary of a "clerk" without any modifying adjective.

Obviously, all the items for salaries of positions such as those just referred to are appropriations for the administrative offices of the board of administration.

After some twenty-three such items, including the two for "clerk" above referred to, however, come, in the list of appropriations, the following two items which are in the order named:

"19 managing officers ---------- $46,100 00
"Minor officers and employes----------1,305,100 00"

Following these two items in the bill are specific appropriations for salaries of the department of juvenile research, headed as such.

Having regard to the powers and duties of the board of administration, and particularly to the fact that its principal, if not its only function, is to act as a central board of trustees or managers for all state institutions, with certain specific exceptions, it is very clear that the item for "19 managing officers" is intended to pay the salaries of superintendents and wardens of the various institutions.

The meaning of the phrase "minor officers and employes" is suggested by the connection in which it appears in the bill, and by the fact that there is nowhere in the appropriation bill any appropriation for the services of the great army of minor officers and employes in the various institutions, such as deputy wardens, assistant superintendents, matrons, physicians, chaplains, attendants, laborers, etc. Unless the appropriation account covers the personal service of such persons, there is no provision in the bill therefor.

On the contrary, the intention of the legislature to refer to such "minor officers and employes" in connection with the institutions of the state as such is reasonably clear. In my opinion, the words "minor officers and employes" mean the minor officers and employes of the several state institutions under the control and management of the board of administration.

It is true that the legislature might have been more specific in the use of language than it has been. However, it has made specific appropriations for the "minor officers and employes" of the central offices of the board. It has expressed its will as to the salaries of clerks who shall be employed by the board of administration in its general offices, and has gone into great detail in doing so. It will not be presumed that the legislature did specifically enumerate and separately set up the appropriation accounts for the salaries of such officers and employes in the central offices and at the same time make a lump sum appropriation even partially available for similar purposes, if another application of its language in making such lump sum appropriation is suggested.

Summarizing then: For the reason that there are numerous specific appropriations for salaries in the central offices; for the reason that the item for "minor officers and employes" is found in juxtaposition with the item "19 managing officers" and has obvious reference to the institutions; and for the reason that "minor officers and employes" standing by itself has primary application at least to the minor officers and employes of the institutions, as distinguished from the minor officers and employes of the board; and for one additional reason not yet mentioned, namely, because the statutes relative to the powers and duties of the board of administration provide for but one "minor officer" of the board, namely, the fiscal supervisor and secretary, whose salary is otherwise provided for, whereas there are numerous "minor officers" of the institutions as such, which indicates the exclusive application of the term to the institutional officers and employes, I am of the opinion that a "minor officer," within the meaning of the item of the appropriation bill referred to by you, is an officer of one of the state institutions under the control and management of the board of administration.

The same rule applies to the definition of the word "employes" as used in the same appropriation account, from which it follows that your second question must be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—COUNTY SURVEYOR—MEMBER OF CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION AND CLERK THEREOF.

The offices of county surveyor and member of city board of education and clerk thereof are incompatible and cannot legally be held by the same person.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 9, 1915.

HON. DONALD F. MELHORN, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 28, 1915, requesting my written opinion, received and is as follows:

> "The surveyor-elect of Hardin county is a member of the board of education of the city school district of Kenton, Ohio. He desires to know whether there is any legal barrier to his holding both offices."

Also your letter of August 3, 1915, as follows:

> "I desire to supplement my letter to you of July 28, 1915, with the information that the surveyor-elect of Hardin county is not only a member of the board of education of the city school district of Kenton, Ohio, but he is also the clerk of said board."

The answer to your question depends, first, upon whether or not there is any statutory inhibition against one person holding the two offices mentioned and, second, whether there is any relation existing between the duties of the two offices which would make the holding of both by the same person incompatible.

The only statutory inhibition of this character relative to county surveyors is section 2783, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "No person holding the office of clerk of court, sheriff, county treasurer or county recorder, shall be eligible to the office of county surveyor."

There is no such express provision with reference to members or clerks of boards of education.

There being no statutory inhibition against the holding of the two offices by the same person, an examination of their duties must be made to ascertain whether they come within the rule of incompatibility. This rule is laid down in 28 Cyc., 1381, as follows:

> "It may be laid down as a rule of the common law that the holding of one office does not in and of itself disqualify the incumbent from holding another office at the same time, provided there is no inconsistency in the functions of the two offices in question. But at common law two offices whose functions are inconsistent are regarded as incompatible."

Also Dillon on Municipal Corporations, page 166 (note):

"Incompatibility in office exists where the nature and duties of the two offices are such as to render it improper from considerations of public policy for one incumbent to retain both."

Section 2792 of the General Code, prescribes the duties of the county surveyor as follows:

"The county surveyor shall perform all duties for the county now or hereafter authorized or declared by law to be done by a civil engineer or surveyor. He shall prepare all plans, specifications, details, estimates of cost, and submit forms of contracts for the construction or repair of all bridges, culverts, roads, drains, ditches and other public improvements, except buildings, constructed under the authority of any board within and for the county. When required by the county commissioners, he shall inspect all bridges and culverts, and on or before the first day of June of each year report their condition to the commissioners. Such report shall be made oftener if the commissioners so require."

Section 4736 of the General Code, (104 O. L., 138) prescribes additional duties of the county surveyor. Said section authorizes the county board of education to make certain changes in boundary lines and further provides:

"In changing boundary lines and other work of a like nature the county board shall ask the assistance of the county surveyor and the latter is hereby required to give the services of his office at the formal request of the county board."

Section 6510, of the General Code, with reference to construction of county ditches, provides as follows:

"The board of education of a district interested in land granted by congress for the support of common schools, unless such lands have been permanently leased, and of a district owning or holding other land for school purposes, when an assessment is made upon such land, or part thereof, under the provisions of this chapter, shall pay such assessment out of the contingent fund of the district, and if necessary for that purpose, may increase the levy for such fund otherwise authorized by law."

And section 6455, G. C., prescribes duties of county surveyor regarding same as follows:

"The county commissioners, by such order, shall direct the county surveyor or engineer to make and return a schedule of the lots and lands, and public or corporate roads or railroads that will be benefited, with an apportionment of the cost of location, and the labor of constructing the improvement, in money, according to the benefits which will result to each. In apportioning the costs of such improvement, the benefits to any lots or lands by diking them, in whole or in part, shall be considered with other benefits, and a specification of the manner in which the improvement shall be made and completed, the number of flood-gates, waterways, farm crossings and bridges necessary, including kinds and dimensions thereof, and all county and township lines and railway crossings."

Section 4680 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"Each city, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, shall constitute a city school district."

County surveyors, therefore, have duties to perform with reference to the establishment of county ditches and under section 6510, supra, a portion of the cost thereof may be assessed against and paid by a school district. County surveyors also have certain duties to perform in the establishment of boundary lines of certain school districts. Inasmuch as a city school district may be partly outside the limits of a municipal corporation, such school district may become interested in the establishment of a county ditch, or the boundary line of a school district, in a manner adverse to the county or the county board of education, in either of which cases the county surveyor in his official capacity as a county officer has certain duties to perform. The possible conflict between the duties of the two offices brings them within the rule of inconsistency above laid down and it would be against public policy for a county surveyor to act as a member or clerk of a city school district.

I also call your attention to senate bill No. 125, which will become effective September 4, 1915, section 138, of which provides:

"The county surveyor shall be the county highway superintendent. The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office."

as an additional reason why the county surveyor should not be either a member or clerk of a city school district for it would be manifestly impossible for him to discharge the duties of either of those offices without interference with the duties placed upon him as county surveyor.

I am therefore of the opinion that the offices of county surveyor and member of the board of education of a city school district, or clerk of such board, are incompatible and may not legally be held by one and the same person.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL OF VILLAGE—MEMBER THEREOF CANNOT LEGALLY BE PAID FOR SERVICES IN FUMIGATING QUARANTINED PREMISES.

A member of the council of a village cannot legally be paid for services in fumigating quarantined premises.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of July 3, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "May a member of the council of a village be legally paid for services in fumigating quarantined premises, or would such payment be in contravention of law as found in sections 3808, 4218 and 12912, General Code, or either of said sections? Attorneys for claimant cite 2 O. C. C., (N. S.) 167, as authorizing said payment."

Section 3808, G. C., provides:

> "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any provision of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other thing he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, or if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom."

Section 12912, G. C., provides:

> "Whoever, being an officer of a municipal corporation or member of the council thereof or the trustee of a township, is interested in the profits of a contract, job, work or services for such corporation or township, or acts as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer, in work undertaken or prosecuted by such corporation or township during the term for which he was elected or appointed, for one year thereafter, or becomes the employe of the contractor of such contract, job, work, or services while in office, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or both, and forfeit his office."

Both of the foregoing sections by their express terms apply to a member of council of a municipal corporation, one of them providing that no member of council shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation and the other providing that no member of council shall be interested in the profits of any contract, job, work or services for such corporation.

Section 4209, G. C., (106 O. L., 114) fixes the compensation of members of council of cities and section 4219, G. C., fixes the compensation of members of council of a village. Therefore any payment to a member of council for services rendered to a municipal corporation would be other than his fixed compensation and is prohibited by section 3808, supra, and would subject him to the penalties therein prescribed. Such payment would also constitute an interest in the profits of services for the corporation and would render the member of council liable to prosecution under section 12912, supra.

Section 4218, G. C., to which you call attention, provides as follows:

> "Each member of council shall have resided in the village one year next preceding his election, and shall be an elector thereof. No member of the council shall hold any other public office or employment, except that of notary public or member of the state militia, or be interested in any contract with the village. Any member who ceases to possess any of the qualifications herein required or removes from the village shall forfeit his office."

This section applies to villages and section 4207, G. C., contains a similar provision with reference to cities. Clearly the facts submitted by you would constitute such an interest in a contract with the city or village as is prohibited by these sections.

You call attention to the case of State ex rel. Miller v. Council of Massillon, 2 O. C. C., (n. s.) 167, claimed by the councilman in question to be authority for payment by the council for these services. An examination of that case will show that while it is authority for the proposition that it is mandatory upon the council to create a board of health, upon the board of health to appoint a health officer and fix his salary, and upon the council to appropriate money to pay such officer, the question of whether a member of council could perform the duties of a health officer and receive compensation therefor was not involved.

Section 4404 of the General Code, provides for the establishment by council of boards of health and appointment of the members thereof by the mayor and in villages a health officer may be appointed by council. Clearly it would be not only a violation of the provisions of sections 4207 and 4218 supra, but also against public policy for a member of council, the body which creates the board of health or in villages having no board of health appoints the health officer, to be appointed as such health officer. The holding of the position of health officer by a member of council is prohibited by these sections whether it be an office or whether it be a mere employment. The claim, therefore, not being in favor of a duly appointed health officer cannot be within the holding of the case of State ex rel. Miller v. Council of Massillon, supra.

I am therefore of the opinion that a member of council cannot legally be paid for services in fumigating quarantined premises.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—TEMPORARY POSITION ON POLICE FORCE TO TAKE THE PLACE OF MEN UNDER CIVIL SERVICE—PAINE LAW—MAYOR HAS NO AUTHORITY TO APPOINT OFFICER OUTSIDE OF CLASSIFIED SERVICE TO TAKE PLACE OF REGULAR POLICEMEN ON VACATIONS.

S was appointed from time to time to a so-called temporary position on the police force of a certain city, where the civil service provisions of the municipal code as they existed prior to January 1, 1914, were in force. S served in place of regular members who were on their vacations. He was appointed by the mayor outside of the civil service rules and regulations. Such appointment was void; S received no pay for fifteen days of such service and he has no legal claim therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In two letters, one under date of July 16th, and the other under date of July 29th, Hon. A. A. Porter, solicitor of the city of Zanesville, has requested my advice upon facts therein stated. Deeming the questions involved of sufficient general importance, I have determined to address an opinion thereon to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

The facts involved are as follows:

One S was repeatedly (though not, so far as the statement shows, so as that his service was continuous at all times) appointed by the mayor of Zanesville to a temporary position on the police force to take the place of men under civil service, who were sick or on their annual vacations. At the times at which such appointments were made there was an eligible list from which regular appointments might have been made. The name of S was not on such eligible list, although he had passed the examination. There was at no time any exigency or emergency requiring the appointment of a special patrolman. The statement of the solicitor is that there are twenty-three regular patrolmen and each are entitled under the ordinance to two weeks' vacation; and that whenever one was absent on his vacation S was appointed to take his place; so that while the statement is not made that the service of S had been continuous, it is evident that it had been practically so, and that in substance, if not in form, he was the occupant of a regular position under successive temporary appointments.

The last appointment of S under the circumstances named was made on February 1, 1913. He performed services under such appointment for a period of fifteen days, when the auditor refused to issue him a warrant for his semi-monthly pay. He thereupon quitted the service of the city and did not offer to perform any further services. Now, however, he threatens to bring suit against the city for the recovery of his pay for the fifteen days for which he has not been paid, relying upon a decision of the court of common pleas of Muskingum county, a copy of which is attached to the city solicitor's letter.

The question is as to whether or not under the circumstances named S has a claim against the city of Zanesville which the solicitor or the council would be justified in allowing without suit.

Ordinarily I would decline to express an opinion in respect to a question that is in litigation or is likely to be litigated. In this case, however, the administrative authorities of the city must determine what course to pursue. I therefore do not regard it as within the rule which would restrain me from an expression of opinion.

The first question which arises is as to the validity of the appointment under which S was serving when he performed the services for which he demands compensation. For if that appointment was valid, then as a matter of course he is entitled to his pay.

It will be observed that the question arises under the civil service provisions of the municipal code, familiarly designated as the "Paine Law," and not under the present civil service law of the state, which, on January 1, 1914, supplanted the Paine law.

The sections of the General Code which are involved are as follows:

> "Sec. 4382. The director of public safety shall classify the service in the police and fire departments in conformity with the ordinance of council determining the number of persons to be employed therein, and shall make all rules for the regulation and discipline of such departments, except as otherwise provided in this subdivision.
> "Sec. 4481. Appointments (to positions in the classified service) shall be made in the following manner: The appointing board or officer shall notify the commission of any vacancy to be filled. The commission shall thereupon certify to such board or officer the three candidates graded highest in the respective lists as shown by the result of such examination. Such board or officer shall thereupon appoint one of the three so certified. Grades and standings so established shall remain the grades for a period of six months, or longer if the commission so determines, and in succeeding notifications of vacancies, candidates not selected may be dropped by the commission after having been certified a total of three times.
> "Sec. 4488. To prevent the stoppage of public business or to meet extraordinary exigencies, as provided in this title, the mayor may make temporary appointments.
> "Sec. 4373. In case of riot or other like emergency, the mayor may appoint additional patrolmen and officers for temporary service, who need not be in the classified list of such department. Such additional officers or patrolmen shall be employed only for the time during which the emergency exists."

Upon consideration of the foregoing sections the following conclusions are suggested:

First, council is to determine the number of persons to be employed in the department of public safety, including the police department. No executive officer of the city has any right to enlarge, upon any pretext whatsoever, the regular force of the police department. If that force is insufficient the remedy lies with council. An appointment of an additional member of the police force made upon the plea that more members are necessary than the regular staff is illegal.

In the second place, all appointments in the regular service, as classified by the director, must be made from the eligible lists. An appointment to a position in the classified service otherwise made is void. This was the decision in State ex rel. v. Lea, 10 N. P., (n. s.) 364, affirmed, 15 C. C., 28, and this decision is not altered in my opinion by the case of State v. Keefer, 16 N. P., (n. s.) 145, affirmed, 20 C. C., (n. s.) 474, because that case presented an instance of an appointment to a regular position in the classified service made by the mayor under his power to make such appointments to prevent the stoppage of public business, when there was no eligible list from which a regular appointment could have been made. In the case submitted by the solictor of Zanesville there was an eligible list from which a regular appointment could have been made.

But appointments may be made, or rather could have been made under the law in force at the time the facts stated by the solicitor occurred outside of the civil service regulations by the mayor, under two conditions or circumstances, viz.:

(1) In case of riot or other like emergency. (Sec. 4373, G. C.)

(2) To prevent the stoppage of public business or to meet extraordinary exigencies "as provided in this title." (Sec. 4488, G. C.)

The two statutory provisions last above referred to overlap in part, for the phrase "to meet extraordinary exigencies as provided in this title" manifestly refers to the provisions of section 4375, and does not enlarge the effect of the latter provisions.

It follows therefore that the only contingencies upon which a mayor might make an appointment outside of the regular civil service regulations to a position in the police or fire department, under the laws as they existed at the time, were the existence of a riot or other emergency like a riot, or to prevent the stoppage of public business.

The facts clearly show an absence of the existence of either of these contingencies. There is no claim that there was any riot or any emergency like a riot justifying the appointment of S by the mayor. The only claim which could be made was that the appointment of S was necessary in order to prevent the stoppage of public business. This claim, however, cannot be sustained upon the facts stated by the solicitor, for it is my opinion that an insufficiency in the number of regular patrolmen provided by the ordinance of council will not justify successive temporary appointments so made as to call for services practically, if not actually, continuous, on the plea that the public business will be stopped if such appointments are not made. It is manifest that public business would not have been stopped had S not served. Moreover, the appointments of S, while temporary in form, were such as to make his service substantially regular. If the necessities of the city of Zanesville required that because of the vacations allowed to partolmen another position should be added to the force, that, as I have pointed out, could have been lawfully accomplished only by action of council in increasing the number of regular patrolmen.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the appointment under which S was serving in February, 1913, was void.

This conclusion raises the further question as to whether or not S is entitled to compensation for services actually rendered. The answer to this question is dependent, in a way at least, upon the question as to whether S was appointed as an officer or as an employe. This question, however, is determined by the decision of the supreme court in the case of State v. Baldwin, 77 O. S., 532, wherein it is held in substance that a member of the police department is an officer of the city. The same conclusion has been arrived at in other cases decided by inferior courts of this state.

It is the general rule which is followed in Ohio that a de facto officer cannot recover compensation pertaining to the office for services rendered by him. That is to say, the rule in full is that the disbursing officer will be protected if he pays compensation to the de facto officer for services actually rendered, but that if he refuses to pay he cannot be compelled to do so. I refer to the case of State ex rel. v. Newark, 6 N. P., 523 Ermston v. Cincinnati, 7 N. P., 635. Both of these cases refer to numerous authorities, and I am satisfied that they lay down the rule which must be followed in Ohio.

It is clear, of course, that S was a de facto officer, and his acts as such were valid; but he was not a de jure officer, because his appointment was void and he had no title to the office. Payment of compensation for services rendered by him as such de facto officer having been refused, the same cannot be compelled and he cannot, in my opinion, recover a judgment against the city on that behalf.

The case decided by the common pleas court of Muskingum county and referred to by the solicitor is, in my opinion, clearly distinguishable from the case about which the solicitor now inquires. In that case, the plaintiff was an employe in the department of service under the street superintendent. It appeared that the street superintendent had been unlawfully appointed, and on that ground payment of wages and other compensation of persons employed by him while acting as street superintendent was refused. It also appeared that the plaintiff had taken a civil service examination given by a civil service board which was subsequently held to have been illegally appointed.

The plaintiff in the case mentioned recovered judgment against the city of Zanesville, and such judgment was undoubtedly proper, for the relation sustained by him toward the city was that of an employe thereof, and not an officer. His contract of employment with the city and his qualification to make such a contract by satisfying the requirements of the civil service law were both valid as against the city, because the city had acted in the premises through de facto officers, the illegally appointed civil service commission and the illegally appointed street superintendent. The acts of these illegally appointed officers were binding upon the city and in favor of third parties sustaining a contractual relation to the city and dealing with such officers. This is the most familiar feature of what is known as the "de facto doctrine."

In the case which I have considered, however, the claimant himself was a de facto officer, and his right to recover compensation is measured by the rules applicable to de facto officers. He was not relying upon the action of some other de facto officer, and did not sustain any contractual relation to the city as the result of such reliance.

For all of the above reasons, it is my opinion that the officials of the city of Zanesville should resist the claim of S.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—STATE BANK MAY MAKE CONTRIBUTIONS OR DONATIONS TO PROMOTE CORPORATE PURPOSES—BOARD OF DIRECTORS MUST SO AUTHORIZE UNLESS OTHERWISE PROVIDED.

A corporation, by action of its proper officers, may make contributions or donations of corporate funds for lawful purposes when the primary object of making such contributions and donations is to advance and promote the corporate purposes.

Unless regulations to the contrary have been adopted by stockholders of an incorporated bank, under section 9714, G. C., such contributions and donations must be authorized by action of the board of directors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 10, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We have been asked a number of times as to whether or not a state bank can legally make contributions or donations without a resolution of its board of directors.
> "Kindly advise us."

From the language of your letter I assume that your question refers only to incorporated banks.

Your inquiry suggests a broader and more important question which must first be answered, i. e., have the directors, or any or all of the officers, of an incorporated bank authority to make contributions or donations of its corporate funds and assets; in other words, is such an act the exercise of a proper corporate function or is it unauthorized and ultra vires?

The funds and assets of a corporation are held and managed by its proper officers in trust and such officers may disburse the corporate funds only to advance and promote lawful corporate purposes and objects. The courts of the several states are divided upon the question, but the greater and better weight of authority seems to hold that contributions and donations made by a corporation, through its officers, not to advance the corporate interests, but purely for public or charitable purposes, and with no other end or object in view, are unauthorized and ultra vires, and the officers making the same may be required to make restoration to the corporate funds.

If, however, the purpose of the contributions or donations is lawful, and the primary object in making the same is to advance and promote the corporate purposes, either directly, so that immediate return may reasonably be anticipated, or indirectly, through the creation of favorable public sentiment, such contributions or donations are authorized as being in the nature of an expenditure for advertising purposes.

Hotel Company v. Military Encampment, 140 Ill., 248:

> "A subscription by an incorporated hotel company to a contemplated corporation for the purpose of establishing and holding in or near a city in which the hotel company is located and transacts its business, an international military encampment which might bring large numbers of strangers to the city and thus largely increase the business of all the hotels therein, is not so foreign to the business of keeping hotel as to call for the application of the doctrine of ultra vires."

Greene v. Blodgett, 55 Ill., App. 568:

"Effort to attract public attention and thus secure additional trade, has become a legitimate part of the business of tradesmen and corporations, in nearly all lines of trades and business. A contract made by the general manager of a business corporation with a public newspaper to advertise the business of the firm, or with a signwriter to paint or post signs in conspicuous places, to bring its business prominently before the public, would be regarded as properly within the scope of his authority and power as an agent of the company.

"A contract of subscription by a corporation to pay a sum named as an inducement to the selection of a site for a postoffice adjoining its place of business, where such selection and location would be of direct financial and business advantage and benefit to it, is within the scope of its authority and will be binding in law."

At page 562 of the opinion the court uses this language:

"It is believed that efforts to attract public attention and thus secure additional trade have become a legitimate part of the business of tradesmen and corporations in nearly all lines of business. Large sums of money are devoted to this purpose annually by firms and managers of corporations. Such outlays are now regarded as part of the legitimate expenses of a firm or corporation engaged in selling wares to the public as fully as the cost of advertising in the newspapers, of rent, insurance, clerk hire, taxes, etc."

Steinway v. Steinway & Sons, 40 N. Y., Supp., 718:

"1. It is not ultra vires for a manufacturing corporation to purchase a large tract of land for the purpose of erecting thereon its factory and residences for its employes, and to contribute toward the establishment there of a church, a school, a free library, and a free bath for its employes.

"2. It is not ultra vires for a manufacturing corporation to give away some of its manufactured goods for the purpose of extending the reputation thereof."

See, also:

Whetstone v. Ottawa University, 13 Kan., 320;
"Ft. Worth City Co. v. Smith Bridge Co., 151 U. S., 294;
Holt v. Winfield Bank, 25 Fed., 812.

Coming now to the specific question asked by you, and assuming that the contributions and donations referred to are made for the purpose of promoting the corporate objects, I call your attention to sections 9709 and 9714 of the General Code, found in the chapter relating to the organization and powers of banks, which are as follows:

"Sec. 9709. Regulations of the corporation may be adopted or changed by the assent thereto, in writing, of two-thirds of the stockholders, in number and amount or by a majority of the stockholders, in number and amount, at a meeting held for that purpose, notice of which has been given for that purpose by the president or secretary or any two directors personally or by written notice to each stockholder, or by publication, for thirty days, in some newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the corporation is located."

"Sec. 9714. In all other respects, such corporation shall be created, organized, governed and conducted in the manner provided by law for other corporations insofar as not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter."

Section 8660 of the General Code, relative to corporations generally, is as follows:

"The corporate powers, business and property of corporations formed under this title shall be exercised, conducted, and controlled by the board of directors; or, if there is no capital stock, by the board of trustees."

Under the provisions of sections 9714 and 8660, quoted above, the directors of a banking corporation have full control of its business and property unless the stockholders themselves, by regulations adopted under section 9709, have otherwise provided. If regulations to the contrary have not been adopted by its stockholders, subscriptions and donations made by a banking corporation should be authorized by action of its board of directors. This authorization may be by general resolution conferring such authority upon some one or more of the executive officers of the bank, or by special resolution adopted in each particular instance.

In arriving at the conclusions above expressed, I have assumed that the contributions and donations referred to in your letter were such as might lawfully be made by a corporation. I think it proper, therefore, to call your attention to the provisions of section 13320 of the General Code, making it unlawful for a corporation to make contributions and donations to a political party, committee or organization, or in aid of a candidate, or to use money or property for any political purpose. Contributions and donations for such purposes cannot, of course, be lawfully made by a corporation through any of its officers.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FOREIGN BREWING COMPANY—MAY NOT SHIP TO COLD STORAGE WAREHOUSE IN THIS STATE FROM WHICH SALES ARE MADE BY MANAGING AGENT OF COMPANY IN THIS STATE—BEER SO MANUFACTURED CANNOT BE SOLD FROM WAGONS OWNED BY SUCH FOREIGN BREWING COMPANY, WITHOUT OBTAINING STATE LICENSE.

A non-resident brewing company which operates a brewery in another state may not ship the product of the same to a cold storage warehouse in the state of Ohio from which sales of beer are made by a managing agent of the company in this state nor may such company make sales of the beer, so manufactured in another state, from wagons owned by such foreign brewing company in this state without first procuring a license to engage in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors and paying the Dow-Aiken tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1915.

HON. BEN A. BICKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Hamilton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 21, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "Can a brewing company non-resident of the state of Ohio and whose brewery is located in a sister state, and who ships its beer from its brewery to a cold storage warehouse in the state of Ohio, said cold storage warehouse being the property of, owned, and controlled by the foreign brewing company and in charge of a person designated as a 'managing agent' of said foreign company, sell beer from said cold storage warehouse in quantities of one gallon or more or from wagons owned by said foreign brewing company and operated from said cold storage warehouse, to customers who are duly licensed to retail intoxicating liquor, without securing a wholesale liquor license and paying the Dow tax?"

Your inquiry insofar as it relates to sales from a cold storage warehouse was considered in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, which may be found at page 781 of the report of the attorney general for the year 1913, a copy of which is herewith enclosed, the conclusion of which was as follows:

> "It is my opinion, therefore, that a managing agent of and for a foreign brewery could not deliver beer from its storehouse in this state on orders previously solicited by said agent from customers within this state, without said brewery having a license authorizing such sale of intoxicating liquors in the particular county in which, and at the place the business was being conducted. Further, it is my opinion that such foreign brewery could only have a license to do business at one place within the state, and could not be interested, directly or indirectly in any other place where intoxicating liquors were sold as a beverage."

In this opinion and the reasons upon which the conclusion is founded I concur.

Since the terms of the exception found in the definition of the phrase "trafficking in intoxicating liquors," section 6065, G. C., 103 O. L., 241, and applicable to the Dow-Aiken tax as provided in section 6071, G. C., 103 O. L., 241, et seq., are substantially the same as that of section 1261-63, G. C., 103 O. L., 237, in respect to the manufacture of intoxicating liquors from the raw material and the sale thereof at the factory, it would therefore follow that such foreign brewery would also be liable for the tax provided in section 6071, G. C., above referred to, upon sales made from the warehouse located in this state.

Under the provisions of sections 6065 and 1261-63 supra, there is made a further exception from the operation of both the license law and the Dow-Aiken law of sales of intoxicating liquors in quantities of one gallon or more from the wagon or other vehicle of the manufacturer to the holder of a liquor license or to individual consumers where the liquors are delivered to the homes of such consumers in territory wherein the sale of intoxicating liquors is not prohibited by law.

There then remains to be considered the other provision of sections 6065 and 1261-63, G. C., supra, as to sales from wagons, it being settled that sales made from the warehouse under the conditions outlined in your letter are "trafficking in intoxicating liquors." Can it be said that loading the beer on wagons at the warehouse and then selling from the wagons changes the character of the business so as to avoid the payment of the tax and the necessity of license? It is hardly to be considered that the legislature intended arbitrarily to do a thing for which there would be so little foundation in reason. It would seem that the legislature having in mind the existing state of the law, which permitted a manufacturer to sell under certain limitations without license and without tax at the factory, intended to provide that the liquor which could be so sold at the factory might be sold from wagons without the necessity of the order being actually transmitted to the factory before delivery.

With this apparent intention of the legislature in mind it remains to be seen whether they have used words to carry that intention into effect. An analysis of section 6065 supra, will, I believe, show that the language used is susceptible of such an interpretation. The first thing excepted by that section is the manufacture of intoxicating liquors from the raw material. The state has no authority to legislate for the purpose of imposing or exempting from a tax or license the manufacture of intoxicating liquors from the raw material in another state, hence it must be said that this particular part of the section applies only to intoxicating liquor manufactured in Ohio. With this in view the following phrase which provides: "and the sale thereof by the manufacturer thereof" can only mean the sale of intoxicating liquor manufactured in Ohio, and the additional phrase "or the sale thereof in said quantities from the wagon or other vehicle of the manufacturer" can likewise only mean a sale of intoxicating liquors manufactured in Ohio. The word thereof as used in this subsequent phrase can only refer to the intoxicating liquor mentioned in the first phrase of the sentence and if that phrase means intoxicating liquor manufactured in Ohio, then the subsequent phrase can only mean the same thing.

This interpretation suggests another view of this case. In enforcing its laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors is the state to look at the business in which the company is engaged in some other state, an activity over which the state has no control, or only at the business conducted within the state and over which the state does have control? Here is a company engaged in a certain business in this state, to wit: the sale of intoxicating liquors, and that business is being conducted in the same manner as any wholesale liquor dealer would conduct his business. Is it not proper for the state to place such a company in the same class as other corporations or persons engaged in the same kind of business in the state and apply the laws accordingly? Why should the state inquire as to what other kind of business the corporation or person might be doing in another state?

This particular company is clearly doing a wholesale liquor business in the state of Ohio and as such is subject to the laws governing such business, and the situation is not changed by the fact that such a company may be doing a manufacturing business in another state.

For all of the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the brewing company in question is not such a manufacturer of intoxicating liquor as is contemplated by the definition contained in section 6065 supra, and the business being carried on by the company in this state is trafficking in intoxicating liquors and such company is subject to the payment of the Dow-Aiken tax.

The same reasoning applies in the interpretation of section 1261-63, the exemption provisions therein being substantially the same as those of section 6065, G. C., and I am of the opinion that such a company must secure a license.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—APPROVAL OF ORDER RELATIVE TO POLLUTION OF COUNTY INFIRMARY DITCH, SUMMIT COUNTY, SEWAGE FROM CITY OF AKRON.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed herewith please find order of the state board of health relative to the pollution of the county infirmary lateral ditch, Portage township, Summit county, Ohio, by improperly treated sewage from the city of Akron.

I have examined the order, which is issued under section 1251 of the General Code of Ohio, find the same regular, and it is my opinion that it should be approved, having myself approved the same under the provisions of section 1251, G. C., I am transmitting to you the order for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOWLING GREEN STATE NORMAL COLLEGE—CONTRACT BETWEEN BOARD OF TRUSTEES AND THE LAKE ERIE, BOWLING GREEN AND NAPOLEON RAILWAY COMPANY, FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER FOR COLLEGE, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 11, 1915.

HON. J. E. SHATZEL, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Bowling Green State Normal College, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return herewith the draft of the proposed contract between the board of trustees of the Bowling Green State Normal College and The Lake Erie, Bowling Green and Napoleon Railway Company for electric light and power, together with a certified copy of the order of Judge Killits, of the district court of the United States for the northern district of Ohio, western division, authorizing the receiver of the railway company to enter into the contract and ordering that in case the receivership is terminated prior to the termination of the contract, the purchaser of the power house and lighting plant now in charge of the receiver shall be required to fulfill the contract as fully as the receiver would had he remained in control of the property.

The contract is very well drawn indeed, and I hereby approve its form.

There is, however, one contingency that is not providing against and, though it be a remote one, in my judgment it should be provided against in the contract. The eight article of agreement provides generally that upon the termination of the contract the board of trustees of the normal college shall have the option to purchase the property of the receiver furnished in accordance with certain other articles of agreement, at the fair replacement value thereof, which is to be ascertained in case the parties can not agree upon it by arbitrators, one of whom shall be appointed by each party and the third of whom shall be selected by the two thus appointed. If these arbitrators are to receive compensation, then a method of paying their compensation should be provided in the contract; otherwise some question may arise with respect to this detail.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COUNTY ROAD ESTABLISHED UNDER SECTION 6860, G. C., ET SEQ.—IF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES FAIL TO OPEN ROAD AS ORDERED, PROPERTY OWNERS UNDER AUTHORITY OF SAID COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, MAY OPEN SUCH ROAD AND REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS—COUNTY OR TOWNSHIP PAYS NO PART OF EXPENSE.

Where a county road has been laid out and established by the commissioners of such county, under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 6860, et seq., G. C., and the trustees of the township in which said road is located, having been ordered to open the same, fail to do so, the owner or owners of property along the line of said road, acting under authority of said county commissioners may open said road and remove all obstructions therefrom, providing the same is done without expense to the county or to said township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1915.

HON. C. ELLIS MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cambridge, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 3, 1915, which is as follows:

"I am requested to secure from you an opinion concerning a road in this county of which the following is a statement of the facts relating thereto.

"This road is in Jefferson township, Guernsey county, which road was allowed and established by the county commissioners, July 6, 1909; September 21, 1909, the county auditor issued an order to the trustees of Jefferson township to open the road, and the trustees refused to do so; suit in mandamus brought against the trustees November 13, 1909, and peremptory writ of mandamus decreed against them July 7, 1910, to open the road; petition in error was taken to the circuit court and on November 18, 1910, the judgment of the common pleas court was reversed for error, in that the record failed to show that the clerk of Jefferson township made a certificate as required by law, that there were no funds of the township on hand, unappropriated with which to open the road in question.

"On May 21, 1912, the Guernsey county commissioners passed the following resolution:

" 'Office of board of county commissioners, Guernsey county, Ohio.

" 'Cambridge, Ohio, May 21, 1912.

" 'In the matter of the opening of the county road in Jefferson township, Guernsey county, Ohio, petitioned for by Perry Ford, et al., which road has heretofore been established and ordered opened by this board, Perry Ford principal petitioner, W. L. Ford, George Steel, Charlie Johnson, et al., are hereby granted permission and given authority to proceed to open said road and do such work thereon at they may desire free gratis and without charge or expense therefor to either Guernsey county or Jefferson township, and said persons are hereby authorized to enter upon the premises over which said road is established for the purpose of doing said work and to remove or cause to remove any obstruction thereon and any fences thereon to the road boundaries as established.

" 'Given under our hands this 21 day of May, 1912.

" 'W. B. JOHNSTON,

" 'E. D. STONE,

" 'Board of County Commissioners,

" 'Guernsey County, Ohio.'

"Under this resolution, the parties herein mentioned proceeded to open said road after a fashion and did do so and is open at the present time to the public, but is not in very good condition.

"QUESTION. Do you consider this a lawful opening of the road as provided by section 6917 of the General Code?"

You state that the road in question was allowed and established by the commissioners of Guernsey county on July 6, 1909, and I assume that all the requirements of the statutes relative to such establishment, as provided for in section 6860, et seq., of the General Code, were complied with by said commissioners.

You further state that the county auditor issued an order to the trustees of Jefferson township in said county to open said road and that said trustees refused to do so.

Section 6881, G. C., relates to the status of a county road after the county commissioners have received the report of the viewers and have caused the report and the survey and plat of said road to be recorded, and provides in part as follows:

"Thenceforth such road shall be a public highway, and the county commissioners shall issue their order to the trustees of the proper township or townships directing it to be opened."

I take it therefore that the above mentioned order was not from the county auditor, but that said county auditor as clerk of said board of county commissioners, directed the order of said board to said township trustees.

The circuit court having reversed the judgment of the court of common pleas awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus in the action against said trustees requiring said trustees to open said road, on the ground that the record failed to show the certificate of available funds from the clerk of said township to said trustees as required by section 5660, G. C., the status of said road remained the same on May 21, 1912, the date of the passage of the above resolution, as it was on September 21, 1909, the date when said order of the county commissioners was issued to said trustees.

The persons mentioned and referred to in said resolution, acting under authority thereof, having proceeded in the manner set forth in your letter, you inquire whether said road may by considered lawfully opened under authority of section 6917, G. C., which provides in part as follows:

> "After two years from the date of an order establishing a county road, if it, or part thereof, remains unopened, and a petition setting forth such facts is presented to the county commissioners, signed by three or more of the original petitioners, or freeholders resident along the line of the road, the county commissioners may cause said road or part thereof, to be opened by contract."

At the time of the passage of said resolution by said county commissioners, more than two years after the order of said commissioners establishing the road in question, said road remained unopened. If, therefore, a petition setting forth such facts was presented to said commissioners, signed by three or more of the original petitioners or freeholders residing along the line of said road, the commissioners were authorized by the above provision of section 6917, G. C., to cause said road to be opened by contract.

You do not state that such a petition was presented to the county commissioners and, in view of the facts submitted by you I do not consider that this was necessary. The aforesaid resolution of said commissioners permitted the persons mentioned and referred to therein to open said road and authorized said persons to enter upon the premises over which said road is established for the purpose of doing said work and to remove any obstructions therefrom to the road boundaries as established. Said persons acting under the authority so conferred upon them by said county commissioners performed said work without expense to the county or to Jefferson township.

I am of the opinion therefore that there has been a substantial compliance with the requirements of section 6917, G. C., providing such road has in fact been opened to the established width and all obstructions have been removed therefrom.

The statutes nowhere define what constitutes an unimproved county road. As stated by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion found in the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1912, at page 1170, "it consists of little more than a strip of land with a raised portion in the middle properly graded to each side and drainage ditches running parallel thereto."

The order of the county commissioners to the trustees of Jefferson township to open said road was not affected by the decisions of the courts above referred to and was in force at the time of the passage of the aforesaid resolution of said county commissioners. Under section 7137, G. C., it is the duty of the road superintendent to open or cause to be opened and kept in repair the public roads and highways which are laid out and established in his road district, and to remove or cause to be removed, all encroachments, by fences or otherwise, and obstructions that are found thereon.

If, therefore, the road in question has not been opened to the proper width and any obstructions have not been removed therefrom, it is still the duty of the township trustees, under the order of the county commissioners, to direct the road superintendent of their district to perform the duties required of him by the above provisions of section 7137, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

Changes made in original valuations of personal property as fixed by the deputy assessor or the taxpayer prior to the making up of the duplicate, so that the same appear upon the tax list and duplicate itself (such changes being referable to the power of the district assessor under section 9 *of the Warnes Law), are not "additions and corrections made * * * to the tax lists of previous years" within the meaning of section* 18 of the Warnes Law; so that if such action is taken by the district assessor in one year it may not be made the basis of a complaint to the board of complaints at its session in the following year.

Complaints filed in 1914 as to valuations of that year and not acted upon by the district board of complaints at its 1914 session may not be heard by said board at its 1915 session.

Owners of real property who failed in 1914 to apply to the board of complaints for relief against assessments of which they had actual notice in that year may not secure relief as to the 1914 valuation by appealing to the board of complaints at its 1915 session. Such board may extend relief only as to the 1915 assessment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of August 4th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. If a complaint is filed with the board of complaints and said board fails to afford relief which the taxpayer considers adequate, would that be a bar to any relief by the district assessor under section 5401?

"2. If additions and corrections are made by the district assessor in 1914, before the completion of his tax list, without notice to the taxpayer and without his knowledge, may the district board of complaints in 1915 entertain a complaint as to such valuations from a taxpayer who filed no complaint?

"3. May the district board of complaints, at its session in 1915, hear complaints as to valuations of personal property for the year 1914, as to which no additions or corrections were made by the district assessor, and as to which no complaints were filed because of the fact that the owners did not learn of the increase in their valuations until after the said board had adjourned, or because of any other reason?

"4. If complaints filed in 1914 as to valuations of that year were not heard or were not dismissed by the district board of complaints, may such complaints be heard by said board at its session in 1915?

"5. Where changes in the valuation of real property were made in 1914 and the notices of such changes were duly mailed to the owners thereof as provided by law, and no complaints were filed, what, if any, remedy have such owners now against over-valuations for 1914?"

I call your attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, given to the commission under date of December 14, 1914, No. 1295. In that opinion all the provisions of the Warnes law which require interpretation in answering your questions are quoted and analyzed. It will shorten this opinion for me to say that I agree with the interpretation placed upon the related statutes by my predecessor and with the reasons given by him therefor. In this way, much general discussion which otherwise would necessarily underlie the consideration of your specific questions may be eliminated.

Your first question was specifically dealt with by my predecessor in the following language:

"Certainly, such relief cannot be obtained through the district assessor acting under section 5401, General Code, for the reason that his function under that section extends only to the correction of the returns, and when the returns have been supplanted by the determination of the board of complaints any proceedings on the part of the district assessor, under section 5401, would be in reality a correction of the work of the board of complaints. So that, while I have declined to pass, as a general proposition, upon the question as to whether or not a mere appeal to the board precludes action under section 5401, I do not hesitate to express an opinion that, where the board has actually acted on complaint made to it, the right of the district assessor to act under section 5401 in the matter of the assessment thus made by the board of complaints is destroyed."

I agree with this conclusion. If your question is to be interpreted as meaning that the board of complaints has taken some action upon the complaint filed with it, in my opinion, the district assessor would have no authority to exercise the powers formerly possessed by the county auditor under section 5401 of the General Code, to act with respect to the particular assessment. If, on the contrary, your first question is to be interpreted as meaning that the board of complaints has simply ignored the complaint and has not acted upon it at all, then the case is one with which my predecessor did not deal.

In my opinion, the district assessor may not act in such a matter. The complaint is before the board. The board is a tribunal exercising quasi judicial power. Its jurisdiction has attached. Whatever jurisdiction may be exercised under section 5401, G. C., in the reduction of assessed value is plainly no more than concurrent with the jurisdiction which the board of complaints may exercise under the statutory provisions quoted by my predecessor and applicable to it. The familiar rule applicable to the exercise of concurrent jurisdiction is that when the jurisdiction of one of the tribunals attaches it becomes exclusive. If the board of complaints has simply ignored the complaint, or failed to act upon it, the remedy of the taxpayer is by mandamus to compel the board to act. If the board has acted, but the taxpayer is not satisfied, his further administrative remedy is by appeal to the tax commission, as expressly provided in the statute. In neither event may the district assessor lawfully intermeddle and take any action with respect to the particular assessment.

I may add that I have interpreted your first question as referring to personal property only, because section 5401 relates only to such property.

I interpret your second and third questions as substantially the same in purport, because while you say that in one case additions and corrections have been made by the district assessor, and in the other case no additions and corrections have been so made, yet in your second question you say that such additions and corrections were made "before the completion of his tax list." Additions and corrections so made are not "additions and corrections to the tax list" within the meaning of section 18 of the Warnes law. Therefore, it is apparent that what you have designated as "additions and corrections" in your second question are exactly the same as what you designate as "increase in valuations" in your third question; and I am assuming that the reference is to the exercise by the district assessor of power under section 9 of the Warnes law, (103, O. L., 787) which is as follows:

> "Before making out and compiling the tax lists and duplicate, the assessor shall examine and revise the statements and returns of all property, both real and personal, to see that the valuations thereof are equal and uniform throughout the assessment district, and that all property, and each and every class, kind or description thereof, is valued for taxation through his district at its full and true value in money. If he finds any statement or return to be erroneous, either in the amount of property listed in the name of any person, company, firm, partnership, association or corporation, or in the valuation of any item or items thereof, he shall correct such statement or return."

It will be observed that the additions and deductions thus made are made on the statement or return and not on the tax list and duplicates. They are additions of which every taxpayer has constructive notice, because they appear on the duplicate, which is kept in a certain designated place and is open to public inspection on and after a certain designated date. Moreover, it is provided by section 21 of the Warnes law, that public notice shall be given by advertisement in newspapers of the completion of the tax lists, that the same are open for public inspection and that complaints may be filed with the board of complaints. This notice is really not necessary in a constitutional sense. It has been held in several cases by the supreme court of the United States that where the taxpayer has notice of the commencement of a proceeding, as he has in this instance when he makes his return, and where the law creates power in a public official to act in such proceeding and prescribes when and where the action shall be taken, due process of law does not require that the taxpayer shall have further notice of what may be done.

As a matter of policy merely it was formerly provided in this state by statute that no addition should be made to a return or statement under oath except upon notice, and when exercising the power under section 5401 of the General Code, the district assessor is obliged to give notice and afford an opportunity for a hearing; but the first of these was a matter of policy and not of right. I may mention to indicate that the policy even in this state prior to the enactment of the Warnes law was not such as to require notice in all cases, that the statutes governing the tax commission in the assessment of property of public utilities do not require that the utilities be given notice of the amount of the assessments made on the basis of their reports, although as a matter of grace and administrative policy the commission, as I understand it, has always given notice of its tentative valuations. The fact that the statute provides for the initiation of a proceeding in a way which gives actual notice to the taxpayer that the proceeding is under way, and then prescribes when and where the commission shall take such action as it is authorized to take, is sufficient to afford due process of law to the taxpayer.

Now the jurisdiction of the board of complaints is limited to hearing such complaints as may be filed with the county auditor prior to its session or during its session, and the length of its session is determined by the tax commission of Ohio. (See sections 24 and 19 of the Warnes Law.) These are the limitations upon the jurisdiction of the board determined by the time when the complaint is filed. The limitations thereon determined with reference to subject-matter are those of section 18 of the Warnes law, which provides in part as follows:

> "The power of the board shall extend to all cases in which real estate or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year, and to additions and corrections made during the next preceding year to the tax lists of previous years."

The term "year" as used in this section obviously refers to the year for which the tax list and duplicates made up in the fall are prepared. That is to say, the valuations of which the board has jurisdiction under the first part of this sentence are those which have just been made, so to speak, by the district assessor and by him entered upon the tax list and duplicates. Once the jurisdiction of the board attaches, as I shall hereafter point out, it may be exercised at any time; but at the time the complaint is made it must refer to a valuation on the then current duplicate so far as the first part of the above quoted sentence is concerned.

The second part of the above quoted provision does not apply to cases like those of which you speak, because the additions and corrections mentioned by you were not made to the "tax list," but were additions and corrections made under section 9 of the Warnes law to the statements and returns themselves, so that the tax lists showed the changed valuations.

It follows from what has been said that a board of complaints at its 1915 session would not have jurisdiction of a complaint not filed with it until its 1915 session relating to a valuation made in 1914 by the district assessor involving an addition to or correction of a statement or return of personal property, such addition and correction entering into the final assessment which appears on the face of the tax list and duplicates.

Your fourth question is one with respect to which the opinion of my predecessor does not expressly deal. In the case as stated by you the jurisdiction of the board of complaints properly attached, but the board, presumably because unable to do so within the limitations of time laid down for it by the tax commission, failed to act. In my opinion, the board at its 1915 session may not lawfully act upon these complaints.

The provision which authorizes the tax commission to fix the time within which the work of the board of complaints shall be completed is, in my opinion, to be interpreted as destroying the jurisdiction of the board to act when the same has once attached. It is true that much could be said in favor of a holding that when such jurisdiction has attached it cannot be destroyed except by being exercised; it is true also that the Warnes law itself contains no express provision furnishing a direct answer to the question thus presented; but the provisions of said law relating to the board of complaints and the appellate power of the tax commission must be read in connection with sections 12075, et seq., of the General Code, which have been interpreted as affording a judicial remedy for over-valuation. There is no intention on the face of the Warnes law to amend or in part repeal these sections of the General Code by implication, and no such amendment or repeal will be assumed. The conclusion is, therefore, that the administrative remedies which the Warnes law, in common with the law which existed prior thereto, afford are to be extended in such a way as to leave the judicial remedies available after the administrative remedies are exhausted. If the mere filing of a complaint with the board of complaints gives that board such jurisdiction as remains exclusive until it is exercised, and if such jurisdiction continues from year to year, then by the time the taxpayer would have exhausted, in an extreme case, such a remedy and a further remedy by appeal to the tax commission the taxes would either have been paid or the charge would have become delinquent, and the Warnes law does not afford any means of dealing with such a situation.

Rather than to give to the law an interpretation which might in a given case produce such a result, it seems to me there should be given to it, and in particular to the provision which authorizes the tax commission to fix the time within which the work of the board of complaints shall be completed, such an interpretation as will limit the power of the board of complaints to act upon complaints made in a given year to such action as may be taken thereon during that session. This is by no means a strained construction of the statute. It merely gives effect to a legislative intention which must have existed either in the one direction or the other, and which is rather conclusively shown to have been in the one direction by considering the consequences of each.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the board of complaints at its 1915 session may not act upon complaints made prior to or during its 1914 session, but not disposed of at that session.

In dealing with your fifth question it will be observed that the assessment of real property stands upon a different foundation from that of personal property insofar as the statute is concerned, because it is required by section 22 that a printed list showing all changes made in the assessment of any real estate shall be mailed to each owner whose assessment has been changed, etc.

However, in stating your fifth question you say that such notices were properly mailed in the instances which you have in mind, but that no complaints were filed by the taxpayers. I assume that in inquiring as to the remedy of the taxpayers you have in mind primarily an administrative remedy.

If this be your meaning, my answer must be that there is no such remedy. As previously pointed out, the taxpayer must file a complaint at least during the session of the board of complaints for the current year. A change in the assessment of real estate is not an "addition or correction to the tax list" within the meaning of section 18 of the Warnes law, but is an original assessment, not only appearing upon the tax list but of which the owner has actual notice. If the owner of real estate sleeps on his rights during the entire session of the board of complaints, he certainly cannot appeal to the board of complaints at its next session. Nor is there any equitable reason why he should be permitted to do so. There is no other remedy which is afforded to a taxpayer in such a situation. The district assessor has no power in the premises, as section 5401, G. C., as construed by my predecessor in his opinion, applies solely to personal property. The tax commission no longer has independent power as formerly to raise or lower the value of any real or personal property. It may act with respect to specific property only upon appeal from the board of complaints.

For all of these reasons, then, I am of the opinion in answer to your fifth question that the owners of real property, who had both actual and constructive notice of the changes made by the district assessor in the year 1914 in the assessed valuation thereof, and who failed during the entire session of the board of complaints in the year 1914 to file complaints with such board, have lost by their laches whatever rights to administrative remedies they may have had in the premises with respect to the 1914 valuation.

However, under the general scheme of the Warnes law real property is in theory reassessed every year. The aggrieved taxpayers referred to in your fifth question may, therefore, by timely action secure a proper assessment in the year 1915. This remark applies, of course, to all of the cases in which I have held that the board of complaints may not now act with respect to 1914 valuations.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

JOINT CEMETERIES—TWO OR MORE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL IS CONFERRED UPON COUNCIL OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATION AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES.

The authority to manage and control cemeteries owned in common by two or more municipal corporations, or a municipal corporation or corporations and a township or townships is, by the provisions of section 4189, G. C., 103 O. L., 272, conferred upon the council of the municipal corporation or corporations and the trustees of the township or townships to be exercised by the joint action of such bodies pursuant to the provisions of sections 4192, 4193 and 4194, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1915.

HON. DONALD F. MELHORN, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion under date of August 9, 1915, which is as follows:

> "The trustees of Buck, Goshen and Pleasant townships, and the council of the city of Kenton, Ohio, several years ago united in establishing a joint cemetery district, which district is still existing. Grove cemetery situated outside the corporate limits of the city of Kenton in said Pleasant township, is owned in common by said townships and the city of Kenton. Prior to the enactment of section 4189, G. C., (103 O. L., 272) repealing sections 4184-4185 and 4189, G. C., and prior to the present time, said union cemetery has been under the control and management of three trustees who are presumably elected under authority of section 4184, G. C., now repealed.
> "What I wish to ask is: What statute now provides for the management and control of union cemeteries?
> "(A) Is it the duty of the director of service of the city of Kenton to manage and control said cemetery under authority of sections 4161 to 4172, etc., or (B) does 4193, G. C., authorize said bodies, acting jointly, to delegate authority to trustees selected by said joint board to manage and control said cemetery, and by joint resolutions define their powers, provide for officers and employes and fix their salary in a manner similar to the provisions of sections 4184 and 4185, G. C., now repealed?"

The ownership, management and control of cemeteries owned in common by two or more municipal corporations, by two or more townships, or by a municipal corporation or corporations and a township or townships are governed by the provisions of sections 4183 to 4201, G. C., inclusive as amended and repealed by the act of April 18, 1913, 103 O. L., 272.

Prior to said last mentioned act the management and control of cemeteries so owned in common was under the provisions of sections 4184, 4185 and 4189, G. C., imposed upon a board of cemetery trustees therein authorized to be elected.

Upon the repeal of sections 4184 and 4185, G. C., 103 O. L., 272-3 supra, section 4189, G. C., was amended to read as follows:

> "The cemetery so owned in common, shall be under the control and management of the trustees of the township or townships and the council of the municipal corporation or corporations and their authority over it and their duties in relation thereto shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation."

Thus the control and management of such cemeteries was transferred from the board of trustees above mentioned to the trustees of the township or townships and the council of the municipal corporation or corporations jointly, provision for their joint action in relation thereto being found in sections 4192, 4193 and 4194, G. C.

It will be further observed that under section 4189 as amended, the trustees and council so acting jointly have conferred upon them all the authority and duties in relation to such cemetery as are conferred and imposed upon a municipal corporation relative to a cemetery of which it is sole owner.

Thus by reference the authority of the director of public service, as found in section 4162, G. C., is conferred upon the trustees and council in respect to cemeteries owned by them in common. Said section is as follows:

> "The director shall direct all the improvements and embellishments of the grounds and lots, protect and preserve them, and, subject to the approval of the council, appoint necessary superintendents, employes, and agents, determine their term of office and the amount of their compensation."

Coming then to answer your inquiry specifically I am of opinion that the director of public service of Kenton as such is without authority to in any way manage or control a cemetery which is owned in common by that city, and, Buck, Goshen and Pleasant townships. By virtue of section 4189, G. C., 103 O. L., 272, the trustees and council by joint action pursuant to the provisions of sections 4192, 4193 and 4194, G. C., may appoint necessary superintendents, employes and agents, determine their term of office and the amount of their compensation as provided in section 4162, G. C., supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LIQUOR LICENSE—DISTRICT APPOINTING BOARDS—SECRETARY OF SAID BOARD SHOULD BE CHOSEN FROM ITS MEMBERS—BOARD MEMBERS ARE ENTITLED TO RECEIVE ACTUAL AND NECESSARY TRAVELING EXPENSES—HOW PAID.

The secretary of the district appointing board as provided in sections 1261-22b and 1261-22, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, should be chosen from the members of such board.

Under the provisions of section 1261-20, G. C., 106 O. L., 566, and section 1261-61, G. C., 103 O. L., 236, the members of the district appointing boards are entitled to receive their actual and necessary traveling expenses incurred in the attendance of lawfully authorized meetings of such board and the same are authorized to be paid as prescribed in said section 1261-61, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of yours under date of August 10, 1915, as follows:

> "In re Liquor License Board.
> "'The county clerks, recorders and presidents of the boards of county commissioners shall constitute the appointing board.'
> "The question has been asked of me whether or not the secretary of such board must be one of the three above mentioned officials or can he be a person selected entirely outside of this board? It is my opinion that he must be one of the three members of the board.
> "A second question is whether or not any means have been provided to defray the traveling expenses of the members of this board, as the law says they meet at the court house of the district that has the largest population.
> "Your opinion upon these two questions will be appreciated by me."

Section 1261-22b, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, provides:

> "For the purpose of this act the county clerks, recorders and presidents of boards of county commissioners shall constitute the appointing board."

Section 1261-22c, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, provides in part:

> "Five days after this act becomes effective the said appointing boards shall meet at the court house in the most populous county of their respective districts at twelve o'clock, noon, at which time and place such boards shall organize by selecting a president and secretary, * * *"

By virtue of section 1261-22b, G. C., supra, the county clerk, recorder and president of the board of county commissioners are made ex officio members of the appointing boards of the liquor licensing district in which their respective counties are located. The exercise of the functions of the appointing board is imposed as an additional duty upon the enumerated officers as such, and it will be observed that for the performance of these duties no payment of any fees, salary or compensation is authorized to be made either to the members or officers of the board. From this alone it seems reasonably clear that it was contemplated that the president and secretary of the appointing board should be chosen from its members. The selection of one who would assume the responsibilities and perform the duties of secretary of such board without any expectation of compensation or pay for such public service might involve some unnecessary difficulties. Besides, unless it be otherwise specifically provided it is a well established rule that the officers of a public board or commission for whom no compensation for their services as such officers is provided are chosen from its members. I therefore concur in your opinion that the secretary of the district appointing board must be chosen from its members.

Coming to consider your second inquiry relative to the traveling expenses of members of the appointing boards, attention is called to section 1261-20, G. C., 106 O. L., 566, which provides that the members of the appointing boards shall be entitled to receive their actual and necessary expenses while traveling on the business of the state, and that such expense accounts shall be itemized and sworn to by the person who incurred the same, approved by the state budget commissioner, and paid as other expenses are paid.

Section 1261-61, G. C., 103 O. L., 236, provides in part:

> "All fees and other moneys received by the state board shall be paid to and accounted for by the secretary, and by him paid into the state treasury, daily, to the credit of a special fund for the use of said board to be known as the 'State Liquor License Fund.' A detailed verified statement of such receipts shall be filed with the auditor of state at the time of making such deposit.
> "All expenses of the state board, including salaries, and all expenses, including salaries, certified by the various county boards to the state board, and approved by the state board, shall be paid by the treasurer of state on warrant of the auditor of state. Before the auditor of state shall issue his warrant a voucher, signed by at least two members of the state board, with a detailed statement attached thereto, shall be filed with the auditor of state."

Under Maintenance F-6, 106 O. L., 706, there is appropriated for transportation the sum of $29,800.00 to the use of the liquor licensing board, and by force of the provisions of section 8 of the general appropriation bill, 106 O. L., 827, this appropriation will become available for the payment of such traveling expenses as are above referred to upon the taking effect of the McDermott bill, 106 O. L., 560.

I am therefore of opinion that ample means have been provided for the payment of the traveling expenses of the members of the district appointing boards and that the same will be available therefor on and after September 4, 1915.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY CONTRACT FOR PIKE REPAIR WORK UNTIL CASS HIGHWAY LAW BECOMES EFFECTIVE—WHEN SECTION 5649-4, G. C., APPLIES, LEVY MAY BE MADE UNDER SECTION 7419, G. C.

Until an act to provide a system of highway laws for the state of Ohio, 105-106 O. L., 574-666, becomes effective, county commissioners may contract for pike repair work regardless of its provisions.

When the provisions of section 5649-4, G. C., apply, a levy may be made under section 7419, G. C., limited only by the provisions of the latter section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1915.

HON. FORREST G. LONG, Prosecuting Attorney, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of August 5, 1915, and your supplemental letter of August 9, 1915, present two inquiries, viz.:

(1) May the county commissioners now make contracts for pike repair work, which said contracts would be performed after September 5th, this year?

(2) May the levy provided in section 7419, G. C., be made in addition to the fifteen mill levy as provided in the Smith act?

Referring to your first question, there is no statutory inhibition against the county commissioners making such contracts as you name, regardless of the fact that the same may not be performed or completed until after the new highway act, as found in vol. 105-106 O. L., page 574, becomes effective. This observation is made, of course, with the limitation that said contracts must be made and entered into in full compliance with the present law. Should any of the provisions of the highway act, after it becomes effective, conflict in any way with the performance or completion of said contracts, all the rights and obligations in and under said contracts of the parties thereto are saved by the provisions of sections 302 and 303 of said act, to which your attention is respectfully invited.

Section 7419 of the General Code, which is the basis of your second question, provides as follows:

> "When one or more of the principal highways of a county, or part thereof, have been destroyed or damaged by freshet, land-slide, wear of water-courses, or other casualty, or, by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof, have become unfit for travel thereon, difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon, and the commissioners of such county are satisfied that the ordinary levies authorized by law for such purposes will be inadequate to provide money necessary to repair such damages or to remove obstructions from, or to make the changes or repairs in, such road or roads as are rendered necessary from the causes herein enumerated, they may annually thereafter levy a tax at their June session, not exceeding five mills upon the dollar upon all taxable property of the county, to be expended under their direction or by the employment of labor and the purchase of materials in such manner as may seem to them most advantageous to the interest of the county, for the construction, reconstruction or repair and maintenance of such road or roads or part thereof."

This section is commonly known as an emergency statute intended only to cover conditions coming within its express terms, and not as a subterfuge by which increasing levies can be made. It holds a very important place in the scheme of our highway legislation and is one of the few statutes which has not been repealed by the highway act above referred to. When conditions exist under which the provisions of section 5649-4 are invoked, the levy so made is limited only by the terms of section 7419 itself, as section 5649-4, G. C., or section 4 of the Smith act as it is commonly known, expressly excepts such levies under section 7419 supra from the provisions of said Smith act limiting the rate of taxation, which provides for limitation on tax rates and to which you refer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ORDER DISTRICT BOARDS TO REFUSE TO RECEIVE APPLICATIONS FOR SALOON LICENSES FROM AUGUST 31 TO SEPTEMBER 4, 1915.

The state liquor licensing board is without authority to order the district boards to refuse to receive applications for saloon licenses from August 31, to September 4, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 13, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 3, 1915, as follows:

> "The present licensing act provides for the filing of applications for licenses and for renewals of existing licenses between the 1st and 15th of September. The McDermott act makes different provisions for the applications and issuance of licenses. As the change in the law takes effect on September 3rd, it would be possible for the 5700 licensees now in the state to make application between the 1st and 3rd of September to the present county licensing boards who would not have authority to pass upon their applications and it would therefore seem that such action should not be taken. Will you, therefore, please advise this board whether it could issue an order to the present county licensing boards to receive no applications between the 1st and 3rd of September of this year?"

Section 1261-35, G. C., 103 O. L., 223, provides among other things that, "no applicant for a saloon license filed with said county board before the first day of September preceding said license year and after the fifteenth day of September preceding the said license year may be considered by the board until after the beginning of the said license year." The force of this provision is to compel the consideration of only such applications as are filed within these dates previous to the beginning of the license year.

This provision will continue in force and operation until 12 o'clock p. m. on Friday, September 3, 1915, when it will be repealed and become of no effect by operation of the provisions of section 1261-40, G. C., 106 O. L., 568, which will be effective on September 4, 1915.

There is no authority in the district boards to refuse to accept applications present prior to the repeal of section 1261-35 supra, nor in the state board to order them so to do.

It may be observed however that after amended senate bill No. 307, 106 O. L., 560, goes into effect on September 4, 1915, there will be no authority in any official to consider any application filed prior thereto and it would therefore be idle to file an application within the period from August 31st to September 4, 1914, for a license for the license period beginning on the fourth Monday of November, 1915. (Sec. 1261-33, G. C., 106 O. L., 567.)

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—ATTEMPT TO DESIGNATE A BANK AS BOTH ACTIVE AND INACTIVE DEPOSITORY OF COUNTY FUNDS —STATUTES NOT COMPLIED WITH AND ACT ILLEGAL—FINDING FOR ADDITIONAL INTEREST DUE COUNTY SHOULD BE MADE AGAINST BANK—NOT COUNTY TREASURER.

Where the commissioners of a county attempt to designate a bank in said county as both the active and inactive depositary of the funds of said county, but, owing to the failure of said officials to comply with the requirements of the statutes relative to such designation, the same is illegal and said bank receives the deposits of said funds made by the county treasurer from time to time and has the use of said funds, a finding for any additional interest due the county should be made against the bank and not against said county treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 13, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of August 3, 1915, in which you enclose a letter from State Examiner T. W. Jones, concerning the designation, by the commissioners of Fayette county, of a bank at Washington C. H. as both the active and inactive depositary of the money of said county. You also enclose copy of a resolution of said commissioners designating the said bank as such depositaries, also a copy of the bond given by said bank.

You require my opinion on the questions asked by Mr. Jones.

The letter of Mr. Jones is as follows:

"Mr. E. N. Halbedel, Columbus, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—I desire to submit for your consideration the proposition as to how we shall treat the question of interest on the county funds here. The Midland National Bank to which was awarded the contract for carrying the county deposits, bid 3.66 per cent. on the inactive funds and 3.26 per cent. on the active funds.

"From checking the monthly statements, we ascertain that the interest for each and every month for the time we are covering has been computed at the active rate of 3.26 per cent.

"June 11, 1915, shows the lowest balance in this bank for any day during the last eighteen months, being $45,935.82.

"The month of February, 1914, shows the heaviest balances of any one month, and the lowest balance for any one day in this month was February 28th, $154,786.29, and the highest balance for any one day this month was on February 4th, $204,971.08.

"There is nothing of record to show that the treasurer was advised to deposit so much in the inactive, and so much in the active, but it strikes me that the provisions of section 2736 contemplates the deposit of the major portion of this fund in an inactive account. This bank was the depository under the former contract, and the treasurer kept right on depositing pending the award of the contract to some bank, and never ceased deposits therein. I send you herewith copies of the award and bond filed by the bank. At what rate should the interest be computed?

"Against whom should the findings be made, the bank, or the bank and the county treasurer?

"An early reply would be appreciated.

"Very truly,
"T. W. Jones, Examiner."

The resolution of said commissioners of Fayette county, under date of November 12, 1912, is as follows:

"The board of county commissioners met this day, for the purpose of considering bids for the deposits of the county funds, as invited by advertisements, all members present.

Resolution:

"The following resolution was adopted by unanimous vote of the board:

"Whereas, under the advertisement heretofore made in compliance with the resolution of the board of county commissioners of Fayette county, Ohio, calling for bids for the deposits of the funds of said county in active and inactive depositories. The following named banks and trust companies have bid for the deposit of said funds as inactive depositories at the rate per cent. set opposite their names, respectively:

"The Midland National Bank, Washington C. H., O.---------- 3.66%

"The Washington Savings Bank & Trust Co., Wash. C. H., O--- 2.80%

"And the following named banks and trust companies have bid for the deposit of said funds as active depositories at the rate per cent. set opposite their names respectively:

"The Midland National Bank, Washington C. H., O---------- 3.26%

"The Washington Savings Bank & Trust Co., Wash. C. H., O--- 1.80%

"Therefore, be it resolved, by said board of commissioners that The Midland National Bank be designated as inactive depository for said funds, at 3.66 per cent. and that The Midland National Bank be designated as active depository for said funds, at 3.26 per cent.

"Be it further resolved, that said bank, herein so designated as depository complying with the terms of the resolution heretofore herein adopted and qualifying according to the laws relating to the deposit of county funds, be and they are herein designated as depository of the funds of said county until twelve o'clock noon on the 1st day of December, 1915, and that written notice of the naming of such bank as depository be given to the treasurer of this county.

"James Ford, President,
"Attest: A. E. Henkle. "Harry F. Brown,
"Edwin Weaver."

The bond given by The Midland National Bank, to which the said commissioners attempted to award the contract for carrying county deposits, after reciting the proceedings of said county commissioners relative thereto, contains the following provisions:

> "Now, therefore, the undersigned hereby obligate ourselves to the county of Fayette, state of Ohio, for the receipt, safe-keeping and repayment of deposits made or to be made by the county treasurer of said Fayette county, with interest, in The Midland National Bank of Washington C. H., Ohio, to the amount of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) and interest, and the performance of all duties required by law."

Said bond is under date of December 1, 1912.

Section 2715, G. C., was amended and supplemented by section 2715-1, G. C., and sections 2716 and 2736 of the General Code were amended by an act of the general assembly passed March 30, 1911, approved by the governor April 11, 1911, and found in 102 O. L., 59.

Section 2715, G. C., as amended, provides:

> "The commissioners in each county shall designate in the manner hereinafter provided a bank or banks or trust companies, situated in the county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as inactive depositaries, and one or more of such banks or trust companies located in the county seat as active depositaries of the money of the county. In a county where such bank or trust company does not exist or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, the commissioners shall designate a private bank or banks, located in the county as such inactive depositaries, and if in such county no such private bank exists or fails to bid as provided herein, or to comply with the conditions of this chapter relating to county depositaries, then the commissioners shall designate any other bank or banks incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as such inactive depositaries. If there be no such bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of the state, or organized under the laws of the United States, located at the county seat, then the commissioners shall designate a private bank, if there be one located therein, as such active depositary. No bank or trust company shall receive a larger deposit than one million dollars."

Section 2715-1 provides:

> "The deposits in active depositaries, as provided for in the next preceding section shall at all times be subject to draft for the purpose of meeting the current expenses of the county. The deposits in inactive depositaries shall remain until such time as the county treasurer is obliged to withdraw a portion or all of same and place it in the active depositary or depositaries for current use. Each bank or trust company, when submitting proposals as provided in section 2716 for the inactive deposits, shall stipulate the amount of money desired by such bank or trust company; and when the aggregate amount placed with all the banks and trust companies, qualifying for same, in any county, does not equal the amount that may be placed into inactive depositaries the county commissioners shall, upon securing sufficient additional security from any or all of such inactive depositaries, authorize the county treasurer to increase the deposits therein; or such county commissioners shall in the manner therein provided designate a bank or banks or trust companies, located outside of the county in which the county treasurer shall deposit such excess funds."

Section 2716, G. C., as amended, provides:

"When the commissioners of a county provide such depositary or depositaries, they shall publish for two consecutive weeks in two newspapers of opposite politics and of general circulation in the county a notice which shall invite sealed proposals from all banks or trust companies within the provisions of the next two preceding sections, which proposals shall stipulate the rate of interest, not less than two per cent. per annum on the average daily balance, on inactive deposits, and not less than one per cent. per annum on the average daily balance on active deposits, that will be paid for the use of the money of the county, as herein provided. Each proposal shall contain the names of the sureties or securities, or both, that will be offered to the county in case the proposal is accepted."

Section 2736, G. C., as amended, provides:

"Upon the receipt by the county treasurer of a written notice from the commissioners that a depositary, or depositaries, have been selected in pursuance of law, and naming the bank or banks or trust companies so selected, such treasurer shall deposit in such bank or banks or trust companies as directed by the commissioners, and designated as inactive depositaries to the credit of the county all money in his possession, except such amount as is necessary to meet current demands, which shall be deposited by such treasurer in the active depositary or depositaries. Thereafter before noon of each business day, he shall deposit therein all money received by him the preceding business day except as hereinbefore provided. Such money shall be payable only on the check of the treasurer."

From Mr. Jones' statement of facts and from the enclosed memoranda it appears that The Midland National Bank at Washington C. H., in submitting its proposal for the inactive deposits of said county, did not stipulate the amount of money desired, as required by the above provision of section 2715-1, G. C. The bid of said bank, to be designated as an inactive depositary, was therefore illegal and should not have been accepted by the commissioners of Fayette county.

It further appears, that in designating said bank as an active and inactive depositary, said commissioners fixed no maximum amounts to be deposited in said depositaries, respectively, and consequently never advised the treasurer of said county as to such maximum amounts to be held by said bank.

The requirements of section 2736, G. C., as amended and above quoted, were clearly ignored. The bond given by said bank was in the amount of two hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Jones' statement shows that the lowest daily balance in said bank for the month of February, 1914, was $154,786.29 while the highest daily balance in said bank in said month was $204,971.08. This latter amount was in excess of the amount of said bond and the county treasurer, in depositing such excess amount, violated section 2722, G. C., which provides that the undertaking given by the bank must be in an amount not less than the sum that shall be deposited in said depositary at any one time.

Moreover, section 2726, G. C., provides that the same surety shall not be accepted to more than one undertaking as to any one depositary at the same time.

In opinion No. 627 of this department rendered to your bureau under date of July 20, 1915, I have held that where the same bank bids for and is awarded both active and inactive deposits the bids and awards for the two classes of deposits are to be regarded as separate contracts and separate undertakings should be required, and the same surety could not be accepted on both undertakings.

Said commissioners could not, therefore, accept the same sureties on both of the undertakings of said The Midland National Bank.

In view of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the proceedings of the county commissioners in attempting to award the contract for the deposit of public funds to said The Midland National Bank and in notifying the county treasurer of such attempted award, as well as the action of said county treasurer in depositing said funds in said bank, were without authority in law and in plain violation of the express provisions of the statutes.

In view of the provisions of section 2737, G. C., relative to the computing of interest on daily balances, and the apportionment of interest on deposits, I am unable to understand how the various county officials of Fayette county concerned with the deposit of the public funds of said county could unintentionally ignore said statutory provisions.

However, it is clear that the commissioners of said county should proceed at once, in the manner provided by sections 2715, et seq., of the General Code and in conformity with the requirements of said sections, to designate active and inactive depositaries for the money of said county.

Inasmuch as The Midland National Bank was not legally designated as an active and as an inactive depositary and the county treasurer did not comply with the requirements of section 2736, G. C., governing the deposits of active and inactive funds, and in view of the fact that separate accounts of said deposits were not kept by said bank, Mr. Jones asks to be advised as to the rate at which interest shall be computed in making a finding and against whom such finding shall be made.

Although not legally designated as an active and as an inactive depositary for the funds of Fayette county, said bank has received the deposits made by the county treasurer from time to time and has had the use of said funds.

If said bank had been legally designated as an active and as an inactive depositary of all the funds of said county it would have been the duty of the county treasurer upon receiving notice from the county commissioners of such designation and of the maximum amount to be deposited in said bank as an inactive depositary, to deposit in said inactive depositary to the credit of the county all money in his possession except such an amount as would be necessary to meet current demands, and it would have been the duty of said county treasurer to deposit this amount in said bank as an active depositary.

The difference between the amount of interest actually received by the county from said bank and the amount which said county would have received had said designation been legal, may be approximately determined by computing the interest on the daily balances at the rate of .4 per cent. for the time said funds have been deposited in said bank.

As a fair basis of settlement I am of the opinion that a finding should be made against said bank for said additional amount of interest so determined.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF ORDER OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH, EXTENDING TIME TO CITY OF LAKEWOOD, OHIO, TO PROVIDE SEWAGE TREATMENT WORKS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 13, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed herewith please find order of the state board of health extending the time limit of a former order of the state board of health directed to the city of Lakewood, Ohio, ordering said city to provide sewage treatment works, which order was approved by the governor of Ohio and the attorney general of Ohio on the 28th day of October, 1915.

I have examined said order, which is issued under section 1251 of the General Code of Ohio. I find the same to be regular and it is my opinion that it should be approved. Having myself approved the same, under the provisions of section 1251, G. C. I am transmitting the order to you for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

RAILROAD POLICEMEN—REQUIRED TO GIVE BUT ONE BOND—SAID BOND TO BE APPROVED BY CLERK OF COMMON PLEAS COURT OF COUNTY IN WHICH SUCH OFFICER RESIDES—CERTIFIED COPY SHOULD BE FILED IN CLERK'S OFFICE IN OTHER COUNTIES THROUGH WHICH RAILROAD RUNS.

Policemen appointed under authority of section 9150, G. C., are subject to the provisions of section 12819, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 553, and are thereby required to give but one bond which shall be approved by the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county in which such officer resides.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1915.

HON. J. H. MUSSER, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 6, 1915, as follows:

> "Are policemen appointed under General Code, section 9150, subject to the provisions of General Code, section 12819, as amended, 103 O. L., 553?
> "Your attention is called to section 9151, a part of which reads as follows:
> " 'Policemen so appointed and commissioned severally shall possess and exercise their powers, and be subject to the liabilities of policemen of cities in the several counties in which they are authorized to act while discharging the duties for which they are appointed.'

And also to that part of amended section 12819, reading as follows:

> "'Provided, however, that this act shall not affect the rights of sheriffs, regularly appointed police officers of incorporated cities and villages, regularly elected constables, and special officers as provided by sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code to go armed when on duty.'
> "If such policemen are subject to amended section 12819, then is it necessary for them to give an original bond in each county in which they may be called upon to perform duty, or is it sufficient if one original bond is given and filed in the county of their residence and certified copies filed in the other counties through or into which the railroad runs for which such policemen are appointed and intended to act?"

In reference to your first inquiry your attention is directed to an opinion of my predecessor under date of September 10, 1913, which will be found at page 1547 of the report of the attorney general for that year, to which it is assumed you have access, and which holds that:

> "Railroad policemen do not have the right given to the particular officers designated in section 12819, G. C., in reference to carrying concealed weapons. Their right to carry concealed weapons is conditioned upon their giving bond, provided for in the second provision of this statute."

Section 9150, G. C., to which you refer, authorizes the appointment of persons to act as policemen for and on the premises of a railroad or elsewhere when directly in the discharge of their duties for such railroad, by the governor and in relation thereto section 9151, G. C., contains the provision as above quoted by you.

Section 12819, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 553, provides as follows:

> "Sec. 12819. Whoever carries a pistol, bowie knife, dirk, or other dangerous weapon concealed on or about his person shall be fined not to exceed five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years. Provided, however, that this act shall not affect the right of sheriffs, regularly appointed police officers of incorporated cities and villages, regularly elected constables, and special officers as provided by sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108, and 12857 of the General Code to go armed when on duty. Provided, further, that it shall be lawful for deputy sheriffs and specially appointed police officers, except as are appointed or called into service by virtue of the authority of said sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code, to go armed if they first give bond to the state of Ohio, to be approved by the clerk of the court of common pleas, in the sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned to save the public harmless by reason of any unlawful use of such weapons carried by them; and any person injured by such improper use may have recourse on said bond."

By the first sentence of this section it is made a felony for any person to carry concealed upon his person any pistol, bowie knife, dirk, or other dangerous weapon. This general, and within itself unqualified, provision is followed by certain specific, definite and enumerated exceptions so that from the plain and unequivocal terms of this statute no person except they come within such specific exceptions may lawfully carry concealed on or about his person any pistol, bowie knife, dirk, or other dangerous weapon.

It is sufficient to say that an examination of these statutes will readily disclose that persons appointed under the provisions of section 9150, G. C., do not come within the terms of the first proviso of section 12819, G. C., quoted by you, nor of sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 or 12857, G. C., therein referred to, and are therefore subject to the first provision of section 12819, G. C., and unless they come within the second proviso granting immunity from the general provisions of this section to deputy sheriffs and specially appointed police officers not called into service under sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857, G. C., upon certain conditions therein prescribed, they are then subject to the provisions of the first sentence of that section. This is true notwithstanding the provision of section 9151, G. C., as set forth in your inquiry.

Section 12819, G. C., supra, it will be observed confers no power upon policemen of cities, but rather grants to them only immunity from the general provisions thereof as distinguished from power or authority to exercise any official function, and it therefore seems clear that the same does not come at all within the meaning of the term power as used in section 9151, G. C.

It then being determined that persons so appointed are not within the terms of the first proviso of section 12819, G. C., it follows of necessity that immunity from the provisions of this section may be had only by compliance with the terms of the second proviso and since to my mind persons appointed under the provision of section 9150, G. C., are manifestly "specially appointed police officers" within the meaning of the second proviso of section 12819, G. C., the provisions thereof are available to a person so appointed.

I am therefore of the opinion that persons appointed under authority of section 5190, G. C., are subject to the provisions of section 12819, G. C., 103 O. L., 553.

As to your second inquiry it will be observed that such specially appointed police officer is required to give only one bond, and that, to the state of Ohio, and that the same shall be conditioned to save the public harmless, etc. There is nothing here found which would indicate an intention that this bond should be available only to residents of a particular county. On the contrary it seems clear that the bond is required and conditioned for the protection of every other individual of the state against the unlawful use of such weapons by such officer, and that the legislature therefore deemed the same sufficient.

It will be observed that it is provided that any person injured by the unlawful use of such weapons by such officer may have recourse on said bond, thus clearly including every individual so injured within the state.

There is no provision made in section 12819, G. C., for the filing or custody of such bond when given or approved, and I am unaware of any statutory provision elsewhere to be found relative or applicable thereto. However, it is manifestly contrary to the whole purpose and policy of the law that the same remain in the possession or control of such police officer and such course would, at least in many instances, defeat the very object sought by the enactment of the provision of law relative thereto.

The primary purpose of giving such bond by such officer is the procurement of the right by the officer under the law to carry concealed weapons, an act which would otherwise be prohibited. That is, except for those persons who might be injured by the unlawful use of such weapons, it is in the interest and for the protection of the officer alone that he give the bond and for the purpose of securing to him immunity from the penal provision of the statute rather than in the interest of the public. It is therefore a matter of primary concern to the officer himself that he give the bond, and that it be in full compliance with all the statutory provisions therefor rather than to the public. It is a familiar rule of contract law that a writing obligatory, however formal in its character and execution, has no binding force upon the obligor until the same shall have been delivered. Hence, to avail himself of the protection sought to be procured thereby, it is essential that the bond be delivered by the officer to an agency or representative of the obligee.

In the absence of statutory designation of a custodian or depository of such bond as representative of the state, if the maker thereof should deliver the same without qualification or reserve to a custodian who represents the state, or even to one whom he himself should choose to designate as such representative, for the sole purpose of making the same binding on the obligors, he would not thereafter be heard to say that such bond was not of binding force upon the obligors by reason of the absence of a statutory designation of a custodian thereof.

I am therefore of opinion that if a specially appointed police officer shall give a bond to the state of Ohio, which is duly approved by the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county in which he resides, in the sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned according to law, and shall file the same in the office of such clerk, and shall file also a certified copy thereof in the office of the clerk of such court in each of the other counties through which or into which the railroad for which such officer is appointed runs, it will then, under the provisions of section 12819, G. C., supra, be lawful for such officer to go armed when on duty.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PHARMACIST—STATE BOARD CANNOT ALLOW CREDIT FOR STORE EXPERIENCE DURING ATTENDANCE IN SCHOOL—FEES REQUIRED FROM APPLICANTS UNCONDITIONAL—NO REFUND IF ENTRANCE CERTIFICATE NOT GRANTED.

1. The provisions of section 1302, G. C., as amended, 106, O. L., 329, require four years of actual preparation as therein prescribed and the conditions imposed in said statute cannot be discharged contemporaneously.

2. The fee of three dollars required from an applicant under the provisions of section 1303-1, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 330, is unconditional and not dependent upon the granting of a certificate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

MR. M. N. FORD, Secretary State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 5, 1915, in which you ask for an opinion on the following inquiries:

> "First. Section 1302 provides in part that an applicant for examination for registration as a pharmacist shall be a graduate from a school of pharmacy in good standing as defined in section 1303-2, and shall have had at least two years of practical experience in a drug store, etc.; the question is, can the applicant work in a drug store during the time he is attending pharmacy school and receive credit for store experience when he is already receiving credit for the same time by being graduated?

"Can the board legally rule that the applicant is not entitled to receive credit for drug store experience had during the time spent in graduating from a recognized school or college of pharmacy?

"Second. Section 1303-1 provides that an entrance examiner shall determine the sufficiency of the preliminary education of applicants for admission to a school of pharmacy, and for such the applicant must pay to the board of pharmacy a fee of three dollars; the question is, is the applicant entitled to a refund of the three dollars in case he does not meet the requirements entitling him to an entrance certificate?"

Section 1302 as amended and founded in 106 O. L., at page 329, provides as follows:

"An applicant for certificate as pharmacist shall be not less than twenty-one years of age, shall be a graduate from a school of pharmacy in good standing as defined in section 1303-2, of the General Code, shall have completed at least a two years' course in such school as defined in section 1303-2 of the General Code, and shall have had at least two years of practical experience in a drug store where physicians' prescriptions are compounded; provided, however, that if the applicant has taken a longer course in a school of pharmacy in good standing, each additional year successfully passed shall be counted as one year of practical experience."

Under the provisions of the foregoing statute a two years' course in a school of pharmacy in good standing and two years of practical experience in a drug store where physicians' prescriptions are compounded are required of all applicants for certificates as pharmacists in this state, with the further provision that each additional year spent in school shall be counted as a year of practical experience. The plain provisions of this statute make four years of preparation a requisite for a certificate as pharmacist. Time as well as instruction is required. In other words, a devotion and dedication of four years of the applicant's time to the work of preparing himself for his profession is prescribed by this statute, and it is not contemplated therein that these two requirements, viz.: two years in school and two years in a drug store, can be worked out contemporaneously.

I am of the opinion therefore that the board cannot allow for store experience acquired during attendance in school.

"The state board of pharmacy shall appoint an entrance examiner who shall not be directly or indirectly connected with a school of pharmacy, and who shall have received the degree of B. A. or B. Sc., and who shall determine the sufficiency of the preliminary education of the applicants for admission to a school of pharmacy in good standing as defined in section 1303-2, of the General Code, and to whom all applicants shall submit credentials.

"The following preliminary educational credentials shall be sufficient; The equivalent of eight units as given in a high school of the state of Ohio; provided, however, that in the absence of the foregoing qualifications, the entrance examiner shall examine the applicant in such branches as are required to obtain them. Applicants desiring to enter a school of pharmacy in good standing as defined in section 1303-2 of the General Code, must submit certificates to the entrance examiner from their school authorities describing in full the work completed: provided, that in the absence of all or any part of the foregoing qualifications, the applicant must present himself before the entrance examiner for the scheduled examination: Provided further, that the applicants upon presentation of certificates from their school authorities or in case of examination, must pay in advance to the board of pharmacy a fee of three dollars. If the entrance examiner finds that the preliminary education of the applicant is sufficient, he shall issue to the applicant a certificate therefor. The compensation of the entrance examiner shall be fixed by the state board of pharmacy."

The precise language of the statute is that the applicants upon presentation of certificates from their school authorities or in case of examination, must pay in advance to the board of pharmacy a fee of three dollars. There are no qualifications as to this payment dependent upon any subsequent event. Indeed, the requirement that this fee shall be paid in advance seems to preclude any intention of the legislature to connect the transaction with any subsequent matter or thing and indicates clearly that upon the payment of the fee the transaction is to be regarded as closed.

Permit me to observe in closing that the provisions of the statutes above referred to do not become effective until August 26, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

REFERENDUM PETITION—WHEN PETITION MUST BE FILED—REFERENDUM TO AMENDMENT OF FORMER LAW ON MOTION PICTURE FILMS DOES NOT AFFECT THE FORMER LAW EXCEPT AS TO PROVISIONS OF AMENDMENT.

Referendum petition must be filed in the office of the secretary of state within ninety (90) days after the law to be voted on has been filed in that office by the governor.

Referendum to an amendment to a former law does not affect the former law except insofar as former law may be affected by provisions of amendment becoming effective through its approval by the electors on referendum vote.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Department of Film Censorship, Columbus, O.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 9th, requesting my opinion as follows:

"On May 19, 1915, the legislature passed an act known as the Besaw Act, which was approved by the governor May 25, 1915, said act amending the law relating to the censorship of motion pictures. On July 13, 1915, you rendered an official opinion certifying that a certain referendum petition which had been presented to you and which contained the following synopsis:

"'An act to amend sections 871-48, 871-49 and 871-52 of the General Code, was passed May 25, 1915, approved May 25, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 27, 1915; it amends the foregoing sections of the law relating to the censoring of motion picture films, as found in 103 O. L., 400 and 401,'

"was a truthful statement regarding the title of said law.

"Because of the complications of this department, it is essential that we be advised as to v hether or not, if the referendum should prevail, the original law would be repealed or only the said Besaw act. The opinion seems to be prevalent throughout the state that a referendum as contemplated in the petition referred to would repeal the entire censorship law, and we are receiving many inquiries on this point from citizens interested in the law.

"We will appreciate it if you will advise us as to this matter at your earliest convenience."

Your attention is called to the provisions of section 1c of article II of the constitution of the state, adopted September 3, 1912, which is as follows:

"The second aforestated power reserved by the people is designated the referendum, and the signatures of six per centum of the electors shall be required upon a petition to order the submission to the electors of the state for their approval or rejection, of any law, section of any law or any item in any law appropriating money passed by the general assembly. No law passed by the general assembly shall go into effect until ninety days after it shall have been filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state, except as herein provided. When a petition, signed by six per centum of the electors of the state and verified as herein provided, shall have been filed with the secretary of state within ninety days after any law shall have been filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state, ordering that such law, section of such law or any item in such law appropriating money be submitted to the electors of the state for their approval or rejection, the secretary of state shall submit to the electors of the state for their approval or rejection such law, section or item, in the manner herein provided, at the next succeeding regular or general election in any year occurring subsequent to sixty days after the filing of such petition, and no such law, section or item shall go into effect until and unless approved by a majority of those voting upon the same. If, however, a referendum petition is filed against any such section or item, the remainder of the law shall not thereby be prevented or delayed from going into effect."

From a reading of the above constitutional provision it will be observed that a resort to the referendum provisions can only be had within the period of ninety (90) days after a law passed by the general assembly shall have been filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state or, in other words, the petition for referendum must be filed in the office of the secretary of state within ninety (90) days after the law has been filed in that office.

The original law, to be found on pages 399 to 401, inclusive, of the 103 Ohio Laws, was filed in the office of the secretary of state May 7, 1913, hence the period within which a referendum petition might have been filed with reference to its going into effect expired ninety days after the filing of the law in the office of the secretary of state.

The act to amend the original law and which is referred by you as the "Besaw Act," to be found on pages 325 to 327, inclusive, of the 106 Ohio Laws, was passed on May 19, 1915, approved by the governor May 25, 1915, and filed in the offices of the secretary of state May 27, 1915. The ninety-day period within which a referendum petition may be filed to submit it to the electors of the state for approval or rejection has not as yet expired.

It is therefore my opinion that the result of the referendum referred to in your letter will not affect the repeal of the original law, as it would only operate directly on the amendment known as the "Besaw Act." However, if the referendum petition should be filed in the office of the secretary of state within the ninety-day period the operation of the amendment known as the "Besaw Act" would be postponed and it would not become effective, if at all, until after the result of the referendum was known. In other words, the original act would remain in operation as before the passage of the amendment and not be affected by it until after its approval by the electors on the referendum vote.

The contemplated referendum would have no other nor further effect on the original law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROADS IN CUYAHOGA AND HOCKING COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 3, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions relating to the following roads:

Cleveland-East Liverpool Cuyahoga county, petition No. 1389, I. C. H. No. 12;
Logan-Athens, Hocking county, petition No. 1005, I. C. H. No. 155.

As to the resolution relating to the road improvement in Cuyahoga county, it appears from the certificate of the county auditor not that the money required for the payment of the county's portion of the cost of the improvement is in the treasury to the credit of or has been levied, placed on the duplicate and in process of collection for the state and county road improvement fund, but merely that bonds have been advertised for sale for the purpose of raising the county's portion of the cost. Such a certificate is insufficient in law, and as the date for the sale of the bonds has passed, the resolution should be returned to the county auditor of Cuyahoga county, to the end that if bonds have been actually sold and delivered, the proper certificate may be made.

As to the resolution relating to the road improvement in Hocking county, reference is made in the first paragraph of the resolution to a preliminary application, which it is recited was made by the board of commissioners of Hocking county to the state highway department on the 20th day of December, 1915. This is a manifest clerical error and the resolution should be returned to the clerk of the board of commissioners of Hocking county for correction.

For the reasons above set forth, I am returning these resolutions without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR SALE OF CERTAIN PORTIONS OF ABANDONED OHIO CANAL IN WAVERLY, PIKE COUNTY, MAUMEE, LUCAS COUNTY AND ALSO IN CITY OF AKRON.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 16, 1915, transmitting to me duplicate copies of resolutions providing for the sale of certain portions of the abandoned Ohio canal in Waverly, Pike county, Ohio, to Albert Foster and Philip Lorbach, duplicate copies of a resolution providing for the sale of certain canal lands in the village of Maumee, Lucas county, Ohio, to Hubert Pierre, and duplicate copies of a resolution providing for the sale of a certain portion of the Ohio canal lands in the city of Akron to The Billow Sons Company, all of which resolutions have been signed by you.

I find that these resolutions have been drawn in accordance with the provisions of the statutes of Ohio and therefore join with you in the adoption of the resolutions above referred to, and have signed the duplicate copies of the same, which copies are returned to you herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY EXPERIMENT FARMS—INITIAL COST PAID FROM ISSUE OF NOTES OR BONDS UPON WARRANT OF COUNTY AUDITOR AND ALLOWED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—LABORERS EMPLOYED AND EXPENSE OF SUPPLIES AND MATERIALS NECESSARY TO CONDUCT FARM, PAID BY COUNTY TREASURER UPON CERTIFICATE OF DIRECTOR OF OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.

Funds arising from the issue of notes or bonds for the purchase and equipment of county experiment farms, should be deposited in the county treasury and payment of the purchase price of the farm and expenses of the initial equipment thereof as defined in section 1177-4, G. C., 106 O. L., 125, should be made therefrom upon the warrant of the county auditor and upon the allowance thereof by the county commissioners.

After the initial equipment of the farm has been completed, the payment of laborers employed and the expense of supplies and materials necessary to the conduct of the farm should be paid by the county treasurer upon the warrant of the county auditor upon the certificate and allowance of the directors of the Ohio agricultural experiment station.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

HON. W. H. KRAMER, Bursar, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, O.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your under date of August 7, 1915, as follows:

> "We wish to thank you for your opinion of August 2nd.
> "Inasmuch as you state that your opinion given to the agricultural commission regarding the county experiment farms has no application to house bill No. 163, we would thank you for an opinion as to the proper manner of disbursing the funds arising from the bond issue for the purchase and equipment of county experiment farms and funds appropriated by the county commissioners for the payment of wages and purchase of supplies and material as provided for by sections 1174 to 1177, and 1177-1 to 1177-11 of house bill 163.
> "The prosecuting attorneys in five of the counties in which county farms are located have instructed the county commissioners to turn over the maintenance funds, for the payment of wages and purchase of supplies and materials, to the governing board of this institution to be disbursed by the financial officer of the institution.

"In one of the counties having a county farm the maintenance fund is being disbursed by the county auditor on the approval of the bills by the representative of the governing board of this station.

"Inasmuch as this maintenance fund is being provided by the several counties having county experiment farms, we thought probably the funds should be disbursed by the county officers.

"We feel that a uniform system should be followed in all the county farms, and we therefore ask for your opinion in the matter."

In opinion No. 672, under date of August 2, 1915, to which you refer, it was held that the law of this state relative to county experiment farms is now to be found in sections 1174 to 1177, inclusive, of the General Code, and sections 1177-1 to 1177-11, inclusive, of the General Code, as found in house bill No. 163, 106 O. L., 122.

Sections 1176 and 1177, G. C., 106 O. L., 124, provide for the submission of the question of the proposition to establish an experiment farm and to issue bonds or notes for the purchase and equipment thereof to the qualified voters of the county. If such proposition shall be approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, then under the provisions of sections 1177-1 and 1177-2, G. C., 106 O. L., 124-5, the county commissioners are required to levy a tax for the above purpose and to issue and sell bonds or notes of the county and to deposit the proceeds thereof in the county treasury to be applied by the county commissioners to the purchase and equipment of an experiment farm. When these funds are so deposited in the county treasury, the county commissioners are required to notify the state board of control of their action, which board is required thereupon to visit the county and assist in the selection of a farm to be purchased by the county commissioners, as required by section 1177-3, G. C., 106 O. L., 125.

Sections 1177-4 and 1177-5, G. C., 106 O. L., 125, provide as follows:

"Section 1177-4. The equipment of an experiment farm shall consist of such buildings, drains, fences, implements, live stock, stock feed and teams as shall be deemed necessary by the board of control for the successful work of such farm, and the initial equipment shall be provided by the county in which the farm is established, together with a sufficient fund to pay the wages of the laborers required to conduct the work of such farm during the first season. The county commissioners shall appropriate for the payment of the wages of laborers employed in the management of such farms as may be established under this act, and for the purpose of supplies and materials necessary to the proper conduct of such farms such sums not exceeding two thousand dollars annually for any farm, as may be agreed upon between such county commissioners and the board of control.

"Section 1177-5. The management of all county experiment farms established under authority of this act shall be vested in the director of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, who shall appoint all employes and plan and execute the work to be carried on, in such manner as in his judgment will most effectively serve the agricultural interests of the county in which such farm may be located, the director and all employes being governed by the general rules and regulations of the board of control."

From this it appears that the county commissioners are required, in addition to purchasing the farm, to provide for the initial equipment of the same with all such buildings, drains, fences, implements, live stock, stock feed and teams as shall be deemed necessary by the board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, together with sufficient funds to pay the wages of laborers required during the first season. That is to say, it is the duty of the county commissioners to provide such equipment of the character above named as such board of control may deem necessary and direct to be provided. The contract or contracts for such equipment as well as for the purchase of the farm should then be entered into by the commissioners according to law and payment therefor made upon the allowance of the commissioners and warrant of the county auditor by the county treasurer from the proceeds of the notes and bonds in the county treasury above referred to.

When the farm is purchased and the initial equipment thereof so provided, then by force of section 1177-5, supra, the management and control thereof devolves upon the director of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, who is authorized to appoint all employes and to plan and execute the work to be carried on. To carry on this work effectively and with substantial accomplishment of the purpose thereof, it is essential that sufficient and proper employes, supplies and incidentals necessary thereto be provided, and the power of management conferred upon the director of the Ohio agricultural experiment station carries with it by necessary implication the authority to purchase such supplies and to fix the compensation of employes by him appointed within the limits of the funds appropriated therefor.

Provision for the payment of claims against a county is found in section 2460, G. C., as follows:

> "No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. No public money shall be disbursed by the county commissioners, or any of them, but shall be disbursed by the county treasurer, upon the warrant of the county auditor, specifying the name of the party entitled thereto, on what account, and upon whose allowance, if not fixed by law."

Since then the amount due for wages, supplies and materials necessary to a proper execution of the work to be carried on in the conduct of county experiment farms is to be fixed by the director of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, payment of claims therefor should be made upon the warrant of the county auditor from the county treasury, upon the certificate of allowance thereof by the director of the Ohio agricultural experiment station.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

THE COPPER WORLD EXTENSION MINING COMPANY—FOREIGN CORPORATION—SALE OF CAPITAL STOCK IN OHIO TO ITS STOCKHOLDERS—MUST SECURE LICENSE AS "DEALER" UNDER "BLUE SKY" LAW.

The Copper World Extension Mining Company, a foreign corporation, desirous of selling a limited amount of its capital stock in Ohio to its own stockholders, must secure a license as a dealer, under the provisions of the Ohio "blue sky" law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 10, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "A mining corporation, organized under the laws of the state of Washington—The Copper World Extension Mining Company—desires to sell some of its stock remaining unsold to its present stockholders.
> "The announced intention of the officials of the company is to raise about six hundred dollars for the purpose of paying the taxes now due on the property. The officers assert that there will be no stock offered for sale except the amount above mentioned and then only to present stockholders.
> "The offer to sell is to be made by the company to residents of the state of Ohio and in Ohio.
> "Will the company, under the above facts, require a dealer's license under the Ohio blue sky law?"

The term "dealer," as used in the blue sky law, is defined in section 6373-2 of the General Code (103 O. L., 744) as follows:

> "Section 6373-2. * * *
> "The term 'dealer,' as used in this act, shall be deemed to include any person or company, except national banks, disposing, or offering to dispose, of any security, through agents or otherwise, and any company engaged in the marketing or flotation of its own securities either directly or through agents or underwriters or any stock promotion scheme whatsoever; except: * * *"

Following the above quoted paragraph of section 6373-2, G. C. (103 O. L., 744) is a descriptive list of persons or companies disposing, or offering to dispose, of securities who are excepted from the definition of the term "dealer."

The facts stated in your inquiry are not such as bring The Copper World Extionsion Mining Company within any one of the exceptions to the general definition of the term "dealer." The company desires to sell its stock, or at least some of its stock, in Ohio to its present stockholders. The purpose for which such stock is sold, or the limited amount which it expects to sell, or the fact that it expects to sell such stock to its own stockholders, are not sufficient to except the company from the requirements of the statute.

I am therefore of the opinion that The Copper World Extension Mining Company should be required to take out a license under the Ohio blue sky law before making sales of its stock as set forth in your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LOAN REGULATION ACT—ONLY ONE LICENSE REQUIRED TO ENGAGE IN ALL OF SEVERAL CLASSES OF BUSINESS MENTIONED IN SECTION 6346-1, G. C., OF AMENDING ACT—APPLICANT WHO HAS PAID TWO FEES PRIOR TO AMENDMENT IN 106 O. L., TO ENGAGE IN "CHATTEL MORTGAGE BUSINESS" AND "SALARY LOAN BUSINESS" IS ENTITLED TO A CREDIT UPON LICENSE FEE REQUIRED UNDER AMENDED ACT.

Under the provisions of sections 6346-1 to 6346-7, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 281, only one license is required to engage in all of the several classes of business mentioned in section 6346-1, of the amending act.

An applicant for a license under said act who has paid two fees and taken out two licenses under the provisions of sections 6346-1 to 6346-7, G. C., prior to the amendment of said sections in 106 O. L., one of which license was for authority to engage in "salary loan business," is entitled to a credit of $20.00 (being the amount paid for both licenses) upon the license fee required under the amended act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 11, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Section 6346-10 amended senate bill number 7 (Lloyd loan regulation act) provides:
> "'Any licensee, or licensees, who holds a license under the provisions of sections 6346-1, 6346-2, 6346-3, 6346-4, 6346-5, 6346-6 and 6346-7, of the General Code, inclusive, which has not yet expired and who shall present his license for cancellation to the superintendent of banks herein, shall receive therefor a credit in the amount of ten dollars and the superintendent of banks shall credit the same upon the license herein.'
> "We have had some inquiries as to the question of rebates on licenses now held by persons who have been operating chattel and salary loan companies; some of these persons and companies have been holding two licenses under the provisions 6346-1 to 6346-7, inclusive, of the General Code, one license being for salary loans and another license for chattel loans. The question now arises as to whether or not parties holding two licenses under the old law are entitled to a rebate of $10.00 or $20.00 on the fee for a license under the new act.
> "Your early opinion on this matter will be highly appreciated."

Section 6346-2 of the General Code, prior to its amendment by the act referred to in your letter, was as follows:

"Sec. 6346-2. Applications for license to conduct such business must be made in writing to the secretary of state and shall contain the full names and addresses of applicants, if natural person, and in case of firms or incorporated companies, the full names and addresses of the officers and directors thereof and under what law or laws incorporated, the kind of business which is to be conducted, whether chattel mortgage or salary loan; the place where such business is to be conducted and such other information as the secretary of state may require. The fee to be charged for said license shall be ten dollars ($10.00) per annum and such amount must accompany the application. * * *"

From the statement in your letter it appears that the secretary of state has required applicants for authority to engage in the "chattel mortgage and salary loan" business to take out two licenses, one for each class of business. This requirement was evidently made under authority of the provision of said section above quoted requiring such application to state "the kind of business which is to be conducted, whether chattel mortgage or salary loan." Whether the secretary of state was authorized, under this language, to require an applicant desiring to engage in both classes of business to pay two fees and secure two licenses is at this time immaterial. The fact remains, as stated in your letter, that a number of applicants were required to and did take out two licenses, for each of which they paid the required fee of $10.00.

"Sec. 6346-3. Application for a license shall state fully the name or names, and address, of the person or corporation, and of every member of the firm, partnership, or association authorized to do business thereunder, and the location of the office or place of business in which the business is conducted; and in the case of a corporation, shall also state the date and place of its incorporation, the name and address of its manager for the period for which the license is issued, and the names and addresses of its directors for the period for which the license is issued, and the name and address of the agent as provided in section 6346-2 of this act. * * *"

It will be observed that the language of old section 6346-2, which required the application to state "the kind of business which is to be conducted, whether chattel mortgage or salary loan," under authority of which two license fees were exacted, is not found in the amended section above quoted, nor does it appear in any other part of the act, and it is clearly apparent that the amended law contemplates the creation or, rather, segregation of a single class, members of which may be authorized upon paying the required fee and securing one license to engage, under favored circumstances and with enlarged authority, in any one, or more, or all of the businesses sought to be regulated by the act.

Section 6346-10 of the act, as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 281, which is quoted in full in your letter, makes provisions for rebating to an applicant for a license, or, rather, for allowing him as a credit upon the license fee required under the amended act, the amount of any license fee paid by him to the secretary of state for a license under the provisions of the loan law prior to its amendment, in the event such old license has not expired.

It was clearly the intention of the legislature to allow an applicant for a license under the amended act credit for the amount paid by him for any unexpired license or licenses then held by such applicant under the provisions of the law before its amendment, upon presentation by him of such a license or licenses for cancellation.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that an applicant for a license under the provisions of 6346-10 of the amended law (106 O. L., 281), who presents for cancellation two licenses taken out under the old law, one for chattel mortgage loans and one for salary loans, for each of which he was required to pay a license fee of $10.00 by the secretary of state, is entitled to receive a credit of $20.00 upon the license fee required under the law as now amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—LEASE TO THE SCIOTO VALLEY TRACTION COMPANY OF RIGHT-OF-WAY FOR ELECTRIC RAILWAY PURPOSES OVER ABANDONED OHIO CANAL NEAR LOCKBOURNE, OHIO, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 17, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt from you on August 9, 1915, of a lease executed by your predecessor in office, Hon. John I. Miller, to The Scioto Valley Traction Company, of a right-of-way for electric railway purposes over the abandoned Ohio canal near Lockbourne, Ohio, the lease being forwarded to me for examination.

I find the same to be in regular form and am therefore returning it with my approval endorsed thereon.

STATE BUILDING CODE—EXIT DOORS OF THEATER SEATING OVER THREE HUNDRED PERSONS—MUST BE ON EACH SIDE—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PERMIT USE OF THEATER UNLESS STATUTE COMPLIED WITH—DISCRETION IN CERTAIN AUTHORITIES FOR USE OR SUBSTITUTION OF OTHER "FIXTURE, DEVICE, OR CONSTRUCTION" DOES NOT EMBRACE CHANGE IN LOCATION OF EXIT DOORS.

Exit doors must be provided on each side of theater seating over 300 persons as provided in section 12600-20, G. C.

Industrial commission has no authority to permit use of theater not provided with exit doors as required in section 12600-20, G. C.

Discretion which may be exercised by state and municipal authorities jointly for the use or substitution of other "fixture, device or construction" does not contemplate change in location of exist doors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Division of Workshops, Factories and Public Buildings, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"We will be pleased to have your opinion upon a matter of law arising from the following facts:

"A theater was recently built in Canal Dover, Ohio, which fronts on one street, has an alley on the north side and a street on the rear or west end of the building. This theater is ninety feet long, twenty-six feet and nine inches wide and seats four hundred and thirty-five people.

"A question has arisen between this commission and the owner of the building relative to the location of the exists. The provisions of the state building code pertaining to exists reads as follows:

"'Section 19. (Means of Egress) Theaters. The means of egress from theaters shall not be less than the following, and shall be provided in addition to the usual means of ingress. From main or auditorium floor level, one six ft. wide door shall be provided on each side of the auditorium to each five hundred (500) persons, or fraction thereof.

"'Where one exit door is required on each side, the same shall be placed midway between the front and rear walls of the auditorium.'

"You will note that when one exit door is required on each side the same must be placed midway between the front and rear of the theater. In the case referred to the owner claims that he is unable to make this arrangement with the property owners on the south side of the building and for that reason it is impossible for him to place an exit on that side. The building has been provided with exits as follows:

"On the north or alley side of the building two six foot doors, one near the front, the other midway between the front and rear, and one three foot six inch door in the end or west wall near the south side of the building, which is three feet and six inches more exit space than the statute requires, although these openings are not located as required by section 19 above quoted.

"The owner of this building offers to put one or more additional exits in the north side so that the actual width of exit space would be much greater than that required by the statute, and which he claims would enable the people to get out much quicker than they could if there were no openings except the two required by the statute and the usual means of ingress.

"We are of the opinion that we are not given sufficient discretionary power in the enforcement of this law to accept this arrangement of exits in lieu of that prescribed by the code, while the owner of the building and his attorney claim that we are given this power under the provisions of section 5 of the administrative section of the code, which reads as follows:

" 'Section 5. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit the council of municipalities from making further and additional regulations, not in conflict with any of the provisions of this act contained nor shall the provisions of this act be construed to modify or repeal any portions of any building code adopted by a municipal corporation and now in force which are not in direct conflict with the provisions of this act. Where the use of another fixture, device or construction is desired at variance with what is described in the statute, plans, specifications and details shall be furnished to the proper state and municipal authorities mentioned in section 1 for examination and approval and if required actual tests shall be made to the complete satisfaction of said state and municipal authorities that the fixture, device or construction proposed answers to all intent and purposes the fixture, device or construction hereafter described in this statute, instead of actual tests satisfactory evidence of such tests may be presented for approval with full particulars of the results and containing the names of witnesses of said tests.'

"We would like to be advised whether or not in your opinion the words 'fixture, device or construction' as used in this section could be made to apply to the arrangement of exits, and whether or not, even though the proposed exits would afford equal or better means of egress from the building, we would have the power to accept this arrangement and permit the theater to operate without an exit located midway between front and rear of one of the side walls as prescribed by the code."

Section 19 of the Building Code, which is section 12600-20 of the General Code, among other things provides as quoted in your letter as to the means of egress from theaters, as follows:

"From the main or auditorium floor level one six (6) foot wide exit door shall be provided on each side of the auditorium to each five hundred (500) persons or fraction thereof.

"Where one exit door is required on each side, the same shall be placed midway between the front and rear walls of the auditorium.

"Where two exit doors are required on each side, one shall be located near the front and the other near the rear wall of the auditorium.

"Where more than two exit doors are required on each side, one shall be located near the front wall, one near the rear wall, and the others equally spaced between the two.

"If these exit doors are above or below the grade line the same shall be provided with stone, cement or iron steps leading to the grade line. Steps shall be not less than six (6) feet wide."

In the case under consideration the theater referred to, which is 90 ft. long by 26 ft. 9 in. wide, with a seating capacity of 435 people, has been erected with two exit doors located on one side of the building, said doors being 6 ft. wide and one additional door 3 ft. 6 in. wide located in the end or west wall, the latter door affording exit space of 3 ft. 6 in. in addition to that prescribed by the law for a theater of the capacity of the one under consideration.

Section 5 of the Building Code, which is section 12600-277 of the General Code, is quoted in your letter and you inquire whether the use of the words "fixture, device or construction" would clothe your department with authority to substitute exit doors as described in the case under consideration in place of the exits provided for by law, to be located on each side of the building as provided in section 12600-20 of the General Code.

In the case of Scharff v. Southern Illinois Construction Co., 92 S. W., 126; 115 Mo. App., 157, the word "construction was defined as follows:

> "The term 'construction' with reference to a building, means the putting together of the materials used therein."

I am at a loss to find any authority which would enable your commission, in the exercise of its discretion, to substitute exit doors all on one side of an auditorium seating over three hundred persons, in face of the plain provisions of the law that such exit doors shall be located on each side of the building and midway between the front and rear walls of the auditorium, and especially in view of the exceptions relating to this point, made in the same section of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Theaters from twenty-five (25) to thirty (30) feet wide, not over one hundred (100) feet long and seating not over three hundred (300) persons, shall have one six (6) foot wide exit door from the main auditorium to the side or rear street, alley or open court, and one three feet and four inches (3 ft. 4 in.) wide exit door from the balcony leading to B, C or D standard fire escape."

I am informed that when the theater building referred to was constructed its plans were approved by your commission, with the distinct understanding that proper exits would be arranged and later, when complications arose as to the securing of the facilities for exits on one side of the building, representations concerning the use of the theater were to the effect that less than three hundred seats would be placed in the theater until after all of the requirements of the law had been met.

