

"If such district superintendent refuses to make such nomination, 'majority vote' as used in this instance means the majority of the full membership of the board of education and not merely the majority of those members who happen to be present at the particular meeting to which such agreement is sought to be entered into."

I am therefore of the opinion, in specific answer to your question, that it is possible for a village or rural centralized school district to employ a teacher for the schools of the district who has not first been nominated by the county or assistant county superintendent of schools. This may be done by a majority vote of the full membership of the board.

Respectfully,
GILBERT BETTMAN,
Attorney General.