It is to be observed that the industrial commission of Ohio is, under all circumstances, powerless to act of itself towards the substitution of any fixture, device or construction, as the provisions of the law are plain and equivocal with respect to the requirement that any use or substitution can only be made when there is a joint action on the part of the state and municipal authorities permitting such use or substitution, and if the owner of the building could, under an interpretation of the law, have been regarded as having the means of relief afforded to him through the operation of section 12600-277 of the General Code, there is no question that it is too late now to assert that claim, as no effort was made to secure the use or substitution of any fixture, device or construction as provided for in section 12600-277, but, on the contrary, there was an expressed intention to comply with the expressed law governing the matter.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the provisions of the law requiring exits to be on each side of the building are plain and that section 5 of the Building Code, quoted in your letter, and which is section 12600-277 of the General Code, does not vest in your commission any discretionary power such as would enable you to eliminate the exit door or doors from one side of the building and provide the same, or additional exit space, all on the other side of the building, in view of the fact that an exit door is not embraced under the terms of "fixture, device or construction."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—PRESIDENT PRO TEM OF COUNCIL DOES NOT SUCCEED TO OFFICE OF PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL ON DEATH OF PRESIDING OFFICER—MAYOR HAS AUTHORITY TO APPOINT—FAILURE OF MAYOR TO APPOINT, OR HIS RECOGNITION OF PRESIDENT PRO TEM OF COUNCIL IN PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES OF OFFICE, AMOUNT TO AN APPOINTMENT—IF A PERSON UNDER SUCH CIRCUMSTANCES SUCCEEDS TO OFFICE OF MAYOR BECAUSE OF A VACANCY, HE IS ENTITLED TO OFFICE AND HIS OFFICIAL ACTS ARE LEGAL.

President pro tem of council does not as a matter of law succeed to office of president of council on death of that officer.

Mayor has authority to appoint. Failure of mayor to exercise power of appointment or recognition of president pro tem of council who assumes office of president of council and co-operation with him in the performance of the duties of the office amounts to an appointment to such office.

President of council acquiring that office under foregoing circumstances who succeeds to office of mayor to fill vacancy caused by resignation is entitled to hold the office of mayor and his acts and the acts of his subordinates or appointees are legal and valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

MR. ROY N. MERRYMAN, City Solicitor, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter asking for an opinion on a question embraced in a statement of facts as follows:

> "Under date of July 17, 1915, I received the following enquiry for an opinion from Charles R. Wells, city auditor of Steubenville:
> " 'The question has been asked me on several different occasions if Lon W. Ralston is the legal mayor of the city of Steubenville, Ohio, and if he is not, are any of his appointments legal and have they the power to approve contracts or vouchers? Mr. Merryman, please look this matter up at once and give me your opinion on the same. The only interest I have in this is to protect the city, my bondsmen and myself.'
> "While I am aware that under the statutes it is not incumbent upon you to render legal opinions to city solicitors, yet, in view of the work done here by Mr. Ballard, your first assistant, in connection with our recent municipal investigation, and of my association with him at that time, I feel I should extend to you the courtesy of a request for this opinion, and I also would appreciate the consideration of this question by your department and an opinion thereon to me as a favor.

"I will briefly state to you the facts that will probably be necessary for you to consider in arriving at an opinion on the questions submitted in the inquiry of City Auditor Wells.

"The minutes of the city council show that something more than a year ago Harry Woods, the duly elected, qualified and acting president of council, died. At that time Lon W. Ralston, now serving as mayor, was president pro tem of council. The minutes of the next meeting of council are signed by Mr. Ralston as president pro tem, while the minutes of the meeting next thereafter are signed by him as president of council. In other words, the minutes disclose the fact that Mr. Ralston succeeded to the office of president of council by virtue of being president pro tem. Since that time, and within the past few months, George W. McLeish resigned as mayor of the city, and Mr. Ralston took the oath as mayor by virtue of serving as president of the council. Raymond W. Teaff, the then president pro tem of council, succeeded to the office of the president of council.

"If Mr. Ralston was president of council then he is properly in the office of mayor, but the question that arises in my mind, in considering this enquiry, is as to whether or not he ever was president of council.

"In connection with this enquiry, I cite you to an opinion of Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, formerly attorney general, at page 1882 of volume 2, of the annual report of the attorney general for 1912; and to another opinion of Mr. Hogan contained in volume 2 of the annual report of the attorney general for 1913, at page 1519.

"I call your attention to section 4210 of the General Code, which provides regarding election of a president pro tem in cities. I also call your attention to section 4274 of the General Code, which provides for the succession of the president of council to the office of mayor in case of death, resignation and removal of the mayor, as well as the succession of the president pro tem of council to the office of president under such circumstances. I also call your attention to section 4252 of the General Code, providing for the filling of vacancies in office, not otherwise provided for.

"Of course, the real question raised under the city auditor's enquiry is with reference to the office of mayor. If Mr. Ralston is not the duly authorized and acting mayor, then his appointees could derive from him no power or authority, as I take it.

"If you see your way clear and will be kind enough to render me an opinion on this enquiry, I shall appreciate the same, and, if your opinion should be that Mr. Ralston is not the duly authorized and acting mayor of this city, then I would be glad for you to give me your opinion as to how the office of mayor, under the circumstances stated, should be filled."

At the time when Harry Woods, the duly elected, qualified and acting president of the city council died, the then mayor of the city would have had authority to fill the vacancy in that office caused by the death of the incumbent. However, as stated in your letter, Mr. Lon W. Ralston, who was then president pro tem of the council, assumed the duties of the office of president of the council, and from the fact that he continued in that office until reecently, when he assumed the office of mayor on account of the resignation of Mr. George W. McLeish it may be assumed, at least, that while the mayor who had the power to appoint the successor to Mr. Woods did not make an appointment in so many words, his acquiescence in the holding of the position by Mr. Ralston, who was a de facto officer, amounted almost to an appointment.

In addition to the information contained in your original request for an opinion you state in your letter of August 11th as follows:

> "I might add, however, that all other officers and persons treated Mr. Ralston as president of council; that on one occasion when Mayor McLeish was out of the city he wired Mr. Ralston to look after matters connected with the office, and that on one or two other occasions Mr. Ralston performed one or two duties of the office as acting mayor."

From your statement it would appear that Mr. McLeish not only acquiesced in Mr. Ralston holding the office of president of the council, but actually assigned to him some specific duties incident to that office, during the mayor's absence from the city.

In the case of State v. Nield, court of appeals of Kansas, northern department, C. D., decided July 9, 1896, 45 Pac. Rep., 623, it was held, at page 625, as follows:

> "'It is one of the exceptions to this general rule which requires the best evidence of which the point is susceptible, that proof that an individual has acted openly in a public office is prima facie evidence of his official character, without proving his election or producing his commission. 1 Greenl. Ev., Sec. 83. The plaintiff, therefore, was not obliged to produce the township book in order to prove the office of the defendant. It was enough for him to show that he had held himself out to the public as the incumbent of the office in question.' In Com. v. Kane, it is held 'The foundation of the rule of evidence, that a person acting as a public officer has been duly appointed to the office which he assumes to exercise, is that all acts done by what appears to be public authority are presumed to be rightly done, until the contrary is proved.' In Bank v. Dandridge, it is said: 'By the general rules of evidence, presumptions are continually made, in cases of private persons, of acts even of the most solemn nature, when those acts are the natural result or necessary accompaniment of other circumstances. In aid of this salutary principle, the law itself, for the purpose of strengthening the infirmity of evidence, and upholding transactions intimately connected with the public peace and the security of private property, indulges its own presumptions. It presumes that every man, in his private and official character, does his duty, until the contrary is proved. * * * It will presume that all things are rightly done, unless the circumstances of the case overturn this presumption, according to the maxim, 'Omnia praesumuntur rite et solemniter esse acta donec probetur in contrarium.' Thus it will presume that a man acting in public office has been rightly appointed.' * * * This rule applies, not merely to the chief officers, but, also, to deputies and assistants who are specially provided for and recognized by law."

In the case of Delphi School District v. Wm. Murray, 53 Cal., at page 29, the court said:

> "To find that these persons were 'acting as trustees' was merely to embody the evidence or a portion of it adduced at the trial upon the issues just referred to, and to add that 'there was no sufficient evidence of the election of Grupe,' etc., was merely to remark upon the condition of the case as presented. If it was proven at the trial that Grupe and others were 'acting as trustees,' a presumption thereby arose that these persons were officers de jure, but this presumption was, of course, disputable in its character, and might have been met and overcome by other evidence. (Code of Civil Procedure, Sec. 1963, Subdiv. 14.) If not so met and overcome the presumption would stand for proof, and would support a finding that these persons were de jure trustees.

"This was the rule at common law, and the statute has wrought no material change in that respect. That direct and primary proof of title to the office is dispensed with in such cases, is mentioned by Mr. Greenleaf, as constituting an exception to the general rule excluding secondary evidence, and as proceeding upon 'strong presumption arising from the undisturbed exercise of a public office, that the appointment of it is valid.'"

In the case of Carter, Paymaster, v. Sympson, 8 B. Monroe's Kentucky Reports, page 155, the court held:

"The rule rejecting secondary evidence, is subject to some exceptions, arising either out of the nature of the facts to be proved, or from a regard to public convenience. It is not, in general, necessary to prove the written appointments of public officers. All who are proved to have acted as such, are presumed to have been duly appointed to the office until the contrary appears. The undisturbed exercise of a public office, creates a strong presumption, that the appointment to it is valid; and where, as in the present instance, the office is held for the benefit of others, the acquiescence of those having an interest in its proper administration, fortifies this presumption. (Greenleaf on Evidence, pages 94 and 104.)"

In the case of Callison v. Hedrick, 15 Grattan's Reports, (Va.) page 244, it was held in the first branch of the syllabus as follows:

"1. In general it is not necessary to prove that written appointments of public officers. That one has acted as such officer and been recognized by the public as such, is sufficient evidence that he has been duly appointed until the contrary appears. And the case is still stronger where the official character has been recognized by the appointing power."

In 29 Cyc., under the head of Officers at page 1373, the author says:

"Where, however, the issue of a commission is not made by law a necessary part of the appointment, the appointment is complete when the choice of the appointing officer has been made, and no written evidence of the appointment is necessary. An oral appointment is valid. Indeed it has frequently been held that the fact that one has acted as an officer and has generally been recognized as such will create presumption of a valid appointment. Such presumption may, however, be overcome by evidence to the contrary."

The doctrine just announced is liberally supported by authorities, from a few of which I have quoted above.

It would appear from the foregoing that Mr. Ralston, having assumed the office of president of the council, and the performance of the duties of that office not only being acquiesced in but in a manner directed by the mayor, the action of the mayor could be construed to be an appointment, especially in view of the fact that Mr. Ralston was not disturbed in the exercise of the office of president of the council but was allowed to continue in such office until at the time of the resignation of Mayor McLeisch, when he assumed the office of mayor. Mr. Ralston assumed the office of mayor under the theory that as president of council he was rightly entitled to assume the office of mayor, under the provisions of section 4274 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "In case of the death, resignation or removal of the mayor, the president of council shall become mayor and serve for the unexpired term, and until the successor is elected and qualified. Thereupon the president pro tem of council shall become president thereof, and shall have the same rights, duties and powers as his predecessor. The vacancy thus created in council shall be filled as other vacancies, and council shall elect another president pro tem."

Since assuming the office of mayor he has performed the duties incident thereto and under the facts and circumstances, there being no one at present who can assert a better title to the office, his status approaches, if, in fact, it does not partake entirely of that of de jure officer.

It is my opinion, therefore, that while the president pro tem of the council did not, as a matter of law, succeed to the office of president of the council upon the death of the incumbent of that office, the manner in which he succeeded to the office, the attendant facts and circumstances surrounding his occupancy of the office, the acquiescence and co-operation of the mayor with him in the performance of his duties as president of the council and as acting mayor constitute a condition of affairs amounting to an appointment of Lon W. Ralston as president of council, from which office he succeeded to the office of mayor, which office he is now filling, and his acts and the acts of his appointees are legal and valid.

In an opinion under date of August 31, 1914, to Hon. Irvine Dungan, city solicitor of Jackson, Ohio, by my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, the question of the filling of a vacancy in the office of president of council occurring through the resignation of the regularly elected incumbent was passed upon, and I am enclosing you a copy of that opinion for your information.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BOARD OF COMPLAINTS—NO AUTHORITY TO CALL DEPUTY ASSESSORS TO DEFEND THEIR ASSESSMENTS —NOT ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION OR EXPENSES IF SUCH DEPUTIES ATTEND—TAX COMMISSION HAS AUTHORITY TO REQUIRE ATTENDANCE OF DEPUTY ASSESSORS AT MEETINGS OF BOARD OF COMPLAINTS—ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION FOR SO ATTENDING.

The board of complaints has no authority to call deputy assessors, as such, before it to defend their assessments. If such deputy assessors voluntarily attend in response to such a call they are not entitled to compensation or expenses therefor.

The tax commission of Ohio, however, has authority to adopt rules requiring the attendance of deputy assessors at meetings of boards of complaints for this purpose upon the order of the board of complaints or the district assessor, and if this is done such deputy assessors would be entitled to compensation for so attending, but not to traveling expenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have been asked by a member of the district board of assessors for Columbiana county to give my opinion upon the following question:

> "Are deputy assessors who may be called before the board of complaints to defend their assessments entitled to their expenses?"

The compensation of deputy assessors is provided for by section 5613 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 795) in the following language:

> "The salaries or compensations of deputy assessors and other employes of the district assessor shall be fixed by the district assessor, subject to the approval of the tax commission of Ohio. * * *"

The traveling expenses of such deputy assessors are provided for by section 5614 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 795) in the following language:

> "* * * The contingent expenses of the district assessor and district board of complaints, including postage and express charges, their actual and necessary traveling expenses and those of their deputies, assistants, experts, clerks or employes on official business outside of the district when required by orders issued by the tax commission of Ohio shall be allowed and paid as claims against the county; provided, however, that such salaries and compensation and such expenses when allowed shall constitute a charge against the county, regardless of the amount of money in the county treasury appropriated for such purposes and notwithstanding any failure of the county commissioners to levy or appropriate funds therefor."

It is clear from the foregoing that the salary or compensation of a deputy assessor must be so fixed as to cover all of his traveling expenses within the district. An allowance may be made for traveling expenses as such only when the traveling is outside of the district.

Regarding the service of the deputy assessor in attending before the board of complaints to defend his assessments as an official service, the conclusion would follow that if paid as deputy assessor on a per diem basis he would be entitled to an allowance of compensation at such prescribed rate for such services, but not to traveling expenses.

The board of complaints has no authority to compel the attendance of witnesses nor to pay witness fees. It is obvious, therefore, that if any charge can be made for the service mentioned it must be, as above stated, on the theory that it is an official service.

Section 28 of the Warnes law—section 5606 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 793)—provides as follows:

> "The district board of complaints may increase or decrease any valuation complained of and increase or reduce the listed amount of any taxable property, upon its own initiative or if the party affected thereby or his agent makes and files with the board a written application therefor, verified by his oath, showing the facts upon which it is claimed such increase or decrease or reduction should be made, but not without affording the district assessor an apportunity to be heard thereon."

Under favor of this provision the district assessor is entitled to defend his assessments before the board of complaints. It cannot, however, be argued that the right of the district assessor to appear and be heard with respect to a matter pending before the board of complaints devolves upon his deputy, for it is expressly provided by section 4 of the Warnes law—section 5582 of the General Code—that the deputy assessor shall not possess the powers of the district assessor under section 28 of the act.

But the district board of complaints has no authority to call upon a deputy assessor as such to appear before it. That is to say, in the absence of an affirmative regulation by the tax commission, no such power exists.

Section 46 of the Warnes law—section 5623 of the General Code, (103 O. L., 798) provides as follows:

> "In addition to the duties specifically imposed by law upon district assessors, deputy assessors and district boards of complaints, they and each of them shall perform such other duties as the tax commission of Ohio in the exercise of its powers may from time to time direct, and in the discharge of such duties they and each of them shall exercise all and singular the powers in them vested by this act."

Section 54 of the same act—section 5624-7 of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "The tax commission of Ohio shall, from time to time, prescribe such general and uniform rules and regulations and issue such orders and instructions, not inconsistent with any provision of law, as it may deem necessary respecting the manner of the exercise of the powers and the discharge of the duties of any and all officers, relating to the assessment of real and personal property and the levy and collection of taxes."

The matter about which the district assessor inquires is one, it seems to me, with respect to which the tax commission would have power to make an administrative rule. The commission would not have the power to authorize the payment of expenses as such, but the commission would have authority to make it the duty of the deputy assessor to appear when called upon, either by the board of complaints or by the district assessor, and explain or defend his acts in a matter pending before the board of complaints. Such attendance thus being made his duty, it would follow that he would be entitled to his compensation for services rendered in the discharge thereof, though not, for reasons above stated, to his traveling expenses.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STREET ASSESSMENT IN VILLAGE—WHERE COUNTY AUDITOR'S OFFICE CHARGES AND COLLECTS AN EXCESSIVE AMOUNT THROUGH ERROR AND PROCEEDS ARE PAID INTO SINKING FUND—HOW REIMBURSEMENT CAN BE MADE OF EXCESSIVE ASSESSMENT—COUNTY DITCH ASSESSMENT—COLLECTED SIX MONTHS BEFORE DUE—NO REFUND.

Through a clerical error in the office of the county auditor an excessive amount was charged and collected as a street assessment and the proceeds thereof paid into the sinking fund of the assessing village.

The county auditor under favor of section 2589, G. C., on discovering the error must call the attention of the county commissioners thereto. The commissioners, on ascertaining the facts, should authorize the auditor to draw his warrants on any surplus or unexpended funds in the county treasury for the reimbursement of persons so paying such excessive assessment, and at the next semi-annual settlement an amount equivalent to the amount so refunded should be withheld by the county auditor from the amount due to the sinking fund of the assessing village.

The county ditch assessment was properly charged on the special duplicate, but through a clerical error in making out tax receipts was collected six months before it was due.

The county auditor and the county commissioners are without power under section 2589, G. C., to refund to the persons so erroneously paying such assessment an amount equal to the interest on the bonds issued in anticipation thereof for the six months' period.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of two letters from you, one under date of August 6th and the other under date of August 7th, presenting two somewhat similar questions. In your letter of August 7th you request that I consider these questions together. I have done so, and in this opinion will deal with both of them.

The one question which is stated by the auditor of Stark county is, in his language, as follows:

> "The village of Minerva certified to the auditor's office some street assessments to be collected by the county, and which were to be collected in ten annual installments. Through an error of one of the clerks in bringing forward balance due on these assessments, practically all the people were over-charged and paid one installment more than they should have paid. All the money collected on these street assessments has in the past been turned over to the village authorities at Minerva, and placed by them into the sinking fund. After I discovered this error I want to correct same, and I think the proper course to pursue is to have the county refund direct to the parties.

"Would it be proper for me to withhold from the money due the sinking fund of Minerva village from the tax levy a sufficient amount to take care of these refunders?"

The second question, which is stated by the auditor of Greene county, is in his language as follows:

"A county ditch was established, assessment made and certified to this office by the county board of commissioners. They certified the assessment due and payable June 20th, 1915, and we so entered it upon our special duplicate of 1914, and turned it over to the county treasurer with the balance of the specials.

"The treasurer in writing up his receipts for December, 1914, placed this assessment upon the receipt at that time, and the most of the taxes were paid for this ditch last December, but same was not due till this June.

"Bonds were sold for this ditch and the interest was charged up till June 20, 1915; now the property owners claim that they were charged interest up to June 20, 1915, and taxes demanded in December, 1914, which is true.

"The commissioners and myself feel that an injustice has been performed upon the (tax payers,) and it was not done intentionally, and we feel that they should be reimbursed to the amount of interest paid on bonds from December 20, 1914, to June 20, 1915, on the amount of special taxes paid on this ditch in December, 1914, that was not due till June, 1915."

Both these questions invite, I think, consideration of sections 2588 and 2589 of the General Code, which provide as follows:

"Sec. 2588. From time to time the county auditor shall correct all errors which he discovers in the tax list and duplicate, either in the name of the person charged with taxes or assessments, the description of lands or other property or when property exempt from taxation has been charged with tax, or in the amount of such taxes or assessment. If the correction is made after the duplicate is delivered to the treasurer, it shall be made on the margin of such list and duplicate without changing any name, description or figure in the duplicate as delivered, or in the original tax list, which shall always correspond exactly with each other.

"Sec. 2589. After having delivered the duplicate to the county treasurer for collection, if the auditor is satisfied that any tax or assessment thereon or any part thereof has been erroneously charged, he may give the person so charged a certificate to that effect to be presented to the treasurer, who shall deduct the amount from such tax or assessment. If at any time the auditor discovers that erroneous taxes or assessments have been charged and collected in previous years, he shall call the attention of the county commissioners thereto at a regular or special session of the board. If the commissioners find that taxes or assessments have been so erroneously charged and collected, they shall order the auditor to draw his warrant on the county treasurer in favor of the person paying them for the full amount of the taxes or assessments so erroneously charged and collected. The county treasurer shall pay such warrant from any surplus or unexpended funds in the county treasury."

Preliminary to the discussion of the merits of these two questions I think I ought for accuracy's sake to call attention to the fact that there is some doubt as to whether the county auditor still possesses power to act under section 2588, supra, in view of the provisions of section 64 of the Warnes law (section 5624-17 of the General Code), which impose similar powers upon the district assessor. However, I am of the opinion that the county auditor is the proper officer to exercise the powers specifically granted to him by section 2589 of the General Code, because section 64 of the Warnes law, goes no further in its effect than section 2588 goes, viz.: applies to the correction of a living or current duplicate, and does not extend to the certification of errors through which taxes have actually been paid as provided in section 2589, of the General Code, as underlying the making of the refunders which are therein authorized.

Section 5 of the Warnes law (section 5583 of the General Code) may have some effect in this connection also, inasmuch as it provides that

"whenever the county auditor is by any existing provision of law charged with any duty or vested with any powers in making up the original tax list, * * * such duty shall devolve upon and be performed by the district assessor, and such power shall vest in him and be exercised by him; * * *"

But this provision also is limited in its effect to the making up of the tax list.

Without going into this feature of the two questions in further detail, I may say that I am of the opinion that whatever action may lawfully be taken must be initiated at least by the county auditor.

Coming now to the consideration of the separate questions submitted, I advise that, in my opinion, the first case above stated evidences a proper instance for the exercise of power under section 2589 of the General Code. There is no question that the charging and collection of the eleventh installment of the street assessments mentioned in the auditor's letter was "erroneous." The only limitations which apply to section 2589 of the General Code, are that the error must be a clerical one as distinguished from a fundamental one not apparent on the face of the record, and that where the taxes have been paid voluntarily they may not be refunded.

Manifestly, the error in question is purely clerical and is perfectly apparent on the face of the record. In my opinion, the question of voluntary payment does not enter into the case as stated, for the reason that this rule is but an application of the general doctrine that payments under a mistake of law may not be recovered, but payments under a mistake of facts may be recovered. In this instance there was a mistake of fact, and not a mistake of law.

The cases which deny the right to refund under section 2589, where the payments have been voluntary, are either based upon estoppel, i. e., where the parties had full knowledge of the circumstances and therefore could not be said to have paid under "mistake" at all, (State ex rel. v. Lewis, 20 C. C., 319) or where the mistake was a mistake of law. (Bridge Company v. Commissioners, 9 Bull., 16; Sandheger v. Commissioners, 9 Bull., 20.)

I do not think that it is necessary in order to justify the refunder of taxes under section 2589, that there should have been actual distraint or other duress. I find that my predecessor was of this opinion and so stated in an opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Tuscarawas county, under date of April 24, 1913, found in the annual report for that year at pages 1213-1215.

It follows, therefore, that the county auditor, having discovered the mistake and the over-payment, must call the attention of the county commissioners to the circumstances (Hagerty v. State, 14 C. C., 95). If the commissioners find the facts to be as stated by the auditor, it is their duty to order the auditor to draw his warrants on the county treasurer in favor of the several persons paying the additional assessment, so erroneously charged, for the full amount so erroneously charged and collected. These warrants may be issued upon and by the treasurer paid from any surplus or unexpended funds in the county treasury. Then at the next semi-annual settlement it will be the duty of the auditor to deduct the amount so paid from the amounts due the sinking fund of the village of Minerva.

Section 2590, of the General Code, provides in this connection that > "at the next semi-annual settlement with the auditor of state after the refunding of such taxes, the county auditor shall deduct from the amount of taxes due the state at such settlement the amount of such taxes that have been paid into the state treasury. No taxes or assessments shall be so refunded except as have been so erroneously charged or collected in the five years next prior to the discovery therof by the auditor. No assessment shall be returned, except from the fund or funds created in whole or in part by the erroneous assessments."

It is true that this section lacks machinery which might be deemed essential. However, in view of its purpose I think it will be liberally construed and that the necessary machinery may be supplied.

While it is true that the sinking fund trustees of a municipal corporation are required to keep separate the proceeds of special assessments when bonds have been issued in anticipation of their collection, and when on that account the trustees are entitled to receive the assessments after they are collected; yet such excessive amounts as may have been paid into the sinking fund of the village in this instance must have merely enhanced the general sinking fund and inured to the benefit of the taxpayers generally. It is only equitable, therefore, and otherwise in strict accordance with the terms of the statute that the general sinking fund levies should be retained to make good the refunders.

In this connection it is to be observed that section 2590, supra, does not require that at the settlement the amount refunded shall be charged against a fund wholly created by the erroneous assessments, but it is sufficient in order to authorize such retention that the fund to which the retention is charged be "created in whole or in part" by the erroneous assessments. As above stated, the sinking fund of the village of Minerva in the case inquired about satisfies this description.

I have assumed in answering the first question that the excessive installments were collected within five years next prior to the discovery of the error by the auditor.

Upon this assumption and for the reasons above stated, I am of the opinion in answer to the first question that it is the duty of the county auditor to call the attention of the county commissioners to the discovery which he has made. The commissioners should then order the auditor to draw his warrants on the county treasurer against any surplus or unexpended funds therein for the reimbursement of the parties from which the excessive assessments have been erroneously collected; thereupon, at the next semi-annual settlement the auditor should retain from the proceeds of sinking fund levies due to the village of Minerva an amount equal to the amount of such refunders.

The second question, while seemingly similar to the first, is in reality essentially different therefrom. In this case there was no erroneous charge and in only one sense was there an erroneous collection. The amounts charged for collection were proper so far as the auditor's letter shows. They were merely collected at the wrong time. Moreover, they were not, so far as the letter shows, charged for collection at such time, the error being not in the duplicate but in the making out of the tax receipts. It is customary, of course, for taxpayers to regard the unsigned receipts which are handed to them on request by the county treasurer as "bills" in the nature of a demand for the taxes. In contemplation of law, however, this is not so. The only legal charge which is made is that which appears on the face of the duplicate, and, in my opinion, the word "charged" as used in section 2589, G. C., necessarily refers to what appears on the face of the duplicate, and does not contemplate an error in a tax bill.

In substance, then, the transaction described in the second question amounts to this: Through a mutual mistake, shared by the county treasurer on the one hand and the owners of assessed property on the other hand, certain ditch assessments were collected before they were due. Therefore, it is urged that there was an erroneous collection to the extent of the interest on the assessment between the date of collection and the date when they should have been collected.

Upon reflection this claim appears to be unfounded. If the collection was erroneous at all, and even assuming that a refunder may be made where there is no erroneous charge and the only error occurs in the collection, the error in this case would affect the entire amount collected. In that event there should be a refunder of the entire amount, and in such case the next step would be the collection of the entire amount over again at the June collection of taxes. If the collection had been made at the proper time, the parties would have paid the exact sums which they actually did pay. It may be argued that the parties have been damaged by the mistake, because they have lost the use of their money for a period of six months, but they have paid nothing more than the county was entitled to, and if through a mistake of the county treasurer, in which they participated, they have lost the use of their money for a period of six months, this is not an injury of a character which can be remedied under section 2589. If the parties had been damaged without their fault and through the negligence of the county treasurer, their remedy would be against him as a wrong-doer, and not against the county, the profits of which from the transaction, while amounting to something perhaps, may be regarded as negligible.

In another view of the case, stress may be laid upon the fact that in order to sustain the exercise of power under section 2589, G. C., it must appear to the auditor and to the commissioners that the taxes or assessments have been erroneously charged and collected. Some force may be given to the use of the word "and," and I think it by no means illogical to argue that it is not in this context synonymous with "or"; but the reasons already stated are sufficient, in my opinion, to establish the conclusion at which I have arrived, and I do not find it necessary to consider the point last suggested.

Still another reason may be adduced in support of the conclusion that there is no authority to reimburse the parties who have paid their assessments under the circumstances stated in the letter of the auditor of Greene county. The assessments have been made and certified. The amount of each assessment appears on the duplicate and the treasurer is charged with collection of it. It is true that in computing the assessment interest is taken into consideration and charged to the date when it is expected that the assessment will be collected, and the principal sum fixed accordingly. However, such interest does not separately appear on the duplicate.

The county ditch statutes provide in this connection as follows:

Section 6465, General Code:

> "The county commissioners shall direct the auditor to issue an order on the county treasurer to each of the several claimants to whom compensation or damages was allowed for the amount due, and enter on the ditch duplicate the amounts assessed against the several benefited landowners, for the payment of such compensation and damages, payable in the ratio and manner as other assessments, and to be collected as other taxes."

Section 6492, General Code:

> "If the county commissioners determine to issue bonds of the county for the money necessary to meet the expense of construction of a ditch, they shall make an assessment upon the lots, lands, public or corporate roads, or railroads, benefited by the improvement, in proportion to the apportionment provided in this chapter, sufficient to pay the costs of location and the first year's interest, and including the fees of the surveyor or engineer, made after locating, in superintending the construction of the improvement, and order it to be placed upon the duplicate for collection. They shall make such assessments thereafter as may be required to raise the money for the prompt payment of such bonds."

Section 6490, General Code:

> "When the county commissioners make an assessment they shall cause an entry to be made, directing the auditor to make and furnish to the treasurer of the county a special duplicate with the assessment arranged thereon, as required by their order. The auditor shall retain a copy thereof in his office, and all assessments shall be collected and accounted for by the treasurer as taxes. When an assessment remains unpaid for one year after it is placed upon the special duplicate, unless otherwise ordered by the commissioners, it shall be placed on the general duplicate for collection, together with a penalty of not less than six per cent. annually, as county ditch taxes, and the amount of delinquent tax thus placed on the general duplicate shall be charged respectively to the several ditches on account of which such assessment has been made as a transfer from the county ditch fund."

It will be seen from these provisions that charges on the ditch duplicate do not themselves draw interest prior to the date when they are legally payable. Therefore, it follows that the only thing which the treasurer may lawfully collect is the amount with the collection of which he is charged on the special duplicate. In the case presented the amount charged was correct—at least there was no clerical error therein, and the subsequently occurring error in the time of collection could not be construed as such a clerical error. Therefore, no correction could be made on the duplicate itself, which is still current, and no certificate could be issued releasing the treasurer from his obligation to settle for the year on the basis of the charges made against him.

For these several reasons, then, I am of the opinion that there is no authority to refund anything to the persons who have prematurely paid ditch assessments in the manner stated in the second question which I have considered.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO STATE REFORMATORY—RECEIVES MALE CRIMINALS OF CERTAIN AGE—"IF THEY ARE NOT KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN PREVIOUSLY SENTENCED TO A STATE PRISON"—COURT SENTENCES ON THREE SEPARATE INDICTMENTS—SUPERINTENDENT CAN ONLY CERTIFY TO COST BILL IN FIRST SENTENCE.

Under the provisions of section 2131, G. C., the superintendent of Ohio state reformatory is only authorized to receive male criminals of certain age "if they are not known to have been previously sentenced to a state prison." Therefore, if a court sentences a person to the reformatory on three separate indictments the superintendent of such reformatory is only authorized to receive him on the first sentence and can only certify cost bill of case in which person is first sentenced.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

HON. CHARLES H. JONES, Prosecuting Attorney, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 8, 1915, you requested my opinion in the following matter:

> "One Brady Bailey committed three separate and distinct felonies, was indicted on each charge at the January term of court, was arraigned on each indictment and entered a plea of guilty to each. The court took up each indictment in its order and sentenced him on each to the Mansfield reformatory for an indeterminate term.
> "Commitment papers and cost bills were made out under each indictment and delivered with the prisoner to the superintendent at Mansfield. The officials of that institution certified to the state auditor the costs in one case only, and have refused to certify the costs in the other cases.
> "Your opinion is desired on the question as to whether or not the Mansfield authorities have acted within the law in refusing to certify the cost bills in the two cases above mentioned, and as to whether or not said cost bills should not be paid by the state auditor.
> "I herewith enclose you two letters written by W. A. McFadden, record clerk of the reformatory, relative to the above matter, one addressed to W. E. Davis, clerk of courts, and the other to me, together with copies of two letters which I wrote to Mr. McFadden, which may throw some additional light on the matter, and which set forth in a general way our respective contentions."

The letters to which you refer, as enclosed, are as follows:

"May 1, 1915.

"W. E. Davis, Clerk of Courts, Jackson, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—Your letter of recent date received and I note what you say in regard to cost bills in the cases of Emory Ross and Brady Bailey,

Frank Howes, Charles Patten and Samuel Finley who were received at this institution February 18, 22, and March 15, respectively, and the cost has been certified in each case to the state auditor. However, in the case of Ross and Bailey which you state were committed on other charges concurrent with 52 and 56 will say that we only certified the cost in the case of 4552 and 4556 and I am herewith returning the other commitment papers and cost bills to you as there is no law sentencing men to the reformatory concurrently. Trusting this information will be satisfactory, I remain

"Yours very truly,
"W. A. McFADDEN,
"Record Clerk."

"May 4, 1915.

"Mr. W. A. McFadden, Record Clerk, Ohio State Reformatory, Mansfield, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—Your letter of May 1st, addressed to W. E. Davis, clerk of courts, relative to the Ross and Bailey cost bills, has been referred by Mr. Davis to me for reply. He also turned over to me the cost bills which you returned to him.

"I am at a loss to understand your position in this matter, for Ross was charged with two separate and distinct offenses, was indicted on two charges, and entered a plea of guilty to each, and was sentenced on each to your institution. A like situation prevails in the Bailey case with this difference, that he was implicated in three different offenses.

"While it may be true that there is no law providing for concurrent sentences to the reformatory, on the other hand there is no law which permits us to refrain from sending them to the reformatory on each indictment when a plea of guilty has been duly entered, or a conviction had thereunder. A wide field would be opened to those criminally inclined if they felt that they could commit several crimes and the state would be compelled to proceed only on one.

"I hope that you will see the legality and justice of our position and certify these disputed costs to the state auditor. If you do not feel inclined to do so, please advise me at your earliest convenience so that I may take the question involved up with the attorney general for a ruling.

"Very truly yours,
"(Signed) Charles H. Jones, "Prosecuting Attorney."

"June 21, 1915.

"Mr. W. A. McFadden, Record Clerk, Ohio State Reformatory, Mansfield, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—I wrote you on May 4th relative to the cost bill in the cases of Emory Ross and Brady Bailey, which you had returned to our clerk of courts, but have received no reply from you.

"Since you returned the cost bills to the clerk, the authorities of the Ohio penitentiary have certified to the state auditor cost bills exactly like those you have returned, and the same have been paid.

"I will ask you again to please certify these disputed costs to the state auditor, and again request that if you do not feel inclined to do so, that you advise me at once, so that we can proceed in another way.

"Very truly yours,
"(Signed) Chas. H. Jones, "Prosecuting Attorney."

"June 24, 1915.

"Chas. H. Jones, Prosecuting Attorney, Jackson, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—Replying to your letter of June 21st, I wish to say in regard to the cost bills in the cases of Emory Ross and Brady Bailey which were returned to the clerk of courts at Jackson, O., without being certified to the state auditor, we have never in the history of this institution certified the costs in more than one case for a young man sentenced to this institution. I understand there is a law governing the penitentiary that a man can be sentenced there on two or three charges, and when he completes his first sentence enters upon his second sentence. However this does not apply to the reformatory. We have no objection to certifying costs if advised to do so by the proper authorities. Under the circumstances I think it would be well for you to present this case to the attorney general for a decision. Trusting this information will be satisfactory and thanking you for past favors, I remain,

"Yours very truly,
"W. A. McFADDEN,
"Record Clerk."

In opinion No. 304 rendered April 30, 1915, by this department it was held that the provisions of sections 13720, et seq., G. C., relative to "execution of sentence for felony" are applicable as well to the Ohio state reformatory as to the penitentiary, and that the cost bills certified under said sections by the superintendent of said reformatory should be paid in the same manner as cost bills certified by the warden of the penitentiary.

The Ohio state reformatory was originally provided for by an act found in 81 O. L., at page 206, establishing an intermediate penitentiary "for the incarceration of such persons convicted and sentenced under the laws of Ohio, as have not previously been sentenced to a state penitentiary in this or any other state or country."

I shall not undertake to give the various amendments to said act as the same occurred in succeeding years.

The sections relative to the Ohio state reformatory were incorporated in the Revised Statutes of Ohio, sections 7388-17, et seq., section 7388-24 being section 7 of the act found in 95 O. L., 251, provides as follows:

> "The said board of managers shall receive all male criminals between the ages of sixteen and thirty and not known to have been previously sentenced to a state prison in this or any other state who shall be legally sentenced to said Ohio state reformatory, on conviction of any criminal offense in any court having jurisdiction thereof; and it shall be incumbent upon any such court to sentence to the Ohio state reformatory any such male person between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one convicted of a crime punishable by imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary, and any court in its discretion may sentence to the Ohio state reformatory any such male person between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, so convicted, whom said court may deem amenable to reformatory methods; provided, that no person convicted of murder in the first or second degree shall be sentenced or transferred to said Ohio state reformatory."

In the codification of the statutes of Ohio by the general assembly the language of said section 7388-24 was materially changed. Said section is now known as section 2131, G. C., and reads as follows:

> "The board of managers shall receive all male criminals between the ages of sixteen and thirty years sentenced to the reformatory if they are not known to have been previously sentenced to a state prison. Male persons between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one convicted of felony shall be sentenced to the reformatory instead of the penitentiary. Such persons between the ages of twenty-one and thirty years may be sentenced to the reformatory if the court passing sentence deems them amenable to reformatory methods. No person convicted of murder in the first or second degree shall be sentenced or transferred to the reformatory."

In 103 O. L., 885, said section 2131 was amended, but the only change made in said section as amended was to change the words "the board of managers" to read "the superintendent."

The Ohio state reformatory was established as an intermediate penitentiary for the incarceration of persons convicted and sentenced under the laws of Ohio who had not previously been sentenced to a state penitentiary, the word "penitentiary" being subsequently changed to "prison." Section 7388-24 R. S., provided who should be received in such penitentiary, to wit, "male criminals between the ages of sixteen and thirty and not known to have been previously sentenced to a state prison in this or any other state, and it was incumbent upon the court to sentence to such reformatory any such male persons between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one. Such is to be construed as a male criminal not having been previously sentenced to a state prison. The court is also, in its discretion, authorized to sentence any such male person between the ages of twenty-one and thirty to the reformatory. Such, in this instance, is likewise to be construed as a male criminal not having been previously known to have been sentenced to a state prison. The change of language found in the General Code does not change the meaning of said section. It is a well known principle of law that laws are presumed to have the same construction after codification as before unless it is clear that a change was intended. The slight amendment of said section in 103 O. L., does not, as I view it, change the import to be given to the language of said section 2131 prior to such amendment.

In your letter you state that one Brady Bailey committed three separate and distinct felonies, was indicted on such charge, was arraigned on each indictment and entered a plea of guilty to each; that the court took up each indictment and sentenced him on each to an indefinite term.

After the court had sentenced the said Bailey to the reformatory on the first indictment, the said Bailey was not then a person "not known to have been previously sentenced to a state prison." Therefore, when the court undertook to sentence the said Bailey on the second indictment, it was without authority to sentence him, on the second indictment, to the Ohio state reformatory, and for like reason was not authorized to sentence the said Bailey on the third indictment to the Ohio state reformatory, the said Bailey being at that time "previously sentenced to a state prison."

For the reasons above given I am of the opinion that the superintendent of the reformatory was only authorized to certify to the costs in the case upon which the court first sentenced the defendant.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—BIENNIAL REPORT—STATUTE CHANGED.

Since the last biennial report of the board of state charities covered period ending November 15, 1913, no further biennial report is due under section 1358, G. C., until after November 15, 1915, at which time said section, as well as section 2270, G. C., will stand repealed. There is, therefore, no authority for the board to make report for period from November 15, 1913, to June 30, 1915, except upon request of the governor, and such report is not the report required by section 2270, G. C., to be printed for distribution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 23, 1915, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "I have before me an official copy of senate bill 158, which was enacted by the last general assembly and filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 4, 1915. I notice that section 173-1 states that the first issue of the general statistics shall be for the period from November 15, 1914, to June 30, 1915. I understand that this act will not become effective until September.
> "Section 1358 of the General Code as now in effect, provides that this board shall prepare a biennial report. Section 2270 provides for the publication of 2,000 copies of this biennial report. The last report issued covered the biennial period ending November 15, 1913. It seems to be a reasonable conclusion that the next report would be due for the year ending November 15, 1914, and for the next term ending with the close of the new fiscal year, June 30, 1915.
> "I wish to ascertain whether the biennial report shall be prepared for the purpose of publication under existing laws, or is it your opinion that the provisions of amended senate bill 158 can be made to apply."

Section 1358, G. C., provides as follows:

> "Biennially, the board of state charities shall make a report of its proceedings to the governor. The report shall contain in detail a statement of expenses incurred, officers and agents employed, the conditions of the state institutions under its control, and such suggestions as it deems proper."

Section 2270, G. C., provides as follows:

> "Biennial reports of the state benevolent and correctional institutions shall be printed as follows: five hundred copies of the report of each institution. Board of state charities, two thousand copies."

Inasmuch as your last biennial report was for the period ending November 15, 1913, there would not be another report due from you, under the provision of section 1358 supra, until November 15, 1915. Said sections 1358 and 2270, however, are repealed by senate bill No. 158, which will become effective September

3, 1915, before there would be any authority under these sections for your board to make a report and have the same printed. After that bill becomes effective there will be no longer any provision for the biennial report of your board and the only provision with reference to the making of reports by you will be found in sections 260-1 and 2264-1 as contained in senate bill No. 158 (106 O. L., 508) which provide as follows:

"Section 260-1. For all state officers, departments, commissions, boards and institutions of the state the fiscal year shall be and is hereby fixed to begin on the first day of June of the succeeding year."

"Section 2264-1. Each elective state officer, and the adjutant general, board of pardons, superintendent of public instruction, the state agricultural commission, the superintendent of public works, the public utilities commission, the superintendent of insurance, the state inspector of building and loan associations, the state superintendent of banks, the commissioners of public printing, the supervisor of public printing, the board of library commissioners, the state geologist, the state commissioner of soldiers' claims, the state fire marshal, the state inspector of oils, the state industrial commission, the state highway department, the state board of health, the state medical board, the state dental board, the state board of embalming examiners, the state board of charities, the Ohio commission for the blind, the state board of accountancy, the state board of uniform state law, the state civil service commission, the commissioners of the sinking fund, the state tax commission, the clerk of the supreme court, the state board of administration, the state liquor licensing board, the state armory board, the trustees of the Ohio State University, and every private or quasi-public institution, association, board or corporation receiving state money for its use and purpose, shall make annually, at the end of each fiscal year, in triplicate, a report of the transactions and proceedings of his office or department for such fiscal year excepting however receipts and disbursements unless otherwise specifically required by law. Such report shall contain a summary of the official acts of such officer, board or commission, institution, association or corporation, and such suggestions and recommendations as may be proper. On the first day of August of each year, one of said reports shall be filed with the governor of the state, one with the secretary of state and one shall be kept on file in the office of such officer, board, commission, institution, association or corporation."

Under these sections there will be no report due from your board until after July 1, 1916, and that report will be for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916. The printing of that report will be governed by the provisions of section 173-2, G. C., as found in senate bill 158 (106 O. L., 514) which provides as follows:

"No officer, board or commission, shall print or cause to be printed at the public expense, any report, bulletin or pamphlet, unless such report, bulletin or pamphlet be first submitted to and the publication thereof approved by the commissioners of public printing. If such commission shall approve the publication thereof, it shall determine the form of such publication and the number of copies thereof, provided that in all cases the commissioners of public printing shall cause their action thereon to be entered upon the minutes of their proceedings.

"If such approval is given, the commissioners shall cause the same to be printed, and may authorize such printing to be done at any penal, correctional or benevolent institution of the state having a printing department of sufficient equipment thereof; and when printed, such publications, other than the Ohio general statistics, shall be delivered to such officer, board or commission for distribution by him or it."

It is apparent that this will leave a period from November 13, 1913, to June 30, 1915, for which the sections above quoted do not make provisions for a report of your board. Section 2266, G. C., provides that the governor may at any time require to be filed with him a detailed report from any state officer, board or commission, and section 173, G. C., 106 O. L., 513, provides that the secretary of state shall prepare from reports filed with him and with the governor of the state the publication to be known as Ohio general statistics. This section will make it possible for you, upon request of the governor, to make a report to him covering the period from November 15, 1913, to June 30, 1915, and it would be proper for you to make the report in such form as would enable the secretary of state to secure therefrom the information needed in compiling and publishing the first volume of Ohio general statistics which, under the provisions of section 173-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 513, will cover the period from November 15, 1914, to June 30, 1915.

Section 260-4, G. C., 103 O. L., 661, and section 2 of senate bill 158, 106 O. L., 517, which require the making of reports by state officers, departments, boards and commissions for the period from the end of the former fiscal year to June 30, 1915, do not apply to your board because both of these sections apply expressly to such state officers, departments, boards, etc., as are required to make annual or semi-annual reports, whereas the report of your board, under section 1358 supra, is a biennial report.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that there is no authority for your board to make a report for the period from November 15, 1913, to June 30, 1915, except upon request of the governor, and such report is not the report required by section 2270 supra, to be printed for distribution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ENROLLMENT—NOT NECESSARY THIS YEAR—FORM OF NOTICE TO COUNTY AUDITORS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I have your letter of August 7, 1915, wherein you enclose a communication from Hon. John A. Zangerle, auditor of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, in which he calls your attention to the provisions of section 5183, G. C., and suggests if you desire under the provisions of section 5185 to dispense with the enrollment provided in the former section, the order for the same be made at once. In your letter you state that in your opinion it is not necessary the enrollment referred to by him be made at this time, and you request an opinion as to whether, under the statute, it is your duty to so notify all the county auditors of the state, and if so you request a form of such notice.

Section 5183, G. C., above referred to, provides as follows:

> "Township, ward and precinct assessors of personal property, in the year 1911, and every fifth year thereafter, shall make two separate lists of persons liable to enrollment within their respective jurisdictions. One list shall comprise persons named in sections fifty-one hundred and eighty and fifty-one hundred and eighty-one, and the other list shall contain the names of all other persons subject to enrollment. Such assesors, at the time of making their assessment returns, shall return certified copies of such lists to the auditors of their respective counties."

Sections 5180 and 5181, G. C., referred to in this section, were repealed by the 81st general assembly, as shown by volume 105-106 O. L., page 473. As the law will stand in 1916, only one list will be required to be made of male persons subject to be enrolled in the militia of this state, the repeal of the above named sections having abolished the classes of persons therein excepted, which classes constituted the first list named in section 5183. If in your opinion it is unnecessary to make this enrollment, as provided in said section 5185, it would be proper for you to so notify the various county auditors of this state, although such method of notification would not be exclusive. Should you desire to avail yourself of that plan, I would suggest that you address to the various county auditors of this state a communication as follows:

> "Auditor of ---------- County.
> "Under the authority vested in me by the provisions of section 5185, G. C., I hereby order that the enrollment provided for in section 5183, G. C., be dispensed with, the same being in my opinion unnecessary at this time, and you are directed to so notify all assessors under your control and within your jurisdiction."

The law does not require this enrollment to be made until the year 1916. It would therefore be improper to make the foregoing order before that time, as contingencies might arise under which it would not be considered advisable to dispense with the same.

Therefore, in reply to Mr. Zangerle's request that this order should be made at once, I would respectfully suggest that he be notified that it cannot be made until after the first of next year and between that date and the beginning of the work of the assessors.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISAPPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROADS IN GUERNSEY, MAHONING AND PORTAGE COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 17, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads;

Guernsey county, Cambridge-Caldwell road, Pet. No. 1549, I. C. H. No. 353.

Guernsey county, Cambridge-Caldwell road, Pet. No. 1549, I. C. H. No. 353.

"Mahoning county, Akron-Canfield road, Sec. "P", Pet. No. 1651, I. C. H. No. 87.

Portage county, Akron-Youngstown road, Pet. No. 948, I. C. H. No. 18.

As to the two resolutions relating to road improvements in Guernsey county, the county auditor has failed to attach his official seal to his certificate reciting that the money required for the payment of the county's portion of the improvement is in the treasury to the credit of or has been levied, placed on the duplicate and in process of collection for the state and county road improvement fund. These resolutions should be returned to the county auditor of Guernsey county with a request that he attach his official seal to the certificate in question.

As to the resolution relating to the proposed improvement in Mahoning county, the resolution recites on its face that it was passed on the 29th day of July, 1915, while the certificate of the clerk recites that the resolution was passed on the 29th day of July, 1913.

As to the resolution relating to the proposed improvement in Portage county, the resolution recites on its face that it was passed on the 2nd day of August, 1915, while the certificate of the clerk recites that the resolution was passed on the 2nd day of August, 1913.

These two resolutions should be returned to the clerks of the respective boards of county commissioners for the purpose of having either the resolutions or the certificates corrected to correspond with the facts.

For the reasons above stated, I am returning these resolutions without my approval.

Respectively,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY CONTRACT WITH BOARD OF ANOTHER DISTRICT FOR ADMISSION OF ITS PUPILS TO SCHOOLS OF SUCH DISTRICT—AMOUNT OF TUITION MAY BE FIXED BY TERMS OF CONTRACT.

The board of education of a school district may lawfully contract with the board of education of another school district for the admission of its pupils into one or more of the schools of such other district and the amount of tuition for such attendance may be fixed by the terms of said contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of August 9, 1915, your request my opinion on the following question:

> "Can a board of education legally contract with another board of education to pay a fixed amount per year for tuition of pupils, or must the amount be established by the actual attendance from month to month? In other words, would it be legal for a board of education, at the beginning of a school year, to contract with another board of education to pay $600.00 per year, foreign tuition fee, regardless of the number of pupils that attend and the number of months of attendance?"

Section 7734, G. C., provides:

> "The board of any district may contract with the board of another district for the admission of pupils into any school in such other district, on terms agreed upon by such boards. The expense so incurred shall be paid out of the school funds of the district sending such pupils."

This statute is general in its terms and confers authority on the board of education of any school district to contract with the board of education of another school district for the admission of its pupils into the schools of such other district, upon such terms as may be agreed upon in said contract between said boards.

It will be observed that the statute does not provide a method for computing the tuition for the attendance of such pupils in the schools of such other district, and in the absence of such provision the amount agreed upon between the boards of education of such districts to be paid for such attendance is not necessarily determined by the number of pupils in attendance or the number of months such pupils actually attend such schools.

While this might be a fair basis for such determination in a particular case, the added expense of maintaining the schools of a district on account of the admission of pupils from another district is not always in proportion to the number of such pupils in attendance and the time said pupils actually attend said schools.

The provisions of section 7734, G. C., conferring authority on the board of education of a school district to enter into such a contract, must be distinguished from those provisions of the statutes giving to certain pupils residing in a school district, under the conditions or having the qualifications therein prescribed, the right to attend an elementary school or high school in another district and to have their tuition paid by the board of education of the district in which they reside, without an agreement to that effect.

Section 7735, G. C., provides:

> "When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer school in the same district, or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school. In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect. But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. Nothing herein shall require the consent of the board of education of the district where the pupils reside, to such attendance."

Section 7736, G. C., provides:

> "Such tuition shall be paid from either the tuition or the contingent funds and the amount per capita must be ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repairs, by the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district, such amount to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of a month will create a liability for the whole month."

Section 7747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 125, relates to the tuition of pupils residing in rural districts and who are eligible to admission to high school, and provides as follows:

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month. No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repair, by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district. The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

It will be observed that where pupils residing in one district attend the schools of another district, under the authority conferred and within the limitations prescribed by section 7735, G. C. and section 7747, G. C., as amended, the amount of tuition to be paid by the board of education of the district in which said pupils reside must be ascertained in the manner provided in said sections.

Under the provision of section 7750, G. C., a board of education not having a high school may enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining such high school, for the schooling of all of its high school pupils, and when such agreement is made the board of education making it shall be exempt from the payment of tuition at other high schools of pupils living within three miles of the schools designated in the agreement providing the school or schools selected by said board are located in the same civil township as that of the board making such agreement, or some adjoining township.

This section further provides:

"In case no such agreement is entered into, the school to be attended can be selected by the pupil holding a diploma, if due notice in writing is given to the clerk of the board of education of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of attendance."

Section 7752, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 225, provides:

"No board of education shall be entitled to collect tuition under this chapter unless it is maintaining a regularly organized high school with a course of study extending over not less than two years and consisting mainly of branches higher than those in which the pupil is examined. The standing or grade of all public high schools in the state shall be determined by the superintendent of public instruction and his finding in reference thereto shall be final."

In view of the above provisions of the statutes, it seems clear that, where one or more pupils residing in a school district have the right to attend an elementary school or high school in another school district and the board of education of the district in which such pupil or pupils reside is compelled to pay the tuition for such attendance, the amount of such tuition must be determined in the manner prescribed by the provisions of section 7736, G. C., or by the provisions of section 7747, G. C., as amended. On the other hand, it seems equally clear that, where such attendance and the tuition therefor are determined by the terms of a contract made between the boards of education of such districts, the provisions of said section 7736, G. C., and section 7747, G. C., as amended, are not applicable.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your question, that the board of education of a school district may lawfully contract with the board of education of another district for the admission of its pupils into one or more of the schools of such other districts, and that the amount of tuition for such attendance may be fixed by the terms of said contract and agreed upon by the parties thereto.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF LOGAN-ATHENS ROAD, HOCKING COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 18, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolution relating to the Logan-Athens road in Hocking county, petition No. 1005, I. C. H. No. 155.

I find this resolution to be in regular form and am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

KENT STATE NORMAL SCHOOL—BOILERS AND STOKERS TO BE PLACED IN NEW BUILDING, BECOME PART OF SAID BUILDING—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE FOR BIDS MUST BE MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 2317, G. C.

Boilers and stokers to be placed in a new building being constructed become a part of the said building, and contracts therefor are within sections 2314, et seq., G. C.

Unless publication is made in accordance with section 2317, G. C., it is not proper to award contracts on bids received thereunder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

HON. JOHN E. MCGILVREY, President, Kent State Normal School, Kent, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 19, 1915, Hon. J. A. McDowell, secretary of the board of trustees of Kent Normal School, enclosed, for my approval, a contract for the erection and installation of boilers and stokers for the heating and ventilating equipment of said school, and requested me to have same filed with the auditor of state and advise your board of trustees at the earliest possible moment of my action on the same. Mr. McDowell simply enclosed a copy of the minutes of the meeting of your board of trustees wherein it appears that the bid of The Springfield Boiler & Manufacturing Company, of Springfield, Illinois, was, in the judgment of the board, the lowest and best bid, and that the contract was awarded to such concern. There were, however, no copies of the bids enclosed with said letter.

Under date of July 17, 1915, you furnished us the proposal and contract bond of The Springfield Boiler & Manufacturing Company and the affidavits of the legal advertising.

The advertisement under which bids were received is in the following language:

> "Sealed proposals will be received at this office until twelve o'clock noon, of Saturday, June 19, 1915, for furnishing the materials and performing the labor for the erection of:
> "That part of the heating plant and equipment at the Kent State Normal School, including the boilers and stokers, engines and generators, in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by George F. Hammond, architect, on file in the office of the auditor of state. * * *
> "The board of trustees reserves the right to reject any or all bids."

It appears, therefore, that bids were called for, for the erection of part of the heating plant and equipment, including the boilers and stokers, engines and generators, at the Kent State Normal School.

The first question to be determined is whether or not the erection of boilers and stokers in the power house building being erected at the Kent State Normal School is an erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building, or addition thereto within the meaning of sections 2314, et seq., G. C., being the chapter on building regulations.

Section 2314 provides as follows:

> "Before entering into contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars, each officer, board, or other authority by law charged with the supervision thereof, shall make or cause to be made the following: full and accurate plans, showing all necessary details of the work, with working plans suitable for the use of mechanics and other builders in such construction, so drawn and represented as to be plain and easily understood; accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction to accompany such plans; full and complete specifications of the work to be performed, showing the manner and style required with such directions as will enable a competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out and afford bidders all needful information; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof."

Such question may be determined, as I view it, from a consideration of whether or not boilers and stokers, when placed in the power house building can be considered as fixtures and therefore a part of the realty. The case of Teaff v. Hewitt, 1 O. S., 511, lays down the rule for the determination of whether or not a certain chattel will become a fixture, and in the second branch of the syllabus states the rule as follows:

> "The true criterion of a fixture, is the united application of the following requisites, to wit: 1st. Actual annexation to the realty, or something appurtenant thereto. 2nd. Application to the use, or purpose, to which that part of the realty with which it is connected, is appropriated. 3rd. The intention of the party making the annexation, to make a permanent accession to the freehold."

This is one of the leading cases on the rule as to fixtures in the United States and has been followed by the supreme court in various decisions.

In the case of Fortman v. Goepper, 14 O. S., 558, which was a case between a real estate mortgagee and a chattel mortgagee, the court, on page 567 makes the following observation:

"The mode of annexation, alone, will not determine the character of the property annexed. The same mode may exist and yet the property be personal in the one case, and real in the other. * * * The general principle to be kept in view, underlying all questions of this kind, is the distinction between the business which is carried on in or upon the premises, and the premises, or locus in quo. The former is personal in its nature, and articles that are merely accessory to the business, and have been put on the premises for this purpose, and not as accessions to the real estate, retain the personal character of the principal to which they appropriately belong and are subservient. But articles which have been annexed to the premises as accessory to it, whatever business may be carried on upon it, and not peculiarly for the benefit of a present business which may be of a temporary duration, become subservient to the realty and acquire and retain its legal character."

In the case of Case Manufacturing Co. v. Garven, 45 O. S., 289, the second branch of the syllabus is as follows:

"The machinery of a manufactory that supplies the motive power, as the engine, boiler and their usual attachments, as contradistinguished from that propelled by it, where permanently annexed to foundations resting upon the freehold, is generally held to be a fixture, though susceptible of being removed without any material injury to the same or the freehold; and, whilst by the agreement of the parties, the property may be made to preserve the character of personalty, yet, when it is so attached, that, but for the agreement, it would be a fixture, such agreement will be of no avail against a subsequent mortgagee of the realty without notice of it; nor will the filing of a mortgage upon it as chattel property, duly executed and delivered as such, of itself constitute such notice."

There are various other decisions in Ohio as to whether or not certain chattel property are fixtures, but I shall not endeavor to go into the various cases. Suffice it to say that there can be no doubt that it is the intention of the trustees of the Kent State Normal School, in placing the boilers and stokers in the power house building in such school, that the same shall become a permanent accession to the realty, and therefore under the provisions of section 2314, supra, would be, within the language as used therein, an erection of a state building, it being a part of such erection. The contract submitted between The Springfield Boiler and Manufacturing Company and the Board of Trustees of the Kent State Normal School is, therefore, within the provisions of sections 2314, et seq., G. C.

In so answering I am not unmindful of an opinion rendered by this department on June 28, 1915, to the Honorable Carl E. Steeb, secretary board of trustees,

Ohio State University, being opinion No. 548, wherein I held that an automatic sprinkler system placed in a building already erected and used for many years, known as "Old University Hall," would not be within the provisions of sections 2314, et seq., General Code, for the reason, as stated in that opinion, that the building with said sprinkler system would not be made more convenient for use, but the sprinkler system was only a means of affording fire protection and could at any time be taken down without injury to the freehold. The engines and boilers in question, however, are to be set on foundations and bricked in, and are intended to be permanent, for the use of the building and to make the buildings suitable for use for the purposes for which intended.

Coming now to consider the advertisements which have been furnished upon which the bids were let:

Upon examination of the advertisements I find that the same were made in the newspapers and for the periods as follows:

Toledo News-Bee, Toledo, Ohio, May 25, June 1, 8 and 15.
Cleveland Leader, Cleveland, Ohio, May 26, June 2, 9 and 16.
Cincinnati Daily Times Star, Cincinnati, Ohio, May 25, June 1, 8 and 15.
Columbus, Dispatch, Columbus, Ohio, May 25, June 2, 9 and 16.
The Courier, Portage County, May 28, June 4, 11 and 18.

Section 2317, G. C., provides as follows:

"The notice shall be published weekly for four consecutive weeks next preceding the day named for awarding the contract, in the paper having the largest circulation in the county where the work is to be let, and in one or more daily papers having the largest circulation, and published in each of the cities of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Such notice shall state when and where the plans, descriptions, bills and specifications can be seen, and they shall be open to public inspection at all business hours between the date of the notice and the making of the contract."

Said section requires the notice for bids to be published weekly for four consecutive weeks next preceding the day named for awarding the contract. This has not been done in this case. The earliest advertisement made in this case was on the 25th day of May, which was on Tuesday, and called for the opening of bids on June 19th, or twenty-three days prior to the opening of the bids. If the word "weekly" is to be considered as a calendar week, four full weeks have not elapsed prior to the awarding of the contract. If the word "weekly" is to be considered as any period of seven consecutive days, the first insertion of the advertisement was not twenty-eight days prior to the opening of the bids. In either interpretation the law has not been complied with. Therefore, I am of the opinion that contracts cannot be awarded under the advertisements made in this matter.

Respectively,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GOVERNOR—MAY APPOINT A WOMAN COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS FOR OHIO.

Under section 132, G. C., the governor may appoint a woman as commissioner of deeds for Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Your letter of August 16, 1915, bearing the following inquiry, is received.

> "Under the provisions of section 132 of the General Code of Ohio, can a female, residing in another state or territory of the United States or a foreign state, be appointed as a commissioner of the state of Ohio?"

Section 132 to which you refer has the following provision:

> "The governor is authorized to appoint as commissioners of the state of Ohio persons residing in any other state, or in any territory of the United States, or in any foreign state, on such evidence of qualification as he may require. * * *."

The foregoing provisions of this statute limit appointments thereunder to persons residing in any other state or in any territory of the United States, or in any foreign state. Manifestly, all the qualifications required for this appointment may be and are possessed by members of both sex, so that there is nothing in the section itself, or in any succeeding provisions of law governing the same subject-matter, which in any manner attempts to or limits these appointments to the male sex. Therefore it would seem that unless such appointment comes within the inhibition of section 4 of article XV and section 1 of article V of the constitution, there is no legal obstacle to the appointment of a female to this office.

In an opinion rendered by this department on April 24, 1901, and reported in 45 law bulletin, page 313, it was held a woman was eligible to this appointment, and subsequently on January 25, 1907, in an opinion reported in the attorney general's reports for 1903-1908, at page 47 thereof, a similar ruling was made. The foregoing opinions were based upon the ground chiefly that the office of the commissioner aforesaid was an office, the functions of which were to be performed wholly out of the state, and that the qualifications of being an elector, as required by section 4 of article XV and as defined by section 1 of article V, could not apply to an appointee in this position. If it did apply, and only electors of this state residing in other states or foreign countries could be appointed to this position, it would practically vitiate and destroy the whole statute.

While agreeing with my predecessors in the opinion that the question is not entirely free from doubt, I have, for the same reasons advanced by them, reached the same conclusion and therefore hold that a woman may be appointed to this position. I would observe further, however, as suggested by one of my predecessors, that if the courts should subsequently hold a woman was not eligible to this office, her official acts, when commissioned by you, would be valid as an act of a de facto officer, and that therefore no substantial injury could result from such appointment.

Respectively,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PERSON ELECTED TO FILL A VACANCY CAUSED BY RESIGNATION OF A MEMBER OF SUCH BOARD HOLDS OFFICE FOR UNEXPIRED TERM.

Under the provision of section 4748, G. C., a person elected by the board of education of a school district to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of a member of such board, holds office for the unexpired term for which the member so resigning was elected, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

HON. D. M. CUPP, Prosecuting Attorney, Delaware, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 9, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I hereby request of your department an opinion as to the proper construction to be placed on section 3748, General Code; that is does a member of the board of education appointed by the board to fill a vacancy hold such office for the full term to which the member causing such vacancy was elected, or only until it is possible to fill such vacancy by an election?
> "The facts are these that a member of one rural board of education whose term of office would expire in 1917 has resigned, and the board has appointed a member to fill such vacancy, and the question arises whether such an appointee holds until January, 1917, or only until January, 1916."

In reply to my request for additional information, I have your letter of August 16th, which is as follows:

> "In reply to yours of August 14, 1915, I beg leave to acknowledge that I was mistaken in my statement as to the time of expiration of the term of the member of rural board of education I had in mind when propounding my question; I meant to state that the terms expire with the years 1915 or 1917, and should have stated that they expired on the first Monday in January of the 1916, or of the year 1918."

From the statement of facts submitted in your two letters, I understand that a member of the board of education of one of the rural school districts in your county, whose term of office would expire on the first Monday of January, 1918, has resigned and that said board of education has elected a person to fill such vacancy.

You ask to be advised whether the person so elected holds office until the first Monday in January, 1916, or until the first Monday in January, 1918. Section 10 of the General Code, relates to the term of an appointee to an elective office, and provides as follows:

> "When an elective office becomes vacant and is filled by appointment, such appointee shall hold the office until his successor is elected and qualified. Unless otherwise provided by law, such successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first general election for the office which is vacant that occurs more than thirty days after the vacancy shall have occurred. This section shall not be construed to postpone the time for such election beyond that at which it would have been held had no such vacancy occurred, nor to affect the official term, or the time for the commencement thereof, of any person elected to such office before the occurrence of such vacancy."

While the above provision of the statutes prescribes the general rule governing the term of an appointee to an elective office, it is not applicable to the appointment of a person to fill a vacancy in the board of education of a school district for the reason that the term of such appointee is governed by the provisions of section 4748 of the General Code, which provides:

"A vacancy in any board of education may be caused by death, nonresidence, resignation, removal from office, failure of a person elected or appointed to qualify within ten days after the organization of the board or of his appointment, removal from the district or absence from meetings of the board for a period of ninety days, if such absence is caused by reasons declared insufficient by a two-thirds vote of the remaining members of the board, which vote must be taken and entered upon the records of the board not less than thirty days after such absence. Any such vacancy shall be filled by the board at its next regular or special meeting, or as soon thereafter as possible, by election for the unexpired term. A majority vote of all the remaining members of the board may fill any such vacancy."

Under the above provisions of section 4748, G. C., the member in question will hold said office for the unexpired term of the member who has resigned.

Section 4745 of the General Code, provides that:

"The terms of office of members of each board of education shall begin on the first Monday in January after their election, and each such officer shall hold his office four years and until his successor is elected and qualified."

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the person so elected by the board will hold said office until the first Monday in January, 1918, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SYNOPSIS FOR REFERENDUM ON AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 307, McDERMOTT ACT, TO REGULATE TRAFFICKING IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

MESSRS. McGHEE, DAVIS AND BOULGER, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted to me a synopsis of the so-called "McDermott Law," which you propose to submit for referendum. This synopsis is as follows:

"The act, known as amended senate bill No. 307 (the McDermott act) was passed May 27, 1915, approved June 5, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state at Columbus, Ohio, June 5, 1915, being an act to provide for license to traffic in intoxicating liquors and to further regulate the traffic therein, and to amend sections 1261-16, 1261-17, 1261-18, 1261-19, 1261-20, 1261-21, 1261-24, 1261-33, 1261-40, 1261-41, 1261-43, 1261-46, 1261-47, of the General Code."

I hereby certify that the foregoing synopsis is a truthful statement regarding the above entitled law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LAND REGISTRATION ACT—FILING OF NOTICE PROVIDED IN SECTION 8572-56, G. C.—WHETHER CITY OR COUNTY OFFICIALS SHOULD EXAMINE RECORDS TO SEE IF LANDS ARE REGISTERED WHEN CITY MAKES A LEVY FOR AN ASSESSMENT—SHOULD BE DESIGNATED BY TAXING DISTRICT MAKING LEVY.

In the filing of the notice provided for in section 8572-56, G. C., 103 O. L., 942-3, which is section 56 of the land registration act known as the Torrens act, the registered lands affected by the levy should be designated by the taxing district making the levy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is in receipt of a communication from the Department of Law, of Cleveland, Ohio, asking for an opinion as to the provisions of section 56 of the Torrens act, which is section 8572-56, of the General Code, (103 O. L., 942 and 943) which communication is as follows:

"The city of Cleveland, and more particularly the division of finance, through this department, respectfully asks your opinion upon the following proposition, involving as it does the relative duties of state, county and local officials.

"Section 56 of the Torrens act, contained in 103 Ohio Laws, pages 914 to 960, provides as follows:

"'When in a city, village, township or county, an ordinance, resolution or order is passed or made by a council, board or other authority, to lay out, establish, alter, widen, grade, regrade, relocate or construct or repair a highway, road, street, sidewalk, drain or sewer, or to make any other public improvement or to do any work, the whole or a portion of the expense of which may be assessed or levied upon real estate, if any registered land or any land included in an application for registration then pending is affected by the act or proceeding, and liable to such assessment, or if an ordinance or resolution is passed making or levying any such assessments on registered real estate or certifying to the auditor or other officer or board any such assessments to be made or levied on any registered land, the clerk of the board or council passing such ordinance, resolution or order or issuing such certificate, shall file in the recorder's office a notice of the passage or issuance thereof giving a list of the lands assessed and a memorial thereof shall thereupon be noted by the recorder on the register of each certificate of title for such land. Unless there is filed with the recorder such notice and list of lands, registered lands shall not be liable for such assessments. In case of the repeal or nullification otherwise of such ordinance, resolution or order, such clerk or officer or board shall within five days thereafter notify the recorder thereof who shall thereupon cancel such memorials.'

"It will be noted that when the city passes an ordinance levying a special assessment, if registered lands are affected it is required to file in the county recorder's office a copy of such ordinance before it may obtain a lien upon such property.

"QUERY: Whether the requirement of this section would be properly complied with by a notice to the county recorder of every ordinance which levies special assessments, together with a list of the lands assessed, description of the same and the names of the owners thereof. In other words, does the obligation rest upon the city to examine the county records after the passage of every resolution levying an assessment, to determine whether registered lands are affected, or does that duty rest upon the county recorder when a particular ordinance levying assessments is filed in his office? Section 56 is manifestly ambiguous and does not make clear where that duty rests.

"Section 94 makes it the duty of the attorney general to 'prepare and from time to time prescribe a uniform system of books, records, entries, blanks and forms for the use of the public officers required to perform duties under this act * * * and such books, blanks and forms so prepared and prescribed, so far as applicable, shall be used by such officers * * *'

"The effect of this section 94 is to empower the attorney general to require any information on the subject and to prescribe any form that he chooses so long as it is in no way inconsistent with the requirements of section 56 above quoted, and so long as it seems reasonably consistent with the purposes of the act. It is apparently true also that public officers are required to use these forms only so far as they are applicable.

"Your office has prepared blanks for the use of cities in making such notification, a copy of which is hereto attached. The result of a compliance with the form thus prescribed is to place upon the city the duty of determining what lands included in a particular levy are registered lands.

"It is difficult to interpret section 56 to mean that any such duty rests upon the city, for it says, 'shall file in the recorder's office a notice of the passage or the issuance thereof, giving a list of the lands assessed.' It does not say 'registered lands.' Manifestly, the simplest method is for the city to file in the recorder's office a copy of every ordinance levying a special assessment and a list of all lands assessed. The county recorder could then check them over and if registered lands were affected, note the same as a memorial upon the register. If the city must determine this it means that it must practically keep a duplicate record to that kept in the recorder's office, and keep a man constantly stationed to note all changes in the records, as well as all applications for registration, for the duty arises when the application is made.

"It means an enormous burden to the city of Cleveland, for it is not unusual for as high as three hundred parcels of land to be affected by one ordinance levying an assessment. On the other hand it is a relatively simple proposition for the county recorder to check over the list of all lands assessed and determine from his records, of which he alone has the custody, whether lands registered with him are affected. Is not the gist of the whole matter that notification be given to the county recorder so that if lands registered with him are affected, he may properly protect them in the interest of the state?

"What the city is now asking is whether it is not properly complying with the law, as it appears in section 56, when it sends to the county recorder a certified copy of the assessing ordinance, together with a list of all lands assessed, including registered lands, the names of all owners and description of the property and its streets and front footage.

"If the city is correct in this contention I presume your permission will be given to modify to this extent the form which your office has drawn."

The purpose of the filing with the county recorder of the notice giving a list of the lands assessed for the purposes referred to in section 8572-56 of the General Code, supra, is to make effective a levy which only attaches to registered lands when the recorder has been served with a notice that such registered land is included in the land to be affected by the levy. The contention of the writer of the request for an opinion is that the duty of searching the records rests with the recorder rather than with the person serving the notice, and it is suggested that the filing with the recorder of the copies of all of the ordinances passed in the city of Cleveland would enable the recorder to secure the information necessary to make the required memorial on the certificate of title.

I am unable to view the matter in that light. The only lands referred to in section 8572-56 of the General Code, are registered lands, and the filing of the notice referred to in that section only becomes necessary when registered lands are affected. The burden of filing the notice is on the taxing district or subdivision to be credited with the lien to be attached to the registered land, and it is a prerequisite that the notice be filed with the recorder by the taxing subdivision before the lien shall attach.

It is therefore my opinion that the duty and responsibility of filing with the recorder of the notice "giving a list of the lands assessed or to be assessed" refers to the filing of a list of registered lands assessed or to be assessed, and that the duty to indicate the particular registered lands to be assessed rests upon the taxing subdivision making the levy.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to the department of law of the city of Cleveland, Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT IS NOT ENTITLED TO PAY FOR ATTENDING TEACHERS' INSTITUTE —SECTION 7870, G. C., 104 O. L., CONSTRUED.

A district superintendent is not entitled to pay for attending a teachers' institute under authority of section 7870, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 157.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 20, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of August 12, 1915, you request my opinion on the following question:

> "Can a district superintendent be paid for attending a teachers' institute by the county board of education as provided by section 7870, General Code, as amended 104 O. L., 157? If so, is the amount he is entitled to to be prorated and allowed by the boards of education of the districts comprising his supervision district?"

Section 7870, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 157, provides:

> "When a teachers' institute has been authorized by the county board of education the boards of education of all school districts shall pay the teachers and superintendents of their respective districts their regular salary for the week they attend the institute upon the teachers or superintendents presenting certificates of full regular daily attendance, signed by the county superintendent. If the institute is held when the public schools are not in session, such teachers or superintendents shall be paid two dollars a day for actual daily attendance as certified by the county superintendent, for not more than five days of actual attendance, to be paid as an addition to the first month's salary after the institute, by the board of education by which such teacher or superintendent is then employed. In case he or she is unemployed at the time of the institute, such salary shall be paid by the board next employing such teacher or superintendent, if the term of employment begins within three months after the institute closes."

Under the above provisions of the statute, a teacher or a superintendent who is employed by the board of education of a school district in a county, at the time when a teachers' institute authorized by the board of education of such county is held in said county, or whose term of employment begins within three months after said institute closes, and who attends said institute and presents to said board of education a certificate of full, regular daily attendance, signed by the county superintendent, is entitled to his regular salary for the week he attends said institute, or if said institute is held when the public schools are not in session, said teacher or superintendent shall be paid by the board of education so employing him, for actual daily attendance as certified by said county superintendent, for not more than five days of actual attendance, to be paid as an addition to the first month's salary.

While the provisions of said statute are general in that they apply to a teacher or superintendent employed by the board of education of any school district in the county, it will be observed that such teacher or superintendent must be employed by said board of education within the meaning of said provisions of said statute in order to be entitled to pay for attending said institute.

Section 7870, G. C., as amended, is a part of the new school law so called, and the act of the general assembly amending said section was passed on the same day as the act amending section 4739, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 140, and the amendments to both of said sections became effective on the same day. Section 4739, G. C., as amended, provides for district supervision and prescribes the manner of electing district superintendents. Section 7870, G. C., prior to its amendment, could not have included district superintendents within the meaning of its provisions, and the legislature in amending said section did not change its provision determining the classes of persons who, under the conditions therein prescribed, are entitled to pay for attending a county teachers' institute.

It seems clear, therefore, that it was not the intention of the legislature in amending said section, to extend the meaning of said provision so as to include district superintendents.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that a district superintendent employed in the manner provided in section 4739, G. C., as amended, is not a superintendent within the meaning of section 7870, G. C., as amended, and would not be entitled to pay for attending a teachers' institute under authority of said section.

This answer to your first question disposes of your second question.

Respectively,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—MEMBER OF SUCH BOARD IS ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT FOR EXPENSE INCURRED BY HIM IN OPERATING HIS AUTOMOBILE WHILE THE SAME IS BEING USED AS A CONVEYANCE IN ATTENDING MEETINGS OF SAID BOARD.

A member of a county board of education is entitled to reimbursement for the actual and necessary expense incurred by him in operating an automobile owned by him while used as a means of conveyance in attending a meeting of said board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 20, 1915.

HON. A. L. DUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Port Clinton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 4, 1915, which is as follows:

"A. O. Dehn, county school superintendent, has submitted the following facts to me and has asked a ruling on the same.

"The members of our county board of education all live at some distance either from interurban lines or railroads, and it is necessary for them to provide some means for getting to and from train. They are accustomed to using their own automobiles for this purpose, and Mr. Dehn wishes to know whether such individual owner of an automobile is entitled to make a reasonable charge for the use of his own machine as a means of conveyance?"

Section 4734, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 137, provides:

"Each member of the county board of education shall be paid his actual and necessary expenses incurred during his attendance upon any meeting of the board. Such expenses, and the expenses of the county superintendent, itemized and verified shall be paid from the county board of education fund upon vouchers signed by the president of the board."

In opinion No. 618 of this department rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, under date of July 17, 1915, I have held that a county board of education may allow the county superintendent an amount sufficient to cover the actual and necessary expense incurred by him in maintaining and operating an automobile owned by him and used in the discharge of his duties, having due regard for the extent of such use in public and private business.

In conformity with the above holding, I am of the opinion, in answer to your question, that a member of a county board of education is entitled to reimbursement for the actual and necessary expense incurred by him in operating an automobile owned by him, while used as a means of conveyance in attending a meeting of said board.

A copy of the opinion above referred to is enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DENTAL BOARD—EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATIONS APPLICABLE TO THOSE DESIRING TO PRACTICE DENTISTRY IN OHIO—EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATIONS PRESCRIBED BY SECTION 1321-1, G. C., SUPRA NOT ESSENTIAL FOR ENTRANCE TO DENTAL COLLEGE.

The educational qualifications prescribed by section 1321-1, G. C., supra should not be exacted as a condition of matriculation in a dental college. Such qualifications apply only to applicants for license to practice dentistry.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 21, 1915.

HON. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary, Ohio Dental Board, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of the date of August 9, 1915, and quote therefrom as follows:

"I ask you to give us a ruling upon section 1321-1 on page 3.

"Firstly, as to whether the certificate mentioned in lines 3 and 16 must show that the fifteen high school units shall be possessed by the applicant at the time he presents his application for a certificate to the state superintendent of public instruction, which time is designated by the examining board as subsequent to graduation; or whether he must have fifteen units of high school credit at the time he enters dental college, three years in advance of the above date.

"As we read the law, no mention is made of the time of matriculation, as a date for filing applications or for completing high school units.

"I understand also that in the universities of the state, the school laws governing such universities take precedence over any dental law which is passed. In these there is a provision by which a student may enter any department with less than fifteen high school units, and be allowed one year's time to complete the entrance requirements and while attending the freshman college course. If that is so, the dental department of the Ohio State University and the department of dentistry of Western Reserve University would have the privilege of allowing dental students to enter and make up certain units during their freshman dental course, and if a construction were placed upon this section requiring fifteen high school units to be possessed by the applicant at the time he enters dental college, the new dental law would not be of uniform application.

"The second question upon which I should like to have a ruling, is as to whether the state superintendent of public instruction is given power to examine and pass upon the preliminary educational credentials of other students than those presenting applications for examination to the Ohio state dental board. Many students come to the dental schools of this state with no intention of practicing in this state, and one-half of the graduates of this school probably will not take examination before the Ohio state board.

"Will you please rule as to whether or not the Ohio state dental board or the state superintendent of public instruction will have jurisdiction in any way over such students? * * *

"At the same time I wish you would also give me an opinion as to the proper interpretation of the last sentence in section 1321-1 which reads, 'this shall not apply to students already enrolled in accredited dental colleges.' Would a student who (as an example) matriculates in any dental college before the 18th of this month, but does not actually enter upon his studies until the fall term in October, be entitled to any consideration?

"Section 1329-1 forbids the practice of dentistry under a company, association or corporation name. Would it be lawful for a dentist to advertise by a sign in front of his office that he is doctor so and so, successor to The Red Cross Dental Parlors or Union Painless Dentist, etc., or could he advertise this fact by hand bill or newspaper?

"Section 1321-1 sets a standard of general education that is to be required of all applicants who wish to practice dentistry in Ohio. This law will affect the students who enter dental colleges this year. This section seems to conflict with section 7658 somewhat, and section 7659. Would it be proper for us to require the colleges to exact credentials according to section 1321-1? If a college should require this standard, could an applicant claim the privilege of entering the school provided he has the qualifications set forth in sections 7659 and 7658?"

The first two questions submitted in the foregoing communications may be properly considered together. and paraphrased may be stated as follows: Is the certificate of the state superintendent that an applicant is possessed of a general education equal to that required for graduation from a first grade high school in this state, required before said applicant enters a dental college or before said applicant takes the examination required by the state dental board for a license to practice dentistry within this state, and

(2) Is the state superintendent of public instruction given power to examine and pass upon the preliminary educational credentials of students other than those presenting to the Ohio state dental board applications for said examination?

The statutes which refer to and cover examination for license to practice dentistry within this state are found in section 1321, G. C., and 1321-1 as found in vol. 105-106 O. L., at page 298.

Section 1321, G. C., provides:

> "Each person who desires to practice dentistry within this state shall file with the secretary of the state dental board a written application for a license and furnish satisfactory proof that he is at least twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, and present evidence satisfactory to the board that he is a graduate of a reputable dental college, as defined by the board. Such application must be upon the form prescribed by the board and certified by oath."

Section 1321-1 provides:

> "The applicant shall also present with his application a certificate of the state superintendent of public instruction, that he is possessed of a general education equal to that required for graduation from a first grade high school in this state. Said superintendent of public instruction shall issue a certificate without examining the applicant, provided said applicant presents to him one of the following credentials: A diploma from an approved college granting the degrees of A. B., B. S. or equivalent degree; a certificate showing graduation from a high school of the first grade, or from a normal or a preparatory school, legally constituted, after four years of study; a teacher's permanent or life high school certificate; a certificate of admittance by examination to the freshman class of an approved college granting the degree of A. B., B. S., or equivalent degree. In the absence of the foregoing credentials and before issuing such certificate the applicant shall be examined by said superintendent of public instruction, in such branches as are required from a first grade high school and to pass such examination shall be sufficient qualification to entitle such applicant to a certificate; provided, however, that the superintendent of public instruction may designate any county superintendent of schools to hold such examinations at such times and places as may be necessary or convenient. The fee for such examination shall be three dollars and the fee for certificate shall be one dollar, both payable to said superintendent of public instruction and by him paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund. Granting of certificates by examination by said superintendent of public instruction, and acceptance by said superintendent of certificates of admittance by examinations to the freshman class of approved colleges granting the degree of A. B., B. S. or equivalent degree, shall cease after January first, 1919. This shall not apply to students already enrolled in accredited dental colleges."

It will be observed that the two foregoing sections relate solely to applicants for a license to practice dentistry within this state. No language can be found or reference made in either section that can be construed as connecting the provisions of these sections with any requirements for admission to any dental college in this state. The educational certificate required by the last section from the state superintendent of public instruction applies only to an applicant for a license to practice dentistry and cannot be connected in any way with any requirements that any dental college may make for admission therein. These observations also answer the second inquiry regarding the power of the state superintendent of public instruction to examine and pass upon the preliminary educational credentials of students other than those presenting applications for examination to the state dental board.

As before observed, the provisions of these statutes are intended to apply only to applicants for license from the state dental board of this state and do not concern students who intend to take examination elsewhere and have no intention of practicing dentistry within this state.

Your next question refers to the provision contained in the last sentence of section 1321-1, which reads as follows: "This shall not apply to students already enrolled in accredited dental colleges." And the precise point of your question seems to be whether or not matriculation is enrollment. My conclusion is, from the sense in which this provision is placed in this statute, that it is not. Enrolled, as used in this paragraph, evidently is intended by the legislature to apply to those students who have actually taken some instruction in accredited dental colleges. The purpose of this provision is to give such students, who from some cause have been unable continuously to pursue their college course, the right at any time after January 1, 1919, when their course has been completed, to avail themselves of the privileges of this section.

I therefore conclude that in the case you mention the mere fact that the student matriculated without actually entering upon his studies will not avail to exclude him from the provisions of this section.

Your next inquiry involves an interpretation of section 1329-1 which provides as follows:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to practice or offer to practice dentistry or dental surgery, under the name of any company, association, or corporation, and any person or persons practicing or offering to practice dentistry or dental surgery shall do so under his name only; any person convicted of a violation of the provisions of this section shall be fined for the first offense not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars, and upon a second conviction therefor, his license may be suspended or revoked as provided in section 1325 of this act."

This section makes it penal for any person or persons to practice or offer to practice under the name of any company, association or corporation. In the case submitted, the person described is practicing and offering to practice under his own name, and in compliance with the provisions of the statute above. The addition of the words "successor to, etc.," does not change his identity nor does it identify the company with him. These additional words are purely narrative and cannot be interpreted as denoting a continuation of a former condition or a declaration of a present situation.

Your last inquiry involves two questions which may be separately stated thus:

> "1. Would it be proper for us to require colleges to exact educational credentials for admission according to section 1321-1, supra?
> "2. If a college should require this standard, could an applicant claim the privilege of entering the school provided he has the qualifications set forth in section 7659, G. C., and section 7658, G. C.?"

Referring to these questions in the order named, I am of the opinion it would not be proper for you to exact, as a condition of matriculation in a dental college, the educational qualifications prescribed by said section 1321-1, supra, which, as before observed, apply only to applicants for license to practice dentistry. I reach this conclusion for the reason that the legislature in enacting said section 1321-1 plainly intends it shall apply only at the time of the examination for a license to practice dentistry and then only to such persons who take said examination for license to practice in this state. The adoption of such requirements by your board would not be in harmony with the legislative plan, and doubtless would prevent many students, who are not expecting to practice in this state, from entering colleges here. It would also interfere with many home students who expect to take their professional and literary training contemporaneously in our state colleges.

The above observations apply with equal force to the voluntary adoption of such requirements by colleges, as suggested in your second question. A careful reading of the two sections 7658, G. C., and 7659, G. C., will show that the former section makes provisions for admission to a dental college without examination, if the applicant is the holder of a diploma from a high school of the first grade. This provision is identical with the requirement of section 1321-1, and there could be no conflict as between those two sections. Section 7659, G. C., however, provides for qualifications which will entitle an applicant to take an examination for admission to a dental college. It cannot be assumed that the legislature, in the enactment of section 7659, intended to fix a lower standard for admission to a dental college by examination than that required by the provisions of section 7658. The requirement of section 7659, as above observed, is to fix maximum qualifications to be required before an examination can be taken. If the examination itself requires such qualification as may be possessed by the applicant who is admitted without examination under section 7658, I see no reason for the applicant to complain. In other words, I do not construe section 7659 as in effect making a lower standard for admission to a dental college than section 7658, and as said last section observes the same standard as section 1321-1, it would appear that a college could voluntarily adopt the requirements of the last section as a standard of admission. Of course, these observations refer only to colleges coming under the provisions of said sections 7658 and 7659, G. C., and do not apply to colleges excepted under the provisions of these sections.

Respectively,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONTRACTOR HAS RIGHT TO RELY UPON INFORMATION FURNISHED BY STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—SUCH INFORMATION MUST HARMONIZE WITH PLANS, ETC., ON FILE—NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS SHOULD CLEARLY STATE WHAT IS INTENDED TO BE IMPROVED—CORRESPOND WITH PLANS.

A contractor, in bidding for the work of improving a section of an inter-county highway, has a right to rely on the information furnished by the state highway commissioner in so far as the same is in keeping with the plans, profiles and specifications for said improvement on file in the office of the county commissioners and in the office of said state highway commissioner and, if it is intended that the bridges and culverts to be constructed are to cover a greater mileage than that of the roadway proper, it should be clearly stated in the notice to contractors and shown on said plans and profiles.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 31st, which is as follows:

"The State Highway Department received alternative bids on water-bound macadam and concrete for the Hicksville-Defiance road, I. C. H. 420, petition 574, in Hicksville and Mark townships, June 2, 1914.

"The bids for water-bound macadam were intended to cover 33,300 lineal feet, or 6.30 miles while concrete bids were for 26,723 lineal feet, or 5.06 miles. The estimates submitted to the bidders for bridges and culverts were exactly the same, both in respect to quantities and total cost for both macadam and concrete construction.

"Clemmer & Johnson, Hicksville, Ohio, were the low bidders on concrete and were awarded the contract for that type of construction. After the work of construction had begun, the contractors maintained that they were not to construct the bridges and culverts for more road than was covered by the concrete pavement, namely, 26.723 lineal feet, or 5.06 miles. They claim that was their understanding from the advertisement, as you will see by their letter of May 11, 1915. You will note copy of the advertisement as it appeared. They also say in this letter, that the profile is marked end of contract at station 267-23. Please note that the notation appearing at station 267-23 reads: "End Sec. No. 1 if concrete be adopted." As a matter of fact, the quantities appearing under bridges and culverts, covers a distance of 35,965 lineal feet of road, or 6.81 miles.

"At the time the plans and estimates were made the highway department contemplated building more road than they afterwards found they had funds to construct; consequently, the macadam was reduced to 6.30 miles, and the concrete to 5.06 miles, but the bridges and culverts remained the same, covering a distance of 6.81 miles.

"The intention of the highway department was to construct the bridges and culverts on more road than would be covered by either the macadam or the concrete road improvement.

"Under the form of advertisement, plans, specifications and estimates, can the contractors be required to construct bridges and culverts for more than 5.06 miles, the length of the concrete road?

"If so, can they be required to build these structures for a distance of 6.81 miles, as contemplated and represented by the quantities under "Bridges and Culverts?"

"The state highway department has asked the contractors, Clemmer & Johnson, to construct the structures, as represented by quantities under "Bridges and Culverts," of estimate sheet attached to the contract and specifications. They have constructed only those structures on the 5.06 miles covered by the concrete road, and advise us that they believe this is all that is covered by their contract.

"The files of the state highway department bearing on this matter are very voluminous, and if Mr. Duncan can conveniently call, I will gladly assist him in getting out such information as may be found in them.

"We respectfully ask your opinion in this matter at your earliest convenience."

You enclose a letter addressed to me, from the firm of Clemmer & Johnson, under date of July 30th, which is in part as follows:

"The plans for the above mentioned improvement were originally made to include 6.3 miles of water-bound macadam road and bridge work for that distance. Alternate bids were received by the state department for 5.06 miles of concrete road, and the approximate estimate for the concrete included the roadway for 5.06 miles and bridges for 6.3 miles, but the notice to contractors only included 5.06 miles of road and bridge work, and the profiles were marked by the state department 'End of Contract' at 5.06 miles. We were the successful bidders for the work in question and, believing that the state department had overlooked changing their approximate estimate to exclude the 1.24 miles of bridge work, relied on the notice to contractors and the profiles and completed the work accordingly with concrete road and bridge work for the distance of 5.06 miles, just as we supposed we had contracted to do. We did not consider the 1.24 miles of bridge work when making our bid nor at any other time, for we supposed that if this extra work was intended to be included it would have been plainly stated in the notice to contractors, and shown on the profiles, and it is very unusual to construct bridges beyond the end of the paved road, and this is especially true when it is understood that the Hicksville-Defiance road is being built in separate sections.

"We are sure that no other contractor for this work, who figured on the same, included the 1.24 miles of extra bridge work, and we are in a position to furnish affidavits from certain of these contractors to this effect."

Upon examination of the files in your department relating to the improvement of section No. 1 of the Hicksville-Defiance road, I find in file No. 142 a copy of the notice to contractors, a copy of the specifications for said improvement with concrete, a copy of the contract between the state and the firm of Clemmer & Johnson, a copy of the bond given by said firm and a copy of the approximate estimate of the state highway commissioner, of the cost of constructing the roadway proper and a separate estimate of said state highway commissioner of the cost of constructing bridges and culverts.

I understand that at the time the notice to contractors, inviting sealed proposals for grading and paving of the roadway and for constructing the bridges and culverts of said section No. 1 of the above described highway, was published, your department, in conformity with its rule of procedure, issued to all prospective bidders who made application therefor two folders, one containing the data found in file No. 142 as above set forth, the other containing practically the same data except that the notice to contractors and the specifications called for water-bound macadam instead of concrete, and the length of section No. 1, as described in said notice, was 6.30 miles instead of 5.06, the length of said section as described in the notice to contractors for concrete work, and that the estimated cost of construction was different.

The copy of the notice to contractors for proposals on concrete work is in part as follows:

> "Defiance Co., Pet. 574, I. C. H. 420, paving with concrete Hicksville-Defiance road, Hicksville and Mark Twps. Length 26,723 feet or 5.06 miles. Width of paving 15 feet. Estimated cost of construction, $56,138.51."

The copy of the notice to contractors for proposals on water-bound macadam is in part as follows:

> "Defiance Co. Pet. 574, I. C. H. 420, paving with w. b. macadam, Hicksville-Defiance road, Hicksville and Mark townships. Length 33,300 feet or 6.30 miles. Width of paving 15 feet. Estimated cost of construction $53,951.05."

There is nothing in said notices that would in any way lead a bidder to believe that the 5.06 miles, in case concrete should be adopted, or the 6.30 miles, in case water-bound macadam should be adopted, did not include all the bridges and culverts to be considered in bidding for the work.

Moreover, the Hicksville-Defiance road is being improved in separate sections and an examination of the profile shows the following notation appearing at station 267-23:

> "End of Sec. No. 1 if concrete be adopted."

While the approximate estimate of the state highway commissioner of the cost of constructing the bridges and culverts, issued to bidders for concrete was the same as that issued to bidders for water-bound macadam and, as stated by you, covered 6.81 miles, I note that said approximate estimate was prefaced by the following statement:

> "The estimates below are only approximate, although the result of calculations, and the contractor must be responsible for his own data on which to base his bid."

As stated by Mr. Clemmer, of said firm of Clemmer & Johnson, this statement to bidders, taken in connection with the fact that the notice to contractors for concrete work plainly limits the construction of bridges and culverts to 5.06 miles, and the further fact that the notation on the profile shows section No. 1 of said road as limited to said length of 5.06 miles, in case concrete should be adopted, caused said firm of Clemmer & Johnson in bidding for the work on said section No. 1, in response to the aforesaid notices and after having examined the plans, profiles and specifications for said work, to submit their bid for said construction work with the understanding that should the contract be awarded to their firm only such bridges and culverts were to be constructed as were included within the 5.06 miles, the length of said section No. 1.

Mr. Clemmer further states that the 1.24 miles of bridge work, the difference between the 5.06 miles, in case concrete should be used, and the 6.30 miles, in case water-bound macadam should be used, was not taken into consideration by them at the time they estimated the cost of the construction work, on which estimate they based their bid.

As stated by you, at the time the plans and estimates were made, the highway department contemplated building more road than they afterwards found they had funds to construct and the department determined to reduce the lengths of the section to be improved to 6.30 miles, for water-bound macadam, or 5.06 miles, for concrete. The bidders were not advised that the state highway department, in issuing its notices for sealed proposals for said construction work, intended that the construction of bridges and culverts should cover 6.81 miles as originally planned, and there is nothing on the plans and profiles that evidence such intent.

While the approximate estimates of the cost of constructing bridges and culverts, as issued to bidders, was the same for water-bound macadam as for concrete, and it might be argued that this was notice to said bidders that the state highway department intended that the construction of said bridges and culverts should cover a greater mileage than the respective lengths set forth in the aforesaid notices, in view of the fact that the bidder was required to secure his own data on which to base his bid, and the further fact that the mileage, on which the estimate of the state highway commissioner of the cost of constructing said bridges and culverts was based, was greater than that set forth in either of the aforesaid notices, I do not think that said estimate of the state highway commissioner, as furnished to the bidders, was a sufficient notice of said intention of the state highway department that the work of constructing said bridges and culverts should cover a greater mileage than the length of the roadway proper.

The firm of Clemmer & Johnson had a right to rely on the information furnished by the state highway commissioner, in so far as the same was in keeping with the plans, profiles and specifications for said improvement, and if the extra work of constructing bridges and culverts was intended to be included in the contract it should have been clearly stated in the notices to contractors and should have been shown on the profiles.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that said firm cannot be required to construct bridges and culverts for more than 5.06 miles, the length of the concrete improvement designated as section No. 1 of the Hicksville-Defiance road.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—WHEN VILLAGE DESIRES TO ERECT A MUNICIPAL LIGHT PLANT AND THERE IS SUCH A PLANT ERECTED BY "ANY PERSON, COMPANY OR PERSONS OR CORPORATION," WHICH "IS WILLING TO SELL," VILLAGE MUST PURCHASE SAID WORKS SO ERECTED—IF NO AGREEMENT CAN BE REACHED, VILLAGE MUST APPROPRIATE—FRANCHISE TO ERECT AND OPERATE ELECTRIC WORKS DOES NOT GIVE OWNER EXCLUSIVE RIGHT.

1. Under the provisions of section 3990, G. C., when a village desires to erect electric works at the expense of the village, and such works have already been erected by "any person, company of persons or corporation," to whom a franchise to erect the same has been granted, if such "person, company or persons or corporation" is willing to sell, the village must purchase said works so erected. If no agreement can be made as to compensation therefor, the village must proceed to appropriate said works.

2. The grant of a franchise to erect and operate electric works in a village does not give the owner or owners thereof exclusive rights thereunder. Other franchises of the same character may be granted by the municipality if it considers it expedient so to do.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 23, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from the solicitor of Newton Falls, Ohio, desiring my opinion upon the questions therein stated, which I consider of sufficient public importance to warrant my addressing said opinion to you. His letter is as follows:

> "As solicitor for the village of Newton Falls, Ohio, I desire to submit for your opinion a question which has been referred to me by the village council.
> "In the year 1904, the then council of the village deeming it necessary to provide for the lighting of streets, public buildings, and the accommodation of the inhabitants of the village, advertised for bids for the furnishing of the same. One J. W. Carr put in a bid, a copy of which is hereto attached and marked 'Exhibit B.' June 14, 1904, the council passed an ordinance, a copy of which marked 'Exhibit A' is hereto attached. By this ordinance a franchise running for twenty (20) years was granted to said Carr. July 1, 1904, council adopted a resolution, a copy of which marked 'Exhibit C' is hereto attached. By this resolution the mayor was authorized to enter into a contract with said Carr to run for the period of ten (10) years, a copy of said contract, marked 'Exhibit D' is hereto attached. This contract has expired by limitation as provided therein, but the franchise has about nine (9) years yet to run.

"Under his contract Carr erected a small plant, set poles, strung wires and for the period of the ten (10) years carried out his part of the contract.

"At the expiration of Carr's term, the present council again advertised for bids. Several bids were received, Carr among other bidders. Council considering the bids too high rejected them and decided that it would be for the interest of the village to erect and operate its own light plant. (The village already owns and operates its water plant.)

"The question is, can the village, under existing circumstances, erect and operate a lighting plant of its own, independent of the Carr franchise, without first purchasing of Carr his old and now out of date plant?

"Section 3990 of the General Code, reads in part as follows: 'The council of a municipality may, when it is deemed expedient and for the public good, erect gas works or electric works at the expense of the corporation, or purchase any gas or electric works already erected therein, but in villages where gas works or electrical works have already been erected by any person, company or persons, or corporation, to whom a franchise to erect and operate gas works or electric works has been granted, and such franchise has not yet expired, the council shall, with the consent of the owner or owners, purchase such gas works or electric works already erected therein, * * *.' And further provided what is to be done in case a village and the owner cannot agree.

"Section 3990 of the General Code, is a re-enactment of section 2486 of the Revised Statutes, as amended May 12, 1902. See Laws of Ohio, Vol. 95, page 599.

"The well considered case of State ex rel. v. The City of Hamilton, found in Ohio State Reports, Vol. 47, page 52, and cited in the case of State ex rel. v. Toledo, found in Ohio State Reports, Vol. 48, page 112, would appear to settle the question were it not for the fact that these cases were decided prior to the amendment of section 2486 by the act passed May 12, 1902. I am aware of the ruling of your predecessor in the case of the village of Middleport, a somewhat similar one, found in Vol. 2, at page 1962, Annual Report of the attorney general. But there is this difference between the Middleport case and that of Newton Falls. In the Middleport case the contract had not expired and in the Newton Falls case it has.

"Section 3809 of the General Code, among other things, limits the period of time for which council may enter into contracts for lighting of streets, etc., to ten years.

"Under these conditions and in view of the statute now in force, what can the village do? Is the word 'shall' as used in section 3990 mandatory or no? If it is, then the village of Newton Falls must either purchase the old and out of date plant of Carr or make a new contract with the lowest bidder, neither of which is desired. And again, suppose that Carr is not the lowest bidder for the new contract. What is there in the statute to prevent the present council from granting a new franchise to some other person or company, and entering into a new contract? An early opinion will be very much appreciated."

The full provisions of section 3990, G. C., above referred to, as amended.

"The council of a municipality may, when it is deemed expedient and for the public good, erect gas works or electric works at the expense of the corporation, or purchase any gas or electric works already erected therein, but in villages where gas works or electrical works have already been erected by any person, company of persons, or corporation, to whom a franchise to erect and operate gas works or electric works has been granted, and such franchise has not yet expired, the council shall, with the consent of the owner or owners, purchase such gas works or electric works already erected therein. If the council and owner or owners of such gas or electric works are unable to agree upon the compensation to be paid therefor, the council may file in the probate court of the county where such gas works or electric works are located, a petition to appropriate such gas works or electric works, and thereupon the same proceedings of appropriation shall be had as is provided for the appropriation of private property by a municipal corporation. A municipal contract existing between any village and such person, company of persons or corporation for the public or street lighting shall be considered as an element of value in fixing the compensation to be paid for such gas works or electric works."

In the opinion of this department found in volume II of the attorney general's report for the year 1912, page 1962, referred to in this letter, section 3616, G. C., is quoted as reflecting upon the general powers of municipalities, and section 3618 is quoted as providing specifically for the establishment, maintenance and operation of municipal lighting, power and heating plants, and section 3990, supra, is quoted. General Hogan then observes:

"I think it will not be controverted that no municipality has the right, and never did have, under the municipal laws, to grant an exclusive franchise to any electric or waterworks company.

"This being so, the municipality has never parted with its right to construct its own waterworks, or electric light plant; and can operate the same in competition with existing plants, except it must purchase the electric light plant."

I am in full accord with these observations and I am unable to see in what manner the expiration of the contract referred to in this letter can effect the right of either the municipality or the contractor under the provisions of section 3990, supra. The conditions named in this statute are based wholly upon the existence of a franchise and not of a contract for lighting the municipality, that may subsist between the parties, nor can the situation in any way be affected by the fact that such a contract has expired.

It might well be observed that the income from the contract with the municipality ordinarily forms a very small proportion of the earnings of a light plant. This, of course, cannot change the provisions of the statute. The only legal effect of the expiration of a contract with the municipality is to eliminate that contract as a factor in determining the value of the company's plant in case of an appropriation proceeding, as provided in the last clause of said statute.

Therefore, following the rule announced in the former opinion, the municipality in question may establish, maintain and operate electric works, and if the owner of the present plant is willing to sell, the municipality must purchase said plant. If no agreement can be made as to compensation, the municipality must appropriate.

Coming now to consider the last question submitted in this letter, there is nothing in section 3990, G. C., or in any other statute of this state, which gives the owner of this franchise the exclusive right against the world to operate a light plant in Newton Falls. As observed in the opinion quoted, no municipality has the right, and never did have, under municipal laws, to grant an exclusive franchise to any electric company. Therefore the municipality of Newton Falls is free to grant a franchise to one or as many persons or companies as it may deem expedient, and may contract with the same for its municipal lighting (the contract with the present plant having expired) independent and regardless of any franchise that said plant may now hold.

I think the foregoing observations answer all the questions submitted in this letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—NO AUTHORITY TO CO-OPERATE WITH COUNTY ROAD IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION IN GIVING STATE FUNDS TO BUILD OR ASSIST IN BUILDING ROADS IN SUCH COUNTY—MONEY CANNOT BE USED UNDER DIRECTION OF ASSOCIATION—PORTAGE COUNTY.

The state highway commissioner has no authority in law to co-operate with a county road improvement association by giving it state funds to build or assist in building one or more of the roads in such county, the money to be used under the supervision and direction of such association.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 23, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 2, 1915, in which is enclosed a letter addressed to you from B. F. Batchelder, chief engineer, The Portage County Improvement Association, which is as follows:

> "Herewith are enclosed itemized statements and the distribution of same of the expenses incurred and paid by the Portage county road commission for the completion of that portion of the east and west center road in Deerfield township, known as road No. 87 H, from Deerfield Center to Deerfield Station, length 1.4 miles.
> "The work on this road was commenced in the year 1914, under an arrangement with the state highway commissioner and the amount of $4,000.00 was appropriated by the state as its portion of the repairs on this road. During the year 1914, there was expended on such repairs $3,042.34 of the state's portion, and on December 10, 1914, the balance of the appropriation, $957.66 was returned to Mr. J. R. Marker, former state highway commissioner, with the understanding that the amount was to be available during the season of 1915 for the completion of the repairs on the road in question.

"The repairs on this road have now been completed and the cost and expenses of the same as indicated in the enclosed statement have been paid by the Portage county road commission for which payments receipted bills and payrolls are now on file with the county auditor of Portage county.

"The aggregate amount expended during the year 1915 on this road is $1,550.63 of which amount under the arrangement above mentioned, the state's portion would be $957.66, the balance $592.97 will remain a charge to be borne by the Portage county road commission.

"Will you please take this matter up and advise us as to what data if any you will require in the making of the transfer of the above noted balance returned last year to the state highway department, viz., $957.66 to the Portage county road commission."

You ask to be advised whether, as state highway commissioner, you may lawfully place to the credit of the Portage County Improvement Association said sum of $957.66.

I understand that a commission was organized in Portage county under authority of section 6886-1 of the General Code, being section 1 of the act of the general assembly as found in 103 O. L., 732, and entitled "An act to permit any person, persons, firm, partnership, corporation or association of persons to contribute a fund for the purpose of assisting in the improvement of highways and to provide for commissions for improving the same."

Section 6886-1, G. C., provides:

"When the county commissioners of any county have determined to improve one or more highways within such county and any person, persons, firm, partnership, corporation or association of persons desire to contribute a fund for the purpose of assisting in the improvement of such highway, such fund to be not less than ten per centum of the total cost of such improvement, the said person, persons, firm, partnership, corporation, or association may apply to a judge of the court of common pleas of the county, who may appoint four suitable and competent freeholders of the county who shall, in connection with the county commissioners, constitute a commission for the purpose of the improvement of such road and serve until its completion."

Sections 6886-2 to 6886-11, inclusive, of the General Code, being sections 2 to 11, inclusive, of the aforesaid act, vests in said commission the authority to improve one or more of the highways of said county.

Section 6886-12, being section 12 of said act, provides as follows:

"Whenever, in any county in the state, there shall be a bona fide, voluntary association, either incorporated, or unincorporated, not for profit, of not less than one thousand citizens of any county, one of the purposes of which organization is the improvement, maintenance and repair of the public highways of said county, the commission as provided for in section one of this act, having the right to expend money in grading, draining, curbing and improving county and state highways by the use of gravel, macadam, stone, brick, slag or other material, or expending money for improving, maintaining and repairing said highways, from the public funds under their charge and control, applicable for the construction, maintenance or repair of public highways, may, without the necessity of petition being presented by property owners or of advertising for competitive bids, make contracts with said association, or its proper representatives, to do such work of grading, draining, repairing and improving county or state highways within said county, by the use of gravel, macadam, brick, slag or other material and for the betterment generally of the highways of said county and make payments therefor out of any road or bridge funds under the control of said respective boards of officials, in the treasury, or levied for the purpose of construction, maintaining and improving the public highways in said county."

It is evident that the Portage County Improvement Association is an organization within the meaning of the provisions of section 6886-12, G. C., as above quoted, and that the Portage county road commission, organized under section 6886-1, G. C., has been co-operating with said Portage County Improvement Association in the manner and under the authority provided in said section 6886-12, G. C.

There is, however, no provision of said act authorizing the state highway commissioner to co-operate with said association by giving it state funds to build or assist in building one or more of the roads in said county, the money to be used under the supervision and direction of said association, and I find no authority under any other statute for such use of the state funds by the state highway commissioner.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the action of Mr. Marker, former state highway commissioner, in placing the sum of $4,000 to the credit of said Portage County Improvement Association was without authority in law, and that the expenditure of said sum of $3,042.34, or any part of said sum, was illegal.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that, as state highway commissioner, you have no authority in law to place any of the state funds to the credit of said association.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INSPECTION OF STEAM BOILERS—CERTIFICATE FEES MUST BE PAID BEFORE CERTIFICATE DELIVERED—INSPECTION FEES PAID BEFORE INSPECTION IS ACTUALLY MADE.

Certificate fees provided for in section 1058-21, G. C., must be paid before certificate is delivered.

Inspection fees provided for in section 1058-25, G. C., must be paid at time of inspection before inspection is actually made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of August 14th, you submitted for my written opinion the following proposition:

> "Must the certificate fees mentioned in section 1058-21, G. C., and the inspection fees mentioned in section 1058-25, G. C., be collected before the certificate may be issued; or may the certificate be issued and collection made afterwards?
> "In other words, when should said fees be collected relative to the time the services are performed? Many inspections are made for which certificates are refused on account of the condition of the boilers."

Section 1058-19, G. C., (103 O. L., 650) provides that the owner or user of a boiler required to be inspected shall, after due notice, prepare the boiler for internal and external inspection at the appointed time, notice thereof having been previously given.

Section 1058-20, G. C., (103 O. L., 650) provides that if upon making the internal and external inspection, the inspector finds the boiler to be in safe working order, with the fittings necessary to safety, and properly set up, upon his report to the chief inspector of steam boilers, the chief inspector shall issue to the owner or user thereof a certificate of inspection, stating the maximum pressure at which the boiler may be operated, as ascertained by the rules established by the board of boiler rules, and thereupon such owner or user may operate the boiler mentioned in the certificate for one year from the date of inspection, unless certificate shall be sooner withdrawn.

Section 1058-21, G. C. (103 O. L., 651), after stating what the certificate of inspection shall contain and where it is to be placed, provides further:

> "The owner or user of a steam boiler herein required to be inspected shall pay to the chief inspector of steam boilers the sum of one dollar for each certificate issued."

Section 1058-25, G. C. (103 O. L., 651), provides that the owner or user of a boiler required to be inspected "shall pay to the chief inspector upon inspection five dollars for each boiler internally and externally inspected, and two dollars for each boiler inspected while in operation."

Section 1058-28, G. C. (103 O. L., 652), provides a penalty for violation of the act, and states that,

"Whoever being the owner, or operator of any steam boiler, herein required to be inspected, operated (operates) the same in violation of any provision of the law or of any rule promulgated by the board of boiler rules, and approved by the governor, or without having the same inspected and a certificate issued therefor as provided in this act, etc., shall be fined, etc."

It is to be noted, in the first place, that the law requires all boilers required to be inspected to be so inspected before the same are operated, and section 1058-25 provides that the owner shall pay "upon inspection" the proper fee.

Therefore, so far as the fee mentioned in said section is concerned, the same is to be paid at the time of the inspection. In other words, the payment should precede the services rendered. The inspector would have no authority to inspect the boiler until the amount of the inspection fee had been received.

The certificate fee is provided for by section 1058-21, which requires the owner or user of the boiler to pay the sum of one dollar for each certificate issued. The certificate cannot be issued until the one dollar has been paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TREASURER OF STATE—MAY NOT USE MONEYS IN HIS CASH DRAWER BELONGING TO STATE TREASURY FOR PURPOSE OF REDEEMING CHECKS IN PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS PAYABLE INTO STATE INSURANCE FUND, WHEN RETURNED "NOT PAID FOR WANT OF SUFFICIENT FUNDS"—CANCELLATION OF ALL ENTRIES SHOWING PAYMENT—CAN ACCEPT NOTHING BUT LEGAL TENDER IN ABSENCE OF RULES BY INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

The treasurer of state may not lawfully use moneys in his cash drawer belonging to the state treasury for the purpose of redeeming checks received by him in payment of premiums payable into the state insurance fund, when returned "not paid for want of sufficient funds" or other reasons. The cancellation of all entries showing payment is the only legal course in such event.

In the absence of the promulgation of rules by the industrial commission authorizing the acceptance of checks and the conditions thereof, the treasurer of state has no authority to accept anything other than legal tender as a payment into the state insurance fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 14, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

"For the purpose of settling the question of the rights and privileges of the treasurer of state concerning bad checks issued in payment of premiums due the industrial insurance commission, I respectfully submit for your early opinion the following:

"The treasurer of state carries no funds belonging to the industrial commission in the state treasury vault. All obligations of the industrial commission are paid by check on the active depositories.

"QUESTION. A check issued in payment of industrial premiums made payable to the treasurer of state is received. The treasurer reports the premium as paid to the commission and places the check in the bank for collection. In due time the check is returned marked 'not sufficient funds' or 'account closed.' The treasurer not having any funds to the credit of the commission pays the amount of the check in question out of the cash drawer (state funds) and carries the check as a cash item until lifted by the drawer thereof, or insurance cancelled by the industrial commission and a refund voucher issued by the commission to the treasurer of state and the check lifted by them.

"There seems to be some question as to the proper method of handling this question. I believe I would have the right to issue a check on the depository of the industrial commission to redeem any checks that may come back belonging to them and certify the transaction to the commission in the same manner as we handle their warrants in payments of claims.

"Another method and the one followed up to the time of the submission of this question was, to report the bad check to the auditor of the commission who would on authority of the commission issue a refund to the treasurer of state, and take up the bad check and turn it over to the department of the attorney general for collection."

I understand that you have in mind two alternative methods of dealing with the situation described by you, both involving the use of moneys in the cash drawer of the treasurer of state, which belong to the state treasury, and the reimbursement of the state treasury, either by the issuance and deposit therein of a check on the insurance fund by yourself or such issuance and deposit by the industrial commission.

Looking at both of these methods from the standpoint of technical law, I would have to advise that neither of them is legal. There is no authority of law for the treasurer of state using state funds to reimburse a bank which has taken a bad check which has been credited as a payment to the insurance fund. The two funds are quite separate and distinct, and must not be commingled in any way, even for convenience in bookkeeping.

In my opinion, under the circumstances mentioned by you, there is no way in which the treasurer of state or the industrial commission can lawfully cash such a bad check for the purpose of reimbursing the depository bank. The only legal way in which a transaction of this sort can be carried out is to cancel the credit to the insurance fund and to make a corresponding credit in favor of the depository bank. In truth and in fact, as well as in contemplation of law, there has been no payment into the insurance fund within the contemplation of section 1465-72 of the General Code (103 O. L., 82). Neither the industrial commission nor the treasurer of state has, strictly speaking, any authority to accept checks in lieu of legal tender in payment of the insurance premiums, and when a check is a matter of fact accepted it must be regarded as accepted provisionally only, subject to collection. So that when collection fails it is as if no payment into the fund had been made and no deposit with the depository bank had been made, and all entries showing payment into the fund or deposits in the depository bank should be simply cancelled.

I realize that this is not the most convenient way of handling such situations. However, it is clear that there be a complete payment before any employer is entitled to the benefits of the workmen's compensation act. Such payment, in the absence of an enabling statute, is made only when the cash is on hand. It is different with payments into the state treasury under and by virtue of section 24 of the General Code, which requires payment of checks collected by various state officers immediately into the state treasury.

But section 24 of the General Code does not apply to the state treasurer nor to the industrial commission in the administration of the workmen's compensation law. So that checks are not acceptable as mediums of payment, and until the actual cash has been realized there is no premium payment such as will protect the employer and enter into and become a part of the fund or any deposit thereof.

As a matter of practice, justified by established commercial usage, certified checks may safely be accepted, but for the future I advise that no uncertified checks whatever be accepted in payment of state insurance premiums. As to past transactions not yet consummated I advise against the use of state treasury cash under the circumstances named, and recommend the cancellation of all debit entries or the making of such credit entries as will show the nature of the transaction in lieu of the use of cash, however awkward this may be as a matter of bookkeeping.

I think I should say, however, in order to state my position fully, that the above discussion and the conclusions which I have expressed apply to the law as it stands without any amplification by the industrial commission under its power to promulgate "rules and regulations with respect to the collection, maintenance and disbursement of the state insurance fund," which it has by virtue of section 1465-55, General Code (103 O. L., 75). Such rules and regulations may authorize you as treasurer of state to receive checks, and may prescribe the effect which shall be given to payment by check, as by affording protection to the payer until and unless the check is returned unpaid; or by denying protection to him on account of any injury which may occur after the acceptance of such a check and before it is ascertained that the check is not good, or in any other way defining the consequences of the receipt of such check, consistently with the requirement that there must be an actual payment into the fund before permanent protection can be afforded. Such rules may not, of course, authorize you to commingle state funds and state insurance funds in the manner in which they have heretofore been commingled with a view to caring for situations of the kind described by you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR—MAY DRIVE AUTOMOBILE OWNED BY HIS MOTHER IN DISCHARGE OF OFFICIAL DUTY.

A county surveyor, when necessary in the discharge of his official duty, may hire an automobile owned by his mother.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. CLARK GOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of July 15, 1915, and your letter explanatory thereof dated August 10, 1915, duly received. The question submitted thereby is as follows:

> "Has the county surveyor the right under the statute to hire an automobile from his mother?"

Section 2786, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "The county surveyor and each assistant and deputy shall be allowed his reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties."

The duties of the surveyor being such as to require his presence in various parts of the county at different times, it follows that he must incur expenses for livery hire, and it would be assumed, of course, that he will secure such services in the most economical manner with due regard for efficiency. There would be no doubt of his authority to hire an automobile when occasion demanded, and if the bills therefor are reasonable the same should be paid.

Aside from the question of good faith there would be no necessity for the commissioners or the auditor to inquire from whom the automobile had been hired, while, as in this case, the hiring of an automobile by a county surveyor from his mother might justify an investigation as to whether the machine really belonged to her or whether it might be the property of the surveyor himself, yet, if as a matter of fact the machine is found to be the property of the mother, there is no legal reason why the bills for hiring thereof should not be paid.

It might be added that the foregoing will not be changed by the new highway law which goes into effect September 6, 1915, as that law contains a provision covering the payment of expenses of the county surveyor when acting as county highway superintendent, being a part of section 138 of said law, 106 O. L., page 612, as follows:

> "In addition thereto the county highway superintendent and his assistants when on official business shall be paid out of the county treasury their actual necessary traveling expenses including livery, board and lodging." (Sec. 7181, G. C.)

Specifically answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that a county surveyor, when it becomes necessary for him in the discharge of his official duties to hire an automobile, may hire the same from his mother.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE SECURITY AUTOMOBILE MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I enclose herewith the articles of incorporation of The Security Automobile Mutual Insurance Company, with my approval attached thereto, as required by law.

You will observe that the form of the certificate differs from that customarily used heretofore. This is because the organization of mutual fire insurance companies is provided for by an act passed in 1914, and referred to in the certificate. Prior to that time insurance companies, other than life, could be organized only with a capital stock. The attorney general in affixing code numbers to this act used numbers which do not fall within the chapter relating to insurance companies other than life generally. Therefore, in order properly to refer to the legislation applicable to the organization of companies of this character it is necessary to mention the act of 1914, as well as the chapter relating generally to fire insurance companies.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

I hereby certify that I have examined the foregoing articles of incorporation of THE SECURITY AUTOMOBILE MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, and that I find them to be in accordance with the provisions of chapter 1, subdivision II, division III, title IX, part second of the General Code, and with the provisions of an act of the general assembly of Ohio entitled "An act relating to the organization and admission of mutual fire insurance companies and to repeal sections 630, etc., of the General Code," passed February 6, 1914, approved February 17, 1914, and filed in the office of the secretary of state February 20, 1914, the sections of said act being designated therein as sections 9607-1 to 9607-29 of the General Code; and that said articles of incorporation are not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state and of the United States.

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROAD DISTRICT—COMPOSED OF TWO OR MORE TOWNSHIPS—WHERE ONE TOWNSHIP LATER BECOMES WHOLLY INCORPORATED INTO AND ABSORBED BY A MUNICIPALITY, SUCH INCORPORATION DISSOLVES EXISTING ROAD DISTRICT AS TO INCURRING NEW OBLIGATIONS BINDING UPON PROPERTY IN SUCH TOWNSHIP—CITY OF YOUNGSTOWN.

Under house bill No. 159, found in 106 O. L., 201, where a road district is composed of two or more townships, and one of such townships after the organization of such road district becomes, or has become, wholly incorporated into and absorbed by a municipality therein, such incorporation of said township automatically works a dissolution of said existing road district, insofar as the incurring of new obligations binding upon the property in such township is concerned. Under the facts presented and assuming that in the annexation of territory to the city of Youngstown all statutory requirements have been complied with, the act in question applies to the road district in Mahoning county consisting of Youngstown, Austintown, Jackson and Boardman townships.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. A. M. HENDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of July 26th and August 4, 1915, relating to the Heinselman bill, being house bill No. 159, amending section 7095, G. C., and supplementing section 7129, G. C., by the enactment of section 7129-1, G. C. The act is found in 106 O. L., 201.

Previous to its amendment by the Heinselman bill, section 7095, G. C., read as follows:

> "Not less than two nor more than four adjacent townships in any county, occupying contiguous and compact territory, may organize into road districts. Such road districts shall be governed and controlled for the purpose of constructing pikes and improving roads, as hereinafter provided by a road commission composed of one member from each township."

The Heinselman bill amended the section by the addition of the following language:

> "Provided that where a road district, organized under the provisions of this law is composed of two or more townships, one of which after the organization of such road district becomes, or has become, wholly incorporated into and absorbed by a municipality therein, such incorporation of said township shall, forthwith, from and after the time when this act goes into effect, without further legislation automatically work a dissolution of said existing road district, in so far as the incurring of new obligations binding upon the property in such township is concerned. Any unfinished contract in such road district shall be completed under the supervisions of the county commissioners and paid for by them out of the funds of such district."

Section 7129-1, G. C., as enacted in the Heinselman bill, reads as follows:

> "Where a road district organized under the provisions of this chapter is dissolved by the provisions of section 7095, the roads built by the district roads commissioners before said dissolution shall be kept in repair by the county commissioners, who shall, for this purpose, levy annually an amount not exceeding one-fourth of one mill upon each dollar's valuation of all the taxable property in said former road district."

The Heinselman bill was passed April 27th, approved May 1st, and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 3rd, and therefore went into effect August 2, 1915. Section 7095, G. C., is expressly repealed by amended senate bill No. 125, found in 106 O. L., 574, which bill will go into effect on September 6, 1915, while section 7129-1, G. C., is not expressly repealed by amended senate bill No. 125. It, therefore, appears that section 7095, G. C., as amended in the Heinselman bill, became the law of the state on August 2nd, and will so remain until the going into effect of amended senate bill No. 125 on September 6, 1915.

You state that there has been a road district in Mahoning county composed of Youngstown, Austintown, Jackson and Boardman townships. About a year ago the city of Youngstown extended its territory to include the whole of Youngstown township. You state that the road commission of the above described district has incurred a very large indebtedness and was recently enjoined by the city of Youngstown from issuing any more bonds, but it does not appear from your communications whether the suit brought by the city is still pending or whether a permanent injunction has been allowed. The following language is quoted from your communication of July 26th:

> "There is included within Youngstown township a public park known as Mill Creek park, covering about 400 acres wholly within Youngstown township, which park is under the control of a park commission provided for by a special act of the legislature creating this park. The city of Youngstown has no control over the park, neither do the county commissioners have any control over this park. However, technically, the whole of the territory of Youngstown township is within the boundaries of the municipality of Youngstown."

You further state that the road commissioners referred to by you are not disposed to submit to the terms of the Heinselman bill and that you anticipate some difficulty should the road commissioners attempt to continue in office, and that if they are permitted to remain in charge of the district and carry out the contracts existing when senate bill No. 125, known as the Cass act, becomes effective, it will very much complicate and interfere with the county commissioners of the county and the county highway superintendent in taking charge of and controlling the road work in Mahoning county.

You conclude your communication of July 26th as follows:

> "It is our opinion that upon the date of becoming effective, this Heinselman bill abolishes the road districts as above described, notwithstanding that Mill Creek park is in nowise controlled by the municipality and we believe that it was intended that the act should become operative where the geographical boundaries of a municipality and the township become identical without respect to the fact that there may be some control within the township and municipality to some extent outside the powers of the municipality. We are somewhat strengthened in our belief because there are other overlapping powers within the city of Youngstown such as the property of Mahoning county wholly controlled by the county authorities, and also federal property, to wit, the postoffice and federal county building and premises within the city of Youngstown and Youngstown township and we believe that there exists in this county such a situation as was contemplated in this bill. We expect to instruct the county commissioners to take charge of all of the property, such as road building, machinery, material and funds of this road district and to carry out all unfinished contracts and unfinished business under the provisions of this act and to enjoin the good roads commission, when the law becomes effective in the event they undertake to exercise their functions in any way, but would like, if possible, between now and that time to receive your opinion upon the whole question involved. If the county commissioners may take up the work under this act, it will very nicely blend with the provisions of the Cass bill with which you are already familiar and save to the county an additional expense of at least $600.00 per month.''

The question of whether Mill Creek park is or is not a part of the city of Youngstown seeming to be the principal question involved in your inquiry, a request for additional information along this line was directed to you on July 31, and under date of August 4th, you transmitted to this office copies of two ordinances of the city of Youngstown, one ordinance authorizing the annexation of certain territory to the city of Youngstown and the other ordinance accepting the allowance and finding of the county commissioners in the matter. In you communication of August 4th, you also cite me to 88 O. L., 31, for the legislation under which Mill Creek park is controlled. You further state that the boundaries of the city of Youngstown, as extended by the local legislation referred to above, are identical with the boundaries of Youngstown township, with the exception that on the eastern side of the city a small amount of additional territory belonging to the adjoining township has been included within the limits of the municipality. In other words, if Mill Creek park is to be regarded as a part of the city of Youngstown, then the city of Youngstown includes all of Youngstown township and a small part of an adjoining township; and Youngstown township would fall within the provision of the Heinselman act for the reason that it has become wholly incorporated into and absorbed by a municipality therein.

I have carefully examined the act referred to by you and found in 88 O. L., 31, being an act to authorize any township in the state having a population at the last federal census and which at any subsequent federal census may have a population of 35,066 to establish a free public park. Waiving the question of the constitutionality of this act which might well be raised upon obvious grounds, it may be observed that the act which is too voluminous to permit of setting it forth in this opinion, does not contain any provision either expressly or impliedly prohibiting the subsequent annexation to a municipality of the territory contained within any part established under the act in question. I have also carefully examined the ordinances submitted by you and do not find therein any provisions evidencing an intention to exempt from their operation Mill Creek park or any other part of Youngstown township. The fact that real estate may be owned and controlled, so far as ownership gives control, by the state or a county or a township or a board of education, is not inconsistent with and does not preclude the annexation of such real estate by a municipality. The same rule would seem to apply with equal force to real estate owned by a township board of park commissioners, and I, therefore, concur in the conclusion expressed by you to the effect that Mill Creek park is now a part of the city of Youngstown, assuming of course that all the statutory requirements relating to the annexation of territory have been fully satisfied. This being true, it follows that upon the going into effect of the Heinselman act on August 2, 1915, the road district referred to by you was automatically dissolved, in so far as the incurring of new obligations binding upon the property of Youngstown township is concerned, and it became the duty of the county commissioners of Mahoning county to take charge of and complete any unfinished contracts in such road district and to pay any sums due or becoming due on such contracts out of the funds of the road district in question, which duty on the part of the county commissioners will continue until the repeal of section 7095, G. C., by amended senate bill No. 125, becomes effective on September 6, 1915, and the going into effect of amended senate bill No. 125 will not serve to revive the road district theretofore automatically dissolved. On and after September 6, 1915, the situation will be governed by the appropriate provisions of amended senate bill No. 125. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CONTRACT—MAY INCORPORATE PROVISION IF WORK IS NOT COMPLETED AT TIME SPECIFIED IN CONTRACT, NO EXTENSION OF TIME SHALL BE GRANTED—FOR EACH DAY'S DELAY, CONTRACTOR SHALL FORFEIT REASONABLE SUM AS LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

The state highway commissioner may lawfully incorporate in a contract for the construction of a highway, a provision to the effect that if for reasons for which the contractor is responsible or which could, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have been avoided by the contractor, the work is not completed at the time specified in the contract, then no extension of time shall be granted, and for each day's delay in the performance of the contract after the time specified therein for its completion, for which delay the contractor is responsible, said contractor shall forfeit a reasonable sum to be fixed by the terms of the contract and agreed upon by the parties to said contract as liquidated damages accruing to the state because of such failure to perform, and to be withheld by the state from any payment or payments due or to become due said contractor upon the proper completion of said contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 13, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "There has been in the past a decided laxity on the part of contractors in completing their work under contract within the time set forth and agreed upon in the specifications and contract, a condition that is very hard for this department to correct.
> "The time fixed for doing the work is in my opinion always reasonable and under ordinary conditions the work should be completed within the time specified.
> "As time is one of the most important factors in a contract, the state always being the loser when a job of work is not completed within a specified time, it seems to me that the progress of the work might be greatly stimulated by refusing an extension of time, or providing in the specifications that no extension be granted and that a specified amount fixed in the contract be deducted for each and every day the contract exceeds the specified time in completing the work under contract.

"This would appear not as a penalty, but as a payment for damages imposed upon the state through the negligence of the contractor.

"I, therefore, respectfully request your opinion as to whether or not such a provision in our contracts would be legal?"

It may be observed in the first instance that the statutes are silent as to the right of the state highway commissioner to provide in a contract for the construction of a highway for the forfeiture of a definite sum by the contractor in case the contract is not completed at the time specified therein and the contractor is responsible for the delay. It, therefore, becomes important to consider what, if any, implied authority exists in the state highway commissioner in this particular.

In this connection permit me to call your attention to an opinion of this department rendered on April 19, 1915, to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, in which opinion the implied authority of boards of county commissioners in this particular was considered. The second question asked by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices and answered in the above cited opinion, was as to the right of a board of county commissioners, in the absence of express statutory authority, to provide for the forfeiture of a definite sum by a contractor in case a contract is not completed at the time specified therein and the contractor is responsible for the delay. After commenting upon the necessity of such a provision in contracts made by boards of county commissioners, it was held that the general authority of the board of county commissioners to make a contract, carries with it the implied authority to incorporate such a provision in said contract. This holding was based upon the proposition that the rule of law applicable to such a provision in a private contract, applies with equal force to a contract made by a board of county commissioners. The conclusion reached was expressed in the following language:

"A board of county commissioners may provide in a contract that for each day's delay in the performance of the contract, after the time specified therein for its completion, for which the contractor is responsible, said contractor shall forfeit a reasonable sum to be fixed by the terms of the contract and agreed upon by the parties to said contract as liquidated damages accruing to the county, because of such failure to perform, and to be withheld by the board of county commissioners from any payment or payments due or to become due said contractor upon the proper completion of said contract."

I am unable to distinguish in principle between the implied right of a board of county commissioners and the implied right of the state highway commissioner in this particular. It is, therefore, my opinion that the state highway commissioner may lawfully incorporate in a contract for the construction of a highway a provision to the effect that if for reasons for which the contractor is responsible or which could, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have been avoided by the contractor, the work is not completed at the time specified in the contract, then no extension of time shall be granted, and for each day's delay in the performance of the contract after the time specified therein for its completion, for which delay the contractor is responsible, said contractor shall forfeit a reasonable sum to be fixed by the terms of the contract and agreed upon by the parties to said contract as liquidated damages accruing to the state because of such failure to perform, and to be withheld by the state from any payment or payments due or to become due said contractor upon the proper completion of said contract.

A copy of the opinion referred to herein is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYES OF COURT HOUSE BUILDING COMMISSION—SUCH EMPLOYES MUST BE CHOSEN FROM ELIGIBLE LIST OF CIVIL SERVICE ACT.

Section 26 of the General Code does not prevent the civil service law of 1913 from applying to "pending proceedings."

The employes of a court house building commission, acting under sections 2333, et seq., G. C., are in the civil service of the county, notwithstanding the commissioners are not county officers and notwithstanding the temporary and special character of the employment.

Such employes hired after the civil service act went into effect must, therefore, be chosen from eligible lists prepared in accordance with said act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter under date of August 18th, from Hon. Charles A. Groom, assistant prosecuting attorney, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Must employments made by a commission acting under sections 2333 et seq. of the General Code, in the building of a court house, be made under the civil service law, when the commission was appointed prior to the passage of the civil service act of 1913, and a contract with the architects, made prior to the date when that act became effective, stipulates that the clerk of the works to be employed by the commission shall be one 'whose competence is approved by the architects?' "

The first question which I have considered in connection with this general question is as to whether or not employes of the court house commission are in the civil service of the county of Hamilton.

Without quoting the building commission statutes it is sufficient to state that they provide for the appointment by the common pleas court of certain persons, who, with the county commissioners, are to constitute a commission for the accomplishment of a certain specific purpose, to wit, the construction of a building. When that purpose is accomplished the commission ceases to exist and the service of all its employes is terminated. Due to the fact, then, that such a service is temporary and particular, can it be regarded as within the civil service of the county; or is not the civil service of the county inclusive only of the regular and permanent positions or employments under authority of the county?

No great help is obtainable on this point from the civil service act itself. That act, it is true, contains specific provisions for the making of temporary and special appointments in the competitive class; and it is significant to note that the provisions of section 14 of the act of 1913, now in effect, in this particular relate to services for a temporary period "not to exceed one month," the inference being that services required for a temporary period exceeding one month are to be secured in the manner provided by the remainder of the act.

The definition of the term "civil service" in section 1 of the act referred to (103 O. L., 698) is:

> "The term 'civil service' includes all officers and positions of trust or employment, including mechanics, artisans and laborers in the service of the state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof."

To be precise, there are two questions involved:

> "(1) Does the idea of 'civil service' or the idea embraced in the word 'service' denote continuity or permanency?
> "(2) Does the phrase 'the service of the county' include persons not employed by one of the regular county governmental agencies?"

The very fact that the civil service act makes special provision for temporary appointments for periods not exceeding one month signifies, with respect to the first question, that the word "service" does not necessarily denote permanency. However, there is authority available on this point. It is well known that our civil service law and the constitutional provision which it is intended to execute are based upon the legislative and constitutional provisions, respectively, of New York, where the civil service idea may be said to have had its birth.

In the case of People ex rel. v. Gilroy, 15 N. Y. Supp., 242, it was held that an inspector on the work of laying mains of a certain public service company, who was employed for that service only and who was to be paid by the company, was not within the then existing statutory civil service. The court bases its decision on both grounds suggested by the statement of facts, namely: His employment was not continuous, and the work was not to be paid for by the city.

However, in People ex rel. v. Civil Service Boards, 41 Hun., 287, it was held that a clerk employed by the commissioners for the construction of a new aqueduct for the city of New York was within the civil service of the city of New York, and could not be employed by the commissioners save after examination as required by the civil service act at that time in force and applicable to the city of New York.

This case appears to me to be decisive of both the two questions just suggested. The commission for the construction of the aqueduct therein involved was engaged in an undertaking of identically the same character as the court house commission about which you inquire. The relation it sustained to the regular government of the city of New York was even more remote than the relation sustained by the court house commission to the regular government of Hamilton county; for it appears in the report of the case that the aqueduct commission was provided for by special act of the state legislature and its members were designated by the act itself. Yet, the work being carried on for the benefit of the city, and when completed to become the property of the city and to be paid for by it, it was held that it was a municipal undertaking and persons engaged in it were in the service of the city.

In the opinion of Daniels, J., of the supreme court, I find the following:

> "The property required for the enterprise was to be acquired by the city of New York, and the expenses of both the property and the work were to be provided for and paid by the city. The state at large had no special interest whatever in the land to be obtained or the ends to be secured, but they were for the benefit, advantage and proprietorship of the city itself, and that was sufficient to constitute the persons who might be employed and engaged in it, officers, agents, or employes of the city. * * * It is not necessary to inquire whether he (the relator) will, in that manner, become an officer of the city, for this section of the statute (the civil service act) is not restricted to that class of individuals, but it includes, generally, all clerks and persons in the civil service of the city. The employment he desired to obtain was a part of that civil service. * * *"

The case, then, decides that permanency of position is not an essential element of the civil service idea, and that where a specific undertaking is carried on for the benefit of and at the expense of a subdivision, persons engaged therein and whose compensation is paid by such subdivision are in the service of the subdivision for the purpose of the civil service law, although their superiors may not be officers of the subdivision.

From this it follows that decisions like those which Mr. Groom cites, to the effect that the building commission, being a body with independent powers and duties, is not a county board and its members are not county officers, are not in point.

I have also considered the question as to whether or not the civil service act could have any effect upon the powers and duties of the building commission. This question is raised by the decision of the supreme court of this state in State ex rel. v. Cass, 84 O. S., 443, affirming a decision in 32 C. C., 208. In this case it was held that the construction of a court house under the statutes referred to constitutes a "proceeding" within the meaning of what is now section 26 of the General Code, which provides generally that the repeal or amendment of a statute shall not affect pending proceedings, unless otherwise specifically provided in the repealing or amending act.

The decision in the case cited was to the effect that a change in the law requiring competitive bids to be invited on all branches of the work did not apply to a building commission which had been appointed prior to the amendment; so that such commission might still proceed under the law as it existed when the commission was appointed, which law did not require that all branches of the work be let on competitive bids, etc.

The language of Fillius, J., at page 219, of the Circuit Court Report, is as follows:

> "The amendment for which so much is claimed * * * is not effectual to limit or restrict the powers of the commission granted by the original act so far as the proceeding relative to this court house is concerned."

It is argued on the authority of this case that because the civil service act, which became effective after the proceeding in question was instituted, restricts the powers of the building commissioners as compared with those possessed by them prior to its passage, therefore, it cannot apply to this particular case.

In my judgment, the logic of this argument is sound, if the major premise thereof can be sustained. Its application, however, depends upon whether or not section 26 of the General Code applies to the operation of the civil service law.

Section 26 of the General Code is a statute. It does not embody any constitutional principle, and its terms clearly import that it is only to be applied in the absence of a contrary legislative will clearly expressed. The civil service law is not an ordinary statute. It was passed in compliance with the mandate of article XV, section 10 of the constitution, which provides that:

> "Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the state, the several counties, and cities, shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by competitive examinations. Laws shall be passed providing for the enforcement of this provision."

Much space might be devoted to a discussion of the exact effect of the constitutional provision. It seems to me that, in part at least, it is self-executing. The question as to its effect would be immediately raised if the general assembly were to attempt to repeal all the civil service laws. Waiving this question, however, it is clear that whatever effect article XV, section 10, may have had, it was not in any way controlled by section 26 of the General Code. That is to say, in so far as article XV, section 10, may have had an implied repealing or amending effect upon existing statutes there could not be read into it the general saving clause provided for by section 26 of the General Code. (See McMaster v. Keller, 1 C. C., 478.)

I think that the civil service act of 1913 must be given as broad an effect and operation as article XV, section 10 requires. That is, the legislature will be presumed to have intended to exert to the utmost the power and duty vested in and imposed upon it by the constitutional provision.

For these reasons I do not think that the civil service act of 1913 is in any way governed by section 26 of the General Code, and that accordingly there is no saving therein as to pending proceedings, in so far as such proceedings may be affected by its terms.

In another view of the same question there is some doubt in my mind as to whether providing for the creation of an eligible list from which appointments to positions in the civil service may be made is any real or substantial limitation or restriction upon the powers of the building commission, within the purview of the decision cited. That is to say, I do not think that the civil service act can be regarded as a "repeal" or "amendment" of the building commission act. It is certain it is not an express repeal or amendment, and there is some doubt as to whether section 26 applies, save in cases of express repeal or amendment. It is not even an implied amendment of the former act. The power of the commissioners to employ still resides in them, and though qualified in a sense by the requirement that employment shall be made from the eligible list, such qualification is not, in the exact sense at least, an amendment of the prior statute.

In Railroad v. Railroad, 72 O. S., 368, the second branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "The act passed May 10, 1902, to provide for one steam railroad crossing another steam railroad is made to take effect and be in force from and after its passage, and being original legislation and not an amendment of a statute, section 79, Revised Statutes, does not exempt pending actions or proceedings from its application. * * *"

An examination of the opinion in the case cited shows that there was a new act which was admittedly inconsistent with the provisions of the pre-existing law.

Accordingly, it worked a change in the law, which is sometimes loosely spoken of as an "implied repeal or amendment." As a matter of fact, there was no amendment or repeal at all, but merely a new law which, by reason of its later enactment, superseded the old.

In the opinion of the court, per Summers, J., it is said:

> "It is to be observed that this act was neither a repeal nor an amendment of a statute, but original legislation."

The application of this case to the question at hand is perhaps not perfect. I think it must be admitted that it is inconsistent with the earlier decision in Railroad Co. v. Hedges, 63 O. S., 339. However, the earlier decision is per curiam and the later case seems to be better considered. On its authority, unless the mere enactment of a law on an entirely new subject of legislation can be regarded as a "repeal or amendment" of all inconsistent statutes within the meaning of section 26, the last named section does not apply; and, for reasons which I have suggested, I do not believe that within the purview of said section 26 the process sometimes inaccurately spoken of as an "implied repeal or amendment" can be regarded as a repeal or amendment.

However, there is a third, and in itself conclusive, reason why section 26, even if it could apply to a statute like the civil service act in the face of the two considerations just discussed, does not actually apply in this instance, for said section 26 provides a standing rule of statutory interpretation merely, which rule is not to be applied if it is "otherwise expressly provided in the amending or repealing act."

Regarding for the sake of argument the civil service law as an "amending or repealing act," I think it clearly appears from an examination of its provisions that the intention to make it applicable to pending proceedings is evinced by things which are found "expressly provided" therein.

In the first place, section 2 of the civil service act (section 486-2, G. C.) expressly provides that on and after January 1, 1914, all appointments and promotions in the civil service which the act covers "shall be made only according to merit and fitness to be ascertained as far as practicable by examination, etc."

In the second place, the act embodies a section which is specifically designated as a "schedule." (See section 486-31.) It is well known that the office of a schedule is to express fully the intention of the legislative body as to the going into effect of the law. Section 486-31 preserves certain existing things, such as existing eligible lists and the status of officers and employes in the classified service holding their positions under existing civil service laws, etc. By expressly preserving these existing conditions did not the legislature very conclusively show the intention that no other existing condition should be preserved? Very slight evidence is all that is required to show that the legislature does not intend section 26 to apply. (See Friend v. Levy, 76 O. S. 26.)

Mr. Groom calls attention to the fact that if the civil service law be regarded as applicable it would impair the obligation of the architects' contract. It is sufficient to say in answer to this that although the architect is mentioned in the section along with the other employes of the commission, in practice and in substance architects employed on public works are really independent contractors and not servants or employes, and the question is, therefore, whether the civil service act can be held to apply at all. But even if it should be deemed applicable, it is clear that it could not, for reasons stated by Mr. Groom, in any way impair the obligation of a contract entered into prior to the date on which it became effective.

This department has previously held that employment contracts for specific periods of time or for performance of specific services were not affected in any way by the civil service law, even though the positions involved were in the classified service thereunder.

Mr. Groom also observes that the provisions of the building commission act are special and will be regarded as an exception to the general provisions of the civil service law. I do not think this point can be sustained. The civil service law is comprehensive in its terms and though an office or employment be provided for by a special act, it will not be deemed, on that account, to be not subject to the provisions of the civil service law. To hold otherwise would deprive the civil service act of any real force and effect whatsoever.

At first glance it appeared to me that to impose civil service regulations upon the selection of employes by the building commissioners would be violative of the contract of the architects. I observe, however, that the stipulation relative to the approval of competency by the architects relates only to the chief clerk of the works, and Mr. Groom's letter makes it clear that the chief clerk of the works has already been employed, while his question relates to the employment of additional clerks.

For all of the foregoing reasons, then, I am of the opinion that the additional clerks and employes now required by the building commission must be employed under the civil service regulations.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—EXISTING STATUTES NOR CASS HIGHWAY LAW PROVIDE ANY SCHEME OF CO-OPERATION ROAD IMPROVEMENT TO BE PARTICIPATED IN BY STATE, COUNTY AND CITY WHERE CORPORATION LINE OF CITY IS CENTER LINE OF INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY OR MAIN MARKET ROAD.

Neither the existing statutes, nor the Cass highway law provide any scheme of co-operative road improvement to be participated in by the state, a county and a city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 24, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 16, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "We have received application from the commissioners of Fairfield county of the date of December 21, 1914, for the improvement of about three miles of the Lancaster-Newark I. C. H., No. 359, Fairfield county.
> "Plans for this improvement have been made and same show that over a distance of 1,053.5 feet from the beginning of the road, the corporation line of the city of Lancaster lies in the center of the road.
> "The topography of the road at the beginning is such that a permanent improvement should not be made without a change in grade. For this reason, it will not be possible for this department to improve the half of the road lying outside of the city of Lancaster until the city of Lancaster simultaneously improves the half lying within the city. It is, therefore, only possible to carry on this improvement through the agency of a single contractor, or firm of contractors.

"At a meeting of commissioners held sometime during the winter, resolutions were passed agreeing to the improvement of the road and agreeing to pay the cost of the construction for that part lying within the city.

"With the above facts before you, I would be glad to have your opinion in the matter of letting contract for this work—stating:

"First. Whether it is possible, under the law, to let a contract for the entire road and assess the portion of the cost within the city of Lancaster to that corporation, and,

"Second. If this is not possible, whether an arrangement can be made by which this department and the city of Lancaster can enter into separate contracts with the same individual, or firm, to carry on the improvement under the direction of this department.

"It is our desire to enter into the contract for the improvement of the above at an early date and would be glad to have you render me an opinion at as early a date as possible."

Replying to your first question, it should be observed that under the law now in force it is impossible for the state highway department, under any conditions, to lawfully engage in the improvement of a road inside the limits of a city. Section 1186, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 452, provides that each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways shall be accompanied by a proper certified resolution of the county commissioners, stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the highway therein described and that the description does not include any operation of the highway in the limits of any municipality. So far as your present inquiry is concerned, the situation will not be changed by the going into effect on September 6, 1915, of amended senate bill No. 125, for while by section 229 of amended senate bill No. 229 being section 1231-3, G. C., the state highway commissioner is authorized, under certain conditions, to extend a proposed road improvement into or through a village, this authorization does not go so far as to authorize the state highway commissioner to extend a proposed improvement into or through a city. It will, therefore, be impossible for the state highway department, either under the existing statutes or under the provisions of amended senate bill No. 125, when said bill goes into effect, to let a contract for the entire road and assess the cost of building that portion of the road within the city of Lancaster against said city. In fact, either under the existing statutes or under amended senate bill No. 125, there is no situation or condition under which the state highway department can let a contract for or assume any supervision or control over the building of a road inside the corporate limits of the city of Lancaster.

Replying to your second question, the practical difficulty presents itself in that both under existing statutes and under amended senate bill No. 125, the state highway commissioner is required to award all contracts of this class at competitive bidding. It is provided by section 1201, G. C., 103 O. L., 455, that the state highway commissioner shall award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder. It is provided by section 199 of amended senate bill No. 125, being section 1206, G. C., that the state highway commissioner shall award the contract to the lowest and best bidder. It is sufficient for the purposes of this opinion to observe that similar restrictions exist in the letting of contracts by municipal corporations where the contracts are of the magnitude which it is obvious would be possessed by a contract for the improvement of that part of the road now under consideration and situated within the city of Lancaster, without discussing minutely such restrictions. If, therefore, the state highway commissioner should undertake to regrade and surface that part of the road in question outside of the city, and the city should undertake to regrade and surface that part of the road inside the city, both contracts would have to be let at competitive bidding and there could be no assurance that one contractor would be successful in obtaining both contracts, even if he should submit bids on both. The practical difficulties that would arise in drawing plans and specifications and making estimates to meet a situation where one contractor might do the work in the city and another contractor the work outside the city, are too obvious to require comment. In making both fills and cuts, it is manifest that the contractor first improving the road would necessarily be required to do a considerable amount of work that would accrue to the benefit of the contractor who might follow him upon what might be termed the other half of the work. I am unable to suggest any practical solution of the difficulty presented by you and can only observe that the situation is one which is not met by the existing statutes, and that the only remedy is in legislative action providing a co-operative scheme of road improvement for the state, a county and a city, where the corporation line of a city is the center line of an intercounty highway or main market road.

The above must not be taken as indicating that there is no method of improving so much of the road in question as is divided along its center line by the corporation line of the city of Lancaster, the holding being merely that neither the present law nor the Cass highway law furnishes any scheme by which the state, county and city can co-operate in making the improvement. I deem it proper in this connection to call your attention to the provisions of sections 128 to 133, inclusive, of the Cass highway law, being sections 6949 to 6954, inclusive, of the General Code, which will become effective on September 6th, next. These sections will authorize the board of county commissioners to extend a proposed road improvement into or through a municipality with the consent of the council of the municipality, the cost to be divided between the city and county as may be agreed. When they become effective they will furnish a method by which the city of Lancaster and Fairfield county may co-operate in the improvement of that part of the highway lying partly within and partly without the city, but they will not authorize co-operation in such improvement on the part of the state highway department.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF ROADS IN GUERNSEY AND WOOD COUNTIES, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 21, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Guernsey County, Cambridge-Caldwell Road, Petition No. 1549, I. C. H. No. 353;

Guernsey County, Cambridge-Caldwell Road, Petition No. 1549, I. C. H. No. 353;

Guernsey County, Steubenville-Cambridge Road, Petition No. 661, I. C. H., No. 26;

Wood County, Toledo-Perrysburg Road, Petition No. 1418, I. C. H. No. 53.

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY FURNISH JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS COURT WITH AN OFFICE AND EQUIP SAME WITH FURNISHINGS—DUTY TO PROVIDE JUDGE WITH ALL LAW BOOKS REASONABLY NECESSARY FOR USE OF HIS OFFICE.

It is proper for county commissioners under the provisions of section 2419, G. C., to furnish a judge of the court of common pleas an office and equip it with furnishings, and their duty to provide all law books reasonably necessary for his use in the administration of his office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1915.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 19, 1915, in which you state that your judge of the court of common pleas has ordered certain law books, and you inquire whether the county commissioners can pay for office furnishings and law books for a judge of the court of common pleas under the provisions of section 2460, G. C., and section 2570, G. C.

You further state that you can find no section of the statute or law under which a judge of the court of common pleas can furnish his office and equip it with law books at the expense of the county.

It may be stated, primarily, that there is no statutory authority given to any judge of the court of common pleas to purchase, at the expense of the county, law books for use in his office or court room. The only express provision of the Code applying to this subject is found in section 1531, G. C., as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 414, which limits such right to the court of appeals. It may be stated, therefore, that a judge of the court of common pleas cannot legally obligate the county to pay for furnishings and law books for his office or court room, when ordered by him without the approval of some other duly constituted authority.

You inquire, however, whether the commissioners of your county can pay for furnishings and books for a judge of the court of common pleas under the provisions of sections 2460, G. C., and 2570, G. C.

Since June 1, 1831, it has been the statutory duty of the county commissioners to erect and maintain court houses and offices for county officials in their respective counties. This duty was first imposed by section 1 of an act passed March 31, 1831, and found in volume 29, page 315, Ohio Laws. Without attempting to follow the various changes and amendments in and to this act, it is sufficient to say that section 1 of said act is now known as section 2419 of the General Code, and this section still imposes said duty upon the county commissioners in each county.

In the case of Commissioners of Trumbull County v. Hutchins, 11 Ohio, 369, the court, in commenting upon this subject, said:

> "The administration of justice is a public charge and so is everything necessary to its administration. It is the legal duty of the county commissioners to furnish all things coupled with the administration of justice within the limits of their own county. It is their duty to furnish suitable and convenient buildings for holding court at the expense of the county."

This interpretation of the law has never, to my knowledge, been changed, modified or questioned.

In another case, that of Mayhew v. Commissioners of Hamilton County, 1st Disney, 188, the court, again commenting upon the same subject-matter, says:

> "We remark that it is the duty of the public to make suitable provisions for the administration of justice. This includes not merely the organization of courts, but the providing of court rooms, with all the appendages, furniture and appointments whatsoever, necessary to render them comfortable to the courts and commodious to the public. These, under our system, with the exception of judges' salaries, are uniformly chargeable upon the county treasury, when other provision is not made; each county being, for this and other purposes of public concern, a political organization represented by the county commissioners. Section 1 of the act providing for the erection of public buildings, authorizes and empowers the commissioners to build and furnish suitable court houses, etc., and to provide therein rooms for clerks of courts, sheriffs and other county officers. Section 3 of the same act requires the commissioners to furnish and keep them in repair. These words are not used in a restricted sense, but in a general and enlarged one, embracing all that is necessary and proper to make, and to keep them in a condition, commodious and comfortable for the transaction of the public business, including all the labor requisite for that purpose."

The furnishing of an office for a judge of the court of common pleas and of law books necessary to him in the administration of his duties comes clearly within the principles announced in the foregoing cases, and within the express provisions of section 2419, supra. Law books are now indispensable to the expeditious and proper administration of business in our courts. Without them a judge would be helpless and it would seem that it would require no argument to show that they are as necessary to him in the conduct of his office as are record books to the clerk of his court, or tax duplicates to a county treasurer.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that it is proper for the county commissioners to furnish a judge of the court of common pleas with an office and to equip it with furnishings and their duty to furnish all law books reasonably necessary for the administration of his office and that the same would come within those "things which are coupled with the administration of justice," as defined by the supreme court, supra, and within the provisions of said section 2419, and that the payment therefor is an obligation which the county commissioners may allow and pay under their general powers.

It would be more satisfactory, however, and under a strict construction of the statutes the only legal method, to have an order for such books or furnishings first submitted to the county commissioners and approved by them, in which case no question of the legality of the claim could arise and no differences of opinion as to its necessity could interfere with its allowance.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION AND COMPLETION OF ADDITIONS AND ALTERATIONS IN FOURTH FLOOR OF OHIO STATE CAPITOL ANNEX.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1915.

HON. BENSON W. HOUGH, Adjutant General, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have carefully examined the contract entered into by you on August 23, 1915, with Ray W. Loomis and Fred E. Fletcher for the construction and completion of the additions and alterations in the fourth floor in the Ohio state capitol annex, as per plans and specifications approved July 21, 1915; and also the bond which is offered by said contractors, with the American Surety Company of New York as surety, and find the same in all respects in compliance with law and have, therefore, this day approved and filed the same in the office of the auditor of state.

I am herewith returning to you the other bids submitted at the same time, also two copies of the contract as entered into and a copy of the bond.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROPERTY OF STATE AND COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARDS SHOULD BE TAKEN OVER BY ADJUTANT GENERAL WHEN SAID BOARDS CEASE TO EXIST—LEASES FOR DISTRICT BOARDS SHALL BE MADE BY ADJUTANT GENERAL—RENT SHALL BE APPROVED BY BUDGET COMMISSIONER.

When the state and county liquor licensing boards cease to exist by virtue of the going into effect of the act found in 106 O. L., 560, the adjutant general should take over the property on behalf of the state.

Leases for district liquor licensing boards shall be made by the adjutant general, subject to the approval of the governor, and the rent provided for therein shall receive the approval of the state budget commissioner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1915.

HON. BENSON W. HOUGH, Adjutant General of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from Colonel E. S. Bryant, assistant adjutant general, under date of August 19, 1915, requesting my written opinion as follows:

"I am advised that the county liquor licensing boards go out of office August 31, 1915; that the office furnishings were mostly furnished by the state liquor licensing commission, and paid for by state funds.

"When the state and county boards are abolished, are there any duties of the adjutant general relative to the custody and disposition of such furnishings used by them?

"Under the provision of section 146-106, O. L., 319, is the adjutant general required to rent offices for the district liquor licensing boards provided for in section 1261-20, 106 O. L., 566?"

The act creating the state liquor licensing board is found in 103 O. L., at pages 216 et seq., the sections being known as sections 1261-16 to 1261-73 of the General Code.

Under the provisions of section 1261-22 (103 O. L., 218), the state is divided into licensing districts, each county constituting a district, and it is provided that there shall be a board consisting of two commissioners, representing the state, to be known as "The ---------- county liquor licensing board," to be appointed by the state liquor licensing board, one member of which was to hold office for two years from the second Wednesday in August, 1913, and the other for four years from the same date, and until their successors are respectively appointed and qualified, and that beginning with the second Wednesday in August, 1915, the state board shall appoint one commissioner biennially, to hold office for four years and until his successor is appointed and qualified.

This section is repealed by the act found in 106 O. L., at page 560.

Under the provisions of the act found in 103 O. L., 216, the county liquor licensing boards were authorized to provide themselves with books, stationery and other paraphernalia for an office which they were authorized to provide, the expenses to be approved by the state board and to be paid in the same manner as the expenses of the state board, which is by voucher of the state board on warrant of the state auditor on the state treasurer.

It is, therefore, apparent that the office furnishings provided for the county boards were paid for by the state and that, therefore, the same is the property of the state.

The act found in 106 O. L. at page 560, hereinbefore referred to, was filed in the office of the secretary of state on the 5th day of June, 1915, and, consequently, will not become operative until midnight of September 3, 1915, and, therefore, the county liquor licensing boards as now constituted will continue in the discharge of their duties until the time just foregoing mentioned, and will not go out of office on August 31, 1915, as suggested in the letter hereinbefore set out.

I have searched the statutes in vain to find any authority devolving upon the adjutant general to take charge and dispose of property which belongs to the state and which, because of the abolishment of an office, leaves the same in charge of no one. There does not seem to be any provision of law that I can find which provides for the custody and disposition of such property.

However, there has been a custom for many years that all property that is not needed by a particular department, board or commission shall be surrendered to the adjutant general and his receipt taken therefor, he thereby becoming the custodian of the same. The custom has also been in vogue for many years in this state that such property so obtained by the adjutant general may be disposed of by him either by condemnation and sale, or by transfer to some other department, board or commission.

Such having been the custom for many years, and there being no direct provision of law as to the disposition of the property of a board or commission that has been abolished, I am of the opinion that the adjutant general should, as soon as the statute abolishing the county liquor licensing boards goes into effect, take charge of the property that is left by said county liquor licensing boards.

Your next question relative to the renting of offices for the district liquor licensing boards provided for in the act found in 106 O. L. at page 560, involves consideration of section 146 of the General Code, as amended in 106 O. L., 319, and which was filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 20, 1915, and will, therefore, go into effect prior to the going into effect of the act found in 106 O. L., page 560.

In the act found in 106 O. L., 560, section 7 thereof—designated as section 1261-27, G. C.—provides that the district liquor licensing boards shall, upon organization, "select some suitable city or village within its districts for its office."

However, section 146 as amended, hereinbefore referred to, provides that the adjutant general "shall rent all offices, buildings, and rooms for all officers, commissions, departments and bureaus of the state located outside the state house and execute all leases in writing for the same on behalf of the state subject to the approval of the governor, and deposit a copy thereof in the office of the secretary of state within ten days after the lease has been executed."

The district liquor licensing boards are a branch of the state government for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act locally.

Under the provisions of section 1261-22, being section 1 of said act, the state is divided into liquor licensing districts and a board is to be appointed for each such district. The members of the board have a fixed term of office, are required to give bond, and exercise a part of the sovereignty of the state in the performance of their duties. This constitutes such members "officers," and since the state is divided into liquor licensing districts, they are thereby constituted "state officers," and since they are required to select for their office some suitable city or village within their district, such offices will be located "outside the state house."

By reason of the provisions of section 146, G. C., as amended, hereinbefore in part set out, I am of the opinion that the adjutant general is required to rent the offices for the district liquor licensing boards after such boards have selected a suitable city or village in which their offices shall be located, the lease for the premises being subject to the approval of the governor.

In the act found in 106 O. L., 560, section 8 thereof—designated as section 1261-28 of the General Code—provides that all expenses of each district liquor licensing board "shall be subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner."

The rent to be paid under leases made by the adjutant general's department on behalf of the district liquor licensing boards must be met by the said district liquor licensing boards, and since such expense is subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner, I am of the opinion that while the adjutant general is required to rent offices for such boards, subject to the approval of the governor, nevertheless, since the expenses are to be subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner, the amount of rent provided for in each such lease should likewise be approved by the state budget commissioner.

Since the district liquor licensing boards are in every practical sense the successors of the county liquor licensing boards in the enforcement of the liquor license law, and since under the provisions of section 146, G. C., as amended, the adjutant general is given "full control and supervision of fixing and placing of all offices, commissions, departments and bureaus of the state in offices, buildings and rooms outside the state house when the same cannot be placed therein," I am of the opinion that the furniture which is taken charge of by the adjutant general at the time of the going out of office of the county liquor licensing boards may be used in furnishing, in so far as necessary, the offices of the district liquor licensing boards.

Specifically answering your questions, therefore, I am of the opinion

(1) That when the state and county liquor licensing boards are abolished the furnishings used by such boards are to be taken over by the adjutant general, and so much thereof as is necessary may be used by him in furnishing the offices of the state liquor traffic inspector and the district liquor licensing boards.

(2) That the adjutant general is required to rent the offices for the district liquor licensing boards, subject to the approval of the governor, the amount of rent for such offices to receive the approval of the state budget commissioner.

I wish to note in passing that section 1261-28, as found in 103 O. L., at page 220, was not specifically repealed by the act found in 106 O. L., 560, but the provisions of section 8 of such act, since the same contains practically the same provisions as are found in section 1261-28 (103 O. L., 220), will repeal, by implication, said last named section. But even if this were not so, and each district liquor licensing board was authorized to provide itself with an office, nevertheless, such provision would be repealed by implication by the amendment of section 146, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 319.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS AND CLERKS OF SUCH BOARDS—MAY NOT BE PAID COMPENSATION UNDER SECTION 4990, G. C., FOR SERVICES IN CONDUCTING PRIMARY ELECTIONS IN THOSE COUNTIES IN WHICH NO PRIMARY ELECTION IS AUTHORIZED—CONSTITUTIONAL INHIBITION.

Deputy state supervisors of elections and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors of elections may not be paid compensation under authority of section 4990, G. C., for services in conducting primary elections in those counties in which no primary election is authorized to be held by reason of the provisions of article V, section 7 of the constitution and section 4951, G. C., 103 O. L., 476.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 12, 1915, as follows:

> "May the members and clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections be paid any compensation under the provisions of section 4990, General Code, in counties where no primaries were held because of no election precinct in the county having over two thousand population?"

It is a well established rule that public officials are entitled to only such salaries, emoluments, perquisites, fees and compensation as are expressly provided by law.

The only authority of law for compensation of deputy state supervisors of elections and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors of elections for holding primary elections is found in section 4990, G. C., to which you refer and which provides as follows:

> "For their services in conducting primary elections, members of boards of deputy state supervisors shall each receive for his services the sum of two dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his county, and judges and clerks of election shall receive the same compensation as is provided by law for such officers at general elections."

It will be observed that this section provides for a determinate compensation to be paid for a specific and particular service as distinguished from a salary to be paid to an officer for a prescribed period of time by reason of his incumbency in office and the discharge of the general duties thereof, regardless of whether or not the performance of any such duties devolved upon the officer during such prescribed period. The compensation herein prescribed is for services in conducting primary elections. Manifestly, if no such primary election may be lawfully held, compensation for services rendered in conducting the same could not be lawfully claimed, for in the very nature of things no such services could be rendered. It would not be seriously contended that, if by reason of constitutional amendment and legislative enactment all primary elections throughout the state were abolished without express repeal of section 4990 supra, any deputy state supervisor of elections could be lawfully paid for services in conducting such election. Section 4990 provides for an additional compensation for the performance of additional duties imposed upon the particular officers therein named and without the imposition of such additional duties no reason for the compensation exists.

The case here under consideration, where no primary election may be lawfully held, is clearly distinguishable from the case of State ex rel. vs. Hogg, 19 C. C. (n. s.) 55, in which it was held that where a primary is authorized to be held within a county, the legal basis of calculation of the compensation of the county board of elections and clerk thereof is the total number of precincts in the county, notwithstanding primaries were not held in each of such precincts.

Article V, section 7, of the constitution, and section 4951, G. C., 103 O. L., 476, enacted pursuant thereto, provide that primary elections shall not be held for the nomination of township officers or for the officers of municipalities of less than two thousand population unless petitioned for by a majority of the electors of such township or municipality.

I am, therefore, of opinion that no compensation may be paid to deputy state supervisors of elections and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors of elections under authority of section 4990, G. C., for services in conducting a primary election on August 10, 1915, in those counties in which by reason of the provisions of article V, section 7, and section 4951, G. C., 103 O. L., 476, no such primary election could have been then lawfully held.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CERTIFICATE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY OWNED BY THE SPENCERIAN COLLEGE COMPANY—SHOULD CONTAIN SCHEDULE OF KIND AND VALUE OF PROPERTY OWNED BY INSTITUTION—VALUE OF PROPERTY IN SUCH STATEMENT SHOULD BE VERIFIED BY OATHS OF TRUSTEES OF SAID INSTITUTION.

The certificate required to be filed in the office of the secretary of state under provision of section 9922, G. C., should contain a schedule of the kind and value of the property owned by the institution mentioned in said section and the statement of the value of said property should be verified by the oaths of the trustees of said institution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 23rd, submitting for my approval a certificate of personal property owned by the Spencerian College Company, of Cleveland, Ohio. You enclose with said certificate a communication from said company, under date of August 21, 1915, also the check of said company, made payable to the secretary of state, for the sum of five dollars, as the fee for filing said certificate.

You state that the superintendent of public instruction has sent to you the following communication:

> "This is to certify that the Spencerian school of Cleveland has filed its course of study in this office in accordance with section 9923 of the General Code, and that the equipment as to faculty and other facilities for carrying out such course are proportioned to its property and to the number of students in actual attendance, so as to warrant the issuing of degrees by the trustees thereof."

Section 9922, G. C., provides as follows:

> "When a college, university, or other institution of learning incorporated for the purpose of promoting education, religion, morality, or the fine arts, has acquired real or personal property, of twenty-five thousand dollars in value, has filed in the office of the secretary of state a schedule of the kind and value of such property, verified by the oaths of its trustees, such trustees may appoint a president, professors, tutors, and any other necessary agents and officers, fix the compensation of each, and enact such by-laws consistent with the laws of this state and the United States, for the government of the institution, and for conducting the affairs of the corporation, as they deem necessary. On the recommendation of the faculty, the trustees also may confer all the degrees and honors conferred by colleges and universities of the United States, and such others having reference to the course of study, and the accomplishments of the student, as they deem proper."

Section 9923, G. C. (104 O. L., 236), provides as follows:

> "But no college or university shall confer any degree until the president or board of trustees thereof has filed with the secretary of state a certificate issued by the superintendent of public instruction that the course of study in such institution has been filed in his office, and that the equipment as to faculty and other facilities for carrying out such course are proportioned to its property and the number of students in actual attendance so as to warrant the issuing of degrees by the trustees thereof.''

While it appears that the Spencerian College Company owns personal property of sufficient value to bring the Spencerian School of Cleveland within the provisions of section 9922, G. C., and that the certificate required by the provisions of section 9923, G. C., as amended, has been issued by the superintendent of public instruction and has been filed in your office, I find upon examining the certificate submitted by you that the same does not contain a schedule of the kind and value of the personal property, owned by the Spencerian College Company. Moreover the statement of the value of the personal property of said company is verified by the oaths of the president and secertary of said company, while the provisions of section 9922, G. C., require that said statement shall be verified by the oaths of the trustees of said school.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that said certificate does not comply with the requirements of said section 9922, G. C., and I am returning the same without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DISTRICT LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—MEMBER OF DISTRICT APPOINTING BOARD MAY NOT HOLD CLERKSHIP UNDER DISTRICT LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD.

A member of the district appointing board may not hold a clerkship or other position under the district liquor licensing boards, as created by amended senate bill No. 307, 106 O. L., 560.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 18, 1915, as follows:

> ''We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> ''Can a member of the appointing board of a district liquor license commission under the new law, to become effective in September, hold a clerkship or other position under the district board?''

There is found no express statutory inhibition against a member of the district appointing board being chosen as a clerk or other authorized employe of the board of district supervisors or district liquor licensing board of any liquor licensing district, under amended senate bill No. 307, 106 O. L., 560. The answer to your inquiry then turns upon whether or not the positions of clerk or employe of the district liquor licensing board are incompatible with the office of member of the appointing board, a determination of which involves a consideration of the duties, powers and relationship of the two positions.

By the provisions of section 1261-22b, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, the county clerks, recorders and presidents of boards of county commissioners are constituted ex-officio members of the appointing board of the liquor licensing district in which such county is located. The principal functions of the appointing boards under sections 1261-22c and 1261-23, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, are the appointment of two district liquor traffic supervisors for their respective districts, who shall constitute the district liquor licensing boards of the several districts of the state, and to fix the salaries of such supervisors subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner. A further power and authority to be exercised by the appointing boards is the removal from office of the members of the district liquor licensing boards under the provisions of section 1261-25, G. C., 106 O. L., 565, for any violation of the rules and regulations referred to in section 1261-24, G. C., or for any misconduct in office, nonfeasance, bribery, incompetency, incapacity, gross neglect of duty or gross immorality upon complaint filed by the state inspector or any person.

The district liquor licensing board so appointed, whose compensation is fixed in the first instance by the appointing board and who are subject to removal from office by the appointing board for the causes above stated, is authorized under the provisions of section 1261-27, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, to select a secretary and to fix his compensation subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner. Under section 1261-28, G. C., 106 O. L., 563, the district liquor licensing board is further authorized to employ such clerks and employes as it deems necessary to the transaction of its business and fix their compensation subject to the approval of the state budget commissioner.

From the above statement of the powers, authorities and duties of the boards referred to, if a member of the appointing board might be selected as secretary or employed as a clerk of the licensing board, a case may be readily conceived in which a member of the appointing board would be required to sit in judgment upon the removal of a district supervisor whom he had appointed or helped to appoint, and fix his compensation in consideration for the assistance of the district supervisor in the selection or employment, and fixing the compensation of such member of the appointing board as secretary or clerk of such licensing board. Under section 1261-29, G. C., 106 O. L., 564, the secretary of the licensing board may be removed for violation or neglect of duty or for any other good and sufficient cause, and all other employes shall serve only during the pleasure of the board. From this a case may be readily imagined where a faithful discharge of the duty of a district supervisor would require his participation in the dismissal from service of a person whose duty it might then or thereafter be to pass upon the removal of such supervisor from office if the person so dismissed was at the same time a member of the appointing boards.

The rule by which the compatibility of public offices may be determined in all cases is not easy of statement. That stated in the case of State ex rel. v. Gilbert, 12 C. C., n. s., 275, sufficiently indicates the principle. The rule is there stated as follows:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon the other; or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

It is against the public interest and therefore in conflict with public policy that a person should occupy two public positions, the duties and powers of which are such that the authority of one position may be exercised to the advancement of the personal interest of the person holding the same in violation of the faithful performance of the lawful powers and duties of the other position, and in the interest of the public.

In the application of this principle to the matters of fact hereinbefore set forth, the conclusion forces itself that the positions of member of the district appointing board and a clerkship or other employe of the district licensing board are incompatible.

A cursory consideration of the powers, duties and relationship of the two positions or offices will clearly and readily disclose a palpable conflict of duty manifestly inconsistent with a faithful performance of the duties of either position, with a view to the public interest.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL—MAY PROVIDE FOR APPOINTMENT BY MAYOR OF SUITABLE PERSON AS DEPUTY MARSHAL—SUCH APPOINTEE TO ACT AS INTERPRETER IN MAYOR'S COURT—RECEIVE COMPENSATION FOR HIS SERVICES.

When provided for by council and subject to its confirmation, the mayor of a village may appoint deputy marshals, policemen, night watchmen and special policemen, and the council may by ordinance under sections 4385 and 4387, G. C., confer upon one so appointed the power and duty of acting as interpreter in the court of the mayor of the village and fix the compensation to be paid to such officer from public funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 15, 1915, as follows:

> "We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
>
> "May the council of a village provide by ordinance for the appointment or employment of an interpreter deemed necessary in the proper conduct of the mayor's court of said village, and pay his compensation from the public funds?
> "We know of no authority of law that would permit of any charge to be made as against the defendant convicted in said court, i. e., said compensation could not be made a part of the costs of the case and assessed against the defendant in case of conviction. What, if any, legal method could be employed to provide such aid to such courts having a large foreign population within its jurisdiction?"

It is well established in this state that municipal corporations, in their public capacity, possess such powers and such only, as are expressly granted by statute, and such as may be implied as necessary and essential to carry into effect those which are expressly granted.

Bloom v. City of Xenia, 32 O. S., 461;
Ravenna v. Pennsylvania Co., 45 O. S., 118;
State v. Carter, 67 O. S., 433;
Townsend v. Circleville, 78 O. S., 123.

Hence, unless authority therefor is expressly conferred by statute or it be found necessarily essential to carrying into effect an authority so conferred, a village council may not provide by ordinance for the appointment or employment of an interpreter for the mayor's court.

Upon examination of the statutes of the state and as deemed applicable to the question submitted, and affording a practical solution thereof, your attention is directed to the following provisions:

> "Section 4384. The marshal shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the corporation. When provided for by council, and subject to its confirmation, the mayor shall appoint all deputy marshals, policemen, night watchmen and special policemen, and may remove them for cause, which shall be stated in writing to council.
> "Section 4385. The marshal shall be the peace officer of the village and the executive head under the mayor of the police force. The marshal, the deputy marshal, policemen or night watchmen under him shall have the powers conferred by law upon police officers in all villages of the state, and such other powers not inconsistent with the nature of their offices as are conferred by ordinance.
> "Section 4387. In the discharge of his proper duties, he shall have like powers, be subject to like responsibilities and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases, for services actually performed by himself or his deputies and such additional compensation as the council prescribes. In no case shall he receive any fees or compensation for services rendered by any watchman or any other officer, nor shall he receive for guarding, safekeeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested by himself or deputies or by any other officer a greater compensation than twenty cents."

Section 4384, G. C., authorizes the mayor of a village, when so provided for by council, and subject to its confirmation, to appoint all deputy marshals, policemen, night watchmen and special policemen.

By section 4385, G. C., it is provided that the marshal, deputy marshals, policemen or night watchmen shall have the powers conferred upon police officers in villages of the state and such other powers not inconsistent with the nature of their offices as are conferred by ordinance.

From the above it is deemed clearly within the authority of council to make provision by ordinance for the appointment of deputy marshals, night watchmen, policemen and special policemen, by the mayor of a village, subject, however, to confirmation by the council and to confer by ordinance such powers as it may choose in addition to those conferred by statute, and which are not inconsistent therewith, upon such officers.

The general duties and powers of an interpreter are confined to the interpretation of the questions submitted to persons called as witnesses and the answers of such witnesses given in response thereto and the translation of such documentary evidence written or printed in another language, as may be competent, into English.

This duty or the exercise of such power may not be said to be inconsistent with the powers conferred upon marshals, deputy marshals, policemen or watchmen, nor would the performance of the duties of an interpreter result in substantial interference with the proper performance of the duties of such officer.

It is further provided in section 4387, G. C., supra, that the council may prescribe compensation for such officers in addition to the fees therein allowed. The provision for such additional compensation indicates a contemplation of services on the part of the officers so appointed other than those for which fees are prescribed.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the council of a village may provide by ordinance for the appointment of a competent person as a deputy marshal, policeman or special policeman, by the mayor, subject to confirmation by the council, and may further provide that a person so appointed shall perform the duties of an intepreter in the court of the mayor of such village and prescribe proper compensation either monthly, by the case, or per diem, to be paid such person for the services rendered as interpreter.

It may be suggested that such additional compensation here authorized may be limited to such sum as the council may deem reasonable for the actual services rendered, but no part of such compensation as interpreter may be taxed in the costs.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LIQUOR LICENSE LAW—INTERPRETATION OF THAT PART OF SECTION 1261-22, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, THE WORDS "THE MOST POPULOUS COUNTY OF THEIR RESPECTIVE DISTRICTS"—COUNTY IN WHICH APPOINTING BOARDS ARE REQUIRED TO MEET—MUST BE DETERMINED FROM LAST PRECEDING FEDERAL CENSUS OF SUCH COUNTIES.

The district appointing boards are required, under the provisions of section 1261-22, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, to meet at the county seat of that county of the district having the greatest population, as determined by the last preceding federal census.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 21, 1915, as follows:

> "The law provides 'five days after this act becomes effective the said appointing boards shall meet at the court house in the most populous county of their respective districts,' etc.
> "The twenty-second district consists of the counties of Licking and Muskingum.
> "The question has been submitted to me how are we to determine which county has the largest population; that is to say, shall we go by the last U. S. census or shall we go by the last government estimate?
> "From the best information obtainable at this time, it seems as if Licking county has the greatest population."

Your inquiry involves a consideration of that part of section 1261-22c, G. C., 106 O. L., 562, which is as follows:

> "Five days after this act becomes effective the said appointing boards shall meet at the court house in the most populous county of their respective districts at twelve o'clock, noon, at which time and place such boards shall organize by selecting a president and secretary. * * *"

The appointing boards are here unqualifiedly required to meet at the county seat of the most populous, or county having the greatest population within the district as prescribed by section 1261-22, G. C., 106 O. L., 560.

First it may be observed that it is beyond all practical possibility to determine with certainty the exact population of any territory with the extent of that of a county in this state at a given time, nor is there here prescribed any rule by which or basis upon which such populaion is for practical purposes to be determined. There is, however, a well established and universally recognized standard by which in all practical affairs we are wont to determine the population of all cities and political subdivisions of the several states in the absence of any specially prescribed rule governing the particular case.

This recognized standard, it is needless to say, is the official report of the federal census taken decennially under authority of the general government. In the absence then in the present instance of any other or different provision, it will at least be presumed that the legislature had in contemplation only the adoption of the recognized and established rule by which questions of population are everywhere determined almost if not altogether without exception in similar matters.

While municipalities are authorized under the provisions of section 3625, G. C., to take an official census, no authority is found for a county to do so.

Although under section 1261-59, G. C., 103 O. L., 236, special provisions are made for the adoption of any official census taken in any political subdivision, taken within a year next preceding the granting of licenses, in determining the number of licenses which may be granted under the constitution and statutory limitations thereof, and further special provision is there made for determining the population of bona fide summer resorts containing a population of less than five thousand, according to the last preceding federal census for a like purpose, such special provisions may not be held to be applicable to a different state of facts in a subsequent act, no reference thereto being made.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the county in which the appointing boards are required to meet under section 1261-22c, supra, must be determined from the last preceding federal census of such counties.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONTRACT—LOCAL GAS DISTRIBUTING COMPANY—SUPPLYING COMPANY—GAS FURNISHED BY LATTER TO FORMER IS SOLD AND DELIVERED AND PAID FOR ACCORDING TO VOLUME THEREOF—ALL RECEIPTS FROM LOCAL BUSINESS CONSTITUTE GROSS RECEIPTS OF DISTRIBUTING COMPANY—COSHOCTON GAS COMPANY CASE DISTINGUISHED.

Where the contract between a local gas distributing company and a supplying company is such as to show that the gas furnished by the latter to the former is sold and delivered and paid for according to the volume thereof, the case is not within the rule of the decision in State v. Coshocton Gas Company, 12 N. P., n. s., 570, and all the receipts from the local business constitute gross receipts of the distributing company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have asked me to advise you as to whether the contract between the Alliance Gas & Power Company, a local public utility, and the East Ohio Gas Company, a copy of which is enclosed with your letter, is sufficiently similar to the contract involved in the case of State v. Coshocton Gas Co., 12 N. P. (n. s.), 570, as to limit the liability of the first named company for excise tax to such taxes based upon any part of the total receipts from the sale of gas in the city of Alliance and its environs less than the whole.

I refer the commission, in the first instance, to opinion No. 378, in which I examined the contract between the Springfield Gas Company and the Ohio Fuel Supply Company for the purpose of testing its application to the question of excise taxes by the rule laid down in Coshocton Gas Company case, supra. The analysis which is therein made of the Coshocton Gas Company decision need not be repeated in this opinion.

The agreement between the East Ohio Gas Company and the Alliance Gas & Power Company, which I have before me, contains the following stipulations, which are clearly distinguishable from the corresponding stipulations in the Coshocton Gas Company contract and also from those in the Springfield Gas Company contract:

> "(1) The East Ohio Gas Company, the supplying company, agrees 'that it will sell natural gas to the party of the second part * * * at the rate or price of seventy-five per centum (75%) of the gross sales of said natural gas, which shall be made by the party of the second part at domestic rates, and at the rate or price of eighty-five per centum (85%) of the gross sales * * * at a reduced rate, for other purposes. * * That the price at which gas is to be sold in said city of Alliance and vicinity by the party of the second part for domestic and other purposes shall be fixed by the party of the first part, and the party of the second part hereby agrees to sell said natural gas at the prices so fixed. No natural gas shall be sold at any special rate except it be stipulated for by special contract between the parties hereto on contracts the same as now used by the party of the first part, or which the party of the first part may use at any future time.'
> "(2) The local company agrees that it will 'pay to the party of the first part for all natural gas received during any month, on or before the 20th day of the month following that in which such gas shall be received.'

"(3) The local company further agrees to furnish each month a statement showing 'the gross amount of sales of gas to consumers during the last preceding month. * * *'

"(4) It is mutually agreed that "the quantity of gas delivered by the party of the first part to the party of the second part shall be ascertained monthly by the reading of the meters by which such gas is supplied to consumers, which method is hereby adopted by the parties to this agreement as the basis of such measurement."

I have quoted all those parts or portions of the contract which relate to the basis of compensation and the test of delivery. By referring to the previous opinion which I have mentioned the commission will observe that the vital difference between the two contracts which were therein considered and the present contract lies in the fact that under those contracts the supplying company was to have a certain percentage of the proceeds of collections of the local business; whereas under this contract the supplying company is entitled to a certain percentage of the gross sales, regardless of whether collections are made or not.

As Judge Rogers of the Franklin county common pleas court pointed out in deciding the Coshocton Gas Company case, the obligation arising as between the parties to the contract in that case out of the successful conduct of the business was the duty on the part of the local company to account for moneys collected on the joint account. In other words, the parties did not stand towards each other with respect to a month's business in the relation of debtor and creditor, but in the relation of trustee and principal.

No such result could be claimed for the contract between the East Ohio Gas Company and the Alliance Gas & Power Company. It is clear that the obligation of the Alliance Company to the East Ohio Company arises, so to speak, the instant that a measurable quantity of gas passes through a consumer's meter and that fact is registered by the instrument; and that obligation is the duty of the Alliance Company to pay the East Ohio Company a certain percentage of the selling price of that quantity of gas. In the other two cases which I have considered no obligation would arise until the consumer had paid the local company for the gas, and then the obligation would be to account for a certain percentage of the proceeds.

From another point of view: It must be admitted that upon the reasoning in the Coshocton Gas Company case the result would have been different if the local company had merely purchased its supply from a supplying company in such a way as that the entire volume of gas passing from the mains of one company to the mains of the other company was measured and paid for periodically at so much per unit of measurement.

I am unable to see that the contract between the Alliance Gas & Power Company and the East Ohio Gas Company differs essentially from such a supposed arrangement. True, there is more than one meter, and while the gas is in the distributing system of the Alliance Company it remains the general property of the East Ohio Company. But as the contract makes very plain, the parties have chosen to regard the delivery as incomplete until the consumer's meter is reached for purposes which serve their own convenience; and they have expressly fixed upon the readings of the consumers' meters as conclusively determining the amount of gas delivered by the one party to the other.

It must be admitted also that in other particulars, such as with respect to the stipulations as to the maintenance of the distributing system, etc., the contract under examination has much in common with the other two contracts with which it has been compared. Notwithstanding all these points of similarity, however, the one vital point on which the Alliance contract differs from the other two is sufficient, in my opinion, to distinguish it for purposes of the application of the decision in the Coshocton Gas Company case.

I, therefore, advise that the decision in State v. Coshocton Gas Company, supra, does not apply to the business of the Alliance Gas & Power Company as conducted under its contract with the East Ohio Gas Company so as to produce the result arrived at by the court in the Coshocton Gas Company case; but that the facts being distinguishable from those in the Coshocton Gas Company case, a conclusion opposite to that reached by the court in that case must, for the very reasons on which that conclusion was based, be reached in the case of the Alliance Gas & Power Company. In other words, the Alliance Gas & Power Company is to be treated as the sole proprietor of its own business. The receipts which it has from its customers are to be treated as belonging, in the first instance, solely to it, and without diminution constitute the basis of the excise tax.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTIONS 7419 AND 5649-4, G. C.—"EMERGENCY"—RUN DOWN CONDITION OF ROADS MUST EXIST AS SPECIFIC AND DEFINITE FACT—GENERAL LANGUAGE WILL NOT SUFFICE—EACH CASE MUST BE DETERMINED AS IT ARISES AND EACH RESOLUTION MUST STAND BY ITSELF—RESOLUTION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MUST DEFINITELY SHOW ON ITS FACE THE EXISTENCE OF AN EMERGENCY—THERE MUST BE SOME UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCES TO BRING LEVY WITHIN AUTHORITY OF SECTION 5649-4, G. C.

A resolution of a board of county commissioners finding that certain principal highways of the county are "unfit for travel or cause difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon," "by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof" does not sufficiently state an emergency within the meaning of section 5649-4, G. C., and such resolution, though adopted under section 7419, G. C., is not sufficient to authorize the making of a levy outside of the Smith law limitations.

*A resolution of a board of county commissioners, reciting that numerous roads of the county are so "worn by the large amount of travel * * * that their condition causes difficulty, danger and delay to traffic," does not sufficiently state an emergency within the meaning of said section so as to authorize the making of such a levy outside of the Smith law limitations.*

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 14th, as follows:

> "A board of county commissioners adopted a resolution under section 7419, G. C., in substantially the following form:
> " 'Whereas, we find that the following principal highways (naming them) of the county, by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof, have become unfit for travel or cause difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon, and being satisfied that the ordinary levies authorized by law for such purpose will be inadequate to provide money necessary to make the repairs in said roads rendered necessary from the causes above enumerated,

"'Be it Resolved, That there be levied a tax of 1.2 mills upon the dollar of all the taxable property of the county for the repair of said roads.'

"May such rate be levied as an emergency tax irrespective of any of the limitations of the so-called Smith law? In other words, is such a levy an emergency levy within the meaning of section 5649-4, which the commissioners are authorized to levy irrespective of any limitations of the Smith law?"

Your question directly involves the interpretation of the following sections of the General Code:

Section 5649-4, as amended 103 O. L., 527:

"For the emergencies mentioned in sections 4450, 4451, 5629, 7419 and 7630-1 of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax sufficient to provide therefor irrespective of any of the limitations of this act."

Section 7419, General Code:

"When one or more of the principal highways of a county, or part thereof have been destroyed or damaged by freshet, landslide, wear of water courses, or other casualty, or, by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof, have become unfit for travel or cause difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon, and the commissioners of such county are satisfied that the ordinary levies authorized by law for such purposes will be inadequate to provide money necessary to repair such damages or to remove obstructions from, or to make the changes or repairs in, such road or roads as are rendered necessary from the causes herein enumerated, they may annually thereafter levy a tax at their June session, not exceeding five mills upon the dollar upon all taxable property of the county, to be expended under their direction or by the employment of labor and the purchase of materials in such manner as may seem to them most advantageous to the interest of the county, for the construction, reconstruction or repair and maintenance of such road or roads or part thereof."

In reality the only question is as to the interpretation of section 5649-4, for section 7419 standing by itself is not sufficient authority for the making of a levy outside of the Smith law limitations. The Smith law was passed subsequently to section 7419, and it is at least safe to say that had not section 5649-4 been enacted as a part thereof, levies under section 7419 would have been subject to the appropriate limitations of the Smith law. The exact question being, not as to whether or not a valid levy has been made under section 7419, but as to whether or not a preferred levy outside of the Smith law limitations has been made under favor of section 5649-4, that section and not section 7419 must be first interpreted.

I perceive the following questions which the resolution quoted by you raise as to the application of section 5649-4:

> "(1) Is section 5649-4 to be so interpreted as that any levy therein mentioned, i. e., a levy for one of the emergencies mentioned in the sections referred to therein, is ipso facto outside of the Smith law limitations; or is the section a grant of power to the taxing authorities to make a levy for one of the named emergencies outside of the Smith law limitations if they see fit, leaving it optional with them to make an ordinary levy under the sections named, subject to the limitations of the Smith law?
> "(2) Is any levy which may be made under authority of the sections referred to in section 5649-4, a levy for an 'emergency' within the meaning of section 5649-4; in other words, is section 5649-4 to be interpreted, so to speak, as a legislative declaration that all levies made under authority of the sections named are emergency levies? Or, it being ascertained that a given levy is made under authority of one of the sections referred to in section 5649-4, must it still be ascertained in addition thereto that the levy is an emergency levy?"

At first blush I was impressed that both of these questions were involved in the facts stated by you, and have therefore stated them as so involved. On reflection, however, I think the first of these two questions may be eliminated; for while the resolution which you quote does not specifically refer to section 5649-4 nor recite that the levy of 1.2 mills for which it provides shall be made in addition to all other levies under the Smith law, thus leaving room for argument that, if section 5649-4 is a mere grant of power to levy for certain purposes outside of the Smith law limitations, the resolution does not evince an intention on the part of the commissioners to make such a levy; yet there is sufficient evidence on the face of the resolution to show, in my opinion, that the commissioners did intend that the levy shall be made exclusive of the Smith law limitations. This evidence is found in the fact that the levy is not in the form of an estimate of the amount needed. If it were an ordinary levy, subject to adjustment with other rates through the agency of the budget commission, it would have been expressed in an amount as well as in mills, agreeably to the provisions of section 5649-3a, which provide for the filing of the annual budget. Moreover, it would have been treated, had it been regarded as an ordinary levy subject to revision, as a mere item in the budget; whereas the commissioners have at least attempted to make it a separate and independent levy.

For these reasons, I conclude that whatever may be the law as to the authority of the commissioners to levy under section 7419 within the limitations of the Smith law, the resolution quoted by you embodies a palpable effort to make a levy outside of those limitations, even though the intention might have been more clearly expressed.

This leaves the second of the two questions of law as I have stated them as the only point on which the answer to your specific questions can hinge. It is probably true that as a first impression it would appear from the language of section 5649-4 that all levies under the several sections enumerated therein are to be regarded, for the purposes of that section, as emergency levies; and in consequence thereof that if a levy can be sustained as a valid exercise of power under any one of the sections enumerated in section 5649-4, it is on that account alone an emergency levy within the intendment of said section and may be made without regard to the Smith law limitations.

But a careful study of section 5649-4 dispels this impression, in my opinion.

In the first place, if the legislature had intended to provide that all levies under authority of sections 4450, 4451, 5629, 7419 and 7630-1 of the General Code might be made outside of the limitations of the Smith law, it could have expressed that intention in unequivocal language, simpler than that which it has chosen to use. As for example:

> "The limitations of this act shall not apply to taxes levied under sections 4450, etc."

On the contrary, the general assembly has used the words: "For the emergencies mentioned in sections 4450, etc." The most natural and obvious implication of this language is that there may be occasions for the exercise of the taxing power other than the emergencies mentioned in the sections referred to. That is to say, in grammar and in logic the expression used by the legislature refers to something in the sections enumerated less comprehensive than the sections themselves. If this is the correct view, then in order to determine what levies may be made outside of the limitations we would not stop with ascertaining whether or not a given levy could be made under authority of one of the sections enumerated, but would inquire further as to whether the occasion for the levy was an "emergency."

It must be admitted that strict rules of grammar and logic must be applied with caution in the interpretation of the statute. I would, therefore, not be content to rest my interpretation of section 5649-4 upon any such technicality. But in my opinion section 5649-4 points the way to intrinsic evidence showing that the legislature intended that it should be strictly applied in the way which I have described. I think it must be admitted that if it clearly appears on the face of one of the sections referred to in section 5649-4 that such section contemplates the levy of taxes for conditions that could not under any circumstances be regarded as emergencies, in addition to conditions which might be so regarded, this of itself would show that the legislature intended that the only levies under that section which, under favor of section 5649-4, could be made outside of the limitations would be the emergency levies.

The interpretation of section 7419 is put in issue by your question. I think it is more appropriate, therefore, to take another one of the sections mentioned in section 5649-4 and examine it, with this question in mind:

> "Are all the things for which levies may be made under this section 'emergencies' in any sense of the word?"

I may say with respect to sections 4450, 5629 and 7630-1 that there is nothing referred to in any of these sections which may not properly be regarded as an emergency; but the case stands differently with respect to section 4451. That section provides as follows:

> "When expenses are incurred by the board of health under the provisions of this chapter, upon application and certificate from such board, the council shall pass the necessary appropriation ordinances to pay the expenses so incurred and certified. The council may levy and set apart the necessary sum to pay such expenses and to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter. Such levy shall, however, be subject to the restrictions contained in this title."

The occasions of the exercise of the taxing power provided for in this section are two:

> "(1) The incurring of expenses by the board of health 'under the provisions of this chapter;' and
> "(2) The anticipation of the incurring of expenses by the board of health in order 'to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter.'"

If by "the provisions of this chapter" were meant those provisions of the chapter relative to the powers and duties of the municipal board of health, relating to the prevention of the spread of dangerous communicable disease, in time of epidemic or threatened epidemic, as provided for by sections 4425 to 4450, inclusive, then it would be obvious that where expenses had been so incurred and a levy were made to meet them, the levy would be in every sense of the word a levy for an "emergency;" but "this chapter" embraces everything relating to boards of health—from sections 4404 to 4476 of the General Code, or at least all that part of the chapter excepting section 4467 et seq. relating to sanitary plants, which carry their own levying provisions.

From this fact it becomes apparent that the expenses incurred by the board of health under the "provisions of this chapter" would contemplate, among other things, the following items:

> "(1) The regular compensation of a health officer appointed by the state board of health and made by section 4405 'a valid claim against such municipality.'
> "(2) The salaries of officers and other appointees of the board of health under authority of section 4412 of the General Code.
> "(3) The expense incident to keeping a record of proceedings, etc., it being provided by section 4409 that 'each board of health * * shall procure suitable books, blanks, and other things actually necessary for the transaction of its business.'
> "(4) The expense incident to creating 'a complete and accurate system of registration of births, marriages, deaths and interments occurring within its jurisdiction for the purpose of legal and genealogical investigations and to furnish facts for statistical, scientific or sanitary inquiries.' (Sec. 4419, G. C.)"

Other expenses might be mentioned, but I have limited my enumeration to those things which clearly are not emergency conditions. Indeed, the effect of regarding all levies which might possibly be made under section 4451 of the General Code as "emergencies" would be simply this: To take out of the Smith law limitations the whole levy of a municipal corporation for the health fund, because that levy is referable to section 4451. No such interpretation of section 5649-4 and 4451 considered together has ever been given, so far as I am advised, in practice, and it seems to me that a mere statement of the consequences of holding that all levies under section 4451 are necessarily "emergencies," or that they may be made so at the mere election of council regardless of their purpose, is enough to compel the choice of that interpretation of section 5649-4 which logic and the rules of syntax indicate, namely: That it is not every levy which may be made under the sections referred to therein which is outside of the Smith law limitations, but only those levies which are for such "emergencies" as are "mentioned" in such other sections that may be so made.

With this principle established, we approach section 7419 with a view to determining whether it mentions conditions that are not emergencies as well as conditions which are emergencies, or in other words, whether or not a distinction may be observed among the different conditions which it mentions.

Before analyzing the section in detail, however, it may be well to remark that section 7419 has been treated by the legislature and by the courts as a section under which, prior to the Smith law at least, regular taxes could be levied from year to year for road repair purposes. That is to say, the section was not regarded solely as one intended for use upon extraordinary occasions, but was employed repeatedly as the means of raising current revenues.

Section 7421, which for obvious reasons must be read in connection with section 7419, shows that the legislature has treated section 7419 as a means of raising current revenues. It provides as follows:

> "All money assessed and collected under the provisions of section 7419, which remains in the hands of the county treasurer, unexpended and unappropriated, for a period of six months after the annual September settlement for the fiscal year during which the tax was collected, shall be paid to the treasurer of the township or municipal corporation from which it was collected, and be expended on the public roads, under the direction of the trustees of the proper township or municipal corporation, in such manner as seems to them most advantageous to the interest of the township or corporation, for the construction, reconstruction, or repair of roads, and in building or repairing bridges."

If the general assembly had not conceived of the provision for a levy under section 7419 as ordinary current revenues of the county, it would certainly not have passed section 7421.

The supreme court evidently took the same view of this statute in its original form in Lima v. McBride, 34 O. S., 338. The second branch of the syllabus in this case is as follows:

> "2. Where the county commissioners, intending to make a levy of taxes for road purposes, under the act of April 30, 1869 (66 Ohio L., 60), cause such levy to be entered on the record, in general terms, the tax will not be regarded as invalid, or made under the act of 1877 (74 Ohio Laws, 92), on the mere ground that the record does not show the existence of facts which warranted the levy under the former act."

The reference is to what is now section 7419 of the General Code. Comparison of the original act of 1869 with the present section will show no very material changes in the language of the law. In spite of the fact that the occasions for the levy have always been those specifically referred to in the first part of the section in its present form, the supreme court sustained as a levy under this section one made under a resolution of the following tenor, as shown in the report at page 339:

> "The commissioners made a levy for county road fund of four mills."

In other words, while the court did refer in the opinion, per Okey, J., to the levy as "the extraordinary levy," yet it treated the levy as one, in effect, for general and current revenues.

In sharp contrast to the decision of the supreme court in the case above cited is the decision of the circuit court of Franklin county in the case of the State on the Relation of the Tax Commission v. Sayre, Auditor, not officially reported. In that case the commissioners of Franklin county had attempted to levy outside of the Smith law limitations, by passing a resolution in which the language of section 7419 was substantially quoted, except that the roads alleged to be in need of repair were specifically enumerated therein. The court held the resolution insufficient upon which to base a levy outside of the Smith law limitations, holding that general language of this kind, together with the repeated use of the word "or" and without specifications as to which road had been damaged in one way and which in another, could not be justified as an emergency levy.

While the court in the case last above referred to did not base its decision upon the point which is raised by your letter, yet it is significant to note that the levy was not set aside on the ground that it was not made in compliance with section 7419 (which indeed could not have been the case in the light of the decision in Lima v. McBride, supra), but on the ground that it was not a compliance with section 5649-4. The decision, therefore, does go at least one step in the direction which my discussion has taken, for it establishes the conclusion that a mere compliance with section 7419 will not justify a levy under section 5649-4.

The fact that section 7419 is susceptible to use as a means of raising current revenue, established by the considerations above mentioned as well as by the fact apparent on the face of the statute that the levy therein authorizd may be made "annually," tends strongly to establish the conclusion that there must be something in this statute which is not of an emergency character.

When section 7419 is analyzed it seems possible to distinguish different classes of occurrences or conditions, some of which would seem in every instance to constitute emergencies, and others of which would seems to constitute emergencies only under most exceptional circumstances. In every case, however, there must be a concurrence of two elements or conditions in order to constitute an emergency, viz.:

> "(1) The existence of certain specific conditions in the specific roads, caused by certain specific means; and
> "(2) The inability of the commissioners to meet the conditions so caused by levying within the ordinary limits of law."

It is clear from the decision of the circuit court in the case above cited that the emergency conditions must exist as specific and definite facts, and that any equivocal or general language used in a resolution the purpose of which is to make a levy outside of the Smith law limitations and under section 7419, will be insufficient.

In view of the decision cited and of the difficulty of the question involved, I do not believe I would be justified in expressing any opinion as to just what circumstances of those mentioned in section 7419 would, in a given instance, constitute an "emergency" within the meaning of section 5649-4. Each case must be determined as it arises and each resolution must stand by itself.

It is clear, however, for reasons which I have pointed out, that the resolution of the commissioners in order to be sufficient authority for the making of a preferred levy, must specifically and definitely show on its face the existence of an emergency. Neither the resolution quoted in your letter nor the resolution of the commissioners of Miami county, a certified copy of which you have sent to me, states an emergency, in my opinion. This is clearly the case with respect to the resolution quoted in your letter, for in that resolution it is recited that the roads

> "by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof, have become unfit for travel or cause difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon."

While the resolution shows a lack of sufficient funds, it does not show the existence of specific conditions with respect to particular roads, but is equivocal and general like the resolution held insufficient in State ex rel. v. Sayre, supra.

The Miami county resolution is somewhat more specific, in that it limits the statement of conditions as follows:

> "We find them much worn by the large amount of travel so that their condition causes difficulty, danger and delay to traffic."

However, some eleven improved roads are mentioned and all are grouped together under the one description of conditions. I am satisfied that ordinary wear of the roads under normal circumstances cannot be the occasion of an emergency. There must be something unusual in the circumstances in order to bring the levy within the scope of the authority granted by section 5649-4. It is scarcely conceivable that there should have been an unprecedented and unusual amount of traffic over all eleven roads mentioned in the Miami county resolution at the same time. Therefore, for lack of definiteness, I am of the opinion that this resolution does not sufficiently state the existence of an emergency.

For the above reasons, and without going into detail with respect to the possible applications of sections 7419 and 5649-4 of the General Code, I advise that neither of the resolutions submitted to me by you is sufficient to authorize the making of a levy outside of the Smith law limitations for the purposes therein mentioned.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CHILDREN'S HOME SHOULD NOT BE USED AS DETENTION HOME FOR CHILDREN—DISCRETION OF TRUSTEES TO PROVIDE SHELTER FOR DEPENDENT AND NEGLECTED CHILDREN—DETENTION HOMES SHOULD NOT BE ERECTED ON PREMISES OF CHILDREN'S HOMES.

Children's homes should not be used for the detention of children including delinquents who are under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, but whose status has not been determined by the court, as a general rule. However, trustees of children's homes should exercise their discretion under section 3090, G. C., to the end that dependent and neglected children should be provided with shelter if no positive reason to the contrary exists.

Detention homes should not be erected on the premises of children's homes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion relative to the use of children's homes for the detention of wards of the juvenile court pending disposition of their cases and of the use by the juvenile court of children's homes for the detention of delinquents; also the right to build a detention home on the premises of the children's homes, which request, in full, is as follows:

> "We have found a disposition in several counties of this state to provide for the detention of wards of the juvenile court at the children's home pending final disposition of the cases. Many of such wards are charged with delinquency. We think that sections 1670 and 3089 do not permit such an arrangement.

"Recently in a certain county a number of prominent public officials have recommended that the detention home in that county be abolished and that the customary inmates of such home be cared for at the county children's home. Because our position in this matter has been challenged, we ask for your opinion in the matter. That is:

"Has the juvenile court the right to use the county children's home as a detention home for children, including delinquents, and, also, is it legal to build upon the premises of the children's home a building to be used especially for such wards?"

Section 3089 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 890) is as follows:

"The home shall be an asylum for children under the age of eighteen years, of sound mind and not morally vicious and free from infectious or contagious diseases, who have resided in the county not less than a year, and for such other children under such age from other counties in the state where there is no home, as the trustees of such home and the persons or authority having the custody and control of such children, by contract agree upon, who are, in the opinion of the trustees, suitable children for admission by reason of orphanage, abandonment or neglect by parents or inability of parents to provide for them. In no event shall a delinquent or incorrigible child be committed to or be accepted by such home. If an inmate of such home is found to be incorrigible, he or she shall be brought before the juvenile court for further disposition. Parents or guardians of such children shall in all cases where able to do so pay reasonable board for their children received in such children's home."

In section 3089 of the General Code, supra, it is provided specifically that "in no event shall a delinquent or incorrigible child be committed to or be accepted by such home." The provisions of the section are clear and unambiguous, and there is not only no authority for the use of children's homes for the detention of delinquents, but there is an express prohibition against it. There is no authority to accept children in children's homes except that contained in section 3090 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., page 890), which is as follows:

"They shall be admitted by the superintendent on the order of the juvenile court or of a majority of such trustees, accompanied by a statement of facts signed by the court or trustees, setting forth the name, age, birthplace, and present condition of the child named in such order, which statement of facts contained in the order, together with any additional facts connected with the history and condition of such children shall be, by the superintendent, recorded in a record provided for that purpose, which shall be confidential and only open for inspection at the discretion of the trustees."

Children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court would, under the provisions of section 3090 of the General Code, be sent to children's homes, if at all, only after their cases had been disposed of, and in no event would delinquent children be committed to the home. The provision for their being admitted to the home on the order of the juvenile court only relates to admission after a determination of their status by the juvenile court.

Answering your first question specifically I would say that there is no authority for the use of a children's home as a detention home for children including delinquents.

Section 1670 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 875), is as follows:

> "Upon the advice and recommendation of the judge exercising the jurisdiction provided herein, the county commissioners shall provide by purchase or lease, a place to be known as a 'detention home' within a convenient distance of the court house, not used for the confinement of adult persons charged with criminal offenses, where delinquent, dependent or neglected minors under the age of eighteen years may be detained until final disposition, which place shall be maintained by the county as in other like cases. In counties having a population in excess of forty thousand, the judge may appoint a superintendent and matron who shall have charge of said home, and of the delinquent, dependent and neglected minors detained therein. Such superintendent and matron shall be suitable and discreet persons, qualified as teachers of children. Such home shall be furnished in a comfortable manner as nearly as may be as a family home. So far as possible delinquent children shall be kept separate from dependent children in such home. The compensation of the superintendent and matron shall be fixed by the county commissioners. * * *"

The section just quoted authorizes the county commissioners, under certain conditions, to provide by "purchase or lease a place to be known as a 'detention home' within a convenient distance of the court house, not used for the confinement of adult persons charged with criminal offenses." It would appear, therefore, that it was clearly intended that the detention home is to be a separate and distinct institution in charge of a superintendent and matron, and that there is no provision of law whereby the children's home, or a part thereof, can be utilized for the purpose of a detention home. The grounds within the enclosure surrounding a children's home are as much a part of the home as the building itself, and to place on the premises of a children's home a building to be used as a detention home, which detention home, of course, is used for detaining delinquents, dependent and neglected minors under the age of eighteen years while their cases are being investigated by and until they are disposed of by the juvenile court, would constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3089 of the General Code, as amended, supra.

In the consideration of questions of this character, and those of a kindred nature, it should be borne in mind that in the administration of the various laws affecting children the primary purpose is the welfare of the child. Section 1683 of the General Code, which is section 2 of the juvenile court act, is as follows:

> "This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child, in order that it may be educated and cared for, as far as practicable in such manner as best subserves its moral and physical welfare, and that, as far as practicable in proper cases, the parent, parents or guardian of such child may be compelled to perform their moral and legal duty in the interest of the child."

From a reading of the section just quoted it will be observed that the juvenile court law is to be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child. While, as stated above, there is express provision of law which prohibits the admission of delinquent children to children's homes, it would appear only reasonable and proper that, especially in the case of dependent or neglected children who may be under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, where other means are not available for their care during or pending the disposition of their cases the trustees of the children's homes should exercise the discretion vested in them under the provisions of section 3090 of the General Code, as amended, supra, and admit such children to the home under their control, there being no positive reason for contrary action.

It is my opinion, therefore, that while children's homes may not generally be used by the juvenile court for the detention of children, including delinquents whose status has not been determined by the court, that dependent or neglected children should be cared for at the children's homes when necessity arises and in the judgment of the trustees there is no positive reason why such children should not be received; that there is not only no provision of law for the erection of a detention home on the premises of a children's home, but that such erection would be in conflict with the provisions of section 3089 of the General Code, as amended.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

PHYSICIAN EMPLOYED IN STATE HOSPITAL CANNOT ACT AS MEDICAL WITNESS—SEE SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION NO. 848.

A physician employed in a state hospital cannot act as a medical witness under section 1956, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of August 17th, you requested my official opinion as follows:

> "The Ohio state reformatory has forwarded to this department statement of D. W. Cummins, probate judge of Richland county, amounting to $303.60 for fees and expenses account of lunacy inquests of fifteen inmates of the Ohio state reformatory confined in the Columbus state hospital.
> "Included in this statement is $180.00 for Drs. G. H. Williams, B. B. Barber and G. A. Rowland, examining physicians and witnesses. These physicians being employes of the Columbus state hospital, we would like to have your opinion before issuing vouchers in payment of same."

Section 1956, G. C., relative to inquests of lunacy, provides that the medical witnesses used at such inquests "must have at least five years' experience in the practice of medicine, shall not be related, by blood or marriage, to the person alleged to be insane or to the person making the application for commitment, nor have any official connection with any state hospital."

The persons who were used as medical witnesses as per your inquiry were physicians who, you state, are employes of the Columbus state hospital, and the question naturally arises as to whether or not a physician employed at the Columbus state hospital could be considered as having "any official connection" with such hospital.

A reading of the statute, and the fact that it simply states "official connection" leads me to the conclusion that the legislature intended that those physicians who were employed at a state hospital should not be used as medical witnesses in lunacy inquests, as a physician or any one else employed in an institution is, in the ordinary meaning of the term, "officially connected" with such institution.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that since there is a positive prohibition in the statute against a physician permanently employed in a state hospital being a medical witness, vouchers calling for payment to such physicians for such services should not be issued.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—REGULAR MEETINGS—MUST BE HELD IN COLUMBUS—ANNUAL CONFERENCES AT SUCH TIMES AND PLACES AS BOARD MAY DIRECT—SPECIAL MEETINGS MAY BE HELD OUTSIDE OF COLUMBUS WHEN NECESSARY TO HOLD SAME IN PARTICULAR LOCALITY IN CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATION PERTAINING TO THAT LOCALITY.

1. Regular meetings of the state board of health held pursuant to section 1233, G. C., must be held in Columbus.

2. Annual conferences of health officers held pursuant to sections 1245 and 1246, G. C., may be held at such times and places as the board may direct.

3. Special meetings of the state board of health may be held outside of Columbus, when necessary to hold same in a particular locality in the conduct of an investigation pertaining to that locality.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of August 4, 1915, requesting my opinion received, and is as follows:

> "Enclosed you will find a letter from the state board of health in which they set up the fact that there has been some question as to whether said board is at liberty to hold meetings in various sections of the state,
> "I wish you would take this letter into consideration and advise this office just what the limitations of this board are under the statutes made and provided as to holding meetings outside of Columbus, Ohio."

I have also noted the letter of Hon. E. F. McCampbell, secretary and executive officer of the state board of health, enclosed with your letter and which is herewith returned to you.

Section 1233 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state board of health shall meet in Columbus during the month of January of each year and at such other times as it may direct. A majority of its members shall constitute a quorum. The board shall choose one of its members as president, and, subject to the provisions of this chapter, may adopt rules and by-laws for its government."

Section 1236 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Suitable rooms for the meetings of the state board of health and the office of its secretary shall be provided by the state."

The specific provision in section 1233, supra, that the only meeting which the board of health is required to hold thereunder shall be held in Columbus, and the only discretion lodged in the board as to other meetings therein authorized being as to the time when they shall be held, the conclusion is inevitable that such meetings should be held also in the city of Columbus. This conclusion is strengthened by the provisions of section 1236, G. C., supra, as to suitable rooms for the meetings of the board and office of the secretary.

It would hardly be claimed that the state should provide more than one place for the holding of such meetings and it would follow that the place should be the office of the secretary.

While meetings held in pursuance of section 1233, supra, should be held in Columbus, there are other activities of the board to which the same reasoning does not apply.

Section 1245 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The state board of health may make provision for annual conferences of health officers and representatives of local boards of health for the consideration of the cause and prevention of dangerous communicable diseases and other measures to protect and improve the public health. Each board of health or other body or person appointed or acting in the place of a board of health shall appoint a delegate to such annual conferences. The city, village or township shall pay the necessary expenses of such delegate upon the presentation of a certificate from the secretary of the state board that the delegate attended the sessions of such conferences."

Section 1246 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The state board of health may provide for one annual conference of representatives of city boards of health, another for representatives of village boards of health, and one or more for representatives of township boards of health, or make such other division of conferences as it deems best. No conference shall continue in session longer than three consecutive days, and no board of health shall be required or authorized to send a delegate to more than one conference in any year."

These sections give considerable discretion to the state board of health in the matter of holding of annual conferences of health officers, leaving the number of such conferences, the date and place of holding the same, entirely to the determination of the board, the only limitation being that no health officer shall be required to attend more than one of such conferences in any one year. If the purposes sought to be accomplished by these sections can be better attained by holding several conferences in different places in the state at different times during the year, there would appear to be no legal objection to so doing. Section 1234 of the General Code provides for the payment of the expenses of the secretary as follows:

> "* * * The necessary traveling and other expenses incurred by the secretary in the performance of his official duties shall be paid by the state. * * *" and section 1235 of the General Code provides for the payment of the expenses of members of the state board of health as follows:

> "Each member of the state board of health shall receive five dollars for each day employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary traveling and other expenses while engaged in the business of the board. * * *"

Clearly attendance at such conferences would be a part of the official duty of the secretary and a part of the business of the board and the expenses of the secretary and members of the board incident thereto should be paid, together with those of any employes whose attendance the board may deem necessary.

Section 1237, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of health has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

Section 1239, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The state board of health shall make careful inquiry as to the cause of disease, especially when contagious, infectious, epidemic or endemic, and take prompt action to control and suppress it. The reports of births and deaths, the sanitary conditions and effects of localities and employments, the personal and business habits of the people and the relation of the diseases of man and beast, shall be subjects of careful study by the board. It may make and execute orders necessary to protect the people against diseases of lower animals, and shall collect and preserve information in respect to such matters and kindred subjects as may be useful in the discharge of its duties, and for dissemination among the people. When called upon by the state or local governments, or municipal or township boards of health it shall promptly investigate and report upon the water supply, sewerage, disposal of excreta of any locality and the heating, plumbing and ventilation of a public building."

Other sections of the General Code confer upon the state board powers and duties with reference to sewage disposal and water supply throughout the state.

If, in the judgment of the board, it should become necessary, in conducting any of the investigations or carrying out any of the powers and duties conferred by sections last above quoted and referred to, to hold a meeting of the board in a particular locality upon a matter pertaining to that locality, it would be proper to do so and attendance at such a meeting would likewise be a part of the official duty of the secretary, and a part of the business of the board, and the expenses of the secretary and members of the board, and such employes as the board may direct, in making such investigations and in attending such meetings should be paid.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the regular meetings of the state board of health, held pursuant to section 1233, G. C., supra, should be held in the city of Columbus; that annual conferences of health officers may be held at such times and places as the state board of health may direct; and that special meetings of the board, which may become necessary in the proper discharge of its duties, may be held outside of Columbus.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

THE WORDS "GENERAL ELECTION" USED IN SECTION 1176, G. C., REFER ONLY TO NOVEMBER ELECTION REQUIRED TO BE HELD IN EVEN NUMBERED YEARS FOR ELECTION OF STATE AND COUNTY OFFICERS—PROPOSITION TO PURCHASE AND EQUIP COUNTY EXPERIMENT FARM MAY BE SUBMITTED ONLY AT SUCH ELECTION.

The phrase "general election" as used in section 1176, G. C., 106 O. L., 124, has reference only to the November election required to be held in the even numbered years for the election of state and county officers, and the proposition to purchase and equip a county experiment farm and to issue bonds or notes of the county therefor, as provided for in said section, may be submitted only at such election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

HON. JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of August 18, 1915, making the following inquiries:

> "First. Can the commissioners submit to the voters of this county the proposition to establish an experiment farm therein, at the election to be held in November of this year?
> "Second. If such an election can be held, then at what time must the petition asking for the election be filed with the county auditor?
> "These questions, we take it, are to be answered by construing section 1165-3 of the General Code."

In consideration of your first question, it is suggested that section 1165-3 of the General Code, to which you refer, was repealed in 103 O. L., 304, and therein substantially re-enacted as section 1176, G. C., which was amended in 106 O. L., 124, to provide as follows:

> "Section 1176. Upon the filing of a petition with the county auditor signed by not less than five per cent. of the electors based upon the vote for governor at the last preceding election, residing within the county, the commissioners of such county shall submit to the qualified voters of such county a proposition to establish an experiment farm within such county, and to issue notes or bonds for the purchase and equipment of such farm, such proposition to be voted upon at the next general election following the receipt of the petition by the commissioners. Notice of the intention to submit such proposition shall be published by the county commissioners in two newspapers of opposite politics printed and of general circulation in said county, for at least four weeks prior to the election at which the proposition is to be voted upon, together with a statement of the maximum amount of money which it is proposed to expend in the purchase and equipment of such farm."

First it will be noted that it is here provided that the proposition to establish an experiment farm and issue bonds or notes for the purchase and equipment thereof, shall be voted on "at the next general election following the receipt of the petition by the commissioners." Is the election to be held in November, 1915, for the election of township and municipal officers a "general election" within the terms of the statute above quoted?

This question was considered in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion found at page 1363 of the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1911-1912, in which it was held that the county commissioners were not authorized under the provisions of section 2307, G. C., to submit to the electors of the county the proposition of the discharge of a county treasurer and the sureties on his bond from liability at the November election, 1911, said section providing that "such board may, at the next ensuing general election * * * submit to the qualified electors" of the county such proposition.

While section 2307, G. C., includes within its terms treasurers of cities, villages, townships and school districts, as well as of counties, the conclusion in the above opinion is limited to the submission of such questions by county commissioners.

Elections are throughout the statutes termed general, regular and special elections. These terms are deemed to have a fairly well established meaning and unless used with special application or qualifying terms, "general election" is understood to mean the regular recurring November election at which state and county officers are elected. The term "regular elections" includes all those elections at which public officers are elected to fill the vacancies occurring by reason of the expiration of the terms of such officers as established by law, whether such officers be state, county, township or other officers whose terms of office are definite and determinate, the time of holding which election is definitely fixed by law. A special election is generally understood to mean an election held at a time not definitely fixed by law for the election of an officer to fill a vacancy occasioned by some exigency other than the expiration of the term fixed or an election which is held for the submission to the electorate of a question usually other than the selection of an officer, and at a different time from that at which a regular or general election is being held. Thus in section 4826, G. C., reference is made to "all general elections for governor," etc. Section 4826, G. C., 103 O. L., 23, refers to "all general elections for state and county offices," etc. Section 4827, G. C., relating to notice of election, provides: "At least fifteen days before holding any such general election, the sheriff shall give notice," etc. The term "such" beyond question, has reference only to the election of those officers mentioned in the preceding section, viz.: State and county officers and judges of the court of appeals. As to notice of the election of township officers, it is provided in section 4832, G. C., that:

> "At least twenty days before the regular election of township officers, the township trustees shall issue their warrant to a constable of the township," directing him to notify the electors of the time and place of holding such election.

Section 4840, G. C., provides:

> "Unless a statute providing for the submission of a question to the voters of a county, township, city or village provides for the calling of a special election for that purpose, no special election shall be so called. The question so to be voted upon shall be submitted at a regular election in such county, township, city or village, and notice that such question is to be voted upon shall be embodied in the proclamation for such election."

In section 4948, G. C., it is provided that unless inconsistent with the context, the term "general election" as found in chapter 6, title XIV of part first, relating to primary elections, shall be construed to mean the "November election in the years when state and county officers are to be elected." While this definition is here specifically limited to the particular chapter mentioned, it is not without significance that the legislature chose to use it there in the sense in which it is generally understood.

While the distinction between a general and regular election above attempted to be pointed out may not be found to have been uniformly observed, unless there should appear from the context or otherwise some indication of an intent to give to terms a different meaning or application, their most generally accepted significance should be adopted.

Lewis' Southerland Statutory Construction, sections 389, 390.

Sections 1174 to 1177-9, G. C., inclusive, 106 O. L., 123, et seq., were originally enacted as sections 1165-1 to 1165-13, G. C., inclusive, 101 O. L., 124, et seq., in substantially the same terms in which the amendments now appear in so far as the same affects the question here under consideration, and after a careful examination of these sections throughout their history, I fail to find anything therein which would warrant an inference that the legislature intended to use the phrase "general election" in any other than the ordinary meaning of its terms.

I am, therefore, led to conclude that the proposition to issue bonds or notes for the purchase and equipment of a county experiment farm may be submitted to the voters of the county only at the election at which state and county officers are required to be elected under the provisions of section 1 of article XVII of the constitution, which are as follows:

> "Elections for state and county officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the even numbered years; and all elections for all other elective officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in the odd numbered years."

You further inquire at what time the petition required under section 1176, G. C., supra, must be filed. No provision is found which specifically fixes the time of filing such petition, but it will be observed that notice of the submission of the question of the issuance of the notes or bonds, with a statement of the maximum amount which it is proposed to expend in the purchase and equipment of such farm, is required to be published by the commissioners in two newspapers of opposite politics, printed and of general circulation in the county, for at least four consecutive weeks prior to the election, thus necessitating the filing of the petition at such time as will give reasonable time and opportunity to provide for the publication for the full period of four weeks prior to the day of the election. Without undertaking a technical construction of the language here used, relative to the time of advertisement, it is sufficient to say that a publication in each of two proper papers, once in each calendar week for four such weeks next preceding the calendar week in which the election is held, the first publication being more than twenty-eight days prior to the day of the election, will fully meet the requirements of the statute.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY ISSUE BONDS UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 7629, G. C., FOR PURPOSES THEREIN SET FORTH, SUBJECT TO LIMITATIONS IN SAID SECTION AND ALSO TO LIMITATIONS PROVIDED BY SECTIONS 5649-2 TO 5649-5b, G. C.

Section 7629, G. C., was not repealed by implication by the enactment of section 5649-2 to 5649-5b, G. C., and the board of education of a school district may issue bonds under authority of said section 7629, G. C., for the purposes therein set forth, subject to the limitations provided in said section and subject also to the limitations provided by section 5649-2 to section 5649-5b, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

HON. C. H. CURTIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 14, 1915, which is as follows:

"I desire your official opinion as to the authority of boards of education to issue bonds under the provisions of section 7629 of the General Code, or whether their only authority now to issue bonds is under the sections preceding, where submitted to a vote of the people? At least two of our boards in this county find it necessary to take advantage of this section, and I suppose other boards in the state also will need to act under its provision as well, if permitted.

"In this connection I call your attention to the case of Rabe v. The Board of Education, reported in 88 O. S. Report, wherein it is held that certain sections of the Code are repealed by implication, including section 7630, by the passage of the sections 5649-2, et seq., and yet you will also observe that this same section 7630 was supplemented by the legislature in the spring of 1913 (103 O. L., page 527) after the passage of said sections which it is said were repealed by implication.

"It seems to me that there is no reason for holding that said section 7629 is also repealed by implication, falling with its fellow sections, but that such boards still have the two methods of issuing bonds, to wit: Under 7625 et seq., by submitting to a vote of the people, and also by said section 7629, subject of course to the limitations within such section, and also within the limitations of said section 5649-2 et seq. I have observed your recent opinion wherein you held if a board proceeded under the former, it could not then proceed under the other section, and with this I agree, and it also suggests to me your opinion that the said section referred to, to wit: 7629, is a valid law at the present time, or you would have said so in such recent opinion."

In the case of Rabe, et al., v. Board of Education of the Canton School District, 88 O. S., 403, the supreme court in its opinion, at page 409, held:

> "The provisions of sections 5649-2 et seq., in reference to the rate that may be levied in any taxing district, are so clearly in conflict with the provisions of sections 7591 and 7592, General Code, that these sections are necessarily repealed by implication. That being true, section 7630, General Code, must fall with them, for that section provides only for the application of the limitation in these repealed sections to the issue of bonds under section 7629, General Code."

However, the court did not hold that section 7629, G. C., is repealed by implication by the enactment of section 5649-2 et seq., of the General Code. On the contrary, the court in said opinion, at pages 414 and 415, recognizes said section 7629, G. C., as in full force and effect. You will note, however, that the court in said opinion holds that the provisions of said section 7629, G. C., are limited by the provisions of said section 5649-2 et seq. of the General Code, the first and second branches of the syllabus providing as follows:

> "1. Sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, General Code, inclusive, limit the rate of taxes that can be levied in any taxing district for any and all purposes. Any statutes existing at the time of the passage of these sections, in direct conflict therewith and not specifically repealed thereby, are repealed by implication.
> "2. These sections of the General Code furnish the basis of calculation for the issue of bonds in anticipation of income from taxes levied or to be levied."

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the board of education of a school district may issue bonds under authority of section 7629, G. C., for the purposes therein set forth, subject to the limitations provided in said section and subject also to the limitations provided by section 5649-2 to section 5649-5b, inclusive, of the General Code.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

PHYSICIAN—COMPENSATION FOR MEDICAL SERVICES RENDERED TO INJURED EMPLOYE OF BOYS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL, VALID—ALTHOUGH PHYSICIAN IS EMPLOYED TO ATTEND INMATES OF SCHOOL—NO OBLIGATION TO ATTEND EMPLOYES OF SCHOOL WITHOUT CHARGE.

Claim of doctor for compensation for medical services rendered to injured employe of Boys' Industrial School valid notwithstanding regular employment of doctor to attend inmates of school when contract of employment imposes no obligation to attend employes of school without charge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter in which you request an opinion as follows:

> "Your opinion is desired with respect to the following:
> "Is a physician, employed at a stated salary at the boys' industrial school, Lancaster, to render medical attention to inmates of the institution, entitled to receive compensation from the state insurance fund for the treatment of injuries sustained by an employe of said school?
> "The commission now has under consideration the claim of an employe of the above mentioned school. This claim includes a bill rendered by a physician, who is employed by the school, covering services rendered for the treatment of claimant's injuries.
> "We desire your opinion as to whether the physician in question has a right to charge for services so rendered, or whether such services are covered by the salary he receives as an employe of the school."

The particular point in question and which forms the basis of your request for an opinion is that based upon the uncertainty of the relation of the doctor referred to to the boys' industrial school at Lancaster. Considerable correspondence has passed between this office and your department and the board of administration in an effort to ascertain just what the status of the physician was with reference to his obligations under his employment agreement with the school to furnishing medical attention to the officers of the school. There seems to have been a very uncertain state of affairs with reference to his exact obligation, and all other means failing resort was had to the doctor himself by your board for the purpose of ascertaining just what his understanding of the situation was. To that end and in answer to your letter addressed to him he replied under date of August 24th, as follows:

> "August 24, 1914.
> "The Industrial Commission of Ohio.
> "DEAR SIRS:—In reference to J. M. Stouder's case, and my understanding of relations between industrial school and myself, I will say that I was hired by him (superintendent) to take care of the boys and any work among the officers which I did, I was at liberty to charge for. I had been paid for my work among the officers by them (officers) right along.
> "When the previous doctor was hired it was with the understanding that he was to get a certain salary and the work among the officers was extra. This custom of charging had been the privilege of all the doctors there. While I had been there I had received no order, written or verbal, to the effect that I could not charge.

"If it had been the custom not to charge I surely would not have charged in this case.

"Hoping this answers your question satisfactorily, I remain, etc."

From the statement made by the doctor, coupled with the fact that there is nothing to contradict it, or even to qualify it save in the statement made by the superintendent of the boys' industrial school to the effect that:

"There has never been an understanding that the physician's service should be given to officers gratis. In fact it is pretty well accepted by our officers that they are expected to pay for such service. However, he would be and is expected to attend in case of accident at the time, but could not be expected to continue same indefinitely."

(The statement just quoted was contained in a letter addressed to the Ohio board of administration by R. U. Hastings, superintendent of the industrial school.)

it would appear that the relation of the physician employed to render medical services to the boys who are inmates of the institution to officers of the institution does not differ from that of an outside physician in so far as the operation of the workmen's compensation law is concerned.

It is, therefore, my opinion that in passing upon a claim made by the physician employed to care for the boys who are inmates of the boys' industrial school for medical services rendered to an employe of the institution injured in the course of his employment, and who has made application for compensation, the existing relations between the physician and the boys' industrial school should not enter into the matter. Or, in other words, his claim should be treated in the same manner as that of an outside physician.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—DEPOSITORY—WHEN BANK FAILS—PROCEEDS OF BONDS DEPOSITED AS SECURITY FOR DEPOSITORY CONTRACT—BOARD OF EDUCATION CANNOT DELEGATE AUTHORITY—A DEPOSITORY CONTRACT THAT PROVIDES FOR PAYMENT OF BALANCE DUE A TAXING DISTRICT OUT OF PROCEEDS OF SUCH BOND SALE BEFORE LIQUIDATION OF OTHER ASSETS OF BANK AND REDUCTION OF BALANCE DUE BY PAYMENTS FROM SAME IS LEGAL.

A board of education cannot delegate to a community not composed of its own members, power to make a contract with a bank for the deposit of school funds. A depository contract must be made by board when in session. Bonds can be deposited as collateral security for public funds held by such bank under depository contract. When bank fails, proceeds from sale of bonds held as security from depository contract can be used to make good amount on deposit at the time the bank closed its doors without consent of officers in charge of liquidation. Method of proving security.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 28, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 17th, requesting my opinion upon four questions, which I shall set out and answer in their order.

Your first question is:

"First. Can a board of education legally delegate to a committee or commission, not composed of its own members, a power to make a contract with a bank for the deposit of school funds under sections 7604-7608? Or must depositary contract be made by such board while in session?"

Answer:

The answer to the first part of the question is no, and to the second part yes.

Your second question is:

"Second. Can bonds that are listed as assets of a bank be, in anticipation of a possible failure of the bank, deposited as collateral security for public funds, other than state funds, held by such bank under a depositary contract providing for such deposit?"

Answer:

Assuming that the bonds are deposited at the time of securing the money or in exchange for other bonds so deposited, the answer is yes.

Your third question is:

"Third. In case a bank that has deposited bonds as described in the previous section fails, can the proceeds of the sale of the bonds be used, so far as necessary, to make good the amount on deposit at the time the bank closed its doors, without the consent of the officials in charge of the liquidation?"

Answer:

The answer to this question is yes.

However, the following observations should be made as to the methods of proving or as to the time of selling and crediting such security.

(a) If the matter is one pending in the state courts, the subdivision holding the securities should not sell same until it has proved its claim and received all dividends that may be declared. After receiving all such dividends the collateral may be sold and applied on the debt. If the collateral be sold before the estate has been fully administered, then the claim could be proven only for the deficiency between the amount realized from the collateral and the total amount of the claim. The following is the syllabus in the case of State National Bank v. Esterly, 69 O. S., 24:

> "Where the property of an insolvent debtor, by order of court, is placed in the hands of a receiver to be administered upon for the payment of the insolvent's debts, a creditor who holds collaterals taken to secure his claim, and upon which he has realized before a dividend is declared, is entitled to a dividend on only so much of his debt as remains after deducting the proceeds of the collaterals; and this sum may be ascertained at the time the dividend is declared, although the claim had formerly been proven and allowed for the full amount."

On the other hand, under the case of the Board of County Commissioners of Putnam County v. The Putnam County Banking Company et al., decided by the court of appeals of Putnam county on July 15, 1915, it was held that the secured creditor need not sell or surrender the securities, but might hold them and prove his entire claim, and after applying all dividends declared on the entire claim might then sell the securities and apply them in making up the deficiency between the amount of the dividends and the full amount of the claim.

(b) Where the litigation is pending in a United States court of equity, then the rule laid down in the third branch of the syllabus in the case of Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S., 131, should be followed. Said syllabus is as follows:

> "A secured creditor of an insolvent national bank may prove and receive dividends upon the face of his claim as it stood at the time of the declaration of insolvency, without crediting either his collaterals, or collections made therefrom after such declaration, subject always to the proviso that dividends must cease when, from them and from collaterals realized, the claim has been paid in full."

It is, therefore, immaterial whether the security be sold immediately or after the estate is wound up.

(c) As unincorporated banks now may become depositaries, and as such banks may be declared bankrupts under the national bankruptcy act (Burkhart v. German American Bank, 14 Am. Bk. Rep., 222), the bankruptcy rule should also be stated. In bankruptcy, only the excess of the claim over and above the securities may be proven. Therefore, it would make no difference in practice whether the securities were sold before or after the winding up of the estate.

It will be seen from the above suggestions that there is a diversity of law upon this subject, and indeed the law as laid down in both the Merrill case by the supreme court of the United States and the Esterly case by the supreme court of Ohio was concurred in only by a majority of the members of those respective courts.

Therefore, it is important that each taxing subdivision should consult its legal adviser in each case before taking any action.

Your fourth question is:

"Fourth. Is a depositary contract legal that provides for the payment of a balance due a taxing district out of the proceeds of such bond sale, before the liquidation of the other assets of the bank and the reduction of the balance due by payments from same?"

Answer:
The answer is yes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CORPORATION — INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK — MAY BE MADE BY ISSUANCE OF PREFERRED STOCK BEFORE ALL ITS AUTHORIZED STOCK HAS BEEN FULLY SUBSCRIBED AND AN INSTALLMENT OF TEN PER CENT. PAID ON EACH SHARE—SECRETARY OF STATE NOT AUTHORIZED TO COLLECT FEE FOR FILING CERTIFICATE OF INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK OF CORPORATION.

A corporation may increase its capital stock by the issuance of preferred stock before all its authorized stock has been fully subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. paid on each share.

The secretary of state is not authorized to collect a fee of $5.00 for filing a certificate of the increase of capital stock of a corporation upon the ground that such increase of its capital stock is an amendment to the articles of incorporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 30, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 25, 1915, requesting my opinion, as follows:

"We are herewith enclosing ten cents revenue stamp uncancelled, check for twenty-five dollars, increase of capital stock (preferred) of

The Columbia Planter Company, together with letter from Bowman & Bowman, attorneys at law, Springfield, Ohio, and respectfully ask your opinion upon the questions therein submitted.''

The letter of Sirs Bowman & Bowman, attorneys at law, of Springfield, Ohio, referred to in your letter, and which states the facts upon which your questions are based, is as follows:

''As per my telephone conversation this morning with one of your staff, I am returning to you your letter of August 20th relating to the attempted increase of stock by The Columbia Planter Company by issue of preferred stock, with the other papers.

''You returned this certificate because we had crossed out the provisions of it certifying that the capital stock of the company was fully subscribed.

''We did this pursuant to a conversation about a week ago with one of your staff whom Mr. Hildebrant called to the phone for us, and who advised us that the present attorney general, reversing a ruling of his predecessor, had held that the section of the Code relating to the increase of common stock, and which provided as a condition that the original stock must all be subscribed, was not to be construed as part of the section providing for the issue of preferred stock, and which contains no such condition; and that, therefore, it was no longer necessary to reduce common stock so as to get rid of the unsubscribed surplus before you could get authority to issue the preferred stock.

''This ruling seemed to us to be unquestionably correct, and acting upon it we proceeded to provide for an issue of preferred stock while we still had an unsubscribed portion of our original authorized common stock.

''If we had the right to do this, of course we ought not to be required to certify that the original stock had all been subscribed.

''I would be glad for you to call the attorney general's attention also to the custom of your office of demanding an additional fee of five ($5.00) dollars on the issue of preferred stock upon the claim that the preferred stock issue was not only an increase of capital stock and subject to the fee provided by law for an increase of stock, but was also an amendment of the charter, and therefore also subject to the authorized fee provided for amendments to the charter.

''An increase of common stock above that originally authorized in the charter, is also an amendment of the charter; but your office has never charged the additional fee of five ($5.00) dollars for increase of common stock, and it seems to me clearly you are not entitled to charge it because the increase is by way of preferred stock.''

The first question raised in the letter of Sirs Bowman & Bowman as to whether or not all of the original stock of a corporation must be first subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. on each share paid in before a corporation may increase the amount of its preferred stock, has not been considered by me. Therefore, the information given them that I had reversed a ruling of my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, is erroneous.

I find upon investigation that Mr. Hogan, under date of March 10, 1914, did render an opinion to Honorable Charles H. Graves, secretary of state, in which he held that ''the full subscription of capital stock already authorized is not a condition precedent to the increase of capital stock of a corporation by the issuance and deposition of preferred stock as provided in section 8699 of the General Code." This conclusion was reached and given out by Mr. Hogan after a reconsideration of an opinion upon the same question rendered by him to Honorable Charles H. Graves, secretary of state, under date of April 18, 1911, under which an opposite conclusion had been announced.

Sections 8698 and 8699, of the General Code, providing when a corporation may increase its capital stock, are as follows:

> "Sec. 8698. After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation for profit, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which it is divided, prior to organization, by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers. After organization the increase may be made by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock, at a meeting called by a majority of its directors, at least thirty days' notice of the time, place and object of which has been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, and by letter addressed to each stockholder whose place of residence is known. Or, the stock may be increased at a meeting of the stockholders at which all are present in person, or by proxy, and waive in writing such notice by publication and letter; and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount thereof to which they agree. A certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state.
> "Sec. 8699. Upon the assent in writing of three-fourths in number of the stockholders of a corporation, representing at least three-fourths of its capital stock, to increase the capital stock, it may issue and dispose of preferred stock in the manner by law provided therefor. Upon such increase of stock, a certificate shall be filed with the secretary of state, as provided in the next preceding section."

Without entering into a discussion of the reasons therefor, I deem it sufficient to state that I agree with the conclusion expressed by Mr. Hogan in his opinion of March 10, 1914, above referred to, and therefore advise you that it is not required that the certificate of increase of capital stock of a corporation by the issuance of preferred stock contain a statement showing that the authorized capital stock of such corporation has been fully subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of said stock has been paid.

Replying to the second question relative to the authority of the secretary of state to charge, in addition to the fee authorized by law for filing a certificate of increase of capital stock of a corporation, a fee of $5.00 for the filing of such certificate upon the ground or claim that such increase of capital stock amounts to an amendment of the charter of the corporation, I call attention to section 8719, of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state, may amend its articles of incorporation as follows:
> "1. So as to change its corporate name, but not to one already appropriated, or to one likely to mislead the public.
> "2. So as to change the place where it is to be located, or its principal business transacted.
> "3. So as to modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purposes for which it was formed.
> "4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, nor the purpose of its original organization substantially changed."

By the direct provisions of the above quoted section a corporation cannot increase its capital stock by an amendment to its articles of incorporation. It therefore follows that an increase of the capital stock of an incorporation cannot be construed as an amendment to its articles of incorporation. Therefore the fee for filing a certificate amending articles of incorporation required by paragraph 9, of section 176, of the General Code, cannot be exacted by the secretary of state for filing a certificate of increase of capital stock.

I therefore advise you that The Columbia Planter Company may not be required to pay a fee of $5.00 for the filing in your office of its certificate of increase of capital stock on the ground that such increase amounts to an amendment of its articles of incorporation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—LICENSE FEE FOR EACH BRAND OF FEED STUFFS, POULTRY FEEDS, ETC.

The board of agriculture of Ohio may not issue a license under the provisions of section 1143, G. C., 106 O. L., 157, except upon the payment of the full license fee of twenty dollars for each brand of feed stuffs, condimental stock and poultry feeds, animal or poultry regulators, conditioners, tonics or similar articles in each calendar year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 31, 1915.

Board of Agriculture of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In yours under date of August 25, 1915, you submit for an opinion a question which may be stated as follows:

"May the board of agriculture of Ohio prorate the license fee of twenty dollars required to be paid under section 1143, G. C., 106 O. L., 157, and issue licenses thereunder upon the receipt of a sum which bears a like proportion to the total fee required under said section as the period from July 22nd to December 31st, inclusive, bears to the whole period of one year?"

Section 1143, to which reference is made, provides as follows:

"Before selling or offering for sale within this state any of such feed stuffs, condimental stock and poultry feeds, animal or poultry regulators, conditioners, tonics, or similar articles, defined in section 1141 a person, firm or corporation manufacturing or compounding said articles, and selling or offering them for sale, either directly or indirectly in this state, shall pay each year a license fee to the board of agriculture for the sale of each brand of feed stuffs, condimental stock and poultry feeds, animal or poultry regulators, conditioners, tonics or similar articles, twenty dollars.

"The board of agriculture may reject any application for license if the certificate provided for in the preceding sections is misleading or not distinguishing. Upon the granting of such application and the payment of such fee said board shall issue a license for the current year. All licenses shall expire on the thirty-first day of December of each year. The payment of a license fee by such person, firm or corporation shall exempt an agent thereof, or dealer therein, from the requirements of this section; but until such license fee, which shall be the full license fee collected by the state for the privilege of selling or offering for sale any of the said brands in any one year, any person, firm or corporation selling or offering the same for sale shall be liable to the board of agriculture for said license fee of twenty dollars."

Bearing in mind that public officers have only such authority as is expressly granted by statute or which is necessarily implied as being essential to the execution of power or the performance of a duty so expressly imposed, I am of opinion that the answer to your inquiry must be in the negative. No express authority for prorating such license fee for that portion of the calendar year subsequent to the taking effect of section 1143, G. C., supra, can be found, and I am unable to conceive of a theory upon which it might be asserted that such authority is necessary to the performance of any duty imposed upon the board by the act in which said section is found (Am. Sen. Bill No. 250, 106 O. L., 143) or other law of this state. It would, therefore, follow that the board is without such authority.

If there were doubt upon this question it would, to my mind, be completely dispelled by a consideration of that part of section 1143, as follows:

"The payment of a license fee by such person, firm, or corporation shall exempt an agent thereof, or dealer therein, from the requirements of this section; but until such license fee which shall be the full license fee collected by the state for the privilege of selling or offering for sale any of the said brands in any one year, any person, firm or corporation selling or offering the same for sale shall be liable to the board of agriculture for said license fee of twenty dollars."

From this it would seem clear that the intention of the legislature was that no agent should be exempt from the provisions of this section until the full license fee shall have been paid. That is, the legislative intent is by this made especially free from doubt that in every instance the full license fee shall be paid in each calendar year.

The answer to the foregoing question obviates the necessity of further reference to the matter of the issuance of licenses in such cases, after the beginning of the calendar year.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES—NO PROVISION CONCERNING AMOUNT TO BE CHARGED APPLICANT FOR SECURING EMPLOYMENT —REGISTRATION FEES UNDER SECTION 890, G. C., NOT TO BE CONSTRUED AS CHARGES FOR SECURING EMPLOYMENT EITHER IN WHOLE OR IN PART.

Laws governing private employment agencies make no provisions concerning the amount to be charged by such agencies for securing employment. Registration fees which may be exacted under section 890, G. C., are not to be construed as charges for securing employment either in whole or in part.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 31, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This office is in receipt of a communication from Mr. L. J. Hackney, general counsel of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company, located at Cincinnati, Ohio, which is as follows:

> "I wish to enquire as to your interpretation of those sections of the Ohio Code governing private employment agencies, 886 to 897, inclusive.
> "I am advised that an agency charges, in some instances, $5.00 for obtaining employment. In justification for this, it is said that section 890 limits the fee of $2.00 for registration, but has no application to what the agency may charge for procuring employment. It is also said that the superintendent of the industrial commission has advised that the statute referred to does not place any limits upon the amount which may be charged for employment. I am impressed that this is certainly not the spirit of the statute. The value of registration would seem to be unimportant and the requirement that the fee therefor shall be returned in case there is no employment indicates that employment is the service for which the fee may be retained.
> "I would be glad to have your views of the question, as my company is obliged to consider it very frequently."

In the letter Mr. Hackney refers to sections 886 to 897, inclusive, of the General Code, and particularly section 890 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "When a registration fee is charged for receiving or filing applications for employment or help, it shall not exceed two dollars, for which a receipt shall be given containing the date, name of applicant, amount of fee and character of employment or help desired. If the applicant does not obtain a situation or employment through the agency within one month after registration, and makes a demand therefor within thirty days after the expiration of the period, the fee paid by him shall be returned to the applicant by the person in charge of the employment agency."

Under the provisions of section 890 a fee of two dollars for registration may be charged the applicant for employment or help, which fee is made returnable to the applicant on his demand within thirty days after the expiration of a one month period after registration if the applicant has not been secured employment during the month.

The charging of the fee for registration is not to be construed as a charge for the securing of employment, but rather is to be regarded as an act on the part of an applicant for help or employment evidencing his good faith, and as a guarantee to the employment agency that effort to secure help or employment for the applicant will not be wasted. The statutes covering this question are silent with reference to the amount which may be charged by a private employment agency to applicants for whom they may secure employment, and it is my opinion that the statutes do not fix a limit to charges which may be made by a private employment agency for securing employment, that matter being left entirely to the agreement between the private employment agency and the applicant.

A bill which was prepared and presented in the last session of the general assembly provided for the posting of a schedule of maximum fees, charges and commissions in every room in which the business of a private employment agency was conducted; also its filing with the industrial commission of Ohio. While the bill did not fix the fees, it sought to compel private employment agencies to establish maximum charges and lodged with the industrial commission of Ohio supervision over all questions arising thereunder. However, the bill failed to become a law.

A copy of this opinion has been sent to Mr. Hackney, who made the request.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

FORMER SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—MAY NOW SUBMIT BID FOR WORK ON PLANS PREPARED WHILE HE WAS SUPERINTENDENT—CAN BE AWARDED CONTRACT.

The fact that a former superintendent of public works having while superintendent prepared plans and estimates for work to be done under competitive bidding has, since leaving office, associated himself with a certain corporation does not preclude such corporation from submitting a bid in pursuance of advertisement for competitive bids and being awarded a contract for such work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915,

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 23, 1915, you submitted the following for official opinion:

> "Bids were opened by this department on the 12th of August, for the dismantling of a canal dredge on the Miami and Erie canal at Lockland, Ohio, and the construction of a new hull on the Ohio canal at Cleveland, upon which the contractor was required to install the machinery removed from the dismantled dredge, in other words, to build a new dredge, using the old machinery.
> "When the bids were opened and tabulated, it was found that the Mueller Construction Co., of Columbus, Ohio, was the low bidder. John I. Miller, late superintendent of public works, is now a member of this firm, and the question has been raised as to whether or not this department can legally enter into a contract with this company under the circumstances. The same question arises in regard to letting the contract for rebuilding the aqueduct over Mill creek, in the village of Carthage, Ohio, this firm being the low bidder for this work.

"The prices bid for these two jobs are quite reasonable, and if there are no legal objections to awarding the contracts to this firm, I shall be glad to do so."

There is no consideration of public policy that would enter into this question as it appears to me, for the reason that Mr. Miller is no longer the superintendent of public works and the bid submitted by the company with which he has associated himself since leaving the office of superintendent of public works was in pursuance of an advertisement for competitive bids. The only question, therefore, is whether or not there is any statutory inhibition covering the matter.

Section 12910 of the General Code does not apply, nor does section 12911.

Section 12914 reads as follows:

"Whoever, being a member of a board of public works, engineers, superintendent, collector of tolls, gatekeeper, weighmaster, inspector, secretary, clerk or other person holding office under such board, during the location or construction of a canal or feeder, is interested in a contract for purchase of lands, town lots or water privileges for hydraulic purposes on or adjacent to a canal or feeder under the charge of such board, or for labor, construction or supplies thereon, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars and forfeit his office."

Without considering said section and its various provisions, it is sufficient to say that said section only covers the superintendent while he is acting as superintendent, and does not apply to a person who has ceased to be superintendent.

There being no statutory provision governing the matter, nor is it against public policy to award the contract to the company with which Mr. Miller has associated himself since leaving office, the same being on a bid submitted in pursuance of an advertisement for competitive bids, I am of the opinion that you may award the contract to the company in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—TRUSTEES OF COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT—CONTRACT FOR RECITATION BUILDING—CANNOT AWARD SAME UNTIL APPROPRIATION BECOMES AVAILABLE.

The trustees of the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University are not authorized to let a contract for the recitation building until the appropriation becomes available, to wit, on July 1, 1916.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 25th you submitted to me the following inquiry:

"The combined normal and industrial department at Wilberforce University proposes to erect two buildings, one known as a gymnasium and the other as a recreation building. The general assembly appropriated for the

Gymnasium the sum of.....$40,000.00
Recreation building the sum of..... 60,000.00

The $40,000.00 is now available. The $60,000.00 is not available until July, 1916.

"The architect has prepared the plans and specifications for both buildings and the board of trustees have approved them.

"The board desires to ask for bids on both buildings at this time, believing that in so doing that better bids may be procured and a better class of contractors would be attracted if there was hope that they would secure contracts amounting to approximately $100,000.00.

"Would there be any objections to filing plans for both buildings with this department, at this time, after same have been approved by the state commission in the usual way, and receiving bids on both buildings? In the awarding of the contracts it would be understood that there could be no money paid out on the recreation building until after July 1, 1916. A definite contract could be entered into for the gymnasium, and a conditional contract made for the recreation building with the stipulation that same should not be an obligation on the state until after July, 1916. The board believes that a contractor would be willing to enter into such a conditional contract and make arrangements to carry on the work with the understanding that he could not be paid any money from the state treasury for the recreation building until same was available.

"The board believes that they would not only effect a saving in the total cost of the two buildings, but would also be able to advance the work and secure the use of the building at a much earlier date than they otherwise would.

"(I assume that you mean by 'recreation' 'recitation' building—106 O. L., 824.)"

The question which you desire answered is whether or not a state office, department or institution can ask for and receive bids for the construction of a building, the appropriation to pay for which is not available at the time the bids are received, and can award a contract on such bid with the understanding that no money should be paid out under such contract until the appropriation becomes available.

I am of the opinion that it cannot. While it may be that the board may have on hand the plans, profiles and estimates at any time prior to the advertising for bids for the particular building covered by such plans, profiles and estimates, without reference as to whether or not the money to pay for such building is available; nevertheless, under the provisions of section 2318, General Code, the officer, board or other authority to whom the bids are submitted is required, on the day named in the notice for bids published, to open the proposals and award the contract to the lowest bidder.

Under the provisions of section 2319, G. C., there is a provision for accepting other than the lowest bid or the rejection of all bids upon written consent of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state. Nevertheless, if such action as is provided for by section 2319 is not contemplated, it is the duty of the particular board or officer to award the contract on the day named in the notice under the provisions of section 2318.

While it is true that under the provisions of section 2318, G. C., the contract entered into by the successful bidder "shall not be binding on the state until submitted to the attorney general and he certifies thereon that he finds it to be in accordance with the provisions of this chapter," nevertheless, the law contemplates that upon the opening of the bids the contract shall be awarded.

Furthermore, should a contract now be awarded for the recitation building with the understanding that there could be no money paid out for such building until after July 1, 1916, nevertheless, if such an agreement were legal, it would create a present contingent liability for the payment of such fund on and after July 1, 1916.

The appropriation of $60,000.00 for the recitation building for the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University is found in section 3, of House Bill No. 701. The prelude to the appropriations made in said section 3 provides as follows:

> "The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

It is apparent, therefore, from the appropriation act itself that the contract cannot be let prior to the money appropriated becoming available.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—REMOVAL OF MEMBER BY GOVERNOR—PROPER LEGAL PROCEDURE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I am in receipt of your request for opinion under date of September 1st, reading as follows:

> "I hereby request a statement from you giving the proper legal procedure to be followed by this office in case it becomes desirable to remove from office a member of the board of administration of the state of Ohio."

Section 1834, of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Sec. 1834. The governor shall have the power to remove any member for want of moral character, incompetency, neglect or breach of duty, or malfeasance in office, the ground to be stated in writing after reasonable opportunity to the member to be heard thereon. The governor shall on each removal report the same to the senate with his reasons therefor. If the senate be not then in session such report shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state and be by him transmitted to the senate within ten days after the beginning of the next session.

"Failure on the part of any member to attend three consecutive meetings of the board unless excused by formal vote thereof may be treated by the governor as his resignation."

(1.) The first step, being the one conferring jurisdiction, is the filing with the governor of written charges against the member of the board of administration upon the ground of either, any two, or of all the following: Want of moral character, incompetency, neglect or breach of duty, or malfeasance in office.

These charges should embody facts which in judgment of law constitute one or more of the above mentioned statutory grounds.

(2.) A copy of said charges, duly certified by the governor as a true copy, should be served personally upon the member of the board by some person designated by the governor, and such person should make return to the governor, showing personal service of the charges upon the accused member. It will not be sufficient that the written charges simply allege that the member was of immoral character, or that he was incompetent, or that he had neglected his duty, or that he had committed a breach of duty, or that he had been guilty of malfeasance in office, for such allegations would be merely legal conclusions. The charges should contain a recital of facts which constitute one or more of the statutory grounds.

(3.) Accompanying the charges should be a notice from the governor stating the time when and place where the accused would be given an opportunity to be heard. The time set in the notice should give the accused a reasonable opportunity to prepare his case and to be present at the appointed place. What is reasonable time is dependent upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case.

(4.) The statute does not require that evidence in addition to the charges filed be offered on behalf of the complainant or, in other words, to support the charges. On the other hand, the governor may, in his sound discretion, hear or receive evidence other than the charges, but which must be material and relevant to the charges contained in the written copy served upon the accused.

It should here be pointed out that the supreme court of Ohio has at least seemed to have held that evidence to support the charges must be offered. See State ex rel. vs. Sullivan, 58 O. S., 504-516. In view of this last mentioned case it would be the safer course to pursue to require evidence in support of the charges though, as above stated, I am of the opinion that the charges when signed by the person who prefers them constitute at least a prima facie case and place the burden upon the accused to refute them. This is contrary to the ordinary procedure in a court of justice, where it is required that evidence to support an indictment must be offered first or the charge fails. Hence, in the application of the above suggestion care must be exercised that no injustice is done the accused.

(5.) At the time and place appointed the charges as filed, a copy of which had theretofore been duly served upon the accused, should be read to the accused and he should be called to offer his defense.

(6.) I am of the opinion that under the cases decided by the supreme court of Ohio, the governor would not have the right arbitrarily to refuse to hear any witnesses offered by the accused as to matters tending to exculpate the accused from the charges as filed. The number of witnesses or the limitation beyond which the testimony on behalf of the accused might go in addition to and outside of that material and relevant as a defense will rest in the sound discretion of the governor. In the absence of abuse of such discretion the courts would be without power to interfere upon such ground.

(7.) No evidence may be offered or considered against the accused which is not relevant and material to the charges as filed, or at least in rebuttal of such evidence as the governor has allowed the accused to offer. The governor will be the sole judge of the relevancy, materiality, weight and sufficiency of all evidence offered, and unless there was a clear abuse amounting to unfairness to the accused the courts would not be authorized to review such matter.

(8.) Whether or not testimony shall be given under oath rests in the sound discretion of the governor. However, the governor would not be authorized to require the evidence of the accused or his witnesses to be given under oath, if the evidence in support of the charges was not also given under the sanctity of an oath.

(9.) Neither the governor, the person or persons preferring the charges, nor the accused have any power to compel the attendance of witnesses nor may a witness be compelled to be sworn. Documentary evidence and signed writings may be admitted, providing they are communicated to the accused.

From the foregoing it will be seen that common sense and fair play, rather than any technical rules, are to govern the procedure. Where charges have been filed with the governor embodying facts which in judgment of law constitute either want of moral character, incompetency, neglect or breach of duty, or malfeasance in office, on the part of a member of the board of administration, a copy of the charges has been served upon the accused member, such accused member has been given reasonable notice of the time and place when and where such charges would be heard and the accused has been given a full and fair opportunity to be heard in his own defense, and testimony is offered in support of the charges (the charges if signed may themselves be offered as a part of the testimony), the action of the governor is final and cannot be reviewed by the courts.

(10.) If the governor should remove a member of the board of administration, it will be the duty of the governor to file a report of such removal with the reasons therefor in the office of the secretary of state, the senate not being in session.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—SHOULD CERTIFY FOR APPOINTMENT TO POSITIONS IN SERVICE THOSE PERSONS WHO HAVE TAKEN NON-COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS, IN ADDITION TO THREE OTHER CANDIDATES FOR POSITIONS.

Provision for certifying incumbents under section 486-31, G. C., civil service act, valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your request for opinion of September 1st, reading as follows:

"Section 10 of article XV of the constitution of Ohio, reads as follows:

" 'Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the state, the several counties and cities, shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained as far as practicable by competitive examination. Laws shall be passed providing for the enforcement of this provision.'

"Section 486-2 of the civil service law of Ohio, enacted by the general assembly of 1913, reads as follows:

" 'On and after January 1, 1914, appointments to and promotions in the service of the state, counties, cities and city school districts thereof, shall be made only according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by examinations which, as far as practicable, shall be competitive, etc.'

"Section 486-2 of the civil service law passed May 27, 1915, reads:

" 'On and after the taking effect of this act, appointments to and promotions in the service of the state, the several counties, cities, and city school districts thereof, shall be made only according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by competitive examinations.'

"Section 486-31 of the civil service act, passed May 27, 1915, provides as follows:

" 'The name of each officer, employe, and subordinate holding a position in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities, and city school districts thereof, at the time this act takes effect, who has not passed a regular competitive examination, and who has not been in the service seven years, as herein provided, shall, within ten days after this act becomes effective, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission, and shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. If any such person is appointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act, etc.'

"Will you kindly render your opinion in regard to the following question:

"In view of the wording of the constitutional amendment, and the evident intent of both laws to carry out the provisions of this amendment, can this commission legally certify for appointment to positions in the service, those persons who have taken non-competitive examinations; and is not the paragraph of section 486-31 which provides for the certification of non-competitives in contravention of the constitutional provisions, and the intent of the civil service law?"

Without entering into any lengthy discussion of the whys and wherefores, it is my opinion that the commission may legally and should certify for appointment to positions in the service those persons who have taken non-competitive examinations, by virtue of which examinations they were holding positions at the time said act became effective, in addition to three other candidates for such positions.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHERE A QUESTION OF CENTRALIZATION HAS BEEN SUBMITTED TO VOTERS OF A SCHOOL DISTRICT AND VOTED DOWN, THE SAME PROPOSAL CANNOT AGAIN BE SUBMITTED TO A VOTE WITHIN A PERIOD OF TWO YEARS, EXCEPT UPON PETITION OF FORTY PER CENT. OF THE ELECTORS OF SAID DISTRICT—IF BOND ISSUE FOR PURPOSE OF ERECTING SCHOOL BUILDING HAS BEEN SUBMITTED TO ELECTORS AND CARRIED, NOT NECESSARY TO RESUBMIT QUESTION.

Upon the filing of a petition of at least forty per cent. of the electors of a school district, asking for a resubmission of the question of centralizing the schools of said district, the board of education of said district, acting under authority of section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, may, by resolution, determine to resubmit said proposition to a vote of said electors, at a special election called for that purpose, and in said resolution fix the time for holding said special election.

The question of issuing bonds for the purpose of erecting a suitable school building, purchasing a site, etc., having been submitted to a vote of the electors of said district by the board of education of said district, under authority and in compliance with the provisions of section 7625, G. C., at the same time that the question of centralization was first submitted, and a majority of said electors, voting on said proposition, having voted in favor of said bond issue, it will not be necessary to resubmit this question to a vote of said electors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

HON. ELI H. SPEIDEL, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 16, 1915, which is as follows:

"On August 11, 1915, by order of the board of education of Miami school district, there was submitted to the electors of said district, the proposition of centralization of the schools.

"This district is composed of about eight or ten districts. There was at the same time submitted the proposition of issuing $20,000.00 in bonds for the purpose of erecting a suitable school building, purchasing a site, etc. The proposition to issue the $20,000.00 in bonds carried, but the question of centralization lost.

"The board of education now seeks to secure a petition of forty per cent. of the electors of said district in order that the question of centralization may be submitted to the electors of that district.

"Is there anything in the law that would prohibit this question of centralization being submitted to the voters at a special election to be called the latter part of November, or early in December, 1915?

"Would it be necessary to again vote upon the question of issuing bonds, or would the old vote stand provided the question of centralization should carry at the second election?"

Section 4726, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, provides:

"A rural board of education may submit the question of centralization, and, upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such rural district, or upon the order of the county board of education, must submit such question to the vote of the qualified electors of such rural district at a general election or a special election called for that purpose. If more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, such rural board of education shall proceed at once to the centralization of the schools of the rural district, and, if necessary, purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or building thereon. If, at such election, more votes are cast against the proposition of centralization than for it, the question shall not again be submitted to the electors of such rural district for a period of two years, except upon the petition of at least forty per cent. of the electors of such district.''

The question of centralization having been submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of the school district referred to in your inquiry, and a majority of said electors, voting on the question, having voted against said proposition, the same cannot again be submitted to a vote for a period of two years, except upon the petition of at least forty per cent. of the electors of said district. If, however, such a petition is filed with said board of education of said district, said proposition may be resubmitted to a vote at a general election or at a special election called for that purpose, the same as in the first instance.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that upon the filing of said petition with the board of education of said district said board may, under authority of the above provision of section 4726, G. C., by resolution, determine to resubmit said proposition to a vote of the qualified electors of said district, at a special election called for that purpose, and in said resolution fix the time for holding said special election.

The question of issuing bonds for the purposes mentioned in your letter having been submitted to the electors of said district by the board of education of said district, under authority and in compliance with the provisions of section 7625, G. C., and a majority of said electors, voting on said proposition, having voted in favor of said bond issue, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that it will not be necessary to resubmit this question to a vote of said electors.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE—THE SEVEN YEARS' CONTINUOUS SERVICE MAY NOT BE CUMULATED BY SERVICES IN COUNTY, CITY OR OTHER POLITICAL SUBDIVISION OF STATE—MUST BE SEVEN YEARS OF CONTINUOUS AND SATISFACTORY SERVICE IN SOME ONE OR MORE OF STATE DEPARTMENTS.

Under section 486-31, G. C., the term of service in state or one or more subdivisions may not be cumulated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter in which you request an opinion, as follows:

''Section 486-31 of the General Code, as amended at the last session of the general assembly (106 O. L., p. 400), makes it the duty of this commission, within ten (10) days after the act above mentioned becomes effective, to report to the civil service commission the name of each officer, employe and subordinate holding a position in the classified service, who has not passed a regular competitive examination and who has not been in the service for the period of seven years prior to January 1, 1915.

"In order that we may comply with the provisions of the civil service law in certifying such names, we desire your opinion as to whether the seven years' period of service referred to in said section must be a continuous period of service in the same position or in the same department in the state government, or whether the act simply contemplates seven years of continuous service, whether that service has been in the same or different departments of the state government, or partly in the service of the state and partly in the service of the county, city or other political subdivision.

"Trusting that we may have your reply at an early date in order to enable us to comply with the provisions of said act at the earliest possible date, we are,"

Section 486-31 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., 418), is as follows:

All officers, employes and subordinates in the classified service of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, holding their positions under existing civil service laws, and who are holding such positions by virtue of having taken a regular competitive examination as provided by law, shall, when this act takes effect, be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act; but no person holding a position in the classified service by virtue of having taken a noncompetitive examination shall be deemed to have been appointed or to be an appointee in conformity with the provisions of this act; provided, however, that all persons who have served the state or any political subdivision thereof continuously and satisfactorily for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915, shall be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act.

The name of each officer, employe and subordinate holding a position in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof at the time this act takes effect, who has not passed a regular competitive examination and who has not been in the service seven years as herein provided, shall, within ten days after this act becomes effective, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission and shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. If any such person is reappointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act. If no eligible list exists such person may be retained as a provisional employe until such time, consistent with reasonable diligence, as the commission can prepare eligible lists when such position shall be filled as prescribed in this act; provided that nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to vacate the office of existing chiefs of police departments or chiefs of fire departments of municipalities. All existing eligible lists of persons who have taken regular competitive examinations shall continue in force for the term of eligibility to be fixed by the commission as provided herein. All property of the existing state commission shall become the property of the commission to be appointed hereunder."

It is my opinion that a person who has served continuously in any one or more departments of the state government, or any person who has served continuously in any one or more departments of a single political subdivision of the state, for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915, shall be deemed appointees within the provisions of the act.

I am of the opinion that periods of service in the county, city or other political subdivisions of the state may not be cumulated with a period of service for the state to make up the seven years' continuous service, or vice versa. In other words, the seven years' continuous and satisfactory service must have been service to the state in some one or more of the state departments to bring the person within the provisions of the act; similarly as to the various political subdivisions.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MAYOR OF VILLAGE MUST APPOINT CEMETERY TRUSTEES—COUNCIL WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PLACE CONTROL OF VILLAGE CEMETERIES WITH BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

Mayors of villages must appoint cemetery trustees as provided by section 4175, G. C. Village councils are without authority to enact ordinances whereby village cemeteries are placed under the control of the board of trustees of public affairs.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of August 28, 1915, in which you submit the following inquiry:

> "Is it mandatory upon the mayors of villages to appoint a board of cemetery trustees as authorized to do by section 4175, General Code; or if the mayor does appoint such board in conflict with the wishes of council, which by ordinance has imposed the duty of managing the village cemetery upon the board of public affairs, which authority is supreme?"

The powers and duties of the board of trustees of public affairs of villages are defined by section 4361 of the General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 561. By the express terms of this section the control of village cemeteries is not conferred upon said board, and it is, therefore, without authority from this section to take charge of village cemeteries. This was so held in an opinion by this department, reported at page 866 of the attorney general's report for 1914.

Your inquiry states that council by ordinance has conferred this authority upon said board. I assume that said ordinance was enacted under the provisions of the last clause of said section 4361, G. C., as amended aforesaid, which provides:

> "and such boards shall have such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinance not inconsistent herewith."

While the management and control of cemeteries of villages by the board of trustees of public affairs would not be inconsistent with its duties as expressly imposed by said section 4361, G. C., supra, yet I incline to the opinion that this duty cannot be inferred as one of the duties which may be prescribed by ordinance, as provided in the last clause of said section.

The state has elected, by the provisions of section 4175, G. C., to control this subject directly. This section confers upon mayors of villages owning a public cemetery the power to appoint a board of three members, to be known as the board of cemetery trustees. The authority thus conferred is exclusive. It cannot be presumed that the state intended, by the grant of power in the last clause of said section 4361, G. C., to include therein any matter which had already been covered by direct legislation. In other words, while municipal corporations may be given the power to provide regulations in local matters which are covered by state laws of general application, yet this rule cannot apply when the state, by a law which is applicable only to municipalities, has fully provided for the matter in question. If this were permitted, the result would be a conflict of jurisdiction such as is presented in your inquiry.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that said section 4175, G. C., controls and that the ordinance in question is null and void, from want of power in the village council to enact, and that the mayor of said village must appoint its board of cemetery trustees.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHERE CONTRACT MADE FOR DEPOSIT OF FUNDS PRIOR TO MAY 15, 1915, WHICH CONTRACT WILL NOT EXPIRE UNTIL JULY 1, 1916, IT IS THE DUTY OF BOARD TO LET NEW CONTRACT FOR FUNDS WITHIN THIRTY DAYS AFTER FIRST MONDAY IN JANUARY, 1916—WHEN CONTRACT BEGINS AND ENDS—UNDER AMENDED SECTION 7604, G. C., BOARD MAY LET CONTRACT FOR DEPOSIT OF ITS FUNDS, WHICH CONTRACT SHALL EXPIRE WITHIN THIRTY DAYS AFTER FIRST MONDAY IN JANUARY, 1918.

Under the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 328, it will be the duty of the board of education of a school district, which prior to May 15, 1915, made a contract for the deposit of its funds, which contract by its terms will not expire until July 1, 1916, to let a new contract for the deposit of said funds within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1916, to commence with the date of the expiration of the existing contract and to expire within thirty days from the first Monday in January, 1918.

Where a contract was made subsequent to said date of May 15, 1915, and prior to August 26, 1915, for a term of two years, the provisions of said amended section will terminate said contract within said thirty day period and require the letting of a new contract in compliance with said provisions.

The board of education of a school district may, under authority of said section 7604, G. C., as amended and now in force, let a contract for the deposit of its funds, which contract, by its terms, shall expire within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1918.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

HON. C. A. WILMOT, Prosecuting Attorney, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letters of August 14th and August 26th you call my attention to the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 328, which is as follows:

> "That within thirty days after the first Monday of January, 1916, and every two years thereafter, the board of education of any school district by resolution shall provide for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of its treasurer. But no bank shall receive a deposit larger than the amount of its paid in capital stock, and in no event to exceed three hundred thousand dollars."

The act of the general assembly, known as Amended Senate Bill No. 163, amending this section, as well as sections 7605 and 7609, of the General Code, was passed May 15, 1915, and became effective August 26, 1915.

The questions on which you request my opinion may be stated as follows:

> "1. Where the board of education of a school district established a depository for the school funds of said district prior to May 15, 1915, under authority and in compliance with the provisions of sections 7604 to 7608, inclusive, of the General Code, as then in force, and the contract with such depository, by its terms, will not expire until July 1, 1916, will the above provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended, terminate said contract and require said board of education to let a new contract within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1916?
> "2. Where the contract was made subsequent to said date of May 15, 1915, and prior to August 26, 1915, for a term of two years, will the provisions of said amended section terminate said contract within said thirty-day period and require the letting of a new contract in compliance with said provisions?
> "3. May a board of education establish a depository at the present time to extend beyond said thirty-day period?"

The provisions of section 7604, G. C., as in force prior to August 26, 1915, made it the duty of the board of education of every school district to provide a depository for the funds of such district. While said provisions were mandatory, nevertheless, many boards of education did not comply with their requirements and the statutes, as then in force, nowhere provided a penalty for such non-compliance.

The legislature, with the intent of making effective said mandatory provisions, provided such a penalty by amending section 7609, G. C. The provisions of this section, as amended by said amended senate bill No. 163, must therefore be considered in connection with the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended and as above quoted.

Section 7609, as amended (106 O. L., 328), provides as follows:

> "When a depository is lawfully provided, and the funds are deposited therein, the treasurer of the school district and his bondsmen shall be relieved from any liability occasioned by the failure of the bank or banks of deposit or by the failure of the sureties therefor, or by the failure of either of them, except as above provided in cases of excessive deposits. Upon the failure of the board of education of any school district to provide a depository according to law the members of the board of education shall be liable for any loss occasioned by their failure to provide such depository, and in addition shall pay to the treasurer of the school funds two per cent. on the average daily balance on the school funds during the time said school district shall be without a depository. Said moneys may be recovered from the members of the board of education for the use and benefit of the school funds of the district upon the suit of any taxpayer of the school district."

It will be observed that section 7604, G. C., as amended, provided a definite period of time within which the board of education of every school district shall provide for the deposit of the funds of such district.

If, upon the expiration of the thirty-day period provided by said section, the board of education of a school district is without a depository for its funds, the members of said board will be liable, under the provisions of section 7609, G. C., as amended, for any loss caused by their failure to provide such depository, and in addition thereto shall be required to pay, to the treasurer of said school funds, two per cent. on the average daily balance of said funds during the time said district shall be without such depository.

It cannot be held that the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended, will terminate a contract made prior to May 15, 1915, the date of the passage of said amended senate bill No. 163, for the reason that, under such a holding, said statute as amended would be retroactive and in violation of section 28, of article II, of the constitution of the state, which provides that the general assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws, or laws impairing the obligations of contracts.

I am of the opinion, however, in answer to the first question above stated, that, under the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended, it will be the duty of the board of education of a school district which, prior to May 15, 1915, made a contract for the deposit of its funds, which contract by its terms will not expire until July 1, 1916, to let a new contract for the deposit of said funds within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1916, to commence with the date of the expiration of the existing contract and to expire within thirty days from the first Monday in January, 1918.

This procedure will, I think, comply with the requirements of said section 7604, G. C., as amended, and will be in keeping with the legislative intent to make the time of letting contracts for the deposit of school funds, and the term of such contracts, uniform throughout the state.

In keeping with former opinions rendered by me, I am of the opinion that a contract for the deposit of school funds, entered into subsequent to May 15, 1915, and prior to August 26, 1915, was made in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amended senate bill No. 163, and that said contract is subject to the provisions of section 7604, G. C., as amended, the same as a contract made subsequent to August 26, 1915, the date when said amended section became effective.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to the second question above stated, that the contract therein referred to will be terminated by the provisions of said section 7604, G. C., as amended, and that it will be the duty of the board of education which made said contract to let a new contract within the thirty-day period mentioned in said section, for the term of two years.

While I am of the opinion that the board of education of a school district, in establishing a depository for its funds at the present time may provide, by the terms of the contract, that the same shall expire within the thirty-day period provided by section 7604, G. C., as amended, I do not think that the provisions of said statute are mandatory in this respect. On the contrary, I think it was the intention of the legislature, in amending sections 7604 and 7609, of the General Code, to fix a definite period of time beyond which no school district shall be without a depository for its funds and, as before stated, to make the time of letting such contracts, and the terms thereof, uniform throughout the state.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to the third question above stated, that the board of education of a school district may, under authority of section 7604, G. C., as amended and as now in force, let a contract for the deposit of its funds, which contract by its terms shall expire within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1918. This will be a substantial compliance with the requirements of said section 7604, G. C., as amended, and will work to the advantage of the school district for which such depository is to be provided, for the reason that the letting of the contract for the longer term will cause banks, in bidding for the deposit of the funds of said district, to offer a higher rate of interest than would be offered for the short term expiring within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1916.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

REVETMENT WALL AT LAKE ST. MARYS, OHIO—BALANCE OF APPROPRIATION MADE IN 1914 IS STILL AVAILABLE—APPROPRIATION BILL FOR 1915 DID NOT LAPSE BALANCE.

Balance of appropriation of $40,000 for continuation of revetment wall at Lake St. Marys, made in house bill No. 53, 104 O. L., 221, is still available, not having been repealed by section 6 of house bill No. 314, 106 O. L., 101.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1915.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of August 24th, wherein you submit the following:

> "The general assembly of Ohio, by an act passed February 16, 1914, making sundry apropriations, allowed the department of public works the sum of $40,000.00 for continuing the revetment wall at Lake St. Marys.
>
> "By an act of the general assembly passed March 12th, 1915, it was provided that all unexpended balances in any appropriation account against which there is no liability on February 16, 1915, and any excess of such balances over liabilities, shall lapse into the fund from which the same was appropriated.
> "After the wall was completed, there remained a balance of $5,465.29 in this fund. This retaining wall runs along the inner slope of the reservoir and forms the west boundary of a public road that runs over the top of the reservoir embankment. This produces a serious situation for vehicles passing along the same, as parties driving upon the roadway run the risk of slipping over the steep slope into the ditch back of the wall. In order to prevent any such catastrophe, it was intended in the original plans to fill the ditch back of the wall with earth, and to erect along the top of the retaining wall a heavy iron railing. Accordingly, on the 24th of June advertisements were inserted in newspapers asking for bids on the back filling, to be opened on July 2d, 1915. When the bids were opened, it was found that Joseph Mueller, of Van Wert, Ohio, was the low bidder. In this case, the question arises as to whether or not the appropriation of February 16, 1914, out of which payment was to be made had not already lapsed?''

In opinion No. 296, rendered April 27, 1915, to Honorable A. V. Donahey, auditor of state (a copy of which is herewith enclosed), I held as follows:

''In conclusion, then, it is my opinion that house bill No. 314, passed in 1915, has the substantial, though not technical, effect of repealing so much of house bill No. 53, passed by the eightieth general assembly, as relates to the subjects for which appropriations are made in said house bill No. 314; but that as to those appropriations made in house bill No. 53 for purposes not covered by the 1915 law, the latter has no effect whatever.''

The appropriation of $40,000.00 for continuing the revetment wall at Lake St. Marys was made in house bill No. 53, referred to in the former opinion, the conclusion of which is quoted above. There was no appropriation relating to the same subject-matter made in house bill No. 314, which is the act referred to by you as passed March 12, 1915, nor is there any language found in the appropriation bill—H. B. No. 701—passed at the recent session of the legislature which will in any way affect the appropriation made in house bill No. 53 passed in 1914.

In the opinion to which I have heretofore referred, I stated as follows:

''It is clear that the appropriation accounts in question (the appropriations made in house bill No. 53, passed in 1914), unless affected by house bill No. 314, passed by the present session of the general assembly, continue to be available for disbursement and to constitute authority for the incurring of liabilities, and will continue to be such, unless exhausted, until two years from the passage of house bill No. 53, in so far as the same are for the current expenses of the state government or its institutions, or until two years from a date ninety days subsequent thereto, with respect to other appropriations of a continuing character.''

I am, therefore, of the opinion that section 6, of house bill No. 314, did not lapse the balance of $5,465.29 of the $40,000.00 appropriation made in house bill No. 53 for continuing the revetment wall at Lake St. Marys, and that, therefore, the same was on July 2, 1915, and still is available for the letting of the contract in question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AUDITOR OF STATE—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO APPOINT AN INSPECTOR TO INSPECT MATERIALS DURING CONSTRUCTION OF A COURT HOUSE—BUILDING INSPECTION.

Auditor of state as chief inspector and supervisor of public offices, is without authority to appoint an inspector to inspect materials as they enter into work of construction of a building.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 3, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of August 28th you wrote me as follows:

"We are submitting herewith letter and resolution from the new court house building commission of Hamilton county, addressed to Hon. A. V. Donahey, auditor of state, requesting the appointment of an inspector from this department to inspect the materials as they enter into the work of the new court house being constructed there.

"Can such employment be legally made, and if so, how is the inspector to be paid?

"An early reply will be greatly appreciated as the commission is anxious in regard to this matter."

The letter and resolution accompanying your letter are as follows:

"CINCINNATI, OHIO, August 20, 1915.

"THE HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—Attached to this please find a resolution passed by our commission.

"This resolution covers the ground, but before final action (as our fund is limited) we would like to hear from you in regard to the expense entailed. We were told that it would probably be necessary for you to assign some one here and that the expense would be $10.00 a day through the entire progress of the work—which will be from 24 to 30 months from now. This seems to run into a good deal of money, and we are wondering if you can suggest some plan which would be more economical and at the same time entirely satisfactory to you.

"Yours very truly,

"THE COURT HOUSE BUILDING COMMISSION.

"(Signed) JAMES A. GREEN, President.

"Be it Resolved by the Hamilton county new court house building commission that the state auditor be and he is hereby requested to have a representative from the department of the bureau of inspection and examination of public offices present on the job during the construction of the new Hamilton county court house, it being the judgment of this commission that it would be to the public interest to have an inspector from said department on hand during the progress of the work to inspect the materials as they enter into the work, and also examine the accounts as the work progresses, rather than to have such inspection and examination made after the building is completed; that the clerk be and he is hereby directed to certify a copy of this resolution to the auditor of the state of Ohio.

"I hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the resolution adopted by the new court house building commission at its meeting on Tuesday, August 17, 1915.

"(Signed) GEO. O. DECKEBACH, Secy."

It appears from the resolution that the Hamilton county new court house building commission has filed a request with the auditor of state to have a representative from the department of bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices present on the job during the construction of the new Hamilton county court house, and the question naturally arises as to whether or not the auditor is legally authorized to make such an appointment and, if so, how the inspector is to be paid.

Section 274, G. C., provides that there shall be a bureau of inspection, etc., in the department of the auditor of state "to inspect and supervise the accounts and reports of all state offices, etc., and the offices of each taxing district, or public institution in the state of Ohio. * * *".

Another section of the statute authorizes the auditor of state to prescribe and require the installation of a system of accounting and reporting for the public offices which shall be uniform. (Section 277, G. C.)

Section 284, G. C., provides the time of the examination of all offices, and further provides:

"On examination, inquiry shall be made into the methods, accuracy and legality of the accounts, records, files and reports of the office, whether the laws, ordinances and orders pertaining to the office have been observed, and whether the requirements of the bureau have been complied with."

Section 286, G. C., provides for the substance and filing of such reports, and further provides:

"If the report sets forth that any public money has been illegally expended or that any public money collected has not been accounted for, or that any public property has been converted or misappropriated action shall be brought."

The above statutes are the ones which set forth the powers and duties of the bureau and prescribe their limits, and I am unable to find in any of the powers prescribed the right of the auditor of state or the bureau to assign an inspector to superintend the work or pass upon the material being placed in a building under construction. His duty is to examine the accounts after the building has been constructed and the money paid, in order to determine the legality of such payments.

While it might be for the best interests of the particular taxing district that an inspector appointed by the bureau should be "on the job" during the construction of the court house, nevertheless the law does not contemplate the appointment of such an inspector by the bureau, and, consequently, I do not believe that such an appointment can be legally made.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF CONTRACT BETWEEN BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF BOWLING GREEN STATE NORMAL COLLEGE AND CLARENCE G. TAYLOR AS RECEIVER OF THE LAKE ERIE, BOWLING GREEN AND NAPOLEON RAILWAY COMPANY FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER FOR COLLEGE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 3, 1915.

HON. J. E. SHATZEL, Secretary Board of Trustees, Bowling Green State Normal College, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am returning herewith the proposed contract between the board of trustees of the Bowling Green State Normal College and Clarence G. Taylor, as receiver of the Lake Erie, Bowling Green and Napoleon Railway Company, for electric light and power, with my approval endorsed thereon.

This contract has been changed so as to comply with the suggestions made in an opinion rendered to you on August 11, 1915, wherein it was suggested that provision should be made for the payment of arbitrators, in the event the same were appointed in accordance with article 8 of the agreement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO CANCEL LEASE OF CANAL PROPERTY FOR REASON THAT LESSEE DOES NOT DESIRE TO LONGER USE LEASED PROPERTY.

The superintendent of public works is without authority to cancel a lease of canal property merely because the lessee, or the assignee of the lessee, does not desire to longer use the leased property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 4, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 18, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "The commissioners of Miami county, Ohio, after the flood of 1913, built a bridge on a new site across the Miami river and the canal, which parallels the river in the city of Piqua, Ohio. The approach to the new bridge is obscured by the buildings on a leasehold of state canal property now owned by Mrs. Irene Edge Simes, and for which she pays an annual rental of $30.00.
> "The commissioners have arranged to purchase Mrs. Simes' building, and are asking this department to cancel the lease. In other words, the city desires to be relieved of the payment of the rental, which will amount to about $400.00 for the unexpired term of the lease. It appears from the letter which I herewith submit, that some of my predecessors have indicated their willingness to cancel this lease.

"What I desire to know is, whether or not, I have the authority to cancel this lease under the existing circumstances?"

The letter to which you refer and which is submitted by you is from the clerk of the board of commissioners of Miami county and adds little to the facts stated by you. The arrangement between the commissioners and Mrs. Simes is, as I understand it, merely to the effect that for an agreed consideration Mrs. Simes is to transfer her lease to the county commissioners, the transfer to be subject, of course, to the approval of the superintendent of public works. The commissioners are now asking you whether you will cancel the lease and relieve them from further payment of rent in case they carry out their arrangement with Mrs. Simes, and you inquire as to your authority to cancel a lease under such circumstances.

I know of no statute which authorizes the superintendent of public works to cancel a lease of canal property merely because the lessee does not desire to longer use the same. The term of canal leases is fixed by the statute at fifteen years, and while this department has approved leases of canal lands containing a clause authorizing the superintendent of public works to cancel such leases in case an opportunity should arise to lease the property in question for electric railway purposes, yet it would be going much farther than that to hold that the superintendent of public works has authority to cancel a lease of canal lands merely because the lessee does not care to longer use the same.

I am of the opinion that no such authority exists in the superintendent of public works, and that you are not authorized, under the circumstances set forth by you, to cancel the lease in question and relieve the lessee, or her assignee, from the payment of subsequent installments of rent due under the lease.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—APPROVAL OF CONTRACT FOR TUNNEL FROM BOTANY AND ZOOLOGICAL BUILDING TO ELEVENTH AVENUE—APPROVAL OF CONTRACT WITH THE CLEVELAND TRINIDAD PAVING COMPANY FOR NEIL AVENUE ROADWAY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 7, 1915.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On September 3, 1915, you submitted for my approval two contracts entered into by your board, one on September 2, 1915, with H. C. McCall for a tunnel from the botany and zoological building to Eleventh avenue on the campus of the Ohio State University, in the sum of $3,333.33, and the other a contract entered into on September 2, 1915, with The Cleveland Trinidad Paving Company for the Neil avenue roadway on the campus of said university, in the sum of $10,000.00. I have carefully examined the advertisement for bids, the contract and bond and find the same to be in all respects proper, and have therefore approved the contract as required by law.

I have obtained from the auditor of state a certificate that there are funds now available for the purposes of said contract.

I have this day filed said contracts with the auditor of state and herewith return you the affidavits in proof of publication of notice calling for bids on said work together with other work, the contracts for which I have still under consideration.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—COMPLIES WITH STATUE GOVERNING STATE AID—SAME WILL BE GRANTED, ALTHOUGH BOARD HAS CONTRACTED TO PAY TEACHERS GREATER SALARY THAN REQUIRED—WHEN COUNTY BOARD CAN DIRECT LOCAL BOARD TO SUSPEND—LOCAL BOARD IS "SUSPENDING AUTHORITY" AND IT IS ITS DUTY TO COMPLY WITH ORDER OF COUNTY BOARD.

If the board of education of a school district complies with all the requirements of the statutes governing state aid, said district will not be debarred from receiving such aid because of the fact that the board of education of such district has contracted to pay certain teachers a greater salary than that required by the provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 430.

Under the provisions of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398 when the average daily attendance of any school in a county district for the preceding year was below ten, the board of education of such county district is authorized to direct the local board of education to suspend said school and transfer the pupils to another school or schools.

It is the duty of such local board to comply with the order of said county board directing such suspension and transfer and to post the notices required by the provisions of said section 7730, G. C., as amended.

The local board of education is the "suspending authority" referred to in the latter part of said section 7730, G. C., as amended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 7, 1915.

HON. G. O. MCGONAGLE, Prosecuting Attorney, McConnelsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 13th, which is as follows:

"Under sections 7595 and 7595-1, G. C., as amended, O. L. Vol. 105-106, page 430, where elementary teachers such as described in section 7595-1 are not to be had, and the board of education of a rural district employ certain teachers at $45 per month for eight months, such teachers not having had at least one year's professional training, but having had six weeks' professional training and from four to six years' teaching experience, such board making levy in accordance with section 7595. May such district receive state aid, its funds being insufficient, or will the fact that it pays $45 per month to teachers not having one year's professional training debar it from receiving state aid?

"Also, under section 7730, G. C., as amended, O. L., 105-106, page 398, which provides, among other things that 'When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education.' * * * * 'Provided, however, that any suspended school as herein provided may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, etc.'

"Does the phrase 'When directed to do so by the county board of education,' refer to the 'suspension,' or to the 'transfer' of pupils, only?

"If the county board directs the suspension, is it mandatory upon the rural board to comply, and must the rural, or county board post the notices of suspension?

"Which board is the 'suspending authority,' where the county board directs that a school be suspended by reason of its average daily attendance being below ten?"

Sections 7595 and 7595-1, G. C., relate to the proper division of school funds and salaries paid teachers in school districts receiving state aid and, as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 430, became effective August 31, 1915. These sections, as amended, provide as follows:

"Sec. 7595. No person shall be employed to teach in any public school in Ohio for less than forty dollars a month. When a school district has not sufficient money to pay its teachers such salaries as are provided in section 7595-1, of the General Code, for eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum legal school levy, at least two-thirds of which shall be for the tuition fund, then such school district may receive from the state treasurer sufficient money to make up the deficit.

"Sec. 7595-1. Only such school districts which pay salaries as follows shall be eligible to receive state aid: Elementary teachers without previous teaching experience in the state, forty dollars a month; elementary teachers having at least one year's professional training, forty-five dollars a month; elementary teachers who have completed the full two years' course in any normal school, teachers' college or university approved by the superintendent of public instruction, fifty-five dollars per month; high school teachers not to exceed an average of seventy dollars per month in each high school."

While the board of education of a rural school district makes the maximum legal school levy, at least two-thirds of which shall be for the tuition fund, and employs certain teachers at $45 per month for eight months of the year, who have not had at least one year's professional training as prescribed by the above provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, you inquire whether such district is eligible to receive state aid.

The well defined policy of the state is to standardize the public schools and to make as nearly equal as possible the advantages of education. It was the intention of the legislature to carry out this policy when it enacted the provisions of sections 7595 and 7595-1, of the General Code, as above quoted, to make it possible for every school district to pay its teachers, having the qualifications prescribed by said section 7595-1, G. C., the salaries mentioned therein for eight months of the year, by providing that, when any school district has not sufficient money to pay such salaries for at least eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum school levy allowed by law, at least two-thirds of which shall be for the tuition fund, such district may receive from the state treasury an amount sufficient to make up the deficit.

The salaries of the teachers of a school district are paid from the tuition fund of such district and, the board of education of said district having complied with the requirements of section 7595, G. C., as amended, in making its school levy, this fund is derived from two sources, as follows:

> "1. From the amount received from the state from the 'state common school fund' and the 'common school fund.'
> "2. From two-thirds of the maximum legal school levy as allowed by the county budget commissioner."

Section 7603, G. C., relates to the apportionment of school funds by the county auditor and provides as follows:

> "The certificate of apportionment furnished by the county auditor to the treasurer and clerk of each school district must exhibit the amount of money received by each district from the state, the amount received from any special tax levy made for a particular purpose, and the amount received from local taxation of a general nature. The amount received from the state common school fund and the common school fund shall be designated the 'tuition fund' and be appropriated only for the payment of superintendents and teachers. Funds received from special levies must be designated in accordance with the purpose for which the special levy was made and be paid out only for such purpose, except that, when a balance remains in such fund after all expenses incident to the purpose for which it was raised have been paid, such balance will become a part of the contingent fund, and the board of education shall make such transfer by resolution. Funds received from the local levy for general purposes must be designated so as to correspond to the particular purpose for which the levy was made. Moneys coming from sources not enumerated herein shall be placed in the contingent fund."

I note, however, that this section has been modified by an act of the general assembly, amending section 5654, G. C., as found in 103 Ohio Laws, page 522, so that the balance remaining in any fund realized from a special levy of taxes, after all expenses incident to the purpose for which it was raised have been paid, will no longer be transferred to the contingent fund and become a part of said contingent fund, as provided in said section 7603, G. C., but said balance shall be transferred by the board of education to the sinking fund of the school district and thereafter shall be subject to the uses of such sinking fund, as provided in said section 5654, G. C., as amended.

The amount which a school district is entitled to receive from the state, under the above provisions of section 7603, G. C., must not be confused with the amount which such district may receive from the state under the conditions provided in section 7595, G. C., as amended, and other sections of the General Code governing state aid to weak school districts.

Expenditures other than salaries of teachers are, by statute, made payable out of the tuition fund, and these must be taken into account in determining the amount available for said salaries.

Section 7596, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 267, provides:

> "Whenever any board of education finds that it will have such a deficit for the current school year, such board shall on the first day of October, or any time prior to the first day of January of said year, make affidavit to the county auditor, who shall send a certified statement of the facts to the state auditor. The state auditor shall issue a voucher on the state treasurer in favor of the treasurer of such school district for the amount of such deficit in the tuition fund."

Under provisions of this section it will be observed that when a board of education of a school district finds that it will have a deficit in its tuition fund for the purpose of paying its teachers the salaries required by provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, said board shall, not later than January first of the current year, make affidavit to the county auditor, who shall send a certified statement of the facts to the state auditor. Upon receipt of such certified statement, showing that said district has complied with all the requirements of the statute governing state aid, and setting forth the estimated deficit of said district for said current year, the state auditor is required to issue a voucher on the state treasurer in favor of the treasurer of said district for the amount of said deficit in the tuition fund.

At the time of making the aforesaid affidavit to the county auditor it is impossible to determine what the actual deficit for the school year will be, and any difference between this said actual deficit and the estimated deficit, should be properly adjusted between the state treasurer and the treasurer of said district at the end of said school year.

The certified statement to the state auditor must show, among other things:

"1. That the board of education of the school district in question made the maximum school levy allowed by law, two-thirds of which was for the tuition fund.

"2. The estimated amount of the tuition fund that will be realized from two-thirds of said levy.

"3. The estimated amount that must be paid from said fund other than for the salaries of teachers.

"4. The estimated amount that will be available for the payment of said salaries.

"5. The number of teachers employed by the board of education of said school district, properly classified according to qualifications prescribed by section 7595-1, G. C., as amended.

"6. The estimated amount of money which will be required in the tuition fund to pay said teachers the salaries provided by said section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, for eight months of the year."

The difference between the estimated amount which will be required in said tuition fund as above set forth in Item 6, and the estimated amount available for said teachers' salaries as set forth in Item 3, will be the amount of the deficit for which the state auditor shall issue a voucher.

As I view it, with the exception of salaries paid to high school teachers, the provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, determine the minimum salaries which the board of education of a school district, which complies with the other provisions of the statute governing state aid to weak school districts, must pay in order to be entitled to receive such aid.

If, therefore, the certified statement of facts from the county auditor shows that the board of education of a school district has complied with all the requirements of the statute governing state aid to weak school districts, I do not think the state auditor is required, before issuing the aforesaid voucher, to determine whether said board of education has contracted to pay its teachers salaries, which in the aggregate will amount to more than the amount required under Item 6, as above set forth.

Under provisions of section 7603, G. C., the contingent fund of said district will be entitled to receive, in addition to the one-third of the amount realized from the maximum legal school levy, all moneys coming from sources not enumerated in said section. If said board of education finds that the amount realized from two-thirds of the maximum legal school levy, together with the amount received from the state as state aid, under authority of section 7595, G. C., as amended, is less than the aggregate amount which said board has contracted to pay its teachers, this difference may be made up by transferring any surplus money in the contingent fund to said tuition fund, under authority of section 2296, G. C., as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 522, and in the manner provided by sections 2297, et seq., of the General Code, or said board may, under authority of section 5656, G. C., and within the limitations therein provided, borrow money for this purpose.

If, therefore, the board of education of the school district referred to in your inquiry complies with all the requirements of the statute governing state aid, I am of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that said district will not be debarred from receiving such aid because of the fact that the board of education of such district has employed certain teachers, with less than one year's professional training, at a salary of $45 per month.

You further inquire whether the phrase, "When directed to do so by the county board of education," as used in section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 398, refers to the suspension of a school or only to the transfer of the pupils.

Section 7730, G. C., as amended, provides:

> "The board of education of any rural or village school district may suspend any or all schools in such village or rural school district. Upon such suspension the board in such village school district may provide, and in such rural school district shall provide, for the conveyance of pupils attending such schools, to a public school in the rural or village district, or to a public school in another district. When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education. No school of any rural district shall be suspended until ten days' notice has been given by the board of education of such district. Such notice shall be posted in five conspicuous places within such village or rural school district; provided, however, that any suspended school as herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the voters of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age."

While that part of the statute referred to in your question is somewhat ambiguous, I think that, where the average daily attendance of any school in a district for the preceding year was below ten, said provision makes it mandatory on the board of education of such district, when directed to do so by the county board of education of the county in which said district is located, to suspend said school and transfer the pupils to another school or schools.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that said provision vests the authority in the county board of education to direct the local board, under the conditions prescribed in said section, to suspend such school and to transfer its pupils.

Replying to your third question, I am of the opinion that the local board must comply with the order of the county board directing such suspension and transfer, and that it is the duty of said local board to post the notices required by the above provision of the statute.

While the county board of education has authority, under the conditions set forth in the statute, to direct the local board to suspend the school and transfer the pupils to another school or schools, the local board must, by resolution setting forth the order of the county board, declare such suspension and transfer of the pupils and provide for posting said notices.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your fourth question, that the local board of education is the "suspending authority" referred to in the latter part of said section 7730, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 1261-34, G. C.—HOW TO MEASURE DISTANCE FROM SALOON TO SCHOOL BUILDING—CONSTRUCTION OF PHRASE "MEASURING THE DISTANCE IN A STRAIGHT LINE FOLLOWING THE STREET FROM THE NEAREST POINT OF THE PREMISES."

Under section 1261-34, G. C., (Greenlund act) the street or streets upon which the school premises abut are made the straight line upon which the respective distances of 200 feet and 300 feet in any direction shall be measured.

Said section does not authorize measuring part of the distance along one street and the balance of the distance along a separate and distinct intersecting street.

The fact that the street upon which school premises abut is curved or broken is immaterial.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of yours of September 4, 1915, reading:

> "Some weeks ago the school house clause of the Greenlund law was referred to your department, and while we understand the same has been under consideration, no opinion has been rendered. Since the filing of the referendum on the McDermott law, we are having very many inquiries from county boards with reference to this matter and would, therefore, be glad to receive your opinion upon the clause."

I have no record of having received a request for an opinion on this matter from your commission, but have been considering the question upon the request of the prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county and others.

As this matter is one that comes particularly under your jurisdiction, and especially in view of your letter, I shall address the opinion to you.

Your question relates to that part of section 1261-34, G. C. (103 O. L., 223), which reads as follows:

> "No license shall be granted after August 1, 1915, to operate a saloon within three hundred feet of any permanent public or parochial school building, measuring the distance in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises on which such school building is located, nor two hundred feet in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises. This provision shall not apply to a bona fide reputable hotel or club; or to a saloon located within three hundred feet of a school house in the central or a main business section of the city."

I have experienced considerable difficulty in interpreting this section, but my difficulty has come from my well grounded notion of what the law ought to be rather than what it is. My duty, however, is to advise you what the law is rather than what I think it should be.

It is true that in construing ambiguous terms and phrases in order that some meaning may be given to a statutory provision and the purpose thereof, when manifest, in some substantial way attained, courts have gone far in the elimination of words, phrases or even perhaps whole sentences or in reading into such provisions such terms as are necessary to give to the same some meaning or to in at least some degree attain the purpose so manifestly sought. But courts are in no instance warranted in indulging in strained, extravagant or exaggerated construction solely for the purpose of a more complete attainment of what may be conceived to be the most desirable end. Courts cannot indulge in judicial legislation for the mere purpose of a more complete accomplishment of even the most laudable end. And while courts have gone to great length to give to legislative expression some meaning that the same may have some substantial effectiveness or at least not result in defeat of the manifest purpose of the enactment, they are never warranted in going beyond the express terms of the legislative declaration for the mere purpose of giving to such legislative expression a more sweeping operative force than that which the plain and ordinary meaning of its terms impart.

In the first place the language contained in the first part of the sentence, "No license shall be granted to operate a saloon within three hundred feet of any permanent public or parochial school building," cannot be said to be the sole declaration of legislative intent when in the same sentence the method is prescribed for measuring the distance. In other words, the evident intent of the legislature, from what they have said, is that no saloon is to be located within three hundred feet of such school building, "measuring the distance in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises on which such school building is located." It is my opinion that the language "in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises on which such school building is located" and the language "two hundred feet in a straight line following the street from the nearest point of the premises" makes the street or streets on which the school building or premises is located the straight line. That is, if the school building or premises abut upon one street only then the measurements may be made along that street only. If the school building or premises abut upon more than one street then the measurements may be made along either of such streets and no saloon may be within the prescribed distance on any such street.

It may be observed here that the "nearest point of the premises" clearly means that point of the premises which is the shortest distance from the saloon, whether such point of the premises be on the side thereof or otherwise.

In ascertaining the three hundred feet distance a line is to be projected at an angle of ninety degrees from the point of the school building nearest the saloon to the street upon which the school premises abut; from this point no saloon may be located on either side of the street within three hundred feet.

To illustrate: Suppose that school premises are located upon a street running north and south, then to ascertain the three hundred feet distance north on said street, a line should be extended from the northerly corner of the school building (part nearest the proposed saloon) to the street. From this point so found no saloon may be located on either side of the street within three hundred feet to the north. To ascertain the distance to the south, a line should be extended from the southerly corner of the school building (part nearest the proposed saloon) to the street and from this point the distance measured to the south. Similarly as to other streets upon which the school premises abut. The two hundred feet distance should be determined from the nearest point of the premises (nearest to the proposed saloon) treating the street as the straight line.

The street being the straight line meant by the language of the statute, the fact that the street itself is not straight, i. e., curved or broken, would be immaterial. So also would be the fact that parts of a continuous thoroughfare running in the same general direction had been given different names.

But the statute does not authorize the turning of corners from the street on which the school premises abut to a separate and distinct street on which no part of the school premises abut, in making these measurements.

I can imagine situations where this will leave a saloon within three hundred feet of a school building, and while I regret that such may be the case, the remedy is legislative not judicial. However, in this connection it is admitted in the briefs furnished by those who favor another contention, that a saloon might be located on premises actually abutting school premises even under the interpretation that corners may be turned. To illustrate: A school might be located on one street and a saloon on the next street running parallel with no nearby intersecting streets and thus, even though corners be turned, and several different streets be used in the measurement, the saloon would not be within the prescribed territory. These are legislative faults which I feel the courts are without power to remedy.

It is suggested that some uncertainty arises as to the meaning of the term "premises" as here used. This is a term of varied significance. In cases of insurance policies, it has been held to include only a building or even a part of the same, while in conveyances, it oftimes clearly includes vast acreage. So that little assistance, if any, may be gained by an examination of particular cases, in determining its application in the present instance. In other words, the meaning of the word "premises" depends in every case upon the subject-matter under consideration, the context in which it is found, as well as the relationship in which it is used.

To my mind it conclusively appears that as here used, the term premises includes more than the land actually covered by the building, and the building itself, notwithstanding the restrictive language, "on which such school building is located," clearly modifying this term. This restricting phrase must, however, be given some substantial meaning, and the one that suggests itself is that the premises is here limited to that land immediately surrounding the school building which is used only for school purposes and directly in connection with such building; that is to say, it would not include land occupied for church, residence or other purposes, though the latter were owned by the same party as the school, nor in my opinion would it include grounds used for athletic purposes in connection with the school, if such athletic grounds were separate or distinct from the usual or ordinary play grounds immediately surrounding the school building.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 12932, G. C.—THE WORD "BROTHER" DOES NOT INCLUDE THE RELATION OF BROTHER-IN-LAW—BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The word "brother" as used in section 12932, G. C., does not include the relation of brother-in-law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 27, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "A teacher has been employed by the votes of three of the members of the board of education of a certain rural school district in this county. One of the three members of the said board was at the time of the hiring a brother-in-law of said teacher, having married the said teacher's sister some years ago and she still being his wife.
> "Section 12932 of the General Code makes it an offense for a member of a board of education to vote for or participate in the making of a contract with a person as teacher in a public school to whom he or she is related as father or brother, mother or sister, but this section does not specifically provide that such hiring shall be illegal as between the board of education and the teacher.
> "What is your construction of this statute? Is such a contract illegal? Does the word 'brother,' as used in the above section, include 'brother-in-law' as well?"

Section 12932, G. C., provides:

> "Whoever, being a local director or member of a board of education, votes for or participates in the making of a contract with a person as a teacher or instructor in a public school to whom he or she is related as father or brother, mother or sister, or acts in a matter in which he or she is pecuniarily interested, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than six months, or both."

This statute being penal in its nature, under the well settled rule of construction, its provisions must be strictly construed.

From your statement of facts it appears that the member of the board of education referred to in your inquiry, was not, at the time the contract of employment was made with the teacher in question, related to said teacher within the terms of the statute above quoted. Moreover, it does not appear that said member was in any way pecuniarily interested in said contract.

Replying to your questions, I am of the opinion that the word "brother" as used in said statute does not include the relation of brother-in-law, and that, in so far as the action of the said board of education is concerned, said contract of employment is legal.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—PRESIDENT BOARD OF EDUCATION OF TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—TOWNSHIP TREASURER.

The office of president of the board of education of a township rural school district is not incompatible with the office of township treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

HON. JOHN C. D'ALTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 7, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "May the president of a board of education in a township school district hold by appointment an office of township treasurer? The board of education has designated under section 4782, G. C., a depository for school funds. In your opinion would the office of president of such board of education and of county treasurer be incompatible under section 3273, G. C.?"

I have your letter of August 23, 1915, in which you state that the second question in your letter of August 7th was intended to be a restatement of the first question and should read as follows:

> "In your opinion, would the office of president of such board of education and of township treasurer be incompatible under section 3273 of the General Code?"

Section 3271, G. C., which required the trustees of the township to meet on the last Monday in December of each year at the place for holding township meetings, for the purposes therein provided, was repealed by section 305 of amended senate bill No. 125, as found in 106 O. L., 664. By provision of section 304 of said act, the same became effective September 6, 1915.

Inasmuch as the provisions of said section 3271, G. C., were not re-enacted, township trustees are no longer required or authorized to hold said December meeting for the purposes provided in said section.

While section 3273, G. C., has not been expressly repealed by the legislature and said section, by its terms, makes it the duty of the township treasurer to be present at said December meeting for the purpose of making a settlement with the board of education of the township rural school district and requires the president and clerk of said board to attend said meeting for said purpose, I call your attention to the fact that the provision of section 4763, G. C., making the township treasurer ex-officio treasurer of the funds of the township school district, was repealed by the act of the general assembly as found in 104 O. L., 158, and said provision was not re-enacted. It follows, therefore, that inasmuch as the township treasurer is no longer the treasurer of the funds of the township rural school district, the provisions of section 3273, G. C., are necessarily repealed by implication.

The answer to your question must, therefore, be determined by reference to the statutes now in force relating to the offices of president of the board of education of the township rural school district and township treasurer, and governing their respective duties.

Under the provision of section 3261, G. C., the township trustees are authorized to appoint a person, having the qualifications of an elector, to fill a vacancy in the office of township treasurer.

There being no constitutional or statutory provision prohibiting a person, having such qualifications, from holding both the office of president of the board of education of the township rural school district and the office of treasurer of such township at the same time, it remains to be determined whether either of said offices, under the provision of the statutes, now in force, governing their respective duties, is subordinate to or in any way a check upon the other, or whether it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both of said offices, under the rule laid down by the court in the case of State ex rel. v. Gebert, 12 C. C. (n. s.), 274. Upon careful examination of the statutes governing the respective duties of the aforesaid offices, I find that neither of said offices is subordinate to or in any way a check upon the other, nor can it be said that it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both of said offices. Said offices are not, therefore, incompatible under the rule laid down by the court in the case of State ex rel. v. Gebert, supra.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the president of the board of education of a township rural school district, having the qualifications of an elector, may hold by appointment the office of township treasurer.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—NOT DEBARRED FROM RECEIVING STATE AID FOR REASON THAT TEACHERS ARE EMPLOYED AT SALARIES IN EXCESS OF AMOUNT REQUIRED BY STATUTE, PROVIDED AVERAGE OF SALARIES PAID TO HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS OF DISTRICT IS NOT MORE THAN SEVENTY DOLLARS PER MONTH—APPLICATION FOR STATE AID NEED NOT SHOW EXACT AMOUNT EACH HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER IS TO RECEIVE—WHAT APPLICATION OF BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR STATE AID SHOULD CONTAIN.

A school district will not be debarred from receiving state aid because of the fact that the board of education of said district has employed teachers at salaries in excess of those required by the provisions of section 7591, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 430, provided, however, that the average of salaries paid by said board of education to the high school teachers of said district is not more than seventy dollars per month.

It is not necessary for a board of education, in making application for state aid, to show the exact amount which each high school teacher employed by said board is entitled to receive according to the terms of his contract of employment. If said application shows the number of high school teachers employed, the number of months for which they are employed and the total amount of the salaries which said high school teachers will be entitled to receive under the terms of their contract of employment, the state auditor will be able to determine whether said board of education has complied with the above provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, governing salaries paid to high school teachers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of August 25, 1915, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Can boards of education, under section 7595, General Code, receive from the state sufficient money to make up the deficit in their tuition fund, providing they have paid more to their teachers than the statutory amounts, the excess coming from sources other than school funds; i. e., would an application be in legal form if it has set up as an item of expense, going to make up the deficit, the legal amount allowed teachers in case the teachers had received more from sources other than the school funds?
> "Is it necessary for a board of education, in making an application for state aid, to show the exact amount paid from school funds to each high school teacher employed, or would it be sufficient to give the number of high school teachers and the total amount paid? Section 7595-1."

The answer to your first question is found in opinion No. 799 of this department rendered to Hon. G. O. McGonagle, prosecuting attorney of Morgan county, under date of September 7, 1915. A copy of said opinion is enclosed.

This opinion holds that, with the exception of salaries paid to high school teachers, the provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 430, determine the minimum salaries which the board of education of a school district, which complies with the other provisions of the statutes governing state aid to weak school districts, must pay in order to be eligible to receive such aid; that if the certified statement of facts from the county auditor to the state auditor shows that the board of education of a school district has complied with all the requirements of the statutes governing state aid, the state auditor is not required, before issuing his voucher on the state treasurer in favor of the treasurer of such school district for the amount of the deficit in the tuition fund of such district, as determined by said certified statement of facts, to determine whether said board of education has contracted to pay its teachers' salaries, which, in the aggregate, will amount to more than the amount required in the tuition fund of said district, as estimated by said board of education, to pay said teachers the salaries provided by said section 7595-1, G. C., as amended, for eight months of the year, and that said school district will not be debarred from receiving state aid because of the fact that said board of education has employed teachers at salaries in excess of those required by the provisions of said section 7595-1, G. C., as amended; provided, however, that the average of salaries paid by said board of education to the high school teachers of said district is not more than seventy dollars per month.

In keeping with this former holding I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that it is not necessary for a board of education, in making application for state aid, to show the exact amount which each high school teacher employed by said board is entitled to receive according to the terms of his contract of employment. If said application shows the number of high school teachers employed, the number of months for which they are employed and the total amount of the salaries which said high school teachers will be entitled to receive under the terms of their contracts of employment, the state auditor will be able to determine whether said board of education has complied with the above provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended governing salaries paid to high school teachers.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYMENT—COMPENSATION—TO BE EFFECTIVE MUST BE FIRST APPROVED BY GOVERNOR—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ACT—APPROVAL OF SALARIES OF ALL OFFICERS IN WRITING BY GOVERNOR IS ESSENTIAL FOR BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION OFFICERS—CIVIL SERVICE.

1. All employments made and compensation fixed under and by virtue of the provisions of section 871-14, G. C., 103 O. L., 99, to be effective must first be approved by the governor.

2. The approval of the salaries of all officers in writing by the governor, as provided in section 1842, G. C., 102 O. L., 214, is essential and necessary to give validity to their appointments and until so approved no salaries of officers appointed under said section become effective.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 31, 1915, as follows:

"There are two questions confronting this department which requires immediate action on our part:

"Section 871-14 (103 O. L., 99) provides that the employments and compensation of the employes of the state industrial commission shall first be approved by the governor in writing.

"Section 1842 (102 O. L., 214) provides that the salaries of employes of the state board of administration shall be approved by the governor in writing.

"We, pursuant to the mandate of section 871-14, are refusing to issue warrants upon vouchers for salaries of employes unless we have certified information that the employment of the employe in question had the approval of the governor. Also, pursuant to sections 871-14 and 1842, we are refusing to issue warrants for salaries unless we first have certified information that such salaries were approved by the governor.

"There are other statutes affecting other departments in a like manner, but we submit the above as sufficiently advising you of the situation.

"The point is raised that the enactment of the civil service law repealed by implication the provision that the employment shall be first approved by the governor, and that the provision requiring the governor's approval of the salary is directory and not mandatory.

"Being in doubt we desire an opinion from you upon both questions."

Section 871-14, 103 O. L., 99, to which you refer, provides as follows:

"The commission is authorized and empowered to employ, promote and remove a secretary, or secretaries, deputies, clerks, stenographers, and other assistants, as needed; to fix their compensation, and to assign to them their duties. Such employments and compensation to be first approved by the governor."

You state in your letter it is claimed the civil service act, 106 O. L., 400, repeals by implication the last clause in said above quoted section, which is "such employments and compensation to be first approved by the governor." This contention is wholly untenable. When an employment is to be made under the foregoing section which is within the classified list, as provided by said civil service law, the whole purpose of such law is effected when it furnishes an eligible list from which such employment must be made. If such employment is not within the classified service, said civil service act has no application whatever to the provisions of said above quoted section. Further, when the provisions of the civil service law do apply, no compensation is fixed by it in any case and it does not control or undertake to control the appointing power in any manner whatever, except to limit its selection to the class or list which it furnishes as eligible to such employment.

With this limitation the discretion of the appointing power in the matter of making employments and appointments is untrammeled and complete. When such discretion is exercised, and the employment made and compensation fixed, the section above quoted requires that first it shall be approved by the governor. This means that the act of the appointing power cannot, under the law, become effective, either as to employment or compensation, until so approved. My conclusion, therefore, is, that while the civil service act, when applicable, qualifies the power and authority conferred by said section by limiting the appointments or employments to the certified lists as furnished by the state civil service commission, it does not in any manner affect the duty of the governor to approve both the appointments and compensation.

The second question submitted in your letter involves a consideration of the last clause in said section 1842, 102 O. L., 214, which is as follows:

> "The board after conference with the managing officer of each institution shall determine the number of officers and employes to be appointed therein. It shall from time to time fix the salaries and wages to be paid at the various institutions, which shall be uniform, as far as possible, for like service, provided that the salaries of all officers shall be approved in writing by the governor."

You state in your letter that the provision in the foregoing section, requiring the governor's approval of all salaries, is claimed to be merely directory. This provision, in my judgment, bears a very important relation to the salaries of all officers appointed under the provisions of said section. It is very clear that the legislature so regarded it when it required such approval to be in writing. An act of a public officer required by law, to be so evidenced, must be held to be necessary to give validity to the proceedings of which it is a part. In this instance, it is as essential, in a jurisdictional way, to give an officer a legal status and right to his salary as his appointment itself. While many reasons might be urged in support of the necessity of this provision, it is sufficient to say that the law vests in the governor the right and authority to supervise and control the salaries of all officers of state institutions, and it requires such authority to be exercised before their salaries become effective.

I am, therefore, of opinion that until the salaries of all officers appointed under said foregoing section are approved in writing by the governor, they do not become effective.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—CONTRACTS FOR HOME ECONOMICS BUILDING—UNIVERSITY MAY ENTER INTO SAME, ALTHOUGH PART OF APPROPRIATION NOT AVAILABLE UNTIL JULY 1, 1916.

Ohio State University may now enter into contracts for home economics building to cost within appropriations made in both section 2 and section 3 of house bill No. 701, but only $75,000 can be paid on such contracts prior to July 1, 1916.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On September 3, 1915, you submitted to me for approval certain contracts entered in to by your board on September 2d, one with Robert H. Evans & Company and the other with The Huffman-Conklin Company for the erection of a building to be known as the home economics building on the campus of the university, the contract prices therefor being as follows:

"Robert H. Evans & Company	$116,289.00
The Huffman-Conklin Company	22,292.00
Total	$138,581.00"

The appropriation made for the purpose of such construction was made in house bill No. 701, passed at the recent session of the legislature, section 2 thereof appropriating $75,000.00 and section 3 thereof $75,000.00. The appropriations made in section 2 are stated at the beginning of such section, as follows:

> "The following sums shall not be appropriated to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1, 1915, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

And the specific appropriation made to the university is in the following language:

> "Additions and Betterments—
> G2. Structures and Parts—
> Home economics building to cost completed $150,000.00__ $75,000.00"

The balance of the appropriation is made in section 3, the first sentence of which is as follows:

> "The moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1st, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917."

And the specific appropriation is in the following language:

> "G. Additions and Betterments—
> G2. Structures—
> To complete home economics building---------- $75,000.00"

It therefore appears that there is available now but $75,000.00, and that the balance of $75,000.00 will not be available to pay liabilities until July 1st, 1916.

You propose to enter into a contract now for the construction of the home economics building in excess of the amount appropriated in section 2 of house bill No. 701, and the estimate made therefor discloses that it contemplated that the expenditure should be in excess of said appropriation.

The question therefore naturally arises as to whether or not the language used at the beginning of section 3 of house bill No. 701 that "the moneys herein appropriated shall not be expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to July 1st, 1916, or incurred subsequent to June 30, 1917," are the controlling words of the appropriation or whether the entire appropriation made for the home economics building, to wit the $75,000.00 made in section 2 and the $75,000.00 in section 3, do not show a legislative intent that the restrictive language at the beginning of section 3 should not apply in regard to this particular appropriation.

Section 2 appropriated $75,000.00 for a building to be known as the home economics building "to cost complete $150,000.00." The entire sum of $150,000.00 was, however, appropriated in house bill No. 701, and no further legislation is necessary to make complete the appropriation of $150,000.00 to which the legislature restricted the cost of the building.

The restrictive language of the appropriation made in section 2—that the building was not to cost over $150,000.00—would not, as I see it, authorize the auditor of state to pay out the $75,000.00 therein appropriated at all until he was assured that the building to be constructed would not cost above $150,000.00, and of this he could be assured only by the awarding of a contract within said amount.

If the general provisions at the beginning of section 3 apply to the $75,000.00 therein appropriated, it would render ineffective the appropriation made in section 2 until July 1, 1916. This I do not believe to have been the intention of the legislature. It seems to me that what the legislature intended was that the home economics building was to cost not to exceed $150,000.00; that a contract could now be awarded up to that sum for the said building, but that only $75,000.00 could be expended prior to July 1, 1916, on estimates of the architect, even though on such estimates there should be a sum greater than that due the contractor; but that after July 1, 1916, the balance of said sum could be paid out.

Had the legislature only appropriated $75,000.00 instead of $150,000.00 at this session of the legislature, a contrary opinion would be reached, since this legislature was unauthorized to bind any succeeding legislature.

I have examined the advertisement for bids submitted with the contract of The Robert H. Evans & Company and The Huffman-Conklin Company for the erection of the home economics building, and find same to be in all respects proper. I have also examined the contract and bond of The Robert H. Evans & Company and the contract and bond of The Huffman-Conklin Company, and find the same to be in proper form and in compliance with law. The contract for heating and ventilating of the home economics building, being Item 15 of the formal proposal based on the specifications, was awarded with the written consent of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state. I have filed the two contracts, with my approval endorsed thereon, with the auditor of state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ALLIANCE ARMORY SITE—APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE—STATE ARMORY BOARD MAY AUTHORIZE SECRETARY TO SIGN PETITION PROVIDED FOR IN SECTION 3725, G. C.

Approval of title to Alliance armory site.
The state is included within section 3725, G. C., state armory board may authorize its secretary to sign such a petition.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 8, 1915.

Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of July 24th you submitted to this department an abstract of title and unrecorded deed for an armory site in Alliance, Ohio, accompanying which was a letter to the following effect:

> "On Saturday we received the abstract of title and unrecorded deed for an armory site in Alliance, Ohio.
> "The plat shows the inadequate size of this armory site and the three streets and railway right-of-way which bound same. The board's architect has approved the site on condition that strips from the abutting streets be added to it by the city council of Alliance. It seems necessary to secure approval of the site before securing said vacation, therefore the board passed the resolution of today, which reads as follows:

"'ALLIANCE SITE: The deed and abstract for Alliance site bounded by Hester street, Mechanics avenue, Ely street and L. E. A. & W. railroad right-of-way, were presented to the board, together with a blank petition for vacation of parts of Hester street, Mechanic avenue and Ely street, which parts are needed to enlarge said site. The secretary was directed to refer all said papers to the attorney general with request for approval of the site as deeded.

"'Further Resolved, That when the title to said site is approved by the attorney general, the secretary is thereupon authorized to sign petition for vacation of parts of said streets.'"

I have carefully examined the deed and abstract, and I find that the title to said property upon acceptance of said deed will vest in the state a good and sufficient legal title to the property described in said deed, as follows:

"Situated in the city of Alliance, county of Stark, and state of Ohio, and known as being the west part of lot number two hundred and forty (240) in the city of Alliance, Ohio, and further described as follows: Beginning at the northeast corner of the intersection of Mechanic avenue and Ely street being the southwest corner of said lot number 240; thence north along the east line of Mechanic avenue a distance of 98 feet to the intersection of the south line of Hester avenue; thence in a southeasterly direction along the south line of Hester avenue a distance of 85.82 feet to the west right of way line of The New York Central Railway Company; thence south along said west right of way line on a curve approximately 44 feet to the north line of Ely street; thence west along the north line of Ely street, 43.5 feet to the east line of Mechanic avenue, the place of beginning. The above curve being an 8 degree curve."

There is, however, a question as to whether or not the state armory board, having accepted a deed for the property in question, said property being bounded on three sides by streets and on the fourth by the right of way of a railroad company, would be authorized to petition council to vacate the whole or part of any of said streets, none of said streets, as I understand it, being county roads.

After the receipt of your letter and enclosures, I communicated with Honorable Arthur W. Morris, city solicitor of Alliance, Ohio, requesting him to advise me relative to certain matters contained in the abstract and also to give me his views as to the right of the state armory board to petition council to vacate the streets, and in response he cites me to section 3725, of the General Code, and following sections and claims that the state is within the purview of such statutes.

Section 3725, G. C., provides as follows:

"On petition by a person owning a lot in the corporation praying that a street or alley in the immediate vicinity of such lot may be vacated or narrowed, or the name thereof changed, the council of such municipality, upon hearing, and upon being satisfied that there is good cause for such change of name, vacation or narrowing, that it will not be detrimental to the general interest, and that it should be made, may declare by ordinance such street or alley vacated, narrowed, or the name thereof changed. And council may include in one ordinance the change of name, or the vacation or narrowing, of more than one street, avenue or alley."

In Cleveland Terminal & Valley Railroad Co. et al. vs. State ex rel., 85 O. S., 251, the first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "1. In conducting transactions with respect to its lands the state acts in a proprietary, and not in a sovereign capacity, and being amenable to all the rules of justice which it prescribes for the conduct of its citizens, it will not be permitted to revoke a grant of lands made upon a valuable consideration which it retains."

The state, therefore, owns lands in a proprietary capacity and may well be considered to be "a person owning a lot" within the meaning of section 3725. Therefore, I agree with Mr. Morris that the word "person" as used in section 3725, since said statute grants a right or privilege, includes also the state in its proprietary capacity.

The state armory board has power to acquire land for armory purposes for the state and erect buildings thereon. It is, therefore, the managing officer for the state in that regard. Since the state can only act through agents, and since the state armory board is the proper agent in regard to armories, the said armory board may authorize its secretary to sign a petition for vacation of streets. To hold otherwise would reach the conclusion that the state had authorized citizens owning lands abutting on streets to petition for the vacation thereof when the state itself had no such authority.

In view of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the secretary of the state armory board is authorized to sign the petition for the vacation parts of streets mentioned in the petition accompanying the papers.

I am herewith returning to you the abstract of title to the Alliance site, the executed but unrecorded deed to said site and the proposed petition for vacation of strips from abutting streets.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ALL TAX LEVIES FOR TOWNSHIP PURPOSES MUST BE APPLIED TO ALL TAXABLE PROPERTY IN TOWNSHIP INCLUDING TAXABLE PROPERTY WITHIN MUNICIPAL CORPORATION LOCATED IN SAID TOWNSHIP—SAID LEVIES ARE IN ADDITION TO LEVIES MADE IN SAID MUNICIPALITY BY TAXING AUTHORITIES THEREOF FOR CORPORATION PURPOSES.

All tax levies, lawfully made by township trustees for township purposes, except those levies which, by express provision of the statute are made to apply only to taxable property in the township outside of the municipality located therein, must be applied to all the taxable property in the township including the taxable property within the municipal corporation located in said township and said levies are in addition to the levies made in said municipality by the taxing authorities thereof for corporation purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

HON. A. C. MCDOUGAL, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 25th, you request my opinion on the following question:

"Should tax levies made by township trustees be applied to municipalities within such townships, over and above their own municipal levies?"

Section 5649-3a, G. C., provides in part:

"The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a county, for county purposes, on the taxable property in the county on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year three mills. The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a municipal corporation on the taxable property in the corporation, for corporation purposes, on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year five mills. The aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a township, for township purposes, on the taxable property in the township on the tax list, shall not exceed in any one year two mills. The local tax levy for all school purposes shall not exceed in any one year five mills on the dollar of valuation of taxable property in any school district. Such limits for county, township, municipal and school levies shall be exclusive of any special levy, provided for by a vote of the electors, special assessments, levies for road taxes that may be worked out by the taxpayers, and levies and assessments in special districts created for road or ditch improvements, over which the budget commissioners shall have no control."

The tax limitations above provided are, of course, subject to the further limitations provided by section 5649-2, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 552, and by section 5649-5b, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 57.

Under the above provision of section 5649-3a, it will be observed that the levies made by the trustees of a township for township purposes are made "on the taxable property of the township."

This clearly means all the taxable property in the township including the taxable property within the limits of a municipal corporation located therein.

The same meaning must be given to the provisions of section 5649-2, G. C., as amended, governing the aggregate of all levies that may be made in a township "on each dollar of the tax valuation of the taxable property of such * * * township."

Without citing the various statutes governing tax levies which the trustees of a township may make for the purposes provided in said statutes I find, upon examination, that the tax levies which said statutes by their terms authorize the township trustees to make, are properly divided into three classes:

"1. Taxes which the township trustees are authorized to levy on all the taxable property of the township.

"2. Taxes which the trustees are authorized to levy under statutes which contain no express provision as to the taxable property upon which the levy shall be made.

"3. Taxes which the township trustees are authorized to levy upon taxable property outside of a municipal corporation located in the township."

An example of levies coming under the first class above set forth is found in section 5646, G. C. By express provision of this statute the levies authorized by said statute are to be made "on each dollar of the taxable valuation of the property of the township."

The tax levy authorized by provision of section 3444, G. C., comes under the second class, said section containing no express provision as to the taxable property upon which said levy shall be made.

The levies authorized by provision of section 3298-18, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 647, come under the third class. This section relates to levies made by the township trustees for the purposes set forth in the annual estimate filed with said trustees by the county highway superintendent and provides in part:

> "After the annual estimate for each township has been filed with the trustees of the township by the county highway superintendent, they may increase or reduce the amount of any of the items contained in said estimate, and at their first meeting after said estimate is filed, they shall make their levies for the purposes set forth in the estimate upon all of the taxable property of the townships, not exceeding in the aggregate two mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of such taxable property in said township outside of any incorporated village or city. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

It is evident that tax levies made by township trustees in compliance with the statutes authorizing the same and coming within the third class above mentioned may not be applied to taxable property within the corporate limits of a municipality located in a township. On the other hand it is equally clear that tax levies lawfully made by the township trustees for township purposes and coming within either the first or second class above set forth, must be applied to all the taxable property in the township including the taxable property within the municipality located therein.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that all tax levies, lawfully made by township trustees for township purposes, except those levies which, by express provision of the statute are made to apply only to taxable property in the township outside of the municipality located therein, must be applied to all the taxable property in the township including the taxable property within the municipal corporation located in said township; that said levies are in addition to the levies made in said municipality by the taxing authorities thereof for corporation purposes and must be taken into consideration by the county budget commissioners in determining the aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied in said municipality by the various taxing authorities under the limitations provided by section 5649-2, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 552.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

EMERGENCY LEVIES—MADE UNDER SECTION 5649-4, G. C., NOT TO BE COUNTED IN ASCERTAINING LIMITATION OF FIFTEEN MILLS IMPOSED BY SECTION 5649-5b.

Emergency levies made under authority of section 5649-4, G. C., are not to be counted in ascertaining the limitation of fifteen mills imposed by section 5649-5b, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of an inquiry submitted by Hon. Frank J. Doorley, solicitor of the city of Sidney, involving a question the general importance of which justifies, in my judgment, the preparation of an opinion to the commission.

Mr. Doorley's question is as follows:

> "Where there is a levy of 1.4 mills for emergencies mentioned in section 5649-4 of the General Code, may the electors of a subdivision, by favorable vote under sections 5649-5 and 5649-5a of the General Code, authorize the levying of taxes for the purpose involved in the proposition submitted to them so as to produce in the aggregate a levy, exclusive of the state highway levy, of 16.4 mills, 15 mills of which will be for what might be termed ordinary current expense and sinking fund purposes, together with the purpose voted upon, and 1.4 mills of which will represent the emergency levies?"

Sections 5649-4 and 5649-5b, G. C., when considered together will of themselves, I think, furnish an answer to this question. They were last amended in 103 O. L., 527, and 103 O. L., 57, respectively, and as so amended provide as follows:

> "Sec. 5649-4. For the emergencies mentioned in sections 4450, 4451, 5629, 7419 and 7630-1 of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax sufficient to provide therefor irrespective of any of the limitations of this act.
> "Sec. 5649-5b. If a majority of the electors voting thereon at such election vote in favor thereof, it shall be lawful to levy taxes within such taxing district at a rate not to exceed such increased rate for and during the period provided for in such resolution, but in no case shall the combined maximum rate for all taxes levied in any year in any county, city, village, school district, or other taxing district, under the provisions of this and the two preceding sections and sections 5649-1, 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code as herein enacted, exceed fifteen mills."

It will be observed that the levies which may be made under favor of section 5649-4 may, by the express terms of that statute, be provided for "irrespective of any of the limitations of this act;" that the limitation provided for by section 5649-5b is one of the "limitations of this act," and that section 5649-5b itself is a limitation upon levies "under the provisions of this and the two preceding sections" (by which is meant, of course, sections 5649-5, 5649-5a and 5649-5b) "and sections 5649-1, 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code"—that is to say, all of the sections of the Smith one per cent. law so-called, excepting section

5649-4. Thus it is very clear that levies made under favor of section 5649-4 of the General Code are not to be considered in computing the aggregate levy subject to the fifteen mill limitation of section 5649-5b; so that when the electors of a subdivision have authorized an additional levy for a given purpose under sections 5649-5 and 5649-5a, the taxing authorities may under favor of such authority (if the additional levy authorized, together with the other levies which may lawfully be made within the territory, will produce an aggregate of fifteen mills) make such levies as to produce an aggregate levy, exclusive of the emergency levies under section 5649-4, of fifteen mills. So that where such emergency levies are made they may be, in a sense, added to the fifteen mill limitation and are, to be exact, treated precisely like the levy made by and under section 6859-1 of the General Code as amended 105 O. L., 5.

To be exact, then, in the case Mr. Doorley submits the aggregate levy which may be made, on the assumption that the number of mills of additional levies authorized is sufficient, together with other levies which may lawfully be made under the limitations of the Smith one per cent. law, to exhaust the fifteen mill limitation, is 16.7 mills, 15 mills of which represent levies for all purposes excepting the emergencies mentioned and the state highway improvement fund; 1.4 mills of which represent the emergency levies; and .3 mill of which represents the state highway improvement levy.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BOARD OF COMPLAINTS—HAS AUTHORITY TO INCREASE LISTED AMOUNT OF TAXABLE PROPERTY UPON ITS OWN INITIATIVE—WHERE VALUATION IS ONLY ISSUE, AMOUNT NOT QUESTIONED—COMPLAINT MUST BE MADE BEFORE BOARD CAN ACT.

The board of complaints, under the Warnes law, 103 O. L., 789, has authority to act upon its own initiative only in increasing the listed amount of taxable property. Where the amount listed is not questioned and the only issue is as to valuation, the board of complaints has no authority to act except upon complaint.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—The prosecuting attorney of Allen county calls my attention to certain statements made in a circular issued by the tax commission to the several boards of complaints on July 26, 1915, being circular No. 97. He quotes the following therefrom:

> "The board shall act upon complaint only.
> "It shall not increase or decrease the value of any real or personal property as fixed by the district assessor and equalized by the tax commission except upon written complaint thereof filed with the county auditor or with the board.
> "Also, under the law the board of complaints, which convenes on the first Monday in August, 1915, has no authority to hear complaints concerning the valuation of property for the year 1914, except in cases where additions and corrections were made by the district assessor after the duplicate was completed and delivered to the county auditor in September, 1914, and as to which the taxpayer had no opportunity to be heard by the board of complaints, which begins its session in August, 1914. Hence, before hearing any complaints on 1914 valuations, he should consult this commission, giving the character of the same.''

Calling my attention to section 5624-7, of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 800, which authorizes the tax commission to prescribe general and uniform rules and regulations respecting the manner of the exercise of the powers and the discharge of the duties of the officers, relating to the assessment of real and personal property, the prosecutor inquires whether, in the light of the statutory provisions respecting the powers and duties of boards of complaints, the rules promulgated by the tax commission are valid and can be enforced.

In the view which I have taken of the prosecutor's question, I have deemed it proper to address an opinion to the commission thereon.

The respective powers and duties of boards of complaints seem to have been provided by section 5602, of the General Code (103 O. L., 793), as follows:

''Complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year may be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of the district board of complaints or thereafter during its session. Any taxpayer may file such complaint as to the valuation or assessment of his own or other's property, and the county commissioners, the prosecuting attorney, county auditor, county treasurer or any board of township trustees, any board of education, mayor or council of any municipal corporation in the county shall have the right to file such a complaint.''

Section 5603, G. C. (103 O. L., 793), provides as follows:

''The county auditor shall lay before the district board of complaints all complaints filed with him. The board shall investigate all such complaints and may increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of, and no other.''

Section 5606, G. C. (103 O. L., 793), provides as follows:

''The district board of complaints may increase or decrease any valuation complained of and increase or reduce the listed amount of any taxable property, upon its own initiative or if the party affected thereby or his agent makes and files with the board a written application therefor, verified by his oath, showing the facts upon which it is claimed such increase or decrease or reduction should be made, but not without affording the district assessor an opportunity to be heard thereon.''

With respect to the interpretation to be given to section 5624-7, G. C., I think the case of State ex rel. v. Halliday, 61 O. S., 352, controls. That case involved the interpretation of a statute vesting similar powers in the auditor of state. The first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

''(1.) Where a letter of instruction sent by the auditor of state to a county auditor embraces and commands the performance of a number of acts, some of which are proper and others not, the latter officer is bound to follow the former but may disregard the latter."

Of course, this decision is supported by manifest reason, and section 5624-7, G. C., itself provides that the tax commission has power to issue such orders and intructions only as are not "inconsistent with any provision of law." If in issuing orders and instructions under this section the commission misinterprets the law, its orders and instructions so issued are merely invalid to the extent of their conflict with the law, and valid as to the remainder thereof not inconsistent with the law.

Section 5606, of the General Code, above quoted, is rather ambiguous. It will be observed that the first clause thereof is that "The district board of complaints may increase or decrease any valuation complained of." If the sentence stopped here, it could not be claimed that the board of complaints could act upon its own initiative, especially in view of the fact that section 5603 explicitly provides that the board may "increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of, and no other."

Returning now to section 5606, it will be observed that the first sentence thereof goes on to provide that the board may "increase or reduce the listed amount of any taxable property, upon its own initiative or if the party affected thereby or his agent makes and files with the board a written application therefor, verified by his oath, showing the facts upon which it is claimed such increase or decrease or reduction should be made, but not without affording the district assessor an opportunity to be heard thereon."

The most reasonable interpretation of this section is that while the board may act upon valuations only when complaints are filed, it may increase or reduce the listed amount of taxable property, either upon its own initiative or upon application therefor. Such an interpretation avoids, at least in part, what would otherwise be a direct conflict between section 5603 and section 5606.

There is a real distinction between changing a valuation and changing the listed amount of property. In the one case the property has been listed, but at an incorrect valuation; in the other case the property has not been listed at all, and if the amount is not changed it will in effect escape taxation. This observation applies principally, if not entirely, to personal property returns, in which the taxpayer lists the number of articles of personal property owned by him and the value thereof, and the amount of money in possession and invested by him. In an ordinary case it might frequently occur that the valuation of listed property was correct, and yet that the taxpayer had omitted some part of his taxable personal property. The legislature evidently intended to give to the board of complaints authority to initiate investigations as to the completeness of returns, but not to vest the board with general power to revise valuations.

Even when a board of complaints acting upon its own initiative has discovered that the amount of taxable property listed by a given taxpayer is insufficient and has increased the same, such board has no authority, in my opinion, to place a valuation thereon, for it is provided by section 5624-18, of the General Code (103 O. L., 803), that "When the district board of complaints discovers or has its attention called to the fact, that in the current year or in any year since the year 1910 any taxable land, building, structure, improvement, minerals, mineral right or personal property in the county, has escaped taxation or has been listed for taxation at less than its true value in money, it shall forthwith notify the district assessor of such fact. The district assessor shall make such inquiries and corrections as he is authorized and required to make by law in other cases in which real or personal property has escaped taxation, or has been improperly listed or valued for taxation.''

Inasmuch as this section expressly provides what shall be done by the board of complaints when it discovers or has its attention called to the fact of an omission of taxable property from the list for the current year, and inasmuch as section 5606, General Code, does not expressly provide that the listed amount, when increased by the district board of complaints, may as so increased be valued by that board acting upon its own initiative, I am of the opinion that the proper interpretation of the two sections considered together is that which reposes in the board of complaints the authority to make such inquiries and corrections as will result in bringing the omitted property upon the tax list, when under section 5624-18, of the General Code, it becomes the duty of the board to call the attention of the district assessor to the facts discovered by it. Thereupon, the district assessor must make further inquiries, and if the facts as reported to him by the board of complaints are confirmed, he must make the final entries on the tax duplicate, both as to the amount of property and the value thereof as corrected. The truth is that the words ''upon its own initiative,'' as found in section 5606, of the General Code, are incompatible with the general scheme of the Warnes law, and being so must, I think, be given a narrow interpretation. It is not necessary to read them out of the statute entirely, as I have pointed out, but their application is very much narrowed by the other provisions which I have considered.

Other reasons than those which I have mentioned and other applications of the statute as I have interpreted it might be cited, but I think what I have said is sufficient to establish this conclusion.

From this it follows that the first instruction quoted from the circular of the tax commission is not complete and requires qualification. Fully stated it would be that > ''The board of complaints shall act upon complaint only with respect to valuations.''

It also follows that the second statement in the commission's circular as quoted is correct, and that with respect to valuations, both where no correction is made by the board in the listed amount of property and where such a correction is made, the board is without authority to act unless a complaint is made.

The third excerpt from the circular of the commission invites consideration of section 5596, of the General Code (103 O. L., 791), which provides as follows:

> ''The district board of complaints shall have power to investigate all complaints against assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed. The power of the board shall extend to all cases in which real estate or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year, and to additions and corrections made during the next preceding year to the tax lists of previous years, but not to assessments, additions or corrections made by the tax commission of Ohio.''

My recent opinion to the tax commission relative to the interpretation of this section really covers the prosecuting attorney's third question. For the reasons stated therein, I advise that the board at its 1915 session cannot act upon complaint or otherwise with respect to the valuations appearing upon the 1914 duplicate, unless such valuations were changed by addition and correction on the face of the duplicate. However, the tax commission has stated the rule too narrowly, in that it has fixed the time as of which the addition or correction must have been made in order to entitle the taxpayer to relief at the present session of the board as the first of September, 1914, when the duplicate was delivered by the district assessor to the auditor. This, in my judgment, is erroneous, and, as stated in the previous opinion, the present board of complaints has jurisdiction of all additions and corrections made to the tax list and duplicate; that is, all changes in valuation appearing on the face of the duplicate as changes. But as to changes in valuations made by the district assessor before making up his tax list and duplicate, and therefore entering into the listed valuation as the same appears on the face of the tax list and duplicate, which are open to public inspection from and after some time in July under the Warnes law, the same do not constitute "additions and corrections" within the meaning of section 5596, G. C.

To be specific, then, the tax commission's rule is inaccurate with respect only to the date therein named. Instead of the clause:

> "except in cases where additions and corrections were made by the district assessor after the duplicate was completed and delivered to the county auditor in September, 1914, and as to which the taxpayer had no opportunity to be heard by the board of complaints, which begins its session in August, 1914," there should be the following:

> "except in cases where additions and corrections were made by the district assessor after the tax list and duplicate were made up and completed and open to public inspection in the office of the district assessor in July, 1914."

It is to be kept in mind, of course, that, as advised in the previous opinion referred to, if a complaint was actually made to the board when in session in 1914 this fact of itself precludes action by the board in 1915, although the complaint in 1914 related to additions and corrections made in that year.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE AND COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARDS—RIGHT OF MEMBERS OF SUCH BOARDS TO PARTICIPATE IN CIRCULATING PETITIONS FOR PURPOSE OF PROCURING REFERENDUM ON McDERMOTT LIQUOR LICENSE LAW—WHAT CONSTITUTES MISCONDUCT IN OFFICE UNDER LIQUOR LAWS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 2, 1915, as follows:

"I would like your opinion as to whether or not active participation by any members of the state or county liquor licensing boards in circulating petitions or procuring the same to be circulated either by other members of such boards or by licensees under such boards who are engaged in the saloon business, for the purpose of procuring a referendum election on what is known as the McDermott liquor license law, constitutes misconduct in office, under the liquor license law known as the Greenlund act, section 28 of the corrupt practice act, or any other law of the state.

"Second. If the facts should disclose that any member or members of the state board procure members of the county licensing boards to circulate such petitions or secure names thereon through other persons, for the purpose of defeating such McDermott law, with the purpose, either expressed or implied, of continuing any of the members of said boards in office, would such action on the part of such members be a violation of section 5175, subdivision 3 of the General Code, vol. 104, p. 122, of the Session Laws?

"Third. Would the action of any member or members of the state licensing board in directing employes in the office of such board to carry blank referendum petitions in such matter to members of the county licensing boards or other board or prominent politicians for the purpose of procuring signatures thereon, such work being done by employes in that department, occupying the time of their service therein, constitute misconduct?"

Your inquiry involves a consideration of section 1261-21, G. C., 103 O. L., 218, being section 6 of the Greenlund act to which you refer, and which provides as follows:

"Any state license commissioner may be removed by the governor in case of misconduct in office, bribery, incompetency, gross neglect of duty or gross immorality upon a hearing, thirty days' notice having been given to the commissioner whose removal is considered, as well as the attorney general, who may attend the hearing and represent the state; and the decision of the governor shall be final."

The answer to each of the questions submitted turns upon whether the activities of a state license commissioner referred to therein constitute "misconduct in office" within the meaning of that phrase as used in the statute above quoted.

The phrase "misconduct in office" is not easy of definition, which would be entirely free from criticism and not subject to many and varied exceptions.

In the case of State ex rel. vs. Slover, 113 Mo., 202, it is said:

"Misconduct in office is broad enough to embrace any wilful malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance in office."

In the case of State v. Bair, 71 O. S., 410, at page 427, of the opinion, the supreme court of this state says:

"Our attention has not been called to a better definition of the phrase in question than the following: 'Any unlawful misbehavior in relation to the duties of an office, wilful in its character.' "

The same court in State ex rel v. Hawkins, 44 O. S., 115, said:

"The only question that this court can consider, is, whether charges involving official misconduct were preferred * * * The law as to this question is, as we think, accurately stated by Dixon, C. J., in State v. McGarry, supra (26 Wis., 496): The cause must be one which touches the qualifications of the officer for the office, and shows that he is not a fit or proper person to perform the duties;''

From these authorities it may be gathered that any misconduct, activity, engagement or voluntarily assumed obligations of an officer, which bears such relation to the duties of his office or to the exercise of the powers thereof as to render him unfit for their performance, or places him in a position inconsistent, in conflict or incompatible with a fair and impartial performance of the duties and functions thereof, constitute misconduct in office in the common acceptance of that phrase.

It will be observed that section 3 of the Greenlund law, section 1261-18, 103 O. L., 217, provides in part as follows:

''Every licensing commissioner and the secretary of all licensing boards, whether state or county, shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take an oath to support the constitution and laws of the United States, the constitution and laws of the state of Ohio, to perform the duties of his office impartially and without prejudice, and to carry into effect the letter and spirit of the liquor licensing system of this state.''

Now it could not be maintained without much difficulty that one might wilfully violate his oath of office and not be guilty of misconduct therein.

It is not necessary that one be guilty of a criminal offense or that he be convicted of such to constitute misconduct in office. Graham et al v. Stein, 18 C. C., 770.

If, then, that provision of the licensing law which requires every license commissioner and secretary of all licensing boards to take an oath to carry into effect the letter and spirit of the liquor licensing system of this state, and to perform the duties of his office impartially and without prejudice, is to be given any force whatever, then the voluntary action of a commissioner in placing himself under the slightest obligation to any one who is or may become directly or indirectly interested in the administration of the office, would constitute misconduct in office. The manifest purpose of this provision, as to the oath, is to emphasize the obligations of these officers and its effect can only be to impel a more liberal interpretation of the provision of the act as against such officers in its application in relation to their administration of the same.

The spirit of the license system of this state, as embodied in amended senate bill No. 203, 103 O. L., 216, is made manifest from the provisions of section 1 (1261-16, G. C.) which provides that no license commissioner shall hold any other public office for profit except that of notary public, nor shall said commissioners be interested, directly or indirectly, in the liquor business, etc., and section 3 (1261-18, G. C.) which provides that:

''No member or employe shall take any part, except to vote in any election involving the prohibition or numerical limitation of saloons; any violation of this provision shall be deemed misconduct in office and such member of such board may be removed therefor by the appointing power.''

The spirit of this act is then that no person who is in any way charged with the administration of the license law shall either directly or indirectly use his official position as an influence to in any way serve his personal interests or engage in any political activities or use his office, either directly or indirectly, to influence the political activities of others in matters intended to affect the liquor traffic of the state or any part thereof. In other words, the public policy of this state is here asserted to be to completely divorce those officers who are charged with the administration of the license system of the state from any and all activitis, except to vote, in relation to or having as its purpose any change or alteration in that system.

While it may be asserted that no official duty is by law imposed upon license commissioners, as such, in relation to referendum petitions on the McDermott liquor license law, being amended senate bill No. 307, 106 O. L., 560, or any other law passed by the general assembly, it will be readily conceived that any activities in respect to the circulation of such petitions for a referendum of amended senate bill No. 307 by such officers, must of necessity have a direct relationship to the discharge of the duties of such office.

How this relationship will arise is aptly illustrated by the case of Graham v. Stein, 18 C. C., 770, in which it is held:

> "Syl. 4. The prosecuting attorney is the legal adviser of the county officers and in voluntarily placing himself in a position either to be obliged to refuse to give such officials advice, or to give advice hampered by a contract with a third person adverse to the interests of the county, is official misconduct."

Here the law imposes no duty on the prosecuting attorney, as such, to his private clients, but his obligations arising from his voluntary contract with them were incompatible with a faithful discharge of the duties of his office imposed by law. In like manner, though there is no duty of a license commissioner, as such, as to referendum petitions, yet may he not voluntarily assume such relationship thereto and engage in such activities and enter into such arrangements with other officers and licensees as to render his position and his personal interests incompatible with a faithful performance of the duties of his office and a full discharge of the obligations of his oath as such officer?

In the very nature of things the solicitation by an officer charged with the administration of the licensing system of this state, of any person or persons who are or may thereafter become interested in any license to traffic in intoxicating liquors, or the granting of the same, is inconsistent and in conflict with a fair and impartial carrying into effect the spirit of the license system.

Section 28 of the corrupt practice act, section 5175-28, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "Any person, who while holding a public office, or being nominated or seeking a nomination or appointment therefor, corruptly uses or promises to use, directly or indirectly, any official authority or influence possessed or anticipated, in the way of conferring upon any person, or in order to secure, or aid any person in securing, any office or public employment, or any nomination, confirmation, promotion or increase of salary, upon consideration that the vote or political influence or action of the person so to be benefited or of any other person, shall be given or used in behalf of any candidate, officer, or party or upon any other corrupt conditions or consideration, is guilty of a corrupt practice."

I assume that by "section 5175, subdivision 3 of the General Code, vol. 104, 122, of the session laws" in your second inquiry, reference is made to subdivision 3 of section 5175-29m, G. C., 104 O. L., 122, which provides as follows:

"Whoever directly or indirectly * * * (3) Promises to help another to obtain appointment provided for by the constitution or laws of Ohio or any municipality therein as a consideration for obtaining or preventing signatures to an initiative, supplementary or referendum petition * * * is guilty of a corrupt practice."

The gist of the offense defined in this latter provision is not the procuring of signatures or preventing the procurement of signatures to a petition for the purpose of defeating or enacting any law, but rather the use, or the express or implied promise to use, the official power, authority, prestige or influence of the office held for a corrupt practice.

Under section 7 of the Greenlund act (G. C., 1261-22), members of the county licensing boards may be appointed or removed by the state board.

Under section 8 of said act (G. C., 1261-23), the salary of the county licensing commissioners is fixed in the first instance by the state board.

Under section 12 of said act (G. C., 1261-27), the state board may fix the compensation of the secretary of the county board and may also designate one of the members of the county board to act as such secretary.

Under section 13 of the said act (G. C., 1261-28), all expenditures of the county board and all expenses of the members thereof are subject to the approval of the state board.

Throughout said act the general supervision and control of the county boards is given to the state board.

It can hardly be said that a member of the county board, or any of the employes thereof, would be in an independent position to refuse to act when asked to do so by a member of the state board, even in a matter outside of the official duty of either. Nor could it be said that the member of the state board, in asking the member of the county board to so act, had not placed himself in a position incompatible with the impartial and unprejudiced discharge of his duties.

In view of the well defined policy of the state against corrupt practice, the express terms of the license law of the state and its manifest spirit, and in consideration of the fundamental principles of sound public policy which forbid the prostitution of public offices for the adavncement of purely private and personal interests, whether it be for the purpose of perpetuating individuals in office or otherwise, I am of the opinion that if a state or county license commissioner engages in the activities set forth in either of the inquiries submitted by you, the same will constitute misconduct in office for which such officer may, under the law, be removed.

My answer to each of your three questions is in the affirmative.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF CONTROL OF OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—FORMER EMPLOYES' POSITIONS ABOLISHED WHEN NEW BOARD CREATED—EMPLOYES RETAINED PENDING ORGANIZATION OF BOARD ARE PROVISIONAL.

The board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station is not bound to continue former employes in positions which were abolished and to take the place of which new positions were created in the board of control act.

Employes retained are to be regarded as provisional or temporary in character and to continue pending organization of work of board, and its approval of appointments as provided in section 1171-4, G. C., 106 O. L., 123, under civil service laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

HON. GEORGE E. SCOTT, President, Board of Control, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Mt. Pleasant, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 20th, which is as follows:

> "I am writing to ask your opinion in regard to the status of the officers and employes of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, and the relation thereto of the board of control of this department.
> "The act creating the board of control seems to contain no clause requiring the board to continue in office or employment those formerly in position through appointment by the agricultural commission. Neither does there appear to be in the act creating the board of agriculture of Ohio, any transfer of obligation in this matter to the board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station.
> "Sec. 1082 of said act transfers to the Ohio agricultural experiment station certain properties, but, so far as I have been able to see, no obligation to continue any one in official position or employment.
> "Are the officers and employes of the station now legally in their respective positions by virtue of appointment by the agricultural commission, or have they been legislated out of office, and is it now our duty to fill the vacant positions?"

The act creating the board of control, to be found on page 122, 106 O. L., clearly operates to put an end to the terms of employment of the employes of the agricultural experiment station formerly conducted by the agricultural commission, and there is nothing contained in the act which serves to continue such employment.

Section 1171-4, G. C., which is section 6 of the board of control act on page 123, 106 O. L., is as follows:

> "The board of control shall appoint a director, who shall be a person of acknowledged ability and training in the principles and practice of scientific agriculture. It shall fix the terms of office and salaries of all officers and employes of the station and upon written charge for good and sufficient cause may remove them. The director shall have control of the affairs of the station, and be responsible to the board of control for the management of all of its departments. With the approval of the board of control he shall appoint chiefs of departments, assistants and other employes necessary for the proper management of the station and shall assign them to their respective duties. He may suspend an officer or employe of the station for cause, which suspension with the reasons therefor he shall immediately report to the board of control for its final action."

Had the proper course been followed when the board of control act became effective, such employes of the agricultural experiment station as are in the classified service should have been appointed under the provisions of section 486-14 of the General Code, which is section 14 of the civil service act, to be found on page 705 of volume 103, Ohio Laws, and which makes provision for temporary and exceptional appointments.

Under the provisions of section 486-16 of the General Code, which is section 16 of the civil service act, passed in 1913 (103 O. L., 706), the employes of the agricultural experiment station whose offices were abolished were entitled to be placed at the head of an eligible list for certification by the appointing officer under the provisions of the 1913 civil service act.

Neither of these courses appears to have been followed, but, on the contrary, employes of the agricultural experiment station were permitted to continue in their employment where they have since performed their duties.

It is my opinion, therefore, that these employes should be regarded as having been retained, provisionally or temporarily only, pending the action of the board of control in its organization and the furtherance of work assigned to it and its approval of appointments as provided for in section 1171-4 of the General Code, supra, under the civil service act to be found in 106 O. L., page 400, in so far as the employes of the agricultural experiment station are embraced within its provisions.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—ACT CREATING BOARD ABOLISHED DEPARTMENTS OF OLD BOARD—BOARD OF AGRICULTURE HAD AUTHORITY TO CONTINUE EMPLOYES, PROVISIONALLY—CIVIL SERVICE.

The act creating the board of agriculture had the effect of abolishing the entire department organization established by the agricultural commission of Ohio under the act found in 103 O. L., 306. Employes of the agricultural commission were deprived of their employment by force of the act of 1915 itself. The board of agriculture, however, had authority to continue such employes provisionally, pending the certification of appropriate eligible lists and pending the complete and permanent organization of its sub-departments, and the compensation of such person so provisionally employed may lawfully be paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1915.

HON. R. W. DUNLAP, Secretary, Board of Agriculture of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 10th, requesting my opinion as follows:

"The board of agriculture would like to be advised regarding employes of the agricultural commission.

"Do persons who held positions under the agricultural commission law retain same positions under the law creating the board of agriculture?"

The act under which the board of agriculture of Ohio is organized is entitled, "An act to create the board of agriculture of Ohio and to prescribe its organization, its powers and its duties; to amend (certain enumerated) sections * * * of the General Code and sections 122 and 123 of an act 'to create the agricultural commission of Ohio * * *,' approved May 3, 1913, * *."

As the title suggests, the main purpose of the act is to create a new state agency to be designated as the "Board of Agriculture of Ohio," and to prescribe its powers and duties; but this purpose is worked out by amending certain sections of the General Code, which upon examination in their former state appear to have been those which formerly provided for the organization, powers and duties of the agricultural commission of Ohio. But while this statement is true as descriptive of the form of the act found in 106 O. L., 143, it does not necessarily follow that on that account the act in substance does not create an entirely new and distinct department. It appears, for example, from inspection of the act found in 103 O. L., 304, and comparison thereof with the act last above referred to, that the field embraced by the activities of the board of agriculture is not as broad as that comprising the scope of the activities of the agricultural commission. (See section 2, of the act of 1915—section 1082, of the General Code, 106 O. L., 177.)

The exact question of law which I have considered is this:

"Did the general assembly in passing the act of 1915 evince an intention to retain intact the subordinate departments, bureaus and other organizations formerly under the general supervision of the agricultural commission, merely transferring their supervision and administration to the newly created board of agriculture; or did it show an intention to abolish the subordinate departments, bureaus and organizations by the abolition of the agricultural commission itself?"

For it is conceivable that the legislature might, by appropriate language, have abolished the agricultural commission as a state board or agency, and yet have continued in existence the department of agriculture as such, and in this way might have perpetuated the existence of the subordinate bureaus, departments and organizations within the agricultural department, merely transferring their supervision and administration to the board of agriculture.

I think it is clear that if upon inspection it is found that the legislature manifested an intention to continue the general organization of all or any part of the former department of agriculture, a change in the supreme management and control of that department would not of itself necessarily abolish the subordinate positions therein; while if there is no language from which such an intention can be inferred, then I think it would follow that the abolition of the agricultural commission and the creation of a board of agriculture of Ohio would have the effect of doing away with all the subordinate positions in the department of agriculture as they existed under the control and management of the agricultural commission.

In seeking for evidence of the legislative intention in this respect the inquiry is, I think, limited to the consideration of sections relating to the internal organization of the department. Sections which formerly prescribed what might be termed the external powers and duties of the agricultural commission, and which are so amended as merely to strike therefrom the words "agricultural commission," or their equivalent, and to substitute the words "board of agriculture," or their equivalent, are of no importance in this connection, as they, together with the general language of section 2 of the act above referred to, merely show that the legislature intended to transfer some of the powers of the agricultural commission to the board of agriculture, and that in its external relations the activities of the department were intended to be continuously discharged.

The sections which I think require study are sections 1087 and 1089, of the General Code, both in their original form as enacted in 1913 and in their amended form as amended in 1915, and the above mentioned section 2, of the act of 1915, designated as section 1082, of the General Code.

Section 1087, of the General Code, as it was enacted as section 9 of the agricultural commission act of 1913, provides as follows (103 O. L., 306):

> "The agricultural commission is authorized to employ a secretary, heads of bureaus, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes, and to fix their compensation and these and all similar acts involving expenditures of money shall be subject to the approval of the governor. The commissioners, secretary, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes that may be employed, shall be entitled to receive from the state their actual and necessary traveling expenses while traveling on the business of the agricultural commission. Such expenses shall be itemized and certified to by the person who incurred the expense, and allowed by the agricultural commission."

The same section as amended 106 O. L., 145, is as follows:

> "The board of agriculture is authorized to elect a secretary who shall be the chief executive officer of the board. His annual salary shall be four thousand dollars, and he shall give bond with sureties approved by the board in the sum of ten thousand dollars. The board of agriculture shall appoint heads of bureaus, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes, and said board shall fix their compensation within the limits prescribed by law. The secretary, experts, stenographers and other assistants and employes shall be entitled to receive from the state their actual and necessary expenses while traveling on the business of the board of agriculture, when itemized and approved by such board."

A similar comparison may be made with respect to the latter part of section 1089, as found in 103 O. L., 306, with the same section as found in 106 O. L., 145. They are as follows:

"(103 O. L., 306):

> "Said boards, officers and departments to whose powers and authority the agricultural commission succeeds shall on and after the 15th day of July, 1913, have no further legal existence, and the agricultural commission is hereby authorized and directed to assume and continue as successor of said respective boards, officers and departments, and shall continue the construction, control and management of all of said departments of the state government above enumerated, subject to the provisions of this act, and shall have power and authority to establish bureaus of fair administration; live stock diseases; nursery and orchard and bee inspection; fertilizer, lime, fungicide, insecticide and feed stuffs inspection; sanitary inspection; food inspection; statistics; chemistry and bacteriology; and it shall have power to establish a state chemical and bacteriological laboratory in which all analyses in connection with law enforcement may be made, and the commission is further authorized and empowered to establish such other bureaus and departments as it deems necessary.

"(106 O. L., 145):

"The board of agriculture of Ohio shall have power and authority to establish bureaus of fair administration; live stock diseases; nursery, orchard and bee inspection; fertilizer, lime, fungicide, insecticide and feed stuffs inspection; sanitary inspection; food inspection; the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game; the preparation and publication of statistics relating to the work of the board, timely crop reports, and other matters of interest to those engaged in agriculture; chemistry and bacteriology; and it shall have power to establish a state chemical and bacteriological laboratory in which all analyses in connection with law enforcement may be made; and the board is further authorized and empowered to establish such other bureaus and departments as it deems necessary."

A similar comparison may also be made between the first part of section 1089, as enacted as section 11, of the agricultural commission act of 1913 (103 O. L., 306), and section 2, of the act of 1915, designated as section 1082, General Code (106 O. L., 177), as follows:

"(103 O. L., 306):

"The agricultural commission shall succeed to and be possessed of the rights, authority and powers now exercised by the state board of agriculture, the secretary of the state board of agriculture, the board of live stock commissioners, the board of control of the state agricultural experiment station, the state dairy and food commissioner, the commission of fish and game, the state board of veterinary examiners and the state board of pharmacy, except such duties as are conferred on said state board of pharmacy by sections 1296, 1297, 1298, 1299, 1300, 1301, 1302, 1303, 1304, 1305, 1306, 1307, 1308, 1309, 1310, 1311 and 1312. The board of trustees of the Ohio State University shall arrange for the extension of the teachings of agriculture and domestic science of the university as provided in sections 7973 and 7974, of the General Code, and carry on the work and extension authorized and directed by such sections under the direction and supervision of the agricultural commission. The commission is empowered to make such transfers, changes and consolidations of the work of the above named departments as it may deem necessary. The commission shall also succeed to and be in control of all records, land, moneys, appropriations and other property, real or personal, now or hereafter held for the benefit of said respective departments of the state government, the same to be held in trust for the state of Ohio. Said boards, officers and departments to whose powers and authority the agricultural commission succeeds shall on and after the 15th day of July, 1913, have no further legal existence, and the agricultural commission is hereby authorized and directed to assume and continue as successor of said respective boards, officers and departments, and shall continue the construction, control and management of all said departments of the state government above enumerated, subject to the provisions of this act, and shall have power and authority to establish, etc.

"(106 O. L., 177):

"The board of agriculture shall succeed to and be possessed of the rights, authority and power now exercised by the agricultural commission, unless otherwise specifically provided by law. It shall also succeed to and be in control of all records, land, moneys, appropriations and other property, real or personal now or hereafter held for the benefit of said agricultural commission. Provided, however, that the records, lands, moneys, appropriations and other property, belonging to the experiment station and the division of forestry and experiment farms shall be transferred to the board of control of the experiment station; and provided further, that all books, records and other property belonging to or in the custody of the division of farmers' institutes shall be transferred with this division to the trustees of the Ohio State University."

I call attention to the following facts made prominent by the comparisons above suggested:

(1.) The secretary, heads of bureaus, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes were to be "employed" by the agricultural commission, with the approval of the governor. Similar subordinates of the board of agriculture are, in the case of the secretary, to be elected, and in the case of the remaining subordinates to be appointed.

There are two differences here. In the first place, the approval of the governor is no longer required, and in the second place the secretary is to be elected and not employed. There is a substantial difference between proceedings by which the board elects an officer and by which a person is employed, which I need not discuss in this connection. There is no vital distinction between an employment and an appointment, as the terms are used in the two forms of the section, respectively.

Under the agricultural commission the secretary was in the same category as the other employes. Now he is an officer who is required to be elected, and whose status is to be sharply distinguished from that of the other subordinates. Clearly an intention is thus far manifested to effect a partial reorganization of the agricultural department, in that the secretaryship created by the agricultural commission is not perpetuated but is clearly abolished.

(2.) The authority to establish bureaus and departments possessed by the board of agriculture is the same as that possessed by the agricultural commission. The language of section 1089 has not been changed materially in this respect, save by the authorization of the publication of statistics and crop reports. But if the legislature had intended that the subordinate bureaus and departments created by the agricultural commission should continue until changed by the board of agriculture language like that found in section 1089 as enacted in 1913 would have been used, viz.:

"The commission is empowered to make such transfers, changes and consolidations of the work of the above named departments as it may deem necessary. * * * The commission is hereby authorized and directed to assume and continue as successor of said respective boards, officers and departments, and shall continue the constructions, control and management of said departments of the state government above enumerated."

So far as section 1089 in its amended form is concerned, there is not only no such expression of intention to recognize the subordinate departments as continued, subject to new management and control, as was manifested by the above quoted language in the act of 1913; but said section standing by itself authorizes the original creation of such subordinate departments and bureaus, and by ignoring the existence of any such departments and bureaus as they formerly were constituted under the agricultural commission, the section, when taken in connection with the repeal of the statutes under which the subordinate departments, etc., were originally established, indicates an intention that there shall be a reorganization, and that the old departments and bureaus shall cease to exist. In other words, so far as section 1089 is concerned, and in view of the repeal of the act of 1913, there are no departments, bureaus, etc., of the board of agriculture until the board of agriculture has created such departments and bureaus.

(3.) However, what is designated as section 1082, above quoted,, must be read in this connection, for I think it is apparent that the office of this section is to provide fully for the transition from the agricultural commission to the board of agriculture. Whatever of continuity in the personnel and internal organization of the department is to be preserved must be provided for by this section, and if not so provided for is necessarily destroyed.

This section shows on its face that the board of agriculture is to succeed to and be possessed of the rights, authority and power of the agricultural commission, unless otherwise specifically provided by law. That is to say, as already pointed out, this provision preserves the continuity of the functions and powers considered externally. The section also vests in the board of agriculture the "records, land, moneys, appropriations and other property" held for the benefit of the commission, with certain exceptions, but the section does not provide, as did original section 1089 (103 O. L., 306), that certain departments should continue under the control of the board of agriculture. Such departments as are recognized are those which are transferred to agencies other than the board of agriculture.

Upon this analysis of section 1082, therefore, it appears that though designed for the purpose of providing for the transition of activities and functions from the one state board to the other, it does not preserve the continuity of the subordinate bureaus, departments, etc., or the personnel of the departmental force as it formerly existed, in the face of the fact that the general assembly had before it, in the shape of original section 1089 as enacted in 1913, language appropriate for such a purpose.

The conclusion irresistibly follows, then, that the general assembly did not intend that the subordinate positions in the department of the agricultural commission should continue to exist, notwithstanding the abolition of the commission itself; but that, on the contrary, the whole departmental organization should be abolished and a new one should be provided for by the board of agriculture.

The provisions of the civil service law afford no obstacle to the effectuation of the intention of the legislature. Without analyzing and quoting from the civil service law of 1913, it is sufficient to state that there is nothing therein inconsistent with the idea of abolishing offices and departments and thus terminating the tenure of subordinate employes and appointees thereof. In fact, the law of 1913 contains a specific provision which recognizes the possibility of such legislation in section 16 thereof (103 O. L., 706), as follows:

> "Whenever any permanent office or position in the classified service is abolished or made unnecessary, the person holding such office or position shall be placed by the commission at the head of an appropriate eligible list, and for a period of not to exceed one year shall be certified to an appointing officer as in the case of original appointments.''

For all of the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion that persons who held positions under the agricultural commission do not retain their positions under the law creating the board of agriculture, and that there are no subordinate positions in the department of agriculture under the management of the board of agriculture until such positions are created by the board. It was necessary for the board of agriculture to act under section 1089, of the General Code, to create the departments of its work, then to appoint such heads of bureaus, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes as may be permissible within the limits of the appropriations made by the legislature, before any of the persons who, I presume, have been serving by holding over during the change of administration had any strictly and technically legal standing as employes, etc., of the board of agriculture.

I assume, however, that the board of agriculture upon its organization took over as a matter of fact certain departments as formerly organized by the agricultural commission. In all cases in which this was done and in which the employes were notified that they would be continued in their employment, such action was, in my judgment, sufficient to re-establish the sub-departments and to confirm the status of the persons employed therein until such time as the board, by formal action under section 1089, of the General Code, might reorganize its work. In other words, while the law itself does abolish the old departments and positions, at the same time it gives to the board of agriculture the authority to create such departments and positions, and inasmuch as the law will not favor a state of facts which will result in a condition in which no one is authorized to carry on official work which is required to be done, the acquiescence of the board of agriculture in the continuance of such persons in their respective employments and the approval by the board of salary and expense vouchers drawn in favor of such employes would of itself be, in my opinion, sufficient action on the part of the board of agriculture to constitute a re-establishment of such departments.

Specifically answering your question then, I am of the opinion that persons who held positions under the agricultural commission law were not as a matter of law entitled to retain the same positions under the law creating the board of agriculture; but that if the board of agriculture recognized their incumbency and treated them as its own employes, that would be sufficient to entitle them to remain in their respective employments.

However, such recognition on the part of the board of agriculture, being tantamount to reappointment or re-employment, raises a further question under the civil service law. In order to bring about the result which I have described in a perfectly legal way, it would have been proper, and in a sense technically necessary, that the civil service commission prepare eligible lists for all the positions thus to be filled. The incumbents by virtue of the provision above quoted would be entitled to have their names placed at the heads of such eligible lists and would, therefore, be eligible to appointment. However, the rule is that appointments made otherwise than from eligible lists certified by the civil service commission are treated as provisional only, and under favor of section 14, of the civil service law—section 486-14, of the General Code—provisional appointments may last only until an eligible list may be prepared, which is to be done within ninety days after the occurrence of the vacancy. Emergency appointments are recognized by the same section, but the lawful duration of these is limited to ten days.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the case the proper course of action, in my opinion, is for the board of agriculture to request eligible lists for appointments to all the positions within its department for which appointments have not been made since it organization. These eligible lists should contain the name, in each case, of the present incumbent and the names of three other persons. As soon as such lists are furnished the board of agriculture should proceed to make appointments from such lists.

By section 486-31, as amended, it is provided in effect that persons holding positions in the civil service who have not taken competitive examinations, shall not be entitled to continue in their respective positions save as provisional appointees in the absence of eligible lists; and where eligible lists exist, composed of names of those who have taken competitive examinations, the names of such persons who have not taken competitive examinations shall be certified for reappointment in addition to the names on the eligible list, when an appointment may be made by the appointing authority from the eligible list thus augmented.

In case the board of agriculture desires to continue the same form of organization into bureaus and divisions as obtained under the agricultural commission, no formal action other than that described will be necessary to put the department upon a permanent basis; but if the board desires to change the former organization of the department, the board should formally provide for such reorganization, designating the different bureaus and divisions therein and request an eligible list from the civil service commission based upon such reorganization.

Until these things are done present incumbents are to be regarded, in my opinion, as provisional appointees and their salary and expenses may lawfully be paid.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION—NOT REQUIRED OF EMPLOYES AND SUBORDINATES HOLDING POSITIONS IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE AT TIME NEW CIVIL SERVICE ACT BECAME EFFECTIVE—COMMISSION MUST ALSO CERTIFY TO APPOINTING AUTHORITY THREE CANDIDATES WHO HAVE TAKEN COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

Under section 486-31 of the General Code, 106 O. L., 400, a competitive examination is not required of officers, employes and subordinates holding positions in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof at the time the civil service act, as amended, 106 O. L., 400, became effective; but it is the duty of the civil service commission to certify such officers, employes or subordinates to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such positions who have taken a competitive examination.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of September 3, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Your letter of September 2d is not responsive to the inquiry made in our letter of the 1st inst., as to the clause of the civil service statute providing for certification of an officer or employe holding a position in the classified service without competitive examination.

"The statute does not in plain terms say that such officers shall be exempted from competitive examination, and the precise question is whether their exemption from competitive examination can be made a part of the language of the statute by 'construction and interpretation.'

"As the commissioners understand their powers, they have no authority, under the statute, to certify anyone as eligible to appointment in the classified service who has not passed a competitive examination.

"We wish to have a more careful examination of the question by your department."

The answer to your question involves the interpretation of the language contained in section 486-31, of the General Code, as amended in 106 O. L., page 400, which is as follows:

"Sec. 486-31. SCHEDULE. All officers, employes and subordinates in the classified service of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, holding their positions under existing civil service laws, and who are holding such positions by virtue of having taken a regular competitive examination as provided by law, shall, when this act takes effect, be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act; but no person holding a position in the classified service by virtue of having taken a non-competitive examination shall be deemed to have been appointed or to be an appointee in conformity with the provisions of this act; provided, however, that all persons who have served the state or any political subdivision thereof continuously and satisfactorily for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915, shall be deemed appointees within the provisions of this act.

"The name of each officer, employe and subordinate holding a position in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof at the time this act takes effect, who has not passed a regular competitive examination and who has not been in the service seven years as herein provided, shall, within ten days after this act becomes effective, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission and shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. If any such person is reappointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act. If no eligible list exists such persons may be retained as provisional employes until such time, consistent with reasonable diligence, as the commission can prepare eligible lists when such position shall be filled as prescribed in this act. * * *"

Under the section, part of which is above quoted, the legislature has considered and made provision for two classes of officers, employes and subordinates in the classified service who were holding positions when the amended civil service act went into effect, other than those who have taken competitive examinations.

1. Such officers, employes and subordinates "who have served the state or any political subdivision thereof continuously and satisfactorily for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915."

2. Such officers, employes and subordinates who held positions in such classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof at the time said amended civil service act went into effect, who have not passed a regular competitive examination and who have not served the state or any political subdivision thereof continuously for a period of not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915.

Officers, employes and subordinates embraced within the first class above described are, by the terms of the statute, made appointees and continue in their respective positions.

The name of each officer, employe or subordinate embraced in the second class above described, by the provisions of the statute, shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. It is clearly the intent of the law that the officers, employes and subordinates within such second class shall be certified without the requirement of a competitive examination; and shall, by virtue of their former service, stand in the same position before the appointing authority as the other three candidates who have taken a competitive examination. This provision gives the appointing authority the privilege of retaining a competent officer, employe or subordinate who, during a term of service less than seven years in duration, has acquired experience and demonstrated his fitness for the position. If the legislative intent be otherwise construed, and such officer, employe or subordinate be required to take a competitive examination, he would be in no better position than an applicant without experience, and the provision that his name be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the names of three candidates who have taken a competitive examination would be without meaning and purpose.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

"PUBLIC WORK" DEFINED—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 37, ARTICLE II, CONSTITUTION AND STATUTES IN REGARD TO EIGHT HOURS CONSTITUTING "DAY'S WORK"—EMPLOYMENT BY MONTH OR DAY IS WITHIN APPLICATION OF STATUTE—WORKMEN EMPLOYED PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1915, FOR A DEFINITE TERM BEYOND THAT DATE ARE NOT SUBJECT TO PENAL PROVISIONS OF STATUTE—POLICE AND FIREMEN EXEMPT FROM PROVISIONS.

Persons employed in cleaning streets, as well as those engaged in their replacement, construction, repair, maintenance or alteration, and persons engaged in the construction, repair, replacement, alteration, maintenance or operation of municipal power, heat, light and water plants, wharves, docks, waterways and sewers, constructed, maintained, repaired or operated for public use or benefit by the state, or any political subdivision thereof, or engaged in the construction, maintenance, repair, replacement, alteration or operation of any public undertaking of a structural nature of substantial permanence, capable of being regarded as a whole and of public utility, service, and interest, are within the provisions of section 37 of article II of the constitution, and sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 854.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a number of requests for an opinion involving the construction of sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 854, and deeming the questions submitted to be of general public interest and importance, I am taking the liberty of addressing an opinion thereon to you.

The requests submitted make particular inquiry as to the application of the statutes above mentioned, to employes of municipalities engaged in cleaning, repairing and in the construction of streets and sewers; the construction, maintenance and operation of municipal waterworks, heat, power and light plants, and the construction and improvement of public highways.

The statutes to which reference is made in these several inquiries were enacted May 23, 1913, 103 O. L., 854, and provide as follows:

> "Section 17-1, G. C. Except in cases of extraordinary emergency, not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, for workmen engaged on any public work carried on or aided by the state, or any political subdivision thereof, whether done by contract or otherwise; and it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation or association, whose duty it shall be to employ or to direct and control the services of such workmen to require or permit any of them to labor more than eight hours in any calendar day or more than forty-eight hours in any week, except in cases of extraordinary emergency. This section shall not be construed to include policemen or fireman.
> "Section 17-2, G. C. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction be fined not to exceed five hundred dollars or be imprisoned not more than six months or both."

This statute was passed for the manifest purpose of providing a penalty for the violation of the provisions of section 37, of article II, of the constitution, as follows:

> "Except in cases of extraordinary emergencies, not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, for workmen engaged on any public work carried on or aided by the state, or any political subdivision thereof, whether done by contract or otherwise."

The question submitted therefore involves a determination of whether men employed on the streets of a city in cleaning and making repairs of the same and as engineers at municipal waterworks plants, "are engaged on any public work" within the meaning of that phrase as found in the statute and constitutional provision above quoted. The construction of this phrase was considered in two opinions of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan—one under date of February 13th, 1914, and one of the date of April 29, 1914, to be found at pages 283 and 595, of the report of the attorney general for the year 1914, and also in an opinion of this department under date of April 30, 1915, being opinion No. 305, of this year.

In the opinion under date of April 29, 1914, supra, it was held that the phrase "workmen engaged on any public work," etc., did not include employes of waterworks departments of cities. In the opinion under date of February 13th, 1914, supra, it was held that the regular experiment station work carried on at the Miami university at Oxford, Ohio, is not a public work within the meaning of that phrase as used in the constitutional provision and statute under consideration. In opinion No. 305 under date of April 30, 1915, it was held that the work regularly performed at the agricultural experiment stations is not "public work" within the meaning thereof as found in the statute above quoted.

It will be observed that that part of the statute here more particularly under consideration as declaratory of the substantive rule of law, is in the exact language of section 37, of article II, of the constitution, and therefore, whatever construction is to be given to the constitutional provision, must attach with equal force and aptness to the language of the statute. That is to say, the phrase "engaged on any public work" has no other meaning in the statute than that which must be ascribed to it as used in the constitution. The statute, however, is penal and may not be construed without regard to the well established rule that penal statutes will be strictly construed in favor of the accused. But this rule requires only a fair and reasonable interpretation of terms in view of the plain purpose of the enactment. This phrase "public work" as used in legislation of this character of that in which it is here found, is not as comprehensive in its meaning as the terms might clearly import when used in a different relationship. No one would suppose "public work" in this application to include within its scope all work performed, for, in the interest of, or at the expense of the general public. In other words there is a clear distinction, though the line of demarcation is not easy of definition between "public work" as here used, and "working for the public" or "public employment"—that is, being employed by the public. The term "work" as here used is not synonymous with employment, but rather relates to the ultimate object of the employment. "Public work" in its most comprehensive sense is defined in 32 Cyc., 1256, as "a work in which the state is interested, every species and character of work done for the public, and for which the taxpaying citizens are liable, work by or for the state and by or for a municipal corporation and contractors therewith." On the other hand, "public works" is defined in the Century dictionary as "all fixed works constructed for public use, as railways, docks, canals, waterworks, roads, etc." So that the phrase is used with varying signification within the limits indicated by these definitions, dependent upon the context in which it is found, and the subject-matter in relation to which it is used.

In the federal eight-hour law of August 1, 1892, which bears a marked similarity in phraseology to the constitution and statute of this state, is found used in similar relation to that of "any public work" here under consideration, the phrase "any of the public works" of the United States.

While the supreme court of the United States in the case of Ellis vs. United States, 206 U. S., 263, 51 L. Ed., U. S., 1054, distinguished between "any of the public works" and "any public work," it will be noted upon reflection that this distinction, which was based somewhat upon the accompanying words "upon" and "any of the," in the last analysis is the distinction above attempted to be pointed out as between "public work" and "employment by the public." Indeed, it will be observed that while there is omitted from the language of the Ohio constitution the words "of the," the word "work" therein is preceded by the phrase "on any," and I am inclined to conclude that in view of the similarity of context and identity of purpose so inseparably associated with the phrase "on any public work" as found in the Ohio constitution that it is there used as synonymous with "upon any of the public works" as found in the federal statute here referred to, of which the court in the opinion announced in the above mentioned case said: "The words 'upon' and 'any of the' and the plural 'works' import that the objects of labor referred to have some kind of permanent existence and structural unity, and are severally capable of being regarded as complete wholes."

In the case of Ellis vs. Grand Rapids, 123 Mich., 567, it is said:

> "Public works is distinguished from public department as used in the statutes giving preference to veterans in employment in all public departments and upon public works."

One is an employment by the public, the other an employment upon an object or undertaking having some kind of permanent existence of structural character and capable of being properly regarded, when completed, as a whole and of general public interest and utility.

In the case of U. S. to use of Fidewater Steel Co. vs. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding Co., 137 Fed., 689, the court in discussing the meaning of "any public work" as used in the act of August 13, 1894, c. 280, relative to bonds of contractors for the prosecution of "any public work" or for repairs upon any public building or "public work," the court, in referring to the dictionary definitions of this phrase, said :

> "Without quarreling with these definitions, we conclude that the meaning of the words 'public work' in the act is broader and more comprehensive than the dictionary meaning given to 'public works;' that public work is suceptible of application to any constructive work of a public character, and is not limited to fixed works."

It is worthy of notice that here the singular form of the word "work" is used as distinguished from the form used in the act of August 1, 1892, under consideration in the case of Ellis vs. U. S., supra, thus adding support to the conclusion reached as to the fundamental distinction made by the court in that case not being dependent primarily upon the plural form as there pointed out.

In the case of Winters vs. Duluth, 82 Minn., 130, it was held that a municipal pump station was within the meaning of "public works" as used in a statute requiring notice to the city before liability would attach for any defect in any street or public works of the city.

In the case of Seibert vs. Cavinder, 3 Mo. App., 426, it is held that sewer-building and macadamizing of streets are public works within the meaning of that term as found in the charter of the city of St. Louis.

A "public work" then upon general authority and principle comprehends all public undertaking of structural character, though not fixed in their nature, of substantial permanence and capable of being regarded, when completed, as a whole, and it may be readily inferred that "public works" is not limited in its application to such public undertakings only while in process of construction, but even after completion one may properly be said to be engaged on a public work while employed in the maintenance, repair, replacement, alteration or operation of such public undertakings as are of a structural nature, of substantial permanence, capable of being regarded as a whole and of public utility, service and interest.

Further light may be thrown upon this phase of the question if we may with propriety refer to the history of the adoption of the constitutional amendment under consideration and this, I think, under authority of the case of the State ex rel. vs. Kinnon et al., 7 O. S., 563-567, we are fully warranted in doing in the present instance. This amendment to the constitution was originally adopted as proposal No. 209 by the constitutional convention April 23, 1912, Con. Pr. & D. 1345, in the following form:

> "Not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, on the construction, replacement, alteration, repair, maintenance and operation of all public works, buildings, plants, machinery at which laborers, workmen and mechanics are employed, etc."

Adopted by the convention in this form this proposal was referred to the committee on arrangement and phraseology. On May 22, 1912 (Con. P. and D., 1740-1), the committee reported back this proposal in the form in which it was adopted by the people except the term "laborers" was used for which the word "workman" was afterwards substituted by amendment. (Con. P. and D., 1769.)

With reference to the powers, duties and functions of the committee on revision, arrangement and enrollment of a constitutional convention which is analogous to the commitee on arrangement and phraseology above referred to, the court in the case of State ex rel. vs. Kinnon, supra, said:

> "The duties of that committee are indicated by its name. They were of a literary and clerical character. To initiate constitutional provisions was no part of its proper office. But it took, on reference, what had been previously agreed on, after full discussion in committe of the whole and in the convention proper, and arranged the subject-matter under appropriate heads, revised and corrected the language, and attended to its enrollment."

Thus it is clearly determined that the sole duty of the committee on arrangement and phraseology relative to the terms of the proposal as adopted, was to revise and correct the language that the full meaning and intent of the convention, as set forth in the original form of the proposal be concluded in apt, concise and appropriate terms.

A comparison of the proposal as finally adopted with its original form will disclose no substantial alteration of meaning, and that the work of the committee was confined solely to the elimination of tautological terms.

Since it was not within the duties of the committee to effect any change in meaning, we must conclude that it was the intention of the convention, and the people in adopting the same as well, that the proposal as finally adopted should be construed to mean the same as when referred to the committee.

If this be a legitimate source of light, we are supported in the conclusion above suggested that "public work" as found in the constitutional amendment comprehends the maintenance, repair, replacement, alteration and operation as well as the construction of a public undertaking.

The terms "maintenance, repair, replacement, alteration" and "operation," as well as "buildings, plants, machinery" were stricken out by the committee manifestly for the sole reason that they were all included within the meaning of the phrase "public work" itself, as we have heretofore attempted to point out. But that this provision was intended to be applicable to the maintenance and operation, etc., as well as to original construction, is evidenced by the declaration of its author in the very introduction of the debate (Con. P. and D., 1339) as follows:

> "This proposal provides for an eight-hour day on public works, and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week in the maintenance and operation of public works."

It may be here pointed out also, if the plural form of the word "works" be deemed fundamental to the distinction made in the case of Ellis vs. U. S., supra, that the plural form was used in the proposal as originally adopted by the convention.

It then having been determined that the term "public work" as used in the constitutional provision and statute under consideration comprehends the maintenance, repair, construction, alteration and operation of all public undertakings of a structural nature of substantial permanence and of general public utility, whether fixed or otherwise, it follows that all persons employed in the work of such construction, maintenance, alteration, repair and operation are engaged on a public work, and if the same is aided or carried on by the state or any political subdivision thereof, such persons and their employers are subject to the penalties, possess the rights and are entitled to the remedies therein set forth.

Works of a structural character would clearly include waterworks, light plants, streets, bridges, highways and all such other public utilities as are constructed, maintained or operated by or with the aid of the state or any political subdivision thereof for the use or benefit of the public, and hence all persons employed to perform any part of the work of constructing, maintaining and operating, or of repairing, altering or replacing such public utility, would be subject to the provisions of sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 854, above quoted, whether such persons be laborers, mechanics, civil engineers, or architects, and whether employed directly by the state or political subdivision, or by one who contracts with the political subdivision or other person, firm or corporation for the performance of the labor necessary to the construction, maintenance, repair, alteration, replacement or operation of such public utility.

Policemen and firemen are by the terms of the statute specifically exempt from its provision. It will be readily observed, however, that the police and fire departments of municipal corporations are not public works within the definition of that phrase as hereinbefore stated, and hence policemen and firemen would not have been subject to the provisions of sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., supra, had no mention been made of them whatever.

It may be further observed that this statute applies only to workmen. It is not every one who may be engaged in a public service that is subject to the provisions thereof. The distinction between a workman and a public officer is so marked as to avoid necessity of discussion. It is sufficient to say that public officers of the state or of a political subdivision thereof are not within the terms of the statutes. Aside from the fact that public officers are not workmen, they are not generally engaged on work of a structural nature.

Inquiry is made as to the application of this statute to workmen under civil service who were employed prior to July 1, 1915, and to be paid by the month. Persons who are employed by the month are as clearly within the application of the statute as those employed by the day. The month, year or other period of employment, in the very nature of things is constituted of a fixed and definite number of days which may not be in excess of eight hours in length nor more than six eight-hour days in any one calendar week.

Workmen who are under civil service and who were employed in the construction, maintenance, repair, replacement or operation of any public work hereinbefore defined, and who were lawfully employed prior to July 1, 1915, for a definite and fixed term extending beyond that date, are not subject to the penal provisions of section 17-2, G. C., supra, during the term of such employment.

It will be noted that while section 37, of article II, of the constitution, is not penal, it is self-executing and became effective January 1, 1913, and hence any contract entered into since that date would be subject to the constitutional provision, notwithstanding that the statute making such violation a criminal offense did not become operative until July 1, 1915.

It would then follow that contracts of employment upon any public work as above defined, carried on or aided by the state or any political subdivision thereof, which have been entered into since July 1, 1915, are in contravention of section 37, of article II, of the constitution, and are subject to the penal provisions of section 17-2, G. C., supra.

As above stated, streets, roads and all public thoroughfares are works of a structural nature, of substantial permanence and of general public utility. The cleaning of the same is necessary to the proper maintenance thereof, and hence persons employed in cleaning the streets, as well as those engaged in their construction, repair, replacement or alteration, are subject to the terms of sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., supra.

Municipal power, heat, light and water plants are obviously within the above definition of public works, and all persons engaged in the construction, repair, replacement, alteration, maintenance or operation thereof are subject to the provisions of said section. In like manner would wharfs, docks, waterways, sewers, constructed or maintained, repaired or operated for public use or benefit by the state or any political subdivision thereof, or by the aid thereof, come within the terms of this statute.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION—LEASE FOR ASSISTANT TO STATE VETERINARIAN—TERMS OF SUCH LEASE CONTINUE LONGER THAN APPROPRIATIONS EXISTING AT TIME IT WAS ENTERED INTO—LEASE VOID.

A lease made by the agricultural commission of Ohio, since by its terms the lease will continue longer than appropriations existing at the time it was entered into, is void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1915.

Board of Agriculture of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On August 30th Mr. A. S. Cooley, the state veterinarian appointed by your board, requested the opinion of this department as follows:

> "The agricultural commission of Ohio having entered into a contract leasing one room, No. 5, on the south side of the Interurban building, Lima, Ohio, for the purpose of an office, and there being no further use of said office, the same being vacant and no use to this department, we request your opinion as to whether said lease is binding and whether the board of agriculture must continue to pay twenty-five ($25.00) dollars per month for rental thereof?"

He enclosed with his letter of inquiry a copy of the lease referred to and also correspondence had between Dr. Paul Fischer, state veterinarian of the agricultural commission of Ohio, and Mr. T. P. Riddle, of Lima, Ohio, who was an employe of said board.

The lease calls for one room on the second floor, on the south side of the Interurban building at Lima, Ohio, for the purpose of an office, and from the letter of Mr. Riddle under date of July 29, 1915, it appears that the purpose for which such room was rented was for demonstration work in hog cholera extermination.

The lease was made between The Ohio Electric Company and the agricultural commission of Ohio for the room aforesaid, the lease being "for and during the full term of two (2) years next ensuing from the 1st day of June, 1914, and to be fully completed and ended on the 31st day of May, 1916; yielding and paying therefor, during the said term, six hundred dollars ($600.00), payable as follows: Twenty-five dollars ($25.00) per month, in advance, on the last day of the preceding month at the office of the assistant general manager of said lessor in said building.'' The lease was executed on the first day of June, 1914.

The first question to be determined in this matter is as to whether or not there was any authority on the part of the agricultural commission of Ohio to enter into a lease for office room other than the office provided for in the state capitol in the city of Columbus under the provisions of section 1086, G. C. (103 O. L., 306.)

Under the provisions of section 1108, G. C. (103 O. L., 310), the agricultural commission is required to ''promote and protect the live stock interests of the state, prevent the spread of dangerously infectious and contagious diseases, and co-operate with the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture in such work. The agricultural commission may use all proper means in the prevention of the spread of dangerous by (dangerously) infectious and contagious diseases among domestic animals and in providing for the extermination of such diseases.''

It appearing that the office rented in Lima was for the purpose of demonstration work for hog cholera prevention, I am of the opinion that there was ample authority in section 1108, hereinbefore in part quoted, to authorize the agricultural commission to enter into a lease for rooms for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned.

It is to be noted, however, that the lease was for a term of two years beginning on the 1st day of June, 1914, and therefore ending on the 31st day of May, 1916. The question arises first as to whether or not there was on June 1, 1914, any appropriation for the payment of the rent for the premises in question and, if so, whether there was an appropriation which would extend for the entire period covered by the lease.

House bill No. 590, passed April 16, 1913, and receiving the approval of the governor on May 9, 1913, appropriated certain sums to the Ohio state board of agriculture, and under this appropriation if there were any funds therein appropriated which would be available to pay rent for the premises aforesaid, the same would terminate two years thereafter, or at least by May 10, 1915, the payment of rent being, of course, a current expense.

House bill No. 47 (104 O. L., 64), passed February 16, 1914, was approved by the governor on February 17, 1914, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on the same day, and the appropriations made therein will only be good until at the latest February 17, 1916.

There was therefore, assuming that proper appropriation had been made for the payment of rent, no appropriation existent at the time the lease was made that would not lapse prior to the termination of the lease, and, consequently, would entail upon a subsequent legislature the duty of providing funds to meet the balance of the rent money after the lapsing of the appropriations existent at the time of the execution of the lease.

The case of State vs. Medbery, 7 O. S., 522, is a leading case in Ohio relative to the right of the various departments of state government to enter into a contract for the payment of money, which contract will not terminate before the expiration of the appropriation existing at the time the contract is made. I do not find that this case has ever been questioned in Ohio. The decision of the court is very exhaustive, and I will not undertake to go further than cite the case in this opinion. The case involved the right of the board of public works to enter into a contract for five years in pursuance of a statute passed authorizing such contract. The court, on page 542, states the following:

"We are of the opinion that the discretion, power and responsibility of the general assembly conferred by the constitution were not intended to be, and therefore cannot be thus superseded; that no law could be passed under which an agreement between the board of public works and two or more citizens could, for any period beyond two years, divest the general assembly of its discretion and control over the appropriations or the amount of the appropriations to be made for repairs of the public works of the state."

If the legislature could not pass a bill authorizing a department or board to enter into a contract beyond the expiration of the appropriation made by such legislature, then surely a board could not enter into a contract, the termination of which would extend beyond the expiration of the appropriation made by the legislature to it. Consequently, I am of the opinion that the contract entered into by the agricultural commission of Ohio and the Ohio Electric Company for the premises at Lima is absolutely void, there being no authority conferred upon the agent of the state to enter into any such a contract. The mere fact that a contract might have been entered into for a period less than the period for which the contract was actually entered into would not make the contract partially valid and partially void, but since the term of the contract is an entire term, the entire contract is void; and, therefore, without passing on the question as to whether or not with the abolishment of the agricultural commission of Ohio the contract entered into by such board would cease, I am of the opinion that the contract at its inception was absolutely void and, therefore, there is no obligation on your board to continue to pay the rent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

NATIONAL FLAG—CONSTRUCTION OF PENAL STATUTES WITH REFERENCE TO SAME.

Sections 12396, 12397 and 12398, G. C., being penal statutes, are to be strictly construed.

A mere showing of red and white stripes on a blue background with no representation of the stars or the general outline or other distinctive indicia of the flag is not considered a representation of the flag within the purview of the above sections of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1915.

HON. C. F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 3d, requesting my written opinion as follows:

"We desire to secure your construction of sections 12396 and 12397, of the General Code, with reference to the desecration of the national flag, and we enclose herein a printed design which we wish you would kindly return with your opinion.

"We desire to know whether in your opinion the users and publishers of this design which shows a banner upon which is a shield printed in red, white and blue and bearing the words 'We give national mileage coupons free fare anywhere' are guilty of a violation of section 12396, of the General Code of Ohio. You will note that no stars anywhere appear upon the design, although the colors and stripes do appear.

"We would appreciate a reply at your earliest convenience and the return of the design enclosed."

Section 12396, of the General Code, found in the chapter entitled "Offenses Against the State and the United States," provides as follows:

"Whoever prints, paints or places a word, figure, mark, picture or design upon a flag, standard, color or ensign of the United States, or the state of Ohio, or causes it to be done, or exposes, or causes to be exposed, such flag, standard, color or ensign upon which is printed, painted or placed, or to which is attached or appended a word, figure, mark, picture or design, or manufactures or has in possession an article of merchandise upon which is placed or attached a representation of such flag, standard, color or ensign, or publicly mutilates, defiles, defaces or casts contempt upon such flag, standard, color or ensign, shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than thirty days, or both."

Section 12397, of the General Code, provides:

"The words 'flag,' 'standard,' 'color' or 'ensign,' as used in the next preceding section, shall include any flag, standard, color or ensign or a picture or representation thereof, made of or represented on any substance, and purporting to be a flag, standard, color or ensign of the United States, or the state of Ohio, or a picture or representation thereof, upon which shall be shown the colors, the stars and the stripes in any number thereof, or which might appear to represent a flag, standard, color or ensign of the United States or state of Ohio."

Section 12398, of the General Code, provides:

"The next two preceding sections shall not apply to an act permitted by the statutes of the United States or by the United States army and navy regulations, nor shall they apply to a newspaper, periodical, book, pamphlet, circular, certificate, diploma, warrant or commission of appointment to office, society lodge or emblem, ornamental picture, or stationary for use in correspondence, on which shall be printed, painted or placed said flag disconnected from an advertisement."

While it might well be argued that the placing of printed matter upon a banner or design of the character enclosed with your letter is in contravention of the purpose and policy of the act, yet under the fundamental rules of strict construction applicable to all penal laws, a statute defining a crime cannot be extended by construction to persons or things not within its descriptive terms though they may appear to be within the reason and spirit of the statutes.

In case the State vs. Meyers, 56 O. S., 340, the court say:

"Persons cannot be made subject to such statute by implication. Only those transactions are included in them which are within both their spirit and letter; and all doubts in the interpretation of such statutes are to be resolved in favor of the accused."

In the case of Little vs. Seminary, 72 O. S., 417, the following is quoted from the opinion of the court:

> "The rule that the reason of a law is its life, so frequently helpful in the determination of questions arising at common law, must have a restricted application in the interpretation of the statutes. Courts are not permitted to go beyond the plain meaning of the language which the legislature has used to express its intention."

Whether or not any particular design or picture is a representation of the flag, or might appear to be a representation of the flag or colors of the United States or of the state of Ohio, is essentially a question of fact, and with respect to the enclosed printed design it must be conceded that the question of its representing or appearing to represent a flag, standard, color or ensign of the United States or of the state of Ohio is by no means free from speculation.

There has been no judicial determination of the scope of the application of this legislation, and I am unable to say, as a matter of law, that it would extend to a printed design of the character enclosed with your letter.

I am of the opinion, on the contrary, that the mere showing of the red and white stripes on a blue background with no representation of the stars or the general outline of the flag, as in the case of the enclosed design, is not such a representation of the flag as is comprehended by the provisions of the penal statutes under consideration.

I therefore advise that in my opinion the placing of the printed matter upon such a design as the one enclosed cannot be regarded as a violation of the provisions of section 12396, of the General Code subjecting the person so printing or using such design to the penalty prescribed in said section. I return herewith the design you submitted, as per your request.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME—WHEN DESTROYED, TRUSTEES DISBANDED AND NO OTHER HOME PROVIDED—WARDS OF FORMER HOME ARE CAST UPON COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

In the case of a children's home having been destroyed and swept away by flood or other casualty, its trustees having disbanded and no other home provided, the care of destitute children, including wards of the former home, is cast upon the county commissioners to the same extent as if the home had never been established.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1915.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your request for an opinion upon a statement of facts as follows:

> "During the flood of March, 1913, the children's home of Morgan county was destroyed. Previous to that time a number of children had been placed in foster homes by the trustees of that institution. Since the destruction of the home the board of trustees has been disbanded. Section 3093, General Code, particularly states that the trustees of such a home are responsible for all children placed in foster homes. Inasmuch as the home has been disbanded, are the former trustees still responsible for the supervision of these children, and if not, who is?''

Under the statement of facts presented, the children's home of Morgan county having been destroyed and the board of trustees of the home disbanded, it is my opinion that the duties resting upon the former board of trustees, which no longer exists, are now cast upon the county commissioners under the provisions of section 3092, General Code, as amended, page 891, of the 103 O. L., as follows:

''In any county where such home has not already been provided, the board of commissioners shall make temporary provisions for destitute children by transferring them to the nearest children's home where they can be received and kept at the expense of the county, or by leasing suitable premises for that purpose, which shall be furnished, provided and managed in all respects as provided by law for the support and management of children's homes, but if such child be not abandoned or surrendered by its parents, a complaint must first be filed with the juvenile court setting forth the facts as to such children, and if such court commits such children to an institution or agency for the care of children, then said commissioners may pay reasonable board for such child, whether placed in an institution or with a private family. But the commissioners may provide for the care and support of such children within their respective counties, in the manner deemed best for the interests of such children which may include the payment of board for such children in a private home, when placed therein by an institution or society certified by the board of state charities as provided by section 1352-1, of the General Code, and they shall levy an additional tax, which shall be used for that purpose only.''

It is my opinion therefore that the situation is the same as if a home had not been provided, and that until such time such a home may be provided, if at all, the county commissioners will be charged with the care and support of destitute children, as provided in Sec. 3092, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN HIGHWAYS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 11, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letters of September 7 and September 9, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

"Montgomery county—Dayton-Indianapolis Rd., petition No. 978, I. C. H. No. 28;

"Montgomery county—Dayton-Troy Eastern Rd., petition No. 1674, I. C. H. No. 487;

"Butler county—Cincinnati-Hamilton Rd., petition No. 1307, I. C. H. No. 39;

"Allen county—Lima-Delphos Rd., petition No. 1530, I. C. H. No. 127;

"Cuyahoga county—Cleveland-East Liverpool Rd., petition No. 1389, I. C. H. No. 12;

"Clermont county—Cincinnati-Chillicothe Rd., petition No. 588."

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROBATE JUDGE—WHERE JUDGE IS ILL, JUDGE OF COURT OF COMMON PLEAS HAS AUTHORTIY TO DISCHARGE DUTIES IMPOSED BY LAW ON PROBATE JUDGE.

The provisions of section 1592, G. C., do not confer any jurisdiction on the court of common pleas but the authority therein conferred is limited to the judge of said court and the said section is not in contravention of any provisions of the constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 11, 1915.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 8, 1915, in which you state the probate judge of your county is now incapacitated from attending to the duties of his office, by reason of sickness, and that this situation is likely to continue for some time. You further state that under the provisions of section 1592, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., page 257, your common pleas judge is ready and willing to discharge the duties imposed by law upon the probate judge, but that some doubt exists as to the constitutionality of the section aforesaid. The question which you submit in that connection is:

"Does the constitution of Ohio confer any exclusive jurisdiction upon the probate court, which by section 1592, G. C., could not be extended to the common pleas court?"

Section 1592, G. C., aforesaid, as amended in 103 O. L., page 257, provides as follows:

"When it is made to appear to the satisfaction of a common pleas judge within a county that the probate judge thereof is absent therefrom he may perform the duties conferred upon him by law for the admission of patients to a hospital for the insane of the state, or when it is made to appear that the probate judge is incapacitated on account of illness, or is absent from his county in obedience to an order issued by the governor of the state directing him to perform military service, he may perform all the duties conferred by law upon such probate judge. The record of such cases shall be made and preserved in the proper records of the probate court by the deputy clerk thereof.''

It would seem that the situation, as now existing in your county, is covered by that provision of the foregoing section which authorizes the judge of the common pleas court to perform all the duties conferred by law upon the probate judge, when the latter is incapacitated on account of illness from attending to the duties of his office. In this connection it must be observed that this section does not confer, or undertake to confer, any authority or jurisdiction on the court of common pleas. Its only purpose is to provide a substitute judge for the probate judge, when conditions arise as described in said section, which make such substitution necessary. The person selected and empowered by the provisions of this section to act when such conditions occur, is the judge of the common pleas court. The jurisdiction of the probate court is not invaded in the slightest degree by the conferring of this authority upon a common pleas judge, nor is the common pleas court in any manner involved in the administration by the judge so selected of the duties thus imposed.

It must be remembered, as remarked by Justice Story, that a court is not a judge nor a judge a court, and this distinction, as well as the matter of the jurisdiction of the two courts, seems to have been present in the legislative minds in the enactment of this section. It is further provided therein that the record of all cases disposed of by said common pleas judge shall be made and preserved in the proper records of the probate court by the deputy clerk thereof. This provision clearly divorces all business transacted by the common pleas judge, in the discharge of the duties of the probate judge, from any connection whatever with the business of the common pleas court.

A brief examination of another section of the General Code, whereby jurisdiction is expressly conferred upon the common pleas court as distinguished from the common pleas judge, will, I think, demonstrate this distinction more clearly.

By the provisions of section 1589, G. C., when a probate judge is interested in any proceedings in the probate court, jurisdiction is conferred upon the common pleas court to hear and determine such matters, but in this section it is further provided that all original papers in such cases so transferred shall be certified to the common pleas court. This requirement is important because it transfers completely from the probate court to the common pleas court all such cases and proceedings coming within the provisions of said section, and they thereafter become a part of the records of the common pleas court.

In the succeeding section it is provided that upon final decision and settlement, an authenticated transcript of the orders, judgments and proceedings of the common pleas court shall be filed and recorded in the probate court.

When these provisions are compared with the requirements of section 1592, and considered in connection with the constitutional question that might be involved were jurisdiction conferred upon the common pleas court instead of the judge of the court of common pleas, it would seem that the legislature intended the provisions of the latter section to be applied and administered as literally expressed.

Another section of the code, viz., 10492, also indicates the distinction here made. By the provisions of paragraph one of this section, any common pleas judge may take proof of wills and approve bonds to be given in case of the absence or sickness of the probate judge, but the record of such act must be preserved in the probate court. Again, by the provisions of section 11194, G. C., when a probate judge in office desires to contract the marital relation, he must apply to the judge of the court of common pleas for his license. It could not be claimed for a moment that this provision conferred jurisdiction upon the court of common pleas to issue said license, and further said section provides that the record of the issuing of such license shall be made in the probate court.

Attention may be called to the provisions of section 1593, G. C., but this section is confined to lunacy matters, and jurisdiction as to them is not expressly given by constitutional provision to the probate court. Under sections 4 and 8, of article IV, of the constitution, jurisdiction as to lunacy matters may be conferred by law on the common pleas or probate court, or both.

In view of the provisions of the various sections above noted, I think it clearly appears, when the legislature conferred jurisdiction upon the judge of the common pleas court and not upon the common pleas court, it manifestly intended such jurisdiction should be exercised entirely independent of any connection with that court, and this conclusion applies to the section in question. When a judge of the common pleas court, under the provisions of said section 1592, G. C., performs any duty imposed by it upon him, he is required to authenticate the record he makes, but he does so by signing his name as common pleas judge acting as probate judge, and the record is complete.

I conclude, therefore, that section 1592, G. C., supra, confers no jurisdiction upon the common pleas court under any of the conditions therein provided for, and that it does not invade the jurisdiction of the probate court, and is not in contravention of any of the provisions of the constitution.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—APPOINTMENT OF SECRETARY—COMMISSION'S DUTY TO CONDUCT A COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION—THEN CHOOSE FROM ELIGIBLE LIST.

It is the duty of the civil service commission to prepare an eligible list from which a secretary is to be chosen; that is to be done by competitive examination; the commission is to have supervision and control of such examination.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 11, 1915.

State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 9th, 1915, requesting an opinion as follows:

> "Some two or three weeks before the old civil service law expired, I wrote you requesting an opinion as to the manner in which the new law should appoint its secretary. The new law reads:
> " 'The commission shall appoint, from an eligible list to be prepared by said commission, within thirty days after its appointment, a secretary who shall be ex-officio chief examiner, whose duty it shall be, under the direction of the commission, to keep minutes of the proceedings of the commission * * *'

"Under the interpretation the commission has given it, we decided we would advertise an examination for this position and that we would invite two other people, disinterested, to assist in conducting this examination, and that the list that would be created in this way the three highest should be certified to the commission, and they should select one of the three that they deemed best qualified for this position.

"I am enclosing you a copy of a letter from Mr. Mayo Fesler. The experience of the former board in giving this examination over to outside parties entirely resulted in the annulment of the examination, and I feel that the law requires this commission to take the responsibility of creating an eligible list, and I ask you to instruct us as to what your interpretation of the law is. I am enclosing the copy of Mr. Fesler's letter that you may be informed of his contention."

As I understand it your commission, after requesting an opinion, became convinced that the law was clear and cancelled your request. However, the question being again asked, I hasten to advise you.

The statutes which require an interpretation are sections 486-5 and 486-12, G. C., amended 106 O. L., 402 and 408, which in part provide:

"Sec. 486-5. The commission shall appoint, from an eligible list to be prepared by said commission, within thirty days after its appointment, a secretary * * *.

"Sec. 486-12. From the returns of the examinations the commission shall prepare an eligible list of the persons whose general average standing upon examinations for such grade or class is not less than the minimum fixed by the rules of the commission and who are otherwise eligible * * *."

The second of these two provisions is a general one not of itself applicable to the appointment of the secretary of the commission. However, the term "eligible list," as used in section 486-5, is so far limited by other provisions of the act, such as that quoted, as in my opinion to denote as an essential element of its meaning the holding of a competitive examination of applicants for the position. That is to say, I do not think it would be lawful for the commission to prepare an eligible list otherwise than by holding a competitive examination.

There are some fundamental legal principles to which attention should be called now at the outset of your administration which, if adhered to, will instill full confidence of the public in your administration of the office.

The duty and responsibility of administering the civil service law is placed upon your commission alone. Its guardianship is not entrusted to any outside person or persons, nor may they dictate to you how your affairs shall be conducted.

The preparation of an eligible list for secretary of the commission is your duty under the law, and the commission would have no more right to surrender its supervision of such examination than it would to ignore other plain provisions of the law and pick a personal favorite for its secretary.

While the commission, if it so desires, may with propriety invite disinterested citizens to assist in conducting the particular examination, it would be highly improper to allow any person, who had or might have any preconceived notion of who ought to be your secretary, to have the slightest thing to do with the examination.

On the other hand, warned by the fiasco of a similar examination held under the old board, you, who are charged directly by the law with the responsibility and under the sanctity of your oaths of office, may with even more propriety conduct the examination yourselves, letting the manner in which you do it and the results thereof speak for themselves.

I therefore advise you that it is your duty under the law to prepare the eligible list from which your secretary is to be chosen; that this is to be done by competitive examination; that while you may invite other disinterested citizens to participate with you, you have no right under the law to surrender all supervision or control of said examination to outside parties.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TREASURER OF STATE—EMPLOYES IN OFFICE ARE IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE OF STATE CIVIL SERVICE—PRACTICABILITY OF ASCERTAINING MERIT AND FITNESS BY COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION LEFT TO CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The employes in the office of the treasurer of state are not, as a matter of law, outside the classified service of the state civil service.

It is within the province of the civil service commission to determine whether or not it is practicable to ascertain the merit and fitness of such employes by competitive examinations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 13, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of August 25th, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The law creating classified service has been questioned by the treasurer of state, R. W. Archer (as far as it is applied to his office), who claims that it is in conflict with the letter and spirit of a law passed by the general assembly March 17th, 1915, and known as amended senate bill No. 297; and particularly that section of the said law which reads as follows:
> " 'The treasurer of state upon receipt of any such moneys shall set up an account thereof, as otherwise provided by law, and shall have authority to employ such assistants, clerical and expert help, or other employes, as he may deem necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of his office.'
> "We would be glad to have your interpretation of the question involved by the foregoing statement of facts."

I am also in receipt of a letter from the treasurer of state in which he enumerates the duties of the several employes in his office.

The term "such moneys" used in the quotation in your letter from section 1 of amended senate bill No. 297, section 24-1 of the General Code (106 O. L., 500), refers in part to moneys paid into the treasury by banks for the expenses of examination; to taxes paid by foreign insurance companies; to fees collected for the inspection of petroleum, illuminating oils, gasoline and naphtha; to charges and earnings received by the state institutions and by the Ohio board of state charities; to expenses of operating and maintaining the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices paid in by the several counties, and the expenses of inspecting and auditing public accounts and reports paid in by the several taxing districts.

Section 8 of the civil service law, as amended (106 O. L., 400), being section 486-8 of the General Code, defines the classified service as follows:

> "(b) The classified service shall comprise all persons in the employ of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, not specifically included in the unclassified service, to be designated as the the competitive class and the unskilled labor class.
> "1. The competitive class shall include all positions and employments now existing or hereafter created in the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations. Appointments shall be made to, or employment shall be given in, all positions in the competitive class that are not filled by promotion, reinstatement, transfer or reduction, as provided in this act, and the rules of the commission, by appointment from those certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of this act.
> "2. The unskilled labor class shall include ordinary unskilled laborers. Vacancies in the labor class shall be filled by appointment from lists of applicants registered by the commission. The commission shall in its rules require an applicant for registration in the labor class to furnish such evidence or take such tests as it may deem proper with respect to age, residence, physical condition, ability to labor, honesty, sobriety, industry, capacity and experience in the work or employment for which he applies. * * * *"

I am unable to agree with the contention of the treasurer of state that the provisions of the civil service law just quoted are, so far as the same are applicable to the employes in his office, in conflict with the letter and the spirit of the language quoted in your letter from section 24-1 of the General Code (106 O. L., 500).

The provisions of section 24-1, of the General Code may afford strong argument to be considered by the civil service commission in deciding whether "it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness" of certain applicants by competitive examinations, but it cannot be said that such employes are, solely by virtue of the language of said section 24-1 of the General Code, removed from the classified service.

As stated to your commission in my opinions of February 1, 1915, and of August 7, 1915, the question of whether it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants for a particular position is one to be determined in the first instance by your commission. No hard and fast rule may be laid down to govern every instance which may arise. The presumption, however, is that all positions, except those specifically exempted in the act, are within the competitive classified service unless your commission specifically finds that it is not practicable to determine the merit and fitness of the candidates for the particular position by competitive examination.

This determination of the civil service commission will be subject to review in the courts, and in this connection your attention is called to secton 486-29 of the General Code (106 O. L., 418), which reads as follows :

"TAXPAYERS' RIGHT OF ACTION. The right of any taxpayer to bring an action to restrain the payment of compensation to any person appointed to or holding any office or place of employment in violation of the provisions of this act, shall not be limited or denied by reason of the fact that said office or place of employment shall have been classified as, or determined to be classified as, not subject to competitive examination; provided, however, that any judgment or injunction granted or made in any such action shall be prospective only, and shall not affect payments already made or due to such persons by the proper disbursing officers, in accordance with the civil service rules in force at the time of such payments."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP CEMETERY—FORM OF BALLOT WHERE TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES DESIRE TO SUBMIT ESTABLISHMENT OF SAME TO ELECTORS.

In an election at which there is to be submitted to the electors of a township the proposition of establishing a township cemetery and levying a tax therefor, under sections 3445, G. C., et seq., the proposition should be placed on the ballot for township officers in the following form:

	Cemetery	YES
	Cemetery	NO

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours of September 9, 1915, as follows:

"I will greatly appreciate an opinion from you on the following at an early date:

"As the trustees of a township in this county wish to submit to the electors thereof at the election next November the question of establishing a township cemetery, as provided in section 3445 of the General Code of this state, some questions arise in connection with section 3446 of the General Code, which provides the manner of submitting the proposition and the form of the ballot.

"First—Section 3446, G. C., provides how those who favor the question are to indicate it, but fails to state how those opposed to it shall indicate their position. How is that to be done?

"Second—If the intention of the legislature was that the word 'cemetery' was to be written on the ballots by those who favored it, would not all those ballots on which that word was not written count against the proposition?

"Third—Could not this question be legally submitted by having the proposition printed on the ballots (either the regular ballot for township officers or on a separate ballot) with the words 'yes' and 'no' printed thereon, thus giving to the electors a better way to indicate their wishes in the matter."

The provision for the submission to the electors of a township of the question of levying a tax for cemetery purposes, as referred to by you, was first enacted March 14, 1853, 51 O. L., 496. That provision of said act pertinent to the question under consideration is found in section 30 of the same, and reads as follows:

'and if a majority of the voters at any such election, shall deposit ballots having written or printed thereon 'tax for burying-ground,' the trustees shall immediately notify the auditor of the county," etc.

This provision remained unchanged until the codification of 1880, when it was incorporated therein as a part of section 1465, Revised Statutes, in the following form:

"and the electors who favor the proposition shall put on their ballots for township officers the word 'cemetery;' and if a majority of all the votes given at such election is in favor of the proposition, the trustees shall procure the lands for that purpose and levy the taxes as aforesaid."

This continued to be the law governing the matter now in question until the amendment of section 1465, R. S., April 2, 1906, 98 O. L., 251. Until this amendment the law clearly defined the method of voting upon the proposition of taxation for cemetery purposes to be to write upon the ballot for township offices the word "cemetery" by all those in favor of such proposition. If such number of electors of the township so wrote "cemetery" upon the ballots for township officers as constituted a majority of all the votes given in the township at such election, the levying of a tax was thereby approved, otherwise the proposition was defeated.

This provision was again amended, however, in 98 O. L., 257, to read as follows:

"and the electors who favor the proposition shall put on their ballots for township offices the word 'cemetery' and if a majority of the votes given at such election on such proposition is in favor of the proposition, the trustees shall procure the lands for that purpose and levy taxes as aforesaid."

Thus the legislature changed substantially the basis from which to determine whether the proposition had been approved, but continued the prescribed manner of voting thereon. Theretofore, not voting at all on the proposition was in effect a vote against the proposition, or a negative vote, hence the lack of necessity for any provision for another method of expressing a disapproval of the proposition, or negative sentiment. That is to say, it was sufficient then to provide only an affirmative expression on the question.

By a change of the basis of determining the result of such an election from a majority of those voting at that election to a majority of those voting on the proposition, in the very nature of the case rendered it necessary that opportunity be given for the expression of a negative choice. This the general assembly failed to expressly do, and this provision was incorporated in the General Code by the codifying commission in the language of section 3446, as follows:

> "The electors who favor the proposition shall place on their ballots for township offices the word 'cemetery.' If a majority of the votes given at such election on such proposition is in favor thereof, the trustees shall procure the lands for that purpose and levy taxes as hereinbefore provided."

The language here is substantially the same and under the familiar rule of construction will be interpreted to mean the same as the provisions of section 1465, R. S., as amended in 98 O. L., 251, supra, and hence a continuation of the necessity for an opportunity of the electors to express a negative choice on the proposition in a manner other than by failure to vote thereon, since upon the basis here prescribed a failure of an elector to vote on the proposition is not in any sense, or in any way, a negative vote on such proposition.

It would hardly be argued that the legislature intended that the basis of determining the result of the election should be changed to the number of those voting on the proposition, thus limiting the determination of the result to a consideration of the number of those voting on the proposition only, and at the same time make it impossible for an elector to vote against such proposition. At least such an absurdity is not to be presumed.

It was, it seems, manifestly the intent of the general assembly that if a majority of those electors voting on such proposition were favorable thereto, the trustees should then be authorized to procure the necessary lands and to levy the taxes provided therefor. By reason of the amendment in 98 O. L., 251, above referred to, so clearly changing the basis of calculation, I am, under the present state of the law, unable to concur in your suggestion that not to vote at all upon the proposition is now in effect a negative vote thereon. I think, however, that a practical solution of the question under consideration is found in your third question.

The first and fundamental principle of an election is that every elector have a fair, adequate and equal opportunity to give full expression to his choice on any matter that is a proper subject of an election. I am therefore of opinion that the proposition of taxation for the purchase and maintenance of a cemetery should be placed on the ballot for township officers in the following form:

	Cemetery	YES

that the elector may express his choice by placing a cross mark in front of that statement for which he desires to vote, and that the ballots should be counted in the same manner as provided for counting ballots on other questions, and if a majority of those so voting upon this question vote in favor thereof, the same will thereby be approved.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

LONGVIEW HOSPITAL—INSANE PERSONS CAN BE TRANSFERRED TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL WHEN LONGVIEW IS PURCHASED BY STATE —SUPPLEMENT TO OPINION NO. 688, AUGUST 5, 1915—STATE HOSPITAL.

The only way that Longview hospital would be considered a "state hospital" would be by an agreement for the rental and ultimate purchase of said property made between the Ohio board of administration and the county commissioners of Hamilton county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1915.

HON. WILLIAM H. LUEDERS, Probate Judge, Cincinnati, Ohio.

MY DEAR JUDGE:—As explained to you when you were here recently, answer to your letter of August 13th was accidently overlooked. You ask me in this letter to take up the Longview asylum matter again, which was dealt with in opinion No. 688, on August 5, 1915. I see no reason to change that opinion.

You further ask me in your letter to "ascertain if there is not some other way in which Longview asylum, true only partly maintained by the state, can get the advantage of transfer of seventy or more dangerous insane persons to the Lima institution."

I respectfully call your attention to the provisions of house bill No. 532, passed April 28, 1913, and found in 103 O. L. 754, entitled "An act to provide for the lease by the state of the Longview hospital and other property in Hamilton county; for its use, maintenance and management, and the ultimate purchase thereof."

Section 1 of the act grants authority to the Ohio board of administration and the county commissioners "to contract for the rental and use, and to provide for the ultimate purchase by the state for a hospital for the insane; of the property now owned by Hamilton county and occupied and used as the Longview hospital for the insane and the county infirmary, or so much thereof as in the judgment of the board of administration may be needed, subject to the terms and conditions of this act."

Section 2 authorizes the board of administration to lease said property from the county commissioners at a rental not to exceed sixty thousand dollars per annum, until the value of such property can be ascertained.

Section 3 authorizes the submission of the question of value to arbitration, on failure of the county commissioners and the Ohio board of administration to agree, and provides that after the value is fixed at which the state may purchase, four per cent. thereof shall be the annual rental.

Section 4 makes provision for the payment of the rental and for the purchase of the property, and provides that "upon any payment on the principal sum of the value of such property the rental shall be proportionately reduced."

Section 6 of said act provides as follows:

> "Said property when rented or acquired by the state of Ohio shall be used and maintained as a hospital for the insane to be known as 'The Longview State Hospital,' and the Ohio board of administration shall have all the powers with respect thereto conferred as to the institutions named in section 1835, of the General Code, and by title 5, division 1, chapter 2 of the General Code."

Section 7 provides for a deed when the purchase price has been fully paid.

This is the only authority I can find that would in any way authorize the inmates of said hospital to be transferred to the Lima state hospital. By that I mean that only by an agreement for the rental and ultimate purchase of said property made between the Ohio board of administration and the county commissioners of Hamilton county would the said Longview hospital be considered a "state hospital."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

WHEN CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION CERTIFIES PAY ROLL UPON WHICH SALARY WARRANT IS DRAWN—PERSON ENTITLED TO SUCH WARRANT—WHEN COMMISSION FAILS TO CERTIFY, NOT ENTITLED TO WARRANT—NO ELIGIBLE LISTS, THE INCUMBENT OF POSITION MAY BE APPOINTED PROVISIONALLY—PROVISIONAL APPOINTMENTS ARE UNDER SECTION 486-14, OF CIVIL SERVICE LAW—NO "EMERGENCY" WHERE THERE IS A QUALIFIED PERSON ELIGIBLE FOR PROVISIONAL APPOINTMENT—SALARY OF OFFICE FOLLOWS OFFICE—RIGHT OF EMPLOYE TO RECOVER COMPENSATION AS SUCH DEPENDS UPON ACTUAL PERFORMANCE OF SERVICE—EMPLOYES DISCHARGED IN VIOLATION OF CIVIL SERVICE LAW CANNOT RECOVER COMPENSATION FROM STATE, EVEN THOUGH VACANT PLACES HAVE NOT BEEN FILLED MEANWHILE AND NO SALARIES PAID TO OTHER PERSONS.

The auditor of state in issuing warrants for salary and compensation of persons in the classified service of the state should be guided exclusively by the certificate of the state civil service commission attached to the pay roll on which such warrant is demanded. If such certificate is attached, the auditor of state may lawfully issue the warrant; if it is not attached, he must refuse to issue a warrant. In neither event does the duty of the auditor of state to issue a warrant depend upon the legality under the civil service law of the appointment of the person demanding its issuance, except as established by the presence or absence of such certificate.

Except in a case of emergency, the only event in which the appointing power upon the taking effect of the civil service act of 1915, might, in the absence of an eligible list appoint, to succeed a person who has theretofore been holding a position in the classified service otherwise than by virtue of having passed a competitive examination, a person other than such prior incumbent is when such other person has been nominated by the appointing authority to the civil service commission for non-competitive examination and certified by such civil service commission after such examination. But if these steps have been taken such appointment may lawfully be made, and in that event the appointing authority is not obliged to appoint the previous incumbent provisionally until the completion of the eligible list.

Under no circumstances may an employe of the state unlawfully discharged from a civil service position recover from the state the compensation attaching to the position from which he was dismissed during his separation therefrom.

The only circumstance under which the amount of compensation paid to a person unlawfully appointed to a position in the civil service of the state can be recovered from the head of the department is when such compensation was paid without the pay roll certificate of the civil service commission, as provided in section 486-21, G. C., as amended.

The liability of the auditor of state upon his official bond for having issued a warrant upon the treasury for the payment of salary of a person whose appointment is thereafter held by the courts to have been made without authority of law or violation of the civil service law is, as to civil service positions, dependent upon compliance or noncompliance with section 486-21 requiring the certification of pay rolls by the civil service commission. If the auditor of state issues his warrant on a certified pay roll he is protected; if he issues his warrant without such certification, he may be held liable at the suit of a citizen. He can in no event be made liable at the suit of the ultimately successful claimant of the position.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have given careful consideration to your letter of September 7th, wherein you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. Is a person entitled to a warrant upon the treasury, who was appointed without his name having been certified by the civil service commission to the appointing power from a list of eligibles, and who was not an incumbent in the civil service on the 30th day of August, 1915?
> "2. If the appointing power does not desire to retain as a provisional employe an incumbent originally appointed without competitive examination, and holding his place on the 30th day of August, 1915, may he appoint another whose name has not been certified by the civil service commission from an eligible list?
> "3. If there be no eligible list, may the appointing officer appoint, as a provisional employe, a person other than the incumbent on the 30th day of August, 1915?
> "4. In cases where an employe, holding a position on the 30th day of August, 1915, under a non-competitive examination, is dropped from employment, without cause, pursuant to the act of May 27, 1915, but such employe does not commence an action in his own behalf to compel his reinstatement to the position, and the court in some other proceeding holds the act of May 27, 1915, invalid, can such employe hold the state for his salary during the time of such separation from his employment, even in the event that his position has been filled by appointment of another?

"5. In cases where an employe, holding a position on the 30th day of August, 1915, under a non-competitive examination, is dropped from employment without cause, pursuant to the act of May 27, 1915, but such employe commences an action at law to compel his reinstatement to such position, and the court thereafter holds the act of May 27, 1915, invalid and orders his reinstatement, can the state be held for his salary during such time of separation from his position, even though his position has been filled by the appointment of another, and such other has been paid a salary during such period?

"6. In the event that an employe has been dropped from his position under the act of May 27, 1915, and another has been appointed to fill his place, and the salary of the position is paid to such other person on the voucher of the head of the department, and thereafter the employe so dropped from his position is reinstated to his employment by reason of the court holding the act of May 27, 1915, invalid, can the auditor of state, under section 270, G. C., or any other provision of law, recover from the said head of the department the amount of salary so paid to the other person:

"(a) In cases where the other person is appointed from a list of eligibles?

"(b) Where the other person is not appointed from a list of eligibles, in cases where such eligible list exists?

"(c) In cases where the other person is provisionally appointed and no eligible list exists?

"7. Can the auditor of state be held to be liable upon his official bond for having issued a warrant upon the treasury for the payment of the salary of a person whose appointment is thereafter held by the courts to have been made without authority of law, or in violation of the civil service laws? Does the auditor of state issue such warrants at his peril?"

Your first question cannot be categorically answered. Under some circumstances a person may be lawfully appointed to a position generally in the classified service of the state in the manner mentioned by you, an instance of which I shall give in answering your second question.

From the viewpoint of the auditor of state, therefore, it is impossible to tell, without further inquiry, as to whether a person appointed under the circumstances stated by you is lawfully appointed under the civil service rules and statutes, and even if such person has not been lawfully appointed it does not therefore follow that he is not entitled to a warrant covering his compensation for services actually rendered, as I shall hereinafter point out.

I call your attention to the positive and unmistakable provisions of section 486-21, of the General Code (106 O. L., 415). This section, which is of itself an answer to several of the questions you present, is as follows:

"Sec. 486-21. PAY ROLLS. After the taking effect of this act it shall be unlawful for the auditor of state, or for any fiscal officer of any county, city or city school district thereof, to draw, sign or issue or authorize the drawing, signing or issuing of any warrant on the treasurer or other disbursing officer of the state, or of any county, city or city school district thereof, to pay any salary or compensation to any officer, clerk, employe, or other person in the classified service unless an estimate, pay roll or account for such salary or compensation containing the name of each person to be paid, shall bear the certificate of the state civil service commission, or, in case of the service of a city, the certificate of the municipal service commission of such city, that the persons named in such estimate, pay roll or account have been appointed, promoted, reduced, suspended, or laid off or are being employed in pursuance of this act and the rules adopted thereunder.

"Any sum paid contrary to the provisions of this section may be recovered from any officer or officers making such payment in contravention of the provisions of law and of the rules made in pursuance of law; or from any officer signing or countersigning or authorizing the signing or countersigning of any warrant for the payment of the same, or from the sureties on his official bond, in an action in the courts of the state, maintained by a citizen resident therein. All moneys recovered in any action brought under the provisions of this section must, when collected, be paid into the treasury of the state or appropriate civil divisions thereof, except that the plaintiff in any action shall be entitled to recover his own taxable costs of such action."

This section, in my opinion, is the sole and absolute measure of the rights of the different officers and parties concerned in your first inquiry.

If the civil service commission has certified to the pay roll having the name of the person in question thereon, he is entitled to warrant (provided, of course, he has actually rendered the services compensation for which is intended to be afforded to him thereby). The auditor of state is protected by such certificate. It is only sums paid contrary to the provisions of this section—i. e., paid without certificate of the civil service commission—that can be recovered under favor of the last part of the section, and even such recovery can be made only from "any officer or officers making such payment * * * or from any officer signing or countersigning or authorizing the signing or countersigning of any warrant for the payment of the same, or from the sureties on his official bond;" and in no event can the recovery authorized by the latter part of the section be had from the person receiving the warrant himself.

That this is the meaning of this section and the spirit of the entire civil service act in this regard is further demonstrated by section 486-29 of the civil service law, relating to taxpayers' right of action, which provides in part that "Provided, however, that any judgment or injunction granted or made in any such action shall be prospective only, and shall not affect payments already made or due to such persons by the proper disbursing officers, in accordance with the civil service rules in force at the time of such payments."

This policy is further embodied in section 486-28, which visits a penalty for illegal appointment, not upon the appointee, but upon the officer violating the civil service rules and statutes in making such appointments. In other words, throughout the civil service law there is manifested an intention to protect the person actually rendering the service, though illegally appointed, and to punish the officer making the appointment or the disbursements; but the disbursing officers are, as already stated, protected by a certificate of the civil service commission.

For all these reasons, I answer your first question by advising that if the civil service commission certifies to the pay roll upon which the warrant in question is to be drawn, then the person in question is entitled to such warrant; but if the civil service commission does not certify thereto, he is not entitled to such warrant. Of course, if the failure of the civil service commission to certify to such pay roll is wrongful, it may be compelled by mandamus.

Your second question involves consideration of the schedule of the civil service act of 1915, designated as section 486-31. I previously advised the civil service commission in opinions, copies of which I enclose herewith, that the effect of the section as a whole terminated the right of each person holding a position in the classified service who has not passed a regular competitive examination, and who has not been in the service seven years next preceding January 1, 1915, to continue in the service of the state without positive action on the part of the appointing authority. The appointing authority must certify the name of such person to the proper civil service commission, and such name thereupon shall be placed upon the proper eligible list. If such an eligible list is in existence the name is added to the first three names thereon and certified to the appointing authority. If no such eligible list is in existence the name, nevertheless, must go on the eligible list when the same is prepared, in addition to three others; but in the meanwhile the incumbent in question may be appointed provisionally.

Your question requires me to consider specifically the meaning and application of the following sentence in section 486-31:

> "If no eligible list exists such person may be retained as a provisional employe until such time, consistent with reasonable diligence, as the commission can prepare eligible lists, when such position shall be filled as prescribed in this act * * *."

The precise question is as to whether or not the word "may," as used in this sentence, must be read "shall." In my opinion, a negative answer must be given to this question; but such an answer is by no means a complete answer to the question as you state it. Provisional appointments are regulated generally by section 486-14 of the law, which provides in part as follows:

> "Whenever there are urgent reasons for filling a vacancy in any position in the classified service and the commission is unable to certify to the appointing officer, upon requisition by the latter, a list of persons eligible for appointment after a competitive examination, the appointing officer may nominate a person to the commission for non-competitive examination, and if such nominee shall be certified by the commission as qualified after such non-competitive examination, he may be appointed provisionally to fill such vacancy until a selection and appointment can be made after competitive examination; but such provisional appointment shall continue in force only until regular appointment can be made from eligible lists prepared by the commission, and such eligible lists shall be prepared within ninety days thereafter. In case of an emergency an appointment may be made without regard to the rules of this act, but in no case to continue longer than thirty days, and in no case shall successive appointments be made. Provided, however, that interim or temporary appointments, made necessary by reason of sickness or disability of regular officers, employes or subordinates shall continue only during such period of sickness or disability, subject to rules to be provided for by the commission."

Reading this provision in connection with section 486-31 I think the following conclusions are established:

The incumbent to whom section 486-31 applies is entitled to the same benefit as a person certified for provisional appointment by the commission after non-competitive examination, as provided in section 486-14; but if some other person is chosen by the appointing authority and the civil service commission has examined such other person by non-competitive examination, and certified that such other is qualified after such non-competitive examination, then, in my opinion, the appointing authority may appoint the other person so certified. I do not think that where there is an incumbent to whom section 486-31 applies the last sentence of the first paragraph of section 486-14 can be so applied as to permit the appointing authority to make "an emergency * * appointment * * without regard to the rules of this act." There could not be said to be an "emergency" where there is a qualified person eligible for provisional appointment. Of course, if the incumbent should be discharged for cause after having been provisionally appointed, or had been properly dismissed under the old civil service law prior to the going into effect of the new act, or should resign, or be ill or die, under such and similar circumstances an emergency might exist; so that I do not mean to say that any and all emergency appointments which may have been made immediately upon the taking effect of the new act are in any sense illegal.

Therefore, to recapitulate, it is my opinion that if the appointing power does not desire to retain as a provisional employe an incumbent originally appointed without competitive examination and holding his place on August 30, 1915, the only circumstance under which such desire may be fulfilled is when some other person has been nominated by the appointing authority to the commission for non-competitive examination, has been given such non-competitive examination and has been certified by the commission to the appointing authority as qualified therefor. In that event, the person so nominated, examined and certified may be appointed by the appointing authority in preference to the former incumbent. But in no event may the appointing authority make a provisional appointment under the circumstances named by you without "regard to the rules of this act." In other words, while the word "may" in section 486-31 cannot be read "must," yet the only circumstance (other than the existence of a real emergency) under which any person other than the incumbent can be appointed provisionally when no eligible list existed at the time the act went into effect is that last above described, namely, the certification by the civil service commission of another person as qualified after a non-competitive examination.

The foregoing answer to your second question constitutes also an answer to your third question, which appears to be but a variation of your second question.

Your fourth and fifth questions may be considered and answered together, inasmuch as both of them relate to the right of an employe of the state who has been wrongfully discharged from a civil service position to recover from the state the salary pertaining to the position during the time he was ousted therefrom, in the event of the successful establishment by him of his wrongful discharge and his right to continue in the service.

This general question was very carefully considered by the supreme court of the state of New York, appellate division, in the case of Sutliffe vs. the city of New York, 117 N. Y., Supp., 813. It was held therein that the civil service law does not destroy the distinction between an officer and an employe; that the right of an officer to the salary and emoluments of his office follows and attaches to the right or title to the office itself, whereas the right of an employe to recover compensation as such depends upon the actual performance of services. In other words, the salary of an office follows the office, regardless of whether or not services are performed, but the salary of an employment depends upon the performance of services.

In case an employment is wrongfully terminated, the result is called a breach of contract. While the incumbency of a person holding a civil service position lacks some of the elements of a contractual relation between the incumbent and the public, yet the remedy for its wrongful termination is the remedy as for breach of contract, unles the position is an office. The measure of damages for the breach is prima facie, of course, the amount of the compensation which the person would have received had he remained in the public employment; but it may be shown by the public in mitigation of damages that the compensation which the person ought to have received has been paid to another who has actually performed the services, or even that the person who was wrongfully ousted from his employment has, by devoting his time to other pursuits while ousted therefrom, which he could not have followed had he remained in the public employment, earned considerable sums of money, thus reducing his actual damages. In short, the right of the ousted employe is to recover damages, and not to recover the compensation itself.

Now the two cases presented by you relate to employes of the state. Being employes, their rights against the public are measured by the rule above laid down; and their employer being the state, their rights are unenforcible without special legislative sanction, because the state cannot be sued without its consent, and even though such consent has in general terms been given by amended article I, section 16 of the constitution, yet that provision is not self-executing and no general and permanent legislation has been passed under favor thereof.

Again, there is no appropriation from which such liabilities of the state may be paid.

It is the state, and the state alone, which would have to be regarded as the defaulting party under the circumstances named by you, as when a state officer, in pursuance of law and an appropriation made therefor, makes an employment or any other contract he binds the state, and not himself personally. Personal liability of any officer is not brought in question by your questions. It is not necessary for me, therefore, to consider the same. I may say generally that if any such liability exists it could not be founded on contract, but would necessarily sound in tort.

For the foregoing reasons I advise that in no event mentioned in your fourth and fifth questions, or in any other similar event, could an employe discharged from the service of the state in violation of the civil service law recover from the state the compensation which should have been paid to him after establishing his right to continue in the employment. Even if his place had not been filled in the meantime, so that the compensation in question had not been paid to another person, the same result would follow.

For the sake of clearness I may point out that if a similar question should arise in the government of a city the result would be quite different, as the New York case which I have cited abundantly establishes; for a city may be sued in its corporate capacity.

As a final conclusion, then, in connection with your fourth and fifth questions, I beg to advise that any claims against the state which might come into existence under the circumstances imagined by you could be provided for only by legislative appropriation.

Part of the discussion responsive to your first question also applies to your sixth question. I am required by the form thereof to consider section 270, of the General Code. Said section provides in part that:

> "Sec. 270. * * * If a warrant for the payment of money from the state treasury has been illegally or improperly issued by the auditor of state, or the amount of a warrant issued by him exceeds the sum which should have been named therein, and payment of such warrant or excess has been made by the treasurer of state, the auditor shall cause the amount of such warrant or excess to be collected and returned to the state treasury without delay. Unless the account of the appropriation from which it was paid has been closed, the auditor of state shall credit the amount collected to such appropriation; but, if such account has been closed, he shall credit the amount so collected to the general revenue fund."

It will be observed that this provision covers more generally the ground covered, at least in part, by the second paragraph of section 486-21, above quoted. An analysis of the two provisions in connection with the present question is not out of place. Section 270 does not authorize, it will be observed, the collection by the auditor of state from the person drawing the voucher, as you inquire. In other words, it is merely silent in this particular. Looking to that section alone, I am unable to see that it warrants the recovery of any money, under the circumstances imagined by you in stating your sixth question, from the head of the department making the appointment. The statute does not itself make such head of the department liable therefor, and in the absence of any statute no liability exists. Such officer has not received the illegally expended sum, even assuming it to have been illegally expended. The only theory upon which, independently of any statute, there could be a recovery from a public officer on account of the payment made to a third party, where there was no direct or indirect pecuniary benefit to the public officer, would be that the public had been damaged by the illegal act, and in such event the cause of action would sound in tort and would certainly not be covered by section 270, of the General Code.

Section 486-21, as I have pointed out, applies only to the recovery of payments on pay rolls not certified to by the civil service commission. The old civil service law contains substantially the same provisions, so that if the old civil service law should be held to be in effect, the same result would follow. (See section 486-21, 103 O. L., 710.)

My advice to your, therefore, in answer to your sixth question is that under the circumstances therein named there can be no recovery from the head of the department by the auditor of state, whether the other person is appointed in any of the three ways mentioned by you or not, unless the state civil service commission has not certified to the pay roll; but if the state civil service commission has not certified to the pay roll, then there may be a recovery, agreeable to the provision of section 486-21, from the head of the department or from the auditor of state, in an action brought by any citizen for the use of the state, regardless of the circumstances surrounding the appointment of the "other person."

For the sake of accuracy I may remark that I understand that two members of the present civil service commission were members of the commission appointed by the governor under the provisions of the civil service law of 1913. Under all the circumstances, I advise that the present commission is the de jure commission under the act of 1915, if that be the law now in effect, and the de facto civil service commission under the act of 1913, if that act be now in effect. In either event the certificate of the civil service commission constitutes a protection to the auditor of state, and its presence or absence determines the question of liability under section 486-21.

I may also add in answer to your sixth question that I have considered the bearing of the act providing for the inspection and supervision of public offices, and particularly section 286, of the General Code, as amended 103 O. L., 507. It is sufficient to state in this connection that, in my opinion, nothing in this section or the sections supplementary thereto enlarges what would otherwise be the right of the auditor of state or the attorney general to collect moneys from the head of the department under the circumstances mentioned by you.

I think I have already indicated in a general way what my answer to your seventh question will be. Without repeating any of the discussion which has preceded, beg to advise, in my opinion, the auditor of state is protected in the issuance of a warrant upon the treasury of the state for the payment of the salary of a person whose appointment is thereafter held by the courts to have been made without authority of law, or in violation of the civil service rules by the certificate of the civil service commission. The auditor should pay no warrants for compensation of persons in the civil service of the state without such certificate attached to the pay roll, but where a certificate is so attached he cannot be held to answer for payment made in accordance therewith at the suit of the adverse claimant to the position, even though such adverse claimant should thereafter establish the illegality of the appointment of the "other person." This statement applies whether the position involved is an office or an employment. If it is an office, it is well settled that the disbursing officer is protected in making payments to a de facto incumbent, even though the de jure incumbent may serve notice on him not to do so. If it is an employment, then, as I have pointed out, the right to recover the compensation as such is dependent upon the actual rendition of the services, and a wrongfully ousted employe could not, therefore, recover from the disbursing officer or on his official bond.

The above remarks apply primarily to imaginary suits brought by the ultimately successful claimant of the position. Save under section 486-21, of the General Code, however, no cause of action against the auditor of state as a disbursing officer could, under any circumstances, arise in favor of the state itself or of any person other than such claimant.

I feel constrained to make two general observations in connection with the whole foregoing opinion:

In the first place, the new civil service law, and particularly section 8 thereof (section 486-8 of the General Code), materially changes the line of demarcation between the classified and the unclassified service of the state. In those cases in which the unclassified service has been thus enlarged, as compared with that service as it existed under the former law, an appointment may, of course, lawfully be made under the new act, assuming it to be in effect, without regard to eligible lists and without regard to whether or not the incumbent of the position prior to August 30, 1915, was in the classified or unclassified service or had taken a competitive or non-competitive examination, or no examination whatsoever.

In the second place, I wish to observe that I have given this opinion to you as an accommodation in appreciation of your position in the matter. However, it deals almost entirely with imaginary questions. Actual questions, should they arise, may present features not considered in this opinion, and for that reason I wish to warn you that the foregoing opinion is only entitled to that weight, even as the advice of one administrative officer to another, which should be accorded to any expression of view on purely moot questions, and should be strictly limited to the assumed facts as you have stated them.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

NORMAL SCHOOL COMMISSION TO SELECT SITE FOR SCHOOL IN EASTERN OHIO—NO APPROPRIATION FOR EXPENSES OF COMMISSION IN REGULAR APPROPRIATION BILLS—NO EMERGENCY WITHIN PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2313, G. C., 106 O. L., 182—EMERGENCY BOARD WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PAY SUCH EXPENSES.

The fact that an act providing for the rendition of gratuitous services by the members of a commission authorizes them to be reimbursed for their actual and necessary expenses, but fails to appropriate therefor, together with the failure of the general assembly to make provision for such expenses in the regular appropriation bills, does not constitute an "emergency requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law" within the meaning of section 2313, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 182; consequently, the emergency board may not set aside a part of its appropriation for the payment of such expenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 10th, just received, requests my opinion as follows:

> "At a conference held at the governor's office today, being present the normal school commission to select a site for normal school in eastern Ohio, under an act of May 27, 1915, hereto attached, and the auditor of state, it was discovered that the enabling act creating the commission did not carry any appropriation for necessary expenses of such commission. Neither do the appropriation bills carry any such appropriation.
> "Would it be lawful, under sections 2312 and 2313, G. C., for the emergency board to appropriate money to pay the necessary expenses of this commission while performing the duties enjoined upon them by statute? There is no way that the expenses of this commission can be met except by an emergency appropriation.
> "Would the contingent fund appropriated to the governor of Ohio be applicable for this purpose?"

The act providing for the appointment of a commission to establish one additional normal school and to provide for the maintenance thereof, expressly provides that: (106 O. L. 490.)

> "The members of said commission shall serve without compensation, but shall be paid their reasonable and necessary expenses while in the discharge of their official duties."

and that such members shall be appointed and commence the discharge of their duties "within thirty days after the passage of this act" (which must be understood, of course, to mean the date on which the act becomes effective).

The emergency board is now governed, inter alia, by sections 2312 and 2313 of the General Code, as amended 106 O. L. 182.

Section 2313, as amended by said act, provides as follows:

> "In case of any deficiency in any of the appropriations for the expenses of an institution, department or commission of the state for any biennial period, or in case of an emergency requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law, the trustees, managers, directors or superintendent of such institution, or the officers of such department or commission, may make application to the emergency board for authority to create obligations within the scope of the purpose for which such appropriations were made or to expend money not specifically provided for by law. Such applicant shall fully set forth to the secretary in writing the facts in connection with the case. As soon as can be done conveniently, the secretary shall arrange for a meeting of the board, and shall notify the applicant of the time and place of the meeting and request his presence. No authority to make such expenditures shall be granted with the approval of less than four members of the board, who shall sign it."

This section standing by itself amounts to nothing. Machinery necessary to its complete execution is found in sections 2313-1 and 2313-2, as enacted 103 O. L. 445, which were not in anywise amended in 1915. These sections provide as follows:

"Sec. 2313-1. The written authority provided for in section 2313 shall specify the amount in which and the purposes for which obligations may be created as therein provided. It shall be filed with the auditor of state and he shall open an account in his office in accordance therewith for the payment of any obligation authorized as provided in section 2313. The applicant receiving such authority shall issue proper vouchers to the auditor of state, as provided by section two hundred and forty-four of the General Code. Upon receipt of such vouchers the auditor, if satisfied as provided in said section that the claim presented is due and payable, shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state against any appropriation for the uses and purposes of the emergency board.

"Sec. 2313-2. The general assembly may provide at the time of making the appropriations for the expenses of the various institutions, commissions and departments of state a contingent appropriation for the uses and purposes of the emergency board. Such appropriation unless otherwise specifically provided by law shall be applied exclusively to the payment of deficiencies in other current appropriations as provided by sections 2312, 2313, 2313-1. Except as provided in said sections, no officer, board, commission or department of state shall have authority to create any deficiency, nor to incur any indebtedness on behalf of the state. The emergency board provided for in said sections may not in any biennial period authorize the expenditure of any sum or sums of money exceeding in the aggregate the amount appropriated for its uses and purposes as hereinbefore provided."

It will be noted that there is an inconsistency between section 2313 in its present form and the two supplementary sections above quoted, in that section 2313 empowers the emergency board to authorize a state department to create obligations within the scope of the purpose for which an appropriation has been made or to expend money not specifically provided for by law; whereas, section 2313-2 expressly provides that the general appropriation for the uses and purposes of the emergency board shall be applied "exclusively to the payment of deficiencies in other current appropriations."

This discrepancy is explained by noting the changes that were made in section 2313 by its amendment of 1915. As it stood prior to such amendment it empowered the emergency board merely to authorize the creation of obligations within the scope of the purpose for which an appropriation had been made when, on account of any "unforeseen emergency" happening "when the general assembly is not in session," the further creation of obligations against such appropriation would create a "deficiency" therein.

The power to authorize the incurring of further obligations was thus much more limited under the law of 1913 than it is under the present statute, for the law of 1913 made no attempt to empower the emergency board to authorize the expenditure of money "not specifically provided for by law," as does the present section.

A very nice question is thus raised as to whether or not the subsequent enactment of amended section 2313 has any effect upon the unamended section 2313-2, so as to make the appropriation for the uses and purposes of the emergency board available for the payment of expenditures "not specifically provided for by law" but allowed by the emergency board, as well as for the payment of "deficiencies in other current appropriations" when permitted by the order of the emergency board.

I entertain grave doubts as to whether the emergency board has any power to permit or authorize the disbursement of its appropriation in payment of expenditures "not specifically provided for by law" but allowed by it, not only because section 2313-2 does not in terms permit such expenditures, and because further the change in section 2313 is scarcely, in my opinion, sufficient to affect the meaning of section 2313-2 (my reason here being that an amendment by implication cannot, in my judgment, have the effect of creating a new or enlarged power); but also for the reason that there is serious doubt, in my mind as to whether the distinctly new matter in section 2313 is constitutional.

However, I observe a less fundamental ground upon which it is possible to base an answer to your question. I call attention to the fact that the emergency board may act in the class of cases now under examination only "in case of an emergency requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law * * *."

If the constitutionality of this part of sections 2313 can be sustained at all, it must be upon the basis of a rather narrow meaning of the word "emergency," for section 22 of article II of the constitution provides that

> "No money shall be drawn from the state treasury except in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law."

and while an appropriation of a sum for contingencies related to the purposes for which appropriations were made may perhaps be justified as not constituting a delegation of legislative power, it is clear that a law committing to an administrative tribunal the authority, upon its own motion and in any and all classes of cases, to appropriate money for a purpose for which the general assembly has failed to appropriate anything would be an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the word "emergency" must be strictly construed, and as between two possible meanings thereof the narrower must be chosen, and one so broad as to do probable violence to the constitutional principles referred to must be rejected.

The exact and primary meaning of the word "emergency" denotes a sudden, unexpected happening. There is at least much less apparent conflict between the statute and the constitutional principle to which I have referred, if the former be so interpreted as to be limited to cases where the general assembly when in session failed to provide the money in question because the necessity therefor could not be foreseen at the time; or, stated conversely, cases in which the necessity requiring the expenditure of money did not exist when the legislature was in session and could not have been foreseen when the legislature acted.

It is my opinion that the word "emergency" must be so interpreted, and that such an interpretation, besides being required in order to save the statute from rejection on constitutional grounds, is the obvious and primary meaning thereof.

It is my opinion, therefore, that any condition the existence of which could have been as readily seen and provided against when the legislature was in session as at the time the application was made to the emergency board, cannot constitute an "emergency" within the meaning of section 2313.

In another view of the case, the "emergency," in order to satisfy section 2313, must be one of a character apparently requiring immediate appropriation of money. For example, where authority to bind the state by the creation of contractual obligations is necessary in order to meet the conditions, an emergency under other proper circumstances might be said to exist; whereas, if the particular activity can be carried on as well without the immediate appropriation of money as with such appropriation, no emergency can be said to exist. The principle running through the entire field is that of strict construction of these statutes, and the presumption that whatever can be sufficiently provided for by direct legislation is not to be regarded as having been committed to the emergency board.

Now with respect to the precise question which you submit, it cannot be said that the legislative purpose embodied in the main act would fail if the allowance which has been requested is not made. As a matter of fact, an appropriation would not have given to the members of the commission to establish the proposed new normal school any additional substantive rights whatever. They are just as much entitled to be reimbursed for their actual and necessary expenses under the law as it now stands as they would have been had an appropriation been made for that purpose. The only difference between their present situation and the one in which they would have found themselves had the legislature made an appropriation, is that the reimbursement of their expenses must await a subsequent appropriation instead of being provided for in the remedial sense by an existing appropriation.

The members of the commission may proceed in the discharge of their duties and incur expenses. They have the right to expect that the next session of the general assembly will make an appropriation to reimburse them (and in making such appropriation such session could act by a mere majority vote, because it is not unlawful for them to incur the expenses as it would be unlawful for them to undertake to bind the state by contract. This distinction is not to be forgotten).

On the other hand, the state has the right to expect from the members of this commission, who have accepted appointment as such, that they will serve and perform their duties, regardless of the failure of the legislature to make the appropriation.

It will not, therefore, be presumed that the main law cannot be carried into effect because of the failure of the legislature to make the appropriation, and in point of fact I do not suppose that it can be seriously contended that any such result will ensue.

I am of the opinion, for all the foregoing reasons, that the emergency board may not lawfully appropriate money to pay the necessary expenses of the commission about which you inquire. I do not agree with you that there is no way that the expenses of this commission can be met except by an emergency appropriation, but point out that, as I have heretofore stated, these expenses can be provided for just as easily by the next session of the general assembly as they could have been by the last session thereof.

I am further of the opinion that the contingent appropriation for the use of the executive department cannot be applied to this purpose. Without going into detail it is sufficient to state that the commission is no part of the "executive department" as that phrase is used in the appropriation bill.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS—NOT REQUIRED THAT ONE BE A REGISTERED ELECTOR TO QUALIFY TO SIGN A REFERENDUM PETITION—MERE FAILURE OF NAME FOUND UPON A PETITION TO APPEAR UPON REGISTRATION LIST IS NOT PER SE SUCH INSUFFICIENCY AS ELECTION BOARD IS REQUIRED TO ESTABLISH IN COURT—QUALIFICATION OF SIGNERS—WHAT ELECTOR MUST PLACE UPON PETITION—RESIDENCE, STREET NUMBER, WARD, PRECINCT IN INK, EACH SIGNER FOR HIMSELF.

Boards of deputy state supervisors of elections in counties containing cities wherein general registration of voters is required by law, are not required by the provisions of section 5175-29i, G. C., 106 O. L., 295, to proceed to establish in the court of common pleas the insufficiency of signatures upon referendum petitions, which are in every other respect regular and sufficient, by reason of the fact alone that the names of such persons do not appear upon the registration lists.

Under the provision of the same section deputy state supervisors of elections are required to proceed to establish the insufficiency of all those signatures on those petitions in which the street and number are inconsistent with the ward and precinct as therein stated.

Boards of deputy state supervisors of elections are required, by the provisions of this section, to return the parts of the petition transmitted to them by the secretary of state not later than fifty days before the election. A retention of such parts of petitions, however, beyond this limit, would not of itself invalidate such petitions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1915.

HON. ROBERT P. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 13, 1915, as follows:

> "As legal adviser of the board of deputy state supervisors of election, of Franklin county, Ohio, this board has submitted to me several questions on which I desire your opinion, owing to the fact that the questions are of state wide interest and importance and that prosecuting attorneys of other counties will be asked to give opinions on the same.
> "Referring to section 5175-29i, as amended 106 O. L., 295:

"1st. Is it necessary for the board, in addition to reporting to the secretary of state the names appearing on initiative and referendum petitions which are not upon the registration lists, to proceed to establish the insufficiency of such signatures in an action before the court of common pleas by the method provided in that section?

"2d. Shall this board proceed to establish the insufficiency of signatures where the signer has filled in the correct address from which he is registered but where the ward and precinct filled in are incorrect, i. e., do not correspond to the address given; also where the signer has filled in the correct ward and precinct from which he is registered, but the address filled in does not correspond with the ward and precinct?

"3d. Must this board return the petitions to the secretary of state fifty days before election with a certification of the total number of sufficient signatures thereon, or may this board retain these petitions and withhold this certification until forty days before the election, which is the limit within which to prove the insufficiency of signatures?"

Your inquiry involves a consideration of the following constitutional and statutory provision. That part of section 1g of article II of the constitution, which reads:

"* * * Any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition may be presented in separate parts but each part shall contain a full and correct copy of the title, and text of the law, section or item thereof sought to be referred, or the proposed law or proposed amendment to the constitution. Each signer of any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition must be an elector of the state and shall place on such petition after his name the date of signing and his place of residence. A signer residing outside of a municipality shall state the township and county in which he resides. A resident of a municipality shall state in addition to the name of such municipality, the street and number, if any, of his residence and the ward and precinct in which the same is located. The names of all signers to such petitions shall be written in ink, each signer for himself. To each part of such petition shall be attached the affidavit of the person soliciting the signatures to the same, which affidavit shall contain a statement of the number of the signers of such part of such petition and shall state that each of the signatures attached to such part was made in the presence of the affiant, that to the best of his knowledge and belief each signature on such part is the genuine signature of the person whose name it purports to be, that he believes the persons who have signed it to be electors, that they so signed said petition with knowledge of the contents thereof, that each signer signed the same on the date stated opposite his name; and no other affidavit thereto shall be required. The petition and signatures upon such petitions, so verified, shall be presumed to be in all respects sufficient, unless not later than forty days before the election, it shall be otherwise proved and in such event ten additional days shall be allowed for the filing of additional signatures to such petition. * * *"

Section 5175-29i G. C., 106 O. L., 295-296:

"As soon as the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of a county receives the parts of the petitions transmitted by the secretary of state, it shall keep the same open to public inspection until the time it is required to return the same to the secretary of state.

"In any county containing a city or cities wherein a general registration of voters is required by law, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of such county shall carefully compare the names of the electors who signed the parts of the petition and who reside in such city, or cities, with the registration lists. If any names appear on the parts of the petition which are not upon the registration lists, such board shall, unless satisfied that the petitioner in question is an elector of said county and qualified to sign the petition, make a note thereof in its report to the secretary of state. It shall also scrutinize all parts of the petition, whether from a city or other political subdivision within the county, for repetition of signatures, illegal signatures and for the omission of any of the formal or other requisites set forth in the constitution. If said board shall find any signature or signatures insufficient, it shall make a note opposite such signature or signatures to that effect, and notify the person or persons who solicited such signatures, or other person or persons interested in the circulation of the part of the petition containing such signatures, of the insufficiency of the same.

"The board of deputy state supervisors of election of said county shall proceed to establish the insufficiency of such signatures in an action before the court of common pleas of such county, which must be brought within three days after the aforesaid notice is served and heard forthwith by the judge of said court, whose decision in the case shall be final. In counties having more than one judge of the court of common pleas, it shall be the duty of the presiding judge to designate the judge before whom such action shall be brought. If the signatures are adjudged sufficient they must be included with the others by the board of deputy state supervisors of election of the county; if they are found insufficient they shall not be so included.

"The petition and signatures upon the parts of the petition, properly verified, shall be presumed to be in all respects sufficient, unless not later than forty days before the election their insufficiency shall be proved, as herein provided, and in such event ten additional days shall be allowed by the secretary of state after such petition or parts of petition have been returned, for the filing of additional signatures to such petition.

"Within twenty-five days after the date when the parts of the petition were transmitted to it by the secretary of state, but not less than fifty days before the election, said board shall return the parts of the petition to the secretary of state, with a certification of the total number of sufficient signatures thereon. The number so certified shall be used by the secretary of state in determining the total number of signatures to the petition, which he shall record and announce. The signatures to the petition and parts of the petition when so certified, shall be in all respects sufficient."

It may first be observed that the manifest and sole purpose of the provisions of section 5175-29i G. C., supra, is, in the last analysis, to restrict the authority of the secretary of state in his determination of the sufficiency of the petitions referred to to a consideration only of those signatures thereon, the legality of which shall have been determined in the manner therein prescribed and to safeguard the authority of the people in initiative and referendum matters against fraud.

Referring to your first inquiry, it will be noted that section 5175-29i G. C., supra, as to cities in which there is general registration of voters, provides that:

"If any names appear on the parts of the petition which are not upon the registration lists, such board shall, unless satisfied that the petitioner in question is an elector of said county and qualified to sign the petition, make a note thereof in its report to the secretary of state."

If we consider this provision alone, it might be argued that as to this particular class of names there is conferred upon the board of deputy state supervisors of elections no further authority or duty in regard thereto than that which is therein expressly stated. It will also be noted that further along it is provided,

"The board of deputy state supervisors of elections of said county shall proceed to establish the insufficiency of such signatures," etc.

If the antecedent of "such" in this provision is all the signatures to which reference is made in the preceding paragraph, it would appear to follow that, without question, the board should proceed to establish the insufficiency of all those signatures which do not appear upon the registration list, unless from other sources of information the board is satisfied that the person whose name appears on the petition is an elector of the county and qualified to sign such petition. On the contrary, if the term "such" relates only to a part of those signatures referred to in the preceding paragraph, then it may be argued with force that the duty to proceed to establish the insufficiency of signatures relates only to those classes of names the insufficiency of which arises from causes other than from a failure to appear upon the registration lists.

An examination of the constitution and statutes, however, fails to disclose any requirement that to be legally qualified in signing an initiative, supplementary or referendum petition, one must be a registered elector. Therefore, the failure of the name of an elector who is qualified to sign a petition to appear upon a registration list, cannot be in any sense said to render the signature of such elector insufficient. While such name may, by reason of this fact, be the subject of inquiry, it is not for that alone insufficient.

While no useful purpose to be served by making note of the fact that a name does not appear upon the registration list in the report required to be made suggests itself, in view of these considerations and the constitutional provision that "the petition and signatures upon such petitions, so verified, shall be presumed to be in all respects sufficient, unless not later than forty days before the election, it shall be otherwise proved * * * ," I am of the opinion that the mere failure of a name found upon a petition to appear upon the registration list, is not of itself such an insufficiency as the board of elections is required to proceed to establish in court.

Considering your second question, it may be said that the requisites of a legal and sufficient signature to an initiative, supplementary or referendum petition are clearly set forth in the constitutional provision above quoted, in the following language:

"Each signer of any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition must be an elector of the state and shall place on such petition after his name the date of signing and his place of residence. A signer residing outside of a municipality shall state the township and county in which he resides. A resident of a municipality shall state in addition to the name of such municipality, the street and number, if any, of his residence and the ward and precinct in which the same is located. The names of all signers to such petitions shall be written in ink, each signer for himself."

In an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, under date of July 17, 1913, found at page 1356 of the reports of the attorney general for 1913, it was held that under this provision each signer was required to fill in all the above constitutional requisites to a valid signature himself and that the same might not be filled in by a second party.

The further information as to place of residence is just as essential to certainty of identity as is the name of a signer and in every case indispensable in determining the qualification of persons, whose names appear upon the petition, to sign the same.

In reference to the ward or precinct of those voters who reside in cities, it might be said that if the street and number be stated, the board of elections would thereby have knowledge of the ward and precinct. To this it may be said that this information is not intended solely for the use of the deputy state supervisor of elections, and in the adoption of this provision of the constitution, the people have chosen to place upon the signer the obligation of the responsibility of setting forth the required information correctly, and it is no part of the duty of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections to make any correction or alteration, or to undertake to harmonize any inconsistencies therein. It is not sufficient that as a matter of fact a signer lives at a certain number, street, ward and precinct of a given city, but that his signature upon a petition be sufficient and valid, each and all of these matters must there correctly appear in the prescribed form.

The authority for initiation and referendum is founded solely upon the petition and upon the face of the same must that authority correctly and regularly appear without correction or alteration by a party other than the signer.

I am therefore of the opinion that if upon a comparison it be shown that the street and number, as stated upon the petition, is inconsistent with the ward and precinct therein set forth, the board is required to proceed to establish the insufficiency of such signature.

Your third question involves a consideration and construction of the fourth and fifth paragraphs of said section taken together.

The fourth paragraph aforesaid provides that the petition and signatures shall be presumed sufficient when properly verified unless not later than forty days before the election it shall be otherwise proved.

Standing alone, this paragraph would seem to authorize proceedings to test the sufficiency of petitions to continue until within forty days before the election. That is to say that the proceedings authorized by this section might continue until said date. But paragraph five aforesaid provides that not less than fifty days before the election the parts of the petitions shall be returned to the secretary of state with a certification of the total number of sufficient signatures thereon. The number so certified shall be used by the secretary of state in determining the total number of signatures to the petition which he shall record and announce.

The duties imposed by these provisions of said section must be performed by the secretary of state prior to forty days before the election. They must be done before that time in order that it may be fully ascertained and determined that the petition is sufficient. If found insufficient from lack of names, then ten day's additional time shall be allowed by said secretary for the filing of additional signatures. Manifestly this could not be done if the various boards of deputy supervisors of elections were not required to return said parts of petitions at such a time prior to the limit (forty days) as to enable this work to be finished by the secretary of state by that time. The legislature, therefore, has fixed the time for the return of said parts of the petition at not less than fifty days before the election, thus giving the secretary of state an interim of at least ten days within which to complete the remaining work of determining the total number of signatures and recording and announcing the same, as provided in the last clause of said paragraph five.

I conclude, therefore, that each board of deputy supervisors of election is required to return the parts of the petition transmitted to it not less than fifty days before the election. The fact, however, that the deputy state supervisors of elections had held the petitions beyond the fifty-day period, would not invalidate the petitions.

I have held this opinion until today in order to get the benefit of decisions of the judges of the courts of common pleas on matters touching your inquiries. I enclose herewith a copy of the journal entry showing the ruling of Hon. Henry W. Coultrap, judge of the court of common pleas of Vinton county, Ohio. I had been promised a copy of the opinion of Judge Estep of the Cuyahoga county common pleas court by this morning, but the same did not arrive.

I have indicated above, so far as applicable to your questions, the duties of the deputy state supervisors of elections in presenting the matters to the judge of the court of common pleas. So far as deputy state supervisors of elections are concerned, the final decision as to what constitutes a sufficient signature rests with the judge of the court of common pleas and that will vary in the different jurisdictions. While Judge Coultrap has held that the writing in of the residence and date of the signature, by a person other than the signer of the petition, invalidates the signature, I am informed that Judge Estep has held directly opposite.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—DUTY UPON SUSPENDING A SCHOOL TO TRANSFER PUPILS TO ANOTHER SCHOOL—ANY SUSPENDED SCHOOL MAY BE RE-ESTABLISHED WHENEVER PUPILS QUALIFIED TO ATTEND THE SCHOOL IN SUSPENDED DISTRICT NUMBER TWELVE OR MORE —RE-ESTABLISHMENT MAY BE CARRIED OUT AT ANY TIME WHEN ENROLLMENT SHOWS REQUIRED NUMBER.

The local board of education of a school district is the "suspending authority" referred to in the latter part of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398.

Where the resolution of a county board of education was passed prior to August 26, 1915, the date when section 7730, G. C., as amended became effective, but subsequent to the date of the passage of the act of the general assembly amending said section, which resolution directs that certain schools shall be suspended and that the suspension shall be carried into effect after said amendment shall become effective, such action of the county board taken in connection with the action of the local boards suspending said schools in the manner required by said section 7730, G. C., as amended, is a substantial compliance with the requirements of said amended section and such proceedings are legal.

Under provision of section 7730, G. C., as amended, any suspended school may be re-established in the manner provided in said section whenever the number of pupils, who under the provisions of section 7681, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 489, are qualified to attend the school in the suspended district when the same is re-established and who are enrolled in another school or schools to which they have been transferred by order of the board of education, is twelve or more.

The local board of education may take the necessary steps to re-establish a suspended school as required by provision of said section 7730, G. C., as amended, at any time the school enrollment of said suspended district shows the required number of pupils.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. GROVE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cadiz, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 4th in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "I desire your opinion upon a question arising under section 7730, G. C., as amended May 27, 1915, and effective August 26, 1915.
> "I shall not take the space to quote said section in full, but only the parts necessary to state my question. Said section, in part, provides: 'When the average daily attendance of any school for the preceding year has been below ten, such school shall be suspended and the pupils transferred to another school or schools when directed to do so by the county board of education.'
> "On August 16, 1915, our county board of education passed by a unanimous vote a resolution of which the following is a copy:
> "'Resolved, That it is the will of the county board of education that the schools known as Oakdale and Beech Point in Athens township, Lower Crab Orchard in Freeport township, No. 2 in German township, Creal's in North township, and No. 7 in Shortcreek township, be suspended and that the suspension shall be carried into effect after section 7730 of the laws passed by the eighty-first general assembly shall become effective.'
> "I am informed that the county board took such action on August 16, in order that the local boards of the above-named districts might know as soon as section 7730 became effective on August 26, that the county board wished such local boards to suspend the above-named districts; and hence would know at the earliest opportunity what district schools would be directed to be suspended by the county board.

"Notice of above resolution was sent to the local boards of above schools, and said named schools were suspended by the local boards, acting in pursuance to the direction of the county board given in above resolution. Such suspensions by the local boards were made after August 26, 1915.

"Section 7730, G. C., as so amended, further provides:

" 'Provided, however, that any suspended school as herein provided, may be re-established by the suspending authority upon its own initiative, or upon a petition asking for re-establishment, signed by a majority of the suspended district, at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age.'

"Certain of said schools now contend that their districts now contain twelve or more pupils of lawful school age, hence the following questions arise:

"1. Under the conditions hereinbefore stated, which is the 'suspending authority,' as stated in 7730, the county board of education or the respective local district boards?

"2. Was the aforesaid resolution, which was adopted August 16, effective under 7730 as a direction to said respective local boards to suspend said schools after August 26, the date when said amended section went into effect?

"3. What is the proper construction of the phrase in above section, 'school enrollment * * * of lawful school age.' Does such language mean that before said schools may be re-established by the suspending authority that there shall be twelve or more pupils in said district between the compulsory school ages of eight to sixteen, or does it mean between the ages of six and twenty-one? How would such 'school enrollment' be determined by the re-establishing authority in order that they may know with certainty when said district contained twelve or more pupils in accordance with the provisions of above section?

"4. If it be shown that any of said suspended districts now contains twelve or more pupils of lawful school age, may the suspending authority immediately re-establish such school and hire a teacher for the coming year, 1915-16?"

Your first question has been answered in opinion No. 799 of this department rendered to Hon. G. O. McGonagle, prosecuting attorney of Morgan county, under date of September 7, 1915. A copy of said opinion is enclosed.

This opinion holds that the local board of education of the school district is the "suspending authority" referred to in the latter part of section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 398.

While the resolution of the county board of education, a copy of which is set forth in your letter, was passed prior to August 26, 1915, the date when section 7730, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L. became effective, I note that said resolution was adopted by said county board after the passage of the act of the general assembly amending said section and in contemplation of the probable going into effect of said amendment. Said resolution provides that the suspension shall be carried into effect after said amendment shall become effective. The action of the local boards, required by provision of said section as amended, having been taken subsequent to said date of August 26, 1915, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that the action of the county board, taken in connection with the action of the local boards, was a substantial compliance with the requirements of said amended section and that said proceedings are therefore legal.

Your third question calls for a construction of the phrase "at any time the school enrollment of the said suspended district shows twelve or more pupils of lawful school age."

Under the above provision of the statute it is the duty of the board of education of a school district upon suspending a school, to transfer the pupils to another school or schools.

Replying to your third question I am of the opinion that the above phrase means, when taken in connection with the latter provision of section 7730, G. C., as quoted by you, that any suspended school may be re-established in the manner provided in said section whenever the number of pupils, who under the provision of section 7681, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 489, are qualified to attend the school in the suspended district when the same is re-established and who are enrolled in another school or schools to which they have been transferred by order of the board of education, is twelve or more.

The right of pupils having the aforesaid qualifications to attend another school or schools under said order of transfer, is not limited to pupils between the ages of eight and fifteen years if males, and between the ages of eight and sixteen years if females, who by the provisions of section 7763, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 232, must attend either a public, private or parochial school. It follows therefore that if said board of education finds that the number of pupils within said suspended district, having the qualifications as to age and residence provided by section 7681, G. C., is twelve or more as shown by the enrollment of said pupils in the other school or schools to which they have been transferred, said board may proceed in the manner provided by section 7730, G. C., as amended to re-establish a school in said district.

Your fourth question is answered by that part of section 7730, G. C., as amended and as above quoted, which provides that a suspended school may be re-established at any time the school enrollment shows the required number of pupils.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW—OHIO UNIVERSITY—JANITORS, PLUMBERS, ENGINEERS AND FIREMEN EMPLOYED BY UNIVERSITY WITHIN PROVISIONS OF LAW—ALSO THOSE EMPLOYED IN STREET PAVING—CITY OF ATHENS.

Work done in removing building and excavating basement cellar, under contract with the Ohio University, work done by janitors, plumbers, engineers and firemen employed by Ohio University, paving of streets of the city of Athens, and other work done thereon for city all comprehended under provisions of eight-hour law since July 1, 1915.

Constitutional amendment became effective January 1, 1913, but penalty provision contained in eight-hour law only effective from July 1, 1915. Work contracted for prior to that date not affected thereby.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1915.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 9th, which is as follows:

> "I am enclosing you a communication from I. N. Coleman, one of our deputy factory inspectors. You will notice that Mr. Coleman is asking for information as to whether or not certain employments mentioned in his letter come within the provisions of the eight-hour law, which went into effect on July 1, 1915.
> "As we are somewhat in doubt on this matter, we would ask you to kindly give us an opinion as to whether or not the employments mentioned in Mr. Coleman's letter come within the provisions of the eight-hour law.
> "If you desire any further information in connection with this matter we shall be glad to furnish the same."

With your letter you enclose a communication from Mr. I. N. Coleman, one of your deputy factory inspectors, which letter is as follows:

> "Replying to your letter of the first inst. regarding the working of men over eight hours on public works, will say that upon inquiry that Charles P. Kircher & Co., contractors, of West Union street, Athens, Ohio, have a contract with the Ohio university, of Athens, Ohio, to remove a residence building from a lot owned by the Ohio university and excavate a basement cellar and haul the dirt which is excavated from this cellar upon the campus grounds of the university; this work is now being done and the men and teams employed by Charles P. Kircher & Co. work nine hours per day.
> "The employes of the Ohio university who are employed as janitors, plumbers, engineers and firemen work from nine to twelve hours per day.
>
> "The city of Athens under the directions of O. F. Rowland, mayor, are working men on streets and other improvements of the city nine hours per day.
> "Charles Mariner, 101 Mill street, Athens, Ohio, has a contract for street paving for the city of Athens, Ohio, and he is working his men and teams nine hours per day."

Replying to your request, I have to advise that it is my opinion that the employments referred to in the letter of Mr. Coleman are embraced within the provisions of the eight-hour law which went into effect on July 1, 1915. It is unnecessary to go into detail with reference to the special features involved in these particular cases, as they are all covered in opinion 814 rendered by this office under date of September 10, 1915, addressed to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, Columbus, Ohio, which opinion will govern in the questions propounded by you, and for your information I am enclosing a copy of the opinion referred to.

It is to be observed that while section 37 of article II of the constitution of the state of Ohio is self-executing and became effective on January 1, 1913, yet the penalty provision of the eight-hour law only became effective on July 1, 1915, and could not be applied to any contracts entered into in violation of the constitutional amendment prior to July 1, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE AND DEED FOR REAL ESTATE SITUATED IN COVENTRY TOWNSHIP, SUMMIT COUNTY—LAND LYING BETWEEN HIGH WATER MARK OF RESERVOIR AND FEEDER AND CENTER OF ROAD BELONGING TO MARY RYAN.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1915.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Some time since you transmitted to me for examination an abstract of title prepared by Henry C. Wilcox & Son, abstractors, of Akron, Ohio, for the following described premises:

> "Situated in the township of Coventry, county of Summit and state of Ohio, and known as part of tract thirteen (13), being all the land lying between high water mark of the reservoir and feeder and the center of the road and more particularly described as follows:
> "Beginning at a stake in the center of the road leading through land now or formerly owned by Jacob P. Whitelaw and land now or formerly owned by William Winkelman at the east end of the feeder bridge (said point is about five hundred ninety (590) feet south of the north line of said tract 13, and about five thousand (5,000) feet east of the west line of tract 13); thence in center of road as traveled north fifty-seven degrees (57°) east one hundred forty and 30/100 (140.30) feet; then 0° south thirty minutes (30) west forty-two and 60/100 (42.60) feet; thence south eighteen degrees twenty-five minutes (18° 25′) west sixty-eight and 60/100 (68.60) feet; thence south seventy-four degrees forty-five minutes (74° 45′) west thirty-three and 75/100 (33.75) feet; thence north fifty-eight degrees ten minutes (58° 10′) west seventy-five and 20/100 (75.20) feet, together with any land lying between this traverse and high water mark, and containing seven thousand two hundred fifty (7,250) square feet, or one-sixth of an acre of land, as surveyed June 20, 1901, by T. D. Paul."

I have carefully examined the abstract as submitted and the affidavit made by Isaac Winkelman on September 4 ,1915, which I have attached to the abstract. From my examination of the abstract I am of the opinion that on the eleventh day of August, 1915, Mary Ryan was seized of a good and indefeasible estate in fee simple of said premises, subject only to the following:

1. Mineral rights which were reserved to the grantors in the deed of Samuel Warner, et al., to Henry Thornton, dated February 2, 1875, and recorded in deed book 95, page 118 of the deed records of Summit county, Ohio.

2. The taxes for the year 1915, the amount of which had not been ascertained at the date of the making of this abstract.

I have also examined the deed submitted by you, wherein Mary Ryan, widow of Patrick Ryan, deceased, is grantor, and the state of Ohio, through its superintendent of public works, John I. Miller, is grantee. The deed should be to the state of Ohio. It will therefore be necessary for a new deed to be executed in which the state of Ohio is named as grantee. In the present condition of the title to these premises, Mrs. Ryan will be unable to convey this property to the state of Ohio absolutely free and unincumbered unless she obtains a release of the mineral rights above referred to by a proper instrument of conveyance, and arranges for the payment of taxes.

The abstract of title and deed above referred to are herewith transmitted to you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE ARMORY BOARD—CIVIL SERVICE—DEPARTMENT IS NOT SUCH A PRINCIPAL APPOINTIVE BOARD TO BE ENTITLED TO HAVE CERTAIN EMPLOYES EXEMPT FROM CLASSIFIED SERVICE OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.

The state armory board is not "authorized by law to appoint a secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer" and, therefore, is not as a "principal appointive board" entitled to "two secretaries, assistant or clerks and one personal stenographer" in the unclassified service under paragraph 8 of section 486-8 of the civil service law of 1915 (106 O. L., 405); so that any clerks or employes of the adjutant general's department who may perform services for the state armory board may not be placed in the unclassified service.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1915.

State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of September 10th, in which you state that the department of the adjutant general has submitted to the commission the question whether or not the state armory board is a separate and distinct department and entitled, under section 486-8, paragraph 8, of the present civil service law of Ohio, to have certain of its employes exempted from the classified service of the state.

The paragraph of the civil service law which requires interpretation is as follows: (106 O. L. 405.)

"8. * * * two secretaries, assistant or clerks and one personal stenographer for * * * each of the principal appointive * * * boards * * * authorized by law to appoint such secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer."

It is evident from your letter that the commission has very carefully considered this question and has arrived at certain intermediate conclusions which, in my opinion, are correct and which, therefore, may be stated without expressing fully the reasons for reaching them. They are as follows:

"1. The state armory board is a 'principal appointive board.'

"2. Whether or not the state armory board may, so to speak, be entitled to the benefits of paragraph 8 of section 486-8 depends upon whether or not the said board is 'authorized by law to appoint such secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer.'"

As I have said, I agree perfectly with the reasons expressed in the letter of the commission in support of these two propositions, and am of the opinion that the state armory board is a department separate and distinct from the adjutant general's department in so far as the degree of such separation and distinctness might be material as affecting the application thereto of the statute under consideration. I am, however, likewise of the opinion that such separation and distinctness is not of itself sufficient to authorize any employes of the state to be placed in the unclassified service under favor of the statutory exemption above quoted, unless such employes are those which the state armory board as such separate and distinct state agency is "authorized by law to appoint."

Therefore, if the inquiry relates to secretaries, clerks and stenographers at least nominally in the department of the adjutant general, but who are engaged in performing duties pertaining to the department of the state armory board, the answer thereto would depend upon whether or not, regardless of the nature of the duties performed by them, they were appointed under authority of law by the state armory board.

As you point out in your letter, the peculiar question involved here arises by reason of the relation of the state armory board to the department of the adjutant general.

The state armory board owes its existence, its powers and duties to chapter 4 of title XV, part first of the General Code—sections 5253 to 5271, thereof, inclusive.

The powers and duties of the state armory board are provided therein, but the statutes fail by express provision at least to authorize the employment of any assistants, secretaries, clerks and stenographers by the state armory board. In fact there is no authority to appoint reposed in the state armory board at all, save that mentioned in section 5264, which directs the state armory board to appoint for each armory a board of control, consisting of officers of organizations quartered therewith.

Whatever implication may be derived from the related statutes tends at least toward the conclusion that the board has no authority to appoint or employ subordinates; for in general the functions of the board are limited to providing armories and expending, after appropriations properly made, that division of the "state military fund" which is designated as the "state armory fund." The remainder of the "state military fund," designated as the "maintenance Ohio national guard fund," is to be disbursed in all respects by the adjutant general, and the board has therefore nothing to do with. But as to the "state armory fund" it is provided by section 5768 that

"From the 'state armory fund,' the board (the state armory board) shall provide armories by leasing, purchasing or constructing as provided in this chapter."

It is further provided by section 5269:

"All bills authorized by contracts made and approved by the board, shall be paid upon vouchers of the adjutant general."

There is in these statutes at least colorable warrant for the conclusion that the clerical work incident to the conduct by the state armory board of its business is to be performed by the department of the adjutant general.

Now the word "law" as used in the provision of the civil service act now under discussion must mean obviously a permanent statute or an appropriation. There must be found in one of these two sources direct and positive authority for the appointment of a clerk, assistant, secretary or stenographer before the department in question may be said to be "authorized by law to appoint" such subordinates. The mere silence of a permanent statute, together with such implications as may arise therefrom, when coupled with the positive delegation of authority to appoint through the agency of an appropriation bill, may, in a given instance, constitute sufficient authority; but where both are silent; that is, where neither the law nor the appropriation bill by its terms authorizes the appointment or employment of such subordinates, then, in my opinion, the requirements of the civil service law in this particular are not satisfied.

We have seen what the effect of the permanent statutes standing by themselves is in this instance. Turning to the current appropriation law, I find that the appropriations for this and related purposes are made under the general heading "Ohio national guard." Under this heading there are subordinate classifications. First, there is a list of general appropriations under no specified subclassification; then there is a list of appropriations under the heading "Armory fund," one under the heading "Adjutant general," and one under the heading "State house and grounds."

The personal service salary appropriations of the first class are limited to employes connected with the state arsenal. The wage appropriations in this classification are limited to drill and camp pay; the unclassified personal service appropriations are for the purpose of inspections and examinations. Consistently with the scope of these personal service appropriations the maintenance appropriations falling in the first class, upon examination, appear to be of the class indicated by section 5267 of the General Code, which describes how that division of the "state military fund" designated as the "maintenance Ohio national guard fund" shall be expended. Inasmuch as the next subordinate heading is designated "Armory fund," I am of the opinion, and so advise, that all that precedes this heading, as it appears at page 711 and again at page 791 of 106 Ohio Laws, constitutes an appropriation of the "maintenance Ohio national guard fund." That is, the "personal service" and "maintenance" appropriations appearing first under the general heading "Armory fund" in the appropriations for each of the two years covered by the current bill, are to "pay the per diem, transportation, subsistence and incidental expenses of militia companies, inspections and incidental expenses of camp, including horse hire, fuel, lumber, forage of horses, and medical supplies," as provided in section 5267 of the General Code.

These appropriations as a matter of form, and indeed as a matter of substance when consideration of the transfer provisions of the bill is involved, should have been totaled before the subordinate heading "Armory fund" was reached. This has not been done; but the armory fund items are treated in the bill as a part of a single appropriation for "Maintenance" under the heading "Ohio national guard." However, this error in the bill, whatever may be its effect in other particulars, has no effect whatever upon the question under consideration.

Passing for the moment the items under the designation "Armory fund," we find other personal service appropriations under the heading "Adjutant general." These are for salaries of members of the office force of the adjutant general. I find also under the subordinate heading "State house and grounds" other personal service appropriations for the compensation of laborers, janitors, engineers, etc., in and about the state house and grounds.

Returning now to the subordinate heading "Armory fund," it appears that the only appropriations under this designation are for "maintenance" purposes. In point of fact there are but three items in the 1915 bill; one for the construction of an armory at Akron, one for the construction of other armories, and one for the rent of armories; and in the 1916 bill there are but two items: one for the construction of armories, and one for the rent of armories.

In my opinion, the appropriations under the general heading "Armory fund" are the only ones referable to the activities of the state armory board. This conclusion is supported not only by the fact that the phrase "Armory fund" obviously designates the "State armory fund" provided for in section 5268, G. C., which is to be expended exclusively for "leasing, purchasing or constructing" armories, but also by inspection of all the appropriations under the general heading "Ohio national guard." Certainly it will not be contended that by virtue of any of the appropriation accounts or items mentioned in either of the appropriation bills the state armory board is authorized to appoint a "secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer."

It being apparent that neither in the general statutes nor in the appropriation bills is the state armory board given authority to appoint or employ any subordinate whatever, it follows that the state armory board is not "authorized by law to appoint such secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer" within the meaning of paragraph 8 of section 486-8 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—WHEN ADDITIONAL DEPOSITS MADE BY COUNTY TREASURER IN AN INACTIVE DEPOSITORY; AND, LATER THESE ADDITIONAL DEPOSITS WITHDRAWN (CHECK ORDER OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS)—ADDITIONAL BOND GIVEN BY SURETY COMPANY MAY BE SURRENDERED.

Where additional deposits, lawfully made by the county treasurer in an inactive depositary under the direction of the county commissioners, have been withdrawn from said depositary by said treasurer and said depositary has fully accounted for the interest on said additional deposits as computed on the average daily balances, said commissioners may surrender to the surety company the additional bond given to secure said additional deposits, but before such surrender is made the county commissioners should notify the county treasurer that the surety company has been released on said undertaking and that the authority theretofore given to said county treasurer to place additional deposits in said inactive depositary is withdrawn.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of September 2d you request my opinion on the following question:

> "A bank is designated as the depositary of the county funds, and it gives surety company bond as provided by law, sufficient to cover the amount of funds at the time of the award. Later on the deposits are increased and the county commissioners require additional surety. The depositary bank gives an additional surety bond.
> "Query: When the deposits have been decreased, have the county commissioners the right to cancel the additional bond given in this instance?"

The authority of the commissioners of a county to increase the deposits in a bank which has been duly designated as an inactive depositary of county funds, under authority and in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing such designation, is found under section 2715-1 of the General Code which provides in part as follows:

> "When the aggregate amount placed with all the banks and trust companies qualifying for the same, in any county, does not equal the amount that may be placed into inactive depositaries the county commissioners shall, upon securing additional security from any or all of such inactive depositaries authorize the county treasurer to increase the deposits therein."

Under the above provision of the statute it will be observed that the county commissioners may not authorize the county treasurer to increase the deposits in an inactive depositary until sufficient additional security is given by such depositary as therein required.

Where a bank as an inactive depositary offers as security for additional deposits a surety bond in an amount fixed by the county commissioners and said bond is approved and accepted by said commissioners as sufficient additional security for such additional deposits, you inquire whether said county commissioners have the right to cancel said bond when the additional deposits for which such security was given have been withdrawn from said depositary.

Section 2724, G. C., relates to the undertaking required of a depositary under provision of section 2722, G. C., and provides:

> "Such undertaking shall be continuous and remain in full force as to any and all deposits secured by it until surrendered or cancelled by ten days' written notice to the county commissioners, the county auditor and county treasurer, each separately, given by a surety thereunder to withdraw the money of the county in such depositary."

Said section further provides that:

> "If the money of the county so deposited is paid by such depositary to the county treasurer on his demand within such ten days, or if it furnishes and substitutes new and satisfactory undertaking or securities, as provided herein, such surety shall be released from his obligation, but not before."

Section 2725, G. C., provides:

> "No surrender or cancellation shall operate to relieve any surety or liability for deposits made before such notice was given, until such deposits are secured to the satisfaction of the county commissioners by resolution spread on their journal or until such deposits are returned to the county treasury. No such surrender or cancellation shall be accepted until satisfactory undertakings in the same amount shall be substituted therefor."

The provisions of section 2724, G. C., authorize the county commissioners to release the surety under the conditions therein provided and subject to the further conditions provided in section 2725, G. C.

Section 2729, G. C., relates to the original undertaking of a bank or trust company as a depositary of county funds and provides:

> "Upon the acceptance by the commissioners of such undertaking, and upon the hypothecation of the bonds as hereinafter provided, such bank or banks or trust companies shall become the depositary or depositaries of the money of the county and remains such for three years or until the undertaking of its successor or successors is accepted by the commissioners."

I do not think, however, that the provisions of this statute apply to the additional bond given by such depositary under authority and in compliance with the requirements of section 2715-1, G. C.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that whenever the additional deposits made by the county treasurer in an inactive depositary have been withdrawn from said depositary by said treasurer, either in the ordinary course of business or upon the order of the county commissioners, and said depositary has fully accounted for the interest on said additional deposits as computed on the average daily balance, said commissioners may surrender to the surety company the additional bond given to secure said additional deposits. Before such surrender is made, however, the county commissioners should notify the county treasurer that the surety company has been released on said undertaking and that the authority theretofore given to said county treasurer to place additional deposits in said inactive depositary is withdrawn.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—BRIDGE REPAIRED UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2345, G. C.—CONTRACT AWARDED AFTER AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 125, CASS HIGHWAY LAW, BECAME EFFECTIVE—PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS SHOULD BE APPROVED BY COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—IF CONTRACT EXCEEDS $10,000 PLANS SHOULD ALSO BE APPROVED BY STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER.

The provisions of section 2345, G. C., were neither amended nor modified by any provision of amended senate bill No. 125, which became effective September 6, 1915. Where subsequent to said date of September 6, 1915, a contract for the repair and restoration of a bridge was awarded to a bidder, on the plan submitted by him under authority of section 2345, G. C., the plans and specifications for said improvement should be approved by the county highway superintendent, in compliance with the requirements of section 7187, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 614, and if the consideration for said contract exceeds $10,000, said plans and specifications should also be approved by the state highway commissioner, in compliance with the requirements of said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1915.

HON. HOMER E. JOHNSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marion, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 9, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "On June 21, 1915, the county commissioners completed the condemnation of several bridges, declared the same in need of immediate repair and restoration and ordered the surveyor to make an estimate of the costs thereof. On July 26, 1915, said estimates were filed. Commissioners approved the same and made a levy for the raising of money to pay therefor. Ordered an issue of bonds in anticipation of the levy. Bonds were sold September 7, 1915, contracts for these three bridges were let September 8th.
> "By reason of the Cass road law going into effect September 7, 1915, do the bidders still have the right on the 8th inst., to still submit plans with their bid? (As provided by section 2345, G. C.)
> "If bidders should submit such plan, which was adopted by the commissioners and contract let thereon, would said plan require the approval of the county highway superintendent under the Cass road law?"

The authority of the county commissioners to condemn the bridges in question and to declare the same in need of immediate repair and restoration, is found in section 5643, G. C., which provides:

"If an important bridge, belonging to or maintained by any county, becomes dangerous to public travel, by decay or otherwise and is condemned for public travel by the commissioners of such county, and the repairs thereof, or the building of a new bridge in place thereof, is deemed, by them, necessary for the public accommodation, the commissioners, without first submitting the question to the voters of the county, may levy a tax for either of such purposes in an amount not to exceed in any one year two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property upon the tax duplicate of said county."

Section 5644, G. C., authorizes the issue of bonds in anticipation of the taxes levied under authority of the above provision of section 5643, G. C., for the purposes therein provided. From your statement of facts it appears that contracts for the repair and restoration of three of the bridges which were condemned by the commissioners of your county, were let on September 8, 1915. Amended senate bill No. 125, known as the Cass road law, became effective on September 6, 1915, and in view of the provisions of this act you inquire whether bidders had the right on the 8th inst., in offering bids for the work contemplated in said contracts, to propose plans other than those prepared by the county surveyor, under the direction of said county commissioners, and to accompany their respective plans with the plans and specifications authorized by section 2345, G. C.

Sections 2343 to 2347, G. C., inclusive, relate to the construction of bridges by county commissioners. These sections were not repealed by section 305 of said amended senate bill No. 125, as found in 106 O. L., 664, nor have the provisions of said sections been materially modified by the provisions of said act.

Section 2344, G. C., provides:

"When it becomes necessary to erect a bridge, the county commissioners shall determine the length and width of the superstructure, whether it shall be single or double track, and advertise for proposals for performing the labor and furnishing the materials necessary to the erection thereof. In their discretion, the commissioners may cause to be prepared, plans, descriptions and specifications for such superstructure, which shall be kept on file in the auditor's office for inspection by bidders and persons interested, and invite bids or proposals in accordance therewith."

Section 2345, G. C., provides:

"They shall also invite, receive and consider proposals on any other plan at the option of bidders, and shall require that all proposals on such plan shall be accompanied with plans and specifications showing the number of spans, the length of each, the nature, quality and size of the materials to be used, the strength of the structure when completed and whether there is any patent on the proposed plan, or on any, and if any, what part thereof."

Section 2347, G. C., provides in part:

"When it is necessary to make an addition to, alteration or repairs of a bridge, the commissioners in making contracts therefor, shall conform to the provisions of this chapter in relation to the erection of bridges as nearly as the nature of the case will permit."

These provisions have not been modified by any provision of said amended senate bill No. 125, and are still in force.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that the bidders in question had the right on September 8th, in offering bids for the work contemplated by said contracts, to propose plans other than those prepared by the county surveyor, under the direction of said county commissioners, and to accompany their respective plans with plans and specifications as authorized by section 2345, G. C., and if they chose so to do, it was the duty of the county commissioners to receive and consider said plans.

A bid having been accepted and a contract awarded on a plan proposed by a bidder, which plan was accompanied with plans and specifications under authority of said section 2345, G. C., you inquire whether any provisions of said amended senate bill No. 125 requires that said plans and specifications be approved by the county highway superintendent.

Section 144, of said amended senate bill, being section 7187, G. C., relates to certain duties of the county highway superintendent, and provides in part:

> "* * * * He shall make plans, specifications and estimates for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of county and township highways, and shall prepare or approve all plans, specifications and estimates for the erection, maintenance and repair of bridges and culverts; no contract for the construction of a bridge the entire cost of which exceeds ten thousand dollars shall be binding upon the county unless the plans are first approved by the state highway commissioner. Plans and specifications must be prepared in all cases where the cost of the bridge or culvert exceeds two hundred dollars, and contracts in writing must be entered into in such cases."

In connection with this provision of the statute, I call your attention to the provision of section 303 of said amended senate bill, as found in 106 O. L., 663, which provides in part:

> "This act shall not affect or impair any contract or any act done, * * * * prior to the time when this act or any section thereof takes effect under or by virtue of any law so repealed, but the same may be asserted, completed, (or) enforced * * * * as fully and to the same extent as if such laws had not been repealed. The provisions of this act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the board of commissioners of any county * * * * prior to the time of the taking effect of this act," etc.

Inasmuch as the contract in question was made after said amended senate bill No. 125 became effective, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that the plans and specifications upon which said contract was let and which are a part of said contract, should be approved by the county highway superintendent in compliance with the requirement of section 7187, G. C., as above quoted, and if the consideration for said contract exceeds ten thousand dollars, said plans and specifications should also be approved by the state highway commissioner, as required by the above provision of section 7187, G. C.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

FOREIGN CORPORATION—AT TIME OF FILING CERTIFICATE PROVIDED BY SECTION 183, G. C., TO DO BUSINESS IN OHIO HAD NO PROPERTY IN OHIO—PAID FEE—NOW DESIRES TO INCREASE BUSINESS IN THIS STATE—FEE PAID UNDER SECTION 183 CANNOT BE DEDUCTED FROM TOTAL AMOUNT OF INCREASE UNDER SECTION 185, G. C.

Where a foreign corporation voluntarily pays a minimum fee of ten dollars ($10.00) and procures a certificate authorizing it to transact business in this state under section 183, G. C., so that no part of the original fee of $10.00 will be deducted from the fee payable by the corporation under section 185, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 17, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 13th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "A foreign corporation at the time of filing certificate to do business in Ohio had no property in Ohio, paying a fee of fifteen dollars ($15.00) under section 178, and ten dollars ($10.00) under section 183, of the General Code. It is now their desire to increase their business in Ohio, and what we would like to know is whether the ten dollars paid under section 183 should be deducted from the total amount of the increase under section 185, of the General Code."

This question is not covered by opinion No. 699, addressed to you under date of August 6, 1915, to which, however, I refer you for a general discussion of the application of section 185, of the General Code.

I assume from your letter that no question is raised either by your department or the corporation as to its liability to pay some fee under the circumstances mentioned, and that question will not, therefore, be discussed.

It seems to me that section 185 of the General Code on its face contains an answer to your question. It provides in full as follows:

> "Sec. 185. A corporation which has filed its statement and paid the fee prescribed by the preceding two sections and which thereafter shall increase the proportion of its capital stock, represented by property used and business done in this state, shall file within thirty days after such increase an additional statement with the secretary of state, and pay a fee of one-tenth of one per cent. upon the increase of its authorized capital stock represented by property owned and business transacted in this state."

As the section explicitly provides, the fee is to be computed not upon the amount of the authorized capital stock, represented by property owned and business transacted in this state as increased, but upon the increase itself. This means that whenever the "proportion" of the authorized capital stock of a company represented by its property and business in this state, as that term is interpreted in opinion No. 699 above referred to, becomes larger than it has been, an additional statement shall be filed and a fee shall be paid, based not upon the new "proportion," but upon the difference in amount between such new "proportion" and the "proportion" upon which the initial compliance fee, or the last supplementary compliance fee may have been based.

I realize, however, that this general principle is not of clear application to the facts which you state, because in the case which you present the "proportion," as that term was defined by me in the former opinion referred to, was nothing. That is to say, the corporation complied, or assumed to comply, with section 183, of the General Code, when it had no property in this state and, presumably, before it transacted any business in this state. That being the case, it cannot be said that any of its capital stock was at that time represented by property owned and used and business transacted in Ohio. Accordingly, the doing of any business in Ohio and the ownership of any property in Ohio would "increase" the proportion of its capital stock represented by property and business in Ohio and the whole "proportion" thereby produced would constitute such "increase."

The corporation, though complying with the laws of Ohio in a laudable spirit, was not liable to comply with section 183, because it did not at that time own or use a part or all of its capital or plant in this state. It is true that a foreign corporation must comply with section 183 before doing business in this state, but it is not true that the compliance must be effected before property is acquired in this state; on the contrary, the section presumes that the corporation will acquire property in this state before attempting to do any business in this state.

In this view of the case, the original compliance by the company with section 183 was purely voluntary, and payment of the ten-dollar minimum fee was gratuitous.

The section does not provide directly that fees theretofore paid shall be credited in any way upon the fee to be exacted under it.

An illustration may serve to show the possible operation of the statute: Suppose that the company, instead of owning no property and doing no business in Ohio at the time of its original compliance with section 183, had owned a small amount of property in Ohio and that its authorized capital stock was relatively small, so that one-tenth of one per cent. upon the proportion of its authorized capital stock, represented by property owned in Ohio would have been some amount less than ten dollars; then when the company subsequently increased the proportion of its authorized capital stock, represented by property owned and used and business transacted in Ohio, and became liable for a fee under section 185, it could not have insisted that the difference between the minimum fee of ten dollars and the amount produced by taking one-tenth of one per cent. upon the proportion of its authorized capital stock, represented by property owned and used and business transacted in this state, at the time of its original compliance should be deducted from the fee payable under section 185.

The illustration cited involves exactly the same principle as that which is involved in your question; but in addition the question, as you state it, shows, as I have remarked, that the payment of the ten dollars in the first instance was purely voluntary on the part of the company.

Because there is no authority to deduct the entire minimum fee from the fee payable under section 185 for any reason, and because the entire "proportion" as now to be ascertained is an "increase," the original "proportion" having been nothing, I am of the opinion that the proper way to fix the fee under the circumstances stated by you is to take the entire "proportion" as now ascertained, and as that term is defined in opinion No. 699, to which I have referred, and compute one-tenth of one per cent. thereof, without any deduction on account of the fee of ten dollars previously paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—MEMBERS HOLDING INVESTIGATIONS, INQUIRIES, OR HEARINGS PREVIOUS TO AN AUTHORIZATION BY BOARD ARE ENTITLED TO NECESSARY EXPENSES.

It is not required that, before members of the board of agriculture of Ohio may under section 1085, G. C., 106 O. L., 144, undertake or hold any investigation, inquiry or hearing, the same shall be previously authorized by the board, and the members of the board are entitled to their necessary expenses while engaged in any investigation or holding any inquiry or hearing which the board is by law authorized to undertake or hold, though the same shall not have been previously ordered or directed by the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 18, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 10, 1915, as follows:

> "Will you kindly give me your written opinion as to whether or not the investigations, inquiries and hearings provided for in section 1085, G. C. (106 O. L., 144), to be made by one or any two members of the board of agriculture of Ohio may be so made by such members without prior authorization by the said board of agriculture sitting as a board in regular meeting, and their expenses while so engaged paid under the provisions of section 1081, G. C. (106 O. L., 144)?"

Sections 1081 and 1085, G. C., 106 O. L., 144, to which you refer, provide as follows:

> "Sec. 1081. Each member of the board of agriculture of Ohio shall serve without compensation, but he shall be paid his necessary expenses while engaged in the discharge of his official duties.
> "Sec. 1085. Any investigation, inquiry or hearing, which the board of agriculture is empowered by law to hold or undertake may be held or undertaken by or before any one member of the board of agriculture or before any member or members of the board of agriculture. All investigations, inquiries, hearings, decisions and orders made by any one or any two members of the board shall when approved and confirmed by the board of agriculture be deemed to be the order of the board of agriculture. All matters of general policy shall be decided by a majority of the board."

The language of section 1085, G. C., supra, is clear, unambiguous and to the effect that any investigation, inquiry or hearing, which the board is empowered by law to hold or undertake, may be held or undertaken by or before one or more members of the board. While it is provided by section 1084, G. C., 106 O. L., 144, that six members of the board shall constitute a quorum and by reason thereof all official action by the board, as such, requires the presence of at least six members except in so far as this provision may be modified by further provisions of law.

General provisions, however, are always subject to qualification by special provisions relative to the same subject-matter, and such special provisions will be regarded when reading an entire act together as exceptions to the general provisions.

In view of this rule and the explicit terms of section 1085, G. C., supra, it seems clearly the legislative intent that no further authority for making such investigations and inquiries, or holding any such hearing as the board is by law authorized to make or hold by the members of the board shall be required. That is to say, the express language of this section alone, confers upon the members of the board authority to hold hearings and undertake investigations and inquiries as fully and completely as that authority is conferred upon the board itself.

The provision of this section, which requires the approval of the board of all investigations, hearings, inquiries, decisions and orders of members by the board before the same becomes effective, seems to indicate a contemplation on the part of the legislature that the same may be made upon the authority of the statute alone.

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that members of the board of agriculture are entitled to their necessary expenses incurred in making any investigation or inquiry or holding any hearing which the board is authorized by law to make, hold or undertake, whether the board has ordered or directed the same to be made or not.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY SCHOOL EXAMINER—WHERE AT TIME OF APPOINTMENT COMPLIED WITH REQUIREMENTS OF LAW THAT HE BE A DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT OR TEACHER BUT LATER WITHDREW FROM PUBLIC SCHOOL WORK—CANNOT SERVE AS SCHOOL EXAMINER.

A person appointed by a county board of education as county school examiner under authority of section 7811, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 102, may not continue to serve as such school examiner after having withdrawn from public school work as a district superintendent or as a teacher.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 18, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 15th requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The county board of education appointed a person as county examiner, and such person met the requirements of the law at the time of his appointment, either as district superintendent or as teacher. Can such person lawfully continue to serve on the board of school examiners after having withdrawn from the teaching profession?''

Section 7811, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., 102, provided:

''There shall be a county board of school examiners for each county, consisting of three competent persons to be appointed by the probate judge. Two of such persons must have had at least two years' experience as teachers or superintendents, and have been within five years, actual teachers in the public schools. Each person so appointed shall be a legal resident of the county for which appointed. Should he remove from the county during his term, his office thereby shall be vacated and his successor be appointed.''

This section was amended to read as follows:

''There shall be a county board of school examiners for each county, consisting of the county superintendent, one district superintendent and one other competent teacher, the latter two to be appointed by the county board of education. The teacher so appointed must have had at least two years' experience as teacher or superintendent, and be a teacher or supervisor in the public schools of the county school district or of an exempted village school district. Should he remove from the county during his term, his office thereby shall be vacated and his successor appointed.''

It was evidently the intent of the legislature in amending said section 7811, G. C., by providing that the county board of school examiners shall consist of the county superintendent, one district superintendent and one other competent teacher having the qualifications prescribed in said statute as amended, to confine the membership of said county board of school examiners to persons actively engaged in public school work.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that a person appointed by a county board of education as county school examiner under authority of section 7811, G. C., as amended, may not continue to serve as such school examiner after having withdrawn from public school work as a district superintendent or as a teacher.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN BOARD WHICH DOES NOT MAINTAIN A HIGH SCHOOL IS REQUIRED TO PAY TUITION OF PUPILS RESIDING IN THEIR DISTRICTS—RIGHT OF PUPILS HAVING QUALIFICATIONS AS TO RESIDENCE AND TRAINING NECESSARY TO ADMIT THEM TO HIGH SCHOOL—FAILURE OF DISTRICT AND COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS TO PROPERLY CERTIFY THEM FOR PROMOTION.

The right of pupils, having the qualifications as to the residence and training necessary to admit them to a high school, to have their tuition paid by the board of education of the school district in which they reside and which maintains no high school, should not be denied because of the failure of the district and county superintendents to properly certify them for promotion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 18, 1915.

HON. ELI H. SPEIDEL, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 10th, which is as follows:

"I would like to have your opinion as to the liability, if any, of the Monroe township board of education, for the tuition of three scholars who are attending the Amelia high school in Batavia township, under the following circumstances:

"In September, 1914, a family by the name of Elkins moved into Monroe township, this county, from the state of Virginia, and three of the children had received one or more years of high schooling in an accredited high school of that state. Monroe township, into which they moved, maintains no high school, and these pupils are attending the Amelia high school, located at Amelia, in Batavia township, and which is the nearest high school to the residence of these pupils.

"I wish you would advise me whether or not in your opinion these pupils are entitled to the same privileges as are other pupils of the same township, who have been promoted from the elementary to the high school by order of the district superintendent.

"I might add that none of these pupils have ever passed a Patterson examination, nor have they received a certificate of promotion from the district superintendent, who has charge of Monroe township. More briefly stated, the question is, Can a pupil coming from a foreign state, who has received one or more years of high schooling in that state, claim the same privileges of attending a high school in Ohio, as is enjoyed by such pupils as have passed a Patterson examination, or who at the last year, were promoted to a high school by order of a district and county superintendent?"

There was no requirement of the statute that the parents of children must reside in the school district a certain length of time before said children shall have the right to attend the public schools of such district under authority of and within the limitations prescribed by section 7681, G. C., as in force September, 1914, when the family mentioned in your inquiry moved into Monroe township rural school district, and said family having become residents of said rural school district at said time, the children in question had the same rights in attending a public school and were subject to the same requirements under the statutes and under the rules and regulations of the board of education as the children of any other residents of said district attending such school.

From your statement of facts it appears that Monroe township rural school district does not maintain a high school and the said children, having received one or more years of instruction in an accredited high school of West Virginia, are attending the high school in another district.

Section 7747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 125, provides:

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month. No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repair, by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district. The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

Inasmuch as said pupils are residents of Monroe township rural school district, which does not maintain a high school, it follows that if said pupils are eligible for admission to the high school mentioned in your inquiry, then their tuition should be paid by the board of education of said rural school district.

You state that said pupils have never passed a Patterson examination and have not received a certificate of promotion from the district superintendent in charge of said rural school district.

I deem it proper to call your attention to the fact that the provisions of section 7740, et seq., of the General Code, authorizing the county school examiners to hold examinations of pupils in township, special and village districts and to grant diplomas to successful applicants, were repealed by certain acts of the general assembly as passed in 104 O. L., pages 100 and 125. Said acts became effective May 20, 1914.

It follows therefore that since said date of May 20, 1914, the authority to determine the eligibility of pupils residing in rural district and village districts under district supervision is vested in the district superintendent in charge of such rural or village district, except as to those pupils who were granted diplomas under authority of section 7744, G. C., prior to said date of May 20, 1914, and who have not completed their high school work.

When the pupils in question became residents of Monroe township rural school district in September, 1914, it was the duty of the district superintendent in charge of said district to determine whether said pupils were eligible for admission to high school. From your statement of facts it seems clear that if said district superintendent had examined said pupils he would have found them amply qualified and would have certified their names to the county superintendent and the county superintendent would then have issued certificates of promotion as above provided under section 7747, G. C.

While this was not done and from a technical standpoint said pupils might be said to be ineligible to attend said high school, inasmuch as said pupils, at the time of entering said high school, had the qualifications as to residence and training necessary to admit them to said school, I do not think they should be denied the right to have their tuition paid because of the failure of the district and county superintendent to properly certify them for promotion.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that if the board of education of said rural school district was served with a written notice that said pupils could attend said high school and the date when said attendance would begin and if said board of education of said rural school district made no objection at that time, it is estopped from denying the eligibility of said pupils to attend said high school because of not having had the aforesaid certificates of promotion, and that said board of education should pay the tuition of said pupils for the year 1914-1915, said tuition to be computed in the manner provided by said section 7747, G. C., as amended. The district superintendent should at this time certify said pupils as eligible for admission to high school and the county superintendent, upon the filing of the certificate of said district superintendent, should issue certificates of promotion under authority of said section 7747, G. C., as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—MONEY DEPOSITED AS GUARANTEE MAY BE RETURNED WHEN CONDITIONS HAVE BEEN SATISFIED—BALANCE OF FUND CONTRIBUTED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND CERTAIN PROPERTY OWNERS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF A CERTAIN INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY MAY BE APPLIED ON FINAL ESTIMATE OF CONTRACT FOR SAID IMPROVEMENT.

A sum of money deposited with the state highway commissioner as a guarantee for a certain period of time against defects in material furnished and labor performed, according to the terms of a contract for the improvement of an inter-county highway, may be returned to the person, firm or corporation making such deposit when the conditions of the guarantee have been satisfied.

The balance of a fund contributed by the commissioners of Hardin county and by certain property owners in said county toward the improvement of a section of an inter-county highway located therein, may be applied on the final estimate of a contract for said improvement in conformity with the purpose for which said sum was contributed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 18, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 3d you enclose pass book of the Capital City bank in the name of J. H. Tilton, chief clerk, showing a balance of $5,165.00 on June 22, 1915.

From the additional memoranda enclosed in said letter and from information received from Mr. Tilton and from Mr. Hastings, your chief clerk, I understand this balance represents the sum of $200.00 which was deposited with Mr. Tilton, as chief clerk of the state highway department under your predecessor, Mr. J. R.

Marker, by the firm of Apper, Zellar, Dilhoff & Karsch, as a guarantee for a term of one year against defects in materials furnished and labor performed by said firm in the construction of a section of an inter-county highway according to the terms of the contract between said firm and the state highway commissioner; also the sum of $4,965.00 which is the balance of a fund of $7,770.00 contributed by the commissioners of Hardin county and by certain owners of property in said county toward the construction of a part of an inter-county highway located in said county and known as the Roundhead-McGuffey road. This road is being improved according to the terms of a contract between the state highway commissioner and Henry S. Enck, said contract having been awarded to the said Henry S. Enck on his bid of $23,787.00.

I understand that neither the commissioners of said county nor the trustees of any township in said county made application to the state highway department to have said road improved and that said contract for said improvement was made by the state highway commissioner without an agreement with said county commissioners or with the trustees of any township in said county.

The state highway commissioner in letting the contract for said improvement evidently acted under provision of section 1185, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 451, which provides in part as follows:

> "If the county commissioners have not made use of the apportionment to such county on or before the first day of May next succeeding, then the state highway commissioner shall enter upon and construct, improve, maintain or repair any of the inter-county highways or parts thereof in said county, either by contract, force account, or in such manner as the state highway commissioner may deem for the best interests of the public, paying the full cost and expense thereof from the said apportionment of the appropriation to said county so unused as aforesaid."

It appears that out of the aforesaid fund of $7,770.00 Mr. Tilton paid Mr. Enck the sum of $2,805.00, leaving the balance of $4,965.00.

In your letter of August 27th you state that Mr. Tilton has turned over to you the aforesaid balance of $5,165.00, and you ask to be advised as to the proper disposition of this fund.

I am informed by Mr. Hastings that the conditions of the guarantee of the firm of Apper, Zellar, Dilhoff & Karsch have been satisfied and that said firm now asks that said sum of $200.00 be returned to it.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that if you find that the conditions of said guarantee have in fact been satisfied said sum should be returned to said firm.

While there was no provision of the statute authorizing the commissioners of Hardin county to contribute to said improvement fund in the manner in which the same was done, or authorizing the state highway commissioner or Mr. Tilton as chief clerk of the state highway department to receive such contributions for said purpose, I am informed that said improvement is practically completed according to the plans and specifications and in a manner entirely satisfactory to that department, and inasmuch as the balance of said fund has been turned over to you, I advise that said sum of $4,965.00 be applied on the final estimate of said contract in conformity with the purpose for which said sum was contributed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MERCANTILE OR MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS CANNOT OPERATE SAVINGS BANK BY ACCEPTING DEPOSITS OF ITS EMPLOYES—CORPORATION POSSESSES ONLY SUCH POWERS AS ARE EXPRESSLY GRANTED OR SUCH AS ARE NECESSARY TO CARRY INTO EFFECT THE POWERS EXPRESSLY GRANTED.

Mercantile, manufacturing and other similar corporations are not authorized to accept deposits of employes under regular savings bank rules.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 9th, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The question as to whether or not a mercantile corporation, manufacturing or otherwise, would have the right to accept deposits of its employes, under regular savings bank's rules the same as a savings bank has been submitted to this department. We would appreciate your opinion."

The right to receive deposits of money is perhaps the most distinguishing and important function of banking, which, in Ohio, is carefully limited and regulated by legislative acts.

The rules regulating savings banks are found in sections 9762 et seq., of the General Code. It is sufficient to state, without quoting these sections, that the rules of law under which savings banks may operate in Ohio are definite and strict. They must maintain a prescribed reserve fund; they are limited, restricted and regulated in making investments and loans; they are required to issue pass books to all depositors, and they are subject to state inspection, etc., etc.

In its final analysis, therefore, your question involves the right of a mercantile, a manufacturing or other like corporation to operate a savings bank. Section 8623, of the General Code, relative to the organization of corporations, is as follows:

> "Except for carrying on professional business, a corporation may be formed for any purpose for which natural persons lawfully may associate themselves.
> "The word 'purpose' is intentionally in the singular number in this section; and a corporation cannot be formed for two or more distinct purposes in the absence of specific statutory authority, although it might be formed for each of such purposes separately. (State ex rel v. Taylor, 55 O. S., 61.)"

It is a well settled principle of law that corporations possess only such powers as are expressly granted or such as are necessary to carry into effect the powers expressly granted. The right to operate a savings bank could not by any stretch of imagination be construed as an implied power of a mercantile or manufacturing corporation.

A further obstacle or objection which, to my mind, renders it legally impossible for a mercantile, manufacturing or other similar corporation to exercise banking functions is found in section 3, of article XIII, of the constitution of Ohio, which, in part, is as follows:

> "Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable otherwise than for the unpaid stock owned by him or her; except that stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts and engagements of such corporations, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. * * *"

The stockholders of a corporation authorized to receive money on deposit are subject to a double liability under the language of the constitution quoted above; such liability is totally different from that assumed by a purchaser of stock in an ordinary mercantile or manufacturing corporation, and which such stockholder has a right to assume will not be increased by the company's officers.

I therefore advise you that a mercantile, manufacturing or other similar corporation is not authorized in Ohio to accept deposits of its employes under regular savings bank's rules the same as a savings bank.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—IN AN ACTION WHERE CITY IS PLAINTIFF, BOARD OF EDUCATION, DEFENDANT, CITY SOLICITOR REPRESENTS CITY—BOARD MAY EMPLOY COUNSEL PROVIDED CERTIFICATE IS FILED WITH CLERK OF BOARD THAT FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE.

Where the solicitor of a city represents such city in an action in which said city is plaintiff and the board of education of the city school district is one of the defendants, said solicitor cannot represent said board of education for the reason that the interest of said city is adverse to that of said board of education and said board may employ counsel to defend it in said action, provided that before adopting a resolution employing such counsel and authorizing payment for services rendered there is filed with said board by the clerk thereof a certificate of available funds as required by section 5660, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 13th you request my opinion as follows:

> "The city of Dayton, through its solicitor, has brought suit in the supreme court against the budget commission of the county, the county commissioners of Montgomery county and the board of education of the city of Dayton, claiming that the city did not get a fair division of the funds. The budget of the county commissioners was cut; likewise, the budget of the city was cut; but the budget of the board of education of Dayton was not cut.

"Query: Since the solicitor is serving the city of Dayton in a suit against the board of education of the city of Dayton, can the board of education of said city legally employ counsel for its defense in the above suit, and pay the fees necessary for the employment of such counsel?"

Section 4761, G. C., provides:

"Except in city school districts, the prosecuting attorney of the county shall be the legal adviser of all boards of education of the county in which he is serving. He shall prosecute all actions against a member or officer of a board of education for malfeasance or misfeasance in office, and he shall be the legal counsel of such boards or the officers thereof in all civil actions brought by or against them and shall conduct such actions in his official capacity. When such civil action is between two or more boards of education in the same county, the prosecuting attorney shall not be required to act for either of them. In city school districts, the city solicitor shall be the legal adviser and attorney for the board of education thereof, and shall perform the same services for such board as herein required of prosecuting attorney for other boards of education of the county."

While the latter provisions of the statute as above quoted makes the solicitor of a city the legal adviser and attorney for the board of education of the city school district, and requires him to perform the same services for said board as are required of the prosecuting attorney of the county in which such city is located, by the provisions of the statute, for other boards of education of such county, said provision of the statute cannot apply in the particular case referred to in your inquiry.

As the legal representative of the city of Dayton in the action pending in the supreme court wherein said city is plaintiff and the board of education of the school district of said city is one of the defendants, the city solicitor cannot act as the legal representative of said board of education, and the question arises whether said board may employ counsel to defend it in said case and pay for the services rendered.

It will not be necessary in answering this question to pass on the question as to whether or not the solicitor of the city of Dayton, which city has adopted the city manager plan of government, under authority of sections 7 and 8, of article XVIII, of the constitution, would be required ordinarily to act as the legal adviser and attorney for the board of education of said city.

While section 2918, G. C., as found in the chapter relating to the prosecuting attorney of the county, provides in part:

"Nothing in the preceding two sections (relating to certain powers and duties of the prosecuting attorney and making him the legal adviser of county and township officers with the exception therein mentioned), shall prevent a school board from employing counsel to represent it, but counsel when so employed, shall be paid by such school board from the school fund.''

I am of the opinion that said provision of the statute, being general in its nature, relates to those boards of education which would ordinarily be represented by the prosecuting attorney under authority of section 4761, G. C., and that said provision is not applicable to the board of education of a city school district, which under provision of the latter part of said section 4761 is ordinarily represented by the city solicitor.

If, therefore, the board of education of the city of Dayton has authority to employ counsel to represent it in the case referred to in your inquiry, it must be implied from the power expressly given to said board by statute when taken in connection with the facts in the particular case.

Under provision of section 4749, G. C., the board of education of each school district, when properly organized, is a body politic and corporate, and as such, capable of suing and being sued.

In the case of Caldwell v. Marvin et al., 8 O. N. P. (n. s) 387, the court in its opinion said:

''It is claimed in this case that no valid contract could have been made by any board of education for services of attorneys in a quo warranto proceeding. The city solicitor, under section 3977 (section 4761, G. C.) was the legally constituted attorney or legal counsel of the board, and until he refused or failed to act, no additional legal counsel could be employed. When, however, he elected to act for the de facto board, and not for the board de jure, other counsel was necessary. The ordinary and necessary method of conducting a legal proceeding is with the assistance of legal counsel. If the right of a board of education to exercise some single power was challenged in a quo warranto proceeding there would be no question of the implied right to employ counsel in the absence of legally constituted counsel, or upon the failure or refusal of such counsel to act. Why should the rule be different where the right to exercise any power whatever is questioned and proper to be established? The public is interested in having its legally elected officers perform their duties, even though less interested than in having such duties performed.''

It was further held by the court in the case of Caldwell v. Marvin et al., supra, that where no certificate of the clerk, that the funds requisite for the payment of a claim for services rendered were in the treasury and unappropriated, was filed prior to the adoption of the resolution authorizing payment as required by section 2834b, of the Revised Statutes (section 5660, G. C.), the resolution is without effect and an injunction will lie against such payment.

The opinion of the court in this case is directly in point and is warrant for the proposition that where the solicitor of a city acts as legal adviser for such city in a case in which the interest of said city is adverse to the interest of the board of education of the city school district, said board of education has the right to be represented by legal counsel and to pay such counsel from any funds in the school treasury available for that purpose.

Replying to your question, I am of the opinion that inasmuch as the solicitor of the city of Dayton is representing said city in the action in the supreme court, and cannot therefore represent the board of education of the city school district for the reason that the interest of said city is adverse to that of said board of education, said board of education may employ counsel to defend it in said action; provided, however, that before adopting a resolution employing such counsel and authorizing payment for services rendered, there is filed with said board by the clerk thereof a certificate of available funds as required by section 5660, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE FOR COAL LANDS SITUATED IN MORGAN COUNTY TO W. R. McKEE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted for my approval a certain lease drawn under the provisions of section 3209-1, of the General Code (105 O. L., 6) for coal lands situated in Morgan county, Ohio, being a part of section 29 and containing fifty (50) acres, the said instrument leasing said premises to one W. R. McKee.

I have carefully examined the same, and while I find that in some of its provisions the lease is very liberal, yet from the facts presented to this department relative to the same I do not see any objections thereto and, therefore, hereby approve the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION DIRECTING BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION TO ASSUME MANAGEMENT OF LIMA STATE HOSPITAL, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me a proclamation in the following form:

"PROCLAMATION.

"By virtue of the authority vested in me, under the provisions of section 1991, of the General Code of Ohio, and deeming it for the best interests in the management of the affairs of The Lima State Hospital and the state of Ohio, I, Frank B. Willis, governor of the state of Ohio, do hereby direct that the Ohio board of administration assume the management of the said The Lima State Hospital commencing on the first day of October, A. D. 1915, and that the board of commissioners for the erection of The Lima State Hospital heretofore appointed under the provisions of section 1986, of the General Code of Ohio, shall have no further legal existence from and after the above date.

"IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the state of Ohio to be affixed at Columbus this twentieth day of September, A. D. 1915.

"_____

"Governor of Ohio."

I approve of the above form, and suggest that the original thereof be transmitted to the Ohio board of administration, and a copy to each of the members of the outgoing board of commissioners for the erection of The Lima State Hospital.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY SURVEYOR PLACED IN CHARGE OF STATE ROADS—STATE'S SHARE OF HIS SALARY PAID TO COUNTY TREASURER—COUNTY PAYS HIS ENTIRE SALARY.

Where the county surveyor has been placed in charge of state roads by the state highway commissioner the state's share of his salary should be paid to the treasurer of the county which pays the whole salary in the first instance to reimburse said county for the state's portion of said salary so paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 8, 1915, bearing the following inquiry:

"Where the county highway superintendent has been placed in charge of state road work by the state highway department, in what manner shall the state highway department make payments to such county highway superintendents?"

By the provisions of section 138, of amended senate bill No. 125, 106 O. L., 612, section 7181, G. C., the salary of the county surveyor is payable out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of county officials are paid. This requires that said salary of said surveyor in the first instance shall be payable wholly out of the county treasury.

Under the provisions of section 139 of said bill, section 7182, G. C., when the county surveyor under designation by the state highway commissioner has charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under the control of the state within his county, one-fifth of his salary aforesaid shall be paid by the state upon vouchers issued therefor by the state highway commissioner upon the auditor of state against the state highway fund. Said section further provides that upon presentation of such voucher the auditor shall issue his warrant upon the state treasurer.

However, it is well to observe in this connection that the state highway fund from which said salary is to be paid is particularly designated in paragraph 1 of section 214 of said bill, section 1221, G. C. This paragraph provides in substance that seventy-five per cent. of all money paid into the treasury by reason of the levy for the state highway improvement fund shall be used for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the inter-county highways and for the maintenance of the state highway department including the state's portion of the salaries of the county highway superintendents. The salary, therefore, is payable out of the particular fund above specified.

As previously noted the whole salary of the surveyor being primarily payable out of the county treasury, and by the terms of said section 138 aforesaid required to be so paid, the voucher issued by the state highway commissioner for the state's proportionate part of said salary must be issued to reimburse each county to the extent said county has paid the state's share of said salary. Therefore the vouchers issued by the state highway commissioner, as provided by said section 139, supra, should be made payable to the treasurer of each county which is to be so reimbursed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

A MUTUAL PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION MAY NOT INSURE PRIVATE GARAGES, AUTOMOBILES OR MOTOR TRUCKS—ASSOCIATION LIMITED TO INSURE AGAINST LOSS OR DAMAGE TO PLACE NAMED IN POLICY WHICH MUST BE IN OHIO.

A mutual protective association organized under section 9593, G. C., may not insure private garages, automobiles or motor trucks.

Such an association may not insure against loss or damage occurring otherwise than at a location to be named in the policy which must be in the state of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 17, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return to you herewith, without my approval, the certificate of amendment of the articles of incorporation of the National Mutual Automobile Insurance Association, together with check of E. J. Brookhart and uncancelled ten cent revenue stamp attached thereto.

You have not furnished me with a copy of the original articles showing the nature of the change made by the amendment, but I cannot approve the same because the purpose clause of the articles of incorporation, which is amended, does not in its amended form conform to the statute, which in this case is section 9593 of the General Code. That section provides in part as follows:

> "Any number of persons of lawful age, not less than ten in number, residents of this state, or an adjoining state and owning insurable property in this state, may associate themselves together for the purpose of insuring each other against loss by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes or wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas, on property in this state, and also assess upon and collect from each other such sums of money, from time to time, as are necessary to pay losses which occur by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes, wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas to any member of such association. * * * Such associations may only insure farm buildings, detached dwellings, school houses, churches, township buildings, grange buildings, farm implements, farm products, live stock, household goods, furniture and other property not classed as extra hazardous and such property may be located within or without the limits of any municipality; provided that an association whose membership is restricted to persons engaged in any particular trade or occupation and its insurance confined in any particular kind or description of property may insure property classed as extra hazardous and located in any county or counties in this state; * * *"

The amended articles of incorporation attempt to authorize the association to insure its members "on automobiles and motor trucks and private garages owned by them in the state of Ohio." This authorization, in my opinion, is not warranted by the second of the two sentences above quoted from section 9593. The words "other property not classed as extra hazardous," as therein used, upon the most familiar principles of statutory interpretation, must be limited in meaning to such "other property not classed as extra hazardous" as may be of the general kind, class or character indicated by the enumeration of specific kinds of property which precedes. Private garages are not of the class of buildings indicated by the enumeration of "farm buildings, detached dwellings, school houses, churches, township buildings and grange buildings." Automobiles and motor trucks are not of the same general character as "farm implements, farm products, live stock, household goods and furniture."

These considerations are aside from what appeals to me as a rather clear prohibition against the insurance by such associations of the kinds of property which the amended articles attempt to authorize the association to insure, which is embodied in the words "not classed as extra hazardous."

It seems to me that it may be said as a matter of law that automobiles, motor trucks and garages are "classed as extra hazardous" as insurance risks, it being a matter of common knowledge that all of them are peculiarly liable to damage or destruction by fire or explosion.

It may be that the question whether a given risk should be classed as extra hazardous is one for the department of insurance, but it seems to me that the secretary of state is not authorized to issue articles of incorporation authorizing an association to transact business which it is morally certain will not be licensed by the superintendent of insurance.

I find that my predecessor reached a contrary conclusion with respect to the right of such associations to insure automobiles. For the reasons above stated, however, I am obliged to disagree with him in this particular.

There is another reason which of itself would prevent me from approving the amended articles of incorporation. As so amended, they seek to authorize the association to insure against loss or damage occurring "anywhere." In my opinion, the phrase "on property in this state," as used in the first sentence of section 9593, together with the specific provision of the second sentence above quoted therefrom respecting the location of the property which may be insured, establishes the conclusion that mutual protective associations can insure property against loss or damage occurring in specific places only, and that such places must be in this state.

For both of the above reasons, I am unable, as above stated, to approve the amended articles of incorporation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—SALARY OF COUNTY SURVEYOR AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 7181, G. C., DOES NOT COVER SERVICES RENDERED IN MAKING TAX MAPS—PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1916, COUNTY SURVEYOR MAKES TAX MAPS—AFTER THAT DATE, COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY APPOINT—SALARY PROVIDED IN SECTION 7181, G. C., DOES NOT COVER SERVICES TO INDIVIDUALS OR FOR DITCH IMPROVEMENT WHERE ASSESSMENT IS AGAINST PROPERTY OWNERS—SURVEYOR'S SALARY PAID IN WHOLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY—STATUTE LIMITS HIS EMPLOYMENT—SECTION 2788, G. C., NOT REPEALED.

Annual salary provided by section 138 of the Cass highway bill, G. C., 7181, does not cover services rendered by county surveyor in making tax maps under provision of sections 5551 and 5552, G. C.

Prior to January 1, 1916, when the amendment to section 5589, G. C., will become effective, county commissioners have no power to appoint other than county surveyor to make tax maps. After January 1, 1916, county commissioners may appoint surveyor or let contract.

Salary provided for in section 138 of the Cass highway bill, G. C., 7181, does not cover services to private individuals under sections 2807 to 2814, G. C., nor does said salary cover the services of county surveyor in the location and construction of ditches where the cost of such ditches, including the engineering expense thereon, is assessed against and paid by the owners of land specially benefited.

Entire salary under said section is payable in the first instance out of the county treasury. Where county surveyor is designated by the state highway commissioner, the county is to be reimbursed to the extent of one-fifth of such salary.

County surveyor may accept no public or private employment except that provided for by statute.

Section 2788, G. C., is not repealed and commissioners should take this fact into consideration when appointing assistants, etc., under section 7181, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1915.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication in which you call my attention to sections 138 and 139 of amended senate bill No. 125, known as the Cass highway code, passed by the general assembly May 27, 1915, approved June 2, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, and which as provided in section 304 thereof went into effect September 6, 1915, and then inquire as follows:

"1. Does the annual salary provided by sections 138 of the act above referred to cover services rendered by the county surveyor in the making of tax maps under the provisions of sections 5551 and 5552, General Code?

"1a. In view of the provisions of section 138 of the act to the effect that the county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office, may the county commissioners still appoint the county surveyor as tax map draftsman? If not, may they employ some other competent person?

"2. Does such annual salary cover services rendered by the county surveyor to private individuals under the provisions of sections 2807 to 2814, inclusive, of the General Code?

"3. Does such annual salary cover services rendered by the county surveyor in the location and construction of ditches where the cost of such ditches, including the engineering expenses thereon, is assessed against and paid by the owners of land specially benefited? If so, is any portion of his salary to be assessed against the benefited property and how and in what amount?

"4. If, under the provisions of section 139 of the act above referred to, the state highway commissioner designates the county highway superintendent to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within the county under control of the state, is the entire salary of the county highway superintendent to be paid in the first instance by the county, which is in turn to be reimbursed by the state to the extent of one-fifth of such salary or is the proportion of the salary of the county highway superintendent which is payable by the state, to wit: one-fifth, to be paid by the state directly to that official?

"5. May the county surveyor under the provision of this act accept any other private or public employment?

"6. Will the county surveyor under the provisions of this act still have authority to fix the number of his assistants, deputies, etc., as provided in section 2788, General Code, and fix their salaries within the aggregate yearly allowance made by the county commissioners?"

Sections 138 and 139 of amended senate bill No. 125, being the sections to which you refer, and which have been designated as section 7181 and 7182 of the General Code, are as follows:

"Section 138. The county surveyor shall be the county highway superintendent. The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office and shall receive an annual salary to be computed as follows: One dollar per mile, for each full mile of the first one thousand miles of the public roads of the county, and in addition thereto forty dollars for each full one thousand of the first fifteen thousand of the population of the county as shown by the federal census next preceding his election, thirty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the second fifteen thousand of the population of the county; twenty-five dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the third fifteen thousand of the population of the county; fifteen dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fourth fifteen thousand of the population of the county and five dollars per thousand for each full thousand of the population of the county in excess of sixty thousand. Such salaries shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid; provided, however, that no county highway superintendent shall receive in the aggregate a salary of more than four thousand dollars per annum. The salary above provided for, shall cover all services rendered by the county highway superintendent to the state, county and townships. In the event the county highway superintendent cannot properly perform all the duties of his office, the county commissioners shall fix the aggregate compensation to be expended for assistants by the county highway superintendent during the year. Such compensation shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salary of county officials is paid. In addition, thereto, the county highway superintendent and his assistants, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury, their actual, necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging. Such assistants may be discharged for cause at any time by the county highway superintendent.

"Section 139. The state highway commissioner may designate the county highway superintendent to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within the county under control of the state. If the state highway commissioner does not designate such county surveyor to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state within such county, a sum equal to one-fifth of the salary of said county surveyor shall be deducted therefrom as herein provided. When the county surveyor has charge of the highways, bridges and culverts of his county under the control of the state, one-fifth of his salary, as designated in the provisions of this act, shall be paid by the state upon vouchers issued therefor by the state highway commissioner upon the auditor of state against the state highway fund. On the presentation of such voucher the auditor shall issue his warrant therefor upon the state treasurer."

The material parts of section 138, above quoted, as bearing upon the salary question are: "The county surveyor shall be the county highway superintendent. The county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office and shall receive an annual salary to be computed as follows: Such salaries shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid; provided, however, that no county highway superintendent shall receive in the aggregate a salary of more than four thousand dollars per annum. The salary above provided for, shall cover all services rendered by the county highway superintendent to the state, county and townships."

It is observed, first, that the salary provided is the salary of the county surveyor, not as highway superintendent but as county surveyor. That by virtue of his office as county surveyor, the county surveyor is highway superintendent. That "the salary above provided for," that is the salary of the county surveyor, shall cover also all services rendered by him as the county highway superintendent to the state, county and townships. In other words, instead of this language showing an intent to pay the salary "above provided for" to the county surveyor for his services as county highway superintendent, I think it clearly means that the county highway superintendent shall draw no salary or fees as such but that the salary above provided for the county surveyor shall cover his services, not only as county surveyor but as highway superintendent. Not only is there no salary provided for the county highway superintendent, but there is an express provision that the salary of county surveyor shall cover all services in his ex-officio office of county highway superintendent and no public authority will have the power to grant him additional compensation for his duties as county highway superintendent.

If the state highway superintendent does not, under section 139 above quoted, designate the county surveyor as county highway superintendent to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under the control of the state within the county, "a sum equal to one-fifth of the salary of said county surveyor shall be deducted." On the other hand "when the county surveyor has charge of the highways, bridges and culverts of his county under the control of the state, one-fifth of his salary as designated in the provisions of this act shall be paid by the state."

The Cass highway law covers all of the duties of county highway superintendent. On the other hand, while it covers many of the duties of the county surveyor it by no means covers all of them.

It is my opinion that not only may the county surveyor as highway superintendent draw no other fees, salary or compensation than the salary provided for the county surveyor under section 138, above quoted, but that for the duties positively and unconditionally imposed upon the county surveyor by law he may not draw any other fees, salary or compensation from the public treasury, i. e., from public funds.

Coming to your questions 1 and 1a, which will be considered together, it will be necessary to examine sections 5549, 5550, 5551 and 5552, the Warnes law and the Parrett-Whittemore law in connection with the above quoted statutes.

The maps provided for in sections 5549 and 5550 were for the use of the assessors in making the quadrennial assessment. This scheme of assessment was repealed by the Warnes law, and sections 5549 and 5550 were repealed by implication when section 41 of the Warnes law (section 5620, G. C., 103 O. L., 797) was enacted and the duty of providing such maps was cast upon the district assessor.

This section of the Warnes law (section 41, G. C., 5620) will be in effect until January 1, 1916, when all of the provisions of the Parrett-Whittemore law (106 O. L., 786) will become effective.

The same maps which might have been made under sections 5549 and 5550 also could have been made under sections 5551 and 5552; that is to say, that while sections 5549 to 5552 were all in effect, the county commissioners may have pursued either course as to the making of the maps, though only under 5551 and 5552 where they also wanted the maps kept up-to-date. The maps to be made under sections 5551 and 5552 were "a complete set of tax maps for the county." Such maps were for the use of the board of equalization and the auditor. The Warnes law abolished the board of equalization. Section 93 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, G. C., 5589, 106 O. L., 270, provides:

> "The county commissioners shall furnish for the county board of revision in each county, and its experts, clerks and employes, suitable office rooms at the county seat and shall furnish the county auditor for his own office and for the county board of revision, all maps, plats, stationery, blank forms, books, supplies, furniture and other equipment necessary for the proper discharge of its duties and for the preservation and safe keeping of its books, records and files. Provided, however, that the maps, plats, stationery, blank forms and other supplies and equipment used by the county auditor shall, so far as practicable, be used also by the county board of revision."

This section will become operative January 1, 1916, and will supersede all other authority for the making of future tax maps. Sections 5551 and 5552 have never been expressly repealed, but their operative effect will be limited to the tax maps referred to in said section 93, G. C., 5589, after January 1, 1916.

When this last mentioned section becomes operative the county commissioners will have the option of either appointing the county surveyor to make the maps or of contracting with outside parties, but not of doing both. That is to say, that as the law now stands the county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor to make, correct and keep up to date a complete set of tax maps for the county. The county commissioners may not now have this work done by any one save the county surveyor and his assistants. After January 1, 1916, the county commissioners may have the tax maps made by either the county surveyor and his assistants or by outside parties, but not by both. In other words, one set of maps is required but two sets are not authorized.

Section 5551, G. C., provides:

> "The board of county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor, who shall employ such number of assistants as are necessary, not exceeding four, to provide for making, correcting, and keeping up to date a complete set of tax maps of the county. Such maps shall show all original lots and parcels of land, and all divisions, subdivisions and allotments thereof, with the name of the owner of each original lot or parcel and of each division, subdivision or lot, all new divisions, subdivisions or allotments made in the county, all transfers of property showing the lot or parcel of land transferred, the name of the grantee, and the date of the transfer, so that such maps shall furnish the auditor, for entering on the tax duplicate, a correct and proper description of each lot or parcel of land offered for transfer. Such maps shall be for the use of the board of equalization and the auditor, and be kept in the office of the county auditor."

Section 5552, G. C., provides:

> "The board of county commissioners shall fix the salary of the draughtsman at not to exceed two thousand dollars per year. They shall likewise fix the number of assistants not to exceed four, and fix the salary of such assistants at not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per year. The salaries of the draughtsman and assistants shall be paid out of the county treasury in the manner as the salary of other county officers are paid."

Section 5551 does not impose a positive duty upon the county surveyor. It authorizes the county commissioners under certain conditions to impose a duty on the incumbent of the surveyor's office. In other words, the making, correcting and keeping up to date of tax maps is not necessarily, but may by action of the county commissioners be made one of the duties of the county surveyor. If this action is taken by the county commissioners, then it is their duty to provide a compensation for this additional work, and I am of the opinion that the county surveyor may receive it in addition to the salary provided for in section 138 of the Cass law above quoted.

I am impelled to this conclusion not only from a consideration of the Cass law and the deliberate leaving unrepealed of sections 5551 and 5552, but as well from considerations of public economy. The tax maps must be made. The commissioners may not compel the surveyor to make them without providing a compensation therefor. If the county surveyor does not make the maps, then the commissioners must contract with outside parties for the work, in all probability at a greater cost and without the benefit of having the tax maps kept up to date.

I am therefore of the opinion that the county surveyor may receive the compensation provided for under section 5552, G. C., when such county surveyor has been appointed under 5551, G. C.

Your second and third questions must be answered in the negative. Sections 2807 to 2814 inclusive, of the General Code, provide that land owners may call upon the county surveyor to make surveys of their lands, plant corner stones or posts, conduct proceedings to establish corners and take depositions therein, and record plats and certificates of the surveys made by him. These are clearly duties of the office of county surveyor. It is further provided that the fees of county surveyors for such services shall be paid by the person or persons applying therefor, and there is no provision of law requiring these fees to be covered into the treasury. If, therefore, a county surveyor is called upon to render services under sections 2807 to 2814, G. C., such surveyor will be entitled to charge and collect therefor the fees provided by law, and such fees will be in addition to the annual salary provided by section 138 of the act now under consideration.

Any connection that exists between the location and construction of ditches, other than such ditches as it may be necessary to construct along the sides of highways for the sole purpose of affording drainage for the same, on the one hand, and the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of bridges and highways on the other hand, is only incidental and not such as to warrant the conclusion that the duties of the county surveyor in connection with the location and construction of ditches have any substantial relation to or connection with his duties as county highway superintendent in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of bridges and highways. Moreover, as suggested by you, the cost of ditches, including the engineering expense thereon, is ordinarily assessed against and paid by the owners of lands specially benefited, so that the services of the county surveyor in this particular are not in the last analysis rendered to the state, or to a county or township, but are rendered for the benefit of and are eventually paid for by the owners of the lands specially benefited. I therefore conclude that the annual salary provided by section 138 of amended senate bill No. 125 will not cover services rendered by the county surveyor in the location and construction of ditches under sections 6442 et seq. of the General Code. The compensation of the county surveyor for such services will be in addition to the compensation provided by section 138 of said act, and such compensation will be governed by the statutes now in force and relating thereto.

Coming to your fourth inquiry: It is provided by section 138 as follows: "Such salaries shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid." Coming to consider section 139, it is provided as follows: "If the state highway commissioner does not designate such county surveyor to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state within such county, a sum equal to one-fifth of the salary of said county surveyor shall be deducted therefrom as herein provided. When the county surveyor has charge of the highways, bridges and culverts of his county under the control of the state, one-fifth of his salary, as designated in the provisions of this act, shall be paid by the state upon vouchers issued therefor by the state highway commissioner upon the auditor of state against the state highway fund. On the presentation of such voucher, the auditor shall issue his warrant therefor upon the state treasurer." Looking only to the provisions of section 138, the only conclusion to be reached is that the entire salary of the county surveyor is to be paid in the first instance from the county treasury even where the county surveyor is designated by the state highway commissioner to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state. Looking only to the provisions of section 139, it would seem equally clear that where the county surveyor is designated by the state highway commissioner to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state, one-fifth of his salary is to be paid directly to that official by the state. A construction is to be adopted which will, if possible, harmonize and give some force and effect to the apparently conflicting provisions of the two sections. This can only be done by reaching the conclusion that where the county surveyor is designated to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state within such county, his entire salary is to be paid in the first instance out of the county treasury, and that the payment of one-fifth of such salary by the state is to be made to the county by way of reimbursement. That this conclusion will give full expression to the legislative intent is manifest from the language of section 139 to the effect that if the state highway commissioner does not designate the county surveyor to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state within such county, a sum equal to one-fifth of the salary of said county surveyor shall be deducted therefrom. If it had not been intended that the entire salary of the county highway superintendent should be paid in the first instance from the county treasury, there would have been no reason for the use of the word "deducted." Having in mind the elementary principle that in the construction of a statute an effort should be made to harmonize its different parts and give some effect to all the language used, and taking into consideration all the pertinent provisions of sections 138 and 139, it is my opinion that where the county surveyor is designated by the state highway commissioner to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts of his county under the control of the state, his entire salary is to be paid in the first instance out of the county treasury in accordance with the provisions of section 138, and that the one-fifth part of his salary to be paid by the state is to be paid to the county by way of reimbursement.

Your fifth question is answered by the provision of section 138 of the act, to the effect that the county surveyor shall give his entire time and attention to the duties of his office. Under amended senate bill No. 125, the county surveyor will therefore be prohibited from accepting any employment, either public or private, not provided for by statute.

In answering your sixth question, it must first be observed that section 2788, G. C., is not expressly repealed or amended by amended senate bill No. 125. Any repeal or amendment of said section must, therefore, be by implication. Section 2788, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The county surveyor shall appoint such assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes as he deems necessary for the proper performance of the duties of his office, and fix their compensation, but compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount fixed therefor by the county commissioners. After being so fixed, such compensation shall be paid to such persons in monthly installments from the general fund of the county upon the warrant of the county auditor."

It will be noted that this section applies in terms only to the county surveyor, while the corresponding provisions of section 138 of the act now under consideration apply in terms only to the county surveyor in his capacity as county highway superintendent. Repeals by implication are never favored and it is my opinion that after amended senate bill No. 125 goes into effect, section 2788, G. C., will remain in full force and effect in so far as it concerns the assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks and other employes necessary to enable the county surveyor to properly perform the duties of his office, other than those duties devolving upon him as county highway superintendent.

As to the assistants needed by the county surveyor, acting as county highway superintendent, and necessary to enable him to properly perform his duties as such highway superintendent, the controlling law will be section 138 of amended senate bill No. 125. While it may not be essential in practice to preserve for all purposes the distinction between the assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks and other employes necessary to enable the county surveyor to properly perform such of his duties as are not connected with his work as county highway superintendent, on the one hand, and the assistants necessary to enable him to properly perform his duties as county highway superintendent, on the other hand, and while it may be even convenient and proper to disregard the distinction for certain purposes, yet such a distinction clearly exists. As to both classes of assistants, the aggregate amount that may be expended annually for their compensation is to be fixed by the county commissioners and in fixing these amounts regard should be had by the commissioners to the fact that stripped of all forms there is but one office to be supplied with assistants and it was not the purpose of the law to multiply employments, and that both sections of the statute taken together do not authorize the appointment of more persons than are actually necessary to discharge the functions of the office, whether they be those of county surveyor strictly or of county highway superintendent. As to the first class of assistants referred to above, it is provided that the county surveyor shall appoint them and fix their compensation, but as to the assistants provided for by section 138 of the act now under consideration and necessary to enable the county highway superintendent to properly perform the duties of his office, there is no express provision as to what official shall have the power of appointing them and fixing their compensation. The section in question refers however to the county highway superintendent as making the expenditure for assistants and he is expressly given the authority to discharge such assistants for cause. It is therefore my conclusion that the county surveyor, acting as county highway superintendent, will have the authority to fix the number of his assistants authorized by section 138 of the act under consideration, appoint the same, and fix their compensation within the aggregate compensation fixed by the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY SURVEYOR DOES NOT HAVE CHARGE OF HIGHWAYS, BRIDGES AND CULVERTS UNDER CONTROL OF STATE UNTIL DESIGNATED BY STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—APPOINTMENT OF ENGINEER OTHER THAN COUNTY SURVEYOR—PATROL MAINTENANCE ON STATE ROADS—INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAYS AND MAIN MARKET ROADS—TEN PER CENT. OF COST TO BE ASSESSED AGAINST ABUTTING LAND.

1. The county surveyor does not have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state and within his county until designated by the state highway commissioner to so have charge.

2. The highway commissioner may not appoint any engineer other than the county surveyor, to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under the control of the state and within the county of said surveyor, except as provided in section 142 of the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 613, section 7185, G. C. and when an engineer other than the county surveyor is designated by the state highway commissioner, under the provisions of said foregoing section, his salary and compensation is fixed and determined by said state highway commissioner.

3. The state highway commissioner may establish a system of patrol maintenance on state roads and the county highway superintendent, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, may establish such system on county roads when the county commissioners approve the same and provide the necessary funds therefor.

4. In all cases of improvements of inter-county highways or main market roads by the state highway commissioner, ten per cent. of the cost of said improvement is to be assessed against the land abutting thereon, provided said assessment does not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the value of said property for the purposes of taxation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 16, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "As the highway department will soon be operating under amended senate bill No. 125 known as the Cass law, I will be pleased to have you answer the following questions:
> "1. Does the county surveyor become the county highway superintendent as representing the state department on the first Monday in September, automatically?
> "2. Is he state representative until such time as the state highway department appoints some one else, and if so, does he take over all state work at that time?
> "3. Can the state highway commissioner appoint any engineer other than the county surveyor as resident engineer except as provided under section 142?
> "4. If the state highway department appoints some other engineer as resident engineer representing the state, what salary does this engineer receive?
> "5. Does the state highway commissioner have power to establish a system of patrol maintenance on state roads?

"6. Can the county highway superintendent under the direction of the state highway department establish a system of patrol maintenance on the county roads?

"7. Does the abutting property in all instances of improvement under the supervision of the state highway department pay ten per cent. of such improvement?

"An early response to the above questions will be appreciated and place me in position to answer the many communications that are now reaching this department."

Your first three questions may properly be construed together.

Section 139, of the Cass highway law, section 7182, G. C., provides that the state highway commissioner may designate the county highway superintendent to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within the county, under control of the state. It is further provided in this section that if the state highway commissioner does not designate such county surveyor to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts under control of the state within such county, a sum equal to one-fifth of the salary of said county surveyor shall be deducted therefrom and that when the county surveyor has charge of said highways, bridges and culverts, one-fifth of his salary shall be paid by the state.

Section 142, of the act, section 7185, G. C., provides that if in the opinion of the state highway commissioner the county surveyor of any county is not qualified or neglects to perform his duties as county highway superintendent, the state highway commissioner shall file a written statement with the commissioners of such county, stating that in his judgment such surveyor is not qualified to perform the duties of county highway superintendent or has neglected to perform his duties as such, or neglects to carry out the instruction of the state highway commissioner, and that the state highway commissioner may, after filing such statement, designate an engineer other than the county surveyor, to have charge of state roads within the county.

A study of the above provisions indicates that affirmative action on the part of the state highway commissioner is necessary in order to place any person in charge of the state highways, bridges and culverts within a county, and your first question may, therefore, be answered in the negative. The county surveyor, under the Cass highway law, will under all circumstances and conditions be the county highway superintendent, but he will not, in your language, represent the state highway department or, in other words, will not have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts within his county under control of the state, until designated to have charge of such highways, bridges and culverts by the state highway commissioner.

The above statement is, I think, a complete answer to your first and second questions.

Your third question is to be answered in the negative. It is apparent from an examination of section 142, of the act, section 7185, G. C., that it furnishes the exclusive method by which any person, other than the county surveyor, may be designated to have charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the roads within his county under control of the state. It must first be the opinion of the state highway commissioner that the county surveyor is not qualified or neglects to perform his duties as county highway superintendent, and the state highway commissioner must file with the commissioners of the proper county a written statement to the effect that in his judgment the county surveyor is not qualified to perform the duties of county highway superintendent, or has neglected to perform his duties as such, or neglects to carry out the instruction of the state highway commissioner. When such a statement has been filed with the county commissioners, the state highway commissioner may designate an engineer, other than the county surveyor, to have charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the roads within such county, under the control of the state. The language of this section can leave no doubt that before the state highway commissioner can appoint any engineer, other than the county surveyor, to have charge of the state highway work within his county, he must file with the county commissioners the statement provided by section 142, of the act, section 7185, G. C.

Your fourth inquiry is as to what salary shall be paid an engineer, other than the county surveyor designated under the provisions of section 142, of said act, section 7185, G. C., to have charge of state highway work within a county. This section merely provides for the selection and designation of an engineer under the conditions specified therein, and that he shall be paid out of any funds available for the construction, maintenance and repair of state highways. No compensation or salary is fixed by said section, and the matter of his compensation is therefore left entirely to the judgment of the state highway commissioner by whom it must be fixed and determined.

Your fifth inquiry is as to the right of the state highway commissioner to establish a system of patrol maintenance on state roads.

By the provisions of paragraph (a), of section 241, of said act, section 7464, G. C., it is made the duty of the state highway department to maintain all state roads, and under the provisions of section 217, of said act, section 1224, G. C., it is made the express duty of the state highway commissioner to maintain and repair to the required standard all inter-county highways, main market roads and bridges and culverts, constructed by the state by the aid of state money or taken over by the state after being constructed.

Patrol maintenance of a road, as I understand the term, involves the employment of persons to patrol regularly said roads and make such small repairs as will serve to keep said roads in good condition and thereby postpone the necessity for larger and more extensive repair.

If there were no other provisions of this act reflecting upon the question here involved, it would seem that the requirements imposed by the sections just cited would justify sufficiently this method of maintaining and keeping in repair all state roads. In other words, as one of the methods whereby a road is maintained and kept in repair, the state highway commissioner would be authorized to adopt the patrol system. However, there are other provisions of this act which relate more closely, in my judgment, to this question. The current appropriation measure, being house bill No. 701, makes specific appropriation to repair, maintain, protect, police and patrol public highways, as provided in section 6309, G. C. (See 106 O. L., pages 695 and 776.)

Section 6309, G. C., aforesaid, provides that the revenues derived from automobile registration fees shall be paid weekly into the state treasury and that any surplus after deducting the expenses of carrying out and enforcing the provisions of the chapter of the General Code, relating to automobile registration, shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of the public roads and highways of the state under the supervision and control of the state highway department. It will be observed that the language of this section has been adopted in said appropriation bill.

However, in paragraph 3, section 214, of said act, section 1221, G. C., it is provided that "the funds derived from the registration of automobiles shall be equally divided and one-half shall be applied and used, as provided in this section, in the maintenance and repair of the inter-county highways, and one-half to the maintenance and repair of the main market roads of the state. From the part of the funds appropriated for use on the main market roads the state commissioner is empowered to establish a system of maintenance to be organized in such manner as the state highway commissioner may provide.'' It will thus be seen that the legislature has specifically provided herein for the disposition of the funds derived from registration of automobiles, and that said funds shall be applied and used, as provided in this section, in the maintenance and repair of inter-county and main market roads.

Without discussing all the provisions of said section 214, it is sufficient to say that there are no provisions in said section which preclude or prevent the use of said funds as provided in said paragraph 3 aforesaid, viz., in the maintenance and repair of the inter-county and main market roads. Did the legislature intend, therefore, by the provisions of said paragraph 3 to in any manner limit the use of said funds, as provided in said appropriation bill, or did the legislature intend to include in the terms ''maintenance and repairs,'' as used in said paragraph 3, the method or manner of maintaining said highways by the patrol system. I am of the opinion that the latter view must obtain, and that such methods are included in said terms ''maintenance and repair,'' and as before noted, are specifically provided for in said appropriation bill.

Further, it appears from the last clause of said paragraph 3, that from the part of said funds appropriated for use on main market roads, the state commissioner is empowered to establish a system of maintenance to be organized in such manner as the state highway commissioner may provide.

This provision clearly empowers the establishment of the patrol system as to main market roads. It is therefore my opinion that the state highway commissioner has the power to establish a system of patrol maintenance, as that term is herein defined, upon the state roads within the limits of the appropriations hereinbefore noted.

Your sixth question is as to the right of the county highway superintendents, under the direction of the state highway department, to establish a system of patrol maintenance on the county roads of their respective counties. By the provisions of section 214, of the Cass highway law, section 1221, G. C., and section 241, of said law, section 7464, G. C., the activities of the state highway department in maintenance and repair work is limited to state roads. It therefore follows that any system of patrol maintenance on the county roads of a county would have to be carried forward by means of county funds.

Section 154, of the act, section 7197, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, shall provide for the maintenance and repair of the roads of the county under such system as may be deemed expedient, so that each section of the highways of the county shall be under proper supervision and be effectively and economically improved, maintained and repaired.

Section 155, of the act, being section 7198, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties. Where county road work is done by contract, the contract is, under the terms of section 124, of the act, section 6945, G. C., let by the county commissioners, and from the provisions of section 155, referred to above, it is apparent that work by force account can be carried on by the county highway superintendent only with the approval of the county commissioners. It is true also that all levies for county highway purposes and all appropriations for such purposes must be made by the county commissioners, so that your sixth question cannot be answered generally either in the affirmative or the negative. If the county commissioners approve the necessary steps and provide the necessary funds, county highway superintendents are authorized to establish, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, a system of patrol maintenance on county roads. If the county commissioners fail to approve the necessary steps, or provide the requisite funds, the county highway superintendent will be without authority to take such action.

Your last inquiry is as to whether abutting property in all instances of improvement, under the supervision of the state highway department, must be assessed ten per cent. of the cost of such improvement. This inquiry is answered in part by the provision of section 210, of the act, section 1217, G. C., to the effect that in no case shall the property owners abutting upon an improvement, be relieved by the state, county or township from the payment of ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, with the further proviso that the total amount assessed against any abutting property must not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the tax valuation of such property. It would seem from a study of the context that the provision referred to above is applicable to inter-county highway improvements and not to main market road improvements, but that the same rule is intended to apply to main market road improvements is clearly indicated by the provision of section 184, of the act, section 1191, G. C., to the effect that when a part of an inter-county highway system or main market road system of the state is improved by the state, by contract or force account, without the co-operation with a county or some township thereof, ten per cent. of the cost of said construction or improvement shall be assessed against the land abutting thereon, according to the benefits, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such property for the purposes of taxation.

I therefore conclude, in answer to your inquiry, that in all cases of improvements of inter-county highways or main market roads made by the state highway commissioner, either in co-operation with a county or township, or without such co-operation, ten per cent. of the cost of the improvement is to be assessed against the land abutting thereon, according to benefits, with the limitation that said assessment shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such property for the purposes of taxation.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

REPORT OF COUNTY AUDITOR—WHEN PUBLICATION TO BE MADE IN ONLY ONE NEWSPAPER.

If there are not one newspaper of the political party casting the largest vote in the state at the last general election and one of the second largest published and of general circulation in a county, the county auditor's report under section 2508, G. C., may be published in any newspaper published and of general circulation in the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

HON. DON C. PORTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of September 10th, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon the following:

"I would appreciate very much your opinion as to the proper construction of the following extract from G. C., section 2508, as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 488:

"'* * Said auditor shall cause an exact copy of said report to be immediately published one time in one newspaper of the political party casting the largest vote in the state at the last general election, and in one newspaper of the political party casting the second largest vote in the state at the last general election, published in the county and of general circulation in said county; if there are two such papers published; if not, then a publication in one newspaper only is required. * *'

"There are only two newspapers published in Coshocton county; the one claiming to be an independent paper, while the other claims to be a democratic paper. I have advised our county auditor that by virtue of the italicized part of the foregoing extract of G. C., 2508, that the report in question may be published in either the independent paper or the democratic paper. Is my opinion correct or not? If incorrect, kindly inform me as to how the report would be published in case both of our newspapers were independent?"

In my opinion your construction is correct.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—INTERPRETATION OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW—SIXTEEN QUESTIONS ON AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 125 FOUND IN 106 O. L., 574, ANSWERED.

This opinion relates to an interpretation of the CASS HIGHWAY LAW, 106 O. L., 574.

1. There is no provision for either purchasing or furnishing means of transportation for county commissioners.

2. An automobile used as a conveyance by county road officials may not be purchased as equipment.

3. Primarily, a township highway superintendent has control of the township roads within his district and in addition thereto is required to report to the county superintendent in relation to all highways within the district and to perform such duties as may be prescribed by the rules and regulations of the county highway superintendent so far as said rules and regulations do not conflict with those of the township trustees.

Under section 3375, G. C., the township highway superintendent has certain duties regarding the graveled and unimproved public roads of his district irrespective of whether they are township, state or county roads.

4. State roads include such part or parts of inter-county highways and main market roads as have been or may hereafter be constructed by the state, or which have been or may hereafter be taken over by the state, as provided in the Cass highway law, and such roads shall be maintained by the state highway department.

5. County roads shall include all roads which have been or may be improved by the county, by placing brick, stone, gravel or other road building material thereon, or heretofore built by the state and not a part of the inter-county or main market system of roads, together with such roads as have been or may be constructed by the township trustees, to conform to the standards for county roads, as fixed by the county commissioners, and all such roads shall be maintained by the county commissioners.

6. Township roads shall include all public highways of the state other than state or county roads, as hereinbefore defined, and the trustees of each township shall maintain all such roads within their respective townships.

7. The county highway superintendent is required generally to approve all expenditures made from county or township funds for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of township and county roads and bridges, whether done by contract or force account, with the exception of claims for dragging, which are to be allowed upon the approval of the township highway superintendent.

8. The mileage of public roads referred to in section 138 of the act, G. C., 7181, includes such streets of villages as form a part of a state, county or township road.

9. Where a county improves a road through the township and into or through a village, the part of the road in the village becomes a county road, but the duty of maintenance is cast upon the municipal authorities.

10. It is the duty of the county auditor to determine the mileage of public roads upon which the county surveyor's salary is to be based.

11. The county surveyor draws the salary provided for in section 138, (G. C., 7181), as county surveyor and not as county highway superintendent.

12. The power of removal of township highway superintendents is concurrent in the county highway superintendent and township trustees.

13. The levies provided by sections 105, 238 and 239 are outside of the ten mill limitation but within the fifteen mill limitation of the Smith law.

14. The county surveyor is required to give two bonds, one as county surveyor and one as highway superintendent.

15. County commissioners, neither by force account or otherwise, may repair highways without the supervision of the county highway superintendent.

16. Under section 214, (G. C., 1221) and house bill No. 701 (appropriation bill) the state's portion of the salary of county highway superintendent is to be paid out of their funds applicable for inter-county highway construction improvement, maintenance and repair.

17. Unnecessary for the county surveyor and his assistants and deputies, on yearly and monthly salaries, to itemize pay rolls in the manner formerly done by county surveyors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of August 12, 1915, in which you submit sixteen questions relating to the Cass highway law, being amended senate bill No. 125, found in 106 O. L., 574. You first inquire as to whether there is any provisions in amended senate bill No. 125 for county commissioners either to purchase or be furnished means of transportation. I assume that you mean to inquire as to the right of county commissioners to purchase and maintain a vehicle or vehicles with public funds and use the same while in the discharge of their duties, in connection with highways, or to rent vehicles while so engaged and charge the cost thereof against the county. You do not cite me to any particular section or sections of the act in question as bearing upon this question and inquire as to the proper construction to be placed upon such sections; but merely inquire generally as to whether a provision of the character indicated by you is to be found in the act. This observation is also applicable to a number of the other questions propounded by you, and the work of answering questions of this class has been one involving a test of eyesight and patience in the reading of the three hundred and four sections of the act, rather than one involving the application of legal principles. I can only say, in answer to your first question, that I have carefully examined the act in question and have been unable to find therein any provision authorizing county commissioners to purchase and maintain with public funds a vehicle or vehicles to be used by them while in the discharge of their duties in connection with highways, or to rent vehicles while so engaged and charge the cost thereof against the county.

Your second inquiry is as to whether the automobile used as a conveyance by county road officials is to be classed as equipment. I have interpreted this inquiry to be as to the right of the county commissioners or county highway superintendent, under the Cass highway law, to purchase an automobile to be used by either the county commissioners or the county highway superintendent and his assistants, or both, while engaged on work relating to the highways of the county.

The principal provisions of the Cass highway law relating to the purchase or lease of equipment by the county authorities are to be found in sections 155, 157, 158 and 160 of the act. Section 155 of the act, being section 7198, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties. It need only be observed, in connection with this section, that an automobile could not be classed as an implement or tool or as material, within the meaning of the section. Section 157 of the act, being section 7200, G. C., provides that the county commissioners may purchase such machinery or other equipment for construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highways, bridges and culverts under their jurisdiction, as they may deem necessary.

Section 158 of the act, being section 7201, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent may lease or hire machinery, tools and equipment for highway, culvert or bridge repair, at a price to be approved by the county commissioners or the township trustees. Section 160 of the act, being section 7203, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, purchase from any public institution, any road material, machinery, tools or equipment, quarried, mined, prepared or manufactured by said institution, provided the same conform to the standard specifications therefor, for highways, bridge or culvert work in said county. It is manifest that none of the provisions referred to above are wide enough to authorize the county commissioners or county highway superintendent to purchase an automobile to be used by either the county commissioners or the county highway superintendent and his assistants, or both, while engaged on highway work, and I am of the opinion that no such authority is conferred by the act under consideration. This opinion is strengthened by the provision of section 138, of the Cass highway law, being section 7181, G. C., to the effect that the county highway superintendent and his assistants, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury their actual necessary traveling expenses, including livery, thus evidencing a legislative intent that the county highway superintendent and his assistants when traveling about the county on officials business should have resort to hired vehicles.

Your third question is as to what roads township highway superintendents will have charge of in their townships. This question is not susceptible of a definite answer applicable under all conditions for the reason that at least one of the duties of a township highway superintendent may, under certain conditions, extend to all of the roads of his road district, while other of his duties are limited to a certain class of roads. Section 3370, G. C., provides that the township highway superintendent shall, under the direction of the township trustees "have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair." While the language of this section does not limit the activities of the township highway superintendent to township roads, yet section 7464, G. C., limits the jurisdiction of township trustees in the maintaining of roads to township roads. It therefore follows that the duty of the township highway superintendent to keep the roads of his district in good repair is limited to township roads as defined in section 7464, G. C. By section 3374, G. C., the township highway superintendent is required to make a report to the county highway superintendent annually on blanks furnished by the county superintendent in relation to the highways, bridges and culverts within his township or district, containing such matter and in such form as may be prescribed by the county highway superintendent. He is also required to make additional reports from time to time as required by the county highway superintendent and to perform such other duties as may be prescribed by the rules and regulations of the county highway superintendent, so far as the rules and regulations of the county highway superinendent do not conflict with those of the township trustees. Under section 7182, G. C., the county highway superintendent may be designated to have charge of all highways, bridges and culverts within the county under control of the state. If a county highway superintendent is so designated to have charge of the highways, bridges and culverts within his county under control of the state, then the duties of the various township highway superintendents of that county in making reports to the county highway superintendent and performing other duties required by the rules and regulations of the county highway superintendent, would extend to all the highways, state, county and township, within their respective districts. By sections 3375, G. C., et seq., the township highway superintendent is given certain duties in reference to dragging the graveled and unimproved public roads of his road district, and these duties extend to all the graveled and unimproved public roads of the district without reference to their class. It will thus be seen that the question of whether the duties of the township highway superintendent are limited to township roads or also extend to county or state roads, or both, depend upon the particular function which he is exercising, some functions extending under certain conditions to all the roads of his district and other functions being limited to the township roads of his district.

Your fourth inquiry is as to what constitutes a township road, what a county road and what a state road. This inquiry is fully answered by the provisions of section 241 of the act, section 7464, G. C., which section reads as follows:

> "The public highways of the state shall be divided into three classes, namely: State roads, county roads and township roads.
> "(a) State roads shall include such part or parts of the inter-county highways and main market roads as have been or may hereafter be constructed by the state, or which have been or may hereafter be taken over by the state as provided in this act, and such roads shall be maintained by the state highway department.
> "(b) County roads shall include all roads which have been or may be improved by the county by placing brick, stone, gravel or other road building material thereon, or heretofore built by the state and not a part of the inter-county or main market system of roads, together with such roads as have been or may be constructed by the township trustees to conform to the standards for county roads as fixed by the county commissioners, and all such roads shall be maintained by the county commissioners.

"(c) Township roads shall include all public highways of the state other than state or county roads as hereinbefore defined, and the trustees of each township shall maintain all such roads within their respective townships; and provided further, that the county commissioners shall have full power and authority to assist the township trustees in maintaining all such roads, but nothing herein shall prevent the township trustees from improving any road within their respective townships, except as otherwise provided in this act."

Your fifth inquiry is as to whether the county highway superintendent is required to approve all expenditures for roads and bridges in the township and county. I assume that this inquiry is limited to township and county road construction, improvement, maintenance and repair. This inquiry is answered in part by the provison found in section 144 of the act, being section 7187, G. C., to the effect that the county highway superintendent shall approve all estimates which are paid from county or township funds, for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges. The idea of an estimate, when the word is used in this sense, is associated with that of a contract. That is to say, estimates would be paid from county or township funds where the county or township had entered into a contract for road or bridge work. As the work on the contract progressed, estimates would be allowed and paid and upon the completion of the work a final estimate would be allowed and paid. The provision of section 144 of the act referred to above, requiring the county highway superintendent to approve all expenditures paid from county or township funds for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges, therefore, has the effect that in so far as a county or township undertakes to construct, improve, maintain or repair a road or bridge by contract, all its expenditures must be approved by the county highway superintendent. It is also made clear from the provisions of the act, that county commissioners may, under certain conditions, proceed to construct, improve, maintain and repair roads and bridges by force account, so-called. That the legislature intended to confer such a right is indicated by the provisions of sections 157 and 158 of the act, being sections 7200 and 7201, G. C., authorizing county commissioners to purchase such machinery or other equipment for construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highways, bridges and culverts under their jurisdiction as they may deem necessary and to take over all machinery, tools or other equipment owned by the township when the Cass highway law becomes effective, at a price to be agreed upon between the county commissioners and the township trustees, and authorizing the county highway superintendent to lease or hire machinery, tools and equipment for highway, culvert or bridge repair under certain conditions. It is also provided by section 160 of the act, being section 7203, G. C., that the county highway superintendent may, under certain conditions, purchase from any public institution, any road material, machinery, tools or equipment quarried, mined, prepared or manufactured by said institution.

Authority to proceed by force account is more directly conferred, however, by section 155 of the act, being section 7198, G. C., which provides that the county highway superintendent may, under certain conditions, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties.

Regard must be had to the provision of section 141 of the act, being section

7184, G. C., which is in a large measure decisive as to the proposition now under discussion. This section provides that the county highway superintendent shall have general charge, subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department, of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, whether known as township, county or state highways, and such county highway superintendent shall see that the same are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law, and shall have general supervision of the work of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing the highways, bridges and culverts in his county, subject, however, to the provision for the designation by the state highway commissioner of an engineer, other than the county surveyor, to have charge of state work in such county. It is manifest that the provisions of this section will be applicable, under all circumstances, to the construction, improvement, maintenance, dragging and repair of all county and township roads within the county. There would be no reason in a rule requiring the approval of the county highway superintendent as to expenditures made by contract and not requiring such approval as to expenditures made when proceeding by force account.

While the letter of the provision of section 144 of the act, being section 7187, G. C., only goes so far as to expressly require the approval of the county highway superintendent to all estimates paid from county or township funds for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges, yet inasmuch as the county highway superintendent is by the terms of the act made the chief executive officer of the county in road and bridge matters and given general charge of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, which provision will, under all circumstances be applicable to all township and county roads in the county, I am of the opinion that the spirit of the act is such as to require the approval of the county highway superintendent to all expenditures made from county or township funds for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of township and county roads and bridges, whether the work be done by contract or force account, with one exception, which will be hereinafter pointed out.

Referring at this point to road activities of township trustees, it will be observed that in so far as township trustees may attempt road construction or improvement, as distinguished from road repair, surveys, plats, plans, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications for the proposed work must be prepared by the county highway superintendent, this being provided by section 62 of the act, section 3298-3, G. C.

Under the provisions of section 65 of the act, being section 3298-6, G. C., an inspector or inspectors for such work may be appointed by the township trustees, but such inspector or inspectors are required to act under the general direction of the county highway superintendent. It will thus be seen that the township highway superintendent, as such, has nothing to do with road construction or improvement by township trustees, but by the provisions of section 75 of the act, section 3370, G. C., it is made the duty of the township highway superintendent, acting under the direction of the township trustees, to keep the roads of his district in good repair. The word "roads" as found in this provision must be read "township roads," for by the terms of section 241 of the act, section 7464, G. C., the duty of the township trustees in maintaining roads, is limited to township roads.

The township highway superintendent is, by the terms of chapter 5 of the act, being sections 3375 to 3379, inclusive, of the General Code, charged with certain duties relative to the dragging of graveled and unimproved roads, and as to expenditures for this purpose it is provided by section 81 of the act, being section 3376, G. C., that the township highway superintendent shall report all claims for dragging that are in accordance with the provisions of the act, to the township trustees, who shall at their regular monthly meetings pay all claims for dragging that have the approval of the township highway superintendent and that are not inconsistent with the act. This provision seems to make the approval of the township highway superintendent sufficient as to claims for dragging graveled and unimproved roads, and to create an exception to the general rule, which exception, in my opinion, is the only one to be found in the act.

Answering your question specifically, it is therefore my opinion that the county highway superintendent must approve all expenditures for roads and bridges made from the treasuries of the counties and townships of the state, under the provisions of the Cass highway law, with the one exception of expenditures for dragging graveled and unimproved roads, which expenditures may be made upon the approval of the township highway superintendent.

An opinion covering your sixth and seventh questions will be prepared as soon as additional information requested from you has been received.

Your eighth inquiry is worded as follows:

> "Does the mileage of public roads include the mileage of roads in municipalities?"

I assume that the mileage of public roads, to which you refer, is the mileage of public roads mentioned in section 138 of the act, being section 7181, G. C., and being one of the factors entering into the computation of the annual salary provided by the section in question.

An examination of all the provisions of the act now under consideration discloses that in a general way the state, counties and townships are limited in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of highways to roads located outside municipalities.

Those cases in which the state or a county may engage in road building activities inside a municipality, constitute exceptions to the general rule. County commissioners may, under section 128 of the act, being section 6949, G. C., extend a proposed road improvement into or through a "municipality" when the consent of council of said "municipality" has been first obtained. But the term "municipality" as used in section 128, is limited by the provisions of section 133 (G. C., 6954), which provides in part:

> "* * * The word 'road' as used in sections 85 and (to) 133, both inclusive, of this act, shall be construed to include any state or county road or roads or any part thereof or any state or county road or roads and any village street or streets or any part thereof which form a continuous road improvement."

The power of the state highway commissioner in this particular is specifically limited to villages.

The pertinent section of the act relating to the power of the state highway commissioner in this particular, is section 229, being section 1231-3, G. C., which provides that the state highway commissioner may extend a proposed road improvement into or through a village, when the consent of the council of said village has been first obtained, but as before observed, the usual and ordinary activities of the state and counties in road matters will not, under this act, extend to the roads and streets within municipalities. However, it is my opinion that the mileage of the public roads of a county, referred to in section 138 of the act, section 7181,

G. C., and upon which the salary provided by said section is, in part, to be based, will include such streets of villages as form a part of a state, county or township road.

Your ninth inquiry is as follows:

> "If the county improves a road through the township and into or through villages, does that improvement through the village become a county road and under maintenance of the county?"

This question is to be answered in the negative. No authority is given either the state, county or township to do anything upon the roads of a village without the consent and agreement of the village council. Throughout the act a distinction obtains between "maintenance" and "repair."

Section 244 of the act (G. C., 7467), after providing that the state, county and township shall maintain their respective roads, in the same sentence when reference is made to the agreement between the state, county or township and a village, it is limited to "construction, improvement or repair upon roads inside of a village." Where a road is improved through a village, the village may provide for having the road through the village widened at its own expense. Clearly this part of the road could not be said to have been built or improved by the county, and this part of the road could not be considered a part of the county road.

The general control of roads within municipalities is still left with the municipality. Section 3714, G. C., which was left unrepealed, provides:

> "Municipal corporations shall have special power to regulate the use of the streets, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council shall have the care, supervision and control of public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds, bridges, aqueducts and viaducts within the corporation, and shall cause them to be kept open, in reppir, and free from nuisance."

Your tenth inquiry is as to whose duty it is to determine how mileage of public roads upon which the county surveyor's salary is to be based, and you also inquire as to whether he draws salary as county surveyor or as county highway superintendent.

I have carefully examined all of the provisions of the act now under consideration and find no provision therein specifically casting upon any official the duty of determining the mileage of public roads in the county referred to by you. The legislature seems to have overlooked this feature of the matter in the framing of the statute now under consideration. It is my opinion that it is the duty of the county auditor, who issues the warrants for salary, to ascertain the mileage and population upon which the salary is computed. It is to be observed that only the first thousand miles of public roads in the county is to be used as a basis for this computation. This should not be difficult of ascertainment.

You further inquire, in this connection, as to whether the salary provided for by section 138, is drawn by the county surveyor, as county surveyor, or as county highway superintendent. The county surveyor draws the salary provided by section 138 of the act, section 7181, G. C., as county surveyor, and by the provisions of said section said salary is in full for all services as county highway superintendent.

Your eleventh inquiry is as to how far the county highway superintendent's authority goes in removing township highway superintendents.

It is provided by section 75 of the act, section 3370, G. C., that the township highway superintendent may be removed by the county highway superintendent for incompetency or gross neglect of duty. As to whether a township highway superintendent is incompetent or guilty of gross neglect of duty, would depend upon the particular facts in each specific instance. It is sufficient for the purpose of this opinion to observe that if a township highway superintendent is incompetent, or if he is guilty of gross neglect of duty, he may be removed by the county highway superintendent, which power is concurrent with that of the township trustees.

Your twelfth question reads: "Is the tax limitation prescribed in sections 105, 238 and 239, ten mills or fifteen mills?" As between the ten-mill and fifteen-mill limitation the levies in these sections are above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills. This answer, however, is not sufficient without some explanation of the provisions of these various sections.

As this law did not become effective until after the levies were made this year, no levies may be made under the Cass highway law until 1916, and there is no immediate necessity for the interpretation of the tax levying sections, of which there are others in addition to those cited by you. With the large amount of work now pending in this department, I prefer to defer a discussion of these tax sections until I can find time to take all of them up at once.

Your twelfth question reads: "Is the tax limitation prescribed in sections of $2,000 is the bond contemplated by section 140 of the act, or whether the surveyor must give another bond as county highway superintendent.

Section 2784, G. C., which is not expressly repealed by the Cass highway law, provides as follows:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, the county surveyor shall give bond to the state in the sum of two thousand dollars with two or more sureties, approved by the county commissioners, conditioned for the faithful performance of his official duties. Such bond, with the oath of office and the approval of the commissioners indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the county treasurer and kept in his office."

Section 140, of the Cass highway law, section 7183, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent and such of his assistants as the commissioners may determine, shall give bond to the state of Ohio in a sum to be fixed by the commissioners of the county, with sureties to the approval of said commissioners. Said bond shall be conditioned that such person will faithfully discharge the duties enjoined upon him by law. Such bonds, with the approval of the county commissioners as to sureties thereon, together with the oath of office of such county highway superintendent or assistant endorsed thereon or attached thereto, shall be deposited with the county treasurer. In answering this inquiry it should be noted that the act now in question casts upon the county surveyor, acting as county highway superintendent, a great many new duties and responsibilities. There is nothing inconsistent in requirements to the effect that the county surveyor shall give one bond conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties generally and another bond conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties as county highway superintendent. It will also be observed that as to the bond mentioned in section 2784, G. C., the amount of the same is fixed by the statute at $2,000, while as to the bond mentioned in section 140 of the act, section 7183, G. C., the amount of the bond is to be fixed by the county commissioners. I am of the opinion that the bond referred to in section 140 of the act, section 7183, G. C., is not a substitute for the bond referred to in section 2784, G. C., and further, that section 2784, G. C., is not impliedly repealed. From this it follows that all county surveyors should give two bonds, one the bond of $2,000 provided by section 2784, G. C., as county surveyor, and the other the bond prescribed by section 140 of the act, section 7183, G. C., as county highway superintendent, the amount of which is to be fixed by the commissioners of the county. This holding is in conformity with that of a previous opinion of this department rendered to Hon. Dean E. Stanley, prosecuting attorney of Warren county on May 18, 1915, in which a somewhat similar question was discussed. In that opinion it was held that before the prosecuting attorney of a county is entitled to a warrant from the county auditor for an expense allowance of an amount not to exceed one-half of his official salary, as authorized by the provision of section 3004, G. C., he must give the bond required by said section in addition to the official bond given by him as required by the provision of section 2911, G. C.

Your fourteenth inquiry is as to whether county commissioners, by force account or otherwise, may repair highways without the supervision of the county highway superintendent. Much of the reasoning applicable to the fifth proposition submitted by you is also applicable in answering this question. It is manifest from an examination of the entire act that its purpose is to place all highway work in the county under the supervision of the county highway superintendent, with the exception, under certain conditions, of work upon state highways carried on under the general control of the state highway commissioner.

It is expressly provided by section 141 of the act, section 7184, G. C., as follows:

> "The county highway superintendent shall have general charge, subject to the rules and regulations of the state highway department, of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of all bridges and highways within his county, whether known as township, county or state highways, and such county highway superintendent shall see that the same are constructed, improved, maintained, dragged and repaired as provided by law, and shall have general supervision of the work of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing the highways, bridges and culverts in his county, subject, however, to the provision hereinafter made for the designation, by the state highway commissioner, of an engineer other than the county surveyor, to have charge of state work in such county."

Under the provisions of the section above quoted, and having in mind the general scheme and spirit of the act, it is therefore my opinion that under the terms of the Cass highway law, county commissioners cannot, either by force account or otherwise, repair highways without the supervision of the county highway superintendent.

Your fifteenth inquiry is as to whether there is money appropriated by the general assembly to pay the one-fifth part of the salary of the county highway superintendent which is to be paid by the state, as provided in section 139 of the act, section 7182, G. C. In considering this matter, reference should first be had to the provision of section 22 of article II of the constitution, to the effect that no money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law. Section 214 of the act, section 1221, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "Seventy-five per cent. of all the money paid into the treasury by reason of the levy for the state highway improvement fund shall be used for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the intercounty highways as the same have been heretofore designated or as they may hereafter be established or located by the state highway commissioner in the manner provided by law, and for the maintenance of the state highway department, including the state's portion of the salaries of the county highway superintendents. Money appropriated or available for inter-county highways shall be equally divided among the counties of the state."

A subsequent provision of the same section is to the effect that twenty-five per cent. of the state highway improvement fund is to be devoted to main market road purposes. The division of this fund between inter-county highways and main market roads made by the Cass highway law, is the same as that which existed under the former statutes. It may properly be observed that the engineering and supervision required in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of a highway is as much a part of the cost of constructing, improving, maintaining and repairing such highway as is the material used or the physical labor employed in such work. By a reference to house bill No. 701, it will be found that said bill carries two appropriations for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways, one of these appropriations amounting to $1,533,400 and the other amounting to $826,300. The provision of section 214 of the act, section 1221, G. C., quoted above, is not, of course, an appropriation but it must be regarded as a direction to the effect that when moneys have been appropriated for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of inter-county highways and have been equally divided among the counties of the state, then such moneys are available for the payment of the state's portion of the salaries of the county highway superintendents for the reason that the state's portion of the salaries of the county highway superintendents is to be regarded as a part of the cost and expense of construction, improvement, maintenance and repair. It is true that the county highway superintendents will have duties to perform in reference to main market roads in those counties in which main market roads exist, but by the terms of the statute all that part of their salaries to be paid by the state is made payable from inter-county highway funds.

It is therefore my opinion, in answer to your question, that the appropriations of $1,533,400.00 and $826,300.00, referred to above, are available for the payment of the state's portion of the salaries of county highway superintendents, and that in any county the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of that county may properly be paid from the proportion of the inter-county highway funds referred to above and applicable for inter-county highway construction, improvement, maintenance and repair in such county.

Your sixteenth inquiry reads as follows:

"Will it be necessary for the county surveyor and his assistants or deputies on yearly or monthly salaries, to itemize their payrolls as heretofore?"

Assuming this question to refer to the yearly salary of the county surveyor and the monthly salary of assistants who may be provided under section 138 of the act, it is my opinion that the payrolls are not required, as a matter of law, to be itemized in the same manner that county surveyors' compensation was heretofore itemized.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CONVICTS TRANSFERRED FROM PENITENTIARY OR REFORMATORY TO COLUMBUS STATE HOSPITAL, CONSTRUCTIVELY IN FORMER INSTITUTIONS—PHYSICIANS OF SUCH HOSPITAL CANNOT ACT AS MEDICAL WITNESSES—OPINION SUPPLEMENTS OPINION NO. 776, AUGUST 28, 1915.

Convicts transferred from the penitentiary or reformatory to the Columbus State Hospital are constructively in such penitentiary or reformatory, and the physicians of such hospital as to such convicts are "connected with the penitentiary or reformatory" and, therefore, cannot act as medical witnesses under section 2216, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of August 17th you requested my official opinion on the following question:

> "The Ohio state reformatory has forwarded to this department statement of D. W. Cummins, probate judge of Richland county, amounting to $303.60 for fees and expenses account of lunacy inquests of fifteen inmates of the Ohio state reformatory confined in the Columbus state hospital.
> "Included in this statement is $180.00 for Drs. G. H. Williams, B. B. Barber and G. A. Rowland, examining physicians and witnesses. These physicians being employes of the Columbus state hospital, we would like to have your opinion before issuing vouchers in payment of same."

The bill of costs which was forwarded to you by the Ohio state reformatory purported to be made under the provisions of section 1956 of the General Code, and I advised you in an opinion under date of August 28, 1915, being opinion No. 776, that, in my opinion, a physician permanently employed in a state hospital is not authorized to act as a medical witness.

I am, however, just in receipt of a letter from Dr. C. F. Gilliam, superintendent of Columbus state hospital, wherein he inquires whether or not I have taken into consideration section 2216 of the General Code.

In view of the fact that the bill of costs purported to be made under section 1956, I did not take into consideration the provisions of section 2216.

Section 1956 provides, among other things, as follows:

That the medical witness used at such inquest "must have at least five years' experience in the practice of medicine, shall not be related, by blood or marriage, to the person alleged to be insane or to the person making the application for commitment, nor have any official connection with any state hospital."

Section 2216, to which Dr. Gilliam refers, provides for an examination to be made of a convict to be transferred from the penitentiary or reformatory to the Lima state hospital "by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory, and to be designated by the court."

I am of the opinion that Dr. Gilliam is right in his contention that the provisions of section 2216 are the only provisions that are to be considered in this matter, and that the provisions of section 1956 are not applicable, being general provisions, and there being special provisions governing the matter. However, in opinion No. 685, rendered to Dr. Gilliam under date of August 5, 1915, I came to the conclusion that unless the patients that are now in the Columbus state hospital, which patients were transferred to such hospital from the Ohio state reformatory or penitentiary, are constructively inmates of either the penitentiary or reformatory, there is no provision for transferring them to the Lima state hospital, unless they exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies rendering their presence a source of danger to others, as provided for in section 1993 of the General Code, as amended, supra, and I further stated:

> "Without setting out all of the related statutes, I am of the opinion that insane prisoners transferred from either the penitentiary or the state reformatory remain inmates of the respective penal institutions and are still constructively in those penal institutions."

Having, therefore, decided that the inmates of the Columbus state hospital who were transferred thereto from the penitentiary or reformatory are constructively in the penitentiary or reformatory, the physicians who are attending such patients in the Columbus state hospital would be considered as "connected with the penitentiary or reformatory" in so far as the inmates confined therein are concerned, and, consequently, under the provisions of section 2216, G. C., said physicians could not be used as proper medical witnesses in an inquest thereunder, and the result is the same, to wit, that they are not entitled to fees for services rendered under section 2216.

Furthermore, as Dr. Gilliam points out in his letter, the fees are to be paid by the state, and the service is one wherein the state passes a convict from one institution under its charge to another. The physicians are receiving their compensation from the state, and now desire to receive also fees from the state. This I do not believe it is public policy to permit, and for that reason I am of the opinion that the said physicians are not entitled to the fees claimed by them for such inquests.

Opinion No. 776 was rendered under sections 1956 of the General Code. This opinion is rendered under section 2216 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—BY ITS PROVISIONS TOWNSHIP MAY ISSUE BONDS TO CONSTRUCT ROADS—QUESTION SHALL FIRST BE SUBMITTED TO ELECTORS OF TOWNSHIP—INTEREST AND SINKING FUND LEVY WILL BE MADE UPON ALL TAXABLE PROPERTY OF TOWNSHIP INCLUDING MUNICIPALITIES.

If a board of township trustees has made the levy provided by section 3298-1, G. C., and has under section 3298-3, G. C., designated a certain road or roads or parts thereof to be improved, and if the money raised by said levy does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads in such township, then the trustees may issue and sell bonds of such township to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of such roads, provided the question of issuing said bonds shall be first submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election therefor, and approved by a majority of the electores who participated in the last election for governor in the township, as provided in section 3298-11, G. C. If such bonds are issued, levies for the payment of principal and interest will be outside the two mill limitation upon taxes authorized to be levied for general township purposes, and will be subject only to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force, to wit, the fifteen mill limitation, and such levies will be made upon all the taxable property of the township, including the taxable property of any municipal corporation situated within the township. The sections of the General Code herein discussed did not go into effect until September 6, 1915, and therefore no election on the question of issuing bonds may be held until after the levies to be made under section 3298-1, G. C., in 1916, have been found insufficient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have received several communications making inquiries as to matters of general interest under the Cass highway law, amended senate bill No. 125, and deeming the matter to be of general public interest I am taking the liberty of addressing an opinion to you upon the questions presented, which may be stated as follows:

"1. Under the Cass highway law may townships issue bonds for the purpose of constructing roads?

"2. Is an election necessary or may bonds be issued without such formality?

"3. May the interest and sinking fund levy for such bonds be made upon the entire duplicate of the township including municipalities contained within the township but whose limits are not co-extensive therewith?"

The principal provisions of the Cass highway law applicable to the questions under consideration are found in chapter 3 of the law, being sections 60 to 74 inclusive of the act, which have been designated as sections 3298-1 to 3298-15, G. C., and will be found at pages 589 et seq., 106 O. L.

Reference should first be made to section 60 of the act, being 3298-1, G. C., which provides that the board of trustees of any township may levy and assess upon the taxable property of such township a tax not exceeding three mills in any one year, upon each dollar of taxable property therein, for the purpose of improving, dragging, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads or parts thereof. This levy is to be made general upon all the taxable property of the township.

Territory within a township and comprising only a part thereof does not cease to be a part of the township upon being organized into a municipal corporation (State ex rel. v. Ward, 17 O. S., 543) neither does the property within such territory cease to be taxable property of the township when such territory is organized into a municipal corporation. The tax authorized by section 60 of the act (3298-1, G. C.) is therefore to be levied on all the taxable property of the township including that within any municipal corporation situated within the township. It is further provided in section 60 of the act that the township road levy shall be in addition to the levy of two mills authorized by law for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The use of the expression "subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force" coupled with the limitation of three mills contained in the section, indicates an intention to make this levy subject to only two limitations, viz., the levy itself must not exceed three mills and the levy taken together with all other levies for taxes for all purposes must not exceed fifteen mills.

Section 67 of the act (G. C., 3298-8) provides:

> "If the money raised by the levy aforesaid does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads in such township, the trustees may issue and sell the bonds of said township to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of such roads. Such bonds may be issued at such times and in such amounts as in the judgment of such trustees, shall be necessary. The bonds shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum payable semi-annually, and in denomination of not less than one hundred dollars, and not more than one thousand dollars each, and shall mature in not more than ten years as may be determined by such trustees. Such bonds shall be signed by the trustees or a majority thereof on behalf of the township and attested by the township clerk. The interest thereon shall be evidenced by proper coupons attached to each bond, and such coupons shall be authenticated by the signature of the township clerk."

The above section provides that if the money raised by the levy aforesaid, that is, by the levy under section 60 of the act (G. C. 3298-1) does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the roads in such township designated by the trustees under said section 62 (G. C. 3298-3) the trustees may issue and sell the bonds of said township to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of such roads.

Section 68 of the act (G. C. 3298-9) provides:

> "Before the bonds of the township are issued to provide funds for improving the roads thereof, the question of issuing said bonds shall be first submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election therefor. The trustees shall provide by resolution for the submission of such question to the qualified electors of the township, and shall give notice by publication once each week for three consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in said township of the date of such election, and the purpose for which it is held. Said notice shall state the amount of the proposed bond issue."

Therefore, before bonds of the township may be issued to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of the roads under section 67, above quoted, the question of issuing such bonds must be submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election held therefor.

Section 70 of the act (G. C. 3298-11) provides for the manner of conducting and canvassing the election and also contains this provision:

> "If the number of votes cast in favor of the issue of bonds is a majority of the electors who participated in the last election for governor in the township the trustees may proceed to issue such bonds."

Section 72 of the act (G. C. 3298-13) provides that levies for the payment of principal and interest on such bonds shall be in addition to the two mills authorized to be levied for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. While there is no direct provision as to the property subject to the levy for the payment of principal and interest on such bonds, it is apparent from a study of the entire chapter that it was the legislative intent that such levy should be made upon all the taxable property of the township. Therefore, if the board of township trustees has made the levy provided for in section 60 of the act (G. C. 3298-1) and has under section 62 (G. C. 3298-3) designated a certain road or roads or parts thereof to be improved, and if the money raised by said levy does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads in such township, then the trustees may issue and sell bonds of such township to provide funds for the construction or reconstruction of such designated roads, provided the question of issuing said bonds shall first be submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general or special election therefor, and approved by a majority of the electors who participated in the last election for governor in the township. If such bonds are issued, levies for the payment of the principal and interest will be outside of the two mill limitation upon the taxes authorized to be levied for general township purposes, and will be subject only to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force, to wit, the fifteen mill limitation, and such levies will be made upon all the taxable property of the township, including the taxable property of any municipal corporation situated within the township.

As the Cass highway law did not go into effect until September 6, 1915, and therefore no levy may be made this year under section 60 of the act, no election to determine the question of issuing bonds may be held until after the time in the year 1916 when the township makes its levy under section 60 of the act (G. C. 3298-1) and it is determined that said levy does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads.

It must further be borne in mind that bonds may be issued only for the construction or reconstruction of such roads and not for the repair thereof.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—NEW LAW DOES NOT CREATE NEW HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT NECESSITATING RE-APPOINTMENT OF ALL OFFICERS—STATUTE UNDER WHICH RESIDENT ENGINEERS FORMERLY APPOINTED, REPEALED—ENGINEERS NOW APPOINTED UNDER SECTION 7185, G. C.

1. Amended senate bill No. 125, 106 O. L., 574 to 666, known as the Cass highway law, does not create a new highway department, and the re-appointment of all officers and employes, now serving under the state highway department, is not required except as provided by existing civil service laws.

2. Section 1215, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 458, under which resident engineers were appointed formerly, is wholly repealed by said Cass highway law and their positions abolished. Section 142 of said law, section 7185, G. C., provides the only method by which engineers may now be appointed to have charge and control of state roads in any given county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 21, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 7, 1915, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. Does amended senate bill No. 125 create a new highway department effective September 6, 1915, in that all officials and employes of the state highway department must be appointed under this law?
> "2. Throughout the state of Ohio, the highway department has been represented by resident engineers, each having a peculiar knowledge of the work in process of construction by the highway department. If it is found that amended senate bill No. 125 creates a new highway department, will it be permissible for the state highway department to appoint these former resident engineers to continue with the work upon which they have been placed until same has been completed?"

After a careful and thorough investigation and consideration of the provisions of amended senate bill No. 125, 106 O. L., 574 to 666, with a view to answering your first question, I am constrained to hold that said bill does not create a new highway department and does not require a re-appointment of all officers and employees now serving under said department, except as required by existing civil service law.

In view of the very lengthy discussion of a similar question presented with reference to the law which created the board of agriculture, a copy of which opinion is enclosed, I shall not enter into an extended review of the provisions of the bill in question. It is sufficient to say, in a general way, that said bill recognizes in many of its provisions the existence of the old law and the work accomplished and records made under its provision. There is, however, one omission in said bill which is so potent, in my judgment, as to preclude any construction other than that the legislature intended the new department merely to succeed the old. This omission is the failure of the legislature, in said bill, to make any provisions that said new department shall succeed to all the rights, powers and duties of the old department. Such provision is always made where the legislature intends to abolish wholly an existing department and create a new one in its place. I am therefore of the opinion that without other definite clues to the legislative intention, this fact alone must be held to indicate conclusively that the legislature did not intend to abolish the old department.

If the legislature did not intend to abolish the department, as such, I think it necessarily follows that the office of state highway commissioner likewise was not abolished, for the office and the department are provided for in the same section. See section 171 of said bill, section 1178, G. C.

Referring now to your second question with reference to "resident engineers," their appointment was provided for by section 1215, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 458. The present law repeals this section and does not enact an equivalent section unless the provisions as to the appointment of a county highway superintendent may be regarded as a substitute therefor. These facts make it very clear that the positions of resident engineers are abolished under the new law.

Therefore I must advise that when the new law went into effect, the resident engineers could no longer be continued except under the limitations marked out in another opinion, which has been sent to you, relative to the power of the state highway commissioner to designate a person other than the county surveyor to have charge and control of the state roads in a given county. A person who has been serving as such resident engineer may be designated in that capacity under the new law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROADS IN LORAIN, FRANKLIN, HURON AND KNOX COUNTIES, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letters of September 14, 16 and 20, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Lorain county—Oberlin-Elyria road. Pet. No. 1589, I. C. H. No. 313;
Lorain county—Oberlin-Norwalk road. Pet. No. 1585, I. C. H. No. 290;
Franklin county—Columbus-Washington road. Pet. No. 936, I. C. H. No. 50;
Huron county—Mansfield-Norwalk road. Pet. No. 1084, I. C. H. No. 287;
Knox county—Columbus-Wooster road. Pet. No. 986, I. C. H. No. 24.

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM PETITIONS—SIGNATURES MAY BE WRITTEN WITH INDELIBLE PENCIL—ELECTOR MAY NOT AUTHORIZE ANOTHER TO SIGN HIS NAME, DATE OF SIGNING, PLACE OF RESIDENCE, STREET, NUMBER, WARD OR PRECINCT.

Signatures to initiative, referendum and supplementary petitions may be written with indelible pencil. A qualified elector may not authorize another to sign his name upon such petition nor to place upon the same opposite his name, the date of signing, place of residence, street, number, ward or precinct.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 14, 1915, as follows:

> "We are herewith submitting the following question, which we have received from Hon. F. B. Willis, governor of Ohio, for your opinion:
> "'A correspondent has submitted the following inquiry:
> "'Section 1g of article 2 of the constitution in providing for referendum petitions provides: "The names of all signers to such petitions shall be written in ink, each signer for himself."
> "'I respectfully ask your opinion on this portion of said section in answer to the following questions, to wit:
> "'1st. Is it proper to count names on a referendum petition, as recently filed, on what is known as the "McDermott law" which are written with indelible pencil?
> "'2d. May a signer authorize any other person to sign his name thereon, making it a valid signature that should be counted?
> "'3d. If only the name is placed thereon by the signer of the petition, then in the event the street and number of residence, ward, precinct, township or county is written therein by the person circulating the petition or by some other person, will it constitute a valid signature that should be counted?'"

That part of section 1g of article II of the constitution pertinent to the question submitted, is in the language following:

> "Each signer of any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition must be an elector of the state and shall place on such petition after his name the date of signing and his place of residence. A signer residing outside of a municipality shall state the township and county in which he resides. A resident of a municipality shall state in addition to the name of such municipality, the street and number, if any, of his residence and the ward and precinct in which the same is located. The names of all signers to such petitions shall be written in ink, each signer for himself."

The first question submitted involves an interpretation of that part of the above quoted provision of the constitution as follows:

> "The names of all signers to such petitions shall be written in ink, each signer for himself."

In considering whether a signature made with indelible pencil meets the constitutional requirement that the names of all signers shall be written in ink, we may look to the purpose sought as well as to the specific terms employed. This rule is aptly stated by the supreme court of this state in Hupp v. Oil & Natural Gas Company, 88 O. S., 61:

> "1. Such interpretation will be given to a provision of the constitution as will promote the object of the people in adopting it, when such object is clearly indicated in the context, and to this end narrow and technical definitions of particular words will be disregarded."

Manifestly the purposes of the requirement that the names of signers shall be written in ink is to give more substantial permanence to those signatures that their examination and comparison may be thereby facilitated throughout the proceedings.

The term "ink" is a broad general term which includes many different forms of substances and materials which are used for different related purposes, but the term "ink" as used in relation to writing, comprehends in a general sense any substance, material or compound which is of a permanent character as distinguished from that character of writing material in such common use known as lead pencil.

In other words, it is manifest that the primary purpose of this provision was to preclude the use of an ordinary lead pencil in signing the petitions therein referred to and to give to the signatures thereon that permanence of form above suggested. Ink in its general sense is not of necessity liquid in form. Printer's ink is not ordinarily of such form as may be conveniently applied with a pen, yet it is none the less ink and its proper application would result in giving to a signature that quality of permanence which is contemplated and required by the constitution, although not in the form which we customarily find that kind of ink which is commonly used in writing.

So while an indelible pencil is a writing material in some respects dissimilar to ordinary writing fluids, yet it is a matter of common knowledge that writing executed with such pencil possesses all the qualities of durability and legibility to be found in writing made with a pen in the application of ordinary ink. Indeed, from a scientific standpoint, what is commonly known as indelible pencil contains all the chemical elements of writing fluid commonly known as ink, and is therefore ink for the purpose of the present consideration.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your first question, that a signature upon all initiative, referendum or supplementary petitions made with an indelible pencil, if in all other respects according to law, is sufficient and should be counted.

The answer to your second inquiry must be in the negative. It is specifically provided that each signer shall write his name for himself. This is a recognition of a well-established rule of law that one may authorize another to sign his name to any writing to which he may himself lawfully subscribe, and if it were not for the purpose of prohibiting the authorization of the signing of one's name to such petition by another, as suggested in your inquiry, it is not conceived that such provision would have been adopted, since no purpose to be served thereby suggests itself.

This provision being in the nature of an exception or limitation of a well recognized general rule by which the very object sought by a liberal construction of such limitation would have been authorized, must be held to be mandatory as distinguished from provisions which are enabling in their character.

In those provisions which are enabling in character, the essential idea is the accomplishment of a particular purpose rather than the method employed, while in those provisions which are designed to limit or restrict the method of performing a thing which is otherwise fully authorized in law, the method itself becomes the central and controlling idea and the limitation or restriction the real purpose sought to be attained thereby.

Upon your third question my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered an opinion on July 17, 1913, found at page 1,356 of the report of the attorney-general for that year, as follows:

> "Under date of July 15th you call my attention to article II, section 1g of the constitution as amended September 3, 1912, and you request my opinion whether each signer must for himself write in the name of the township and county or name of the municipality, the street and number and ward and precinct. It would seem to me that the language of said section of article II answers your inquiry itself in that it states: 'Each signer of any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition must be an elector of the state and shall place on such petition after his name the date of signing and his place of residence.' It then proceeds to state how he shall designate his place of residence as follows: 'A signer residing outside of a municipality shall state the township and county in which he resides. A resident of a municipality shall state in addition to the name of such municipality, the street and number, if any, of his residence, and the ward and precinct in which the same is located.'
> "While it is true that the person soliciting the signature in making his affidavit to the part of the petition solicited by him is required only to state the number of signers and that each signature attached was made in his presence and to the best of his knowledge and belief each signature is genuine and that he believed the signers to be electors and that they signed with knowledge of the contents and on the date set opposite their name, yet from the clear statement that each signer shall place on the part of the petition signed by him his place of residence, I am of the opinion that each signer must for himself write in the name of the township and county, or the name of the municipality, the street and number and the ward and precinct, and that such section does not authorize the filling in of this information by a second party."

In this opinion I fully concur.

It will be observed that it is specified with particularity that the signer shall place upon the petition after his name the date and his place of residence, and a resident of a municipality shall state the street and number of his residence, if any, and the ward and precinct in which it is located. Manifestly this latter provision is mandatory and no statement of this information otherwise than upon the petition by the signer, is contemplated thereby.

No reason can be assigned for the provision that the signer shall place upon the petition, after his name, the date of signing and his place of residence, etc., other than to emphasize the intent that this information shall be so placed upon the petition by the signer himself, rather than under his direction. Without this provision that the signer shall place upon the petition the required information, it can not be doubted that under the general rules of law a signer might have authorized another to have stated this information upon the petition and it was manifestly for no other purpose than to limit the signatures upon such petitions to those opposite which all the required information is placed by the signer himself, and to thus limit the power of a signer to so authorize another to place upon the petition the information required.

It cannot be maintained that any stronger reason exists for a requirement that the names be written in ink than that the place of residence, street, number, ward and precinct should be so written. Every reason that would prompt such requirement in one case would demand the same with equal force in the other, and from this it follows that the provision "the names of all signers to such petition shall be written in ink, each signer for himself" has equal application to the additional information required to be stated as to the names. In other words, when all the provisions of section 1g, article II, are read together, the conclusion that it is required therein that all names and additional information must be written in ink by the signer himself, cannot be escaped. The answer to your third question must, therefore, be in the negative. That is to say, to limit the application of that provision of the constitution quoted by you to the names of signers only, would at the same time, of necessity, permit the required information to be stated with pencil or otherwise than in ink.

If that part of that sentence which requires the names to be written in ink has equal application to the required information, then upon equally sound reasoning will it follow that the requirement in that sentence, that the name shall be written by the signer himself, has the same application to the information required to be stated by the signer opposite his name.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—DUTY OF SUCH OFFICER TO HAVE CHARGE OF SUCH PROSECUTIONS IN COUNTY AS FOLLOW FILING OF TRANSCRIPT IN COMMON PLEAS COURT BY A MAGISTRATE.

It is the duty of the prosecuting attorney, under section 2916, G. C., as amended, to have charge of such prosecutions in the county as follow the filing of transcript in common pleas court by a magistrate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

HON. G. A. STARN, Prosecuting Attorney, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of September 18th, which is as follows:

> "We have several cases pending in our court under sections 13463, et seq., on the subject of peace warrant, and I am undecided whether or not it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to prosecute these cases in the court of common pleas. I desire to call your attention especially to section 13468, which is as follows:
> " 'When the magistrate finds there is reasonable ground for the complaint, he shall forthwith make a certified transcript of the proceedings including a copy of the complaint, and file such transcript in the office of the clerk of the court having jurisdiction of the complaint or forward it to him together with the recognizance, if any is taken. If such court is in session, the accused, if in custody, shall be tried at that term unless cause for continuance be shown, and if he is under recognizance, he shall be tried at such term with the assent of the prosecuting attorney.'

"This is the only place anywhere in the General Code that I am able to find that reference is had to the prosecuting attorney in connection with this kind of case. I would be pleased to know at your very earliest convenience as to whether or not it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to prosecute these cases after they reach the court of common pleas."

Section 2916 of the General Code, as amended (103 O. L., 419), is as follows:

"The prosecuting attorney shall have power to inquire into the commission of crimes within the county and except when otherwise provided by law shall prosecute on behalf of the state all complaints, suits and controversies in which the state is a party, and such other suits, matters and controversies as he is directed by law to prosecute within or without the county, in the probate court, common pleas court and court of appeals. In conjunction with the attorney general, he shall also prosecute cases in the supreme court arising in his county. In every case of conviction, he shall forthwith cause execution to be issued for the fine and costs, or costs only, as the case may be, and faithfully urge the collection until it is effected, or found to be impracticable, and forthwith pay to the county treasurer all moneys belonging to the state or county, which came into his possession as fines, forfeitures, costs or otherwise."

Under the provisions of section 2916 of the General Code, supra, the prosecuting attorney is charged with the duty of prosecuting on behalf of the state all complaints in which the state is a party, and it is my opinion therefore that it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to prosecute in all cases when a transcript is filed in the common pleas court by the magistrate.

In your letter you quote section 13468 of the General Code, and emphasize the provision that "he may be tried at such term with the assent of the prosecuting attorney." A careful reading of the section will disclose that the "assent of the prosecuting attorney" does not in any way indicate that discretion is conferred as to whether he shall prosecute the case but only goes to the extent of providing that if the court of common pleas is in session when the peace warrant is filed that the same may be tried at the same term of court rather than at the succeeding term, the first day of which being the time fixed for the appearance of the defendant under the provisions of section 13466 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MOTHERS' PENSION—MOTHER OF ILLEGITIMATE CHILD ENTITLED TO PENSION, PROVIDED CERTAIN SECTIONS OF GENERAL CODE ARE MET WITH.

A mother of illegitimate child is eligible to receive mothers' pension, if requirements of section 1683-2 and section 1683-3, G. C., are met.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 17th, 1915, which is as follows:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
> "A woman gives birth to an illegitimate child. Never marries the father of said child, but does marry another man. Keeps the child with her. Her husbands dies. Is she entitled to a mother's pension?
> "An early reply will be appreciated."

Section 1683-2, of the General Code (103 O. L., 877), is as follows:

> "For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled for work by reason of physical or mental infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive an age and schooling certificate, and such mothers and children have been legal residents in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make an allowance to each of such women, as follows: * * *"

The section just quoted provides who shall be eligible to receive mothers' pensions, the particular requirements to be met being that the husband of the mother must be dead, permanently disabled, or a prisoner; that the mother shall be poor, a legal resident in any county of the state for two years and that the child or children shall not be entitled to an age and schooling certificate.

When the essentials provided for in section 1683-2, of the General Code, are present, the juvenile court may make an allowance for the support of the mother under conditions provided in section 1683-3, of the General Code (103 O. L., 878), which section is as follows:

> "Such allowance may be made by the juvenile court, only upon the following conditions: First, the child or children for whose benefit the allowance is made, must be living with the mother of such child or children; second, the allowance shall be made only when in the absence of such allowance, the mother would be required to work regularly away from her home and children, and when by means of such allowance she will be able to remain at home with her children, except that she may be absent for work for such time as the court deems advisable; third, the mother must, in the judgment of the juvenile court, be a proper person, morally, physically and mentally, for the bringing up of her children;

fourth, such allowance shall in the judgment of the court be necessary to save the child or children from neglect and to avoid the breaking up of the home of such woman; fifth, it must appear to be for the benefit of the child to remain with such mother; sixth, a careful preliminary examination of the home of such mother must first have been made by the probation officer, an associated charities organization, humane society, or such other competent person or agency as the court may direct, and a written report of such examination filed.''

The woman referred to in your inquiry appears to possess the necessary requirements to render her eligible for a mother's pension in so far as her husband is dead, and if she is a proper person to have charge of her child, and the child is not entitled to an age and schooling certificate, and it is my opinion that the fact that the child is an illegitimate one should not render her ineligible to receive an allowance from the juvenile court, provided all the conditions prescribed in sections 1683-2 and 1683-3, of the General Code, supra, exist.

This opinion is not to be construed as determining any of the questions of fact to be passed upon by the juvenile court in the particular case under consideration.

In the administration of the mothers' pension law it is to be borne in mind that it is a part of the juvenile court law, which is to be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child, and in this respect section 1683, of the General Code, should be regarded. The case under consideration is to be distinguished from the one referred to in opinion No. 1016 rendered by my predecessor, Mr. Hogan, to Honorable Charles Krichbaum, probate judge and juvenile judge of Stark county, under date of June 29th, 1914, and to be found in the annual report of the attorney general for 1914, at page 885. In that case it appeared that the mother had never married at all.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, DELAWARE AND MARION RAILWAY COMPANY—RIGHT OF STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER TO COMPEL COMPANY TO MOVE THEIR TRACKS TO CENTER LINE OF ROAD—RIGHT TO EXPEND STATE OR COUNTY ROAD FUNDS TO REMOVE TRACKS AND POLES.

1. The provisions of section 161 of amended senate bill No. 125, section 7204, G. C., are not in contravention of the constitutional inhibition against the enactment of laws impairing the obligations of contracts.

2. When the conditions prescribed in said section obtain as to obstructions in public highways, the person or company responsible for such conditions must remove said obstructions. It is not contemplated by the state that its road funds or county road funds shall be used in paying the cost of removing said obstructions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

HON. CLINTON, COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 7, 1915, as follows:

"Please note the attached copy of my letter to Mr. Eli M. West, receiver for the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railway Company, and copy of his reply to same.

"With the facts contained in these two letters before you, I would be pleased to receive your opinion on the following:

"First—Can we, under any existing statutes, force the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Ry. Co. to move their track to the center line of the road, whereas same is now located about twelve feet east of the center line?

"Second—Can we legally expend any state or county road fund to pay in whole or in part the cost of moving the track and the cost of erecting the additional poles required?

"Third—Can we force the railway company to pay the entire cost of moving track, constructing poles, etc., and paving between ends of ties?"

From the correspondence attached to your letter and referred to therein, it appears that you, in connection with the board of county commissioners of Franklin county, are now contemplating the improvement of what is commonly known as the North High street turnpike, said improvement to begin at the north corporation line of the city of Columbus and extending thence north 3810 feet.

It further appears from said correspondence that a portion of the turnpike in question is now occupied by the tracks of the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railway Company, which company was granted a franchise on March 12, 1892, by the commissioners of said Franklin county; said franchise providing among other things as follows:

"That the west end of the ties of said railway shall be placed not nearer than eight feet from the center of said highway, and correct center line of said highway and the grounds of said roadbed to be determined and fixed by and under the direction of the county surveyor of Franklin county.

"That the said railway shall conform its grades to the present existing grade and in the future shall conform to any new grade that may be established by legal authority, and if in the future the said highway shall be improved with a permanent pavement which shall extend beyond the east line of the roadbed of said highway, the said company shall construct, and at its own expense maintain, the same kind of pavement between the rails of its tracks and one foot on the outside of the rails on each side.

"If the said road is operated by means of overhead wires it shall be built with bracket poles on one side of the road only, so that no wires shall cross the traveled portion of the highway unless necessary to reach the power house or storage sheds."

It further appears from said correspondence that the railway was located and constructed as required by said franchise and that on December 25, 1899, a new franchise for the term of twenty-five years was granted to said company, which said new franchise recites that the company had constructed its railway according to its former franchise and provides as follows:

"The main track shall be and remain as at present located, but in case of necessity turnouts may be changed or additional ones constructed, provided they do not extend into the highway farther than those at present on the road. That portion of the line which is constructed with bracket arms shall not be changed to overhead wires extending across the highway without the consent of the property owners on the west side of the highway, secured either by agreement or condemnation.

"If in the future the North High street free turnpike shall be improved to the east of the present railway tracks by a permanent improvement the said company shall pave and keep in repair the space between its tracks and for one foot on each side thereof with the same material as that with which the street is improved, and throughout the whole length of the line the tracks shall be kept upon the grade now established, or in case of a future change of the grade of the street, the tracks shall conform to the new grade."

It appears from the correspondence above quoted that the tracks of said company are now located as provided by the terms of its franchise. Referring to your first question, you inquire if you can force said company to move its tracks under any existing law, it being your desire to have said tracks located on the center line of said new road, as appears from your correspondence. The law applying to such cases is now found in section 161 of amended senate bill No. 125, 106 O. L., 619, section 7204, G. C., as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the owners or occupants of lands situated along the highways to remove all obstructions within the bounds of the highways which have been placed there either by themselves or their agents, or with their consent. It shall be the duty of all telephone, telegraph, steam or electric railway, or other electrical companies, oil, gas, water or public service companies of any kind, to remove their poles and wires, connected therewith or any tracks, switches, spurs, or oil, gas or water pipes, mains, conduits or other objects when the same, in the opinion of the county highway superintendent, constitute obstructions in the highway or interfere with the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highway or use thereof, by the traveling public, subject, however, to the rights of any such company to be or remain in such highway, by virtue of any grant or franchise to said company. If, in the opinion of the county highway superintendent, such companies have obstructed said highway, said highway superintendent shall forthwith notify the county commissioners who shall cause notice to be served on said owner, occupant or company, directing the removal of said obstructions and if said owner, occupant or company shall not within five days proceed to remove said obstruction and complete the same within a reasonable time, the county highway superintendent, upon order of the county commissioners may remove said obstructions. The expense thereby incurred shall be paid in the first instance out of money levied and collected and available for highway purposes, and the amount thereof shall be certified to the proper officials to be placed upon the tax duplicate against the property of such owner, occupant or company, as provided by law, to be collected as other taxes, and the proper fund shall be reimbursed out of the money so collected, or the cost of removing such obstructions may be collected from the owner, occupant or company by civil action by the county commissioners or township trustees.

"All such persons, firms or corporations shall be required to reconstruct or relocate their properties or any part thereof upon such public highway, upon the order of the proper authorities if in the opinion of such authorities the same constitute an obstruction in such public highway.''

The above section defines the policy of the state which now controls its relation to railway companies occupying public roads with tracks which may constitute an obstruction to any improvement of said roads and said section places the entire cost of removing and relocating said tracks upon the companies which own the same.

It may be, and doubtless will be contended, however, by the company in question that the enforcement of the provisions of the section just quoted is that it would be an unconstitutional application thereof, in that it would contravene the provisions of section 28, article II, of the constitution, providing against the enactment of any laws impairing the obligations of contracts. A franchise such as the one under which this company is now located upon this highway and operating its railroad thereon, is frequently denominated and termed a contract and is commonly so regarded, but in a strictly legal sense it is only a right or privilege, granted in this instance by the state through its duly constituted agents, the board of county commissioners of Franklin county, upon such terms and conditions as were fixed by said commissioners, and it is a right which can only be exercised by reason of the grant thus made. Sections 9101 and 9113, G. C.

The terms and conditions, however, of this franchise, as fixed by said county commissioners, are subject to the limitation that said commissioners could not in any manner or degree surrender or alienate that governmental power of the state which is required to exist for the welfare of the public, which welfare and right to use said public road is the paramount right in this case. This power so reserved and which said commissioners could not alienate is known as the police power of the state. Referring to this reserved governmental power, Elliott on Streets and Roads, section 939, says:

''The general rule is well settled that no contract can be made which assumes to surrender or alienate a strictly governmental power which is required to exist for the welfare of the public. To what extent it prevails as against chartered rights which are protected as rights flowing from a contract it is not possible to say with certainty and precision, but we believe that it may be fully affirmed that the power extends so far as to require the private corporation to yield to the public welfare in the matter of the reasonable regulation of roads and streets.''

The rights and privileges granted as aforesaid under said franchise are subject to still further limitations, which are reserved to the state by section 2, of the bill of rights, and section 2, of article XIII, of the constitution. By the provisions of the first section noted, no special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted that may not be altered, revoked or repealed by the general assembly. Under the last quoted section it is provided that corporations may be formed under general laws, but all such laws may from time to time be altered or repealed.

Without attempting to cite the many decisions of both federal and state courts in which the scope and effect of the foregoing constitutional provisions are considered and applied to the franchise rights of corporations, in many of which cases said rights have been set aside or additional burdens have been imposed on the owners thereof, it is sufficient to say that in my judgment they amply sustain the right of the state through its legislature to impose the provisions of said section 161, supra, upon railway and other companies occupying public roads when said conditions exist as therein prescribed.

It further must be observed that these constitutional reservations above noted are as much a part of the franchises granted by the agents of the state as they would be if actually made a part thereof and written therein. Railroad Company v. Defiance, 52 O. S., 314. However, as before observed, regardless of the application of these constitutional provisions the police power of the state cannot be alienated, and the existence of this power must be preserved for the well being of organized society, and when exercised in a reasonable manner by the state cannot be said to impair the obligation of contracts.

While your letter does not state fully all the facts connected with the proposed improvement of the road in question, it appears from the correspondence attached thereto that this improvement is to be made by paving to a width of fifty feet a public road which is a continuation of High street in the city of Columbus, and that said improvement is to begin at the corporation line of said city and extend thence north 3810 feet. It is a matter of common knowledge that said High street is the main traffic thoroughfare of a great and growing city of more than 200,000 people, upon which street it is necessary to enforce, under police supervision, strict rules of traffic to protect the lives and the property of those who must go upon it. One of the rules of traffic so in force requires of travelers to use and keep upon the right-hand side of said street. Any other method of travel if permitted thereon would result in interminable confusion and danger. The improvement you contemplate requires the railway company to move its tracks to the center of said highway to permit the sides thereof to be open for travel in the same manner immediately outside of the city limits as within. This requirement undoubtedly is one of urgent and imperative public necessity, and as necessary and essential to the safety of the public generally as a system which provides it with pure water or sanitary sewerage.

To require a relocation of the tracks of the company in question in view of the great necessity of this improvement and the increased travel on said public highway, is not in my opinion an arbitrary or unreasonable exercise of the police power of the state as effected through the provisions of section 161, supra. That is to say, in view of the imperative necessity of this improvement, if the tracks of said company in their present location constitute an obstruction to travel in such public highway or interfere with the improvement you contemplate, said company may be required by you to relocate the same as provided under said section 161 and such limitation upon said company's rights under its franchise would not be unreasonable.

I am therefore of the opinion that under the provisions of said section 161, supra, if the conditions therein prescribed obtain in the case of this company, it may be compelled by you to relocate its tracks and move them to the center of the highway.

Inasmuch as the section quoted imposes this duty upon the railway company, it is not contemplated by the state that any of its funds or any county road fund shall be used in paying the cost of moving the track and the cost of erecting additional poles and, therefore, your second question must be answered in the negative. It might be observed further that no statutory authority ever existed or now exists whereby such expense could be paid from any road or other public fund.

An answer to a part of your third question is suggested by what has already been said. When said tracks are relocated, it becomes the duty of said company to pave between the rails and a distance of one foot on each side thereof. If said tracks are permitted to remain in their present location and the improvement contemplated by you is made, the company also is required to pave the space between its tracks and for one foot on each side thereof with the same material as that with which said highway is improved.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT OF WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—TO WHAT USE APPROPRIATIONS CAN BE MADE—RIGHT OF ELECTIVE FRANCHISE OF STUDENTS FROM OTHER STATES.

1. Appropriations made by the general assembly of this state for its educational institutions may not be used by said institutions for any purpose other than that for which said appropriations are made.

2. Students from other states attending such institutions for educational purposes only and having no habitation within this state other than such institutions which they are attending, and whose parents or families reside in another state, are not entitled to exercise the elective franchise nor to receive free scholarships limited by law to residents of this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1915.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Gilbert H. Jones, dean of Wilberforce university, under date of September 9, 1915, in which he makes the following inquiries:

> "1. I would like to know if it would be regarded as bad practice or contrary to state law for schools to use the funds appropriated for state educational institutions in campaigning by correspondence and canvassing by mail for students without the state of Ohio.
> "2. Have students twenty-one years of age or under, coming into the state for educational purposes and entering educational institutions within the state, either private or public, the right after a year's residence within the state as a student, whose parents, guardians or families are maintaining themselves in other states, the right to vote within the state in the one case, where eligible by age, and, in the next case, have they the right to free scholarships in state institutions as offered by the state to its own citizens and their children?"

Wilberforce university is not itself a state institution. There is, however, connected with Wilberforce university a "combined normal and industrial department (see sections 7975, et seq., G. C.), under the exclusive authority, direction, supervision and control of an independent board of trustees with their own treasurer. For the maintenance of this department a levy is made and an appropriation is carried in the current general appropriation bill, 106 Ohio Laws, 748, 823.

As I know of no authority in the trustees of Wilberforce university or the dean thereof to incur obligations against this appropriation, I am addressing this opinion to you and sending a copy thereof to the dean.

The provisions of the current appropriation bill covering the appropriation for the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce university are found in 106 Ohio Laws, pages 748 and 823. The various items specified therein for which an appropriation is made do not directly or by implication include the expenditure of any money so appropriated for the purposes named in the dean's first inquiry. No money may legally be expended for any purpose other than that for which it is appropriated. Any money spent in advertising this institution outside of the state, or in soliciting patronage from other states must come from sources other than from the appropriation made by the state for the benefit of its normal and industrial department.

In answer to the dean's second question: Students coming into this state from other states for educational purposes only and having no habitation within this state other than the educational institution which they are attending, and whose parents or families are living in another state, cannot vote in this state nor may they be considered as residents of this state within the provisions of section 7985, G. C. This section, I assume, covers the free scholarships to which the dean refers and provides that each senator and representative of the general assembly may designate one or more youth resident of his district, who shall be entitled to attend the normal and industrial department of this institution free of tuition. It is very clear that the case which the dean describes cannot be brought within the terms of this section.

I therefore conclude, as before stated, that students attending this institution from other states and having no habitation in this state other than this institution and there only for educational purposes, and whose parents or families reside in another state, are not entitled to exercise the elective franchise nor to receive free scholarships under section 7985, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION—PAYMENT OF CERTAIN BILLS FOR MAINTENANCE OF OHIO BUILDING, HELD LEGAL.

The payment of grocery bills and bills for decorating and music on special occasions at the Ohio State Pavilion at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is not a misappropriation of the appropriations made to the commission in charge thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1915.

HON. NEWTON M. MILLER, Directing Commissioner, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, Cal.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 13th, you wrote me as follows:

> "Upon presentation of vouchers for payment of grocery bills and decorating expenses for the maintenance of the Ohio pavilion at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, the auditor of state refuses to issue warrants on the treasurer for the amount of said vouchers which are properly certified to by the directing commissioner, claiming that same is a misappropriation of the funds in the treasury for the use of said commission, all of which is being expended according to the ideas and plans of the members of the board of commissioners toward the maintenance of the Ohio building and according to the application made for appropriation by the board of commissioners to the recent general assembly.
> "Will you, therefore, kindly render to us your opinion as to whether the commissioners can use the funds appropriafed for maintenance toward paying expenses connected with the running of the Ohio building as it was equipped and planned to be run?"

On my request for additional facts you wrote me on September 17th as follows:

> "I wish to add, by way of explanation to the application filed with you for an opinion, that the items for which the auditor of state refuses to draw warrant on treasurer are those contracted for provisions to be used in the state building where meals of the directing commissioner and the other members of the commission when in attendance at the exposition, also for the secretary of the commission, and such other officials as are quartered at the Ohio state building, are served.
> "This building was equipped under the former administration with rooms for such officials as are located there, with a dining room fully equipped and the building, which is constructed for the holding of such receptions as might be deemed proper by the board of commissioners to hold, and for keeping Ohio in the class to which she claims to belong socially. All the states represented at the exposition (some twenty-seven in number), are making the same use of their respective state buildings as Ohio is making of hers, and when receptions are held, such decorating is done as is necessary to make the building appear attractive, which decorating constitutes a part of the items to which the auditor takes exceptions. Music is furnished for such functions and bills for same constitute another class of items to which he excepts. The grocery bills to which the auditor excepts are not as much as would be the hotel charges which the commission would have to pay were we not keeping open the dining room at the building, and in the judgment of the directing commissioner, this is the most economical way the attending commissioners could be cared for, during their stay at the exposition. It is the plan that every member of the commission expected carried out, and the line of expenditures that we aimed to meet in having appropriated by the last general assembly $2,000 per month for maintenance of the building, not more than one-half of which appropriation have we used to date. In case such funds cannot be used in this line, the $79,000 building would be absolutely of no use and no receptions could be given in honor of the governor during his contemplated visit at the exposition; while every governor who has to this date visited the exposition has been given a reception in his honor as the representative of his state.

"All this was planned in the erection of the building and in the furnishing of same—reception halls, dancing halls, dining room, kitchen and eight sleeping rooms, all of which plans were presented to and approved by the former governor of the state, together with the other members of the building committee.

"It was the judgment of the members of the commission that an appropriation for maintenance should be made that the building might be kept open and used as all such state buildings are used, and thereupon asked for the appropriation for maintenance, which was made by the last general assembly."

On September 17th you further advised me that the force at the Ohio pavilion located on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific international exposition came about February 15, 1915, but were not served any meals until some time in June, 1915; that during half of June, all of July and the first week of August the necessary help were served meals without charge, the reason that no charge was made being because of the added duties and the necessity of their constant attendance at the pavilion during said time; that since the first week in August those attendants who were served meals at the Ohio pavilion have been charged uniformly the price of thirty cents per meal; that there has been no charge made for lodging of the employes who are lodged in the building, because the building itself was so arranged as to show the intention to take care of the lodging of such employes during their service at the Ohio pavilion. You further advised me that the only persons who are now receiving meals without charge at the Ohio pavilion are the cook, hostess and the matron, who does the buying for the department and keeps a record of the meals that are served to those who are charged therefor.

Upon examination in the auditor's office of the plans, specifications and profiles on file in said office as to the Ohio pavilion, I find a plan of the second floor of such building, and such plan discloses that on the second floor of the east side of said building there is provision made for a sitting room, a bed room, bath room, kitchen, dining room and reception room; and on the west side of said building provision is made for six bed rooms, a dining room and kitchen, a parlor and three bath rooms; and in the specifications, on page 44 thereof, cupboards are provided for in the kitchens and the necessary plumber's carpentry in the kitchens and the toilet rooms; on page 66 specifications for bath tubs and showers; and on page 67 specifications for kitchen sinks.

Advertisement for bids under these plans, specifications and estimates were called for on Thursday, June 4, 1914, and the specifications show that the same were approved on July 16, 1914, by the governor, secretary of state and auditor of state, and filed in the office of the auditor of state on said date. The plans were approved by the same officials on the same day and filed in the office of the auditor of state on the same day, as were the estimates of cost and bills of quantity.

The original legislation relative to the installing and maintaining of an exhibit of the products and resources of the state of Ohio at the Panama-Pacific international exposition is found in 102 O. L., 316. In such act the governor is appointed a commissioner for the purpose of installing, maintaining and exhibiting the products and resources of this state at the international exposition to be held in the city of San Francisco, in the year 1915, known as the Panama-Pacific international exposition; and as such commissioner he is given "full and exclusive charge and control of said exhibit, and the maintenance and installation thereof, with power to appoint and employ deputy commissioners, and all other persons necessary for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, upon such terms and salaries as he shall deem to be fair and reasonable." The governor was to receive no compensation for his services, but was to receive his actual expenses incurred in the discharge of his duties in connection with said exposition. Under section 2 of said act the sum of $2,000 was appropriated for the purpose of paying the expenses of the commissioner and deputy or commissioner appointed by him to select a location for a state building.

Said act was supplemented by an act found in 104 O. L., 4, wherein, under section 1 thereof, the governor was authorized to appoint a special commissioner as directing commissioner for Ohio at such exposition, and such directing commissioner was to have "such exclusive powers and duties with regard to such exposition as the governor may confer upon him, and receive such compensation for his services as the governor may prescribe."

Under section 2 thereof an appropriation of $100,000 was made for the purpose of erecting a state building in which to house and exhibit the state products, of securing complete and creditable display of the interests of the state at such international exposition and of paying the expenses and compensation of the board of deputy commissioners and the directing commissioner.

Under section 3 the board of deputy commissioners and directing commissioner were directed to make a report monthly to the governor, and at any other time that he may request in writing.

In house bill No. 53 (104 O. L., 215), making sundry appropriations, there was $25,000 appropriated "for the purpose of installing, maintaining and exhibiting the live stock, agricultural products, resources and opportunities of this state at the Panama-Pacific international exposition in San Francisco in the year 1915."

In house bill No. 314, passed at the recent session of the legislature and known as the short term appropriation bill (106 O. L., 66) there was appropriated to the Panama-Pacific exposition commissioner: First, personal service, which included the deputy commissioner and other attendants at such Ohio pavilion; second, unclassified personal service; and third, maintenance; under contract and open order service—F-9 general plant, $10,000; the total appropriation being $20,000.

And in house bill No. 701, known as the general appropriation bill (106 O. L., 708) a like appropriation was made, to wit, for personal service, including the deputy commissioner and other attendants; unclassified personal service; and $10,000 under contract and open order service, the total appropriation being $21,671.63.

The above statutes are all of the statutes on the subject of the Ohio exhibit at the Panama-Pacific international exposition.

Under the statutes above cited the governor or his directing commissioner were given full and exclusive charge and control of the exhibit and the maintenance and installation thereof. There is no restrictive language in this statute clearly defining exactly of what such exhibit and the maintenance thereof shall consist, other than the fact that a state building is to be erected in which to house and exhibit the products of the state.

In accordance with the authorization contained in the above statutes, the commissioners proceeded to cause to be prepared plans and specifications for the state building for which the appropriation of $100,000 was made. A careful examination of said plans and specifications will disclose that there was no provision made whatever for any exhibit of the "state's products," the only provision being two relic rooms, one on either side of said building, to house such relics as the commissioners might be able to secure for exhibition in such building. In fact it is clearly shown by the plans and specifications that the Ohio state pavilion was to be used solely as an administrative building and for such social duties as might be cast upon the commissioners during the exposition proper.

It appears that the former governor and secretary of state and the present auditor of state duly approved the plans and specifications for the Ohio pavilion at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, and included in such plans were rooms designated on such plans as bed rooms, kitchens and bath rooms. Therefore, it would seem that it was the intention at that time that there should be bed rooms in said Ohio pavilion and also kitchens and dining rooms. This is presumed to have been known to the legislature when making its appropriations.

Upon request of the budget commissioner as to his understanding of the $10,000 appropriated for contract and open order service, said commissioner has advised me as follows:

> "The appropriation for the Panama-Pacific exposition commissioner was requested in lump sum both in H. B. 314 and 701, because it was alleged that no one could foresee the nature of the expenditures to which this department would be subjected. The budget commissioner and the house finance committee however, were anxious to make all the appropriations conform to the budget scheme and insisted that the salaries be specified. This was done in so far as it was possible at that time to foresee them but a lump sum was requested for any additional personal service that might be needed. In order to make the appropriation available for any proper expenditures an allowance was made under A-3 for additional personal service because that classification was more flexible than either of the others.
> "For the same reason the entire amount for maintenance was put under general plant service—F-9. The committee had no intention of embarrassing the exposition commissioner in any way but considered that by putting the entire sum under the most flexible item in the maintenance classification that it could be used for all legitimate purposes connected with the exposition."

Practically all of the employes connected with the Ohio pavilion are employes under the civil service law of 1913. The then civil service commission issued a bulletin calling for candidates for the various positions. Paragraph 3 thereof states:

> "That each appointee will pay his own transportation and other expenses out of salary."

This bulletin called for the position of hostess, but it is my understanding that subsequently the position of hostess was withdrawn from those in the classified service. The bulletin also called for a matron, but stated as follows:

"(Room furnished)" and also as to the maid. There was no such statement relative to the other employes.

An examination at the governor's office discloses that the salary of the secretary was fixed at $1,800 and expenses.

We therefore have this situation: The building was built to contain bed rooms, kitchens and dining rooms; the commissioners, including the governor, are entitled to their expenses; the secretary is entitled to his expenses; the matron and maid are entitled to have their rooms furnished to them. The legislature appropriated the aggregate sum of $20,000 under "general plant service" without any specific designation as to how the money was to be expended; and also appropriated certain moneys for "unclassified service," which could readily be construed to include a cook. It could not have been the intention of the deputy commissioners or the former directing commissioner that there was to be a building erected at the Panama-Pacific international exposition containing bed rooms, kitchens and dining rooms but that the same were not to be used. It must have been their intention in so providing for the same that they were to be used, and it must also have been so understood by the building commission, as then composed, when it approved of the plans and specifications for such building. It must also have been the intention of the legislature that the building was to be operated as built when it made the appropriations for general plant service, which intention must have been concurred in by the present auditor of state, for the following reason:

You state in your letter that the auditor of state has questioned the right to incur grocery bills, which, of course, must question the right to operate the kitchens and dining rooms provided for in the Ohio state pavilion according to the plans and specifications on file. I understand from your letter that you found the said building entirely equipped with kitchen utensils and equipment and proper dining room furniture and equipment, all of which has been paid for by the state of Ohio upon warrant of the auditor of state on the treasurer of state.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that there is authority in law for the operating of the kitchens and dining rooms and that the expenses therefor should be paid out of the appropriations for general plant service, at least for those who are entitled to their expenses while serving the state at such building.

It appears that there was a time during which those attendants who were not entitled to their expenses received meals free of charge, but, as has been explained by you, the only time that occurred was when it was necessary that certain attendants be constantly in attendance because of the crowds that had to be handled during such time, and I believe that it was good sound business policy to allow those attendants to take their meals without charge at said building during the "rush season" rather than to be required to employ others to do their work while they were away at their meals, and that it is good business policy to now allow said attendants to take their meals in the said pavilion, they paying a price fixed by the commissioner therefor.

Now in regard to the decorations and music furnished at the pavilion: From an examination of the first floor plan of such pavilion, as the same is on file in the office of the auditor of state, it appears that the only rooms that were provided for outside of the large lobby and rotunda were men's and women's reception rooms, a private office, two relic rooms and a large assembly room. The fact that there was an assembly room provided for clearly, as I view it, indicates that it was the intention of the commissioners at the time said plans were prepared—which by the approval of the plans by the building commission was concurred in by them—that the building should be used for functions; and the legislature having appropriated the sum of $20,000 toward the maintenance of said building generally, it must be assumed to have concurred in the intention of the planners of such building, that the state of Ohio should take its share in showing hospitality, not only to its own citizens who attended at such exposition, but also to the citizens of her sister states, and that there would be receptions held in such building in honor of the distinguished citizens both of her own state and of sister states who attended such exposition.

The legislature having appropriated said $20,000 generally, without specifying exactly as to how such money should be expended, I am of the opinion that the directing commissioner or the other commissioners can authorize the expenditure of moneys out of such fund for such purposes, not exceeding, of course, the total amount of the appropriation.

I am informed that the state of Ohio has erected various buildings at the Buffalo, Chicago, St. Louis and Jamestown expositions, and that said buildings have been operated in the same manner as the Ohio pavilion at the Panama-Pacific international exposition is being operated, and the presumption is, therefore, that the legislature in providing such a building intended that the use of such building should be practically the same as was the use of the former buildings.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the vouchers presented by you for the expenses hereinbefore commented upon are not a misappropriation of the funds for the use of said commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—BUCKEYE CORN SPECIAL TOURS—HOW CONDUCTED.

The manner and method of conducting the Buckeye Corn Special Tours must be determined by the board of agriculture, as the same are not provided for by statutory law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1915.

The Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of September 20, 1915, in which you submit for my consideration a plan for handling this year's tour of the successful candidates in what is known as the Boys' Corn Growing Contest in this state. The plan proposed is suggested in a letter to you from Mr. T. P. Riddle, director of the bureau of junior contests, and quoting from his letter is as follows:

> "I respectfully recommend the following plan for handling this year's tour. Secure some person, who is not an employe of the state, to agree to handle the financial end of the tour. Require of that person that he deliver a certain service at a certain cost. Require no accounting other than the delivery of that service at that cost. Protect the state by a bond. The service should equal the service of last year's tour and the cost should not be increased materially. I believe some public-spirited citizen, financially responsible, can be secured to assume this responsibility mainly for the honor involved. If such a person cannot be secured, and it becomes necessary for me to handle it, I hope some arrangement can be made so that I shall be relieved from being responsible for everything except delivering a certain service at a certain cost. The question of the legality of handling the tour on such a plan should be determined.''

The reason for suggesting the plan aforesaid is to obviate the necessity of creating a separate acount of each candidate's expenses, which involves a great clerical task and accompanying expense on the part of the board of agriculture.

The task of supervising, directing and conducting the annual tour, aforesaid, is not provided for or covered by any statutory law of this state. It is entirely voluntary on the part of the board of agriculture and is prompted by the desire to encourage and promote modern methods of agriculture and interest therein among the rural youth of the state. It is wholly gratuitous on the part of said board, and the tour itself involves no expense to the state other than the personal expense of its representatives in charge thereof. As I understand it, the expense of each successful candidate is borne by local parties in his county, which expense is paid in the first instance to said board and by it expended in his behalf. The relation, therefore, existing between said board and those who furnish the expenses of each candidate who takes the tour, is a fiduciary one and subject only to the test of a faithful economical and honest administration of the trust imposed. Any scheme or plan meeting these requirements may be followed. If the plan, as suggested above, in the judgment of said board offers any advantages over the old system, I know of no legal obstacle or objection to its adoption.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

CORPORATION—CERTIFICATE OF AMENDMENT OF ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK BY ISSUANCE OF PREFERRED STOCK—MAY DO SO DEFINING AMOUNT AND CLASSES OF ITS STOCK, CREATING DESIGNATIONS, PREFERENCES AND VOTING POWERS AND PROVIDING FOR REDEMPTION OF ITS PREFERRED STOCK.

A corporation, which has filed a certificate showing an increase of its capital stock by the issuance of preferred stock, may thereafter amend its articles of incorporation defining the amount and classes of its stock, creating designations, preferences and voting powers or restrictions or qualifications thereof, and providing for the redemption of its preferred stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 17, 1915, requesting my opinion as follows:

''We enclose herewith uncanceled revenue stamp, check for five dollars, letter received from Hine, Kennedy & Manchester, attorneys at law, of Youngstown, Ohio, and proposed certificate of amendment of articles of incorporation of THE OHIO HOTEL OPERATING COMPANY, and would like your earliest opinion on the question raised in the enclosed letter.''

I also quote in full the letter of Messrs. Hine, Kennedy & Manchester, referred to in your letter, as the same contains a statement of the facts which occasion your request for my interpretation of the law:

''YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, Sept. 15, 1915.

''HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

''DEAR SIR:—

''IN RE: THE OHIO HOTEL OPERATING COMPANY.

''In reply to our letter of September 11th, we have received from you copy of portion of opinion of Edward C. Turner, attorney general, in relation to fee chargeable against Columbia Planter Company, together with the original certificate of amendment, check and revenue stamp forwarded to you. We have read the portion of opinion which you sent and agree with the conclusion of the attorney general on the point covered thereby, viz.: that the secretary of state is not entitled to charge a double fee for filing certificate of increase of stock, on the theory that an increase of stock amounts to an amendment of the articles of incorporation.

''That, however, is not the question raised in the present matter. The question raised by the tender of this certificate for filing is, 'should a corporation, after increasing its stock by preferred stock, in accordance with General Code, section 8699, amend its articles of incorporation so as to show the preference in the articles of incorporation?'

''General Code, section 8668, provides:

'When the capital stock is to be both common and preferred, it may be provided in the articles of incorporation that the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to yearly dividends of not more than eight per cent., payable quarterly, half yearly, or yearly out of the surplus profits of the company each year in preference to all other stockholders. Such dividends also may be made cumulative.'

''General Code, section 8669, provides:

'A corporation issuing both common and preferred stock may create designations, preferences and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof, in the certificate of incorporation, and if desired, preferred stock may be made subject to redemption at not less than par, at a fixed time and price, to be expressed in the stock certificates thereof.'

''As stated in our previous letter, we have made it our uniform practice, which, prior to this time, has not been questioned in the office of the secretary of state, to amend the articles of incorporation after an increase of stock so as to show the changed capitalization, for two reasons:

"(1.) General Code, sections 8668 and 8669, above quoted, designate the articles of incorporation as the proper place to show the preferences therein mentioned.

"(2.) In the original organization of a corporation, the articles of incorporation are the proper place for defining the amount and classes of stock, and any preferences which may be created; it would seem to be logical that if the stock be increased, the articles of incorporation should be amended to show the true condition of the stock.

"We are not aware that the attorney general has ever passed upon this question. Before abandoning a practice which we have regarded as an essential precaution in connection with increases of stock, we feel that this question should, if not judicially passed upon by the courts, be passed upon by the attorney-general.

"We are therefore returning certificate of amendment, check covering filing fee in the sum of $5.00, and war revenue stamp, with the request that if, after reading the above explanation of our position, you still consider the certificate not entitled to record, the same may be referred to the attorney general for opinion. In that connection the attorney general should be advised that a certificate has been already accepted and filed by you showing the increase of stock in question. If you will kindly refer this matter to the department of the attorney general it will greatly oblige.

"Yours very truly,

"HINE, KENNEDY & MANCHESTER."

The original articles of incorporation of The Ohio Hotel Operating Company are not before me, but I assume, for the purpose of answering your question, that the only material change sought to be made by the proposed certificate of amendment is in the creation of "designations, preferences and voting powers" and making provision for the redemption of its preferred stock.

Stated briefly, the question presented is whether a corporation, which under section 8669, of the General Code, has increased its capital stock by the issuance of preferred stock, and which has filed a certificate to that effect with the secretary of state, may also amend its original articles of incorporation so that the same shall create a preference in the payment of dividends and distribution of assets to preferred stockholders, confer voting powers upon such preferred stock and provide for its redemption.

Messrs. Hine, Kennedy & Manchester, in their letter above quoted, have correctly stated that in my opinion to you of August 30, 1915 (opinion No. 783), I did not pass upon the question here presented, but only advised you that the secretary of state is not authorized to charge a double fee for filing a certificate of increase of capital stock of a corporation upon the theory that such certificate is also an amendment of the articles of incorporation.

Section 8719, of the General Code, relative to the amendment by a corporation of its articles of incorporation, so far as applicable, is as follows:

"A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state, may amend its articles of incorporation as follows: * * *

"4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which might lawfully have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, or the purpose of its original organization substantially changed * * *."

Section 8668, of the General Code, which is quoted in the letter of Messrs. Hine, Kennedy & Manchester, herein copied, authorizes a corporation which has both common and preferred stock to make provision in its articles of incorporation for the preferential payment of dividends to its preferred stockholders.

Section 8669, of the General Code, also quoted in the letter of Messrs. Hine, Kennedy & Manchester, authorizes such corporations to give other preferences, etc., to holders of preferred stock, and to make provision for the redemption of such stock.

The designation, preferences, etc., which The Ohio Hotel Operating Company seeks to confer upon the holders of its preferred stock by the certificate of amendment presented are such as the company's original articles of incorporation might have contained, if the original stock issue had consisted of both common and preferred stock.

Since the company has now increased its capital stock by the issuance of preferred stock, it follows that it may now amend its original articles of incorporation defining the relative standing of its common and preferred stock under authority of paragraph 4, of section 8719, of the General Code, above quoted.

I therefore advise that The Ohio Hotel Operating Company may amend its articles of incorporation in the manner set forth in its certificates therefor, and that such certificates should be received and recorded by you in the manner provided by law.

Your communication does not raise the question, and I deem it here unnecessary to determine whether a corporation which has increased its capital stock by the issuance of preferred stock, must necessarily amend its articles of incorporation in order to make provision for the relative standing of its common and preferred stock in the payment of dividends, the distribution of assets, and the power to vote, etc., or whether the same result may be accomplished by the insertion of such provision or provisions in the certificate of such increase of capital stock filed with the secretary of state.

I am returning herewith the uncancelled revenue stamp, the check for five dollars, the letter from Messrs. Hine, Kennedy & Manchester and the proposed articles of incorporation, which were attached to your communication.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION — SECRETARY — APPOINTMENT MUST BE MADE FROM THREE HIGHEST CANDIDATES ON ELIGIBLE LIST.

The appointment of a secretary of the state civil service commission, as provided by section 486-5, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 402, must be made from the three highest candidates on the eligible list as prepared by said commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of September 20, 1915, which is as follows:

"Section 486-5, of the civil service law of Ohio, provides that

'The commission shall appoint from an eligible list, to be prepared by said commission within thirty days after its appointment, a secretary, who shall be ex-officio chief examiner, etc., etc.'

"Query: Is this commission compelled to select its secretary from one of the three highest on the eligible list, or can it make the selection from the list as a whole?"

While the provisions quoted are applicable only to the appointment of a secretary of your commission, they cannot be said to be wholly special for the conclusive reason that resort must be had to other and general provisions of the civil service law to put them into effect. In other words, the commission must first prepare an eligible list. No provision being made in the section above quoted for an eligible list, resort must be had to the general provisions of the law whereby such list may be prepared. These provisions are found in section 486-12, of the civil service law.

Being thus compelled to adopt the plan of the general law to secure an eligible list, it then becomes important to determine whether further action is not also confined to the remaining provisions of the general law as found in section 486-13, which limits the selection to the three highest candidates on said list. It is apparent that this method may be followed and the appointment yet made from an eligible list as required by the section you quote. If this method is not followed, the appointment may then be made from the whole list.

Under these circumstances it is proper to determine if possible the legislative intent and purpose in making provision for the selection from an eligible list. By the provisions of paragraph 8, of section 486-8, of said civil service law, the secretaries of civil service commissions are specifically excepted from the list of secretaries placed by the provisions of said paragraph in the unclassified service. When this exception is considered in connection with the provisions of the section you quote, it is manifest that said provisions were made for only one purpose, viz., to unalterably place the position of secretary of your commission within the classified service. This may have been done to anticipate and prevent any attempt or action by the commission to remove its secretary from the classified service under any general authority or power granted to it by other provisions of the law.

This being so, the full purpose of the law as it appears in the section you quote is accomplished when the position is confined to the classified service, and it necessarily follows that there is no reason or ground for abrogating any of the general provisions of the law in the further stages of the transaction.

I am therefore of the opinion that the legislature did not intend in the use of the language quoted to do more than confine the position to the classified service, and that as to the other requirements of the appointment the provisions of the general law must obtain, and that the selection must be made from the three highest candidates on said eligible list and cannot be made from the whole list.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BALLOT—NAMES OF INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICES—MUST BE PLACED IN LIST TO RIGHT OF ALL PARTY TICKETS IN SUCH ORDER AS SECRETARY OF STATE DIRECTS—SUCH LIST SHOULD BE UNDER NO PARTY NAME NOR BE CIRCLED AS PARTY TICKETS.

Names of independent candidates for council, auditor, treasurer and mayor in cities may be placed upon the ballot in lists to the right of party tickets in the order designated by the secretary of state, without party or political designation, but no circle may be placed above any such list of independent candidates.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 16, 1915, as follows :

> "In anticipation of questions which will arise concerning the matter of ballots for the November election, I desire your opinion concerning the make-up of ballots for independent candidates.
> "In this city there is a regular nominated republican ticket, also a democratic ticket, and there have been filed individual petitions by candidates seeking to run as independent, some for council, auditor, treasurer and one for mayor.
> "What I desire to know, is whether there is any construction for the placing of these independent candidates in one column on the ballot when they have not filed their petitions either jointly or under any party or independent designation. If my opinion is correct these names must appear on the ballot for the different offices in separate positions on the ballots and not a single column without any designation."

I understand from your communication that all candidates about whom you inquire have been severally nominated by petitions without seeking to have their names placed upon the ballot under party or other political designations, as authorized by sections 4996, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, et seq., and are independent candidates, under the provision of section 5003, G. C., that "candidates nominated by petition without distinctive appellations shall be certified as independent candidates."

Section 5016, G. C., provides:

> "Except as in this chapter provided, the names of all candidates to be voted for on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November shall be placed upon the same ballot."

It is sufficient to here observe that candidates for the municipal offices named in your letter do not come within the exceptions in this section referred to.

A careful examination of the statutes fails to disclose a prescribed form for placing the names of the independent candidates for those offices referred to by you upon the ballot other than that found in section 5018, G. C., 104 O. L., 11, which provides:

> "In general the arrangement of the ballot shall conform as nearly as practicable to the plan hereinafter given. The tickets of the various political parties shall be printed in parallel columns headed by the chosen device upon a shaded background, and the party names in such order as the secretary of state directs, precedence being given to the political party which held the highest number of votes for governor at the next preceding November election, and so on. The tickets, or lists, of candidates nominated by nomination papers, with their party names or designations, shall be printed at the right of and parallel with the tickets of political parties in such order as the secretary of state directs, precedence being given to the order herein prescribed for party tickets. No ticket or list of candidates containing more candidates for any office than are to be elected shall be printed under the name of any party.''

From the provisions of this section it would seem clear that all candidates nominated by nomination papers which are not placed upon tickets under their party names or designations, should be placed in lists upon the ballot to the right of party tickets in the order designated by the secretary of state.

I am therefore of opinion that the names of independent candidates for the municipal offices named in your inquiry should be placed in a list to the right of all party tickets upon the ballot, in such order as the secretary of state directs, giving to such list as nearly the form of the party tickets as practicable, except that such list should be under no party name or designation nor should there be placed over the same any circle as provided for party tickets.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE LIQUOR LICENSING BOARD—STATE AND COUNTY LICENSING COMMISSIONERS PROCURING AND CAUSING REFERENDUM PETITION TO BE CIRCULATED ON McDERMOTT LAW—PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED IN MAKING FORMAL CHARGES.

To give to the state liquor licensing board jurisdiction under section 1261-25, G. C., 103 O. L., 219, there should be filed with it charges in writing, duly signed by a citizen of the state, setting forth facts which in contemplation of law constitute cause for removal, a certified copy of which charges, together with a notice of the time and place of hearing, not earlier than thirty days subsequent to the date of service thereof, should be served personally upon the members of the county board against whom such charges are made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 21, 1915, as follows:

''We enclose herewith a copy of a report made to the governor by Messrs. J. H. Secrest and C. A. Reid, appointed by the governor to investigate the activities of state and county licensing commissioners in procuring and causing a referendum petition to be circulated and signed on the McDermott law.

''The board desires to be advised of the formal charges. By whom and in what manner are they to be made to constitute a legal notice for a hearing in each individual case?''

The enclosed copy of report referred to by you is as follows:

"Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 17, 1915.

"Hon. Frank B. Willis, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—The undersigned having been heretofore appointed by you to investigate the activities of state and county licensing officials in procuring a referendum petition to be circulated, signed and filed with the secretary of state on what is known as the 'McDermott liquor license law,' beg leave to submit the following report of our investigations to this date:

"We find that the following members of county licensing boards on or about the twenty-fifth day of August, 1915, and thereafter until the first day of September, 1915, were actively engaged in circulating petitions for such referendum election, or in procuring licensees engaged in the saloon business or other persons to circulate and procure signatures of voters to such petitions:

"D. F. Dunlavy, Ashtabula county.
"Frank Lowther, Athens county,
"Robert T. Michener, Belmont county.
"Frank Pigman, Crawford county.
"Bernard H. Richter, Darke county.
"Frank H. Herman, Huron county.
"John F. Nolan, Jefferson county.
"Harry B. Galbraith, Jefferson county.
"W. D. Morrissey, Madison county.
"E. J. Leist, Pickaway county.
"William Klipstine, Shelby county.
"Dr. S. B. McGuire, Tuscarawas county.
"A. T. Paige, Summit county.

"We beg to report that other members of county licensing boards are under investigation, the result of which has not been fully determined and which will be reported at a later date.

"Respectfully submitted,
"(Signed) J. H. SECREST,
"C. A. REID."

Your inquiry involves a consideration of section 1261-25, G. C., 103 O. L., 219, which provides as follows:

> "Any county license commissioner may be removed by the state board in case of misconduct in office, bribery, incompetency, any gross neglect of duty or gross immorality, upon a hearing, thirty days' notice having been given to the commissioner whose removal is considered, as well as to the attorney general, who may attend the hearing and represent the state; and the decision of the state board shall be final."

The first step essential to conferring jurisdiction upon the state liquor licensing board in a proceeding under authority of the above quoted statute, is the filing with the board of written charges against the member of the county board upon the ground of either, any number or all of the following: Misconduct in office, bribery, incompetency, gross neglect of duty or gross immorality. These charges or complaints should be signed by the person making the same. Such complaints may be properly made by any citizen of the state of Ohio, and I may say, in answer to your personal suggestion, that if such charges or complaints are subscribed by a state liquor license inspector, or any other employe of the state liquor licensing board, the same will be in that respect sufficient. The charges or complaint should embody facts which, in judgment of law, constitute one or more of the above mentioned statutory grounds for removal. A copy of said charges, certified by the state board as a true copy, should be served personally upon the member of the county board against whom such complaint or charge is made, by some person designated by the state board, and such person should make return to the state board showing personal service of the charges upon the accused member of the county board. It will not be sufficient that the written charges simply allege that the member is or has been guilty of misconduct in office, bribery, incompetency, gross neglect of duty or gross immorality. The charges should contain a recital of facts which, in contemplation of law, constitute one or more of these statutory grounds.

Accompanying the charges should be a notice from the state liquor licensing board, stating the time when and place where the hearing of said complaint will be had, such time of hearing being at least thirty days after the date of service of such notice. The service of said notice should be made upon the person charged in the complaint personally and return of said service of notice made to the state liquor licensing board by the person making service thereof, in the same manner as in case of service and return of the copies of the charges, or a copy of such charges may be properly incorporated in the notice. The service of such notice will be sufficient if forwarded by the state board to the sheriff of the county in which the member of the county licensing board resides against whom such charges or complaint is made, and by the sheriff served personally upon the member so charged, which facts of personal service should be shown by the return of the sheriff made to the state licensing board.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—WHEN PUBLIC UTILITY IN FORMER YEARS MADE INCOMPLETE STATEMENT OF ITS TAXABLE PROPERTY TO TAX COMMISSION OF OHIO THEN LATER ACQUAINTED COMMISSION WITH ALL FACTS—WHEN VALUATION ON INCOMPLETE STATEMENT PLACED ON PROPERTY BY COMMISSION IS FINAL—PROPERTY OF THE CINCINNATI, NEWPORT AND COVINGTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

Where a public utility in former years made an incomplete statement of its taxable property in its report to the tax commission of Ohio, but subsequently acquainted the tax commission with all the facts relative to the omitted property, and the commission, having before it such incomplete statement of facts, places a valuation upon the property of the utility for such years, such valuation, if made in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon the commission by law, and upon the basis of accurate and correct knowledge of the facts, is final and no action may be taken by the tax commission, under section 5461, G. C., on the theory of placing omitted property on the duplicate even though the commissioners' action may have been based upon erroneous legal principles as to the situs of certain property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

The Honorable Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On June 2, 1915, you transmitted to me the following documents:

A letter to the tax commission from Messrs. Ernst, Cassatt & Cottle, of Cincinnati, Ohio, representing the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company.

A letter of Robert S. Alcorn written to the commission in the capacity of a taxpayer.

A transcript of a hearing held on August 22, 1911, before the tax commission in the matter of the valuation of the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company.

The original report of the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company for the year 1913.

Referring to all these documents you state that the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Ohio, made reports to the tax commission for the years 1911-1914 inclusive, in which it listed as stocks owned by it and situated outside of Ohio, certain shares of stock of certain Kentucky street railroad companies aggregating in value, as listed, $825,000.00. It appears that the property of the company has been valued as an entirety at $360,000.00 for each of the above mentioned years.

The complaint is now made that the stocks above mentioned are taxable to the company in Ohio, their situs being at the company's principal place of business in Cincinnati, Ohio, regardless of where they are held and regardless, too, of whether or not they are pledged or mortgaged. It being obvious that the value of the stock is in excess of the value of the entire property of the company in Ohio, as determined by the commission, for the years mentioned, it is assumed that the commission has not valued the stocks for taxation nor considered them in arriving at the total value of the property of the company for any of the years named, and that therefore the commission should proceed, under the power which it has and may exercise in a proper case, to ascertain the true value of the stocks in question, for the years named, and certify such ascertained amount to the auditor of Hamilton county as property omitted from the tax duplicates of such years.

You have asked me to go over the facts of the case as disclosed by the papers submitted, and to advise the commission as to whether or not it has the power to make the inquiries and corrections which it is asked to make in the premises.

The question which I shall consider is as to whether or not the commission has the power to proceed at all in the premises. I shall not consider the question as to whether or not the stocks in question are taxable in Ohio, though I may say in passing that the facts disclosed by the papers before me show rather conclusively that they are taxable in Ohio—that is, if they were held by an ordinary Ohio corporation other than a railroad company or street railroad company operating an interstate line, they would be taxable in Ohio and should be listed and valued for taxation in Ohio.

The section of the General Code under which the commission must act, if it acts at all, is section 5461. The section is very lengthy and part of its provisions do not apply to property taxation. The following portions of it will therefore be sufficient for present purposes:

> "When a public utility * * * fails to make any report or furnish any statement, which it is required to make or furnish, to the commission * * * or fails to report a part or all of its taxable property, or report the same, or part thereof, according to its true value in money, the commission shall ascertain, as nearly as practicable the * * * taxable property, or omitted part of the same, or such as was not reported according to its true value in money, that should have been reported or returned by such public utility * * * and certify * * * the value of such property, so ascertained, as required in this act, with respect to its * * * property of public utilities * * *. * * * The power and duty of the commission, above provided for, shall extend to preceding years in such manner as that the commission shall, for such years or years preceding the year in which the inquiries are made, and omissions ascertained, certify such omitted amounts so ascertained, as required in this act, with respect to such companies, in which event such omitted amounts shall be taxed at the rate of taxation belonging to the year or years in which the failure or omission occurred, in the case of property * * *; provided, however, that the power and duty of the commission with respect to property shall extend only to the five years next preceding the year in which such inquiries and corrections are made, and not in any event prior to the year 1911, except where no property of a company has been returned or assessed in any such year or years."

In an academic sense the commission may be said to have similar powers under the joint operation of sections 5399, 5400 and 1465-3 of the General Code, the effect of which may be described without quoting them, as follows:

Street, suburban and interurban railroad companies were formerly valued by county auditors or boards of auditors. When the tax commission act of 1910 was passed a section was inserted therein conferring upon the tax commission "all powers and duties and privileges" possessed by any county officer or board, the powers and duties of which were conferred upon the commission. One of the powers and duties formerly imposed upon the county auditor or board of auditors, in the assessment of such property, was the power to make corrections and list and value omitted property for previous years, this power being possessed, under section 5399 and section 5400, G. C. When tax commission act of 1911 was passed revising that of 1910, a similar provision, preserving the powers and duties of the tax commission, thus originally devolving upon it, was made therein and has become section 1465-3, G. C.

However, an examination of section 5399 shows that the circumstances under which revisions and corrections may be made are the same as those which must exist in order to authorize such revision and correction under section 5461.

I shall quote enough of section 5399 to establish this conclusion:

> "If any person required to list property, or make a return thereof for taxation * * * fails to make a return or statement, or * * * makes a return or statement of only a portion of his taxable property, and fails to make a return as to the remainder thereof, or if he fails to return his taxable property or part thereof, according to the true value in money * * * the county auditor * * * shall * * *."

It will be observed that this language is substantially the equivalent of that found in section 5461. Therefore, for practical purposes section 5461 may be looked upon as the sole source of the authority of the commission to make additions to the tax duplicate on account of property omitted in previous years and which should have been valued by it. Analyzing the section it appears that in order to support any action of the commission it must appear to the commission that:

(1) The public utility has failed to make any report or furnish any statement which it is required to make; or that

(2) It has made a return or statement of a portion only of its taxable property and has failed to report the remainder; or that

(3) It has reported any part of its property at an incorrect valuation.

Your statement shows that the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company made reports in each of the years in controversy. I take it also from your statement that the commission is not at the present time interested in the question of value, although statements submitted to the commission would tend to show that the stocks in question are worth much more than the $825,000.00 at which they were listed by the company. That is to say, the jurisdiction of the commission is sought to be invoked rather on the ground that these stocks have not been taxed at all than on the ground that they have been listed and taxed, but not at their true value in money.

This ground of action, on the part of the commission, may be a proper one in the present case, but for the sake of convenience its consideration may be passed.

The second ground of action by the commission, above defined, remains to be considered. Did the company, in any of the years in controversy, "fail to report a part * * * of its taxable property?"

The company mentioned the property in its report, to be sure. Your statement is that the 1913 report of the company, the original of which is before me, is, in this particular, the same as that of the company for the other years in controversy. This report shows the existence of these stocks and their ownership by the company. It also shows the valuation placed by the company thereon. However, this property is not reported as "taxable property." It is listed as "stocks owned outside of Ohio," i. e., as stocks not taxable in Ohio. Therefore, on the face of the report, and assuming as I have done that the stocks are taxable in Ohio, the company did not report this part of its "taxable property" because it reported the property as situated outside of Ohio and therefore not as "taxable property."

But though this must be admitted to be so, counsel for the company assert that the commission has no power to act in the premises for the following reasons, as stated in the letter of Messrs. Ernst, Cassatt & Cottle, above referred to:

> "(1) Under the head of 'personal property—stocks owned' * * * the stocks are * * * enumerated and their par value given. While they are listed in the column headed 'outside of Ohio' that could only mean that the companies were incorporated outside of Ohio and not that the stocks had a situs outside of Ohio, because it appears from page 5 of the report that the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Company was an Ohio corporation and any stocks owned by it would necessarily have a situs in Ohio."

(2) Notwithstanding the erroneous listing of these stocks by the company in its report, the representative of the company, it is claimed, appeared before the commission in 1911 and explained very fully the manner in which the company acquired legal title to them and the capacity in which that title was then being held. The commission being a continuous body, it is assumed that the notice then acquired by the commission is sufficient to give it presumptive knowledge of the true facts as claimed by the company for its purposes in making the assessments in the three subsequent years involved. It is therefore argued that the commission, having actual knowledge as to one year and presumptive knowledge as to the succeeding years, as to the existence of the stocks in question and of the attendant facts and circumstances relating to them, must have taken such facts and circumstances into account in arriving at the valuation of $360,000.00, which was the value at which the property was assessed for each of the years in question; that therefore the stocks in reality have been assessed for taxation for the years in question; and that the commission is precluded thereby from reopening the question now and assessing this particular property on the theory that it was omitted from the tax duplicate for the preceding years.

The first of these two contentions is not worthy of serious consideration. Without discussing at large the question as to whether or not, under proper circumstances, shares of stocks may acquire a situs other than at the domicile or residence of their owner, it is sufficient to observe that this point rests upon mere inference, and that the company, which has reported property as situated outside of Ohio, will not be heard to claim that its report is equivalent to a report that the property is in Ohio, because in contemplation of law it must have been in Ohio when other facts shown on the report are taken into consideration. If the commission had been misled by the erroneous listing of these stocks in the manner above described, I would not hesitate to advise, without further consideration, that even though it might be asserted that the commission ought to have known that the listing was erroneous, and ought thereby to have discovered immediately that the property was taxable in Ohio, the failure of the commission to make such a discovery would not defeat its right to assess such property for past years as omitted property, the company being originally at fault in the premises. As a matter of fact, under statutes like section 5461, it is no defense to a proceeding to assess property omitted in previous years, that the assessing officer, by the exercise of reasonable diligence in such preceding years, could have discovered the omission. Such a defense would be wholly without merit because the theory of the assessment of omitted property is merely to place that on the duplicate which ought to have been there originally; the public utility in this instance is not required to pay any more taxes than it would have paid had a proper assessment been made in the first instance, no penalty being chargeable.

The second question presents a mixed question of fact and law. I shall state the law as I understand it.

Under statutes like sections 5399 and 5461, the following rule has been laid down by the courts:

Where the assessing officer, with full knowledge of the facts and acting within the scope of his jurisdiction or power, has determined a question with the authority to determine which the law has invested him, and such determination is erroneous and operates so as to produce a smaller assessment than would have been arrived at had his determination been correct, he has nevertheless assessed the property, and his assessment can be corrected only by a board or officer vested with authority to correct the assessment as such; and in such event the same officer or another officer may not add to the assessment on the theory that any property has been omitted from taxation.

Some of the Ohio cases embodying this rule are as follows:

In State ex rel. Guilbert v. Akins, 63 O. S., 182, it was held that where a county auditor had, in former years, permitted stockholders in national or state banks to deduct their indebtedness from the value of their respective shares, such deduction could not be placed upon the duplicate as an omission, and the taxes collected thereon. This case is perhaps not strictly in point, but it illustrates one application of the rule.

In State v. Pipe Line Company, 14 N. P. n. s. 401 it appeared that the state board of appraisers and assessors, under what was known as the Cole law, had determined the amount of the gross receipts of the defendant company for the year 1909, upon a report showing aggregate gross receipts in excess of the amount so determined by the board, the deduction being due to a claim asserted by the company to the effect that the excess receipts could not lawfully be made the basis of the excise tax. Subsequently the auditor of state sought to reverse the ruling and charge the company with omitted taxes. In a suit brought to enforce the collection of such omitted taxes the company, as a defense, relied in part upon the former determination of the board of appraisers and assessors. Bigger, J., in discussing this defense used the following language at pages 410, et seq.:

> "It is a well established principle of law upon the subject of the right of taxing officers and boards to amend and correct an assessment after it has been made and placed in the hands of the officer charged with its collection that they are without power or authority to do so, unless such power is expressly conferred by statute.
> "This rule seems to be well settled, and I find no authority to the contrary. The cases cited in the brief on behalf of the state are not in point, as they only decide that the action of assessing officers is not to be controlled by their predecessors in office in making assessment in prior years. They were not cases of modification or change of assessment already made and certified. The cases cited are Lee v. Sturges, 46 O. S., 152; Vicksburg, etc., Railroad Company v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665, and Portland Hibernian Society v. Kelly, 28 Ore., 197.
> "I am unable to see the force of the reasoning that, while their judgment upon the facts necessary to be considered by them was final and conclusive, their judgment upon the law which must control them is not to be given that effect. The case of State ex. rel. v. Railroad Company, 97 Mo., 348, does not in my opinion support this contention. In that case the state board was given power and jurisdiction to assess toll bridges. They assessed a bridge as a toll bridge which was not a toll bridge, and the decision was that as to such bridges the state board had no jurisdiction and their judgment that it was a toll bridge was without force or legal effect. The state board had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter. It was clearly beyond the jurisdiction of the board, but in this case there is no question of the jurisdiction of the board. It was the board, and under a claim of jurisdiction, which made the finding which it is sought to enforce by this action. If it had jurisdiction on December 31, 1909, to decide what the law was, it had jurisdiction to decide what the law was in January and July of 1909.''

It is true that in this case there was no express authority to assess receipts omitted in previous years. The case is cited, however, on the proposition that where the facts necessary to be considered by a taxing board are all before the board, and the board is proceeding to exercise a jurisdiction committed to it, its conclusion is final as to that particular assessment or determination even though erroneous as a matter of law. Of course, in order to apply this decision to the question now under consideration, it would be necessary to determine first, whether or not the tax commission had jurisdiction to determine the situs of the property in question, as a matter of law. That question will be reserved for further discussion.

In Railroad Company v. Hynicka, 4 N. P. n. s. 196, the question was as to the power of the auditor of Hamilton county to assess as omitted property a certain interstate bridge operated by a railroad company, together with certain sidetracks and inlots. The court first concluded that the property in question was of a class, the value of which when ascertained was to be merged into the value of the road as a unit, and distributed along the entire road in proportion to mileage as required by the statute applicable to railroads. Therefore, the court concluded that the value of this property should have been considered in arriving at the unit value of the railroad, and was not subject to localization and separate assessment in Hamilton county. This led to the following language in the opinion of Hoffheimer, J.:

''Finally, the property involved in this controversy was returned for taxation and the taxes found due thereon duly paid by plaintiff after the auditor, under and by virtue of section 2772, had ascertained its value. The evidence shows that the auditor undertook to tax it again on the theory that it was omitted property. All the steps taken by him show that in the opinion of that officer, it was property that had escaped taxation. But as we have already pointed out, it did not escape taxation and could not be said to be omitted property. The only question remaining then would be: Was the auditor justified in again placing this property on the duplicate on the ground that his action was in effect a revaluation or correction of an undervaluation?

''If the auditor has any such powers in respect to property of this character—property which according to law he had appraised and assessed in the first instance and no doubt correctly—that power is to be found in Revised Statutes, 2781a.

''The exception engrafted upon the statute, it will be noticed, speaks only of omitted property; that is, property that has escaped taxation. Certainly, it was not intended that there should be a reassessment or a reappraisement of that which the officer had already appraised. Otherwise, as is pertinently asked by counsel for plaintiff, how many times is it necessary to assess railroad property? In our judgment this section gives the board jurisdiction to appraise and assess omitted property and denies jurisdiction to reassess and reappraise that which has already been assessed according to law.''

This case is in point as an interpretation of section 2781a, R. S., which now constitutes sections 5399 and 5400, General Code; and as I have pointed out, an interpretation of these sections may be said, for all practical purposes, to constitute an interpretation of section 5461, their provisions being very similar if not identical.

Other cases might be cited showing other applications of the rule, and it is to be admitted that the foregoing cases do not furnish a completely satisfactory parallel to the case now under consideration. However, it is believed that they sufficiently establish the rule as above laid down. That being the case, the rule of law as I have defined it requires the facts of the particular case to be investigated with a view to answering three questions, viz.:

(1) Did the tax commission, in the past years in question, have before it the facts pertaining to these stocks?

(2) Did it make a finding or determination with respect thereto?

(3) Did the commission have jurisdiction to determine the question of situs in the manner in which it was, or must have been determined?

I have interpreted the commission's letter to me as requiring possibly an answer to each one of these questions. With a view to complying with the commission's request I have availed myself of all information furnished to me by the commission and by Mr. Alcorn, together with certain verbal information given to me by Honorable Charles A. Groom, assistant prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county. I find myself able to answer the first question and will do so without stating the very complicated facts constituting the transaction by which the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Street Railway Company was organized and became the owner of the shares of stock in question in the capacity in which it holds them. These facts are so very complicated that a mere statement of them would exceed the limitations of this opinion. It is sufficient for my purposes to state that on August 22, 1911, at a hearing before the tax commission the representatives of the company disclosed to the tax commission of Ohio what may be termed the essential facts respecting the ownership of these stocks by that company, and the relation of the company to the other corporations, the stocks of which it thus owned. A stenographic report of this conference is on file in the office of the commission, and I feel obliged to conclude that the answer to the first question which I have framed must be in the affirmative.

Coming now to the second question, and avoiding details which cannot be practicably discussed within the bounds of this opinion I beg to advise that I do not find that the tax commission ever, in any of the years in controversy, made a formal finding and determination entered on its record of proceedings showing precisely what had been done by it in assessing the property of the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Street Railway Company. Presumably therefore the commission placed a value upon all the property of the company, of the existence of which it had knowledge, which was located in Ohio. What may for the purposes of argument be regarded as the incomplete assessment, which the commission made in these years of that property, may be explained consistently with the discharge by the commission of its powers and duties in the premises in good faith on but one of three hypotheses, namely:

(1) The commission considered that all the company's property was located and taxable in Ohio but that its value was no greater than the sum fixed by the commission as the company's assessment.

(2) The commission considered that the whole of the company's property, as a taxable public utility unit, was located but partly in Ohio and its assessment represents an apportioned share of the value of the whole, of which such Ohio property so viewed constituted but a part.

(3) The commission considered these particular stocks as not having a taxable situs in Ohio, and its assessment therefore represented merely the other property of the company which was clearly taxable in Ohio.

Taking these three hypotheses up in their order it is clear that if the commission merely made a mistake as to the value of the property, having before it at the time all the facts respecting the property and its ownership and location, that mistakes cannot now be rectified by proceedings under the statutes above discussed. For nothing is clearer than that the jurisdiction of the commission to determine the question of value, irrespective of that of situs, is full and complete; so that upon the principles above laid down, if the commission, in arriving at the assessment of $360,000.00 in each of the years in controversy, was valuing all the property of the company and considering all of that property as located in Ohio and subject to valuation by it, there is no escape from the conclusion that that value cannot now be changed for any of such preceding years, however great may be the discrepancy between the value thus determined by the commission for such years and the true and actual value of the property in any or all of such years.

As I have said, however, it does not appear, except by inference, that the commission did determine that all the property of the company was located in Ohio. It appears to be the practice of the commission to place nothing upon its record of proceedings excepting the assessment of the Ohio property. If I may be permitted a word of criticism, it seems to me that under the statutes applicable to the assessment of public utilities, the commission's determinations ought to be set forth in greater detail than this; and it is at least clear that if proceedings of the commission had been set forth in full in this instance, the difficulty which is now encountered would have been obviated. I refer the commission, in explanation of what I have in mind, to the following sections of the General Code:

> "Section 5424. In determining the value of the property of each such public utility to be assessed and taxed within the state, the commission shall be guided by the value of the property as determined by the information contained in the sworn statements made by the public utility to the commission and such other evidence and rules as will enable it to arrive at the true value in money of the entire property of such public utility within this state, in the proportion which the value of such property bears to the value of the entire property of such public utility.
> "Section 5429. The commission shall ascertain all of the personal property, road bed, stations, power houses, poles, wires, water and wood stations and real estate necessary to the daily running operations of the road, moneys and credits of each railroad company and each suburban or interurban railroad company, having any line, or road, or part thereof in this state and the undivided profits, reserved or contingent fund of the company, whether in moneys, credits, or in any manner invested, and the actual value thereof in money, and also locomotives, motors and cars not belonging to the company, but hired for its use or run under its control on its road by a sleeping car company or other company. Such rolling stock not belonging to it, but under its control, may be returned by such public utility separate from its own property, and if so returned the commission shall fix the valuation of such property separately, but must include the amount in the aggregate valuation."

"Section 5430. The value of such property, moneys and credits of each of such street, suburban and interurban railroad and railroad companies, as found and determined by the commission, shall be apportioned by the commission among the several counties through which the road, or any part thereof, runs, so that to each county and to each taxing district therein, shall be apportioned such part thereof as will equalize the relative value of the real estate, structures and stationary personal property of such company therein, in proportion to the whole value of the real estate, structures and stationary personal property of the company in this state; and so that the rolling stock, main track, road bed, power houses, poles, wires, supplies, moneys and credits of the company shall be apportioned in like proportion that the length of the road in such county, bears to the entire length thereof in all the counties, and to each city, village and district or part thereof therein.

"Section 5445. When a street, suburban or interurban railroad or railroad company has part of its road in this state and part thereof in another state or states, the commission shall take the entire value of such property, moneys and credits of such public utility so found and determined, in accordance with the provisions of this act, and divide it in the proportion the length of the road in this state bears to the whole length thereof, and determine the principal sum for the value of the road in this state accordingly, equalizing the relative value thereof in this state."

It is my opinion, and I take this opportunity expressly to advise the commission, that under these statutes (as well as under statutes relative to the valuation of the property of other public utilities which are similar in purport though not quoted) the commission does not discharge its full duty unless it separately determines the value of the whole property of the utility, both within and without the state, and spreads its determination in this behalf on its record of proceedings; then makes a distinct determination as to the proportion of such whole value attributable to Ohio. This statement needs, of course, some qualification. It is not the whole value of the entire property of the utility that is to be apportioned between Ohio and the other state or states or countries, but in the case of railroads, for example, only such part of the whole as is subject to apportionment, certain fixed property being localized and subject to separate valuation in the place where it is located instead of its value being included in the amount subject to apportionment. But with this qualification the advice which I have expressed should be followed by the commission, so that it can be determined in a given instance whether the commission is valuing an interstate utility or a utility, the property of which is located entirely in Ohio. In this case that is one of the issues which is raised, for it appears from the stenographic report of the hearing of August 22, 1911, hereinbefore referred to, that the assessment of the property of the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Street Railway Company was discussed as if the condition of affairs were as follows:

It seems to have been assumed in the discussion that the property belonging nominally to the South Covington and Cincinnati Street Railway Company, one of the corporations, the stock of which is owned by the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Street Railway Company was, in point of fact, a part of the same system of which the plant or line admittedly operated by the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Street Railway Company was the remainder, so that the two lines together constituted a single street railroad, interstate in character. It was further assumed that the joinder of unity of ownership with unity of use, which is required by the underlying principles of statutes like those last above cited, as interpreted in cases like Adams Express Company v. Auditor, 165 U. S., 114 and 166 U. S., 185, has been effectuated in this instance through the medium of stock ownership. That is to say, it seemed to be taken for granted that in reality there was but a single street railway operation involved; and the fact that property on one side of the river was owned by the respondent company and that on the other by the Kentucky company, was not regarded as effecting a separation of ownership, because of the fact that the stock of the Kentucky company was owned by the respondent company, which seemed to be regarded as substantially the equivalent of the true ownership by the Ohio company of the property itself belonging to the Kentucky company. So as to the stocks of the other companies which were not operating companies; these represented franchise rights used by the two companies or by the one company, whichever view of the case be accepted, in the operation of the entire system, so that they too seemed to have been regarded as evidences of title and ownership rather than as separate investments or intangible personal property.

The foregoing is a generalization expressed in order to avoid going into a great mass of detail. It states, however, with sufficient accuracy I believe, the hypothesis upon which the assessment of the property of this company was discussed verbally at the hearing on August 22, 1911. The representatives of the company and a member of the commission exchanged ideas on that occasion with respect to the valuation, not of the tracks and cars in Ohio and the shares of stock in question, but of the whole system, both on the Ohio side and the Kentucky side considered as a unit, and as to the proper apportionment of such entire value as between Ohio and Kentucky.

As I have stated, no intimation as to whether the commission did determine that the whole system was a single unit of ownership and use appears upon the record of the proceedings of the commission. And if, in other similar cases, the commission's records show that whenever the utility is an interstate one the value of the whole is first estimated and then Ohio's proportion thereof is separately determined, the very silence of the record in this case on this point would conclusively show that whatever may have been the informal statements of a member of the commission upon the occasion referred to, the whole commission did not finally arrive at the conclusion that the property of the company in Ohio was a part of an interstate property and that the shares of stock owned by it were mere evidences of title of operated property. But if, as I believe is the case, the commission does not, in every case of valuation of interstate utility property, enter the proper findings and determinations upon its record, no such inference can be drawn from the silence of the record of this particular proceeding in this respect, and we are left in the dark as to what the commission did determine.

It is of course equally impossible to ascertain from the record, or any inferences to be drawn therefrom, whether the commission, without considering the Kentucky property as a part of a single system also comprising the Ohio property, and so far as tangible property is concerned, limiting its assessment to the property of the company located in Ohio only, separately considered the situs of these stocks as investments, or taxable subjects of ownership, and determined the same to be elsewhere than in Ohio. What slight evidence there is of the commission's actual course of procedure does not seem, for reasons already sufficiently stated, to point in this direction. But even if it be assumed that the commission took this last described course, the authority of the commission to make inquiries and corrections of the kind which it is asked to make cannot, in my opinion, be predicated upon such an assumption. For it must not be forgotten that the evidence which has been submitted to me at least tends to show that the commission had before it, at one time, and in its files at all subsequent times sufficiently full information as to the ownership of these stocks and the facts surrounding the same, to enable it to determine their taxable situs. If in the light of these facts the commission did determine, in the past years in controversy, that the stocks were not taxable in Ohio, that determination, though erroneous, may not be corrected by the commission at the present time so as to affect past years. It is true that the commission, in one sense, does not have jurisdiction to determine conclusively the question of situs. That is to say, had the commission erroneously determined that the situs of property not taxable in Ohio was in Ohio, and attempted to subject it to taxation here, this determination would be without effect, and in one sense at least it might be said to be in excess of its jurisdiction. But the reverse of this rule does not hold good.

It may perhaps be sufficiently accurate to say generally that where a taxpayer or a public utility, under statutes like section 5461, G. C., makes a partial and incorrect report or return, and then before the assessment is determined advises the taxing authorities of the true facts, this of itself is sufficient to prevent any future action. That is to say, the gist of section 5461, and other statutes like it, is that the omission or undervaluation in the previous year must be the result of some default or concealment on the part of the taxpayer; so that if a report or return of a taxpayer is false or incorrect, but the taxpayer subsequently and before assessment advises the taxing authorities as to the true facts, this is, in effect, a timely correction of the report or return, and if, notwithstanding such advice the taxing authorities still proceed upon the basis of the erroneous report, their successors in subsequent years cannot make the original erroneous statement or return the basis of inquiries and corrections under the statute.

For all these reasons I find myself unable to return an unequivocal answer to the second of the three questions above suggested, but have to say that the commission's record shows merely an assessment of $360,000.00 without showing whether that assessment is Ohio's proportion of a larger unit valuation or not, or whether a part of the property of the utility is located in other states. Presumptively such a record indicates that the commission considered all the property of the company as being located in Ohio, and therefore made no special finding or determination with respect to the situs of these stocks, nor did it consider them otherwise than as they would have to be considered were they the property of an ordinary corporation or individual, namely, as investments subject to independent valuation and assessment as intangible personal property in Ohio. However, the force of this presumption is very greatly weakened if not destroyed by the fact that the commission's records have not been properly kept; so that the state of the record in this particular is not in reality evidence in either direction as to what the intermediate determination of the commission may have been.

In view of this answer to my second question it will be readily observed that it is, strictly speaking, unnecessary for me to consider the third question at all. For if it is impossible to determine just what the commission did do, it is idle to inquire whether or not it had jurisdiction to do something which may be merely imagined. However, in the view which I take of this question, it will be helpful for me to consider the third question also.

On the hypothesis that the commission did consider the whole system as a unit and the stocks as evidences of title to the property comprising such unit, we may inquire whether the commission had the authority to make such determination. That is to say, the third question may be considered as it would be if the records of the commission affirmatively showed that the proposed assessment, as discussed between the member of the commission and the representatives of the company on August 22, 1911, had actually been made. If such had been the case, would the records show that the commission had determined a question which it had jurisdiction to determine?

In my opinion the answer to this question must be in the affirmative. Section 5445, G. C., above quoted, provides what shall be done when a "street * * * railroad company has part of its road in this state and part thereof in another state or states." Whether such a company has a part of its road in this state and a part in another state or states must be determined, in the first instance, by the tax commission. To be sure in making such a determination the commission may not exceed the jurisdiction of the state. That is to say, if in making such a determination the commission should bring into Ohio property which Ohio has no right to tax, there would be a failure of jurisdiction. But in my opinion this principle does not apply conversely, and if, having all facts before it, the commission determines what the "road" to be assessed, under the statutes cited, is, and where it is located, and that it is located partly in Ohio and partly in another state or states, and that the value of the entire property should be apportioned in a certain way, and such determinations are erroneous, so that as a result thereof Ohio is deprived of taxable value which it otherwise would have, I do not think that there can be said to be a failure of jurisdiction, though there would, in such event, be an erroneous exercise of jurisdiction.

From another point of view, while it is true that the jurisdiction of the tax commission will not be presumed, but must be made affirmatively to appear where called in question in certain kinds of cases, yet in a proceeding of this kind, inquisitorial in its character, it is clear, upon authorities which have already been cited, that jurisdiction to act in past years, as well as the regularity of such proceedings, will be presumed. The record being merely silent and not affirmatively showing failure of jurisdiction, such failure of jurisdiction in this case cannot be assumed. For both of these reasons I have come, somewhat reluctantly, to the conclusion that the information submitted to me does not warrant me to advising the commission positively that it has the power to act upon the complaint of Mr. Alcorn. On the contrary, I feel equally unable to advise positively that the commission has not the power to act. It may be that further investigation by the commission will bring to light some fact which may show that the commission acted without knowledge of the facts in some of the years other than the year 1911; or that for some reason not yet disclosed the commission exceeded its jurisdiction in some particular in all or some of the years in controversy. Such advice as I feel able to give to the commission is based upon the somewhat limited information which seems to be available at the present writing, although the commission, as I am aware, has made every effort to supply all information which can be supplied.

While the above remarks respecting the answer to the third general question suggested by me have been limited to the supposition that the commission considered the joint operation as a unit, and apportioned a part of the value of the whole to Ohio, they apply as well to the other two suppositions for reasons which have been pointed out in discussing these suppositions in another connection.

Of course, if the facts as alleged by the representatives of the company in the year 1911, or at any other time, were not true, or were so stated to the commission as to mislead the commission, in addition to such error as the commission might well fall into because of the incorrectness of the reports of the company, and the commission, acting upon the basis of such erroneous information, had reached its determination for the previous years, then the additions and corrections which the commission is now asked to make could, in my opinion, be lawfully made; for in that event the commission would not have had before it, at the time its previous determinations were made, the true facts necessary to support a final and conclusive determination.

Under all these circumstances my ultimate advice to the commission is that the discrepancy between the amount of the assessment of the company's property in former years and the amount at which it is alleged the property should have been valued (color to which is lent by the fact that the company, as Mr. Alcorn points out, has paid taxes for years immediately preceding 1911 at a much higher valuation than $360,000.00, and upon these very stocks considered as distinct subjects of taxation) is so great that the commission may with propriety at least make the inquiries necessary to bring out all the facts with respect to the situation, which are not shown by its records on file. When all the facts are disclosed, the principles laid down in the foregoing opinion will enable the commission, it is believed, to determine whether or not it has power to make the corrections authorized by section 5461, G. C.

In conclusion I wish to assure the commission that any action which the commission may see fit to take, after a further investigation of this matter, will be supported by this department.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CORPORATION—CERTIFICATE OF INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK BY ISSUANCE AND DISPOSITION OF PREFERRED STOCK—NOT REQUIRED TO SET FORTH ANY DESIGNATIONS, PREFERENCES, RESTRICTIONS, VOTING POWERS, PROVISIONS AS TO REDEMPTIONS IN CERTIFICATE—HOW HOLDERS OF PREFERRED AND COMMON STOCK DISTINGUISHED IN SUCH CASE.

In no case is a corporation required to set forth any designations, preferences, restrictions, voting powers, provisions as to redemption, etc., in a certificate authorizing the increase of capital stock by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock. In the absence of such provisions, preferred stock is distinguishable from common stock with respect to the liability of the holders thereof upon insolvency and their rights with respect to the distribution of the assets of the corporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acklowdege receipt of your letter of September 13th, requesting my opinion upon the following question which is presented by a certificate of increase of capital stock by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock tendered to you for filing by The Herschede Hall Clock Company, to wit:

> "Must a corporation in the certificate authorizing the increase of capital stock by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock provided for in section 8699, of the General Code, set forth the designations, preferences, restrictions, voting powers, etc., distinguishing the preferred stock thus authorized to be issued from the other stock of the corporation,
> "(a) Where the corporation as originally organized has no preferred stock;
>
> "(b) Where the corporation as originally organized has preferred stock, but without designations, preferences, voting powers, etc., in the certificate of incorporation (which is the case with respect to The Herschede Hall Clock Company); and
> "(c) When the corporation as originally organized has preferred stock and there are with respect thereto designations, preferences, restrictions, voting powers, etc., in the original certificate of incorporation.
> "That is to say, in each of the cases above enumerated may the certificate lawfully omit all reference to the designations, preferences, restrictions, voting powers, etc., of the preferred stock, authority to issue and dispose of which is sought, and may a certificate under section 8699, C. C., which omits all such reference be lawfully filed by you?"

The fundamental question requiring consideration in connection with these several inquiries is as to whether or not a corporation having both common and preferred stock must set forth in the certificate of incorporation, or elsewhere in the supplementary amendments and certificates, which upon being filed in the office of the secretary of state become in effect a part of such original certificate, any designations, preferences, etc., with respect to such preferred stock.

I quote sections 8667 to 8671, inclusive, of the General Code:

> "Sec. 8667. If a corporation be organized for profit, it must have a capital stock, which may consist of common and preferred, or common only; but at no time shall the amount of preferred stock at par value exceed two-thirds of the actual capital paid in in cash or property."
> "Sec. 8668. When the capital stock is to be both common and preferred, it may be provided in the articles of incorporation that the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to yearly dividends of not more than eight per cent., payable quarterly, half yearly, or yearly out of the surplus profits of the company each year in preference to all other stockholders. Such dividends also may be made cumulative."
> "Sec. 8669. A corporation issuing both common and preferred stock may create designations, preferences and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof, in the certificate of incorporation, and if desired, preferred stock may be made subject to redemption at not less than par, at a fixed time and price, to be expressed in the stock certificates thereof."
> "Sec. 8670. Upon the insolvency of the corporation no holder of preferred stock shall be liable for its debts until after the remedy against the common stockholders upon their liability, as provided by law, has been exhausted, and then only for such amount as remains unpaid. Such liability in no event shall exceed that fixed by law for the common stock of such corporation.''

''Sec. 8671. On the insolvency or dissolution of the corporation, the holders of preferred stock shall be entitled to receive from the assets remaining after paying its liabilities, the full payment of its par value, before anything is paid to the common stock.''

Upon reading these sections together, which is proper, because they were all originally parts of section 3235a, R. S., it appears that preferred stock, as such, is distinguishable from common stock by reason of merely being called ''preferred stock.'' That is to say, without the recital of any designations, preferences, voting powers, restrictions, etc., in the certificate of incorporation or elsewhere of record in the office of the secretary of state, the holder of preferred stock, denominated and issued as such, has certain peculiar rights. Thus, under section 8670, supra, his liability is subsequent to that of the common stockholders; and under section 8671 he is to be preferred to the common stockholders in the distribution of the assets of the corporation upon its insolvency or dissolution.

I repeat that these attributes of preferred stock are possessed and enjoyed by it, regardless of the recitals of the articles of incorporation or certificates supplementary thereto on file in the office of the secretary of state, or at least in the absence of any explicit provision therein.

Coming now to consider sections 8668 and 8669, I call attention to the fact that in form these statutes are permissive. Unless there is some rule of public policy requiring a contrary interpretation, these statutes must be read literally, because they are in pari materia with section 8667, wherein the word ''may'' is used in evident contra-distinction to the word ''must.''

I know of no such rule of public policy. To be sure, sections 8668 and 8669 have in a way a mandatory or compulsory effect. That is, if the holders of the preferred stock which is to be issued are to be entitled to preferred dividends, to have peculiar voting power, or have any other designations and preferences aside from those which are provided for in sections 8670 and 8671, and if the stock is to be subject to redemption, these matters must be provided for in the certificate of incorporation or in the other certificates which supplement it. But I do not discover in the express terms of the statute any requirement that all preferred stock shall have these additional attributes, nor do I know of any public policy that would dictate a forced interpretation of the statutes to this effect.

In other words, I may define the preferred stock of an Ohio corporation as follows:

> ''It is that species of stock the holders of which ipso facto are entitled to be preferred in the distribution of the assets of the corporation upon insolvency or dissolution and in the enforcement of statutory liability; and who are entitled to preferred dividends, voting powers, etc., if such additional rights are provided for in the certificate of incorporation or the supplementary certificates, and not otherwise. In other words, the right to be preferred in the distribution of dividends is not a necessary attribute of preferred stock in Ohio.''

From these considerations the following conclusions with respect to the questions involved in your inquiry are derived:

(1) Where the corporation as originally organized has no preferred stock, it may lawfully file a certificate of increase by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock under section 8699, of the General Code, without specifying therein or by contemporaneous amendment, or otherwise, any designations, preferences or voting powers whatever; the effect of such certificate being to authorize the issuance of stock "preferred" only as expressly stipulated in sections 8670 and 8671, of the General Code.

(2) A corporation may be lawfully organized, in the first instance, having both common and preferred stock and without special designation, etc., as to the latter; in which event it may also lawfully increase its authorized capital stock by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock, without assigning to such increased preferred stock any such designations, preferences, voting powers, etc., in which event the effect will be the same as that described in discussing the first case.

(3) When a corporation as originally organized has preferred stock and there are in the original certificate of incorporation designations, preferences, voting powers, etc., the corporation may lawfully file a certificate of increase under section 8699, of the General Code, without stipulating therein with respect to the designations, preferences, voting powers, etc., of the increased preferred stock; in which event the question would arise as to whether the designations, preferences, voting powers, etc., in the original articles of incorporation would apply to the new preferred stock or not. It is not necessary in answering your question to pass upon this point.

For the foregoing reasons, I advise that the certificate of increase of capital stock by the issuance and disposition of preferred stock tendered to you by The Herschede Hall Clock Company may lawfully be filed and recorded.

I return to you herewith the original certificate which was sent to me by counsel for the company, with the company's check for $50.00 and uncancelled revenue stamp attached thereto; also the letter of Messrs. Kelley & Remke to you and the original articles of incorporation of The Herschede Hall Clock Company.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

LIMA STATE HOSPITAL—PRISONER TRANSFERRED FROM PENITENTIARY TO HOSPITAL—ALLOWANCE TO BE PAID DEPENDENTS OF THOSE CONFINED IN PENITENTIARY, APPLIES TO THOSE TRANSFERRED TO INSANE HOSPITAL UNTIL EXPIRATION OF TERM OF CONFINEMENT FOR WHICH PRISONER WAS ORIGINALLY SENTENCED—NON-SUPPORT CASE.

The payment of the credit of forty cents per day provided for in section 13019, G. C., to be made in case of insane prisoner transferred to Lima State Hospital until expiration of prisoner's term of confinement is to be made in the same manner as prior thereto.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"John Gomscak, serial number 43351, who has been confined in the Ohio penitentiary since February 5, 1915, has been adjudged insane and this day transferred to the Lima state hospital. He was serving an indeterminate sentence from Lorain county on the charge of non-support of minor children.

"Will you please advise whether or not his transfer to the Lima state hospital nullifies the payment to his dependents by the Ohio penitentiary of the forty cents per day allowed by the state under section 13019, and whether such payments should be stopped or continued, or if these payments shall in the future be made by the Lima state hospital."

Section 13019, of the General Code, referred to in your letter, is as follows:

"The board of managers of the penitentiary, or reformatory, to which a person is sentenced and confined under this subdivision of this chapter, shall credit such person with forty cents per day for each working day during the period of such confinement, which shall be paid, or caused to be paid, by such board to such trustee."

Section 2216, of the General Code, is as follows:

"When the physician of the penitentiary or reformatory reports in writing to the warden or officer in charge thereof that in his opinion a convict confined therein is insane, such warden or officer shall apply to the probate court of the county in which the institution is located, for an examination to be made of such convict by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory, and to be designated by the court. If satisfied after a personal examination, that the convict is insane, they shall so certify in the form and manner prescribed for the commitment of insane persons to state hospitals."

Sections 2220 and 2221, of the General Code, are as follows:

"Sec. 2220. An insane convict under indeterminate sentence, transferred from the Ohio penitentiary or the reformatory to the Lima state hospital, shall be detained at such hospital for the maximum term of sentence provided by law for the offense of which the convict was convicted, unless sooner restored to reason."

"Sec. 2221. When an insane convict confined in the Lima state hospital, whose term of sentence has not expired, has been restored to reason, and the superintendent of the hospital so certifies in writing, he shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which he came. The officer in charge shall receive such convict into the penitentiary or reformatory."

It will be observed that the provisions of section 13019, supra, are that the person sentenced under the chapter of which it is a part shall have placed to his credit the sum of forty cents per day during such confinement, that amount to be paid to the trustees appointed by the court to receive it for the dependents of the prisoner.

It will be observed from a reading of sections 2220 and 2221, of the General Code, supra, that the term during which an insane prisoner transferred from the reformatory or penitentiary may be detained at the Lima state hospital is governed by two things: First, his mental condition, and second, by the length of his sentence, the latter provision being a limitation as to the time he may be kept regardless of the condition of his mind; and it is further provided that if he be restored to reason before the expiration of his sentence he shall be returned to the penitentiary or reformatory.

In section 2218, of the General Code, will be found a provision to the effect that when the prisoner is transferred to the Lima state hospital, the original certificate of conviction shall be transferred to the superintendent.

At any and all events, the insane prisoner confined in the Lima state hospital is under sentence to the penitentiary, and under the rules of your board if a parole were granted him, or the governor should see fit to exercise the pardoning power, the prisoner would be released in so far as there would be no authority to hold him, except upon proceedings under section 1995, of the General Code.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the prisoner referred to in your letter is still under sentence to the penitentiary and constructively confined therein, although for humane reasons he has been temporarily transferred to the Lima state hospital in order that his health and the safety of the inmates of the penitentiary may be better guarded. It follows from this construction that until the expiration of his term of confinement under the sentence imposed, he is entitled to the credit of forty cents per day, as provided in section 13019, of the General Code, supra, and that payments thereunder shall be made as before the transfer.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS —NO AUTHORITY TO APPOINT COMMITTEE TO PREPARE ARGUMENT AGAINST SUCH PROPOSED AMENDMENT—SEE DECISION OF SUPREME COURT, GRAHAM P. HUNT vs. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, SECRETARY OF STATE, 91 O. S.

There is no authority for the appointment of a committee to prepare an argument or explanation, or both, against an amendment to the constitution proposed by initiative petition, by the governor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1915.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours under date of September 4, 1915, which is as follows:

"We enclose herewith official argument against proposed constitutional amendment—'To provide for statewide prohibition of the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor'—by committee composed of Graham P. Hunt, Eugene Heim and John Roehm.

"We beg to state that said paper was received in the office of the secretary of state on the third day of September, 1915, and we submit the following question to you for opinion:

" 'May said paper be received and filed on the third day of September, 1915, by the secretary of state under the law, or had the time expired in which such paper could be filed with the secretary of state?' "

With your inquiry is submitted a copy of a paper writing on file in your office, which reads as follows:

"Columbus, Ohio, September 4, 1915.

"To the Secretary of State of the State of Ohio:

"On September 2, 1915, I duly appointed F. H. Kerr, of Jefferson county, Ohio, Nicholas Duttle, of Montgomery county, Ohio, and H. R. Probasco, of Hamilton county, Ohio, a committee of three electors of the state of Ohio, to prepare and file an explanation with the secretary of state of Ohio against the constitutional amendment for statewide prohibition; that on September 2, 1915, the members before named received notice of their appointment and met together and subsequently two members thereof informed me that they would not file an explanation against the prohibition amendment; that on this date, September 4, 1915, having received the written resignation of all the members of that committee as heretofore appointed, and having received the request of The Ohio Home Rule Association, through its secretary, J. M. Kammeron, to appoint Graham P. Hunt, of Hamilton county, Ohio, Eugene Heim, of Hamilton county, Ohio, and John Roehm, of Montgomery county, Ohio, as a committee of three electors of the state of Ohio, to prepare and file an explanation with the secretary of state of Ohio, against the constitutional amendment for statewide prohibition. I, therefore, in accordance with this request and without expressing any opinion as to when the time for the appointment of that committee and the filing of the explanation expired, hereby designate Graham P. Hunt, of Hamilton county, Ohio, Eugene Heim, of Hamilton county, Ohio, and John Roehm, of Montgomery county, Ohio, a committee of three electors of the state of Ohio, to prepare and file an explanation with the secretary of state of Ohio against the constitutional amendment for statewide prohibition.

"Frank B. Willis,
"Governor of Ohio."

I learn from personal interview, however, that the question with which you are more particularly concerned than that stated in your inquiry above quoted, is, whether the secretary of state, upon the facts above set forth, is authorized or required by law to cause to be printed and distributed among the voters of the state the "official argument against proposed constitutional amendment to provide for statewide prohibition of the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor," received in your office on September 3, 1915.

The constitutional amendment, to which you refer, for the prohibition of the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor, is proposed by initiative petition, and the first question which your inquiry then suggests, is whether there is authority for the preparation of an argument or explanation, or both, against a constitutional amendment which is proposed by initiative petition.

Pertinent to this question is the provision of section 1g of article II of the constitution, which is as follows:

"A true copy of all laws or proposed laws or proposed amendments to the constitution, together with an argument or explanation, or both, for, and also an argument or explanation, or both, against the same, shall be prepared. The person or persons who prepare the argument or explanation, or both, against any law, section or item, submitted to the electors by referendum petition, may be named in such petition and the persons who prepare the argument or explanation, or both, for any proposed law or proposed amendment to the constitution may be named in the petition proposing the same. The person or persons who prepare the argument or explanation, or both, for the law, section or item, submitted to the electors by referendum petition, or against any proposed law submitted by supplementary petition, shall be named by the general assembly, if in session, and if not in session then by the governor. The secretary of state shall cause to be printed the law, or proposed law, or proposed amendment to the constitution, together with the arguments and explanations, not exceeding a total of three hundred words for each, and also the arguments and explanations, not exceeding a total of three hundred words against each, and shall mail or otherwise distribute, a copy of such law, or proposed law, or proposed amendment to the constitution, together with such arguments and explanations for and against the same to each of the electors of the state, as far as may be reasonably possible."

In the same section of the constitution, as amended in 1912, it is further provided that "the foregoing provisions of this section shall be self executing, except as herein otherwise provided. Laws may be passed to facilitate the operation, but in no way limiting or restricting either such provision or the powers herein reserved."

By analysis of that part of the constitutional provision first above quoted, relating expressly to the same, the authority therein found for the preparation of arguments and explanations readily resolves itself into the following:

The persons who prepare an argument or explanation:

(1) against any law, section or item submitted by referendum petition may be named in such petition.

(2) for any proposed law or amendment may be named in the petition proposing the same.

(3) for the law, section or item submitted by referendum petition shall be named by the general assembly if in session and if not in session then by the governor.

(4) against any proposed law submitted by supplementary petition shall be named by the general assembly if in session if not by the governor.

A casual examination of such an analysis shows conclusively that there is nowhere in this provision of the constitution anything upon which may be based a claim for authority in any one or more persons to prepare an argument or explanation against a constitutional amendment which is proposed by initiative petition.

If the machinery for the preparation of an argument or explanation, or both, against such proposed constitutional amendment is provided in the constitution, it must be found elsewhere than in that part of section 1g of article II last referred to, and the particularity with which such provision is here made in specific instances gives rise at least to a strong presumption that it was clearly the intent of the framers of this amendment to the constitution, and the people in its adoption, that no constitutional provision therefor should be made.

If we are to look elsewhere for constitutional provision for the machinery necessary to carry into full operation the provision for the printing and distribution of arguments and explanations in the particular case here under consideration, we find it is provided in section 1g of article II of the constitution, supra, that "a true copy of all laws or proposed laws or proposed amendments to the constitution, together with an argument or explanation, or both, for, and also an argument or explanation, or both, against the same, shall be prepared," and that "the secretary of state shall cause to be printed the law, or proposed law, or proposed amendment to the constitution, together with the arguments and explanations, not exceeding a total of three hundred words for each, and also the arguments and explanations, not exceeding a total of three hundred words against each, and shall mail, or otherwise distribute, a copy of such law, or proposed law, or proposed amendment to the constitution, together with such arguments and explanations for and against the same to each of the electors of the state, as far as may be reasonably possible."

If it be contended that this provision makes it mandatory upon the secretary of state to print arguments and explanations, or both, for and against proposed laws and proposed amendments to the constitution in every case, manifestly there is no provision here for the preparation of such arguments and explanations except that by reason of such mandatory provision the duty of preparing the same devolves, by necessary implication, upon the secretary of state. Beyond all possibility of question, there is not here found foundation for authority in any other person or persons to prepare such argument or explanation as the secretary of state would, under the constitution, be required or authorized to print.

I think that it will not be seriously argued that it was intended by the constitutional provisions under consideration, to impose upon the secretary of state the duty of preparing an argument or explanation in any event. If that were true, a case may be readily imagined in which such officer would be required to prepare such an argument both for and against the same law or proposed amendment to the constitution. Such an absurdity would not be contended for. I think it worthy of note, in this connection, that the secretary of state in every instance is required to print and distribute "the" arguments and explanations rather than "an" argument and explanation, clearly indicating that it was not the intent that such officer should be required to print and distribute an argument prepared by himself.

It may be observed that, notwithstanding the constitutional provision above quoted, to the effect that the provision of section 1g of article II of the constitution, shall be self executing, in the absence of any legally constituted or designated authority to prepare such argument, any number of such arguments might be presented to the secretary of state for printing and distribution, and in such event there would be authority or jurisdiction nowhere or basis from which to determine which of such arguments should be printed, although I think it must be conceded that in no event may the secretary of state print or distribute more than one such argument or explanation, or both, for and against any proposed measure.

While the conclusion, that the constitution makes no provision for the preparation of an argument against an amendment of the constitution proposed by initiative petition, cannot be escaped, it is equally clear that such argument is required in mandatory terms to be printed by the secretary of state only when prepared under and by lawful authority.

The constitution thus requiring the printing and distribution of such arguments against a constitutional amendment so proposed, and the designation of the authority or agency for the preparation of the same not having been provided therein, it follows, therefore, that it is competent for the general assembly to prescribe the necessary machinery for the carrying into effect and operation the constitutional provision in such case, and that the general assembly should do so is manifestly the intent and purpose of the constitution, from a consideration of the last sentence of section 1g of article II, supra.

The next question which concerns the present consideration is, has the legislature made provision for the legal designation of the agency to prepare such argument in the case under consideration or created or established the necessary machinery therefor?

The only legislative expression of which I am aware upon the subject of arguments and explanations in initiative and referendum matters which might be claimed to be pertinent to the present question, is found in section 5018-3, G. C., 103 O. L., 831, which provides as follows:

> "When any valid and sufficient petition or supplementary petition shall have been filed with the secretary of state demanding the submission of any measure to a vote of the people, and the general assembly is in session, the speaker of the house shall name two of its members, and the president of the senate shall name one of its members, which shall constitute a committee to prepare the explanation of the measure on behalf of the general assembly. If the general assembly is not in session then the governor shall name a committee of three electors, which committee shall serve without compensation and which shall prepare and file such explanation with the secretary of state not later than sixty days before the election at which the measure is to be voted upon."

From an examination of this section, it will conclusively appear that by its express terms it is limited in its application to explanations on behalf of the general assembly. That is to say, it provides for the appointment of such committee as is therein designated only in those cases in which the general assembly, as such, may be interested in the measure proposed to be submitted by referendum or by supplementary initiative petition. This, I think, is sufficiently clear to obviate extended discussion.

Now it cannot be argued with force that the general assembly, as such, is concerned in making an explanation of a measure with which it has had nothing to do, and if the general assembly, as such, were interested in the present case at all, it might choose to make an explanation for rather than against the proposed amendment to the constitution.

In short, consideration of this statute leads to the conclusion that it is applicable only, as stated above, to those cases in which there is sought a referendum of a measure adopted by the general assembly or a failure to pass a measure which has been proposed to that body by initiative petition and cannot, therefore, serve to confer upon any officer, person or persons the power or authority to designate or create an agency for the performance of the function of preparing an argument or explanation against a constitutional amendment which is proposed by initiative petition and in regard to which the general assembly, as such, has no concern.

If doubt remained as to the correctness of this view, it must be completely dispelled by a consideration of the clear and unequivocal distinction made in the constitution as between "explanations" and "arguments," which the legislature in the enactment of section 5018-3, G. C., supra, was bound to and did recognize.

It will be observed that the first sentence of section 1g of article II of the constitution, above quoted, provides for the preparation of an argument or explanation, or both. In the next sentence is again found the phrase "argument or explanation, or both" used twice. In the next sentence this phrase is again repeated and in the next sentence will be found in three instances the expression "arguments and explanations." In view of this repeated and emphatic distinction between "argument" and "explanation" and the expicit provision that there may be both, it cannot be argued that an argument is an explanation or that an explation is an argument within the terms of the constitution.

The constitution having thus emphasized the distinction, the statute must be construed in the light of that distinction and, as above stated, the conclusion cannot be avoided that the legislature did observe the same.

With this distinction in mind, an examination of section 5018-3, supra, will readily disclose that it has application only to explanations and cannot, therefore, by any stretch of construction, be held to be applicable or in any way relevant to the question here under consideration, that being confined to arguments alone. So it may again be observed that no provision or authority for an argument either for or against any measure can be found outside of the constitution.

In view of the foregoing, I am forced to conclude that there is no jurisdiction conferred by the constitution, or otherwise, upon the governor, other officer, person or persons, to prepare an argument or explanation in the case under consideration or to select or appoint any person or committee to prepare the same.

It would therefore follow that the appointment or designation of the committee, to prepare such argument, by the governor in the case under consideration, is wholly without authority of law and of no effect, and could therefore confer upon such committee no authority to prepare such argument or explanation; and by reason of the failure of jurisdiction and authority in the governor and the lack of legal authority in such committee to prepare such argument, it necessarily follows that whatever may have been filed in the office of the secretary of state by such committee, cannot constitute such an argument or explanation as under the law the secretary of state is authorized or required to publish and distribute to the voters.

The above answer to the question in which you are more particularly concerned, I think, sufficiently disposes of the question specifically stated in your communication for all present purposes. It may be observed, however, that the only limit expressly fixed by the constitution and statutes upon the time for filing arguments and explanations for and against any measure, is that found in section 5018-3, G. C., supra, which as above stated, is limited in its application to explanations only on behalf of the general assembly only, and that therefore the limitation therein prescribed cannot apply to the statement of facts submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 27, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 18th submitting for my written opinion the following questions:

"May the holder of a certificate of indebtedness issued under authority of section 3913, General Code, be legally paid interest after the time fixed by law (within six months from date of certificate) for the redemption of such indebtedness?

"Would the illegal act of the municipal officials in not making payment of such obligations create a liability against the municipality for interest after maturity, or after six months' period has elapsed?

"If it is found that such interest (after maturity) has been paid, could finding for recovery against the holder, or against the village clerk, be enforced?"

Section 3913, of the General Code, to which you refer in your letter, provides as follows:

"Sec. 3913. In anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year, such corporations may borrow money and issue certificates of indebtedness therefor, signed as municipal bonds are signed, but no loans shall be made to exceed the amount estimated to be received from taxes and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections for such fund, after deducting all advances. The sums so anticipated shall be deemed appropriated for the payment of such certificates at maturity. The certificates shall not run for a longer period than six months, nor bear a greater rate of interest than six per cent., and shall not be sold for less than par with accrued interest."

In the first place, it is to be noted that the certificates of indebtedness referred to are issued only in anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year, and that the amount which may be borrowed on such certificates of indebtedness shall not exceed the amount estimated to be received at the next semi-annual settlement, after deducting all advances that might have been made; and it is further provided that the amount received at the next semi-annual settlement, after deducting advances, to the extent of the certificates of indebtedness issued shall be deemed appropriated for the payment of such certificates, and that the certificates are not to run for a longer period than six months.

I assume for the purposes of this opinion that the certificates of indebtedness inquired about have not been issued in excess of the amount actually received at the semi-annual settlement next succeeding their issuance.

It must be noted that at each semi-annual settlement so much of the money which is received from taxes and revenues as is necessary to redeem certificates of indebtedness is, without action of council, deemed appropriated for the payment of such certificates at maturity, and, therefore, that there should have been on hand moneys with which to pay such certificates of indebtedness when the same fell due, and any failure to pay the same by the officer whose duty it was to pay the same would be an illegal act upon the part of the officer.

If a proper presentment of the certificate of indebtedness has been made, and the officer whose duty it is to pay the same has refused to pay it or has taken the money which is available for the purpose of so paying it and expended it for other purposes, although the officer has acted illegally, nevertheless I do not believe, since the debt is properly due and presentment has been made and payment refused, that the person holding the certificate of indebtedness should be deprived of the interest on such indebtedness after such presentment; but the officer who has caused the interest to run by failure to pay the certificate at maturity has involved the city in the payment of future interest, due to his unlawful act, but the city could not plead the illegal act of its officer to excuse it from paying the interest which accrued after said failure to pay.

"The ordinary rule applies to the payment of indebtedness of a public corporation in regard to the manner and time of its payments. The current and running expenses of the government and its indebtedness as well are payable at the office of the public treasury, unless otherwise specified, and at the time indicated by the evidence of indebtedness. If no time is set for the payment, the debt is payable on demand. However, if the obligation is payable from a certain fund, the exhaustion of this fund necessarily postpones a payment. Interest can be collected on indebtedness payable at a certain time but not then paid by default of the debtor whether it consists of the principal of the debt or periodical installments of interest."

The author, however, cites no cases in substantiation of the above principle.

In Dillon on Municipal Corporations, section 860, it is said:

"Where a city has authority to create and contract with reference to a particular fund, and to make the debt payable therefrom only, or where by law the debt or obligation is chargeable against, and payable only out of the particular fund, a warrant drawn on such fund is chargeable against and payable only from that fund, and there can be no recovery from the city, unless there is some breach of duty on its part * * *. But a city which contracts with reference to a special fund, and issues a warrant payable therefrom, is under the duty of performing all the legal steps necessary to the raising of the fund."

Warner v. New Orleans, 167 U. S., 478;
New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S., 129.

"If moneys belonging to the particular fund have been received by the city, a diversion of these moneys from the fund is a breach of contract for which the city is liable to the holder of the warrants drawn on the fund."

State v. Pillsbury, 30 La. Ann., 705;
Vallian v. Newton County, 81 Mo., 591;
Ayers v. Thurston County, 63 Neb., 96;
Pine Tree Lumber Co. v. Fargo, 12 N. D., 360;
R. R. V. N. Bank v. Fargo, 14 N. D., 88;
Potter v. New Whatsom, 20 Wash., 589;
O. C. N. Bank v. Laconm, 27 Wash., 259.

Therefore, if the officer whose duty it was to pay the certificates of indebtedness at maturity has authorized the expenditure of the automatic appropriation of the money necessary for the payment of outstanding certificates of indebtedness for other purposes and, as a consequence thereof, did not have on hand at maturity the amount to pay such certificates of indebtedness, the mere failure to present the certificates at maturity would not bar the holder thereof from his right to interest thereon.

In opinion No. 532, rendered to your bureau under date of June 24, 1915, I stated relative to certificates of indebtedness as follows:

"That the funds for the payment of the certificates were in the treasury and available for their payment at the semi-annual settlement next succeeding their issue, comes of necessity and that the diversion thereof was a violation of the duty of the city and a breach of its contract all beyond the control and without the fault of the holders of the certificates is conclusive, and by reasons thereof such certificates continue to be a valid and binding obligation of the city and to my mind an indebtedness within the terms of section 3916, G. C., supra.

"The fact that the agents or officers of the city by whom these funds were misappropriated, are liable to the city on their official bonds therefor, and that such officers ought to be made to respond to such liability will not in any respect discharge the obligation of the city to pay. Nor would any liability of such officer upon his official bond to the holder of any such certificate discharge the obligation of the city thereon."

Your first question, as to whether the holder of a certificate of indebtedness issued under authority of section 3913, G. C., can legally be paid interest after the time fixed by law for the redemption of such certificate, is to be answered in the following manner:

(1) If the holder of the certificate demanded payment at the proper time and place at maturity, and payment was refused, he may legally be paid interest after such time.

(2) If the holder fails to demand payment at maturity, and there are funds available for the payment thereof, the presumption being that the officer is able and willing to pay it, interest cannot legally be paid after maturity.

(3) If the holder of the certificate fails to demand payment at maturity, but had he so demanded it and there were no funds with which to pay the same by reason of the illegal act of the officer in disbursing the same in contravention of law, he would be entitled to interest after maturity.

Your second question as to whether the illegal act of the municipal officer in not making payment of certificates of indebtedness at maturity creates a liability against the municipality for interest after maturity, or after the six months' period has elapsed, has been answered by what has just previously been said.

Your third question is:

Always assuming that the certificates of indebtedness do not exceed the actual amount received at a semi-annual settlement, I am of the opinion that if there were funds available for the payment of the certificate at maturity, and the holder thereof has failed to present the same for payment at the proper time and place, but is subsequently paid interest from maturity to the time at which the certificate is actually paid, he has been unjustly enriched by the amount so received, and both he and the officer paying him the interest could be required to restore the amount to the municipality.

If the holder of the certificate has properly presented the certificate for payment at maturity and the same has been refused, and subsequently he is paid interest after maturity, the holder would be entitled to such interest, but the officer who refused to pay him at maturity, since he was guilty of an illegal act, would be liable for the amount so paid, as he would also be liable provided he did not have on hand at maturity the amount necessary to pay the certificate of indebtedness.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

"STATE BOARD OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS"—AMOUNT OF MONEY AVAILABLE FOR IMMEDIATE USE OF SUCH COMMISSION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1915.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 9th, is acknowledged and is in full as follows:

> "Under the provisions of A. S. B. 304, to provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate the office requirements of the officers, departments and commissions of the state and to proceed with the necessary work to adequately house such officers, departments and commissions, a question has arisen as to how much money is available for the immediate use of the commission.
> "In section 7 of said act, said section provides that a sum of money equal to the amount of money paid out of the treasury as rentals for a period of two years next prior to the date on which this act becomes effective and also a sum equal to such amount of money as may be received in the state treasury as interest on state funds for two years from and after the date on which this act becomes effective, is appropriated.
> "Will you please advise immediately by opinion from your department as to when both of these sums will be available?"

Section 7 to which you refer provides as follows (106 O. L. 466):

> "For the purpose of providing a fund for carrying this act into effect, there is hereby appropriated from the money in the state treasury, not otherwise appropriated; a sum equal to the amount of money paid out of the state treasury as rentals for state offices, departments and commissions for a period of two years next prior to the date on which this act becomes effective, and in addition a sum not otherwise appropriated equal to such amount of money as may be received into the state treasury as interest accruing on state funds for and during the period of two years from and after the date on which this act becomes effective. Only so much of the fund hereby appropriated shall be used as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act and any unexpended balance thereof shall revert into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund."

This act was filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 4, 1915. The appropriations, not being for the current expenses of the state government or its institutions, would not take effect until the expiration of ninety days from and after said date. Accordingly, said section 7 went into effect on September 3, 1915. On that day both of the appropriations were "made" within the contemplation of article II, section 22 of the constitution.

I assume that in inquiring when the sums referred to in section 7 "will be available" you mean to inquire when the authority to contract against them and thus to incur contingent liabilities payable from them arose, and to what extent such power then existed.

Inasmuch as the act as a whole became effective at the same time—September 3, 1915—the authority of the "state board of public buildings," as the commission is designated elsewhere in the act, to incur contingent liabilities payable from these appropriations arose on that day. On that day, too, it was the duty of the Auditor of State to ascertain, as to the first of the two appropriations, the amount of rentals paid out of the state treasury during the period of two years next prior to the said date—September 3, 1915—and to set the amount of the same up as an appropriation account from the general revenue fund.

It is true that the section is defective in a way, in not specifying the fund in the state treasury from which the appropriation shall be made. However, rather than that the whole section should fail, I am of the opinion that it should be held that the appropriation must be regarded as having been made from the general revenue fund; because all the other funds in the state treasury are devoted by permanent laws to specific purposes not consistent with the purposes of this appropriation, and practically all, if not all, of the money in such other funds, or which will come into them during the biennial period for which general appropriations have been made, is "otherwise appropriated" by acts previously taking effect within the meaning of the section itself.

For these reasons, I find no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion, as to the first of the two appropriations made in the section, that on September 3, 1915, it was the duty of the Auditor of State to ascertain the amount thereof in the way pointed out in the statute and to set up an account therefor on the books of his office as an appropriation from the general revenue fund.

The only serious difficulty presented by the somewhat peculiar language of the section arises with reference to the second of the two appropriations thus made; yet when this part of the section is carefully considered such difficulty appears to be after all apparent only. It is true that in form the section appropriates not the precise sums received into the state treasury from time to time as interest accruing on state funds during the period of two years therein mentioned, but "a sum equal to" the amount of money received during the entire period. It is true, too, that the "sum equal to such amount of money as may be received * * * for and during the period of two years" cannot be ascertained until the end of the period. But for that matter, neither could the amount of the particular receipts designated themselves be ascertained until the end of the period. In substance, I do not see that it makes any difference as to the validity of the appropriation whether the legislature sees fit to use one form of words or the other; that is, whether verbally it appropriates "a sum equal to" certain receipts for a certain period, or the receipts themselves. The effect may not be precisely the same in both cases; however that may be, the effect of the appropriation now in question may be described as follows:

The appropriation is to be regarded as "made," "effective" and "available" at the beginning of the period during which the designated receipts are to come into the treasury. The contracting power of the recipient of the appropriation is measured by the estimated amount of the appropriated income for the specified time. It is true that, strictly speaking, this is but a rough and dangerous method of appropriating in view of the statutes and fundamental principles condemnatory of the incurring of deficiencies. However, the question of power is not to be resolved negatively merely because its exercise may be attended by the risk of exceeding it. It is possible for the board, by exercising due caution, to be assured that the aggregate sums payable by the state under contracts entered into by it will not exceed the amount of the interest which the state will certainly receive during the two years.

In short, section 7 differs from an ordinary appropriation of "receipts and balances," formerly so usual in this state, in that it appropriates now a sum of money the amount of which will ultimately become certain, but which at the present time can only be estimated; while an appropriation of receipts does not appropriate anything until the receipts themselves come into the treasury. Section 7, then, is fully effective at the present time to an extent which may be estimated but not exactly ascertained at present; whereas an appropriation of receipts seizes upon the income from a designated source of revenue as it comes into the treasury, and nothing is appropriated until it is received. It seems to have been the deliberate purpose of the general assembly to make this distinction, and I know of no constitutional or other principle which will prevent this purpose from being carried into effect. The constitution requires that an appropriation shall be "specific." The appropriation now under consideration is specific, because that may be regarded as certain which may be made certain. The situation presents an administrative difficulty, in that the Auditor of State will not be able to set up the exact amount of this appropriation account at the present time. However, it is his duty, in my opinion, to set up an amount corresponding to the estimated receipts from state treasury interest for the two year period, which amount may be collected by him at the end of the period; or he may, if he sees fit, in addition to setting up the principal sum of the appropriation account in the manner herein described, keep a running account of income from this source, crediting the same to the appropriation. In any event, the appropriation is, in my opinion, valid and constitutes authority to incur obligations not in excess of the estimated amount thereof.

One detail ought to be mentioned in this connection: No law making an appropriation can have force beyond two years from the date of its effectiveness; yet the latter part of section 7 appropriates a sum equal to the amount to be received into the state treasury for a period of two years "from and after the date on which this act becomes effective." Technically, this embodies a seeming attempt to appropriate for more than two years, viz.: two years and one day; for the amount appropriated cannot be fully ascertained until two years and one day after the act becomes effective. However, the unconstitutionality of a law is strongly presumed against, and the words "from and after" are susceptible to an interpretation which will include within the two year period the date on which the law becomes effective, although this is not the usual and ordinary technical meaning of the phrase.

I advise, however, as to the second part of the appropriation that it was the duty of the Auditor of State on Sept. 3, 1915, to set up on the books of his office an appropriation from the general revenue fund equal to the estimated amount of interest to be received upon state funds for the period of two years from and after that date. However, it is to be observed that the actual amount of interest that is so received is the measure, hence care should be exercised to the end that the actual appropriation be not exceeded.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—JURY COMMISSIONER, ASSIGNMENT COMMISSIONER IN COMMON PLEAS COURT AND CONSTABLE OF SUPERIOR COURT.

The offices of jury commissioner, assignment commissioner in the court of common pleas and court constable of the superior court are not incompatible nor the duties thereof conflicting and the same person may be appointed to and hold said offices and discharge the duties thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your favor of September 21, 1915, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"On August 6, 1913, Geo. Rauner and Geo. Dwyer were appointed jury commissioners of Hamilton county, Ohio, by the common pleas judges in joint session. The appointment was for sixty days at $5.00 per day, each. The court then designated said jury commissioners to be assignment commissioners at a salary of $2,200.00 per year, each, making a total allowance of $2,500.00, each, per year by the common pleas court.

"In addition to this, the judges of the superior court have appointed the same named gentlemen as court bailiffs in the superior court, and have placed such bailiffs in charge of the assignments for such court under the provisions of sections 1692 and 1693 of the General Code, at a salary of $600.00 per year, each, making a total allowance of $3,100.00 per year, each, for these above named persons.

"QUESTION. Were these appointments, taken altogether, legally made?"

It has been stated repeatedly by this department that offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to or in some way a check upon the other or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both or three as the case here presented.

Applying this test to the various official positions held by the parties named in your inquiry, there seems to be nothing in the facts stated to disqualify them. The law in force at the date of their appointment to the first two positions named specifically provided for their combination. See section 3007, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 512. This provision seems to be perfectly satisfactory to the law making power as it is carried into said section as again amended 106 O. L., 534.

If in addition to the responsible duties thus imposed upon them by the provisions of the section above named, they are able to attend to the duties of court constables of the superior court, as provided in sections 1692 and 1693, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 417, there seems to be no question of their legal right so to do.

It must be assumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that their various duties are being performed in a manner satisfactory to the authority which appointed them to which they are primarily responsible for faithful and efficient service.

In the absence, therefore, of any evidence impeaching the efficiency of their service in the various positions named, there can be no legal objection to their appointments thereto and their continued service therein.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR—ASSISTANT EMPLOYED UNDER AUTHORITY OF FLOOD EMERGENCY ACT—CLAIM FOR PAYMENT SHOULD BE ALLOWED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND CHARGED TO FLOOD EMERGENCY FUND.

The claim of an assistant engineer to the county surveyor employed under authority of section 10 of the flood emergency act, as found in 103 O. L., 147, for services rendered by him in compliance with the terms of his employment, when approved by said county surveyor and allowed by the county commissioners, should be paid from the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor and charged to the flood emergency fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of September 17th, you request my opinion as follows:

"We are enclosing herewith letter from the County Auditor of Marysville, Ohio, giving a copy of an entry on the Commissioners' Journal authorizing the county surveyor to employ a qualified engineer as assistant in preparing plans and specifications for bridges. This action we are informed was made necessary by the floods of 1913, and the employment was intended to be made under section 10 of the Flood Emergency Act, 103 O. L. 147. When the bill for this service was presented, same was submitted by the county auditor to the prosecuting attorney of Union county, and he held that because the county surveyor did not, at that time, make a certificate of the appointment, that same could not be paid. The prosecuting attorney seems to have held that this payment came under the provisions of section 2787 and section 2788, General Code.

"We are enclosing you the bill in question together with the opinion of the prosecuting attorney. . Attached to this is the appointment signed by the county surveyor, dated April 2, 1913, apparently to comply with the prosecutor's opinion, but the county auditor states that this writing was not filed in his office until August 23, 1915.

"We would like to have your opinion as to whether or not the county auditor of Union county should, at this time, issue a warrant upon the treasurer of said county for the payment of the bill."

Section 10 of the Flood Emergency Act, as found in 103 O. L., 147, provides:

> "For the purpose of providing for the additional work imposed upon the engineering departments of counties and municipalities by reason of the flood mentioned in section 1 of this act, the county commissioners of any county and the council of any municipal corporation are hereby empowered to authorize the employment of additional assistant or assistants to the county surveyor or city or village engineer, and to appropriate any money borowed under the provisions of this act, or otherwise available, for the salary or compensation of such assistant or assistants."

The commissioners of Union county having authorized the county surveyor of said county to employ an assistant engineer, under the above provision of the statute, it appears that said county surveyor, acting in pursuance of such authority, employed O. C. Hearing as such assistant engineer, and that the said O. C. Hearing performed the services required of him by said county surveyor under the terms of said employment.

The enclosed voucher for the sum of $300.00 as payment to the said O. C. Hearing for the services rendered as aforesaid, as approved by the county surveyor and allowed by the county commissioners, orders the county auditor to draw a warrant on the county treasurer for said amount and charge the same to the "emergency fund."

Said voucher was issued under date of April 28, 1914, and it appears that the county auditor refused to issue his warrant for said amount on the advice of the prosecuting attorney of said county whose opinion is enclosed.

Said opinion calls attention to the authority of the county surveyor to appoint assistants, deputies, draftsmen, inspectors, clerks and employes, as found in section 2788, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 2787, G. C., and holds that the appointment of an assistant under the above provision of section 10 of said flood emergency act "must follow the general law and that the appointment must be made by the county surveyor who must fix the compensation and file the appointment with the auditor."

I note, however, that section 2788, G. C., does not expressly provide that the certificate of appointment made by the county surveyor must be filed with the county auditor. Section 10 of said emergency act does not by its terms require the county surveyor to file with the county auditor a certificate of appointment of an assistant engineer employed under authority of said statute and while the certificate of appointment of said county surveyor to the county commissioners under date of April 2, 1913, does not fix the compensation of said assistant engineer and it does not appear from your statement of facts that the county commissioners made an appropriation for the particular purpose of paying said assistant for services rendered by him, the enclosed voucher shows that a flood emergency fund had been established, and that the county auditor was directed to issue his warrant for said services and charge the same to said emergency fund.

Inasmuch as the said O. C. Hearing rendered the services required of him by the terms of his employment and the voucher for the payment for said services was approved by the county surveyor and allowed and ordered paid by the county commissioners, I am of the opinion that the statute authorizing such employment and the payment for said services was substantially complied with and that the county auditor should have issued his warrant to the said O. C. Hearing for said sum of $300.00 at the time when said voucher was presented for payment.

I note that the certificate of the county surveyor shows that the same was approved by the prosecuting attorney of your county and was filed with the county auditor of August 23, 1915. I do not think, however, that the filing of said certificate was jurisdictional to the payment of said claim.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that the county auditor should at this time issue his warrant on the treasurer of said county for the payment of said claim.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION — APPROPRIATION BY LEGISLATURE TO PURCHASE TWO PIECES OF PROPERTY ADJACENT TO OHIO STATE REFORMATORY—CANNOT PURCHASE ONE TRACT WITHOUT HAVING FUNDS IN APPROPRIATION SUFFICIENT TO PURCHASE OTHER.

Board of administration must purchase both pieces of property mentioned in appropriation of $5,250.00, 106 O. L., 669, within such appropriation, and cannot purchase one of such pieces without having funds in the appropriation sufficient to purchase the other.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 29, 1915.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of September 25th, you wrote to this department as follows:

> "The legislature authorized the expenditure of $5,250 for the purchase of two tracts of land adjacent to the Ohio state reformatory, consisting of nine acres owned by Anna Nail Ettinger and six acres owned by Emma Nail Ettinger.
> "The nine acre tract now owned by Miss Emma Nail who came into possession according to the terms of the will of Anna Nail Ettinger. Miss Emma Nail is one of the heirs of the Nail property. Miss Nail through her brother offered to sell the nine acre tract for $4,500.
> "We wish to say that it is highly desirable that the state acquire these two tracts of land, and it is especially to the advantage of the institution to get possession of the nine acre tract as it offers the only site upon which to establish a reservoir that would afford fire protection to this large institution. Moreover, there is on this tract of land a ledge of excellent sandstone rock which would afford all the material required in the improvements now under way and contemplated in the future; also good road making material for the use of the institution on highways.
> "It is evident that the appropriation made is not sufficient to buy both tracts. The item in the appropriation bill appropriating money for the purchase of these tracts reads as follows:
>
> "'To purchase the Anna Nail Ettinger nine acres and dwelling near the Ohio state reformatory and the Emma Nail Ettinger six acres and dwelling, $5,250.'
> "Before taking further steps looking to the purchase of these parcels of land we wish to be advised as to whether under the terms of the appropriation bill the Ettinger tract of nine acres could be purchased separately, either through private sale or condemnation proceedings, provided the price determined upon should not leave sufficient appropriation to buy the second or six acre tract."

The appropriation to which you refer in your letter was made in house bill No. 701 (106 O. L., 669), as follows:

"G Additions and Betterments:
"G 1. Lands—
"To purchase the Anna Nail Ettinger 9 acres and dwelling near Ohio state reformatory and the Emma Nail Ettinger 6 acres and dwelling, $5,250.00."

The $5,250 for such purpose is carried in the appropriation column of the bill, and, therefore, there is no authority under section 4 of said bill to request a transfer by the board provided for in said section 4 of other moneys to such appropriation.

The appropriation is a lump sum for two purposes, and not for either one of the purposes singly, and therefore if the board cannot accomplish both purposes within the appropriation it cannot undertake to accomplish simply one purpose and leave the other unaccomplished.

There is, therefore, no authority in your board, unless arrangements can be made to purchase both pieces of property mentioned within the appropriation, to purchase solely one of the two pieces.

Furthermore, there would be no authority in the emergency board to supply the deficiency which might exist in the purchase of the two pieces of property.

Section 2313 of the General Code (106 O. L., 183), provides that in case of any deficiency in any of the appropriations for the expenses of a department, for any biennial period, or in case of an emergency requiring the expenditure of money not specifically provided by law, the officers of such department may make application for authority to create obligations within the scope of the purpose for which the appropriations were made or to expend money not specifically provided for by law.

The acquiring of this piece of property cannot be considered as a "case of an emergency" within the meaning of the act, the legislature having already provided for the purchase of the two pieces of property in question; nor can it be considered as a part of the expense of the department.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that your board would not be authorized, under the terms of the appropriation made, to purchase the Ettinger tract of nine acres separately, either through private sale or condemnation proceedings, provided the price determined upon should not leave sufficient of the appropriation to purchase the second or six acre tract.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—RECONSIDERATION OF OPINION NO. 753, AUGUST 23, 1915—FORMER OPINION RE-AFFIRMED,

On a reconsideration of the question from the state highway commissioner upon which opinion No. 753 of this department was rendered, the conclusion reached is the same as that found in said opinion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 29, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 31st you refer to opinion No. 753 of this department rendered to you under date of August 21st, and ask for a reconsideration of the question therein considered and relating to bridges and culverts on the Hicksville-Defiance road, I. C. H. No. 420, petition No. 574, Hicksville and Mark townships, in Defiance county.

Briefly stated the facts on which said opinion was based, as disclosed by your letter of July 31st, and by the files in your office, were as follows:

At the time plans, profiles specifications and estimates were made for the improvement of a part of said inter-county highway, the highway department contemplating the building of 6.81 miles of said road, the plans, specifications and estimates of cost for bridges and culverts were accordingly made to cover said distance. Subsequent to said time it was found that there would not be sufficient funds to build 6.81 miles of said road, and it was therefore determined by the state highway commissioner to reduce this distance to 6.30 miles in case water-bound macadam should be adopted, and 5.06 miles in case concrete should be adopted.

On June 2, 1914, the state highway commissioner received alternative bids on the two kinds of construction and, as stated in your former letter, these bids for water-bound macadam were intended to cover 33,300 lineal feet or 6.30 miles, while concrete bids were for 26,723 lineal feet or 5.06 miles. This is in keeping with the notice to contractors as said notice appears in the specifications.

The firm of Clemmer & Johnson, being the low bidder on concrete, was awarded the contract for the construction of section 1 of said road and the notice to said firm, as enclosed with the specifications, by its terms clearly limits the work of grading and paving said roadway with concrete and the constructing of the bridges and culverts which are a part of said roadway to 5.06 miles

The Hicksville-Defiance road is being improved in separate sections and the profile shows that section No. 1 ends at station 267 plus 23, a distance of 5.06 miles if concrete should be adopted. This is in keeping with the provisions of the notice above referred to.

The only material difference between the notice as published and the copy of the reprint of said notice as enclosed with the specifications to said firm of Clemmer & Johnson is that in said copy of said notice as same appears with said specifications, as shown by your files, the state highway commissioner with pen and ink changed the figures 33,300 to 26,723, and the figures 6.30 to 5.06.

The question on which you asked for an opinion was stated as follows:

> "Under the form of advertisement, plans, specifications and estimates, can the contractors be required to construct bridges and culverts for more than 5.06 miles, the length of the concrete road?

"If so, can they be required to build these structures for a distance of 6.81 miles, as contemplated and represented by the quantities under 'Bridges and Culverts'?"

While said opinion does not expressly refer to the plans and specifications for the bridges and culverts as separate from the improvement of the roadway proper, reference is made several times to the plans, profiles and specifications for said work, which was clearly intended to include bridges and culverts. On page 6 and again on page 8 of said opinion, you will note that the duty of bidders to examine the plans, profiles and specifications was recognized and considered necessary. While only a part of the letter of Clemmer & Johnson, referred to by you, was quoted in said opinion and no reference is expressly made therein to the plans and specifications for bridges and culverts, I do not understand that said firm of Clemmer & Johnson contends that they were not required to examine all plans, profiles, specifications and estimates for said improvement to which reference was made in the aforesaid notice, as the same were found on file in the office of the county commissioners and the state highway department, including plans, specifications and estimates for bridges and culverts. On the contrary, Mr. Clemmer stated in the presence of Mr. Sharp of your department, and Mr. Sherman of this department, that the plans, specifications and estimates for said improvement including those for bridges and culverts were examined, and he admits that the plans, specifications and estimates for the bridges and culverts covered a distance of 6.81, but he stated that inasmuch as the Hicksville-Defiance road was being built in separate sections and the state highway commissioner had determined to limit section 1 to 6.30 miles of water-bound macadam or 5.06 miles of concrete, he assumed from the aforesaid notice and from the notation on the profile that only those bridges and culverts were to be constructed that were included within said section 1.

Upon the facts as above set forth I reached the conclusion that said firm could not be required to construct bridges and culverts for more than 5.06 miles, the length of the concrete improvement designated as section 1 of the Hicksville-Defiance road.

Coming now to a consideration of the argument presented by you in your letter of August 31st, I fully agree with you that the primary purpose of the notice to contractors is to call attention to the fact that a certain contract will be let on a given date to direct the attention of bidders to the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates on file in the office of the county commissioners and of the state highway commissioner. This was clearly conceded in the aforesaid opinion. However, the fact must not be overlooked that the copy of said notice as enclosed with the specifications and sent to the bidders by the state highway commissioner expressed in definite terms the length of the roadway to be improved, the width of the pavement and the total estimated cost of grading and paving the roadway and constructing the bridges and culverts on said roadway as described in said notice. I am still of the opinion, therefore, that said notice is important in determining the intention and purpose of the state highway commissioner in inviting said proposals as well as in determining the liability of the bidder to whom the contract was awarded. It was not contended, however, that said notice was the determining factor in reaching the conclusion expressed in said opinion. It was contended that the firm of Clemmer & Johnson had a right to rely on the information furnished by the state highway commissioner, including said notice, in so far as the same was in keeping with the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates for said improvement on file in said offices.

In view of Mr. Clemmer's statement it is evident that said firm did not disregard the bridge plans and quantities given in the estimated cost.

Conceding therefore that the plans, specifications and estimates of cost for bridges and culverts on file covered said distance of 6.01 miles, it must be remembered that the profile of the roadway proper originally made covered this same distance but the same was modified to conform to the intention of the state highway commissioner as expressed in the notice and as shown by the notation on said profile.

In determining the liability of said firm of Clemmer & Johnson to construct bridges and culverts on 1.75 miles beyond the terminus of section No. 1 of said road, we have on the one hand the plans for bridges and culverts corresponding to the estimate of cost and covering a distance of 6.81 miles. On the other hand we have the notice to the bidders expressly limiting the grading and paving of the roadway proper and the construction of bridges and culverts to 5.06 miles if concrete should be used, the estimated cost of said improvement as expressed in said notice and the modification of the profile of said roadway in conformity with said notice.

It seems clear to my mind that by the terms of said notice sealed proposals were invited for the work of grading and paving the roadway and of constructing the bridges and culverts of so much of the Hicksville-Defiance road as was included in that part of said road described in said notice and designated by the state highway commissioner as section No. 1, that the firm of Clemmer & Johnson had the right to assume that it was the intention of the state highway commissioner that the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates as originally made to cover 6.81 miles should be modified and that said distance should be reduced to 5.06 miles in case concrete should be used, and that the notice was issued in conformity with said intention.

I am still of the opinion, therefore, in view of all the facts and circumstances of this case, that said firm of Clemmer & Johnson cannot be required to construct the bridges and culverts on the 1.75 miles extending beyond the terminus of section No. 1, of said road.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—STATUTES GOVERNING STATE AID COMPLIED WITH—IF BOARD EMPLOYS CERTAIN TEACHERS WITH LESS THAN ONE YEAR'S PROFESSIONAL TRAINING IT WILL NOT BAR SUCH BOARD FROM STATE AID.

If the board of education of a school district complies with all the requirements of the statutes governing state aid, said district will not be debarred from receiving such aid by the provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 430, because of the fact that said board of education has employed certain teachers with less than one year's professional training at a salary of $45.00 per month. See opinion No. 799, Sept. 7, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 24th, which is as follows:

"As the following proposition will very likely come to you for an opinion in case the school district should make application in the future for state aid, so I shall be pleased to have your opinion on the same at any early date:

"Section 7595 of the General Code, as amended and supplemented in 104 O. L., 165, provides, among other things, that no teacher shall be employed to teach in a public school for less than forty dollars per month, and, complying with certain requirements in said section, if there is a deficit in the school funds to pay that amount then the district shall be entitled to receive state aid.

"Supplemented section 7595-1, G. C., reads in part as follows:

"'Only such school districts shall be eligible to receive state aid which pay salaries as follows:

"'(1) * * * * * *.

"'(2) Elementary teachers having at least six weeks professional training, forty-five dollars per month.

"'(3) * * * * * *.

"'(4) * * * * * *.'

"Each of the foregoing sections was amended by H. B. No. 230, (106 O. L., 430) which went into effect about August 30th this year.

"The only part of the amended sections which involve my questions is that in section 7595-1, providing that elementary teachers having at least one year's professional training can be paid forty-five dollars a month and the district in which they teach will still be entitled to state aid.

"(1) Will not those teachers who have had more than the six weeks but less than a year's professional training at the time of their employment, at a salary of forty-five dollars per month, and who were employed before H. B. 230, (106 O. L., 430), say last May or June, became effective, be entitled to the forty-five dollars per month and still the school district in which they are teaching be eligible to state aid if it should have a deficit?

"(2) With respect to these contracts would not H. B. 230 impair their obligation?"

Your questions have have been answered in opinion No. 799 of this department, rendered to Hon. G. O. McGonagle, prosecuting attorney of Morgan county, under date of September 7, 1915.

This opinion holds that if the board of education of a school district complies with all the requirements of the statutes governing state aid, said district will not be debarred from receiving such aid by the provisions of section 7595-1, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 430, because of the fact that said board of education has employed certain teachers with less than one year's professional training at a salary of $45.00 per month. A copy of said opinion is enclosed.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—UNABLE TO PROVIDE FUNDS FOR TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS UNDER SECTION 7731, G. C., AS AMENDED—BOARD MAY BORROW MONEY FOR THIS PURPOSE UNDER SECTION 5656, G. C.—WHEN LOCAL BOARD NEGLECTS OR REFUSES TO PROVIDE TRANSPORTATION, THE COUNTY BOARD SHALL PROVIDE SUCH TRANSPORTATION CHARGING COST TO LOCAL DISTRICT.

Where the board of education of a local school district is unable, because of its limits of taxation, to provide the necessary funds to pay for the transportation of pupils, as required by the provisions of section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, said board may borrow money under authority of section 5656, G. C., to pay a charge against said district made by the county board of education in case said county board furnishes such transportation to said pupils as required by the provisions of said section 7731, G. C., when the local board fails or neglects to furnish such transportation, or to pay for services actually rendered under a contract of employment made by the board of education of said local district for said services. See opinion No. 612, July 15, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 18th, which is in part as follows:

> "Several schools in Mary Ann township, Licking county, Ohio, have pupils living farther than the two mile limit and there has been a request made of the school board to provide a conveyance for these pupils living beyond the two mile limit.
> "The board is entirely without means and is unable to know what to do in this situation. I would like for you to give me your opinion as to how they shall meet this situation. Whether or not they will be allowed to borrow money or in what manner they shall provide transportation for these pupils?"

Section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 140, provides:

> "In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school. The transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house, by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education. When transportation of pupils is provided, the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road. When local boards of education neglect or refuse to provide transportation for pupils, the county board of education shall provide such transportation and the cost thereof shall be charged against the local school district."

As to those pupils in the rural or village school district living more than two miles from the nearest school in said rural or village district, the above provisions of the statute make it the duty of the board of education of such school district to provide transportation for such pupils, and if said board of education neglects or refuses to provide such transportation it becomes the duty of the board of education of the county school district to provide transportation for said pupils and charge the cost thereof to said local school district.

You state that in a certain township rural school district in your county the board of education of said district is entirely without means to provide such transportation and you ask to be advised as to how said board may secure the necessary funds for such purpose.

Your question has been answered in opinion No. 612 of this department, rendered to Hon. J. W. Watts, prosecuting attorney of Highland county, under date of July 15, 1915.

This opinion holds that where the board of education of a local school district is unable, because of its limits of taxation, to provide the necessary funds to pay for the transportation of pupils as required by the provisions of section 7731, G. C., as amended, said board may borrow money under authority of section 5656 to pay a charge against said district made by the county board of education in case said county board furnishes such transportation to said pupils as required by the provisions of said section 7731, G. C., when the local board fails or neglects to furnish such transportation, or to pay for services actually rendered under a contract of employment made by the board of education of said local district for said purpose. A copy of said opinion is enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WHERE AND HOW AN EXTENSION OF TIME SHOULD BE GRANTED TO COMPLETE CONTRACT —ONLY ON APPLICATION OF CONTRACTOR.

An extension of time for the completion of a contract let by the state highway commissioner should be granted only on the application of the contractor. As a matter of practice, this application should be made before the time for the completion of the contract has expired, although the application may be made after such time, provided no action has been taken by the state highway commissioner under section 1203-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 456, or section 1209, G. C., 106 O. L., 635, as the case may be. After the time for the completion of a contract has expired and before an extension of time is granted, no partial estimates should be allowed and paid to the contractor. In no case should an extension of time be allowed without securing from the bondsmen of the contractor a written agreement consenting to the extension.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 30, 1915, I have a communication from Mr. H. M. Sharp, deputy of construction in the state highway department, which communication reads as follows:

"We have been undecided as to the legal way to proceed in the extension of time for the completion of work covered by our contracts.

"We would like very much to submit for your opinion, a few questions which we think would supply us with the information we desire.

"First: When the time set for completion of a contract expires, should the highway department wait for request from the contractor for an extension of time?

"Second: After the expiration of time, as set forth in the contract, and before an extension is granted, should the highway department allow any partial estimates for work done?

"If an estimate is allowed under such conditions, would it be a recognition of the contract in force, but not legally covered by a proper bond?

"Third: Should the highway department secure a written agreement from the bondsmen or surety company concurring in the extension of time asked for by the contractor before such extension is granted?

"Fourth: Are the bondsmen or surety company holding for the life of the contract?

"Our work has been held up so much this year by bad weather that probably more than three-fourths of the contractors will have to have an extension of time on their contracts. Therefore, we are anxious to know that we are taking care of these extensions in the proper manner."

The pertinent provisions of the General Code of Ohio in force prior to September 6, 1915, are found in sections 1203 and 1203-1, as found in 103 O. L., 456. The following provision is found in section 1203:

"Before entering into a contract he (the state highway commissioner) shall require a bond with sufficient sureties conditioned that if the proposal is accepted, the contractor will perform the work upon the terms proposed, within the time prescribed and in accordance with the plans and specifications, and will indemnify the state and county against any damages that may be claimed by reason of the negligence of the contractor in the construction of the improvement."

Section 1203-1 reads as follows:

"If the contractor has not commenced or carried forward with reasonable progress or is improperly performing or has abandoned, or fails or refuses to complete a contract under the provisions of this chapter, the state highway commissioner shall have full power and authority to enter upon and construct, either by contract, force account or in such manner as he may deem for the best interests of the public, paying the full cost and expense thereof from any moneys that may be due or become due such contractor, and in case there is not sufficient moneys due the contractor to pay for said work, the highway commissioner shall require the contractor or his bondsman to pay for it. It is the duty of the attorney general or any prosecuting attorney of the county in which said highway is situated, to collect the same from the contractor and his bondsman."

The two sections referred to above were repealed by amended senate bill No. 125, found in 106 O. L., 574, and known as the Cass highway code. The Cass highway law contains very similar provisions, however, the same being found in sections 201 and 202 of said law, being sections 1208 and 1209, G. C. Section 1208, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "Before entering into a contract the commissioner shall require a bond with sufficient sureties, conditioned that the contractor will perform the work upon the terms proposed within the time prescribed, and in accordance with the plans and specifications thereof, and that the contractor will indemnify the state, county or township against any damage that may result by reason of the negligence of the contractor in making said improvement."

Section 1209, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 635, reads as follows:

> "If, in the opinion of the state highway commissioner, the contractor has not commenced his work within a reasonable time, or does not carry the same forward with reasonable progress, or is improperly performing his work, or has abandoned, or fails or refuses to complete a contract entered into under the provisions of this chapter, the state highway commissioner shall have full power and authority to enter upon and construct said improvement either by contract, force account or in such manner as he may deem for the best interest of the public, paying the full costs and expense thereof from the balance of the contract price unpaid to said contractor, and in case there is not sufficient balance to pay for said work, the state highway commissioner shall require the contractor or the surety on his bond to pay the cost of completing said work. It shall be the duty of the attorney general or the prosecuting attorney of the county in which said improvement or some part thereof is situated, upon request of the state highway commissioner, to collect the same from the contractor and the surety on his bond."

From a comparison of the provisions of the Cass highway law, relating to this matter, with the provisions of the law as they existed prior to September 6, 1915, it will be seen that in so far as your inquiry is concerned, said provisions may be regarded as identical and the opinion herein expressed will be applicable to contracts entered into under both the old and the new law.

It is first inquired as to whether, when the time set for the completion of a contract expires, the highway department should wait for a request from the contractor for an extension of time. It is sufficient to observe, in answer to this inquiry, having reference to what will be hereafter observed in answer to the other inquiries, set out in the communication above quoted, that the highway department cannot assume that a contractor, who has not completed his contract within the time specified, desires an extension of time, and it would therefore be improper for the state highway department to grant an extension of time in the absence of an application therefor from the contractor. As a matter of practice, this application on the part of the contractor should be made in advance of the time set for the completion of the contract so that action granting or refusing the request for an extension may be taken by the highway department at a time not later than the day set for the completion of the contract. In the absence of a request from the contractor for an extension of time, the only action which the highway department is authorized to take is that pointed out in section 1203-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 456, applicable to contracts entered into prior to September 6, 1915, and in section 1209, G. C., 106 O. L., 635, applicable to contracts entered into subsequent to September 6, 1915.

The second inquiry is as to whether, after the expiration of the time for the completion of the contract as set forth therein and before an extension of time is granted, the highway department must allow any partial estimates for work done. This inquiry should be answered in the negative. Upon the expiration of the time set for the completion of the contract, all funds in the hands of or under the control of the state highway department applicable to the contract in question and not disbursed, should be held for the purpose of completing the work either by contract, force account, or in such other manner as is deemed for the best interest of the public, in the event that no extension of time is granted; and it therefore follows that after the expiration of the time set for the completion of the contract no money should be paid the contractor until it is determined that he desires an extension of time and until such extension has been granted in the manner hereinafter indicated.

It is unnecessary, in properly advising your department, in this matter, to determine whether or not the payment of the estimate, under the conditions above set forth, would be a recognition of a contract in force but not legally covered by a proper bond, for the reason that under such circumstances it is the duty of the highway department, as above pointed out, to retain all funds in its hands and applicable to the contract in question until it be determined whether or not an extension of time is to be granted.

The third inquiry contained in the communication set forth above is as to whether the highway department should secure a written agreement from the bondsmen or surety company concurring in the extension of time asked for by the contractor, before such extension is granted, and it is also inquired in this communication whether the bondsmen or surety company hold for the life of the contract.

It should be the uniform practice of your department to grant no extensions of time without the written consent of the bondsmen or surety company. This will avoid many complications which would be bound to follow any other course. Whether or not the bondsmen or surety company could be held where there has been an extension of time without first obtaining their consent, would depend upon the facts of each particular case.

Summarizing the above answers, it may be observed that the extension of time should be granted only on the application of a contractor, which application, as a matter of practice, should be made before the time for the completion of the contract has expired, although I see no objection to the application being made after the time for the completion of the contract has expired, provided no action has been taken by the state highway commissioner under section 1203-1, G. C., or section 1209, G. C., as the case may be. After the time for the completion of the contract has expired and before an extension of time is granted, no partial estimates should be allowed and paid to the contractor. In no case should an extension of time be allowed without securing from the bondsmen of the contractor a written agreement consenting to the extension.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CORPORATION — AN AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—CANNOT CHANGE A PART OF ITS CAPITAL STOCK COMPOSED ENTIRELY OF COMMON STOCK TO PREFERRED STOCK.

A corporation cannot change common stock to preferred stock by an amendment of its articles of incorporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 1, 1915.

HON. CHARLES, Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of September 18th, with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith enclosing communication from Miller, Thompson, Dunbar & Martin, attorneys at law, check of The Oppenheimer-Straus Company for five dollars, ten cent internal revenue stamp uncancelled, and copy of certificate of amendment of the articles of incorporation of The Oppenheimer-Straus Company, asking to amend their articles of incorporation so as to change a part of their capital stock from common to preferred, by amendment.
> "We submit the following question to you for an opinion:
> "'May an incorporation by amendment of its articles of incorporation change a part of its capital stock composed entirely of common stock to preferred stock?'"

I have carefully considered the letter of Messrs. Miller, Thompson, Dunbar & Martin, attorneys for Oppenheimer-Straus Company, in which they argue at length in support of the position taken by them that your question should be answered in the affirmative.

In connection with their letter I have also examined the reports of opinions of the attorney general, and find that they have not been in entire harmony—former Attorney General Sheets holding that a corporation is not authorized by amendment of its articles of incorporation to change common stock to preferred stock, while former Attorney General Ellis held that such change by amendment was authorized by the statutes. I am unable to agree, however, from an examination of the opinions cited in the letter of Messrs. Miller, Thompson, Dunbar & Martin, that Attorney General Hogan passed upon the particular question here under consideration.

In two of my former opinions to you, one dated June 9, 1915 (opinion No. 472), and the other dated April 20, 1915 (opinion No. 265), I advised you that a corporation could not by amendment of its articles of incorporation, under section 8719 of the General Code, change preferred stock to common stock. One of the reasons given for such conclusion being that this change from preferred stock to common stock would amount to an increase of common stock of the corporation, and therefore prohibited by the express provisions of said section 8719 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state, may amend its articles of incorporation as follows:
> * * * * * * * * * * *
> "4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, nor the purpose of its original organization substantially changed."

The contemplated change of common stock to preferred stock would, indirectly at least, permit a corporation to reduce its entire capital stock, for if the corporation may by the amendment of its articles change common stock to preferred stock, it may necessarily, under section 8669 of the General Code, make provision for the redemption of such preferred stock at a time and a price fixed in such amendment. The corporation could, therefore, by such action, fix a time in the future at which its stock would automatically be decreased, and thereby accomplish by indirect means what it is specifically forbidden to do under section 8719 of the General Code.

Specific provision has been made by statute authorizing a corporation to increase its capital stock and providing the procedure therefor. In section 8698 and section 8699 of the General Code, also in section 8700 of the General Code, authority is granted and the method of procedure prescribed for securing a reduction of the capital stock.

Again, the amendment sought to be made by The Oppenheimer-Straus Company through its articles of incorporation is not, in my judgment, the addition of "anything omitted from or which might lawfully have been provided for originally." The said amendment seeks to change common stock to preferred stock, granting that the original articles of incorporation of said company might have provided for both common and preferred stock, it does not follow that provision could also have been made in such original articles authorizing a transformation of common stock to preferred stock at some future time. As well argue that because the incorporators of a manufacturing corporation might have originally organized as a banking corporation instead of for manufacturing purposes, that therefore under section 8719 of the General Code they may at any time amend the articles of incorporation so as to substitute banking purposes for manufacturing purposes and thereby secure authority to engage in the business of banking.

The rights of the other stockholders are also entitled to consideration. Section 8720 of the General Code provides that the amendment authorized by section 8719 may be adopted by a vote of the owners of three-fifths of the corporation's subscribed capital stock.

In this connection I have not overlooked the statement of Messrs. Miller, Thompson, Dunbar & Martin, that in the case presented the amendment has been adopted by the unanimous vote of all the stockholders. That fact might be material as reflecting upon the rights of the stockholders in a case where the secretary of state has heretofore accepted an amendment whereby a corporation has changed its common stock to preferred stock, because if all stockholders had agreed, they would be estopped from thereafter claiming that they were injured by such action; but it is immaterial for the purpose of arriving at a correct answer to your question.

If such amendment is permissible at all it must be under authority of section 8719 of the General Code, which authorizes amendments to be made by a vote of three-fifths of all stockholders and which gives no greater latitude of amendment where there is an unanimous agreement of stockholders. Therefore, if all stockholders can by unanimous vote authorize such amendment, then three-fifths of the owners of its stock may authorize the same amendment. It would then follow that three-fifths of the stockholders of the corporation could materially increase the liability of the remaining stockholders and decrease the value of their holdings, not only without the consent of the remaining stockholders, but even as against their express will. It certainly cannot be said that such result was intended from the language used in section 8719 of the General Code, which expressly prohibits the increase or decrease of capital stock of a corporation by amendment.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your question, that a corporation cannot by amendment of its articles of incorporation change a part of its capital stock composed entirely of common stock to preferred.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROADS IN ATHENS AND ASHTABULA COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 1, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of September 29 and 30, 1915, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions as to the following roads:

Athens-McArthur, Athens County, Petition No. 819-820, I. C. H. No. 160;

Hampden-Andover, Ashtabula County, Petition No. 1686, I. C. H. No. 475.

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—JURORS' FEES AND MILEAGE IN APPROPRIATION PROCEEDING PAYABLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY.

Jurors' fees and mileage in appropriation proceedings by municipal corporation are payable from the county treasury under the provisions of section 3008, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following inquiry, of the date of September 27, 1915:

"Are jury fees to be considered as a part of the costs in the case and as such chargeable to the judgment debtor in appropriation proceedings instituted by a municipal corporation? (See enclosures of C. D. McClintock, legal adviser of the village of Brewster, Ohio.)"

From the correspondence attached to your inquiry it appears that appropriation proceedings were and are now pending in the common pleas court of Stark county, Ohio, in which the village of Brewster, a municipality of said county, is seeking to appropriate certain properties for sewerage purposes, and that the payment of jury fees in said cases is causing some controversy.

The question, as I understand it, is whether jurors' fees in appropriation proceedings by municipal corporations shall be taxed as costs and charged to the corporation, or shall the same be paid from the county treasury as in other civil actions in the common pleas court.

The question is not without complications and when decided either way is not without doubt. For many years jury fees in appropriation proceedings by private corporations were paid in some jurisdictions by said corporations appropriating, and in others from the county treasury. This conflict in the interpretation and construction of section 6451, R. S.—now section 11089, G. C.—was finally settled by the decision in Railroad Co. v. County Commissioners, 71 O. S., 454.

In this opinion the supreme court recognized that costs may include jurors' fees and, under the term "whole costs" as used in said section 11089, did include such fees and that the same must be paid as costs by the corporation.

The reasoning of the court in this case, however, seems to be applicable only to the particular language used in said section 11089, supra, which differs materially from section 3693, G. C., under which costs are disposed of in appropriation proceedings by municipalities.

The special provision of said last named section covering the matter in question is as follows:

"The costs of the inquiry and assessment shall be paid by the corporation and all other costs taxed as the court directs."

Here is a case of real ambiguity. What are the costs of inquiry and assessment? What are the "other costs" to be taxed as the court directs?

In considering this question it is well to remember that in appropriation proceedings by municipalities many items of cost are involved that are not included in proceedings by private corporations. Again, in the case of Railroad Co. v. County Commissioners, supra, it was strongly urged in support of the claim of the railroad company that it could not be held for jurors' fees, that such an application of section 11089, supra, would be unconstitutional in that it would impose burdens upon private corporations from which other suitors in similar proceedings were exempt. It was urged further in this connection that municipal corporations were exempt from this liability.

This last claim seems to have been conceded by the court in its opinion, for in deciding this proposition it rests its conclusion on the ground that municipal and private corporations are not similarly situated.

It may be stated as a general rule that because by common law costs were not taxed to any party, it is only by express statute law they become taxable. McDonald v. Page, Wright, 121.

It follows from this that in a general way costs refer only to such expenses as are by express provision of some law made taxable and to be included in a judgment. Commisioners v. Commissioners, 14 C. C., 26.

There is nothing in the context of the section quoted which would warrant reading into the word "costs" any item of expense other than those usually and ordinarily included in the term. In other words, there is nothing in the language of this section to justify any inference that the legislature used this term other than in its usual legal sense and meaning. In view of these considerations and the attitude of the court in Railroad v. Commissioners, as hereinbefore noted, I incline to the conclusion and so hold that the term "costs" as specified in section 3693, supra, must be taken to include only those items of expense as are usually understood to be included therein and that jurors' fees and mileage in appropriation proceedings by municipal corporations are payable from the county treasury under the provisions of section 3008, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

SHERIFF—RIGHT TO APPOINT SPECIAL DEPUTY SHERIFFS—SERVICES ON ELECTION DAY—MUST APPOINT IF SIGNED STATEMENT IS FILED BY DULY RECOGNIZED COMMITTEE REQUESTING SAME.

It is the duty of the sheriff of a county upon the filing of the signed statement mentioned in section 5169-15, G. C., 106 O. L., 21, by the duly recognized committee or committees provided for by section 5080-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 124, to appoint the special deputies mentioned in said section 5169-15, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1915.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 29th, asking my opinion, is received and is as follows:

> "I would like for you to give me an opinion on section 5169-15 of the law enacted in 1915 by the last legislature being in volume 105-106, page 21.
> "The sheriff of this county has asked me to put this question up to you whether the anti-saloon league and the home rule association can compel him as sheriff to appoint deputy sheriffs in the voting precincts of this county."

Section 5080-1 of the General Code (104 O. L., 124), provides in part as follows:

> "Not later than forty days prior to an election at which questions are to be submitted to a vote of the people, any committee which in good faith advocates or opposes a measure may file a petition with the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of any county asking that such petitioners be recognized as the committee entitled to nominate inspectors to the count at such election, as herein provided. If more than one committee alleging themselves to advocate or oppose the same measure file such petitions, the board of deputy state supervisors shall decide and announce by registered mail to each committee not later than thirty days immediately preceding the election, which committee is entitled to nominate such inspectors. Such decision shall not be final, but any aggrieved party may institute mandamus proceedings in the common pleas court of the county wherein such deputy state supervisors have jurisdiction to compel such board of deputy state supervisors to certify the nominees of such aggrieved party to the judges of elections as herein provided. * * *"

Section 5169-15 of the General Code (106 O. L., 21) provides as follows:

"Whenever the committee provided by law for naming inspectors and challengers in any county file with the sheriff of the county at least five days before the election a signed statement that they have good reasons to believe that there will be bribery of electors or violation of election laws in certain precincts, wards or townships, of the county, at the next election, such sheriff shall appoint the persons named by such committee as special deputy sheriffs to prevent such violation of the law, but he shall not be liable on his bond for the acts of such special deputies. The sheriff shall name the persons certified to him by said committee, and such deputies shall have the same authority to make arrests and serve process as the sheriff or other public officer. Such deputies shall have the same authority as judges of elections have, as provided for in section 4890 of the General Code, to call to their aid any officer of the peace or elector to aid them in enforcing the law. Each deputy shall give a bond in the sum of $1,000 payable to the state of Ohio that he will faithfully perform the duties placed upon him to enforce the law, for an honest election. The compensation for such officers shall be paid by the committee naming them, and not more than one such officer shall be named for any one precinct by any committee."

Section 5080-1, supra, provides for the selection of the committee mentioned in section 5169-15, supra. The provisions of section 5169-15 confer no discretion upon the sheriff, but make it his duty to appoint the deputies when the signed statement provided for therein has been filed by the duly constituted committee.

I am of the opinion in answer to your question that there is no duty resting upon the sheriff to appoint deputies at the request of the anti-saloon league and the home rule association, as such, but that if the duly constituted committee or committees file the signed statement provided for in section 5169-15, supra, it is the duty of the sheriff to appoint deputies in the precincts designated in such signed statement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE—TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—TRUSTEES MAY PERMIT TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT TO USE HIS OWN TEAM WHEN HE CAN EFFECT A SAVING OF TIME AND REDUCTION OF EXPENSE TO TOWNSHIP.

A person holding the office of township trustee may not, upon resigning said office, be appointed township highway superintendent during the term for which he was elected township trustee or for one year thereafter.

Township trustees in the exercise of their discretion may permit the township highway superintendent to use his own team when by so doing he can effect a saving of time and a reduction of expense to the township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1915.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of September 14th, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "(1) Can a township trustee legally be appointed township road superintendent under the new highway law, provided, however, he first resigns as township trustee and his successor is appointed, he taking his chances with other applicants, and the full board making the appointment? The good faith of the trustee in the matter not being questioned and he being a competent man?
> "(2) Can a township superintendent, under the new road law, legally use his own team on the roads, the trustees fixing the compensation for all team labor, and providing that he can use his own team? The question arises from this condition: In making small repair, hauling a small amount of lumber or culvert material, or other small work, where a team, or team and wagon, are necessary, the superintendent can expedite matters and reduce cost by thus doing."

Where a person holding the office of township trustee resigns said office and the vacancy thus created is filled in the manner provided by section 3262, G. C., you inquire whether said person is then eligible to appointment as township highway superintendent by the trustees of said township under authority of section 75 of amended senate bill No. 125, being section 3370, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 593, which provides in part:

> "For the purposes of this act there shall be in each township not less than one nor more than four road districs, as the township trustees may determine. The district or districts shall include all the territory in such township. The trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent who shall be known as township highway superintendent and who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified."

Said section 3370, G. C., further provides that the township highway superintendent under the direction of the township trustees shall have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair. Section 78, being section 3373, G. C., authorizes the township trustees to fix the compensation of the township highway superintendent for time actually employed in the discharge of his duties and further provides that such compensation and all proper and necessary expenses, when approved by the township trustees, shall be paid by the township treasurer upon the warrant of the township clerk.

Section 79, being section 3374, G. C., provides:

> "The township highway superintendent shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law or by the rules and regulations of the township trustees or the county highway superintendent, so far as the rules and regulations of such county superintendent do not conflict with those of the township trustees."

In determining the answer to your first question consideration must be given to the provisions of section 12912, G. C., which are in part as follows:

> "Whoever being * * * the trustee of a township, is interested in the profits of a contract, job, work or services for such * * * township, or acts as * * * superintendent * * * in work undertaken or prosecuted by such * * * township during the term for which he was elected or appointed or for one year thereafter, shall be fined, etc."

Under the above provisions of section 12912, G. C., a person holding the office of township trustee is prohibited from acting as superintendent in any work which, during the term for which he was elected trustee or for one year thereafter, is or has been undertaken or prosecuted by the township.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that a township highway superintendent, appointed under authority of section 3370, G. C., 106 O. L., 593, is a superintendent within the meaning of the above provision of section 12912, G. C., and that a person holding the office of township trustee may not, upon resigning said office, be appointed township highway superintendent during the term for which he was elected township trustee or for one year thereafter.

Coming now to a consideration of your second question, I find no provision of the statute which by its terms prohibits the township highway superintendent as such from using his own team for the purposes mentioned in your inquiry. Where the township trustees fix the compensation for team labor and provide that the township highway superintendent may use his own team, when by so doing he can expedite the work and reduce the expense to the township, it cannot be said that the expenditure of the township funds under such conditions is illegal on the ground that the same is against public policy.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that the township trustees in the exercise of their discretion may, under the conditions set forth in your inquiry, permit the township highway superintendent to use his own team when by so doing he can effect a saving of time and a reduction of expense to the township.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

CHATTEL LOAN LAW—NO ASSIGNMENT OF WAGES IS VALID UNLESS SAME SHALL BE IN WRITING AND MADE TO SECURE DEBT CONTRACTED SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH EXECUTION OF SUCH ASSIGNMENT—PRE-EXISTING DEBT MERGED IN AN ASSIGNMENT—PURPOSE OF CHATTEL LOAN LAW.

A valid assignment of salary, wages or earnings, or any part thereof, may not be made to secure the payment of a debt contracted prior to the execution of such assignment, although the security of such pre-existing debt is merged in an assignment of such salary, wages or earnings given to secure an additional debt contracted simultaneously with the execution of such assignment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your request for opinion under date of September 3, 1915, as follows:

> "Section 6346-7 of the Lloyd chattel loan law, passed by the last general assembly, contains the following provision:
> "'* * * Nor shall any such assignment be valid unless the same shall be in writing and made to secure a debt contracted simultaneously with the execution of such assignment, etc.'
> "A loan company, heretofore doing business under the old chattel loan law, has raised the following question:
> "A borrower now owes $25.00. He wishes to secure $25.00 more. The company agrees to lend him $50.00, taking as security therefor an assignment of his wages. The borrower pays to the company $25.00 of this money clearing up the old loan. Is this transaction a violation of the present law and is the wage assignment valid or invalid?
> "Please render us your opinion in the above matter and oblige, * * *."

From my understanding of your inquiry, the question for consideration may be stated in the following form:

> "May a lawful assignment of wages be made under the act of May 7, 1915, 106 O. L., 281, for the payment of a pre-existing debt of the assignor, when the security of such pre-existing debt is merged in said assignment with the security of a debt contracted simultaneously with the execution thereof."

Section 6346-7, G. C., 106 O. L., 284, being a part of the act above referred to, insofar as pertinent to the present consideration, provides as follows:

> "No assignment of any salary, wages or earnings, or any part thereof given to secure a loan shall be valid unless the same be in writing, signed in person by the person making the same; and if such person is married and living with husband or wife, signed also by the husband or wife of such person, as the case may be. Nor shall any such assignment be valid unless the same shall be in writing and made to secure a debt contracted simultaneously with the execution of such assignment, with all blank spaces therein filled in with ink or typewriting, together with the date, names of the assignor and assignee, the amount for which such assignment is made, together with the rate of interest charged."

That part of the above quoted provision which it would seem is clearly determinative of the question, is in the following language:

"Nor shall any such assignment be valid unless the same shall be in writing and made to secure a debt contracted simultaneously with the execution of such assignment."

It will be first observed that the purpose and effect of the execution of such assignments as are herein referred to and authorized by the act under consideration, is to guarantee to or confer upon individuals special rights as against all other creditors of the assignor, and statutes of this character are generally subject to a somewhat strict construction against those who seek to secure such special or exclusive rights thereunder.

It seems that clearer and more unequivocal language could not have been here used to indicate the legislative intent that no assignment should be valid to secure the payment of any debt existing prior to the execution of the assignment.

The statement of facts submitted presupposes a pre-existing debt and in the very nature of things that cannot be "a debt contracted simultatneously with the execution of such assignment" when under the facts here to be considered the assignment is of necessity executed subsequently to the contracting of that debt.

It may be urged that a pre-existing debt may be lawfully secured by chattel mortgage, etc., but that alone cannot be said to take away from the original obligation the attribute or characteristic of a pre-existing debt. That is to say, in the present case the merging of the security of one debt into the security of another debt does not, of itself, discharge the pre-existing obligation nor does the mere formality or pretense of, or imaginary borrowing and paying back an additional amount to that which is in reality contracted simultaneously with the execution of the assignment avail to give validity and legal effect to that which is in clear and specific terms prohibited by law. The substance rather than the mere form must control, and it cannot be controverted that the sole purpose of and object effected by such imaginary transaction is the security of a debt by such assignment, the validity of which is specifically denied by law. Such course of business, under the present state of the law, clearly contravenes that fundamental principle everywhere recognized that one may not do indirectly that which they may not lawfully do directly, and we are not warranted in giving to statutory language a construction contradictory of its plain and literal meaning, except upon necessity arising either from the context or apparent inconsistency, and I submit that neither of these here appear.

When the terms of a statute are clear and unambiguous, its wisdom is not a matter for consideration in its application. Therefore, whether advantage or disadvantage may arise from the construction here suggested or, what may be more desirable, results obtained by a different construction, cannot control.

General principles of commercial law cannot here maintain in the face of the clear and unequivocal statutory declaration that no validity shall attach to such assignment except it be made to secure a debt simultaneously contracted. It seems conclusive to my mind, in view of the object of the whole act and the language now under consideration, that the very purpose of this particular provision, if it be given any force at all, was to enable the borrower to start with the taking effect of this act with a "clean slate" insofar as the assignment of wages thereafter to be earned and earned subsequently to such assignment might be effected.

I am, therefore, of opinion that as to all pre-existing debts attempted to be secured thereby in the manner set forth in your inquiry, such assignments are without validity.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—"BLUE SKY" LAW—STATUTES PRESCRIBING THAT DOING OF A CERTAIN ACT SHALL CONSTITUTE AN OFFENSE, MUST BE CONSTRUED STRICTLY—UNLESS CERTAIN ADVERTISEMENTS ARE SPECIFICALLY PROHIBITED BY SECTION 6373-17, G. C., NO CONVICTION CAN BE HAD AND NO PENALTY IMPOSED.

The gist of the offense charged in section 6373-17, G. C., is that of advertising the fact that a certificate has been issued by the commissioner of the "Blue Sky" law unless such advertisement also contains in bold type a recital that the commissioner in no wise recommends such securities or other property.

Unless such advertisement contains a statement that a certificate has been issued no offense has been committed under said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1915.

HON. HARRY T. HALL, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 28th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Sir:—The Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company, in one of its advertisements, uses this language:
> "'THREE REASONS WHY YOUR INVESTMENT IN THIS COMPANY IS SECURE:
> "'1. The sale of this stock is regulated by an act of the legislature of Ohio, passed April 28, 1913, known as 'Blue Sky Law.' Secs. 6373-12, 6373-19, and 6373-20.' * * *
> "Is the statement above quoted such an advertisement as to bring it within the provisions of section 6373-17, requiring, in connection with the sale of securities, that the advertisement shall also contain in bold type a copy of the recital that the commissioner in no wise recommends such securities?
> "The Puritan Life and Annuity Company has endorsed on its advertising circulars the following statement:
> "'Operating under Ohio's rigid, model blue sky law.'
> "Is the statement last above referred to such an advertisement as brings it within the requirements of section 6373-17?
> "Do the requirements of section 6373-17 above referred to, relate only to advertisements which state the fact that 'such certificate has been issued,' or do the provisions of that section forbid, in connection with the offer or sale of a security, advertisements in which such language as:

'We are operating under the Ohio blue sky law'—'We have complied with the Ohio blue sky law'—'The sale of this security is regulated by the Ohio blue sky law,' or words to that effect, or any other language which leads a person to believe that the offerer of the security has complied with all the provisions of the Ohio blue sky law, unless the advertisement also contains the statement that the security is in no wise recommended by the commissioner."

Section 6373-17 of the General Code, to which you refer in your letter, is as follows:

"Such certificate shall recite in bold type that the 'commissioner' in no wise recommends such securities or other property; and no person or company shall advertise, in connection with the sale of such securities, the fact that such certificate has been issued unless such advertisement also contains in bold type a copy of such recital."

A penalty is provided in section 6373-20 for a violation of the provisions of section 6373-17, above quoted.

It is a principle of law so well established that it requires no discussion or citation of authorities, that a statute prescribing that the doing of a certain thing shall constitute an offense must be construed strictly. Therefore, if the sections complained of in your letter are not specifically prohibited by section 6373-17 no conviction can be had and no penalty imposed. The gist of the offense defined in section 6373-17, is that of advertising that a certificate has been issued by the commissioners, unless the advertisement also contains in bold type a recital that the "'commissioner' in no wise recommends such securities or other properties."

In neither of the advertisements to which you call my attention in your letter is there a statement that a certificate has been issued, nor is any reference made to a certificate. Since, therefore, the advertising that a certificate has been issued is one of the elements of the offense, I do not believe that either of the advertisements in question constitute a violation of the law.

The advertisement of the Automobile Owners' Mutual Liability and Casualty Company recites that "the sale of this stock is regulated by an act of the legislature of Ohio, passed April 28, 1913, known as the 'Blue Sky Law,' sections 6373-12, 6373-19 and 6373-20." Such stock may not require certification by reason of coming under one of the exceptions to section 14 of the blue sky law, yet, as a matter of fact, the stock and its sale to some extent at least is still regulated by the provisions of said law.

The Puritan Life and Annuity Company advertises that it "operates under Ohio's rigid, model blue sky law." Neither does this company advertise that it has secured a certificate, nor does it necessarily follow from the fact that it is operating under "Ohio's rigid, model blue sky law" that its stock has been or need be certified.

It may have been the legislative intent to prohibit advertisements such as presented in your letter; if so, however, the language used in the statute falls short of its intended purpose and should be amended.

I am therefore of the opinion that in the two instances cited there has been no violation of the law which may be punished under the provisions of sections 6373-17 and 6373-20 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

DEPUTY GAME WARDENS ARE SPECIALLY APPOINTED POLICE OFFICERS—REQUIRED TO GIVE BOND—MAY CARRY CONCEALED WEAPONS IF BOND IS FILED.

Deputy game wardens are specially appointed police officers and under the provisions of section 12819, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 553, may carry concealed weapons upon giving bond as therein required.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1915.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of September 28, 1915, as follows:

> "Under Sec. 1395, of the General Code, has a deputy state game warden a right to carry concealed weapons? The section of the statute defining the offense of carrying concealed weapons does not give a game warden the right to carry a concealed pistol or any other weapon. Our local deputy game warden claims that the chief game warden advised him that he had the right to carry a concealed weapon by virtue of Sec. 1395, or some other section in the game law."

Before answering your specific question it will be necessary to refer to the general statute against carrying concealed weapons in this state, being section 12819, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., which is as follows:

> "Whoever carries a pistol, bowie knife, dirk, or other dangerous weapon concealed on or about his person shall be fined not to exceed five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years. Provided, however, that this act shall not affect the right of sheriffs, regularly appointed police officers of incorporated cities and villages, regularly elected constables, and special officers as provided by sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code, to go armed when on duty. Provided, further, that it shall be lawful for deputy sheriffs and specially appointed police officers, except as are appointed or called into service by virtue of the authority of said sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code, to go armed if they first give bond to the state of Ohio, to be approved by the clerk of the court of common pleas, in the sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned to save the public harmless by reason of any unlawful use of such weapons carried by them; and any person injured by such improper use may have recourse on said bond."

This statute is specific in its terms and protects only the officers or persons named therein and all officers and persons not named or included within its provisions are amenable to its penalties unless their act is justified by the provisions of section 13693, G. C. As you state in your letter, game wardens are not specifically named in this statute nor does it refer to any section or sections under which they are appointed or from which they receive any authority. It follows, therefore, if they can be brought under the protection of this law it must be by virtue of the provisions of that clause thereof which includes specially appointed police officers who may go armed if they first give bond in the sum of one thousand dollars as therein provided.

Deputy game wardens are now appointed by the state board of agriculture under the provisions of section 1391, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 170. They hold their office for the term of two years, are required to give bond for the faithful discharge of their duties and are charged generally with the enforcement of all laws for the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game within this state. They are paid such compensation as the appointing power may allow and deem proper and in addition thereto are entitled to the same fees sheriffs are allowed for like services in criminal cases.

Under the particular provisions of said section 1395, to which you refer in your letter, they may execute warrants and other processes issued in the enforcement of bird, fish and game laws in the same manner as a sheriff or constable may serve or execute the same and may arrest on sight without warrant a person found by them violating any of the so-called game laws of the state.

Without enumerating further the many other provisions of law which refer to and cover their duties and authority, I think it sufficiently appears from what has been already quoted to warrant the conclusion that such officers are specially appointed police officers of that department of the state board of agriculture which has in charge the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game in this state.

This department, under the well recognized and settled definitions of the same, is itself a police department because it is charged with the preservation of all birds, fish and game and the enforcement of all laws protecting the same. It follows, therefore, that an officer appointed by this department to assist in its particular province is a police officer in the sense that the word is ordinarily used and understood.

This conclusion is further strengthened by the provisions in other sections of the law relating to this department. For instance: section 1397, G. C., provides, among other things, that:

> "Prosecutions by the warden or other police officer for offenses not committed in his presence shall be instituted only upon the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense is committed or upon the approval of the attorney general."

Again in section 1398, G. C., we find the following provision:

> "Each warden or other police officer shall seize and safely keep such property, etc."

It is apparent from the language used by the legislature in the foregoing provisions that it regarded game wardens as belonging to a class known as police officers.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that under said section 12819, supra, deputy game wardens are specially appointed police officers and as such are required to give the bond in the sum of one thousand dollars as therein specified and required before they are entitled to the protection of the statute. In the absence of such bond they are subject to all the penalties of the law and in the particular case to which you refer, if said deputy game warden has not given this bond, he is certainly guilty of violating the law unless his act was justified under the provisions of said section 13693, which provisions present a question of fact under the particular circumstances of each case and do not properly enter into a discussion of the question presented by you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—RECORDS OPEN TO PUBLIC INSPECTION—EXAMINATION PAPERS ARE NOT SUBJECT TO SUCH INSPECTION.

Under section 1318, G. C., 106 O. L., 298, the permanent records of the Ohio Dental Board must be kept open to public inspection, during the usual business hours of the day, throughout the year, subject to the limitation that such inspection shall not endanger the records nor interfere with the discharge of the duties of the board or its officers.

Examination papers are not subject to public inspection although they are required to be kept on file for ninety days and are subject to be brought into court under subpoena duces tecum.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1915.

DR. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary Ohio State Dental Board, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 24th, asking my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "The board wishes an understanding as to just what is meant by section 1318 of the G. C., part of which reads as follows:
> "'At reasonable times, its records shall be open to public inspection and it shall keep on file all examination papers for a period of ninety days after each examination. A transcript of an entry in such records, certified by the secretary under the seal of the board, shall be evidence of the facts therein stated.'
>
> "Does 'at reasonable times' mean that the records be opened for inspection to any one, any time, or does it mean that the board shall designate a certain time or times during the year when the public may be at liberty to inspect its records?
> "All examination papers must remain on file ninety days after such examination." Are we to understand by this that they are to be open for inspection by the public for ninety days, or merely to be on file so that in case of complaint, the state or court may call upon us to produce any or all of these papers?"

Your first question requires an interpretation of what is meant by the words "reasonable times" in section 1318, G. C., (106 O. L., 298) which section is quoted in your letter.

The Ohio State Dental Board is a state department, and as such is required to keep certain records, which are public records.

The provisions of section 1318, G. C., quoted in your letter as to the records of the board being kept open to public inspection is declaratory of the common law, and as such is to be construed according to the common law.

See Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, page 634.

The records of your board must be kept open and subject to public inspection at all times during the usual business hours of the day, with the limitation that such inspection must be made at such times and in such manner as not to endanger the records or interfere with the proper discharge of the duties of the board or its officers.

That the books should be kept open under the above limitations throughout the year, and not merely at specific periods, is indicated by the fact that the secretary of the board under section 1317, G. C., (106 O. L., 298) is to receive an annual salary, and under section 1316, G. C., (106 O. L., 297), and section 1333, G. C., duties are placed upon him requiring his attention throughout the year.

I am, therefore, of the opinion in answer to your first question that the records of the Ohio State Dental Board must be kept open and subject to inspection at any time during the usual business hours of the day, throughout the year, provided such inspection is made at such times and in such manner as not to endanger the records or interfere with the discharge of the duties of the board or its officers.

The answer to your second question depends upon whether or not the examination papers which are required to be kept on file for ninety days are a part of the records of the board. In the absence of a statutory provision, such papers could not be said to be a part of the records of the board, although they are a part of its files. They are merely the means by which the board determines its action in the granting of or refusing to grant licenses to practise dentistry, and there would be no necessity for their retention in the files of the board after they had served this purpose. Section 1318, supra, however, provides that such papers shall be kept on file for a period of ninety days, thus indicating that at most they are only to be preserved temporarily.

However, the statute itself furnishes the answer to your question, in that it provides what records are to be kept by the board in permanent form, to wit:

> "a record of its proceedings, a register of persons licensed as dentists, and a register of licenses by it revoked," and after so describing such records, provides:

> "At reasonable times, its records shall be open to public inspection" and then follows the provision:

> "and it shall keep on file all examination papers for a period of ninety days after each examination," thus differentiating between the records of the board, as such, and said examination papers.

Therefore, under section 1318, supra, examination papers are not made a part of the records of the board and are not required to be kept open to public inspection. Neither can it be said that under the common law rule they are such papers as are subject to inspection, because their confidential nature is such that it might well be said that to open them to public inspection generally would interfere with the proper administration of the laws by the board and its officers; and ample provision is made in the statute for the protection of any one who feels that there has been an abuse of discretion on the part of the board, in that the examination papers are required to be kept for ninety days and access may be had thereto by proper proceedings and upon a proper order of a court.

Specifically answering your second question, I am of the opinion that the examination papers are not subject to public inspection.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—FEE PAID INTO STATE TREASURY ON APPLICATION FOR LICENSE TO PRACTICE DENTISTRY CANNOT BE REFUNDED EXCEPT BY GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

A fee paid on application for license to practice dentistry in this state, and covered into the state treasury by the officer receiving the same cannot be refunded without a specific appropriation by the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1915.

DR. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary Ohio State Dental Board, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 24th, asking my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "I am enclosing a letter I received from Dr. F. C. Snowberger, of Angola, Indiana. He wishes the state to refund $25.00 which he paid into our treasury in June, 1912. He wished to register in Ohio via the reciprocity route, and he was informed that it would be necessary for him to take the practical examination. He failed to put in an appearance at the June examination in 1912, and this is really the first word that the board has received from him since that time.
> "Section No. 1328 of the G. C. reads: 'Such a fee shall not be refunded unless the applicant was unavoidably prevented from attending the examination.'
> "The appropriation allowed us by the legislature makes no allowance for cases such as this, and I know of no way to get this money from the state in order to return it to him if you think it advisable.
> "I trust you will return this letter to me at your earliest convenience, and also advise me as to its proper answer."

The letter from Dr. F. C. Snowberger enclosed with your letter is as follows:

> "Angola, Ind., September 23, 1915.
> "Dr. R. H. Vollmayer.
> "Dear Doctor:—In regard to my application to Ohio board, will say that I was given to understand that it would not be necessary to take the state examination. Would not have made application had I known this, it means a lot of extra work to go over our college work again, which would be of no value to me; owing to this fact I would be to extra expense and time in reporting for the examination at next meeting. I know that I should have called your attention to this matter at an earlier date, but just neglected same.
> "You can return amount of New York draft as I cannot see where I would be benefited in going over my college work again to get in form for an examination as we all would have to brush up some, after being out of college any length of time.
>
> "Very sincerely,
> "F. C. Snowberger."

From the foregoing correspondence it appears that Dr. Snowberger made application for a license to practice dentistry in this state, with license from a board other than of this state, and enclosed with his application the fee of $25.00. Upon being advised that he was not eligible for license upon said grounds, but would be compelled to take an examination, he carried the matter no further and is now making request for a return of the $25.00 fee.

Section 1328 of the General Code, being the only section which refers to fees for such applications, is as follows:

> "Section 1328. An applicant for a license to practice dentistry in this state shall pay to the secretary of the state dental board, the following fee:
> "An applicant for a license granted upon an examination, twenty-five dollars. Such fee shall not be refunded unless the applicant is unavoidably prevented from attending the examination, but he may be examined at the next regular or special meeting of the board without additional fee.
> "An applicant failing at first examination may be re-examined at the next regular or special meeting of the board without an additional fee.
> "An applicant for a license without examination, with license from a board other than of this state, twenty-five dollars.
> "An applicant for a duplicate license granted upon proof of loss of the original, five dollars."

The money having been paid into the state treasury in accordance with law cannot now be paid out of the state treasury without specific appropriation therefor, and there is no money appropriated by the current appropriation bill for such refund.

I am, therefore, compelled to advise you that there is no authority to refund the fee in question, and the refund can only be secured by Dr. Snowberger by application to and appropriation by the general assembly.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CASS HIGHWAY LAW—TRAVELING AND NECESSARY EXPENSES—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT —ASSISTANTS—INSPECTORS, ETC.—HOW EXPENSES APPORTIONED BETWEEN STATE AND COUNTY.

Under the provision of section 7181, G. C., 106 O. L., 612, the county highway superintendent and those assistants whose appointment and compensation are authorized by said provisions of said statute, when on official business shall be paid out of the county treasury their actual and necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging.

One-half of the actual and necessary traveling expenses of the county highway superintendent and those assistants employed by him under authority of section 1219, G. C., 106 O. L., 639, with the approval of the chief highway engineer, incurred in making plans and surveys for the improvement referred to in said section 1219, G. C., when properly itemized and when approved by the county highway superintendent and the chief highway engineer or state highway commissioner, shall be paid from the state treasury on the warrant of the state auditor, and the remaining one-half of such expense, when properly itemized and approved as aforesaid, shall be paid from the county treasury or township treasury, as the case may be, on the requisition of the state highway commissioner and on the warrant of the proper official of said county or township. The actual and necessary traveling expenses of the county highway superintendent and such inspectors and superintendents as are employed by him under authority of said section 1219, G. C., with the approval of the chief highway engineer, incurred in the supervision and inspection of the aforesaid improvement, when properly itemized and approved as aforesaid, shall be paid by the state, county and township in the manner above prescribed and on the same basis as the cost of construction.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1915.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 11th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Referring again to amended senate bill No. 125, known as the Cass bill, I respectfully request your opinion on the following question:
> "When the county highway superintendent has been placed in charge of state road work by the state highway department, in what manner and by whom are the actual necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging, of the following persons paid when on state work:
> "County highway superintendent.
> "His assistants.
> "Inspectors.
> "Superintendents."

Section 138 of amended senate bill No. 125, being section 7181, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 612, provides in part as follows:

> "In the event the county highway superintendent cannot properly perform all the duties of his office, the county commissioners shall fix the aggregate compensation to be expended for assistants by the county highway superintendent during the year. Such compensation shall be paid out
